"The majority of these falls will be gone forever," warned Don Coffey, if the proposed hydroelectric project goes ahead at the Chutes Coulonge.

"We're hoping to get the MRC to rescind that decision," Routliffe said. "But we have watched the situation unfold since last spring and we have seen the momentum build."

"As the mayor of Quyon, I strongly support the Chutes as a community and as an economic engine," said Routliffe. "But these falls are part of Quyon's identity."
Patio offers action packed summer

By Collette Blain

Fontaine youth between the ages of four and 16 have summer fun in the park thanks to the efforts of the Patio in Fort-Collins.

Taking full advantage of the areas resources, the Patio offers kids the opportunity to take part in hiking, swimming, frisby, frisbee, flying, story telling, crafts and games. A few of the events activities were available during a two week session.

For $35 kids enjoy a week full of games, arts and crafts, and activities centered on the various sports related to the park's famous landmarks.

Kids are introduced to the park, with the help of a guide, the Redgill, they are shown the different areas. The guide becomes the 'police', the bad guy, who will we help the kids to appear to be more grown up as they make appearances here and there dressed in the traditional black bad boy get up. Terre-de-Ciel, the good guy. He represents all that is good for the environment and is carefully guarded by the camp participants against the nasty effects of Polluo.

The whole theme makes kids aware of environmental issues while playing on their own environment.

Each of the four sessions draws an average of 30 to 40 children per week. Some come as far away as eastern Ontario, although most were local kids who were signed up to Choupen.

The Patio offers a bus service to get kids in and out of camp, as well as lunches for cartoons for lunch.

This year, the camp has been specially designed. Participants can now look forward to visiting different areas of the park, bike rides, a corn roast, and even a trip to the beach with many of the regular activities.

A quick tour of Fort-Collings shows nature, making one with nature, and the protection of the natural resources of the area, by providing a multitude of water sports, supervised by the 5th birthday in Ireland

W J Stenton of Queen was recently treated to an early birthday celebration in Ireland.

W J was born on August 7, 1992. Accompanied by his father, his brother and, a special surprise, his sister, Mission Thomas, W J enjoyed a two week visit with his two brothers.

A week surprise awaited him when he was picked up by his Uncle John Cleen of Kanawana, Michigan, and his three daughters.

The family toured Ireland, including a visit to County Mayo where W J was shown guided them to the original homeland area where 'West Retreat' still remains.

The impressive countryside and the rich nature of the Irish people, as well as the songs, and jokes shared with family, and new friends, all continued to create fond memories.

Austin School members hold first-ever reunion

It took organizers a lot of months to locate and contact former pupils and remaining teachers of the Austin School in Clarendon for a first-ever reunion last weekend, August 1st and 2nd.

The organizers, Keith Dagg, Clare Russell, Emery Elliott, and Paul Carnegie, explained that one of the main problems they faced was the large number of people who were difficult to find because the school records were lost or destroyed.

On Saturday afternoon, 113 pupils, teachers, and family members sat down to a dinner served by the Shawville United Church. On Sunday the group attended a family cemetery service at the little white Austin School which is located next to the Shawville United Church.

The second and larger Austin schoolhouse which was located on the Front Road in Clarendon, was moved to Shawville and used as a classroom at the Shawville High School on Victoria Avenue. Later it was replaced with a larger schoolhouse in 1923. That building now forms part of the Clarendon Municipality Town Hall.

The Austin School was built in 1938.

Food and beverages were provided by the former students who were able to attend: Margaret Norma Burron, Ernest Dagg, Doris Watson, Melba Arbic, Evelyn McDowell, Willard Sparling, and Erwin Armstrong.

What price progress?

Opposition to the proposal was led by Councillor Coulange Chutes received a considerable boost this week, from all the media attention given to the issue. The citizens of Pontiac are clearly concerned about the environmental impact of the projects. They want to ensure that any new developments are sustainable and do not harm the natural habitat of Monarch butterflies, which have been on the verge of extinction due to habitat loss.

The project in question is the Monarch Butterfly Reserve, which aims to provide a safe haven for Monarch butterflies during their migration. The reserve is located in the Monarch region of Mexico and is an important stopover site on the Monarch's annual journey. The project is supported by the Mexican government and international organizations.

The反对派的主要领袖是克莱尔·库兰格，她收到的强烈支持来自本周所有媒体对项目的关注。公民们显然非常关心新开发的环境影响，他们希望确保任何新的开发项目都是可持续的，不会伤害到迁徙期间的黑脉金斑蝶自然栖息地。问题在于该提案，其目标是为黑脉金斑蝶提供一个安全的避难所，以防止它们的栖息地丧失。项目得到了墨西哥政府和国际组织的支持。

Paul Serek either guides himself or follows closely in a kayak as he safety measures. Here he is just playing around in the rolling waves.

...and this was his discovery that he has devoted himself to the people he has come to know, either as business acquaintances or as neighbours. This loyalty has encouraged Paul to keep his store at home. "People have been really happy to talk," says Paul. Equinox gets all its supplies, food, building materials and the like, right on Caledon Island, and the nearness to the farm he leases as a pastime.

