Bill threatens fines and prison

Strikers ordered back to work

HOUSE BURNS — A small house just outside of Foster burned Thursday evening as high winds tossed the flames through the small bungalow so rapidly that when the Knowlton Fire Department arrived, the house was beyond saving.

The home was owned by James Tryhorn. High winds blew the flames away from the direction of the other homes but several times the fire-fighters raced to put out fires which started due to the intense heat.

At the time, Mr. and Mrs. Tryhorn and their three sons were away visiting. The cause of the fire is still, as yet, undetermined. (Record photo: Ralph Seaton)

QUEBEC (CP)—A special session of the legislature early today adopted a government bill to order Montreal striking bus and subway workers back to their jobs within 48 hours. Only major change in the bill in third reading was an amendment introduced by Premier Daniel Johnson to provide a 15-day period of conciliation with the dispute going to compulsory arbitration if it is not settled within the conciliation period. The opposition battled in vain to get the government to withdraw clauses in the bill threatening de-certification of unions at the Montreal Transportation Commission if less than 70 per cent of the workers returned to work within 48 hours. The bill was adopted in third reading by a vote of 54-46 with independent Frank Hanley—Montreal-St. Anne—siding with the government. COULD RETURN Friday night Lucien L'Allier, chairman of the Montreal Transportation Commission, said at least some bus and subway lines could be operating again today if enough workers return to their jobs. Only 1,500 key men would be needed to restore full services, he said, adding that "a large number" of phone calls from workers who promised to turn up in the morning had been received at MTC headquarters. The MTC operates a fleet of 1,650 buses throughout the city and 30 nine-unit subway trains that run on four lines. A skeleton staff of 12 drivers and supervisors can run the popular three-mile subway line to Expo 67. Friday night the opposition Liberals joined the Union Nationale government in voting 97 to 2 to give approval in principle to the special back-to-work legislation. Voicing against the measure were Independent members Rene Levesque and Francois Aquin, who disagreed with a provision containing threat of de-certification for the transit workers' five unions if more than 70 per cent of their members disobey the court order. After the bill was given first reading Friday afternoon, Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, disbanded a two-hour protest demonstration in front of the legislative assembly. The workers' five unions are affiliates of the CNTU. Some 1,000 paraders, most of them strikers from Montreal, marched up and down chanting slogans but finally grew restless in the cool air. The legislation provides a penalty of from $25 to $100 a day for each striker with or without a maximum of one month in jail. Fines of from $5,000 to $50,000 a day are also threatened for union leaders with or without a maximum of one year in jail.

Murder charged

COWANSVILLE — (Staff)—Larry Thomas White, 21, Cowansville, was arraigned on a charge of capital murder in connection with the slaying of Georges Cotnoir, a Cowansville cab driver before Judge Gerard Normandin in Bedford District Court yesterday morning. Preliminary hearing for the form was set for Friday, October 27.

Agreement

DETROIT (AP)—With most major pieces stitched into place, United Auto Workers union and Ford Motor Co. bargainers moved today to tie off the loose ends of a contract to end a strike now in its 45th day. It is the third-largest in auto history. Already wrapped up, an industry source said, were enough bit items to make the package probably the largest settlement ever in the auto-making industry, possibly one of the richest ever in any industrial field.

Tories gain

GANDER — (CP)—"The Liberals are now down to 38 from 39 seats out of 42 and the Tories are up to four from three out of 42."

That terse statement — Premier Joseph Smallwood's only comment Friday night after a Progressive Conservative by-election victory that broke an 11-year-old Liberal hold on Gander — summed everything up, even if it didn't add anything.

Demonstration

WASHINGTON — (AP)—The Pentagon bristled with unprecedented defiance today for a huge anti-war demonstration at its doors, the spotlight event in a week-long series of protests across the U.S. against the Vietnam war. Estimates were that up to 70,000 would march on defence department headquarters — to peace groups, the symbol of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Wide range

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal department of corporate and consumer affairs will deal with a wide range of consumer issues but John Turner has told the public not to expect "magical, instant solutions." The legislation to establish the department won approval in principle in the Commons Friday after four days of opposition attack and a strong defence by the 38-year-old registrar-general.

Deformed

LONDON (Reuters)—LSD, the hallucinogenic drug lysergic acid diethylamide, can cause the birth of deformed children as well as permanent mental damage, says the British Medical Journal in its latest issue, available Friday. In a report inquiring whether the drug could be as dangerous as the tranquilizer which caused the birth of many limbless children in 1962.

Boats bombed

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. Navy bombers pounced on six torpedo boats near the North Vietnamese coast today and pilots reported sinking four of them. The six patrol boats, one of the largest groups of torpedo boats U.S. fliers have spotted, were attacked one mile east of the mouth of the Thanh Hoa river, in the central part of North Vietnam, a U.S. spokesman said.

Two hot spots

By THE CANADIAN PRESS Ottawa and Toronto are likely to be the hot spots today when protest groups across Canada stage demonstrations against the war in Vietnam. The turnout in the two Ontario cities is expected to be big, noisy and, maybe, troublesome. Marchers will also be active in Halifax, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver.

State-run lotteries show little profit

NEW YORK (AP)—The chial and non-public schools public lottery as a source of revenue for state governments cannot share in the profits from the sweepstakes. The 4-1 decimas run into difficulty in the voided a state law allowing only two states which have put them to practice. Before the New York State Lottery began, tax officials forecast a monthly income of $30,000,000 based on a study of foreign lotteries and the New Hampshire Sweepstakes. But State Tax Commissioner Joseph Murphy said the estimates were "never too real to start with." He cited the fact that New Hampshire sells about 80 per cent of its $3 tickets to tourists, compared with a sale of only 20 per cent to tourists in New York. The New York tickets sell for $1. Murphy said that at the present rate the state would net only $30,000,000 this year for schools instead of an anticipated $180,000,000. New Hampshire's Sweepstakes sales for 1967 closed Sept. 10 and the total take was $2,567,772, down $1,290,000 from last year. In its first year in 1964 the sweepstakes took in $5,730,000. The experiences of New York and New Hampshire would seem to all but dash the hope that a state-run lottery was a tax bonanza waiting to be plucked. To boost its lagging sales, New York's lottery advertising in the future will play up prizes that could be won by a player. One advertisement features a picture of a $100,000 winner. In the past the advertising had been keyed to helping education. The lottery is also looking into the idea of pushing sales with sex appeal. In September a score of attractive young ladies in bright yellow mini-skirts toured New York City to spur ticket sales. The lottery lasses got a send-off from Deputy Mayor Robert W. Sweet and Mayor John V. Lindsay proclaimed "Lottery Day" in the city. UK a trove of buried antiquities

LONDON (CP)— Britons live in a treasure house of buried yesterdays. Down through pre-history and the rise and fall of civilizations, most of the little island has been built over at one time or another. A farmboy turns up a crude gold bracelet from some forgotten eon; excavators in the London financial district strike a Temple of Mithras; a householder finds a potful of medieval coins; a head of the Emperor Hadrian, whose Roman legions once ruled Britannia, emerges from the Thames silt. There is so much of Britain's rich story drowning just below the 20th century surface that every man can be his own archeologist. They dig into bronze age barrows — burial mounds — in Dorset, middle ages castles in Montgomeryshire, iron age earthworks in Essex, a Roman fortress in Fife. The unending burrowings of the London underground system tap inexhaustible lodes of the capital's many-layered past. And the current digging season has been one of the most memorable in decades, flavored with such historic-romantic touches as a full-dress hunt for King Arthur's Camelot and a search for the grave of Lady Godiva — she really existed even though skeptics doubt that famous horseback ride — along with such solid operations as work on the treasure-laden graves of the East Anglian kings of 1,300 years ago. A late entrant is the BBC with a decision to sponsor, for television, a three-year dig into a huge prehistoric mound called Silbury Hill in Wiltshire. Archeologists have been eyeing the hill speculatively for more than a century but its size has daunted them up to now.

Ousted leader's cry for liberty gives Greeks a taste of debate

ATHENS — (TNS) — For the first time since the army took over the administration of this country, the Greeks have been enjoying a nostalgic taste of political debate. This results from the surprising reaction to a statement by former Prime Minister Panayotis Canellopoulos, whose right-wing caretaker government was ignominiously pitched from office during the small hours of last April 21. Canellopoulos, after five months of silence, on September 27 called foreign newsmen to his Athens apartment and put out a strong call for political freedom in Greece. He said he "would not bother" to send his statement to the censored Greek press; nor would he "expose to the danger of arrest" those willing to distribute it in secret illegal pamphlets. What happened next was partly predictable, partly not. On the one hand, the 64-year-old leader of the National Radical Union was placed under house arrest, pending a decision by the judicial authorities on whether he should face court martial trial on a charge of insulting authority. On the other hand, his statement was published, almost in full, in the censored

Greek press. And comment interspersed between each paragraph included the frankest admissions yet made about the motives behind the army takeover. There were probably two reasons why the government permitted, or ordered, publication of the annotated Canellopoulos text in its principal mouthpiece, the Athens daily Eleftheros Kosmos (Free World). One is that censorship is steadily losing its efficiency as a means of preventing the Greeks, and in particular the better-educated section of Athens society, from learning what is happening in this country, and what is being said and done about it abroad. Foreign newspapers and magazines circulate freely, BBC broadcasts, both in English and Greek, can be picked up on most radios, and the number of pamphlets surreptitiously circulating is increasing. Publication of the text in Eleftheros Kosmos ensured that at least the Greeks would read it with the accompaniment of the newspaper's "answers." This, it may be, was considered the lesser evil. Secondly, publication was held up until the day after issue of a statement by a former close associate of Canellopoulos, ex-premier Panayotis Pipinellis, calling on all "nationalist - thinking" Greeks to support the present government and to cease playing "the Communist game." Thus, the impression could be given that Canellopoulos spoke for himself, a bitter and humiliated former politician, and not for the right-wing party of which he is leader. Pipinellis showed that the party is not united behind Canellopoulos, and to this extent weakened the latter's case. Eleftheros Kosmos, in addition to its replies, introduced between the paragraphs of the brief Canellopoulos statement, printed thousand-word editorials on six successive days on the subject of the deposed prime minister.

