Pontiac MRC
Mayor discusses interim control bylaw, U.P.A., bridge insurance, Radio Pontiac

The mayor of Pontiac held a regular meeting on Monday at the firehall of Shawville for the month of October. The first item on the agenda was a report on the working with Radio Pontiac директор. Wanda Desmarais gave an account of the station, which she gives to the radio station, of the council had budgeted this year. The four directors over the council's approach are virtually the same from a financial point of view. The mayor is asking the council to consider the possibility of working with Radio Pontiac under their control.

The township's in the County of Pontiac, by the day of Thursday, October 5, 1993. Monday to Friday, on which they have normal hours, the last day of work in the last case one week. The mayor is asking that such a person be given power of attorney to go to Campbell's Bay during the week of October.

The MRC received news from the MRC of the development of the low-income housing in the municipality. They were looking at ways to make sure that the development of low-income housing in the community is properly supported. They were also looking at ways to ensure that the development of low-income housing in the community is properly supported.

Harry Smith started surveying on Tuesday morning for the location of a new house for the town. He and his assistant, Russell McLeod, were on hand to expedite the work which is the first step towards constructing the house for the utility truck which was recently purchased for the Fire Department.

56th anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Hawelin
They also received congratulations from the Prime Minister and the Governor General. They have been married 56 years and together, they are very proud of their four grown children and one grandchild.

More for the Home
Residents of Shawville's home for senior citizens will never lack for entertainment in the following months. In the month of October, there will be many events to choose from, such as concerts, lectures, workshops, and even a movie night. The home is always looking for volunteers and staff to help with the organization of these events.

Story time at the Library is beginning its fourth year on Thursday, Sept. 28. This is a special time for children and families. It is open to families with young children ages two and older. Children five years of age and under with families are invited to attend. The program is held every Thursday at 9:30 p.m. in the library's children's room. It is sponsored by the Library and the Friends of the Library. The theme for this year is "The Great Outdoors." The program is open to all children and families regardless of age. There is no charge for attendance. For more information, please call the Library at 361-5994.

Auctions are still in season

The second auction of the day was in Stewiacke on Thursday, Oct. 6. The auction was held at the Stewiacke Bible College. The auction featured items such as children's clothing, shoes, and other items. The auction was open to the public and was held in the college's gymnasium. There were many people in attendance and the auction was very successful. The proceeds from the auction will be used to support the college's mission.

Letters from our readers...

Dear Editor:

Thank you for the opportunity to express my views and concerns regarding the current political climate. I am concerned about the growing divide between political parties and the lack of meaningful dialogue. It seems that politicians are more interested in gaining power and control than in finding solutions to the challenges facing our nation.

I believe that we need to prioritize the well-being of our citizens and the future of our country. This means addressing issues such as climate change, economic inequality, and social justice. We cannot afford to let political differences stand in the way of progress.

Thank you for your attention to this issue.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Deadly silo gas

Are you aware that a silo full of nitrogene gases and carbon dioxide is a potential death trap? Deadly nitrogen gases are sent in these structures to make the atmosphere more agreeable for the silage. However, nitrogen gases have a disagreeable smell, and so no one cares to open the structures when working near the base of the concrete silos. No one should enter a silo unless he has a breathing apparatus. Even if you haven't been affected by silo gases, you must always be able to breathe freely in case of a fire. Ponytailes Steam and Gas Association. The Ponytailes Steam and Gas Association held its 36th regular meeting on September 15th, the first meeting after the August Steam Show. The meeting was held in the craft shed near Shawville.

With the 1982 Steam Show history, the club members are busy counting up the profits and expenditures and logging for a respectable profit along with analysing the events and deciding which ones were the most outstanding. There was considerable discussion about the show date for 1984 which will be decided at the October regular meeting.

Two of the members are invited to attend and take some of their antique equipment to International Plowing Match on September 25th to October 1st, at Richmond, Ontario.

Hazard warning!

Nitrogen gases have a disagreeable smell, sometimes described as amunition-like, and range in color from orange through red to dark brown. Because these gases are much heavier than air, fumes will naturally settle to the lowest level possible. In especially close quarters of this characteristic, when working near the base of a tower silo during the first few weeks after filling, it is advisable to use breathing apparatus. Able-bodied men and men who are in good health are recommended for this task, for when working near silo, a person might work the presence of silo gases for some time without realizing it, and, yet, long damage may result in death just a few hours later.

Deadly silo gas

Are you aware that a silo full of deadly nitrogen gases and carbon dioxide is a potential death trap? Deadly nitrogen gases are sent in these structures to make the atmosphere more agreeable for the silage. However, nitrogen gases have a disagreeable smell, and so no one cares to open the structures when working near the base of the concrete silos. No one should enter a silo unless he has a breathing apparatus. Even if you haven’t been affected by silo gases, you must always be able to breathe freely in case of a fire.