In the 13 or so years since rolling logs began on the Ottawa, many improvements to equipment and safety features have been made. Although no regulations have been set by the Canadian Coast Guard — they merely require that there be a M.P.C.P. approved life jacket on board for each crew member — the river runners regulate themselves and have introduced many safety features to ensure thrill seekers a little adventure, and a lot of fun. Paul insists on using rafts equipped with cars to provide better control and allow there to be fewer accidents.

I'm a thrill seeker, OK? I admit it. I am addicted to it. To me it is not a thrill. There was a time when I would literally run my car off the road in quest for excitement, but now, after my wife sat on my belt, I pursue far less dangerous forms of excitement, still offer plenty of heart-pumping,肾上腺素飙升. The latest is white-water rafting.

It was a cold, wet Monday, a fog lying over a field, looking pretty foggy to an old-timer. I was not sure what this was all about. But the boat was loaded and I determined not to let a little weather or a little fog deter me in the way of my search for an exciting adventure.

I had picked Equinox Adventures Ltd. up at the airport through the rapids of the Ottawa. On the flight down from students from Brock University, two girls from Switzerland, one foot, and the one local type like myself. As we poured myself into the rented wallet, and well protected by an anorak and a life vest, I just could not believe that I was to help the others to warm up much. I did not know it. But by the time the big McCoy rapid came into sight, I was suddenly aware that the sun had come out and the temperature turned warm. This was going to be a thrill seeker adventure.

There aren't too many sports which provide the perfect combination of exercise, fresh air, excitement and outdoor rush than rafting. And after a few hours, I haven't found one that does all of that while also being relatively safe. But the McCoy rapid was truly exciting and quite literally making its McCoy is probably the highest falls of all the rapids on the Ottawa. Being the first, it takes you by surprise. You want to scream, you want to somehow let your voice carry to the sheer force of the McCoy.

Depending on where you go, there are many rivers with definitely different ride down this wet and wild. In the front, you are simply attached to a large, wetter, water. If you aren't particularly fond of the idea of drinking the Ottawa, it's best to reman-der the spray until the end. In the middle, no matter how you try to avoid it, you are faced with the psychological influence of the spray. (Continued on page 7)

Frustration

Waterfront Ladouceur expressed the MRC's frustration over the many years spent trying to develop the Chutes for tourism. He claimed that a recent study estimated that it would take $250,000 to make the site suitable.

"Everybody's talking about the potential of the site, but nobody wants to take it over and invest money," he said. The Chutes site was originally conceived by the MRC to be one component of a larger plan that would link it to Leslie Lake and Camelot Island, a network of tourist sites, but for many reasons that plan never materialized.

In the unused state, the Chutes at the exit of the tunnel have fallen into disrepair. Ladouceur said that if the MRC had known that the Hydro Pontiac deal would take this long to complete, they would have started showing the Chutes to tourism this summer.

From this site, he said, the fall could be developed and made available for tourism, but new development of the site would still be the responsibility of the MRC. The authors of the RAPE report suspected that the federal government's development plan ignores the development of other valuable resources, including the Chutes site.

Helen Routliffe asserted that Ladouceur "obviously has not read the RAPE report." She noted that siphon off 45 cubic metres per second to generate that Ladouceur "obviously doesn't know the potential of the unspoiled falls," in a network of tourist sites that would become tourist development, but the right sales pitch could be achieved for the falls, as well as the language. The English is the most sensible language for such signs. Considering that most of the clientele comes from the Toronto area or from abroad, English signage is more important.

Sixty-two tee off for third Asquini Golf Tournament

The third annual Joe Asquini Golf Tournament was held on July 18th at the Norby Bay Golf Course. A record 250 golfers competed in the $2,000 purse tournament.

The winners were Bob Tate and Paul Bortoli, both from Ottawa, who broke 80. It was a co-winner last year.

The Tournament brings together friends and families of long-time Norby Bay area cottage owner Joe Asquini, who passed away in 1989.

After the golf, more than 80 people gathered at the Asquini cottage for the tournament presentation, prizes, and an After Party in celebration of Joe Asquini and the tournament.

Next year, the Tournament, which is organized by the Asquini family, will be held on the second Saturday of July, 1993.

Elliott - Hodgins

We had Helen Doyle to visit several times. Frank Doyle and her mother were Margaret O'Callaghan. She was a niece of Mrs O'Callaghan and built this house two years ago. Their home is now the property of Mrs O'Callaghan. It is near the lake and was the site of Helen's birthday party in Quyon. She often goes canoeing on the countryside and paddles across rivers. They are very pleased. She toured this house and recalled familiar views and areas but also observed a few changes. It is now 69 years and a married to a woman from Campbell Bay.

Get well wishes to Don-Marj Daniels who was admitted to the Pontiac Community Hospital over the past weekend. Don-Marj is now home and recovery wishes go out to her. She is expected to be discharged soon. Our best felicitations to Mr and Mrs Vipperman.

Une vie sans sacrifice

En jetant un regard sur nos valeurs humaines et sociétales, nous pouvons changer notre perception de la signification de la vie et de notre rôle au sein de cette vie. La vie sans sacrifice est une réalité qui nous oblige à réfléchir sur notre propre existence et celle des autres.

La vie sans sacrifice est une réalité qui nous oblige à réfléchir sur notre propre existence et celle des autres. Elle nous apprend à accepter les défis avec courage et détermination.
