Expo dollars hit the streets

By Eleanor Brown

SHERBROOKE — Robert Dandurand has just spent $100,000 minting trade dollars for the Sherbrooke Fair's centenary, and he doesn't want to see any of them returned.

"I hope they don't come back," Dandurand says. Available in Caisse Populaires throughout the region, profits will go towards financing the 100th anniversary celebrations of the Sherbrooke Fair.

So the more refunds requested, the less money is available for the exposition. There's even a special limited edition gold coin, complete with carrying case for the collector. Dandurand hopes they'll be kept as souvenirs.

But for those who don't bother with such mementos, they won't have to spend their new wealth all in one place. The money will be accepted by participating merchants, restaurant owners, even taxi drivers, says Dandurand, until Aug. 31.

He hopes to spur sales with the slogan, "Our dollar is really worth one dollar," an allusion to the slipping Canadian dollar which has sunk to about 70 cents American.

The Sherbrooke Fair is scheduled to kick off its activities Aug. 9 and for the next 10 days the Parc Street fairgrounds will be packed with midway rides, fast food outlets, livestock shows, arts and crafts contests and pavillions sponsored by corporations large and small hyping their products and their company's history.

Officials say the fairgrounds will be better organized than ever before and are certain of its success.

One the new projects guaranteed to focus attention on the event is a Caen, France-Sherbrooke exchange. Chefs used to plying their wares at Caen's agricultural fest will be in Sherbrooke for the fair. The Canadians will travel overseas in September.

Director Gaston Rouleau explains that a few changes have been made. "St-Michel Street, a one-way, will be a two-way street for the duration of the fair." Automobile access to the grounds will be limited to two entrances on St-Michel. One gigantic parking lot will be created: all cars will be ushered to the jogging track for storage.

The Sherbrooke municipal transport service will again provide a free shuttle bus to those who prefer parking in the Quatre Saisons shopping mall lot.

As fair mascot Mr. Centenary says, "It's a rendez-vous."

Michael Miller, Alcan vice-president of corporate relations hands Piggery president Marlis Wehr a cheque for $5,000 representing the aluminum company's sponsorship of Mommy, the theatre's season-opening production.

Piggery theatre board president Marlis Wehr has been busy lately preparing for the Piggery theatre Garden Tour, coming up this Wednesday, July 17. The Tour, which will include eight gardens in the Massawippi-Ayer's Cliff area, also features a sandwich lunch and costs $7 per person. For more information contact the Piggery box office at 842-2191.

Val-Racine's Encan d'Art reaches seventh year

First-time participant in the Val-Racine auction Gisela Kuepper with a sample of her batik.

By Eleanor Brown

SHERBROOKE — If you can find Val-Racine on the map, you're well on your way to becoming an art collector.

In 1979, six local artists decided to give themselves a little publicity and hopefully even make a few sales by founding Encan d'Art. The art auction is now its seventh year and gaining popularity with each appearance.

It began as a three-day affair intended as a place "for families to feel at ease," says co-ordinator Pierre Brosseau. "We were reaching the curious rather than the amateur collectors and the buyers."

But after four years of hit-and-miss sales, organizers started visiting other auction sites and realizing that things had to change. They hired a professional auctioneer two years ago, Iegor de St-Hippolyte.

But even now, there are no guarantees of success.

"People often think of an auction as a place where one can buy things cheaply," says Brosseau. "That may make the buyer happy, but not always the artist."

The artist and the man responsible for selling the work get together and have a long, heart-to-heart talk about the value of the piece. "Many artists," says de St-Hippolyte, "don't really know the value of their work."

"I find this really scary," says Joyce Schweitzer-Cochrane, awarded an honorable mention by the organization's jury last year.

"Your painting is held up and the guy walks up and down the aisle and then the commissaire says, 'What am I bid'. You're going to be judged quickly whereas some of us like to think people look at a painting for a long time — you let it grow on you," Schweitzer-Cochrane says.

Veteran participant Linda Freese adds that buyers "are getting much more 'connaissanceur'— before it was much more artisanat. The artists have changed and the clientele has changed."

Yvan Savoie is this year's president, probably because he won first prize in 1984, he says. He managed to sell two of his paintings last year.

His goal was to increase the participation of local artists. "We needed new blood," Savoie says, and he seems to have succeeded. Over a dozen new faces have added their talents to the show.

One of his new recruits is batik artist Gisela Kuepper. For the last four years she's been actively involved in exhibiting and selling her work, including a stint at the Piggery Theatre and the Guild of Canadian Crafts in Montreal.

She doesn't expect to make a fortune from the show. Kuepper will be happy with "publicity and hopefully even a good sale."

"People are not so familiar with batik," she says. "It's an ancient craft that comes from Java, adapted into a contemporary craft." A piece of canvass is painted with wax and submerged into a vat of dye bath. The process is repeated, working from light to dark colours. The final product is ironed out and sent to the dry-cleaners.

The Encan d'Art will take place

Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 in Val Racine. The vernissage starts at 7 pm Saturday, and the auction Sunday at 2 pm. Val Racine is at the foot of Mont Mégantic, near the Observatory (from Sherbrooke, a one hour drive passing through Cookshire, La Patrie and Notre-Dame-des-Bois).

Memoir gives peek at Morris

A Cloak Of Light by Wright Morris (FITZHENRY & WHITE-SIDE): $29.50, 306 pp., & Photographs.

