Hospital Benefit Successful

—o—

The Pontiac Community Hospital night at Pine Lodge, Bristol, was quite successsful in every way and enjoyed by a large number of guests of the Lodge and people of the district.

The sum of $400.00 was realized from the various games and the money has already been handed over to the Treasurer of the Hospital Committee by Mr. Charles Russell, proprietor of the Lodge.

Prizes for the night of fun were donated by the following business people:—

W. H. Hodgins, George Drummond, Bristol; W. A. Hodgins Store, Claude Elliott, A. D. McCredie, Anderson & Taylor, Fraser's Store, N. A. Drummond, Shawville Hardware, Hobbs & Sons, W. L. de la Ronde, J. L. Hodgins, K. C. Smyth, Erwin Cone, Shawville Milling Co., R. Smith, R. P. Eades, Reinke Hardware, Community Refrigerator, Co. Shawville, and The T. Eaton Co. of Montreal.

Special thanks are due Messrs. Hugh Hale, Lou Bain and Joe Russell, of Montreal, for organizing the event and bringing it to a such a successful conclusion; also to Mr. Chas Russell, for the use of the ground floor of his Lodge.

Judge Fraser Addresses Rotary Club

—o—

At the Shawville Rotary Club's weekly luncheon in the Pontiac House last Friday, the speaker of the evening was Judge Allan J. Fraser, Judge of the Family Relations Court in Ottawa and formerly Secretary of the Commission which inquired into the state of penitentiaries in Canada.

Judge Fraser emphatically declared that Canada is in need of prison reform and that discharged prisoners are often treated by the general public in such a cold-hearted and unsympathetic manner that they often revert to crime as the only means of livelihood. He stated that 75 per cent of the inmates of Canada's penitentiaries are repeaters and that the only remedy for the existing situation is an aroused public opinion, which could doubtless be achieved by giving the public a true picture of conditions as they actually are in our penitentiaries.

Judge Fraser said that there was no such thing as a born criminal. He declared that most criminals are developed from underprivileged children and that society has a moral obligation to help these children and get them on the right path. He stressed the great importance of recreational centres for the children and the need of good food and proper environment.

He paid tribute to the great work done for underprivileged children by Rotary and other service clubs.

Shawville Fair News

—o—

We are endeavoring to prepare for the very largest Fair ever held at Shawville on September 18, 19 and 20th and expect a large increase of exhibits in all classes because of increased prize money.

Daniels Shows (Midway) will be the largest they have ever set up for Shawville Fair and the Night Show and Day events will cost more than in former years. Weather permitting we expect good results.

Increased advertisements and the fact that we do not clash dates with Renfrew or other enighboring Fairs is expected to greatly add to our attendance. Our friends are asked to assist us in this huge effort for our Fair by preparing good exhibits and making enteries early, by making cash donations, and offering their services as there is much to be done and labor is required.

Residents of the County who have friends in mining districts or other distant points should advise them early of the Fair dates so that they may conveniently arrange to attend the Fair, Our Annual Holiday.

A larger Fair means more work for the most willing officials. Prospective exhibitors may by thoughtfullness avoid unnecessary telephone calls etc.

The Prize List will be mailed this week to 1945 and 46 Exhibitors and Directors in charge. We do not mail them to members not usually exhibitors but lists are available for those asking for them.

Those who wish to pay a membership ($2.00) or make a donation to the Fair but who are not canvassed for same are requested to contact the Secretary or other officials who will be responsible for safe delivery of their amount.

To meet the requirements of this larger 1947 Fair the Secretary's office at the entrance to the Exhibition grounds will be used beginning this week—office phone 92-22.

Shawville Cemetery Improvement Appeal

—o—

The Cemetery Improvement Committee of the village, which includes in its work the care of the older cemeteries of the United and Anglican churches issues a special call for funds to carry them through this summer's activities. The committee has kept a workman, and sometimes two, in the cemetery all summer so that the fast-growing grass and weeds can be adequately kept down. The fine appearance of the cemetery shows the result of this work. We are sorry, however, that we have run out of funds, due, not so much to smaller donations, as to the increased cost of workmen and materials. In fact at this writing there is an overdraft of $50.00, and this overdraft will amount to $150.00, if further funds do not come in, by the first of October.

A special appeal is therefore made to all interested because they have loved ones in these cemeteries that they send in soon donations enough to tide us through the rest of this season. Please be generous, and send in soon to Dr. D. J. Campbell, Shawville, your donations which will be gratefully received and duly acknowledged.

Mrs. R. G. Hodgins, President
Rev. A. F. Fokes, Secretary.

MARRIED

—o—

BECK — EADES

Holy Trinity Church, Radford, was the scene of an impressive candlelight marriage service on July 26th, at 7.30 o'clock, when Miss Elaine Eades, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Eades, became the bride of James Ross Beck, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Beck.

Rev. Cecil Randell officiated at the ceremony, and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Gilbert Telford, with Miss Faye McDowell, as soloist.

The Church was decorated with mixed Summer flowers and ferns.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and attended by Miss Marjorie Smart and Miss Erma Little as bridesmaids. Mr. Erwin Beck, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Jason Eades, uncle of the bride, and Mr. Norman Horner.

For her wedding the bride wore a floor-length gown of nylon marquisette, designed with a high neckline and full cape sleeves. Her long veil was arranged from a coronet of lily-of-the-valley, and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

She wore a string of pearls the gift of the bridesgroom.

Miss Marjorie Smart wore a gown of pale pink nylon sheer.

Miss Erma Little wore a gown of pale blue net over taffeta. The bridesmaid carried nosegays of cream roses.

Following a reception held at the home of the bride's parents the couple left on a wedding trip to the "Thousand Islands" and Watertown N. Y. For going away the bride wore a powder blue crepe dress under a black top coat with black accessories, and a shoulder knot of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Beck will reside at Bryson Que.

Out-of-town guests included:- Mrs. Lillian Grace and family, of Pembroke; Mr. and Mrs. Ted McGuire, of Hull; Mr. Jason Eades, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs.Wilfred Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Clemen Brown, of Kinburn; Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Woods, Charteris; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Elliott of Campbell's Bay; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Walls, Bryson, Que.; Mrs. G. F. Elliott and Mr. Donald of Lachine, Que.

DEATHS

THOMAS WILLIAM HODGINS

One of the most widely known citizens of this district, Thomas William Hodgins, passed away on Friday morning in his 72nd year. Mr. Hodgins suffered a stroke on the previous Friday, and was carried almost unconscious into the house. In spite of the best care, he failed to rally.

Born in Clarendon township, near Yarm, he was the son of the late George Hodgins, and his wife, Maria Hodgins. He was married 49 years ago to Miss Catherine Murray, of Onslow, and they made their home near Yarm, until he retired from farming in March, 1945, when he came to live in Shawville. He was an attendant of the Yarm and Shawville United Churches.