Kosmos maintained that a systematic campaign had been launched against Greece by foreign Communist parties "to mislead both public opinion and the governments of certain countries." Aim of the campaign was to oblige the European countries to take strong measures against Greece. "Mr. Canellopoulos has taken part in this campaign as an ally, acting from reasons of personal political interest." Those attacking Greece, the paper said, make use of two arguments: echoed by Canellopoulos: that there was neither a serious internal crisis nor a Communist threat to seize power in Greece, after the elections set for May 28 and aborted by the army takeover, and that a smooth development of the political situation had been possible within the framework of democracy. "Thus the revolution appears as unjustified and simply attributable to the personal ambitions of certain officers. Mr. Canellopoulos agrees with these arguments, and appears as a counsel for the defence of the Center Union (of former Premier George Papandreu, under house arrest since April 21) and the Communist Party." Last April, Kosmos said, Canellopoulos, "obviously possessed with hallucinations," believed he would win the May 28 elections, but his own party did not agree with him. "The N.R.U. had the feeling it was being led to the slaughter like a flock of sheep."

WRONG PLAYER WAS DECLARER

Good players are usually lucky. Most of the time they make their own luck but sometimes the gods of chance really smile on them.

After 44 boards of the championship match North America held a 12 International Match Points lead. The Italians picked up 14 match points on Board 45 to take a lead and from that point never looked back. They might well have won if this hand had gone against them but we will never know. We do know that we can't assess blame against Alvin Roth and Bill Roth because they played three no-trump from the South seat while d'Alelio and Pabis Tucci of Italy played it from the North.

and when it lost he went down four losing six hearts, a diamond and a club.

We also are not going to fault Roth for ducking the first heart. He could not have known he could have made the hand by rising with dummy's ace of hearts at trick one. Then he would lose the diamond finesse. West would be in with the diamond but the heart suit would be blocked forever provided Roth followed up his clairvoyant start by playing the clubs in such manner that West would not be able to get on lead with his ten.

Show Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The film industry in recent years has been playing a version of musical chairs to keep veteran stars busy.

A better name might be musical saddles.

It's lots of fun, especially for the stars. They can't lose, and the stakes are high. Who could ask for more?

There once was a time when a Gary Cooper or an Errol Flynn could carry a western on his own broad shoulders. But we have entered an era of bigness, and producers believe it takes two male stars to pull the patrons in. And so studios have come up with endless combinations for box-office appeal.

Two new combos are before the cameras now: James Stewart and Dean Martin are shooting it out at Bracketville, Tex., in Bandolero. And Yul Brynner and Robert Mitchum are galloping over the Spanish countryside for Villa Rides.

Last year Mitchum appeared with John Wayne in El Dorado and with Kirk Douglas and Richard Widmark in The Way West. Next February the indefatigable Mitch combines with Dean Martin in Five Card Stud. See how the game is played?

Tallest man in the musical saddles game is John Wayne, of course. Beside the above-mentioned Mitchum, Wayne has been seen with James Stewart in The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance, with Kirk Douglas in War Wagon, William Holden in The Horse Soldiers, etc.

James Stewart is no slouch, either. As noted, he has been paired with Wayne and Martin, plus Richard Widmark in Two Rode Together and his old pal Henry Fonda in the upcoming Firecracker.

Kirk Douglas has combined with Wayne, Widmark, Mitchum, plus Burt Lancaster in Gunfight at OK Corral, Anthony Quinn in Last Train From Gun Hill and Rock Hudson in The Last Sunset.

Nobody knows how the game of musical saddles will end.

Birthday party for 4-year-old

ROCK ISLAND — Master Todd Harding had a fourth birthday recently and that afternoon his grandmother, Mrs. Franklin Miller, gave him a party at her home.

Games were played indoors and out. Todd received several nice gifts. Lunch was served to the little folk who were seated around the dining table.

Mrs. Miller had made Todd's favorite chocolate cake and decorated it appropriately and lighted the four candles which Todd had the fun of blowing out, then it was served.

Later, the five mothers who had accompanied their children had a cup of tea and refreshments.

Todd's guests were Natalie and Anne-Marie Warren, Debbie, David and Richard and Maryanne Parent, Mark and Lance Dubois, Raymond Rodrigue and Danny Nicholson.

About television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Television network executives are shopping industriously for new programs and huddling nervously about ailing old ones.

The time has come, earlier than in most years, to announce death sentences on feeble entertainment series, to take some chances that a few ailing shows will mend and, above all, to look over the bull pens for replacements.

Dundee and the Culhane was the first victim of the Nielsen, given a death sentence by CBS a couple of weeks ago. ABC's Good Company is not given much of a chance to survive beyond December, if that long. The future looks blacker than Little Big Horn for its Legend of Copper. NBC denies furiously a rumor that its Maya is not long for the TV world, but has nothing much to say about the disappointing showing of Accidental Family, a new comedy series, or Star Trek, whose popularity has slipped since last season.

It is certain that a number of

Everyone from a ditch digger to a prime minister can enjoy art

Dougan, chairman of the English-speaking membership committee of the Association and Mrs. Marcel Lafreniere, president of the Association. (Record photo: Gerry Lemay)

By RICHARD NUTBROWN
 (Record Staff Reporter)

Art arose from a human skill and not from nature; it is therefore a product of the people to be enjoyed by everyone from a ditch-digger to the Prime Minister of Canada.

Too often, though, is the appreciation of art limited to either the wealthier or more intellectual classes of society.

The Art Gallery at the University of Sherbrooke is fully aware of this dilemma and, with the help of the Association for the Advancement of the Arts, hopes to stimulate the cultural curiosity of local residents.

The U of S Art Gallery, once an independent undertaking holding its exhibits in the lobbies of the different faculties at the university, is now a permanent part of the campus with both the students and the general public taking a keen interest in it.

"The Association for the Advancement of the Arts is in its fifth year," said Mrs. A. A. Dougan, the English-speaking membership chairman of the Sherbrooke Association, "and this year looks better than all the others as far as benefits and displays for the members are concerned."

She said that before members benefited only slightly by such things as being present at the opening of exhibits but that this year the association hoped to offer more benefits such as amusements for their children in the form of puppet shows.

Gerard Lafleur, director of the U of S Art Gallery said that in the past art displays were restricted almost totally to professionals but now the gallery would exhibit amateurs who show exceptional talent.

"We hope to gain the interest of the public," he said "and to broaden their views by displaying the best talent, in all fields of art, we can obtain."

He said the gallery intends to widen its scope this year by offering to the public such diversified forms of art as films, photography displays, puppet shows, theatre, music sculpture and paintings.

"We receive the same exhibitions as the Montreal Modern Art Museum," he said, "making our gallery as good as any other in the province of Quebec."

He said for each opening a separate invitation was sent to each member of the association and, since the memberships are issued to the entire family, all are invited.

"The major problem," he said, "at the present time is the payment of the costs for insurance and the police guards when an important exhibit is sent from Ottawa."

"The gallery," said Mrs. Marcel Lafreniere, president of the Association for the Advancement of the Arts, "will only be part of the association this year since we plan to branch off to various other types of art."

The following is a preliminary sketch of what the association plans to do this year in the different forms of art to be presented. Activities in the gallery will be divided into three categories, exhibitions, courses and collection of paintings by the gallery.

The field of music will be divided into four sections: recordings, concerts, courses and choir.

The theatre will present professional troupes as well as the university's own group, L'Atelier.

"We are a liaison," said Mrs. A. A. Dougan, "between the public and the gallery and with the continued co-operation between the gallery and the association the public will benefit by viewing the best in the different fields of art."

"It is the intention of the provincial Ministry of Cultural Affairs," she said, "to group together under one roof all the cultural exhibits of the different regions."

She said in Sherbrooke this was being done admirably by the method in use.

"The university provides the gallery," she said, "the association provides the funds, to support the best possible exhibits."

High Times

HIGH TIMES correspondent Debby Ramage from Lennoxville High reports that LHS day was a "complete success." However, she adds, a soccer game was held at 1 p.m. between the senior boys of Lennoxville and Sherbrooke in which Lennoxville lost 4-1. Participants in the parade that followed included, the high school's staff, cheerleaders, students council and Lyre executives as well as members of the various houses. There was a baseball game between the staff and grads in which the grads suffered a surprise defeat of 9-6. To end the day's activities a dance was held in the gymnasium that was attended by 320 people.

The senior boys lost their semi-final series to Sherbrooke in which Lennoxville lost 4-1. Participants in the girls teams travelled to Sherbrooke returning with a tie and a loss. The final result of the senior game was 0-0 while the juniors lost 1-0.

The Red Cross executive have been chosen as follows: president, Margaret George; vice-president, Beverly Sawyer; secretary, Marnie Van Horn and treasurer, Stephen Bernard.

