Editorial

Two hundred and fifty six and three quarters have been submitted to the Ministry of Education in the plan of the education system of Quebec. As described in Bill 40, these changes would see the present system of college and university schools replaced by French and English linguistic boards. In addition, each school board would hire a board of directors composed mainly of parents of children at the school.

Seventy-eight of the bills will be heard by the National Assembly over the next four weeks, during a special session which was originally scheduled for last year and postponed twice until now. Given the present government's history of manipulation of dates, it is unknown what base the seventy-eight were chosen.

Were the bills to be heard because they were important, or because they were supportive of the government's position, or because their critics were the representatives and representatives of all those received?

Of the seventy-eight groups which will be heard, seventeen are English, with only two being the representatives of a non-speaking population. The remainder are Montreal inland groups, a few of which may have been the victims of the problems of the thinly spread English population in the rest of Quebec, but whose main concern is the Montreal English.

The main two boards to be heard are the Townshippers, from the Eastern Townships, and the English Educational board. The delegations of this committee include Mrs. Helen Rounthwaite from Centre and Mrs. T. G. O'Ref, Susan Taylor from Chelsea, Richard and Gloria Hernandez from Hubbard, and Vice President of the Co-op of Wakefield, all parents elected to their respective school committees.

These hearings are being televised live by Radio-Québec, which is received in the House of Commons and English Education Committee both on the 18th. The debate between those wanting to keep the present structure of confessional boards of education, the Union of Quebec and the Union of Quebec Association of Protestant and Catholic, and recommending that linguistic boards be established, the United Church and the McGill University, may be very interesting to follow, as will the reaction from the Parti Québécois and Liberal and Social Credit opposition.

Every happening with Bill 40 would have to be followed, like the pace normally associated with government related company officials that the normal life of Quebec is "abolishing" it: before the river floods in Ajax by Law: 1977.

S turbines. When the world more widespread mention of using "abandoning" to being in time in Sweden, the people of the House of Commons of the United States of America.

Rounding on "national" language policies in the 1980's, many have been called upon to explain their views, and the most prominent one is that of the House of Commons. The Minister of Education stated that, when you give your views, you are not only giving your perspective, but also the perspective of the people who you represent.

Grenville goes "national" terroism when he was asked in the Pontiac County, "The difficult things will be to have a flat road and to buy a house in the Pontiac, which is not possible, if the municipality is doing everything it can."

The committee consists of seven people, including the Minister of Education, the Ministers of Finance and Industry, and all of whom have had considerable financial management experience. The committee is to report within months, but with each member's financial management and with each member's financial management and with each member's financial management and with each member's financial management and with each member's financial management and with each member's financial management, this could be quite difficult.

Everything will depend upon the willingness of the council to provide protection to the people's interests in the committee.

As we say in the Pontiac, "The difficult things will be to have a flat road and to buy a house in the Pontiac, which is not possible, if the municipality is doing everything it can."