Surviving are his widow, four sons: Preston, of Murrell's; Winston, of South Porcupine; Garnett and John, of Yarm; three daughters, Mrs. Ed. Richardson, of Alcove, Que.; Mrs. Norval Wilson, of Clarendon, and Mrs. Ebert Richardson, of Shawville; one sister, Mrs. W. A. Smith, of Emo, Ont.; also 20 grandchildren and one great grand child.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon from his late home to Yarm United Church, where service was conducted by Mr. Eric Blackstock, student pastor at Yarm, assisted by Rev. A. F. Fokes, and Rev. W. H. Stobbart, of Shawville. During the service the choir sang as a special number "Goodnight and Goodmorning".

Interment was made in the nearby church cemetery, the pall-bearers being, Messrs. Lawrence Smith, Alex Murray, Chester Angus, Clarence Murray, Robert Smith and James Hodgins.

REV. CHARLES REID

The Rev. Charles Reid, a former Incumbent of the Anglican Parish of Thorne and Clarendon died unexpectedly at Mattawa, Ont., on Sunday, at the age of 72.

While he had been in failing health for some time, his death after only a few hours illness, came as a shock to the whole area.

Mr. Reid came to Canada from his native County Armagh, Ireland, in 1908 to the Diocese of Montreal under Bishop Carmichael. Before entering the Ottawa Diocese in 1920 he was in charge of parishes in Poltimore, Thorne Leslie and Huntingdon in Quebec.

After serving in the parish of South March, Ont., he was appointed to Ashton where he spent six years. Mr. Ried then went to Mattawa until his death.

Besides his widow, Mr. Reid is survived by five sons and three daughters, one brother and four sisters.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon. Service was held at St. Alban's Mission, Mattawa, with interment at Mattawa Cemetery.

Meeting a Crisis

"What do you think of the latest news of the foreign situation, Senator?"

"Don't bother me, I gotta get on the radio and talk. In a crisis like this there is no time to think."

He Found Out

He was about to propose, but before doing so he wished to make sure she would make a good housewife. So he asked her: "Can you wash dishes?"

"Yes," she said. "Can you wipe them?"

He didn't propose.

Foster Mother To Zoo Babies

By FREDRICKA BORCHARD
In the Christian Science Monitor

This is a love story. It is the love story of Helen and Fred Martini, and of Helen's love for Chiquita and Lolita and Rajpur and Rusty and Josephine and Ming, who live in a man-made world in which there is little distrust nor jealousy, nor fear.

When pretty little Helen Delaney, still in High School, met and married the local watchmaker's handsome young apprentice, Fred Martini she had no idea that she would become a foster mother to hundreds of furred and feathered creatures. It is Helen Martini, who mothers all the Bronx Zoo animals too young to be on public exhibit.

Sunday Afternoon Jaunts

Fred loved lions, and Helen loved Fred, so when Fred wanted to go to the Zoo every Sunday afternoon to look at the lions, Helen went along and looked at Fred. It was a very satisfactory arrangement. Then one day, after they'd been married for about five years, Fred announced that he'd much rather take care of lions than repair watches, and Helen said "Why don't you?"

So he put in an application, and another couple of years went by, and one morning Fred was ordered to report for an examination. He passed it. He wasn't appointed Keeper of the Lion House at once, because that is a complicated and highly specialized job requiring an even longer apprenticeship than that of watchmaking, but he was put in charge of various lesser animals, and both Fred and Helen have never seen an animal they couldn't like.

By this time, Helen was spending part of every day at the Zoo, but unofficially, just a part of the throng admiring the animals—and one animal keeper.

Keeper of the Lion House

Came the day that Fred received his official appointment as Keeper of the Lion House, and Helen transferred her audience participation to one particular building. She'd finish her housework quickly, and rush off to the lion house. One day a lioness had a cub, and like so many wild animals who bear in captivity, couldn't care for her baby.

Fred was concerned. He wrapped the little fellow in a blanket and brought it home to Helen, who fed it with a medicine dropper and cared for it with love. The youngster thrived. Fred knew that the lion was the property of the Zoo, but Helen and the lion felt that it belonged to Helen. Compromise was clearly indicated, and Helen became, financially and officially, an employee of the Zoo, with its nursery her undisputed domain.

The Zoo Nursery

Physically, that nursery is not unlike an ordinary nursery for human children. It has pastel walls, and the air is kept uniformly warm and moist. The white cages look like so many white cribs, and each is equipped with a woolen blanket tinted pink or baby blue. There is a big white refrigerator and a small electric stove, and there are feeding dishes of pink plastic, light in weight and unbreakable.

The young animals are healthy and happy and jealous and cute, and all of them need, and get, affection.

Helen unlocks the nursery door and pandemonium breaks loose, each squeak or bark or whinny or whine a demand for instant attention. She makes the rounds whistling, talking, patting. Chiquita and Lolita, the ocelots who look like house cats and can behave so differently, stop their tumbling and crowd against the bars to have their ears pulled and their noses stroked.

Ming, the Gray Lemur

Ming, the gray lemur from Madagascar who dislikes women and is friendly only with men, makes an exception in Helen's case, and begs for petting with every pretty wile in his repertoire. Even suspicious Rusty, the red squirrel, rare in this part of the world, who was found half frozen in the park where someone must have dropped him, stops his mad gyrations and crowds forward for his moment of affection.

Only Josephine, the half-grown chimpanzee from the Belgian Congo, conceals her eagerness, because Josephine is a sophisticated young woman of the world, quite accustomed to dining in public, and very proud. If her cage manners are not all that they might be, surely a lady may relax a bit in her own home. She keeps an eye on Helen, and when she judges that her turn is almost due begins to preen.

Hastily she wipes her hands on her shaggy coat, and when the door is opened, springs into Helen's arms, gives her an almost human hug, and snuggles against her shoulder, rolling her eyes amorously. If a party is on the agenda, and it usually is, Josephine sits sedately on her little chair, and eats daintily from a spoon, spilling not a single drop. If she forgets and uses a paw to chase an elusive morsel, Helen shakes an admonitory finger or frowns, and Josephine looks sheepish. Helen never punishes the animals: they work for caresses, not through fear.

Even in the lion house, the big animals know and welcome her. Some of them were born in captivity, and Helen bottle-fed them. Others were acquired in infancy, and Helen nursed them too. She kept a female lion cub and a female tiger cub, born almost simultaneously, in her home for a while, and the two animals played together and forgot their heriditary enmity. They've never remembered it, and today, full grown, they share a cage in the lion house, and are friends.

Tiger, Lion Take Turns

They do show rivalry for Helen's affection. The tiger is nice about it; she just purrs like a kitten when Helen scratches her head, then moves aside and lets the lion have her turn. The lion is selfish; she pushes the tiger aside and tries to nuzzle into Helen's hand.

Rajpur, a tiger, was one of the nicest babies Helen ever had. He was born in the zoo in 1944, one of a litter of three. Their mother didn't like them and would have nothing to do with them, so foster-mother Martini took over, as she so often does.

Rajpur, although the largest of the cubs, was a born "snuggle-pup," and even at the advanced age of six months, would coax to be spoon-fed. He weighs over 600 pounds now, but he still thinks he's Helen's kitten, and will roll over for her. She pets him from outside the cage, because he is so powerful that one of his tiger-hugs would crush her.