AT SUNNYSIDE HIGH Nan Mallard reports that students from Grades 7 to 11 passed a fun filled day at Expo, Oct. 10. She would like to extend thanks to all persons who supervised the various groups of students and to principal C. Kendall for organizing the trip. Last Saturday Grade 10 put on the first dance of the new school year. The band they chose to play was called Les Zombes and this attracted a large crowd so that it turned out as a pronounced success. The opening of the student council booth was greeted with much enthusiasm this year by both

Car hits girl but goes on

By SMITH MARGUERITE

Police reported yesterday that the driver had not been apprehended as yet.

The girl, Rose-Marie Lauzon, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philbert Lauzon, of 63, 9th Avenue, Sherbrooke.

Miss Lauzon was transported to Hotel Dieu and is reported in good condition after suffering a fractured leg and a slight concussion.

A Sherbrooke woman was slightly injured late Thursday afternoon in a two-car collision on the corner of Parc and Terill Streets in Sherbrooke.

Slightly injured was Miss Rita Lepage, 40, of RR. 4 Sherbrooke.

She was transported to the Hotel Dieu Hospital and was released shortly after.

The driver of the other car was Yvon Lemieux, 19, of 83 St. Elie Street, East Angus.

This is the fourth car accident in three weeks at this intersection reported at the Sherbrooke Police.

Two Sherbrooke youngsters were treated at the Hotel-Dieu Hospital and released Wednesday after they had been slightly injured in an accident involving the school bus they were travelling home in and a car.

Mario Bonfiglio, five, Bourque Boulevard, and Marc Boucher, five also of Bourque Boulevard, were given a check-up and released.

The accident occurred on Bourque Boulevard in the late afternoon when a car driven by Eddie Packwood, 42, of RR. 1 Sherbrooke, smashed into the back of the school bus driven by Adolphe Bourassa, 56, of Magog.

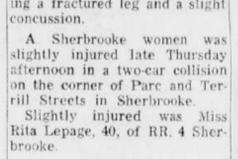

The bus is the property of Leonidas Trahan of Magog.

The car was seriously damaged but no one was hospitalized.

Needy adults to visit Expo

With the cooperation of agencies and social clubs, twenty more adults who were unable to go on the free Expo Saturday last will have the opportunity to spend Sunday seeing Man and His World at no expense to themselves. At the request of the Welfare Council, the Social Service Centre has convened the trip. The Welfare Council has provided passports and pocket money for each person, and the Rotary and Richelieu Clubs have undertaken to meet the cost of transportation.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Topp, of Seely's Bay, Ont., are spending a few days at their summer home here.

Sentenced to time he spent in prison

Judge Benoit Turmel yesterday sentenced a man to the time he had already spent in jail on a theft charge and said he was giving him a chance.

Wilfred Gagne, 23, of Sherbrooke, pleaded guilty to stealing a portable record player worth $45 from Ecole Le Ber in Sherbrooke.

Gagne told the Court of Sessions judge he wanted to turn over a new leaf and get back to his job.

He had been in jail since September 11.

Nelson Proulx, 34, of Sherbrooke, pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods and will be sentenced next Thursday. He had been found in possession of stolen photography equipment.

Eugene Belanger, 20, of Rock Island, was fined $150 and costs and his licence was suspended for six months on two charges—one of impaired driving and a hit and run charge.

Thieves steal industry exhibits

The industrial exhibit at Howardene in Sherbrooke was robbed of several articles a short time ago.

Stolen from the exhibits were several rings from the L. G. Balfour Co. display along with two expertly designed bows made by Sherbrooke Wood Products Ltd.

Among the collection of rings were copies of several school rings along with one of the rings which the Sherbrooke Beavers were presented with when they won the Allan Cup, he said.

The thefts apparently broke into the building through a window they had broken at the rear of the building, reported the police.

As yet no arrests have been made by the local police authorities.

'Don't forget your camera' is a good rule to remember

The idea of having your camera always available is not a bad one. Going out to take pictures it is sometimes difficult to come up with something you would like to take.

But on the other hand how many times do you see a happening or an interesting subject and no camera around.

Most of these subjects are unusual or novel and spontaneous.

People who drive a lot in their business are most likely to come across something more often and I don't mean accidents which also may be one of your interests.

The unusual subjects run from a formation of birds on phone wires to a truck up-ended or load shifted going up a hill so that the front end frantic people bring out their belongings.

There are so many times in some situations where your camera could be of use for those once in a lifetime pictures of Canadians at work or play.

The whole success of the quickie picture is how well you can operate your equipment.

When an incident comes along there is usually very little time to set the camera but when you are familiar with it your pictures will have that necessary interest.

In fact, well-taken outstanding ones may be worth many.

Camera talk by Doug Gerrish

House fires or barn fires can bring action into your pictures with great impact as the local Chamber's Administration Council received the complete series of the studies and analyses on the Carter Report, published in the form of brochures by the Equitable Income Tax Foundation.

After considering the information put at their disposal, the directors of the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce endorsed unanimously and without restrictions the positions and recommendations presented to the federal ministry by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

On the other hand, the directors of the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce took note of the memorandum which the Canadian Chamber of Commerce sent to the Minister of Finance, the Honorable Mitchell Sharp, on the sixth of October.

Bygone days

TEN YEARS AGO THETFORD MINES — The St. John's Auxiliary held its weekly meeting with the leader, Mrs. O. H. Adams, in charge. Chief topic of discussion was a means of making money for their yearly pledges. It was finally decided that the girls should offer their services as baby-sitters to members of the Women's Club on the night of November 13, when they are presenting their play, Deadlier Than the Male. The girls' offer was eagerly accepted and the cast of the play invited them to a dress rehearsal so they would not miss the play. The money the girls receive from their baby-sitting will be used to pay their G.A. pledges.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO Pierre (Pete) Blais gave a brief account of his trip to New York to take in the World Series, and of his visits to other American cities, at the weekly Optimist Club dinner held last night in the La Salle Hotel. Two guests were introduced: Bill Churchward by Victor Jarjour and Charles Jette by Jacques Laliberte. Several members of the club were going to Montreal tonight for a reception to be given for Warren Day, Fort Worth, Texas, International President of Optimism. Saturday night, local representatives will be present in Montreal for a reception in honor of Hugh Crochetiere, Montreal club president. President Marquardt was in the chair for the meeting and seated at the head table with him were: Don Clowery, Eddie Wray, Marcel Bernard, Gilles Blais and Jack McCabe.

TWENTY YEARS AGO Some 125 members of the local police force and guests attended a banquet and dance held in the Canteau Frontenac Hotel to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the department, the banquet being the annual gathering of the police force. Speakers for the evening included Mayor Guy Bryant, Maurice Gingués, M.P., Alderman C. Guy Bishop, Chairman of the Protection Committee, Alderman Armand Fiset, Redmond Hayes, K.C.; Chief of Police, Edouard Moreau; Director of the Fire Department, Percy Donahue, Richard Crepeau and Rev. Canon Ira Bourassa, a former chaplain of the department. Leopold Bigonnesse acted as speaker for the evening and gave an address to the department. Seated at the head table with the chairman were: Mrs. Johnny Bourassa, representing Johnny Bourassa; Maurice Gingués, Mrs. Gingués, Mayor and Mrs. Guy Bryant, C. Guy Bishop, Chief of Police Edouard Moreau, Rev. Canon Ira Bourassa, and Mrs. Leopold Bigonnesse.

COMMENT

by Lubor J. Zink

OTTAWA — (TNS) — So far the main argument behind the mounting pressure on the U.S. government to stop half the war in Vietnam has been that unconditional cessation of the bombing of the north would open the door to peace talks. Once the bombing is stopped, U.N. Secretary General U Thant has been telling the world, negotiations will start "within a few weeks." India's spokesman in the U.N. went even further when he maintained, without any qualification, that suspension of air raids on the north would lead swiftly not only to the conference table but also to general ceasefire in the south. All this talk created the impression that Hanoi was anxious to end the war and that it was the U.S. government which stood in the way of a peaceful settlement of the conflict.

A note of caution

When External Affairs Minister Paul Martin publicly aligned Canada with the stop-the-bombing advocates, he poured a little cold water on the assertion that negotiations and ceasefire would automatically follow if the U.S. suspended the air strikes unconditionally and indefinitely. While he maintained that, in his opinion, "all attempts to bring about talks between the two sides are doomed to failure unless the bombing is stopped," he added: "But let us not for a moment pretend that a halt in the bombing would in itself bring the war to an end. . . . There is no hope for progress toward a burden of responsibility for making that sort of approach is relevant only in essential concessions on only one side, circumstances of military victory and defeat." The note of caution was almost entirely overlooked in the din of left-wing jubilation over Canada's public endorsement of the stop-the-bombing pressure on Washington. It wasn't until this week that Mr. Martin, who obviously enjoyed the publicity and the accolades, returning to the "there are no magic formulas" portion of his U.N. speech.

Temporary advantage

Asked in a television interview whether an unconditional suspension of U.S. bombing would give the Communists a military advantage, Mr. Martin said: "There may be a temporary advantage. That was pointed out to us by the President of the United States himself. . . . But I see no other way at the moment of bringing about preliminary discussions between the government of North Vietnam Saigon and the U.S."

advantage, even though the ground fighting would continue for some time. Mr. Martin has absolutely nothing to offer in this respect. Reminded that the bombing was stopped several times without response from Hanoi, he was asked: "What makes you, or anybody else, think that this time it will be different?" Said Mr. Martin: "I don't say it will be different. I have never said that if the bombing stops there will be preliminary discussions initiated by the north. But I believe that if the bombing does stop, there will be a new situation."