The third volume of American novelist and critic Wright Morris's memoirs, A Cloak Of Light follows the earlier reminiscences Will's Boy and Solo, tracing the middle years of this provocative life. Morris, whose home was Nebraska, returns to the locale where his father and mother had lived, etching with his highly-charged prose the kind of rural vignettes that make up much of his fiction. More of a memoir, with the random sampling of life that genre allows, than a strict chronological autobiographical form, A Cloak Of Light mixes Morris's recollections with visits to friends and family. Often inserting paragraphs from his nineteen works of fiction or eleven other non-fiction volumes to illustrate how fiction impinges on reality and vice-versa, the mid-westerner has a recognizable facility with creating brief, memorable scenes that remain clearly imprinted on a reader's memory.

Although it is sometimes hard to focus on the motivation for many of Morris's forays into seldom-seen areas of America, there are a few journeys that the writer makes that bring A Cloak Of Light into sharp focus. Several of these are his adventures into the heartland of Mexico, of which there are three or four recorded here that point out the mysteriousness of that country, as well as the primitive, depressing poverty.

Wright Morris reflects on his vocation as a writer and sometime lecturer at various schools such as Los Angeles State College and Amherst, University of Massachusetts and shares with the reader his own compelling feelings of nostalgia as he visits the families of his father and his wife. The book opens with Morris's recollections about his various girlfriends and the forceful memories that are conjured up when he drops into his nostalgic mode. A Cloak of Light takes many liberties with chronology, but does conclude with Morris's torrid affair in Venice, Italy with Josephine Kantor, a tryst that severs his marriage with the woman only referred to as "the wife", which is a strange relationship to say the least. At the age of fifty, having found what he believes is the most beautiful woman in the world (unfortunately the included photographs reveal a dark-haired lady who would be scored as perhaps a "two" in popular beauty rating parlance!). Wright Morris concludes his memoir which is certain to be continued. If readers of Morris's ongoing saga about his own life wonder about the writer's position in American Letters it must surely be seen as taking a secondary ranking, something like that of regional writers such as Willa Cather, to whom Morris has been compared. If A Cloak Of Light is somewhat uneven in its narrative, it nevertheless contains enough glimpses into a writer's psyche to invite the reader to explore the considerable works of a lesser known poetic novelist.

KIDS' BOOKS

Whatever Happened To The Dinosaurs? by Bernard Most (ACADEMIC PRESS): $17.95, 40 pp.

One of the childhood mysteries that seems to still vie actively for young imaginations against the robotized TV manipulations of Tranzor Z, the end of the dinosaurs is treated comically in this colourful book. With the kind of nonsense and fun that kids delight in, Bernard Most's book speculates on silly possibilities as to the dinosaurs' whereabouts — are they wearing disguises, on Jupiter or Mars, are they in jail, lost in the middle of the jungle, or was there just no room for them on Noah's ark? Bright colours, nutty drawings and simple text, meant that this book tested quite favourably with an almost four-year old dinosaur lover.

The Insignificant Elephant by Carol Greene, illustrated by Susan Gantner (ADADEMIC PRESS): $17.95, 32 pp.

Once you get past the first word in this book's title the story of Humber the insignificant elephant has enough suspense, foolery and simple plotline to entrance most of the 4 to 6 year old set. The Proud Pasha of Rabbidum needs a spy to tell him of the evil plans of the dread Januaries, so insignificant, scarcely noticeable Humber the elephant is dispatched. He invades the Pepperpot Palace of the Grand Poo-pah of January, and with some clever manoeuvres manages to complete his mission and bring this tale to a satisfying ending. Pastel colours and water-colour wash illustrations are styled to aid the text in this book that has the kind of simplistic conflicts and happy resolutions that kids always relish.

RECORD REVIEWS

Heart HEART (CAPITOL)

One of the first of the Canadian bands that were taken to the bosom of the American rock community, west-coasters Heart have hit strongly with a mid-80's album that reflects their schizophrenic style. The sharply distinctive contrasts set up by the beautiful and talented Wilsons, Ann and Nancy, are magnified in the band's ability to play as hard, or as poignantly soft as the material dictates. In a way, this ninth Heart album, their first since 1983's PASSIONWORKS which failed to arouse much passion, is a comeback, which means that the studio guardians of Heart's destiny toiled long and hard on this one.

There is ample evidence of Ann's searingly sung rock vocals on many of the tracks, and even sister Nancy, usually relegated to guitars and keyboards, makes a vocal impression on as song co-authored by Elton John's old pal Bernie Taupin — "These Dreams". It turns out to be one of the more melodic and softer songs in the set. First single out of the HEART chutes is a tune with Bryan Adams connections, having been written in part by his cohort Jim Vallance, the track's titled "What About Love".

Heart is one hand not averse to looking far afield for songwriting aid, but one third of the songs have Wilson connections, and the best one here must be "Nobody Home", one of those achingly cloying ballads that Ann Wilson croons. Anyone who has ever caught this band in a live situation will be readily aware of the dynamic, highly visual stage show that the Wilson ladies exude from every musical pore, so the expectations for the videos to accompany HEART should be large indeed. With the right producer the videos from HEART 1985 could result in some fine visual spectacles to heighten the interest that this fine album will promote in one of Canada's rockiest ensembles.

Van Morrison A SENSE OF WONDER (MERCURY-POLYGRAM)

Van Morrison, one of the true outsiders in the music biz, recently defended his artistic integrity while taking a justified verbal shot at the materialistic mode of the record racket — "I've been through that whole commercial thing. I had a hit record when I was only 18 and it's just like...nothing. You have to have another hit record one after another and it becomes like eating, like having another sandwich, it's meaningless. I prefer a cult thing because they'll stick by you, they don't desert you for another flavour of the month".

