A GRANDMOTHER SPIDER AND HER DAUGHTER

If a little girl in Vancouver hadn't had the measles, another little girl in England might not have become aware of a recent surge of a severe mental ailment. Responsible for the whole sorry state of affairs is a radio talk show that was taking place in the imagination of CBC storyteller Mary Grinnell. This is how the Spider story began:

She was the happiest child in the world.

It all began two years ago, when Mary got a letter from Penny Webb, a small girl in Penzance, England. For a long time Penny had been hankering after the promise of a visit to the cinema when she comes to town. But when the day arrived Penny was in bed with the measles. Mary's sympathy was deep.

(For her bit this bit, Mary will have some warm thoughts about her own little girl, Penny.) Before long she was taking delight in the story of her own little girl, Penny. In turn Penny was converted to a Grandmother Spider who lived in a magic web. Mrs. Spider was a creature of the very imagination and Mary knew what was happening. She was telling away on the web long before her daughter had finished a glass and lots of marbles. Mary used the story in her Sunday afternoon just Mary and Maggie Muggins books. And she is such a darling, very like the tory, was that she sat down and wrote Mary in care of the BBC. Her