Black Leopard Her Pet

It would be hard for Helen to choose which animal she cares for most, but if such a choice had to be made it would probably be for Bagheera, the two-year-old black leaopard that she raised on a bottle. Leaopards are notably ferocious and no friend to man, but Bagheera, for all his ferociousness, is friend to one man and one woman.

Until he was nine months old he lived in the Martinis' home and followed them from room to room. The first night that he was kept in the Zoo Helen stayed there too, "so that he wouldn't be afraid." He wasn't afraid, and Helen was very proud of him. "He's such a nice animal" she tells you, but then she says that about all of them. Taxed, she admits it, "but only" she says, "because it's true."

Cost of Living Considered In Wage Agreement

What is believed to be one of the first wage agreements in Canada to include a cost of living clause, was concluded recently between the Macdonald Tobacco Company of Montreal and the Tobacco Workers' International Union, Local 235.

In recognizing the necessity for a flexible method of compensation to keep pace with rapid rises and decreases in the cost of living index, the company agreed that the "gross wages shall be increased by 25 cents per week for each full point rise over April 6, 1947. Should the cost of living decline, this bonus shall be decreased by 25 cents per week for each full point of decline, but not below the index figure as at April 6, 1947."

In commenting on the new clause, union officials who negotiated the contract, expressed complete satisfaction and hailed it as a forward step in labor-management relations.

The new contract, which was concluded in a completely amicable atmosphere, also included a general 5-cent hourly increase; a 5-day working week of 45 hours and inclusion of ten holidays, six of them with pay.

Three Minutes of Fiction Fun

SHORT SHORT STORY

Luck Of the Irish

By DEE RANDALL

Ann and Terry were young. They were in love. That's why the sky looked bluer, the clouds looked whiter as they lay arm in arm on the fresh green grass.

"Just think," said Ann. "Tomorrow at this time I'll be Mrs. Terrence Patrick O'Halloran."

"Sure and the O'Hallorans were always lucky," Terry exclaimed, mimicking his grandfather.

After the wedding it was grand fun going together to the little white frame house they had selected. Most of their savings had gone into the modestly furnished little place. But it was a home. Theirs.

Then Marianne was born. A sweet pale baby but so delicate. It took a great deal of skimping to meet all the expenses.

They lived simply and Ann knew how to get the most out of everything.

Right in the middle of this economical but ecstatic heaven of theirs a thunderbolt crashed.

Terry lost his job.

But youth is not easily discouraged. Terry set out to find another job. He was eager to work. He was sure to find something better.

His enthusiasm wavered however after several weeks. Too many, "Sorry, young fellow, but we're not taking anyone on."

Back home evenings with Ann though, he was optimistic. "I've got a good prospect tomorrow," he would say, and Ann's answer invariably would be.

"Don't worry Terry. We've still got a little money in the bank."

Terry thought to himself, how little it was.

Ann tried to keep her worries from him too. She didn't tell him that there was going to be another baby, until it was impossible to keep it a secret any longer.

He took her in his arms. "Ann darling, it's wonderful." But he couldn't keep the note of despair out of his voice as he said, "If it's a boy, I hope he's a better success than I am."

Their money dwindled down to nothing. Debts piled high. They lost their little home.

They moved to a smelly, dank tenement. But they weren't discouraged yet. The future surely held something good for them.

But Terry gradually declined; pulled himself into a shell. Ann was sweet and kind. Terry misunderstood. He thought she grieved. There was only the one way out. Suicide. It would look like an accident.

Gas would be the best way. He planned the whole thing stealthily. He knew he was a coward. But he had to do it. He couldn't bear to see Ann go on this way any longer. The $1,000 insurance would mean Ann could go to a hospital when the baby was born. After that . . . he couldn't think of any more.

His opportunity came quicker than he had expected. That night Ann said she was going for a walk in the fresh air.

She kissed him goodbye, then went out, telling him to take care of Marianne. "I'll take a nap," he said, "my head aches."

Alone, he went to the kitchen. Turned on the gas. Then laid down exhausted. He dozed off.

He didn't know how soon after, but it seemed like an eternity, Ann was gently stroking his head. It was the way he loved to wake up in the morning.

It all seemed so unreal. Ann was excitedly waving a paper in front of him. "It's from your firm. They want you back. Things are picking up. You'll take old Jim Blake's place. And there'll be a $10 raise."

Now Terry was sure he was dreaming. "The gas . . ." he said.

"Oh, how did you know?" questioned Ann. "I didn't want to tell you but we can have it turned on tomorrow. They were really very polite, waiting until after supper time."

"Yes," said Terry. "The O'Hallorans were always lucky."

Huge Meteor Blasts Wide Russian Area

A huge meteor, exploding before it reached the earth, caused an intensive "rain of iron" in Siberia, blasting hundreds of cedar trees and pitting the ground with huge craters.

A Soviet expedition which traveled through hundreds of miles of pathless jungle swamps to study the meteor which fell early this year in the remote Sikhote Alin Mountains northeast of Vladivostok, Siberia, reported that the meteorite, of undetermined size, created an air cushion in its fall and exploded on hitting it.

Over an area three quarters of a mile long by nearly half a mile wide the earth's surface was pitted with 106 craters, the biggest 100 feet in width and 25 feet deep.

All round the dense forest disappeared without trace, the report said, adding that of hundreds of trees nearby, many cedars were split to fragments. Others had been twisted and thrown over at all angles.

More than 250 small meteorites were found in the field weighing altogether over five tons

To Keep Garden Free From Slugs

Slugs are the grey, snail-like creatures which rasp the leaves of tender vegetables, leaving a slimy trail on the foliage and on the soil beneath the plants. They shun daylight and thrive only where there is an abundance of moisture, being most troublesome in rainy seasons, in damp shady corners of the garden, and in low-lying areas of heavy land. Slugs will feed on almost all vegetables, but are particularly fond of beans, lettuce, cabbage, and cauliflower. They attack celery in the bleaching process. They eat shallow circular pits in the fruits of tomatoes, and in the autumn they bore into the roots of carrots and beets.

Plants in infested soil may be protected by a thin film of hydrated lime which is dusted over the foliage and on the ground in the evening after the sun has gone down and feeding has commenced, says W. G. Mattewson, Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Hydrated lime is effective only when dry, and for this reason a few dustings at intervals of three or four days is much more effective than one heavy application.

The lower as well as the upper surfaces of the leaves, should be covered and the surrounding soil should be coated in such a way that the slugs will have to crawl through the dust before they can reach the plants, or the plants may be sprayed thoroughly with bordeaux mixture. This material is repellent to the slugs, and plants kept covered with the spray will be largely protected from attack.

Baits consisting of metaldehyde and bran have given satisfactory control of slugs in small gardens but are too expensive for use under field conditions. They may be bought ready-mixed at most seed stores and should be used according to the manufacturer's directions.

Under the Roof of World's Largest Exhibition Building

After an absence of six years, while Exhibition Park was devoted to war service, Canada's finest exhibits of livestock, poultry, grain, vegetables, fruit and flowers, and other activities of interest to farmers will be on display at the Canadian National Exhibiton, Toronto, the world's largest annual exposition.

