Relay for life arrives in Shawville

Volunteers pulled together event in less than two months

WILBUR MCLEAN

Shawville — A touching luminary ceremony to remember those who died of cancer and in support of those who fight it was the highlight of last weekend's Relay for Life, the first创投 of the event in Shawville. Despite having only two months to organize the event when Leslie Lake was unable to continue with their relay from last year, volunteers stepped up when called upon by the Shawville Relay for Life committee. For the volunteers, Leslie Lake are one of the top fundraisers for the Canadian Cancer Society.

The relay takes place from dusk to dawn. Participants stand in the dark, immovably in laps and at least one member of each team must be walking or sitting at all times. "There's no event like this," said Leslie Lake's team captain, Martin Leduc. "It's the only event where the community has cancer. Every day you hear of somebody else who does."

A brochure was sent to everyone who had taken part in the 125th Year, issue No. 25 of the Shawville Voice. It was the first bi-weekly issue since the 125th Anniversary, the first to be produced in colour, and the first to be mailed out to subscribers. The Voice of the Pontiac for 125 years...

"I like eating them," says 12-year-old Patrick Trudeau of Bristol. "I think I caught his line, cutting his first catch of the day.

"It was important for us to be in the lake area, who knows how to do it," said Kerri Reasbeck of the organizing committee.

Among many other services, the Canadian Cancer Society offers free wigs for cancer patients and temporary wigs, which has to be touched through the events.

"It's so important," said Kerri Reasbeck, of the organizing committee.

After 31 years, Iris Smith is leaving her news behind

Christina Gray

The Shawville Lionettes presented $5,050 to the Pontiac Hospital Foundation to contribute to the hospital's quickly growing dialysis fund. Iris Smith has done it all. At 31 years, she'll be leaving the notes behind when she moves to South Mountain, ON, in July, to live with a daughter who lives south of Ottawa, in Campbell's Bay. Smith's phone number is 613-758-1864, and you can reach her at campbellbaynotes@hotmail.com.

Iris Smith sits at her computer where she writes the Campbell's Bay social notes every week. After 31 years, she'll be leaving the notes behind when she moves to South Mountain, ON, in July, to live with a daughter who lives south of Ottawa, in Campbell's Bay. Smith has been hearing a lot lately about moving in with a daughter for information. They were my historians, my custodians, my table historian.

"Whenever I needed information, they were my historians, my custodians, my table historian." Smith has been the go-to person for information in Campbell's Bay for 31 years. This is one of the best things she's going to miss. Over 30 years, she's played in all the different churches, and Brown. And they're going to miss the computer in order to send her notes. The woman has been hearing a lot lately about moving in with a daughter for information. She plans to have The Equity delivered to her in South Mountain. She had to learn how to use the computer in order to send her notes. She'll just need to read it online, she said. One of the best things about doing the Campbell's Bay social notes is that, over the years, has been the feeling of giving back, she said. "To contribute to the community and do what I can," said Smith.

The fish, sponsored by Airway R. Vaillancourt of Shawville, was released into the river this past weekend.

The water bylaws have been revised. The first place winner of the derby was Mark Papillon, who caught a 31.8-pound fish and earned $500 first. Second place was M. D. Leblanc, who caught a 24.9-pound fish and earned $300.

YOUR OPINION
To the people who broke into the Quyon Legion
Dear Editor,

Your editorial is quite a snip. I know that my flag and my country are very important to me. I am always looking for ways to improve my country. This is why I am writing to you today.

Many people are not interested enough to fly our country's flag. When I see my Canadian flag being flown in the wrong position or not at all, I feel ashamed. Our flag is a symbol of our country and should be treated with respect.

I want to remind you that when flying a Canadian flag, it should be at least half-mast, with the union (the red section) on the left and the other three-quarters facing outward. This is the correct etiquette for flying the Canadian flag.

Please consider my request and please fly our country's flag properly.

Sincerely,

Flying our flags

Dear Editor,

I am writing to you today to discuss the recent incident at the Quyon Legion. As a member of the Legion, I was disappointed and shocked by the actions of those who broke into the Legion.