Well, there have been many months and a taster's-delight range of flavours in rock since Morrison released his last album, but A SENSE OF WONDER is packed with the kind of rock rebellion that has sustained the career of British group Them's most famed graduate. An artsy track "Tore Down A La Rimbaud" unfortunately uses the same chord pattern and riffs that featured in "The Far Side Of The Road", but the sentiment sympathizes with the French symbolist poet. Though Morrison's creative vision usually partakes freely of the influence of William Blake and W.B. Yeats, it may be seen that Rimbaud could act as a spiritual mentor for the eccentric Belfast rebel.

Blake is indeed credited with the text to one rock song here, "Let The Slave", based on "The Price of Experience", incorporating the romantic poet's clearly defined thoughts on innocence/experience and good/evil. This kind of track reinforces the idea that Morrison's work is not readily accessible to the average rock fan going through what he calls his juvenilia. But the classical world of music recently thwarted Morrison when he attempted to put "Crazy Jane On God" on this album, a song based on Yeats's Crazy Jane poems. The estate holding Yeats's copyrights stated that all of his works may only be used within the context of classical interpretations. Had they listened closely to A SENSE OF WONDER they might have discovered that even rock artists can take a serious view of their art — Van Morrison is one of the foremost of these.

Veteran actress falls in love with North Hatley

By Michael McDevitt

NORTH HATLEY — Joan Orenstein loves North Hatley. The veteran actress, starring in the Piggery Theatre's second play of the season, A.J. Gurney's What I Did Last Summer, had never been to the Eastern Townships before arriving recently to prepare for her role, but now she's hooked.

"It must be Canada's best-kept secret," she enthuses. "The verdant quality and expanse of this place is extraordinary."

Orenstein is committed to natural beauty. A resident of Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley, she feels that her short exposure to the Townships has been "a voyage of discovery. I would love to come and live here," she adds, "it is a remarkable area with its community of writers, artists and poets. And the people are friendly and warm and curious. It's wonderful."

Orenstein, who has worked in every major theatre in Canada as well as on television and films, is probably best-known to audiences as the wise Judge Ballantyne, who regularly counselled Tony Van Bridge's title character in the now defunct CBC program Judge. "That was a really great show to do," she says. "To-

Joan Orenstein, on her first visit to the eastern Townships has fallen in love with the area she refers to as "the best-kept secret".

ny is one of Canada's finest actors and working with him was a pleasure as well as a thrill."

Orenstein says federal government budget cuts were directly responsible for the demise of the show, and she isn't very happy about it.

"Those darn bureaucrats don't understand a single thing about art," she says. "They think that art is merely another business — but that isn't the case. I firmly believe that the government must be prepared to subsidize the arts if they are to survive in Canada."

Orenstein has seen government cutbacks affect not only the CBC but other national institutions like the National Arts Centre as well, and she is not impressed with the trend. "We were able to take a show on the road from the NAC once," she says, "and we played all over the place — we even went to Inuvik — and people were so pleased, so happy that we could do it. It was only because of adequate funding that we were able to do that, and now it's all come to an end. This is a tragedy of major importance. The government has eliminated hundreds of jobs for actors and performers, and compared to the way they throw away money in other areas, — like preparing for war — it won't save them anything, it will only cost us."

Orenstein says the cutbacks in art funding will have a serious effect on the quality of Canadian culture. "Did you see Charlie Grant's War?" she asks, referring to the marvelous CBC special in which she played the character Elizabeth Goldman. "Well, that was one of the finest pieces of television ever made in this country. It was an incredible experience working with those people. They won't be able to produce that kind of program any more now, because of those stupid government policies. That is a very real shame."

Lest the reader get a false impression of Joan Orenstein, it should here be noted that she is an unflappably enthusiastic and vivacious woman, carrying her

"woman of indeterminate age" stature with an easy grace and charm. Her enthusiasm boils over into conversation about her role in the upcoming production of What I Did Last Summer, which begins July 18.

"It's a marvelous role," she says, "I play Anna, the Pig Woman, in a story of a young boy's coming of age during the summer of 1945 — just before the guys come home from the war. The Pig Woman is basically a Bohemian, a former member of the establishment who provides the 14-year old hero Charlie (Daryl Shuttleworth) with another outlook. She doesn't provide any answers, but she makes him think. It's a wonderful play and it's a wonderful role, I particularly like the fact that Anna is a woman of indeterminate age — like me."

What I Did Last Summer represents the Piggery's biggest production of the 1985 season with a cast of six, including Orenstein, Shuttleworth, Brian Dooley, Diana Fajrajsl, Catherine Disher and Christine Moynihan (now starring in Mommy, the Piggery's season opener which concludes tomorrow). It is directed by Piggery artistic director Perry Schneiderman, and continues until August 3.

Joan Orenstein — "I firmly believe the government must be prepared to subsidize the arts if they are to survive in Canada."

Miguasha fossil bank reveals many details of life

By Charles Bury

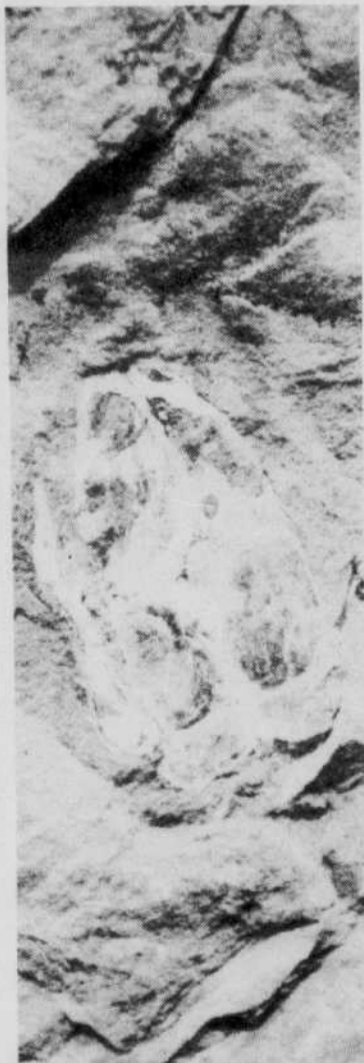

MIGUASHA — Mention the word 'fossil' and many people's minds turn to the dusty valleys of Africa — or to an old friend, in my case Bernie St-Laurent, who is sometimes described that way. But some of the world's most important research into what the earth was like before there were people — even Bernie — around to record it takes place at the 365-million-year-old Miguasha fossil bank in this tiny Gaspé village.

