New police colouring book for primary students

A new colouring book dealing with the harmful side of the police and each youthful problem as child abuse is to be delivered to regional primary school students.

The book, entitled "Helping Each Other To Work Together," is a revised edition of the one distributed in the spring of 1985 and was presented at a police council held in May at the Warden's office in Shawville. It is designed to teach children preventive measures against various problems such as shopping, phone fraud, and general safety. This new project, being a joint effort of the Warden and the Warden's office, Robert Matchett, Mayor of Shawville, is aimed to deal with current issues such as the prevention of sexual abuse and child abuse.

The colouring book is in English and French and contains many exercises to get the children involved in colouring, fill-the-dots and mazes. Police officer Myra Tymko drew the new graphics and Lucille Desilets, of the Campbell Bay Police Services Centre (PSCS) collaborated in the approach to youth problems. Police officers from the Campbell Bay police office will distribute the colouring book put out by the Campbell Bay office of the SQ in collaboration with Campbell's Bay Public School.

Shawville Lionettes install new executive

Gwen Hayes, Past President of the Shawville Lionettes, installed the new executive of the local club.

The new executive for 1986-87 is as follows: President, Myra Smith; President - Elect, Marlene Peron; Secretary-Treasurer, Sandra Murray; Corresponding Secretary, Jane Hayes; Vice-President, Louise Gauthier; and Past President, Renee Barbeau. Two Radar Williams were elected as directors.

The meeting convened on Tuesday, May 6, when the new executive was announced. The following proposals set out in the preliminary plan. Most meltdown proposals are in line with any strategic directions. All proposals reported that their constituents contribute on white woodlots and community outdoor facilities should be shared.

The Pontifical Assembly of Upper Pontiac has a new minister. Pastor Eun MacLaren and his wife Sharon have recently moved to the Pontifical Assembly in the church and are welcoming the community to their presence.

Pastor MacLaren is originally from The Pontifical Assembly in Upper Pontiac and has been involved in the church for many years. Pastor MacLaren completed his pastoral work in Grandchamp and California before engaging in the Pastoral Ministry in the Pontifical Assembly.

Pastor MacLaren knows many of our members personally.

"We are delighted to return to the Valley," he said. "We are looking forward to our ministry in the Pontifical Assembly. We are excited to be with the community at large and to see how the church and its members have grown and strengthened in the 30 years since our arrival.

Pastor MacLaren holds services on Monday and Tuesday as well as a Wednesday evening service in Fort Coulonge.

They have been Georges and three of their children: their eldest is six and week-old Jordan.

The winning poster of the Salon du Livre de l'Outaouais was drawn by an 11-year-old Calumet Island student named Ivan De Serres. Jean- Charles Gauvin, President of the Pontiac Zone for the Caisse Populaire Desjardins.

Honesty is still the best policy

In this part of the world the traditional way of communicating concerns to a politician or government is through the polls on election day. For a variety of reasons, once the election is over this communication often becomes much more difficult.

Politicians, be they municipal councillors, mayors, M.N.A.s, or M.P.s, usually find that they have an enormous amount of work to get through once they are elected and it is hard for them to find the time to meet with every person who wants to talk to them. Also they are often more concerned about the problems of people and organizations that can affect their chances of getting re-elected.

One method developed to deal with this problem is the petition. With the peti­tion it is possible to represent the voice of its many signatures, gives the politician some idea of how important a particular issue is to his constituents. Public opinion polls have become very trendy these days and have taken over from petitions in some sections of the community, but usually very conveniently solved a problem.

Recently a petition with about two thousand five hundred names on it was presented to the mayor of Pontiac at a meeting of the M.R.C. The people who signed it were concerned about the number of black bears in the county. The mayor of Pontiac, particularly in the uneconomic areas of the county, was defeated. Another resolution to recognize all of the present leases, and those granted before the Development Plan comes into effect next March, was passed.

Both resolutions are contrary to the spirit of the petition. The mayors' resolutions on the other hand, do not necessarily reflect the wishes of those who wrote the letter, but the local level. Petitions are always a grass roots exercise, run by people relatively unskilled in political lobbying, but usually very conveniently solved a problem.

Need for archives centre stressed

The need for an archives centre and for the establishment of a heritage inventory was also stressed. Mrs Crawford said that the archives centre would become once again a member of the Historical Societies of the Pontiac, in particular the Shawville Museum, the Vision School and the County Building in Campbell's Bay.

Several possible locations have been suggested, among them, the Shawville Museum, the former house in Campbell's Bay, the Vision School and the County Building in Campbell's Bay.

Mrs Crawford said that the Rotary Club about the Heritage of the Pontiac, in particular, the buildings in the county were highlighted in the speech.

From Safety Canada

Not so many years ago, we had the idea of having a mobile home. We decided to buy a 14 ft x 26 ft mobile home. We were attracted to it because of its size and the fact that it was mobile. We wanted something that we could take with us when we moved. We were also looking for a home that we could use as a weekend get-away. We wanted something that we could use as a vacation home.

We chose a mobile home because we knew that it would be easy to transport. We also knew that it would be easy to set up and take down. We were also looking for something that we could use as a weekend get-away. We wanted something that we could use as a vacation home.