In other words, Mr. Martin, who has often described the Communists as the aggressor in Vietnam, is fully aware that the course he urges Washington to adopt entails the risk of giving the aggressor an incalculable military advantage, but says that the risk must be taken because there is "no other way." This stand would perhaps be understandable in the growing despair over the carnage if Mr. Martin had some secret intimation from the Communists that halting half the war would indeed open the door to meaningful negotiations. Considering that only a month ago North Vietnam Defence Minister Vo Nguyen Giap publicly reaffirmed that the Communist aim in Vietnam was unilateral on the battlefield, unilateral and unconditional suspension of half the war would certainly create a new situation: The aggressor would be free to conduct his part of the war unimpeded.

Behind the self delusions

That is what the pressure on Washington is all about, regardless of what self-delusions about "preliminary talks" Mr. Martin and the international peace-at-any-price brigade may indulge in. "That sort of approach," as Mr. Martin stated correctly in his U.N. speech, "is relevant only in circumstances of military victory and defeat."

publicity and the Nobel Peace Prize he covets, those who carry the burden of holding the line against Communist aggression in Vietnam cannot indulge in such irresponsible exercises. Would Mr. Martin talk the way he does if the risk he urges Washington to take on the battlefield entailed the risk of needless sacrifices of Canadian lives? I doubt it.

Micro-state members a U.N. problem

The United Nations cannot survive indefinitely unless there is greater justice in regard to its membership. The continued absence of Red China, the admission of tiny, basically unimportant states and fragmentation in existing countries are factors that could lead to the eventual doom of the world organization. The grave problem facing the United Nations is its decreasing effectiveness in handling global crises and one of the reasons for this is the arrival on the U.N. scene of what Secretary-General U Thant calls "micro-states." He pointed out that Pitcairn Island, a dot in the Pacific with a population of 88 persons, was progressing towards independence. The Maldivé Islands, for example, with a population of 90,000, is the smallest member of the United Nations, and has two delegates listed, but they are marked as being absent. Nobody can deny independence to peoples — no matter how few they are

— who have proved capable of governing themselves. But is it wise to offer all states, no matter how small, a vote in the U.N. General Assembly? The two break-away regions of Biafra and Benin, whose leaders are now fighting for independence, doubtless are aiming for separate U.N. seats. Already there are 122 member nations in the world body, the vast majority of which contribute only a tiny percentage toward its growing budget. Some of the smallest states take virtually no part in the real proceedings, and will often sell their votes to the highest bidder — in other words, to the nations willing to offer most aid. It would be wise for the United Nations to take a hard look at its membership and to worry more about the absence of such important states as China, the two Vietnams, the two Germanys and the two Koreas than about the annual increase in the number of countries listed as belonging to the organization.

Pity the poor outdoor-cooking fan. Now looms the season when he'll have no way to burn his dinner every night.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR:

Autumn is the season of fulfillment

Bonfires are blazing on the hills and the flames sweep across Valley woodlands. Bittersweet and poison ivy are draped on walls and fences, and in the swales the slender heads of cattails are accent points above frost-bleached grasses. Hard frosts have blackened the ferns on the banks of country roads; and in the gardens, squash, tomato and pepper plants have shrivelled to dark lines. Apples are red on the boughs and acorns are plump in filagreed saucers. Blue jays bugle as they flash above the sidehill orchard. In the darkness of an October evening, wild geese fly southward and their haunting voices float down to a man listening in the farmyard.

in our climate, does a growing season end? Why do some birds go to the southland and others remain to face ice and snow? Why does a man prepare his homestead in October for the time of cold? Fulfillment is the law of life but in its achievement there are countless paths that lead to the same end. Climate is the determining factor for us. Animal life and plant life have learned basic lessons over the centuries. The glory that feasts the eyes, the frosts that ordain an end to growth, the chill at frost-powdered dawn and the brilliant stars all tell the same story. Autumn means fulfillment. A season has ended for us. But we know that it takes a full cycle for fulfillment and that when a winter is passed, the miracle will occur again.

Other papers say:

Problems offered by child offender

More than a year and a half ago, the Government tabled in the House of Commons a report on juvenile delinquency, the result of four years' study by experts. Fortunately, the Canadian Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges has brought the report to life again with recommendations that correspond to its progressive letter and spirit. Generally the judges and the authors of the report agree on the importance of finding a line between severity of punishment and understanding a youngster's needs, relating the two aims to the larger community welfare. Almost all of the detailed suggestions make good sense. A national clearing house is needed to co-ordinate information and research as well as uniform treatment of young offenders across the nation.

The judges agreed that the term juvenile delinquent has outlived its usefulness and suggest the description, child offender, a justifiable change in the light of the fact that youngsters often wear the word delinquent as a boastful badge. There is also agreement on the advisability of compelling parents to attend hearings involving their children. Waywardness is generally the result of neglect, and parents require as much counselling as do their troubled offspring. Now that there is widespread emphasis on the need for national interest and for co-ordinating standards of treatment, research and methods of preventing child offenders, the time for study and contemplation is over, and the moment for implementation has arrived. We all agree: now let's act.

Brutality of DOSCO closing move

The Commons found it much easier to be shocked at the manner of Dosco's brutal announcement that it was closing its steel mill at Sydney, N.S., than to offer pat solutions to that agonizing problem. No one knows better what the steel plant means to the region's economy than Donald MacInnis, the Progressive Conservative from Cape Breton who initiated the special debate. Yet even he asked only that members "apoly their energies" to finding some answers. Dosco should not be forced to maintain indefinitely an uneconomic operation; industry is not welfare. At the same time, governments can't accept as a principle that they will take over any plant, no matter how large or important, which continues to lose money. But a company that had given Resources Minister Pevin and other MPs reason to believe as recently as this summer that prospects for the Sydney plant were improving, has shown little social conscience. Dosco officials came to Ottawa only last Thursday to inform the Government of the closing on April 30, 1968. MacInnis has warned that layoffs will start within weeks, perhaps days. Yet the company, according to Pevin, has refused to participate in a meeting being held today to examine the whole problem. Companies might have been able to get away with this

Adventures with God

The atmosphere of Eden comes only with the purity of life

Religious concepts, like fashions, and people, are subject to change. Concepts, trends and styles recur in cycles. Today's designers are featuring fashions which were worn by the first offenders in the Garden of Eden. Mini skirts made of fig leaves were both literally and figuratively Fall Fashions. But there is a difference in the attitudes and reactions of today's generation. Moderns lack the sensitive conscience of Adam and Eve. They are the bold, new clothes conscious generation but they are not sin conscious. Adam and Eve hid when they knew they were naked, and made a frantic last minute effort to cover themselves, when they heard God walking in the garden. Their fig leaf aprons did not please God and He made them "coats of skins." Thus began the history of fashions and the production of purple and fine linens and gold braids to cover the creatures who had rebelled against God.

"The foolishness of God is wiser than men and the weakness of God is stronger than men." Not until "the base things of the world are brought to nought" then and then only will man see himself and his world in true perspective. Then, like Isaiah he will fall at the feet of his creator and cry: "Woe is me for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips for mine eyes have seen the King the Lord of hosts." Isa. 6:5.

What a revelation that will be to big little men like Dr. Hugh J. Schonfield, author of a best seller entitled: Pass-over Plot? When God returns to judge this world as He foretold, there will be many offenders looking for a hiding place, and some of them will have titles before their names and degrees after their names. Degrees which will not be respected beyond their locale. Many of today's theologians and scholars are demanding a custom made Jesus who will fit into the preconceived patterns of a messiah who will be acceptable to the wandering Jew and the wandering Gentiles. Each with his own concept of an acceptable messiah. Because Jesus did not conform to preconceived patterns he was rejected by Israel as their promised Messiah and by others as the Saviour who would bring life and hope to the Gentiles, and castigated by men like Dr. Schonfield as a schemer who planned his crucifixion and fooled the simple people who believed in Him. Schonfield writes "A conspiracy had to be organized of which the victim himself was the principal instigator. It was a nightmarish conception and undertaking, the outcome of a sick mind or a genius. And it worked." In A.D. 70 theologians and scholars were making the same accusations. But they were too late. The works and words of Jesus had been, and were being, fulfilled. He had risen from the dead and was seen ascending into heaven. Jesus may have, as Schonfield suggests, capitalized on current events in the final days of His ministry, but He planned His death and resurrection back in the Garden of Eden, and predicted that "the seed of the sinful Eve would become the Saviour of the sinful race. He also planned to be born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the King. He chose His mother, His name, His lineage, and to die at the time of the passover. He did organize the closing events of His life, but who but God's chosen Son could foretell the other statistics centuries before He was born? He did master the master plan for this world's redemption.