Paleontologists (fossil scientists) from all over the world root around the bayside of Miguasha, now protected as a provincial park and museum. The researchers are looking for — and finding — remnants of plants and animals which lived there 365 million years ago, when the stratified rock of the cliffs was the bottom of a tropical lake.

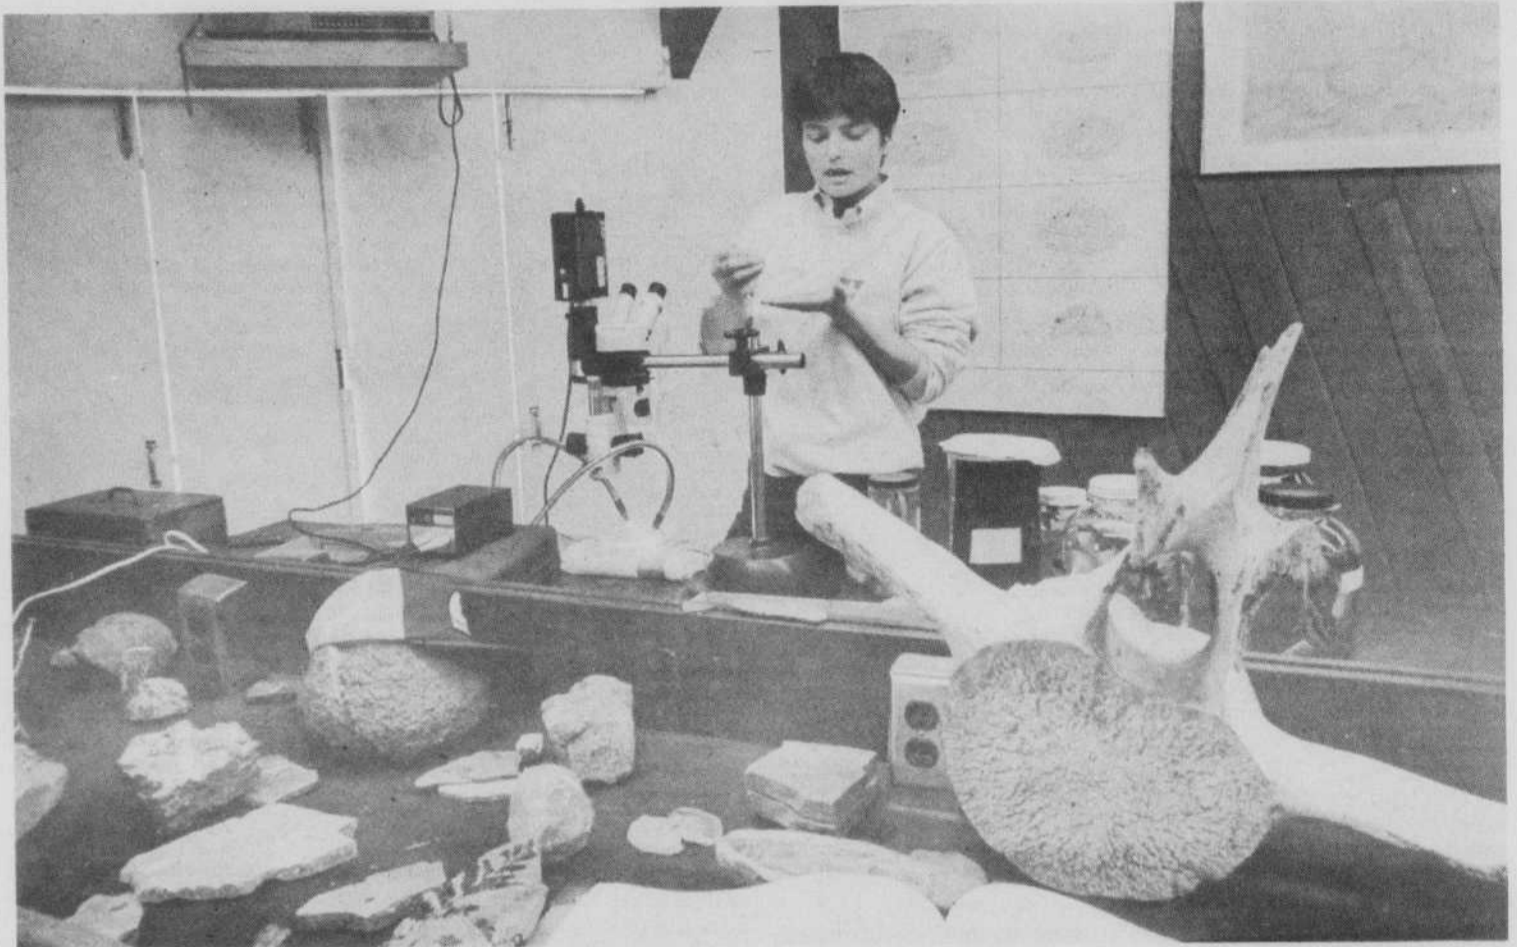

Fortunately for us non-scientific civilians, there are also interpreter-guides willing to spend as long as you want to, talking up the pre-history of life in the 'Upper Devonian' period — the history of life itself.

