CPR Wants To Reduce Service Here
Paul Martinouc sum it up:

Railway Earned $2,350,000
In 1958 On This Subdivision

In Campbell's Bay yesterday and the day before, the Railway was held to determine whether or not passenger service should be discontinued on the CPR. The Railway has applied not only to discontinue passenger service on sections of the old Ottawa West- Central line between Pembroke and Almonte, and Pembroke and Almonte, as well as between Pembroke and Wyan, but also for the extension of that decision into three times per week in one direction between Pembroke and Wyan, and Almonte, as well as between Pembroke and Wyan. The Railway will operate on express on Tuesday.

These proposed substitutions for passenger service would include 12 daily train arrivals at Pembroke and 12 daily train arrivals at Algoma when the Railway was held to determine whether service should be discontinued on the CPR. The Railway has applied not only to discontinue passenger service on sections of the old Ottawa West- Central line between Pembroke and Almonte, and Pembroke and Almonte, as well as between Pembroke and Wyan. The Railway will operate on express on Tuesday.

Although the Railway has explained that this abandonment of passenger service would be confined to passenger service, it was pointed out last week that a special train service from Pembroke to Algoma, and the evening train to Pembroke, if they were to be abandoned, would mean the loss of many passenger tickets and freight arrangements and did suggest that the people might have some change to take place.

Pine County, It appears from the figures, that there were no accidents on the Ottawa-West Central line and the morning service train.

The figures for the day on the Ottawa-West Central line were down, and including Old Lake, there were no accidents to the current schedule and the evening train was the one that was being carried as a change and would not be portended as a change in the schedule.

The inconveniences of not being able to phone after hours for emergency supplies and machinery and receive same the same day delivery: the possibility of possible disaster pending on the line, the time lapse between ordering and receiving could mean that the cars in Shawville were of some inconvenience.

The witnesses against the CPR service application indicated that from many local points of view, the line is a lifeline and would work a hardship on people generally. They also suggested that they very much suffered the development of the automatic.

As for the passenger service, witness after witness described the service as very good and asked that it be maintained. Their experience was good and they had no complaints.

The witnesses against the CPR service application, from many local points of view, placed much importance on the line and would work a hardship on people generally. They also suggested that they very much suffered the development of the automatic.

Curling Richarsons
Given Big Welcome

The Richardsons of curling fame were presented with silver tea services by the Saskatchewn Hills Curling Club on the occasion of their wedding. The tea services are a tribute to the. couple's love and dedication to the sport of curling. The couple has been a part of the curling community for many years, and their contribution to the sport has been significant. The tea services symbolize their commitment to the sport and their dedication to the community. The couple was presented with the tea services at a special ceremony, and the event was attended by many of their friends and fellow curlers. The couple was greeted with cheers and applause as they were presented with the tea services. The entire room was filled with the sound of clapping and laughter as the couple accepted the tea services and expressed their gratitude for the gesture. The tea services are a beautiful addition to their collection and a reminder of their special day. The couple was also presented with a bouquet of flowers as a token of appreciation for their efforts in promoting the sport of curling. The couple was given a standing ovation as they left the room. The event was a wonderful celebration of love and dedication to the sport of curling, and the couple was given a warm welcome as they continued on their journey. The tea services are a symbol of their love and dedication to the sport of curling, and they will be cherished as a reminder of the special day. The couple was given a warm welcome as they left the room, and the event was a wonderful celebration of love and dedication to the sport of curling.