Entries are pouring into the C.N.E.'s agriculture department, which has planned a lavish showing for the first Ex. since 1941. The farm exhibits will be housed in the world's largest exhibition building — the Horse Palace, Coliseum and Livestock Pavilion—which covers 24½ acres and has an arena with a seating capacity of 12,000.

$125,000 in Prizes

Prizes totalling $125,000 in value will be offered to exhibitors, who send entries from every part of Canada and from many sections of the United States.

The Coliseum will be the scene of judging of horses and cattle. Judging begins Wednesday, August 27th, and continues each day, in various departments, until September 3rd. The famous Horse Show, which is attracting many famous jumpers and hunters, as well as agricultural horses, will be held from Monday, September 1st, to Saturday, September 6th.

There will be competitions for horse breeding classes, beef and fleece wool, cut flowers, fruit, goats, plants, vegetables, poultry, pigeons, dairy cattle, sheep, swine, cats, dogs cage birds, rabbits, conies and other pet stock.

Pets and Grain

More than 6,000 entries have been received for the poultry, pigeon and pet stock show. There are nearly 1300 separate classifications for classes of large fowl and bantams, turkeys and waterfowl, rabbits and other small furred pets, pigeons and caged birds. Twenty-one outstanding judges will decide the winners.

Specal classes are open to members of Ontario agricultural societies for grain and seed in sacks and for sheaf groups. Prize money will be shared, 60 per cent. to the winning exhibitor and 40 per cent. to the society of which he is a member. To allow for varying climatic and soil conditions, exhibits will be placed in three divisions, with separate prizes for each. Roughly, they are Muskoka, Parry Sound, Haliburton and Northern Ontario; York and Simcoe counties and Eastern Ontario; Western Ontario.

General Program

In addition to the exhibits of special interest to farm people, the 1947 C.N.E. has arranged an outstanding program for the entire two weeks from August 22 to September 6 (excluding Sundays). There will be music by the United States Navy Band and 40 other bands, free outdoor variety shows, world's champion shp softball games, world's professional swimming marathon, radar in action, television, specially imported French automobiles, Hitler's personal armored car, Olsen and Johnson of "Hellzapoppin" fame, the latest in motor cars and radio, elaborate pure food and commercial displays, "Silk from Eggs to Fabric"—a live silkworm display—a dog derby, baby show, a new permanent midway with many new features, and a host of other attractions both entertaining and educational.

Holding a Model Plane as he explains its construction to air cadets Jim Plummer, 14, right, and Glen Barkwell, 14, both of Thorold, is Sergt. Henry Liddle. The air cadets study air frames, radio equipment, armament, meteorology and navigation at summer course in Camp Borden, Ont.

Ontario Traffic Toll Sharply Up in June

Traffic accidents took the lives of 69 persons in Ontario in June and left many critically injured in hospitals.

Analysis of fatality reports appearing in provincial papers during the month shows,—23 pedestrians killed, 18 drivers, 23 passengers, 4 cyclists and one person killed in a horse drawn vehicle.

The death and accident toll was spread widely across the province, totalled 16 more deaths than in May and 24 more deaths than in June of last year.

Ontario is however, making progress in traffic accident prevention but there is no justification for complacency. Ten years ago, in June, 1937, there were 75 persons killed and 1123 injured; in July of that year (1937) the death toll reached 101, the worst for any month in Ontario's history. Since then, the volume of traffic in Ontario, number of licensed drivers and vehicles has increased greatly and so also has the influx of U.S. drivers. The traffic toll is not however, as high.

Victory Smile—Here's South Africa's Bobby Locke and the Seagram Gold Cup, emblematic of Canadian golfing supremacy, after Locke had established a record of 268 for 72 holes in the Canadian Open Golf Championships at Toronto Scarboro. Locke's victory takes the Seagram Gold Cup out of North America for the first time in history.

Sports – And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS
("A Sixbit Critic")

Some 15 thousand people paid actual money to attend a Track and Field meet in Toronto the other day; and this, on the face of it, should undoubtedly crimson the cheeks of some of us writers who so brazenly assert that such affairs are painfully boring, and sadly lacking in customer appeal. "How long has this been going on?" remarked one sports promoter to his partner, as they gazed on those well-fitted stands. "Maybe, now, we've been overlooking a gold mine."

But ere you start feeling too badly for us in our hour of shame, or think very seriously of promoting something of the sort yourself, it might be well not to overlook a couple of angles. One, that the meet in question was under the auspices of the Police; and in the matter of selling tickets an Officer of the Law seems to have—for some reason obscure to us—quite an edge over, say, a member of the Y.M.C.A.

And, Two—of the 15 thousand present, an estimated 14 thousand 9 hundred paid no attention whatever to anything except a Beauty Contest which just happened to be one of the many features. For it is a sad commentary on our Western civilization, and one that no doubt causes many head-shakings around the Kremlin, that a comely tomato in a bathing suit will attract more eyes than the greatest vaulter who ever climbed a pole.

Which recalls the Copy Writer in the Department Store advertising bureau who was busily engaged in coopering an announcement for a new line of feminine bathing costumes. His headline, as somebody took a peek over his shoulder, read —SWIM SUITS DESIGNED TO REVEAL ALL MILADY'S BEST FEATURES. "Couldn't you save space and wordage," said the kibitzer, "by just putting a period after the word ALL?"

Whenever we see the name of Babe Didrickson Zaharias — greatest girl athlete who ever lived—it recalls one of the funniest experiences we ever had in connection with sport. One afternoon, while his mother went shopping, we were left in charge of our three-year-old son; and, to pass the time away, took him around to the local wrestling office. There, greatly abetted and encouraged by the grapplers sitting around, he proceeded to raise merry Aitch to such an extent that we were forced to use stern measures. These measures consisted of a mild slap on the place by Nature provided—one which the kid hardly felt, or even noticed for that matter.

But after his mother had collected the youngster and gone on her way, one of the wrestlers sat there looking extremely sad and depressed. We asked him what was wrong. "I just can't get over how cruel you were to that poor little kid," was the undoubtedly sincere reply. That night we watched the very same grappler with thousands yelling for his blood because of the "tortures" he was ghoulishly inflicting on an apparently helpless opponent—for he was one of the really "Bad Men" of that period. His name, George Zaharias—husband of The Babe—with a heart as big as himself and as soft as custard.

We know of a teen-age lad who takes a rather gloomy outlook on things as they are. Trying to get a job for the Summer Holidays he came home one evening with the tidings that he'd been turned down by four prospective employers because of not yet having his Junior Matric. "I guess about the only thing a guy can be nowadays without knowing anything," he moodily remarked, "is either a writer or a Member of Parliament."

At a race track recently we were asked to explain something which sooner or later puzzles practically all newcomers to The Sport of Kinks. The question was, "Why are there no races at a distance of an even mile?" For while you can find races carded at almost any distance between four furlongs and a couple of miles, those just one mile in length are about as scarce as southpaw tonsorial artists.