Money as plentiful as snow

Ski boom prices going higher

NEW YORK (AP)—Businessmen who sell to the U.S. ski trade are talking these days about the increasingly higher prices that customers are willing to pay for everything from boots to building lots near ski slopes. Although spending per skier now is estimated to average a bit under $300 a year, more and more participants are paying $170 for their skis, $80 for boots, $40 for bindings, $30 for gloves and $35 for poles. A real estate development between two ski resorts in southern Vermont now is selling lots beginning at $2,700 to $4,900 that in pre-ski days would have brought a fraction of that price from farmers or campers. Money seems as plentiful as snow. Each year skiers demand more luxurious accommodations, thus helping to finance the transition of ski areas with bare necessities to year-round resorts with golf, swimming, dining and dancing. The spending spree, says Ski Business, a trade publication, is developing at the very time the increase in ski population, now totalling somewhere from 2,

250,000 up, shows signs of decelerating. A large percentage of those on the slopes this season will be novices, but their brand-new participation in the sport may be nearly offset by the number retiring. More are quitting than ever before. Not all of those who retire, however, discontinue their snow-time spending. Many snow romances that lead to marriage leads also to retirement, but couples later return for swimming, sunbathing, dancing, skating. Transportation for this hyperactive, spending crowd is improving. Wide highways and excursion buses have more than offset the discontinuance of ski trams. Each weekend hundreds of buses leave large eastern cities for the mountains. In Seattle, where snow sports exist at several resorts 1 1/2 hours away, an estimated 150 buses leave each Saturday and Sunday in season. Some airlines also report charter business from the eastern population centres to the western ski areas has increased in the last couple of years. And southerners, too, can travel in a few hours to slopes in Tennessee and North Carolina. The big money spent on skiing and winter vacations is based in the trend for more Americans to make bigger wages for working fewer hours. Leisure time and incomes seem to be moving upward as inevitably as a ski tow. HAVE HIGH INCOMES Some evidence of this new way of life, and its effects also, come from a study by Ski Business. It found, among other things, that the medium income of its ski subscribers was $13,572, far above the national average. More than 13 per cent of those surveyed owned swimming pools, 17 per cent had vacation homes and 48 per cent had travelled outside the country in the last year, perhaps to the Laurentian ski resorts of Canada. Because such money and time abundantly, operators of ski resorts have greatly reduced their risks. Rooms once vacant in midweek now are filled by skiers with more flexible schedules.

Nova Scotia hopes Dosco will stay

TORONTO (CP)—The Nova Scotia government is hoping to persuade Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. and its parent, Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. to keep their steel mill at Sydney, N.S. operating on a reduced basis for at least "a year or so."

Labor minister T. J. McKeough made the statement in an interview following a day-long meeting with T. J. Emmert, president of Hawker Siddeley Canada, and other company officials Friday.

Most of the province's 208 radiologists resigned from their hospital jobs in July and early August to back up demands that hospital insurance coverage be extended to cover work done by them in private clinics.

Mr. Johnson said Friday the radiologists withdrew their original demand. Only well-ill cases will be covered by the government at private clinics under Quebec's Medical Assistance Act.

Wilson needs support from Kiesinger

Britain is to keep its distance. Indeed, relations between London and Paris appear to be getting a bit nasty. Rumors in Britain that de Gaulle is seriously ill have been quickly squelched in Paris with the acid remark of Premier Pompidou that Britain undoubtedly will be glad to hear the good news that the president is in good health.

He is more apt to play along with de Gaulle and counsel patience to Wilson. After all, de Gaulle is 77. There may be other reasons why Kiesinger appears cool to British entry. There are Bonn reports that the chancellor privately agrees with the Common Market commission's questioning of the real strength of sterling and expressed doubts about the basic strength of the British economy.

HIGH TIMES From Page 3 is holding a Halloween dance, Oct. 27 in the school gym. A hand will be engaged. A HALLOWEEN DANCE will be held next Friday at Marymount School for students of St. Patrick High featuring the rock and roll combo of The Electras from Magog.

POCKETS EMPTY In hard political terms Wilson will meet Kiesinger with his pockets virtually empty. He might privately express willingness to support West German foreign policy, especially in relation to German reunification and other sensitive issues, but Kiesinger has already publicly shown a softening line towards East Germany, East Europe and the Soviet Union.

ST. ONGE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Leo Stanley St. Onge, who passed away October 22, 1966. The stars tonight are shining, Upon a lonely grave, Beneath it lies the one we love, The one we could not save. We mourn for him in silence, No eyes can see his weep, But many a silent tear is shed, While others are asleep. No length of time will ever dim, The treasured memories we have of him. Sadly missed by, MAVIS (wife), RHODA (daughter).

Cloistered nun returns by jet to visit Canada

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — Yvonne Begin left Canada 45 years ago for France and entered the cloistered world of a convent in a Paris suburb.

Just recently Yvonne Begin, now Sister Marie of the Immaculate Heart, stepped from a jet in Montreal into the arms of relatives she scarcely expected to see again.

She was overwhelmed when her Mother Superior, acting on relaxed regulations of the Vatican, arranged for her trip to Canada. She was the first nun in the cloister to benefit from the new freedom.

Sister Marie, now 68, is petite, vivacious and highly intelligent. For 45 years she has devoted her life at the Good Shepherd Convent, at Chevillie Larue near Paris, to delinquent girls.

Adding to her work was the decision of the French government, after the Second World War, to entrust to the convent the detention of delinquent girls from 13 to 20 instead of turning them over to crowded prisons.

Sister Marie says that under a minimum of rules and regulations all are returned to society without having been subjected to long association with hardened criminals and incorrigibles.

Following her arrival in Canada for a three-week visit, Sister Marie visited relatives in Lewis, Sept-Isles and Chicoutimi. In Sept-Isles she visited a niece, Mrs. Joseph Gagnon, and family and other more distant relatives.

Shirley Temple Black running for congress opposes how Vietnam war is conducted WOODSIDE, Calif. (AP)—Shirley Temple Black is running for Congress on a platform that's against crime in the streets, the way President Johnson conducts the Vietnam war, and for racial harmony and moral regeneration.

If the onetime movie moppet can arouse enough voter support for these views, she will be the next member of the U.S. House of Representatives from San Mateo County, California.

Mrs. Black, a Republican, is running against 12 other candidates, six Democrats and six Republicans. Her chances of victory in the special election Nov. 14 are regarded as excellent.

What the United States needs above all else is a moral renaissance, says Mrs. Black, now 39, a bit plump, wife of wealthy businessman Charles A. Black, and mother of three.

"I think it's never been worse—the personal hypocrisy, the lack of integrity, the apathy," she told an interviewer. "My personal opinion is that we haven't any inspirational leadership at the top."

As for the war in Vietnam, Mrs. Black said: "President Johnson would rely more on the advice of the joint chiefs of staff than on the advice of Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara."

"Obviously, civilians make the policy. But after the policy is made, that's the time you bring in the key military leaders, in order to form the strategy and tactics of how to achieve your goals."

Alligning herself with the hawks in the debate over what to do in Vietnam, Mrs. Black said she thought U.S. forces should mine the approaches to Haiphong, the principal port, to cut off military supplies from China and the Soviet Union.

This may sound surprisingly hard-nosed to folks who remember Mrs. Black as the curly-tressed little darling who made a million dollars in the movies before she was 12.

Mrs. Black commented that she wasn't running as "little Shirley Temple."

CHANGES REGISTRATION
Nevertheless, soon after she decided to file for Congress she had her name on the voting register changed from "Shirley J. for Jane Black" to "Shirley Temple Black."

California law requires that a candidate's name on the ballot and the voting register be identical.

"I'm very proud of my past," said Shirley. "At least people know what I was doing as a child. I wasn't stealing hubcaps."

Mrs. Black is by no means brand-new to politics. She has campaigned for Republicans in local and state elections for years, and helped carry San Mateo County for Ronald Reagan, another actor-turned-politician, when he was elected governor last year.

The congressional election is to fill a vacancy caused by the death last June of Representative J. Arthur Younger, a Republican.

SHERBROOKE HOSPITAL NURSES ALUMNAE

The October meeting of the Sherbrooke Hospital Nurses Alumnae Association was held in the Norton Residence, on the 17th, at 8:15 p.m., with the president, Miss Frances Whittle, in the chair.

Miss Nancy Allen, a new member, has been enrolled. Members learned with regret of the death of Mrs. Arlene Lennon, class of 1947, which occurred on Oct. 16, and observed one minute of silence in her memory.

Miss Thelma Gratham, card convener, reported several occasional cards sent during the past month.

Miss Gertrude Callin, instructor, 1948-1952, and now resident in Saskatchewan, Sask., was a welcome guest. Many of her former pupils and friends enjoyed a social hour following the meeting.

Of special interest to members and guests present was a Centennial Display Table, covered by a beautiful tablecloth of 150 years ago and a very fine collection of antiques, courtesy of Mrs. Muriel Watson. In keeping with the theme, small centennial flags adorned the room and Mrs. Hazel Morrison read an article on One Hundred Years of Medicine in Canada.

Winner of a bean guessing contest, held as a special feature, was Miss A. Litovski.

Mrs. Dorothy Taylor read a paragraph from the constitution on the Perpetual Endowment Fund, stating what this may be used for.

Reporting on progress made on compiling the History of the Alumnae was Mrs. Audrey Frost. An album for historical pictures will be purchased.

Some discussion took place regarding a project for this year. Miss Beverly Harrison and Mrs. Ruth Lavalie will report on this next month.

The November meeting will be on the 21st. At this time a party will be held featuring a fortune teller, games with prizes and an audio visual calendar.

Following the business meeting the president introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Donald Fish, executive director of the Sherbrooke Hospital, who gave an informative talk on Hospital Organization. He was thanked by Miss Beverly Harrison.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. A. Webster, Mrs. V. Mandigo and Mrs. A. Frost.

BAPTIST LA

The First Baptist Church Ladies' Auxiliary met on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 18, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Wheeler, Elgin Avenue, with the president, Mrs. C. Wright in the chair. Mrs. Grace Sweeney led the devotional period.