NOTHING HAPPENED

The fossils of Miguasha were first discovered in 1842 by New Brunswick provincial geologist Abraham Gesner. He made a report about the find, but I guess nobody read it because nothing happened. It was only when the fossil bank was 'rediscovered' in 1879, that Miguasha caused a scientific scurry from all over the globe.

A tiny Miguasha scorpion

The working laboratory at Miguasha is open to the public and guide Linda Rail will explain how ancient fossils are uncovered.

And quite a scurry it was. Mainly British and Scandinavian, the scientists came by the shipload to the Baie des Chaleurs. They liked what they saw and converted their ships to freighters, which they loaded, keel to topsail, with the soft grey rocks.

Why? It's mainly because of the fish and the ferns.

Miguasha is "one of the most important fossil sites on the planet," according to the museum literature. "It is better known to famous scientists around the world than it is to most Quebecers. Fossils found there have allowed paleontology to make important leaps in research into the origins of human life."

100-FOOT FERNS

Ferns? Well, 365 million years ago, as it turns out, there were no trees or other plants — only ferns. But what ferns they were! At Miguasha, they grew around the lake. And some of the ferns of Miguasha were up to 100 feet tall. The trunk of one of them stands proudly in the museum; it's a good two feet in diameter. Under the ferns lived insects and scorpions of all shapes and sizes.

On display at the Miguasha museum, and ready to uncover on the fossil banks below, are many remarkably preserved samples of various early bugs, as well as plants. That's all the land-based life there was on earth in 365,000,000 B.C. (give or take a few hundred thousand years). The mammals, reptiles and amphibians came later, along with the birds and bees.

CLOSE TO PRESENT FISH

Fish? While the giant ferns towered overhead, Miguasha's ancient fish were getting pretty close to the forms they have today.

Six groups of prehistoric fish lived in ancient Lake Miguasha. Some had no jaws and were apparently early bottom-feeders. A second group's skins were made of bony plates. A third group were 'spiny' fish, a fourth were 'bony'. Group number five had both gills and lungs, indicating that they spent some time in the water, some on land.

Finally, some of the Upper-Devonian fish, which had partly-developed skulls and spinal columns, were the first animals ever to have anything even resembling a little backbone.

UP OUT OF THE SWAMP

Trace back the lung and the backbone and you trace back mankind. Because before we came up out of the swamp, (not down from the trees, as many say), homo sapiens was a fish too.

The more things change, the more they stay the same. A fish fossil found at Miguasha and on display this summer is not only a predecessor of man, it is also closely related to a type of fish still found today (though rarely) off the coasts of Africa and Indonesia. There is also a sample of the modern fish on display for comparison. The Upper Devonian fish is called 'rhpidistian Eusthenopteron fordi' (Latin for 'old fish found by Professor Ford', or something like that). The newer one, on loan from the National Museum of Natural Sciences, goes by the name of 'Latimeria chalumnae', or 'Old Fourlegs'.

Somewhere along the way, the fish got out of the water, stood up, decided they liked it, and stayed. Fourlegs became two, and me and you.

Well all this is very interesting, but it's getting a bit stale these days, 365 million years later.

GOVERNMENT STEPS IN

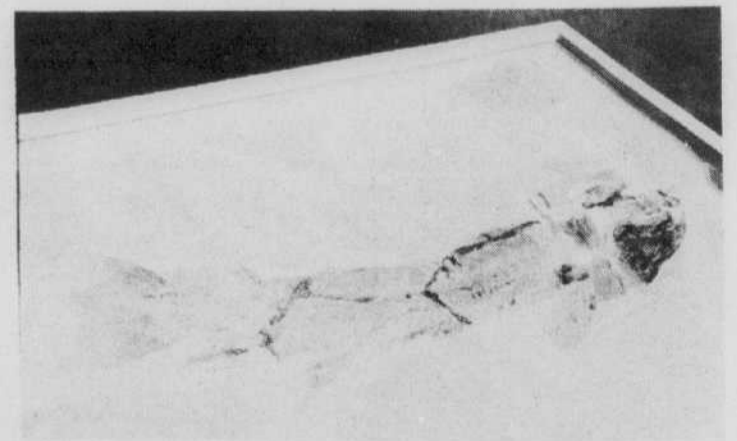

For once the government did the right thing with Miguasha, although it took a little longer than it should have. Although a movement arose in 1937 to protect the Miguasha fossil bank, it was only early this year that the Miguasha Park became a reality.

The Escuminac formation (that's what geologists call the Miguasha rock) is some five miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide. It varies in depth from about 40 feet to several times that. The fossil-bearing rocks were only discovered in the first place because along one long stretch of shoreline, the fossil rocks are exposed as cliffs. And that's where the problem comes in.

Most fossil sites are deep in unpopulated regions like the dusty valleys of Africa, hidden from the prying eyes and crowbars of vandals. But at Miguasha, everything's wide open. Once the fossils were 'rediscovered' in 1879, amateur collectors and turn-of-the-century professional "mercantile interests" outdid even the European scientists in the race to turn the precious site into a souvenir mine.

But rapacious exploitation was a national pastime in those days and it wasn't until the late 1930s that three concerned scientists began a movement to have the Miguasha fossil bank protected. The movement grew but the government failed to move. Premier Maurice Duplessis (who was a distant relative of mine, by

as it was over 350 million years in the past the way, although it didn't seem to help him much) was a young man then, and he must have put the Save-Miguasha people in the same boat he reserved for Jehovah's Witnesses, the federal government and other groups he saw as subversive.