The explanation is simple, and comes from the fact that most tracks on this side of the water are one mile around. In order to have a long straight run at the end, as well as to provide the most close-up thrills for the most people, the finish line is placed well past the halfway mark of the home stretch. So in a race at one mile, before the horses got straightened out after the break they would be into the first turn, with plenty of spills and pile-ups ensuing. To avoid this, extra yardage is added, so that we have races at such odd distances as 1 mile 5 yards, 1 mile 70 yards and so forth. Of course you, gentle reader, knew all this years and years ago; but there's always a new crop of patrons coming up, some of whom may have wondered.

Banks and bankers, of course, do their best to encourage the sober, moral and virtuous life. Still, we know a man who, in a strange city, wanted to cash a check for a fairly large amount. Asked to identify himself he produced, among other papers, a card bearing his name as a member of a well known Bible Class. The bank manager still hesitating he then pulled out his Liquour Permit—and got the money without further ado.

And with negro players being signed up so frequently these days in Big League Baseball circles, no doubt we shall be seeing more of them operating in the National Hockey League.

Army Style

First rookie: "I hear you had a wrestling match with the top sergeant. What happened-"

Second rookie: "Well, I decides to surprse him, so I jumps at him and grabs his wrist like this, and jerks his neck like this, and before he knows what hits him, I'm rat my back."

PRICE OF TEA INCREASES

Price of most popular brands of tea jumped 15 cents a pound over the week-end, it was learned from tea importers in Toronto Monday night. The price increase is uniform, and will affect all brands. Blends previously retailing at 85 to 90 cents a pound will now sell at $1 and $1.05. Better brands will retail at $1.15.

The price jump will be general throughout Canada, it is expected. One large tea company reports the new prices are effective for their brands everywhere in the country, although reports from Vancouver indicate an average increase of 12 cents across Canada. The West Coast report said prices would not increase until present stocks were exhausted, but several Toronto companies report the new prices are already in effect.

The rise in the tea prices are due entirely to the resumption of open world markets, it is explained by importers. It is not a government measure, there being no longer any ceiling on prices. At the outbreak of war in the Far East, the governments of Ceylon and India discontinued public auctions of tea. These governments bought the tea themselves and allocated it to the various world markets during the war years. This had a stabilizing effect on prices, it is explained.

Since January, however, India and Ceylon have permitted the return of open markets and tea importers in this country have had to bid for tea in a world market or do without. Tea importers say they have been absorbing the increase in costs since the first of the year, but they are no longer able to do it.

"It's unfortunate, but it's entirely beyond our control," said an official of the Salada Tea Co.

RAISING CAPONS GOOD BUSINESS

—o—

It is generally conceded that capons after the age of five or six months will produce more edible flesh per unit of feed than will the normal male chicken, reports the Poultry Division, Experimental Farms Service. A capon is an unsexed male chicken. It differs from the normal intact male in several respects.

The justification for caponizing is the improvement it makes in the quality of the flesh, and not, as is so frequently stated, the greatly increased growth of the bird. As matter of fact, there is no appreciable difference in the growth of capons and cockerels up to about six months of age, after which the capon continues to grow and lay on flesh of a superior quality.

Capons are more docile and less active than normal males, which possibly accounts for greater deposits of fat dispersing throughout the muscles producing a superior quality of meat. Another advantage gained by caponing is that, because the flesh of the capon does not get hard and tough like that of the normal male, it is possible to carry capons late in the season, where the price justifies it, thus extending the marketing period for fresh-killed roasters.

Any bred of fowl may be caponized, but on account of the commercial demand for large capons and the fact that the cockerel only after the greater part of the growth period has generally advisable to use the large or general purpose breeds.

Further information on the best breeds and age at which to caponize, the operation itself and preparation of the birds will be found in Publication No. 613 "Capons and Caponizing". A copy of the publication may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Heavy, Steady Egg Production
Depends on
Well Grown, Healthy Pullets

Moving Pullets to the Laying House
To avoid the danger of set-backs in egg production, house the pullets shortly after they start to lay. This should be done quickly and carefully, preferably at night. Allow at least 5 square feet of floor space per bird. Keep the pen cool and well ventilated.

Make any Change Gradually
Do not change to laying mash immediately the pullets are moved. Continue with North Star Growing Mash and Scratch Grain—feeding at the same time and in the same way as on the range. Place low hoppers and drinking equipment on the floor. Pullets must get used to pen equipment on stands gradually or some of them will not find the water or feed.

Feeding the First Month
Change over gradually to North Star Laying Mash after they have been in a week or ten days. Pullets that have been brought in from range should be watched closely the first month.

Murder in Plain Sight

by GERALD BROWN

W.N.U. FEATURES

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER XXVII: Realizing that the murderer has had time to escape while he has been talking, McCale runs downstairs and out the front door. Nearby is a man dressed in a sailor's uniform. As McCale steps up and asks for a match, the sailor reaches for his revolver. McCale leaps on him, as does Rocky and a policeman.

Chapter XXVIII

"Gosh," McCale heard Rocky say as he gripped the fallen man under the shoulders, bringing him upright. "The Navy. You sure this is the guy, Duke?"

"No less." McCale gingerly felt the wounded arm on which he had fallen. "Mr. Stephen Bigelow in the uniform of Uncle Sam. He joined the navy once—remember? He must have saved his suit. Oh yes, and his pistol. By the way, see if his black kerchief is missing." It was.

Bigelow mounted the steps between Rocky and the officer. All the fight was gone from him.

A squad car slid up to the curbstone as McCale turned to follow the trio. He walked over to it and opened the door with a flourish.

"Welcome!" He bowed as Donley stepped out. "Late as usual, Lieutenant."

It was Veronica who found the piece of letter.

Donlevy took over with a brusqueness that was unfamiliar. He herded them all into the library, where an astonished and shaking butler was fussing around Miss Adelaide. She stood, a figure of stone, drained of all animation. Her face was gray against the mantel, anguished.

"Stephen," she said in a murmur that became a cry.

The young-old face of Stephen looked half ugly, half despairing in the dim light. There was a haunted look behind his eyes. He wet his lips with the tip of his tongue. Suddenly he slumped into a chair.

"Yes", McCale said. His sophisticated mouth curled in triumph and his tone was brittle. "It was Stephen Bigelow, dressed as a sailor, whom we saw loitering about the entrance to the Common just before the murder. He looked up at the house once, remember? He must have seen us at the bay window of the drawing room, for the next time I noticed him, he was reading a paper, probably to hide his face. When Vallaincourt approached the house, he must have come across the street into the shelter of the areaway that goes under the front steps — the service entrance. When Curt was passing, he simply stepped up to him and fired pointblank."

McCale looked at Donlevy and his men, who were grouped over the crestfallen culprit. Donlevy looked up at him. It was so simple, really, now that it was explained. He did say, the ghost of derision on his lips, "Peculiar no one mentioned a sailor hanging around."

"I know," McCale answered bitterly. "My fault entirely. I pride myself on having a photographic mind, and I missed that, too. Men in the service are so common about the streets these days that they go almost unnoticed anywhere. That is where he was so clever. Who would connect a sailor with the Bigelows? One thing I should have seen, though, most certainly. I'll never forgive myself for that."

"What's that?" asked Donlevy.

McCale reached out and took the hat Stephen Bigelow had in his hand. He cocked a finger and spun the thing around like a plate.