Following the conveners statements, 23 sick visits were reported.

Plans were made for a Fellowship Supper to take place on Thursday evening, Nov. 2, to be followed by the Induction Service for Rev. A. G. J. Steeves, pastor of the church.

The meeting closed and tea was served by the hostess, Mrs. A. G. J. Steeves poured tea and Mrs. Henry Leech, Jr. assisted with serving.

Next meeting will be held on Nov. 1, at the home of Mrs. Maiste Hopcraft, Queen Blvd. North.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By ELISABETH GUSTAFSON

STRAVINSKY CONDUCTS BALLET MUSIC: Bluebird — Pas de deux (The Columbia Symphony Orchestra); Jeu de Cartes (The Cleveland Orchestra); Scenes de Ballet (The CBC Symphony Orchestra). Columbia Stereo MS-6649; Mono ML-6049 — Here is a record of great delight, especially for the balletomane, and one of definite authority for the music of Stravinsky is here conducted by Stravinsky himself. It does not always follow that a composer is his own best interpreter, mastery of the notes does not necessarily mean mastery of the baton. In the present instance, one acknowledges the double authority. Ballet, of course, is visual drama; but in this area, one willingly submits again — deprived of the stage, the score still holds its own.

A card game is a delicious idea on which to build a libretto for a ballet. Stravinsky had the idea long before he began to compose the music. As he himself tells us: "More than a decade prior to the composition of Jeu de Cartes, I had had an idea for a ballet in which dancers dressed like playing cards would perform against a gamable backdrop of green baize . . . I have been a card player most of my life; Jeu de Cartes was composed at a time when poker was one of my favorite recreations."

And in the music, this composition in "three deals" is delicious with play and counterplay; variations in royal suits, solo displays, and interruptions by the Joker — all the drama expressed in fascinating rhythms — in the last deal, the Joker being beaten by three flushes. You will thoroughly enjoy this Side One of the record.

Side two contains an arrangement by Stravinsky for small orchestra of an excerpt from Tchaikovsky's "Sleeping Beauty" — the Bluebird pas de deux — one of the most loved moments in ballet. Following this, is "Scenes de Ballet", a score commissioned in 1944 by Billy Rose, the American impresario, for his show called "The Seven Lively Arts."

Of this, Stravinsky himself says that it is "a period piece of Broadway in the last years of the war. It is featherweight and sugared." The piece is no less delightful for that — and movingly historical too, for the ending was composed on the day of the liberation of Paris; a resolution of the score that is gradual with elation and glorious in climax.

STRAVINSKY CONDUCTS PERSEPHONE: with Vera Zorina as Persephone, Michelle Molese, tenor; the Columbia Symphony Orchestra, Ithaca College Concert Choir, Texas Boys Choir, Gregg Smith Singers. Columbia Stereo MS-6919; Mono ML-6319 — This is an opera-ballet written in 1934. The form of this composition is unusual though there is a considerable tradition behind it. As Mozart described it, the form is a "recitative with instruments, but the actor speaks instead of singing." It has no symphonic development; rather it uses transformations of musical content — in operatic fashion.

The story is the classical one of Persephone carried away to the Underworld, which is thus brought both pity and love. The score is based on a text by Andre Gide (folder in the record gives the English translation). The Choruses carry most of the score and are beautifully sung on this record — the treble chorus of the Texas Boys Choir of Fort Worth being particularly winning — a choir which Stravinsky himself calls "the best in the world." Vera Zorina recites her part with warmth and understanding; and Michele Molese, the tenor, brings to his role a fine feeling.

The Dominion of Canada's first five dollar note was issued May 1, 1912 to commemorate the release of Canada's first $5 and $10 gold coins. It also served to recall the four dollar notes which were dated 1882, 1900 and 1902.

On this $5 note is a large center panel with a finely engraved passenger train running along a grade next to the Wentworth Valley of Nova Scotia. The note is popular with collectors and when available is priced from $20 up to $150 depending on condition and variety.

May 26, 1924 to honour the late Queen Mary on her birthday. It features a center cameo with portrait of Queen Mary in official court dress of coronet, gown and necklace. This note was issued in very limited quantity and is now rare and valuable. In the recent Canadian Numismatic Association Convention Auction Sale one in practically uncirculated condition sold for $390.

In a recent column I mentioned that a 25 percent premium could be obtained for United States silver certificates instead of the usual seven percent premium paid for US paper money. Although many Canadians and Americans are cashing in on this bonanza, it appears that many are apparently missing or ignoring a chance to make a profit on old dollar bills.

According to US Treasury officials, almost $8 million worth of silver certificates have been retired since July 1 but only $4.7 million were redeemed for silver which can be sold on the open market for a higher price. The balance of $3.3 million were retired without a premium being paid. On August 29 there was an estimated total of $389.7 million worth of silver certificates in circulation.

Jottings

By
GLADYS
TAYLOR

A few months ago I devoted two columns to the opinions of an American editor, Richard Kluger, on the subject of book reviewing. The next three columns I would like to devote to the opinions of a Canadian writer on this same subject. What makes this a little unusual is that while the Canadian opinions were expressed in 1929, they are surprisingly in tune with Mr. Kluger's opinions of 1967.

Major Christie of New Brunswick (Sirhind) — pseudonyms were popular in 1929 — was the author of the following three-part series, which he called "REVIEWERS AND THEIR GHASTLY TRADE".

PART I

"The reviewer in his present guise is a product of modernity. In this essay it is intended to peep hurriedly at the reviewer of today and at his loathly labors.

"The critic is the tyrant of the Arts. He may be likened to an autocratic, dashing and debonair surgeon in a military hospital. He probes without restraint, slashes away the unhealthy tissues and exposes the sound remainder, to heal it if he may by dressings that oft times smart horribly. He is no good critic unless he is constructive.

"But the reviewer is like a mild consulting physician who accidentally has strayed into a surgical ward filled with patients whose rich relatives refuse to countenance an operation.

"The reviewer is in many cases, a person whose intelligence almost reaches the level of an author's. He is deserving of the utmost sympathy. He must daily wade through oceans of bilge to reach an occasional sip of sparkling water. His metier is to interest a public not for its lack of taste and aversion to thought, and to inform it as to what new publications it may read with pleasure and profit. He is not required to criticize beyond a few vague and casual observations, framed to afford him a loophole in the event of someone who has heeded his recommendations becoming violent in disagreement.

He is constantly tempted to degenerate into a mere ad-writer, and that comparatively few reviewers succumb to this temptation may in some measure account for the low estimate placed by authors on the mentality of reviewers.

"It is a striking testimony to the granite qualities of the generation that while literary criticisms are, with the exception of those who survive as publishers' readers, becoming rare, there appear recruits aplenty to fill the ranks of the reviewers.

"The judgments of modern readers is emotional rather than reasoned. Many relaxations contend with reading for leisure hours. Readers demand guidance. Hence the reviewer. He is then the guide, philosopher and friend of the book reader. He is the servant of his newspaper or magazine. He should be looked upon as the authors' pilot and as one of the book publisher's most valued assistants.

"The reviewer is born, not made. No uneducated person has written a worthwhile review. His education need not necessarily be that of which universities give warning by their academic labels. It must confer on him:

- "Knowledge and love of his mother tongue and acquaintance with several others;
- "More than superficial familiarity with the technique of writing in all its forms;
- "Liberal outlook on life and a catholic grasp of its problems and the trend of modern thought;
- "Sympathetic appreciation of the taste and lack of taste of the reading public;
- "Well developed analytical and critical faculties, even though he may have to deny expression to the latter;
- "A smattering of typography and the art of book binding;

History of the Hutterites is a cry to western mankind

THE HUTTERITE WAY by Paul S. Gross; Freeman Publishing Company, Saskatoon, Sask.; 219 pp.

THE HUTTERITE WAY is not only a history of the Hutterites and an exposition of their present way of life, it is in its essence a kind of cry to western mankind to return to the simple, evangelical, communal life and to the Gospel of Christ in Hutterite terminology.

Though the book is necessarily rather repetitious as the author describes various activities as they affect diverse parts of Hutterite communal living, it is both interesting and informative.

Certainly, as the author states, most people have an inaccurate conception of what comprises a Hutterite community and its ideology; he sets out to correct what might be called the Gentile's unenlightenment and does so.

The many photographs, 104 of them, taken by Lorena Bach, of Hutterite people and places in Europe, Canada and the United States, add a placid but living touch. Hutterites have always been loath to have their photographs taken and these are in the nature of an innovation.

In spite of the fact that Mr. Gross does not seem to be endowed with a very great sense of humor, and both his effort and topic are serious, he does attempt a humorous note here and there; frankish tricks of school boys, for example, and the ways in which young ladies try to circumvent the lack of variety in the color of their costumes.

These lighter touches do bring the Hutterites at least a little into the outside community.

The reader will have to acquire the dedication, energy, thrift and progressiveness of the Hutterites, as Mr. Gross describes them, as well as their respect for the laws of the country in which they live — there is no criminal incidence in any community.

THE HUTTERITE WAY will prove a valuable addition to the library of the student who wants to know man in his different environments.

Simple kindly poetry without bitterness

VERSES BY NATTRASS by Ernest Natrass; Honey Printing Service; 57 pp; $3.75.

"Good things come to him who waits" is an old adage that many of us have cause to doubt; not so, Ernest Natrass, the North of England poet who, at 73, is seeing a first volume of his poems published.