Miguasha was never protected during Duplessis' Union Nationale regime. Nor in Paul Sauvé's, nor in Antonio Barrette's (not that anyone remembers him), nor in Daniel Johnson's. Then along came Robert Bourassa and the Liberals and things began to move — a bit, although I wouldn't say the change of government had anything to do with it).

Starting in 1970 the government began buying small chunks of land over the Miguasha site. In 1976 the University of Quebec Rimouski campus got involved and pressure mounted for a park. By '78 the bulk of it was protected. That year the museum was completed and it and parts of the site were opened to the public.

But even then the Miguasha bank wasn't fully protected. That only came in early '85 when it became part of Quebec's 'national' park network. At last, the 365-million-year old ferns and bugs and fish can rest easy. They won't be kidnapped for souvenirs any more.

At least they won't in theory. Because in practice, the invaluable fossil bank is wide open to anyone who happens by. Indeed part of the protected land is the Miguasha public beach. Anyone can go there, anytime they want. And after Sept. 3 the museum is closed and everyone working there gets laid off, or goes back to their research elsewhere. The place shuts down completely except for a single security guard, who goes home at 5 p.m. As if the guard made any difference. On my first visit to Miguasha last fall, I walked right past the guard on my way down to the deserted cliffs and beach. He didn't even look up from his paperback (although I was almost close enough to read it).

So much for government protection. Still, it's a crime to remove anything from a provincial park and you just might get caught, so leave it there.

In any case, most of the time visitors wouldn't recognize a fossil if they saw one. That's because they are buried in the rock. One of the activities to be seen at the Miguasha museum is actual scientists uncovering actual fossils.

The fossils are hidden in chronological 'horizons', which are the many easy-to-recognize layers of the Escuminac rock deposit. The researchers pry the likely rocks out of the cliff, then take them up to the lab (open to the public) where they scrape and scratch the rock away to find the ancient remains beneath. This fine work takes place on microscopes and on TV. The 'scopes magnify the remnants in the rock. The TV is hooked up to the microscope (as shown on the cover page with technician-guide Linda Rail) to make the close work easier on the eyes, and to show visitors how it's done.

A wildlife note: The state-of-the-art instrument paleontologists use to scrape the stone away under the 'scope is not stainless steel or space-age plastic; it's the lowly porcupine quill. There's a jar of them on every workbench.

Miguasha isn't crowded, but there is a steady stream of visitors. "We had about 23,000 visitors last summer and we expect more than that this year," says Linda Rail, a guide from nearby Maria.

The Miguasha fossil bank is well worth a half-day visit. It is easily accessible and well marked. Take Route 132, turn down towards the shore on Miguasha Road at Escuminac or a little further east on Wafer Road. It's hard to miss. The bank, museum and lab in the provincial park are open from 9 straight through to 5, seven days a week until Labor Day. Guided tours of the museum begin every 10 minutes all day long.

And yes Virginia, they do speak English. Indeed you may be surprised to learn that Escuminac-Miguasha is a pretty bilingual area; the first settlers were anglo pioneers and many of the more prominent local paleontologists are too — not to mention the farmers and fishermen.

NEXT: Fish and fishing over the years: The museum at Paspébiac Bank.

The fossilized trunk of a 100-foot fern

The common porcupine quill is the paleontologist's best friend.

A public beach is in the middle of the protected area surrounding the Miguasha fossil bank, part of which is visible to the left of the stairway.

Music

Lots of stuff happening in this department this week, and Mikey will begin his dissertation with an exploration of the musical goings-on out at the rejuvenated and modernized Orford Arts Centre. Tonight, the lively world of Romanian folk music is expounded with a concert by the group Junii Sibiului. Say that one even once fast. Anyway, the folks will be folkloring away beginning at 8 p.m. in the Salle Gilles-Lefebvre. Saturday, it's chamber music time with the wonderful Orford String Quartet, by far and away one of Canada's greatest musical traditions. The four gentlemen in the quartet Kenneth Perkins, Andrew Dawes, Terence Helmer and Dennis Brott (who replaced original member Marcel St-Cyr in 1980) are well-respected throughout the world for the clarity and energy of their performances. The group first met at Orford in 1965 and has since then become one of Canada's musical bastions. The Quartet will be performing music by Beethoven, Ravel and Shostakovich. Tickets (as in the above concert) are $10 and the concert is being held in the Salle Gilles-Lefebvre at 8.

On Sunday, the Concert-Bouffe crowd gets a very special treat in the form of a performance by the incredible Jim Corcoran beginning at 5. Corcoran possesses one of the finest voices it has ever been my pleasure to hear, and he combines it with a magical songwriting talent and fine musicianship. He is also a warm and friendly performer who uses his talents not only to entertain but to delight. If you have never caught this man's act, this is probably the finest opportunity to do so you will ever have. The dinner-concert combination costs $10, while the concert alone is only $5. The Orford hors les murs series continues this week with free concerts in the Base de plein air Jouvence in Bonsecours on Monday, and at the Parc Blanchard in Sherbrooke on Tuesday at 8. A $4 music school concert is also being staged on Wednesday at the Salle Gilles-Lefebvre at 8 p.m.

On Sunday in (East) Hatley, the Festival Lac Massawippi Sons et Brioches Concert features a performance by Tom Gordon and Mary O'Keefe two excellent pianists who perform marvelously well as a team, having had lots of time to practice seeing as how they are married to each other and all. Both teach at Bishop's University and don't seem to be any worse for wear, and they have been extremely instrumental (ouch) in expanding the school's music program. 1985, it seems, marks the 10th anniversary of the Gordon-O'Keefe musical team and for their performance Sunday, they will be playing selections by Mendelssohn, Ravel, Copland and Canadian composer John Beckwith. The concert, as usual, begins at 11 a.m. and, not as usual, there will be a small donation requested at the door.