"Well, I'll be damned," Donlevy exploded.

"I don't blame you." There was chagrin in McCale's tone. "This hat is perfectly round which identifies it as the type worn a number of years ago. The style was changed about five years ago. The newer ones tilt up in front like a regimental officer's cap without a visor. If I'd noticed that one thing, I'd have realized the sailor we saw was a phoney." He sighed. "It might have saved a life." He thought of Shari Lyyn.

Donlevy cleared his throat. Then there was a rustle of feathers and satin at the door and Victoria whirled in. Her eyes were bright and her make-up stood out in ghastly relief against the paleness of her face. Her fingers jerked to her hair and a shriek died on her lips. Two officers moved forward automatically. She blurted some wild gibberish that foretold rising hysteria; then suddenly was quiet.

"So you did it," she said slowly. "My God, I didn't think you had the guts. You fool, you utter fool. She isn't worth it, you know—not worth it."

By this time Donlevy was rattled. He moved in on Stephen with a circle of his men. He gave the charge so low it was hardly audible. His voice dropped for an interminable minute before he stepped back. As he did, McCale saw Bigelow's jaw move, his head come up slowly. Tired, furtive eyes lit up as he looked away from the group that surrounded him. A single tear ran out of the corner of an eye.

He got to his feet, lowering his head as he slowly turned to take them all in. No one moved toward him. He gave them a contemptuous glare. Finally he turned to Victoria and spoke his last words in their presence.

"You'll tell—Mother?" His voice broke.

She nodded.

"Let's go," said Donlevy.

They took him away.

They had left the Bigelow house in a storm of questions from the first reporters on the scene, in the din of explosions from photographers' flash bulbs, in the confusion of the comings and goings of officials from police headquarters and the district attorney's office. McCale was looking forward to the peace and quiet of his own apartment.

When they reached it, they found Ann Marriot dozing by the dying fire. She jumped up, smoothing rumpled hair into place.

"Well," she said tartly, "are you all right? Running around like that in your dressing gown. My goodness. That's no way to call on the Beacon Street Bigelows. It's all over, isn't it? It came over the radio about an hour ago. You would have to wrestle with murderers, wouldn't you? You sure you feel all right?" She was trying hard to cover up her concern. She had been worrying about him all evening, afraid that he might seriously harm his injured shoulder.

Marriage Between Two Faiths Solved

"DEAR ANNE HIRST: My husband and I are both daily readers of your column. We think our experience in a marriage between different faiths may help some of your other followers.

"We are of different faiths, but have been happily married for six years. We have two wonderful children. We never had a serious quarrel—and neither gave up his church.

"Before we married we had an honest talk about our respective faiths. We decided which church the children would belong to. When my husband wishes to go to church I go with him, and vice versa. We have friends, too, of different faiths who are also happily married.

"Everyone has the same God, and studies from the same Bible. It can and does work out fine, if the two involved use some common sense. We know.

TOLERANT PEOPLE

IT IS A DELIGHT to learn of marriages between people who are as tolerant as you and your husband are. It bespeaks a like tolerance in your two families, too, that they did not forbid your marriage. They knew your common sense, and trusted in it.

Almost any difference between two people in love can be worked out if both are intelligent and resonable. Each person is entitled to his own belief, which usually was fostered by his parents It becomes an integral part of his character, and deserves the same respect as his other opinions. It is when one of the two tries to impose his faith on the other, that trouble begins. When that happens, it can last through a lifetime, threatening the marriage, and often resulting in the children being raised in no church at all.

If two young people who attend different churches approach marriage as you two did, recognizing that it is necessary a compromise, they can work it out. That implies a maturity of development, however which many youngsters have not achieved. So in such instances it is better to wait till they can accept mutual independence of religion or decide not to marry at all. ... ...

TO "HESITATING": You are wise beyond your years to question this lad's eligibility. Your family physician can advise you best.

TO "STILL IN LOVE," "BOB H.": The behavior of the parents of these girls may well influence their own standards. Your mothers know the girls; talk it over with them.

TO "KITTY": You must stop believing this boy still likes you. He never cared for you, or he would not have listened to gossip. No nice boy allows others to say anything derogatory about his girl friend, and far less will he believe it. All this you will better understand as you grow older. Take my word for it now.

Your parents know best, especially about this boy. They only want you to be happy. I expect they realized what sort he was, and forbade you to go with him to protect you from just such a heartbreak as you have now.

Put this experience behind you, and go ahead now as though you didn't know him at all. Have dates with your other friends, and before you think it possible, you will be having good times again. There's no cure for one boy like another boy, you know. Let us both hope your next one will be more loyal.

Your Handwriting and You

By Alex S. Arnott

Many requests for handwriting analysis reach me and I am pleased to report many interesting and varied handwritings.

When writing your request, it is advantageous to send one or more full pages of script written in ink on good quality plain paper. Ink is more satisfactory than pencil due to its permanent qualities, also ink will not smear or run on quality paper. Paper without ruled lines is necessary as the spacing and direction of the writing is an extra consideration in the analysis.

Use the pen with which you are accustomed to writing and not a pen with which you are not familiar. The pen nib should be free from corrosion as a coated nib causes heavy and light shadows in the script with uneven and wavering lines. Writing that is untidy with blots, scratches and smears due to a bad pen nib, hinder in conveying the true personality of the writer. Write in the best handwriting you can while in a comfortable and natural writing position.

When the above suggestions are followed, the script contains all the elements of your true personality. If the script is distorted and carelesly written, the analyst must make allowances for such discrepancies when making an analysis.

Anyone wishing a more complete analysis please send self-addressed stamped envelope to Box B, room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto. There is no charge for this service.

Women's Forum To Air Views In Two-Day Session

How do Canadian women feel about the youth centres being set up in their own communities? Are they satisfied with present educational facilities for their children? Are Canadian women shining up to their responsibilities among the women of the world?

Questions like these will be discussed at a two-day Women's Forum to take place at the Canadian National Exhibition Aug. 30, 31, Kate Aitken, Director of Women's Activities, has announced . Miss Mabel Stoakley of Toronto has been named chairman of the four sessions to be held in the theatre of the Coliseum, West Annex.

"Guest speakers in the panel discussions will attempt to clarify the place of women in an intelligent Canada," Mrs. Aitken said. "They will talk over women's responsibilities in the home, the community, the nation and the world."

Representatives of all women's organizations and women everywhere are invited to attend these sessions to ask questions and join generally in the open discussions.

Keep It Covered

Science announces a new cooking rule, according to Pathfinder: Cover the pan when heating milk.

Why? Light destroys riboflavin, the B-vitamin for which milk is the main source. Keeping the milk in the dark retains most of it.

Other advantages are that milk heats slightly faster when covered, and the lid keeps a skin from forming on the surface. One caution: Covered milk boils over easily, needs close watching.

Politically Impossible

Voter: "Why, I wouldn't vote for you if you were St. Peter himself."

Candidate: "If I were St. Peter, you couldn't vote for me. You wouldn't be in my riding."

Sunday School Lesson

Parents and Their Children

Proverbs 1:8-9; 6:20-23; 17:1; 22:6; 23:22-26.