Oddly enough, they are published in Canada and therein is a story. A relative of Mr. Natrass married a Canadian doctor and on a fairly recent visit to the retired colliery official and poet, the doctor became so intrigued with his relative's work that he asked permission to take the manuscript back to Canada with him; the result, VERSES BY NATRASS.

Mr. Natrass has been writing poetry since he was about nine years old; as a youngster he won book prizes for his poems and later verses on coal-mining brought praise from the Wilsons of Downing Street and he received recognition from Sir Winston Churchill for his poem "The Contemplatives".

Friends and neighbours, and local newspapers appreciated his work; one Northern newspaper editor to whom he sent a batch of poems in 1964 wrote back saying he could see "a brilliant future" for the poet. Mr. Natrass wrote back to say he was 70! Unlike most poets, he actually was too modest to think people would want a "collected works".

The author writes simple, kindly poetry tinged with rather old-fashioned phraseology which suits his ideology and will suit the taste of those who delight in the gentler poetry of an earlier generation.

There is no anger, no bitterness in what he writes; he is neither an angry old man nor a stick-out-his-tongue small boy.

His poetry will most certainly not suit those who think that virility in poetry lies in obscenity, nor will it please those who look for forceful — forceful in its real sense — language or the relation of feeling to the physical structure of the poem.

Perhaps the first and last verses — never really fair to an author — of "The Contemplatives" will give the reader of this review an indication of the kind of poetry Mr. Natrass writes: "Fifty years on, they march again Though now but in single file; On crutch, in chair, chin up, head high, Last lap of God's 'measured mile'."

For those who now in freedom live — There died a million brave, Yet they shall live! for aye enshrined In our hearts — and not their grave.

to make the history of the territory complete.

The tract of woodland covered extends from the St. Lawrence River on the south to the Rideau River and Lakes on the north and the story shows how the pioneer hewed for himself a home out of the wilderness; how the people then expanded their services and built roads and bridges, churches, schools and post-offices, stage routes, and finally railways and modern highways.

Necessarily, the men responsible for some of these main works must be mentioned but she touches on them delicately and wisely, outlining only their contribution, and not extolling them over the heads of other citizens

She has said little about the larger centers of Gananoque, Prescott and Brockville as, in her opinion each merits a book in its own right. We hope these may soon be done who, in their own way, contributed. We think that is the main skill exhibited by Miss McKenzie, that she did this so brilliantly and expertly.

Many, indeed most, of the settlers were Loyalists, for although the Indians and French travelled the rivers streams they did not establish any permanent settlements.

The St. Lawrence Valley were Iroquois territory, but at the time of settlement, the Iroquois were living south of the River.

If you do not know already why Brockville was once called "Smuggling Highway" you will find the reason here. Did you know there was a well-known road called "Smuggler's Highway"?

Of course such personalities as the founder of Gananoque, Joel Stone, comes into the story, as well as Sir William Buell Richards, attorney-general for Canada West, 1851-53 and the country's first Chief Justice in 1875.

Then there was William Benson who established the first starch factory and other men too prominent to be separated from such a history, but their lives weave through the account with ease and facility.

All in all, the author has done an excellent work and has made a notable and important contribution to the literature of our Centennial Year.

Collecting

in the Townships

CUBA ISSUED A SET of 25 different stamps recently which feature a collection of modern paintings. The set marks the presentation in Havana of the traditional exhibition of paintings which is held annually in Paris, France, under the name of "Salon de May". The stamps are produced in many colors by the offset-chroma process. Many of the better known modern painters are represented, including Picasso, Pignon and Arp. While many collectors will probably be confused by the paintings they will have to admit that the stamps are colorful and attractive.

THE PHILATELIC TRADERS' Society, an association of professional stamp dealers, sponsors the annual STAMPEX show in London each year, and a souvenir sheet is also issued to help defray the expenses. There have been some well designed and beautiful sheets issued during the past few years, but the one for the show this year is indeed a lovely presentation.

The sheet shows three paintings by Constable, Salisbury Cathedral, The Cenotaph and The Hay Wain. The paintings were suggested as subjects for the series of art stamps from Great Britain. These sheets have no postal validity and are not official in any sense of the word, but they do comprise a group of small sheets that can be added to your collection as they all deal with philatelic subjects.

The cost of these sheets at time of issue is about 50 cents each, although 35 cents is usually charged at time of issue; one or two of them are a bit more expensive.

The latest book of Canada's world-renowned expert on the technological revolution of the 60's, University of Toronto professor Marshall McLuhan is now available in paperback. Entitled THE MEDIUM IS THE MESSAGE (Bantam), and co-authored by Quentin Fiore, the book discusses how electronic technology is reshaping and restructuring patterns of social interdependence as well as every aspect of our personal lives. McLuhan, described as one of the major intellectual influences of our time, has also written UNDERSTANDING MEDIA.

NORAD defence, interesting but very technical

NORAD by Marian Talmadge and Iris Gilmore; Dodd, Mead; $4.25; 80 pp.

The North American Air Defence Command (Norad) is a joint effort of Canada and the United States. Norad Headquarters is a small community which has been hollowed out of the one hundred million year old Cheyenne mountain near Colorado Springs, Colorado.

The authors live in nearby Denver which accounts in part no doubt for their interest in the subject. In order to obtain material for their book, they received special permission to visit sections of Norad Headquarters rarely seen by civilians.

Dozens of photographs illustrate the text. The technicalities of such a project are over my head; still it is interesting to read how nine hundred people could be housed in this underground city for a month; how the problems of fresh air and water supply were solved and how the city itself, claimed to be impervious to nuclear attack, is built on more than a thousand over-size springs weighing a ton each.

These springs would absorb the impact of shock waves caused by such a blast. The authors say that today thanks to Norad with the world's most extensive defense network, there will not be another Pearl Harbour.

Students begin exerting leverage

The year's first meeting of the Bishop's University Students Association proved, if anything, that the students are determined to begin using a little leverage to wrangle concessions from the administration. On the other hand, the administration continues to maintain that it will resist any student efforts to nudge it out of the drivers seat.

The issue which was on the floor at this week's meeting, namely that of granting more the privilege of visiting rooms in men's residences, is nothing new. It has been a cause celebre with students since universities began. With the growing liberalization of attitudes in recent years, a number of Canadian Universities have granted this privilege.

Bishop's has not done so and the students are determined to have their way and have the women-in-residence rule as it exists, struck from the books.

The problem is, during the association meeting where the issue was debated, a lot of people minded a lot of words and the general pussyfooting which was done around the issue failed in bringing to light certain basic aspects of the demand.

In the carefully-worded memorandum which it presented to the Students Association, the S.E.C. managed beautifully to delude themselves into believing that, if the women in residence rule were removed, there would be no resultant stimulation of sexual activity. It was maintained that the students were mature enough to treat the privilege in an adult manner.

The association then proceeded to prove that it was hardly mature by behaving in a manner which few would consider as being adult.

S.E.C. Chairman Andy Sane-ton chaired the meeting and made an attempt to run it at a serious level. After ten minutes, however, he was interrupted by a noisy group of about a dozen football players who clomped into the auditorium and seated themselves en bloc before everyone.

These fossil-brained pachyderms then proceeded to treat the meeting as a huge laugh as they hurled crude remarks at the speakers and made a splendid spectacle of themselves with their unfunny jokes and raucous peals of laughter.

The chair, surprisingly enough, made no move to curb the activities of these self-appointed court jesters and the rest of the assembly lapped it up and asked for more. If such a group, whose should be a total absence of discipline in residences if the administration did not meet its demands by a specified date.

Even with the preventive measures which exist at the moment, discipline is still a major problem at the university. If these were removed, the reaction would be anything but mature and adult. Also a threat of chaos to blackmail the administration into catering to student fancies is hardly in line with the S.E.C.'s utopian idea of student mentality.

A light was lit in the wilderness when the association agreed to a mild form of coercion by voting to drop only disciplinary action in relation to the women in residence regulation if the administration had not agreed to the proposal within a month. Such is necessary since the administration itself is not usually overenthusiastic about making such changes and procrastination becomes the order of the day in most cases.

The sorest point, however, is that the largest percentage of those present and those whom any change in regulations would affect for the longest period of time were denied the chance to vote on the issue. These are the freshmen who, in the eyes of the constitution, are not familiar enough with the university to vote on issues before the Students Association.

Not only were the freshmen denied the vote, but they were required to attend the meeting and be a captive audience for the pretentious show put on by the supposedly omniscient upperclassmen.

The freshman contention, and a valid one it is at that, is that they had been subjected to a month of intense indoctrination to university life, and if they were still too ignorant to understand what was going on, the introduction committee had been wasting their time.

Also if anyone who is supposedly mature enough to benefit from an adult privilege such as being discussed and if a person could not understand the context of the deliberations in the manner in which they were being presented, then that person does not deserve to be in the university in the first place.

Hunting and fishing

By NORM NICHOLL

TODAY THE BALANCE of the deer hunting opens with zones A-1, A-2 and A-3. While some have tried to make me believe that in last week's column I erred in stating in zone A-3 that only the male can be taken, I beg to differ. Take another look at the hunting summary. A-3 is classified in a separate section. In fact it's the third item in the deer section. The map that accompanies the hunting summary is ambiguous and the summary doesn't explain what boundaries are used to determine the areas of A-1, A-2 and A-3. I went back to 1966 when these zones were first defined and to refresh your memories here they are again. From the column of April 23/66: Zone "A-1" is bounded on the east by highway 52 from the U.S.-Canadian border to Granby, by highway 13 from Granby to Drummondville and highway 9 from Drummondville to Quebec bridge. Zone "A-2" is bounded on the west by highway 13 from Granby to Drummondville and by highway 9 from Drummondville to the Quebec Bridge; and on the east by highway 1 from Magog to the Quebec Bridge, and on the south by Magog-Granby road. Zone "A-3" is bounded on the west by highway 52, on the North by the Granby-Magog road and on the east by Lake Memphremagog (Only the male may be taken). So fellows take heed. Keep up to date . . .