At The Old Brick Church in the hamlet of West Brome tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon, the string trio of Robert Verebes and Friends will be giving a concert of selections by Mozart, Kodaly, Beethoven and Reger. The group consists of Verebes on viola, Chantal Juillet on violin, and William Valleau on the cello. The concert performances are free and are at 8 p.m. Saturday evening and 3 p.m. Sunday.

In Magog, at the Vieux Clocher on July 14 and 15, singer, songwriter, comic and storyteller Steve 'Cassonade' Faulkner hits the stage with his entertaining and witty spectacle of tales, songs, and humour. Faulkner mixes blues, country, jazz and rock in a wild but acceptable manner and, accompanying himself on piano and guitar (no, not at the same time) puts on a pretty good show.

Next week, from the 16th to the 22nd Jim Corcoran is back again at Le Vieux Clocher doing his magic.

On the bar circuit, Idle Hands have finally loaded up their gear and shuffled on out of Lennoxville for a while, preparing to spend the next three weeks at the Motel des Cantons out in Sawyerville. This is good news for them, because Lennoxville tends to have a negative effect on the performing artist if he doesn't get out into the real world once in a while. Now, I realize that Sawyerville doesn't always qualify as the real world but what the heck. Anyhoo, Bob Boisclair, Peter Jenks, Shawn Renaud and Danny Renaud will be plying their trade in Sawyerville, Friday and Saturday nights.

Meanwhile back in Lennyberg, Cal and his FL Hideaway play host to the notorious KGB Friday night and on Saturday welcome Jeff Coates and The Leftovers, which is to say that Kevin Groves (KG) must have a hot date somewhere, cause he ain't gonna be there with the band (B). The rest of the band includes Coates, Jim Buck and Chris Griffith.

On Saturday, the municipality of Ayer's Cliff is pulling off a repeat of its spectacularly successful street dance that originated in conjunction with last year's 75th anniversary. This year, the dance kicks off in the downtown area at 9 p.m. with Rod Bray and the Countrymen providing the free musical entertainment. These things have a way of turning into a really good time, so if it isn't snowing, why not hobble down and check the place out.

Weekend Express plays one more weekend out in Magog's Hee-Haw Country nightclub playing their country tunes Friday and Saturday evenings. It seems, however, that Mikey managed to confuse the obvious last weekend by announcing an incorrect address for the place. Let me set that straight. The club is located at 470 Principale west. The owner's name is J.R. Ewing though, he insists.

In Waterville, the Motel Bretagne is still featuring the sounds of the Tennessee Riders Friday and Saturday evenings and this Sunday afternoon, Gordie will be introducing Willie and Billie two members of the Richmond area's notorious Willy and the Poor Boys. Sounds like a lot of fun.

In Stanstead, Pig Bone, country music's answer to Mr. T hit the stage each Friday and Saturday evening until the end of the month. Hard raunchy country and western entertainment.

Country Rhythm provides the entertainment from Thursdays through Sunday down at the Shady Crest in Ayer's Cliff. They'll be getting things moving there until the end of the month.

At the Del Monty down in Rock Island the mysterious X-Men provide some footstompin' rock and roll.

The newly opened La Maltonniere on Wellington in Sherbrooke will be hosting the rhythm and blues — Motown sounds of Sabata beginning next Tuesday and playing throughout the week until next Tuesday. La Maltonniere is probably the only club in the area with live tunes every night, and judging from the quality of the acts they have apparently had so far, they should do well indeed.

In the jazz world, Mikey regrets having been late in informing you that Hovey Manor has expanded its jazz nights with Jacques Jobin and Marc Bolduc. These two delightfully talented musicians will now be playing, beginning at 9, on both Thursdays and Fridays for the rest of the summer. Good move Steve.

More jazz in downtown Sherbrooke from 5 to 7 at the Café du Palais outside in the alley featuring Jean-Jacques Beauchamps and Normand Bouchard and accomplices. This is a particularly pleasant way to pass couple of late-afternoon hours, soaking up the rain, drinking cheap drinks and listening to some fine, fine jazz.

Finally — and I'm only gonna do this once, so pay attention — Roy Robi and Eddy Miller of Estrie Communications seem to be communicating just fine with local clubs and bars. So fine, in fact, that they have more bars looking for bands than they have bands. If you're in the music racket and are looking for work, give the man a call 562-0693.

Exhibitions/Events

This is not Mikey's favorite way to start a day, mind you, but he finds himself in the embarrassing position of having to make a few minor corrections to some of the utterances he has been making concerning the exhibits at the Asbestos Mineralogical and Mining Museum over to Asbestos way. As you will remember, the Museum is now exhibiting three different exhibits. The first, Minerals and Photographs — Bolivia 1950-52 is from a collection by mining engineer Louis Sonneveld (not Conneveld as I have been saying). I got the rest of that part right at least and the exhibit contains samples and photographs of Oruro, Ubina and Potosi regions, where tin and silver were mined before the coming of the Spanish Conquistadors. The second exhibit (I got this right too), features Solbec, Cupra, d'Estrie and Weedon — Four Mines of the Townships, and pays tribute to these former base-metal mines. In the third exhibit (and I screwed up here too, somehow) called Rock Specimens from the Appalachian System in the Townships, the regions examined are (a) from Kingsbury to St-Adrien and (b) from East Angus to Stratford and not Hereford. I apologize to any who might have suffered any embarrassment especially to museum president John A. Millen who thoughtfully keeps me thoroughly informed as to the goings on at his domain — one of the truly fascinating and unique museums in the area.