Golden Text — Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it.—Provers 22:6:

The Bible is a text-book not only of individual salvation, but also of family religion.

When the Philippian jailer (Acts 16), terror-stricken lest his prisoners should have escaped, but reassured by the voice of Paul, cried "What must I do to be saved?" Paul replied, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."

But family religion had deep roots in the Old Testament, and in the Jewish literature were many precepts, giving wise counsel to parents, and setting forth the duties of children, thus establishing with clearness the conditions of family welfare and a happy home-life.

Some of the choicest of these precepts constitute our lesson. It ought to be noted how strongly they stress the law and commandments. "My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother." There must be standards of right, and a sense of responsibility, if there are to be sound relationships and happiness in the home.

The acceptance of parenthood without an adequate sense of responsibility is the root of a great deal of home breakdown and tragedy today. A first essential of a good home is good parents. What can be expected of children, if their parents do not set them a good example? Moreover, precept and teaching are not enough, for children will soon detect insincerity, and the worst of all counsel we could give to our children would be to say, "Don't do as I do, but do as I say."

"Train up a child in the way he should go," is the Bible's injunction to parents, with the assurance that when he is old he will not depart from it. Alas! that assurance is not always justified, for many influences are upon the child, as well as those of the home, and too often they break down and destroy what the home has sought to do.

The most acute of our social and religious problems of today are associated with home and family life.

Bad Pun Department

A certain ambitious young movie actress complained to a declining star: "It irks me to think that I get only one hundred thousand dollars a picture.'

To which the other rejoined: "Nice irk if you can get it."

Add 1 envelope Royal Fast Rising Dry Yeast and 1 tsp. sugar to 1 c. lukewarm water. Stir; let stand 10 min. Scald 1 c. milk, add 5 tbs. sugar; add 2 tsp. salt, cool to lukewarm. Add to yeast mixture. Add 3 c. sifted flour, beat until perfectly smooth. Add 4 tbs. melted shortening and 3 c. more sifted flour, or enough to make easily handled dough. Knead well. Place in greased bowl. Cover; let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1½ hours. Punch dough down in bowl; let rise again in warm place until nearly doubled in bulk, about 40 min. When light, roll out ¼" thick. Brush over lightly with melted shortening. Cut with 2" biscuit cutter, crease through center heavily with dull edge of knife, fold over in pocketbook shape. Place on well-greased shallow pans 1" apart. Cover; let rise until light, about 1 hour. Bake in 400°F. oven about 15 minutes.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

TABLE TALKS

Summer Sweets . . .

A plain custard sauce well chilled makes an excellent accompaniment to fresh fruit in place of cream or the idea in reverse is baked custard with fresh fruit sauce.

The home economists of the Consumer Section say that there are several points to be stressed in making custards. Too much heat curdles either baked or boiled custards so soft custards should be cooked over boiling wather, stirred constantly and removed as soon as the mixture coats the spoon. Baked custards are always set in a pan of hot water or poached for the same reason to keep the heat moderate.

Here are several excellent recipes for simple summer desserts.

CEREAL CUSTARD

2 cups cooked cereal
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons molasses
¼ cup sugar
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Mix cereal, milk, molasses and sugar. Add beaten eggs and Nutmeg Mix well, pour into a greased casserole, place in a pan of hot water and ove-poach in a moderately slow oven 325 degreesF. for 30 minutes. Chill and serve with fresh fruit. Six servings.

CHOCOLATE SPANISH CREAM

1½ tablespoons granulated gelatine
¼ cup cold water
3 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon salt
2¾ cups milk
1½ ounces unsweetened chocolate (1½ squares)
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites
1/3 cup sugar

Soak gelatine in cold water. Make a custard of egg yolks, salt and milk melting chocolate in milk. Cook in top of double boiler, stirring constantly, until mixture coats the spoon. Dissolve gelatine in hot mixture. Cool and add flavoring When mixture begins to thicken, fold in meringue made by adding the sugar to the stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into moulds and chill. Six servings.

FRUIT FLOATING ISLAND

1 cup fresh or drained canned fruit, diced
1½ cups milk
3 egg yolks
3 tablespoons sugar
Dash of salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

MERINGUE:

3 egg whites
3 tablespoons sugar
Dash of salt

Arrange fruit in six individual serving dishes. Scald milk in double boiler. Beat egg yolks slightly. add sugar and salt. Add a little of the hot milk to the egg mixture, then combine with the remaining milk in double boiler. Cook, stirring constantly, until the custard coats the spoon, about 2 minutes. Remove from heat, add vanilla and pour mixture over fruit. Add salt to egg whites and beat until stiff but not dry. Gradually beat in the sugar. Half-fill a baking dish with boiling water. Float the meringue in six mounds on the hot water, cover closely and let stand at room temperature for 20 minutes Or bake in a moderately slow oven, 325 degreesF., until lightly browned about 12 to 15 minutes. Lift merigues from water and place one on each custard. Six servings.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

One day last week we went to London. Upon returning Partner announced that that was his summer holiday! And the trip was mostly business — in quest of tractor parts. But still we really had a lovely outing; saw lots of scenery that was quite new to us and passed through many towns—or near them — that had previously been just names on the map. Woodstock, Paris, Caledonia, Ingersoll, Delhi, St. Thomas, Tillsonburg and some other smaller places. Somewhere near Woodstock we ran into a storm. And what a storm—the rain was terrific—but Bob kept right on driving. Gradually we drove out of it and before we reached London we were rolling along on dry ground again.

At London my sister-in-law and I were badly fooled—it was early closing day! To make matters worse the summer sales were on and many of the dresses we saw in the windows were really reasonable in price —and yet all we could do was window-shop. Partner thought that was just as well, but were we provoked! However I consoled myself with the thought that in a day or two there would be a trip to Guelph—and it wouldn't be on a Wednesday—not if I knew it. But more about that later.

I think the biggest highlight on our London trip was seeing the roses. They were everywhere—red, pink and white, mostly ramblers, and very, very beautiful. We also noticed tall spikes of white delphinium which I believe is still somewhat of a rarity. We passed through some districts where the grain crops were better than around here but generally speaking they were all pretty poor. Of course in many districts there was hardly anything grown except tobacco.

Of the many places we passed through I liked Paris the best. I don't know about the town itself as we didn't drive through it but the surrounding countryside was lovely with the town nestling in a valley among beautiful trees. Even little cottages were shaded by great oaks and sturdy maples that gave the whole district an old world look. Sometime I would like to visit Paris again and really explore.