THE REPORTS on the general moose hunting season in the province are running some 400 hundred below that of last year with figures released a year ago. The report dated October 10th as compared with that of last year (66) dated October 11: The figures for this year show the districts as follows: Abitibi: 368 (male), 199 (cows), 9 (calves)-627; Chicoutimi: 177 (male), 73 (cows), 9 (calves)-259; Gaspé: 221 (males), 106 (cows), 22 (calves)-349; Hull: 260 (males), 138 (cows), 29 (calves)-427; Montreal: 534 (males), 194 (cows), 52 (calves)-780; Quebec: 124 (males), 91 (cows), 25 (calves)-240; Rimouski: 114 (males), 80 (cows), 21 (calves)-215; Sept-Îles: 87 (males), 24 (cows), 9 (calves)-120; Sherbrooke: 18 (males), 11 (cows), 4 (calves)-33; Temiscamingue: 535 (males), 247 (cows), 49 (calves)-831; Trois-Rivières: 275 (males), 133 (cows), 24 (calves)-432 making a total of 4,313 as compared with 4,726 in '66. In the controlled moose hunts at La Verendrye Park, Laurentide Park, Matane Reserve and the Saint-Maurice Reserve (which wasn't included in last year's figures the kill compared to the same approximate dates of last year show that the kill is down some 121 moose. If we exclude the St. Maurice Reserve the kill would be down another 12 moose. The kill up October 10th show the kill for each section as follows: La Verendrye: 72 males, 43 cows, 9 calves for 128. Laurentide Park: 38 males, 23 cows, 7 calves, for 68. Matane Reserve: 28 males, 16 females, 2 calves for 46. St. Maurice Reserve: 5 males, 7 females for 12 moose. The largest rack being reported from these hunts is from the Laurentide Park which measured 58".

DUCK AND GESE hunters of the area have had their spirits dampened so far this year. A couple of weeks ago the first sightings of geese were met with high spirits and anticipation that there might be the chance of downing one of these fine birds but they seemed to have passed us by. Since then there have been no flocks passing and spirits faded. Duck hunters have faced the same fate in that most of the ducks being taken are locals. This week, however, those returning from hunting at Lake St. Peter have noted that the ducks are starting to arrive there, so, with a little help from the weatherman we still will get some shooting in.

THIS WEEK I had the privilege of talking with Ben Day, Jr., biologist in charge of big game for the Vermont Wildlife Service. During the coming weeks I will comment on some of the items that we talked over regarding deer habits and the situation of the deer herds in Vermont. Many thanks to John and Ken of the Yamaska Conservation Assoc., for your invitation.

THE FIRST REPORTS on the deer hunting in the area show that some 99 deer have been registered during the first week of the hunting season. 30 males, 33 females and 36 fawns have been registered by the District Office.

Stamps' passing attack best in Canada, says Coach Keys and will be tough to stop, tied for top

Head coach Eagle Keys of Saskatchewan Roughriders may be trying to insure against over-confidence in the ranks.

Looking to Sunday's crucial Western Football Conference game in Regina against Calgary Stampeders, Keys Thursday delivered a glowing assessment of the opposition.

"Calgary's passing attack," he said, "is the greatest I've seen in Canada, and I've been here 19 years.

"You don't stop it, you just hope you can contain it and maintain it possibly long enough yourself to score points."

Keys said Calgary quarterback Peter Liske "has had a remarkable season, considering this is the first time he has actually started at quarterback."

Liske has been passing so well this year that he is within striking distance of three CFL season records—for touchdown passes, pass attempts and pass completions—and has a shot at Sam Etcheverry's CFL record for yards gained passing in a season.

155 horses entered on weekend card at Sherbrooke Race Track

A field of 155 horses will compete on the weekend card at the Sherbrooke Race Track for a total of $3,925 in purses. This evening 78 are slated to go to the gate while Sunday afternoon a field of 77 will answer Starter Alexis Loranger's call.

The purses have been dropped but this was brought about by the drop in the betting recently. The club executive was obliged to do so under the circumstances but it is hoped that they can be raised back to the previous amounts within a short time. The main event this evening is the ninth when a field of eight, winner of $500 or more in 1967, will clash. Clever Adios has been assigned the pole with Sketch second, Gay Meadows third, Happy Gal fourth and Charlie Connors' Justa Pickup in the fifth spot. Senator Spencer with Top Diamond complete the front row. Claude Grenier with Eddie's Mike has the trailer spot.

Aug Poulin's Top Diamond is one of the favorites but tough competition can be expected from Connors' Justa Pickup as well as Belhumeur's Happy Gal. This could be a battle before the winner crosses the line.

This evening two trots are on the card, one in the fifth and the other in the eighth. In the first six stoppers are entered while in the other eight are on the list.

Tomorrow afternoon two trots and seven pacing events are on the card with the main one in the ninth for winners of $500 and more. Preferred excluded. Seven will go in this dash with Diana's Gem and Rilla's Song the two favorites but C.M.W.C. Hal Regent, Laura Cax and Sep Will could provide plenty of opposition.

The rest of the dashes should provide some good racing as Paul Brunelle, racing secretary.

Americans off to lead in Ryder Cup

HOUSTON (AP)—An unbelievable shot out of the woods by Arnold Palmer, a woman spectator who didn't duck and booming drives by Bobby Nichols and Johnny Pott got the United States off to a 2½-to-1½ lead over Britain's top golf professionals Friday in the 17th biennial Ryder Cup match.

The favored Americans who have lost only three times in 40 years, won two of the opening scotch foursome matches, drew another and lost a fourth. Each victory counts one point and each half is split.

Palmer teamed with Gardner Dickinson for a 2 and 1 triumph over Christy O'Connor of Ireland and Peter Alliss of England.

The other American point was scored by Nichols and Pott, who crushed Bernard Hunt and Neil Coles 6 and 5.

In other matches, in which two man teams play one ball and hit it alternately, Scotsman George Will and Welshman Brian Huggett battled Julius Boros and Bill Casper to a draw while Britain's only full point came on a 4 and 3 victory by Tony Jacklin and Dave Thomas over Doug Sanders and U.S. Masters champion Gay Brewer.

Palmer's shot on the 428-yard 15th proved to be the decisive blow for the Americans. Dickinson drove the ball into a thicket of trees and the ball was in a mess of hay. A pine tree obstructed the flight to the green.

Palmer hooked around the trunk of a tree to the green, seven feet from the cup. Dickinson sank the putt for a birdie three and the Americans forged into a two-hole lead, which they kept.

British captain Dais Rees thought another shot turned the day's fortunes in the direction of the Americans. He said that Boros over-clubbed his ball on the par-three 16th and it was sailing over the green.

"Spectators scurried out of the way except one woman, who just stood there and let the ball bounce off her stomach onto the green."

Flyers by Larry Zeidel from Barons
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League bought defenseman Larry Zeidel Friday from Cleveland Barons of the American League.

Zeidel, who led the AHL in penalties for three seasons, will play in Sunday's game here against California Seals. He played previously with Detroit and Chicago in the NHL.

Sherbrooke Beavers will arrive in time for the workout Thursday they came out on the host the Gauls of St. Hyacinthe tomorrow evening at the Sports Palace in a regular fixture of the Quebec Provincial Senior Hockey League. Game time 7:30 p.m.

Coach Roy stated he will be going with the same lineup that dropped a 5-3 overtime decision to Drummondville Thursday evening. There will be a good, fast skating club. The Gauls got off to a good start and chalked up three wins. One was given them when Granby played uneligible players. The game was awarded by Henry Crochetiere, president of the QAHA, to the Gauls.

Coach Oscar Aubuchon assembled a new bunch of players mingled with some of the veterans from last year to form a good, fast skating club. The Beavers will be seeking their second win of the season. They downed the Vics of Granby but since then have failed to hit the right side of the ledger. They suffered a 4-2 setback by Victoriaville with 3-2 and 8-3 losses to the Nationals while the team will hold a workout this afternoon and Robidas, who was sidelined with a fractured jaw last Sunday, may try a special face mask and if it works out he will dress for the game. A protector has been ordered from Y. Belanger at Victoriaville with 3-2 and 8-3 losses to the Nationals while injuries have plagued the Beavers since the beginning of the season with Bill Dupre, their star centre man, out as well as several others. Thursday the only one missing was Lionel Robidas but Coach Roy is hoping he will be ready for action tomorrow evening.

Coach Roy stated they are looking for reinforcements and may land a few players shortly. The return of Robidas will be a big help as the Beavers were forced to go with only three defencemen against the Eagles Thursday.

Jean Levesque is still under suspension and when he returns is questionable. The case has yet to be studied by the QAHA and then his sentence will be handed down. It is the same with Gilles Papineau of Granby who was tagged last Tuesday for shoving a linesman in St. Hyacinthe.

The Tigers of Victoriaville travel to Hull today for an afternoon encounter with the Nationals while tomorrow they will meet back in Victoriaville to complete their weekend fixture. In the other game tomorrow Granby Vics move over to Drummondville to take on the Eagles.