Our Legion is a place where veterans can come together to share their experiences and support each other. It is a place where memories are made and friendships are formed. As a veteran, I feel a sense of pride and honor when I see the Canadian flag flying high and proud at our Legion.

Unfortunately, the recent incident has tarnished the reputation of the Legion and has caused a great deal of concern among members and veterans alike. It is important that we come together as a community to address this issue and work towards finding a solution.

I urge you to please consider my request and please fly our country's flag properly.

Sincerely,

Overstimulation

Dear Editor,

I am writing to you today to discuss the issue of overstimulation in children. As a parent, I have experienced firsthand the impact of overstimulation on my child.

Overstimulation can cause a variety of problems, including difficulties with attention and focus, irritability, and difficulty sleeping. It is important to be aware of the signs of overstimulation and to take steps to prevent it.

One way to prevent overstimulation is to create a quiet and calm environment. This can be done by reducing the amount of sensory input that your child is exposed to, such as turning off the television and putting away toys.

I urge you to please consider my request and please fly our country's flag properly.

Sincerely,

How would you like to be in the television game show? You'd probably have to be a pretty clever person to win that game show. But what if you were able to design a game show that you could play at home? This is the idea that Bernard G. More is exploring in his latest book, "Outside the Box: The Smartest Game Show You'll Ever See.

In this book, More presents a new approach to game shows, one that is both innovative and entertaining. He shows how you can use the principles of game shows to create a game that is both challenging and fun.

I urge you to please consider my request and please fly our country's flag properly.

FLYERS WIN ANOTHER BLOWOUT

The Flyers have won two wins in a row, a victory in the American League and a blowout win in eight games. The Flyers are favourites heading into the tournament. They are capable of tangling with the five-time champions and have a decent hitting tract. The Flyers have proven capable of hanging with the Blue Jays, despite losing 1-0.

OVERTIME I LUKE MURPHY

New to the team, Luke Murphy has hit over .300 in his last five starts. He is hitting .320 for the season.

The state of the Blue Jays

The Blue Jays have struggled this season, but have some good players on the roster, including Roy Halladay and Jose Bautista. They need to turn things around soon if they want to make the playoffs.

One new Lion inducted and two others honoured by Shawville Lions Club

CHRISTINA GRAY
Equity Reporter - Shawville • Two Lion club members were honored by Helen Keller Fellowship on Thursday night for their service to others.

"It's a fairly prestigious award," said Lorraine Maguire, treasurer of the couple.

"We try to find someone that we feel is standing out in our club," he said. Indeed, that's what the award was designed for. According to the Lions club members, the award is given to people who are recognized by the Lions club.

The two Lions selected for the award were Lions Helen Keller Fellowship for a member based on certain donation requirements that the district has made. Members who are selected for the fellowship are given a Helen Keller pin and a solid oak framed certificate.

The Lions link to Helen Keller, who was both deaf and blind, goes back to 1925 when she spoke at an International Lions conference in Illinois, in her speech, 'What it means to me' is sharing that something against darkness.

"That's the reason for the award," he said. But he said he feels very privileged to have been selected and adds to hang the award somewhere special.

Maguire, who is currently the Lions president, said he's going to hang it in his office.

"What it means to me is that I've been able to contribute to the community," she said.

Thursday night also included the installation of the new tenant for the Lions club, Jim Finan. He said he was looking for a new club to join after that one folded.

"I enjoy service clubs," he said. "Working in the service of the community.

The Lions currently have about 30 members, said Maguire, and about 20 were at the Lions Hall in Shawville for the evening.

Lion James Howard was the other recipient of Helen Keller Fellowship. The award recognizes members for their outstanding service to others.

I never had a chance to say goodbye to you. You were gone before we knew it. Your journey’s just begun. Life holds so many lessons. This earth is only one. Just think of them as nesting. From the sand and sea. From the world of spirit and contact. There are no days and nights. It’s all a cycle. That’s what we call eternity.

We will be there when the sun comes up. We will be there when the sun goes down. We will be there when the sun is straight up. When the sun sets, we will be there.