Now for our Guelph trip. This was made so that my sister-in-law might visit friends but we also hoped to do a little shopping as well. "Hoped" is right . . . . those blessed parking meters! I parked the car at the foot of Main for a nickel's worth of time then away to the stores. There were several things I wanted—little things that one cannot buy in a small town. I also wanted a house-dress. And you know how it is—selection is still limited so it was out of one store and into another. The 60 minutes was just about up before I knew it and I still hadn't got my dress. The salesclerk was showing me another line when I had to apologise and run—"Parking time running out!" I explained. I rescued "the Greening" from the eyes of the law and decided it would be better to park further up the street. This time I allowed 24 minutes, rushed into another store, found the dress I wanted, but, as before, I shopped with one eye on the clock and didn't really get half the things I wanted. With one minute to go I was ready to make a run for the car when it started to rain. It just about fell down in bucketfuls. With my raincoat draped over my head and shoulders I ran to put another copper in the slot and waited in a store doorway for the storm to abate. And as I waited there was the indicator slowly but surely slipping back to the corner. Not that I expected any parking officer to be inspecting meters in that storm but the point is one of them could have been lurking in a sheltered doorway just as I was. Presently there was a lull in the storm and we made a run for the car and away to see our friends, leaving our unfinished shopping in disgust.

Maybe parking meters are a good thing—I don't know—but I can see I shall have to study the matter, or shop in a place where they don't exist. Shopping with one eye on the clock is too hard on the blood pressure! I suppose getting acquainted with the back streets would be the best solution.

Quite Sure

British Plan Export Of Special Foods

Great Britain is going to turn some if its scarce sugar, fats and cereals into the manufacture of a limited quantity of beverages, biscuits, and chocolates to get dollars for vital basic supplies like feeding stuffs, Food Minister John Strachey announced in the House of Commons recently.

Mr. Strachey declared that the target would be $40,000,000 worth of these special manufactured foods annually—enough to buy nearly 500,000 tons of additional feeding stuffs.

"What it amounts to is that we are going to use our processing and manufacturing facilities and skill, plus a very little of our sugar, fats, and cereals, in order to earn foreign currency which will pay for much bigger quantities of basic foods," he said.

He appealed to "friends overseas" to realize this when they saw small quantities of British foods in their stores and not to slacken their efforts to send foods to Britain.

Valley Of Revenge

TEEN-TOWN TOPICS

By BARRY MURKAR

"Avast ye land-lubber and trim your main sails," I shouted.

"What's all that racket down there?" called a voice from above. It was Susie's mother, from the bedroom window.

"Is Susie ready yet?" I asked. "A fair wind blows and we must be off on the blue."

"You never mind that nonesense," retorted Susie's mom "I hear that this is your first time out in a sail boat. I think Susie would be much better off to sit at home, where it is safe."

"Now don't you worry about a thing," I consoled, "I can handle that boat on any sea. The deeper and rougher the better. Why some day, I intend to sail around the Horn in my own yacht."

Just then Susie came around the corner of the house. She looked at me and burst into a fit of laughter.

"Where did you get that silly looking cap?" she asked. "It's almost over the end of your nose".

"Forget the smart stuff and let's get going," I retorted. "Anyway this hat belonged to old man Williams. He was a captain on some of the best lake boats that ever sailed; so there."

"Be careful, dear," called Susie's mom, "and don't let know-it-all go out too far. I'll be in a stew until you get back."

On the way to the bay I tried to impress Susie with my knowledge of the sea, wind and boats. I think I impressed her with my wind, but not sea and boats.

The boat, a chum of mine was loaning me for the afternoon, was ready when we arrived and we lost no time in getting away.

"This is the life,' I shouted at Susie, who was sitting up front. We headed for the gap and out on the lake.

"Don't you go out too far, you know what mom said," warned Susie.

"That mother of yours underestimates my abilities. You'd think I didn't know anything, the way she goes on."

"Well, you usually manage to mess things up before you finish."

"Relax! relax! Get the salt in your blood and heave-to." Susie came down to my end of the boat with a coke and some cookies.

"Are we slowing down?" asked Susie a little while later.

"My gosh, there's a lull coming," I cautioned.

"Yes and a storm too, if those black clouds in the west mean anything".

"Now don't get excited Susie, I'll handle everything."

Suddenly the wind died completely Large black clouds, that a few minutes before were separated by patches of white and blue had woven into a solid mass of greyish black. Everything was quiet. Susie looked worried and I felt so too. Three miles out on the lake; not a breath of wind and a storm coming in fast.

Suddenly everything broke. The wind came and with it, small white caps, then large waves. Driving rain beat into our faces. I yanked down the main sail and headed for shore with the jib half way up. We floundered around like a cork under Niagara Falls.

"Quit whimpering," I roared at Susie. "I'll get her there. Sit down and hang on tight." Suddenly we were pitched sideways and parallel to the breakers. I jammed the rudder over hard, breaking the handle off. Climbing over rope to the front of the boat, to get the jib down, I slipped and fell to the low side of the boat. Then it happened. The breaker caught us broad-side and over went the three of us. The boat, Susie and I.

We came up spitting but grabbed the boat. Susie was terrorized but hung on tight. Hours later we finally washed up on the beach. But not before I noticed the crowd standing there waiting. As we struggled up through the surf, trying to hold each other up, Susie's pop ran into the water and grabbed her. Then he grabbed me—and I do mean grabbed me. After my teeth were back in place, he really let me have it. So did half the townspeople that were there. I may be up for attempted manslaughter next week, by the way things sound at the moment. On top of it all, I have to buy a new rudder and repair the damaged boat.

Funny thing, but everything happens to me. I'm "cut-off" from going to Susie's anymore. My allowance is shot for eight months to pay for the boat and I lost my watch in the water. Well, I learned one thing. If I start out to travel around the horn, I'll go by bicycle. It'll be a heck of a lot less trouble. And another thing, there will be no women along with me either.

Sewing Note

While we have our needle in hand, here's a note of counsel on sewing from the Department of Agriculture whose authorities on home economics know about such things. The length of the thread with which you sew is important if you want to do a skillful job. A long thread should be used only where the stitches are long, as in basting. Otherwise, a short thread about a foot in length will give the best results.

That's what they'll say about your garden when you spray with Green Cross DDT Flower Spray. A highly efficient and economical insecticide for the control of Gladiolus and Chrysanthemum Thrips, and other destructive garden pests.

CHENAUX RAPIDS TO BE DEVELOPED

—o—

Toronto, August 11— Immediate construction of a 160,000-horsepower development at Cheneux Rapids on the Ottawa River will be undertaken by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission at a cost of $20,000,000, it was announced today.

The development, expected to be in service by 1951, will be the third largest plant built by the Hydro on the Ottawa river.

Situated about 10 miles from Renfrew, a 60-foot dam will be constructed extending 3,000 feet across the river and requiring 400,000 tons of concrete.

The announcement was sequel to a statement by Premier Drew of Ontario in February that an agreement had been reached with Quebec's Premier Duplessis for joint development of new power sites at Cheneaux and Cave Rapids on the Ottawa river.

The agreement calls for each province to call its own workmen on their respective sides of the river. Actual construction will be under direction of Ontario officials consulting with Quebec authorities.

All power developed will be available first to Ontario, but when Quebec requires its share it will have the right to draw half the power while assuming half the capital cost.

The Chenaux development will be contracted since all field forces of the commission are already engaged in construction of a new 70,000 horsepower addition to the Decew Falls plant an 81,000-horsepower plant at Stewartsville on the Madawaska river, a 53,000-horsepower plant on the Aguasabon river at Terrace, and the large 480,000-horsepower project at Des Joachims on the Ottawa. river.