In Coaticook, the Beaulne Museum still has a collection of 25 new pieces by talented eaux-fortes artist Jeanine Bourret. Bourret has chosen a nature theme this time, and presents a delightfully informal — friendly even — collection of animal and nature scenes that are full of whimsy and humor. Bourret is a serious artist, but her art is anything but sombre and is a pleasure to behold. The show continues throughout the summer, and the Beaulne is open daily from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.

In Sherbrooke, the art of Vietnamese artist-in-exile La Toan Vinh is on display during the month of July. The artist here makes definitively bold statements in his work to varying effect.

Beginning on July 15 and continuing until the 17th at the Arts Sutton Summer School, is a workshop on Painting: Analysis and Nature being given by Ghitta Caiserman Roth. Students will learn to analyse the works of painters like Cézanne, Miro and the cubists, and will then go out into the wild to study nature and to learn about space and shapes, forms and lines. Caiserman Roth studied in Montreal and New York and has taught at Concordia, Queen's UQUAM, and the Ontario Art College. The cost for this workshop is $135.

On July 18th and 19th, Bernice Sarge will be teaching Drawing for Teenagers which will provide all the basics for kids between 12 and 17. This is an indoor-outdoor workshop involving still life and nature exploration. Sarge studied at Concordia and Simon Fraser and exhibits in Montreal, Ottawa, and the Eastern Townships. The cost for this one is $75.

The next one begins on July 20, and is called Drawing for Beginners. Now, this workshop is for those of us out there (adults only, please) who have an urge to draw but don't know their brass from their easel. The workshop will be conducted by Roslyn Swartzman, a woman with impeccable credentials. Swartzman has studied with Arthur Lismer, Jacques de Tonnancour and Albert Dumouchel at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Montreal and is now at teacher at the Sadye Bronfman Centre. A member of the Royal Canadian Academy, Swartzman has shown her work throughout Canada, the United States and Europe. The price for this two-day workshop is $85.

Out in Arthabaska, three artists are displaying works at the Laurier Museum until July 28. They are: Ghislaine Verville, a painter and sculptor, Johanne Gagnon a painter, and Alain Robert a painter-naturalist.

In Sherbrooke, the Léon Marcotte Exhibition Centre begins next Wednesday an exhibit called Canadian Nature Art 1985 which collects together 42 pieces by several different Canadian artists including Quebecers Melinda Brewer and Ernest Heidersdorf. The show will continue until August 17. The museum is open from 12:30 until 5 every day except Monday and is located at 222 Frontenac Street.

For some inexplicable reason this next item only just reached me although it certainly should have been here much earlier than this, but I'll do what I can. I am informed that the Melbourne Township Municipal Library has been holding an 'old book' sale and will continue to do so during the entire summer. The library has also set up an audio-cassette service. Those interested in finding out more about the Melbourne library are urged to contact Mrs. Emilie Noël at 826-3555.

Lucy Doheny and her pots can still be seen at the Piggery, but only until tomorrow so you'd better get moving or everything will be gone. The same is true for the paintings of Antonia Mitchell. Next week, beginning the 18th, the Piggery features painter Sarah Peck Colby and potter Allyson Simms. By the way, the stunningly beautiful photographs by Dr. Robert Paulette are on display throughout the summer in the bar.

Movies

Go see Back to the Future. This silly story, now playing for a second week at the Cinéma Capitol here in Sherbrooke is a real delight. As usual producer Steven Spielberg has left his unmistakable stamp on this science-fantasy-farce directed by Robert Zemeckis and the special effects are both special and effective, but the main points in this movie's favor are the performances by actors Michael J. Fox and Christopher Lloyd. Fox plays a typical teenager more interested in rock and roll and girls than in anything else, who is having a particularly hard time living down the embarrassment caused by an incredibly nerdy father and an understandably tipsy mother. Through the auspices of his mad scientist friend (Lloyd) and with the help of a couple of rather incompetent Libyan terrorists, Fox accidentally gets sent back in time to the night of the high school prom in 1955 where his parents first fell in love. On his arrival, however, Fox manages to screw things up and it becomes apparent that before he can return to his own time he must arrange for his parents to get it on or else he will not have a future to return to. He also has to escape the amorous attention of his young mom (played to perfection by an achingly enticing Lea Thompson). The whole thing is a whacky mess with some uproariously funny scenes thrown in, but with the help of Lloyd, Fox manages to make his way home again. I must admit that it has been a long time since Mikey has so thoroughly enjoyed himself at a movie — particularly one with an audience made up largely of noisome teenagers.

Up at the Cinémas Carrefour the wonderful Mad Max returns starring Mel Gibson and Tina Turner. Subtitled Beyond Thunder Dome this one features our sometime-in-the-distant-future hero squared off against a mean and power-hungry Turner, who wants to rule what's left of the world. This series is known for its exciting special effects, not the least of which is the one that Mel Gibson has on those of the female persuasion.

Thrills and adventure are the theme in Cowansville this week beginning with the 7:15 showing of the Stephen King thriller Cat's Eye and followed by James Bond in A View to a Kill starring Roger Moore and Grace Jones. No further explanations should be necessary.

Down in Newport at the Merrill's Showplace Cinemas there is very little new to report with the exception of Mad Max — Beyond Thunder Dome which plays nightly at 7:10 and 9:15 with weekend matinées at 1:55. For the rest of it there is still Pale Rider with Clint Eastwood at 7 and 9:25 (mat. 2:05), Spielberg's The Goonies at 7:05 (mat. 1:45) and Rambam: Splurt Blood part II starring Sylvester Stallone as Ronnie Reagan's chaplain and spiritual advisor.

Television

Things are definitely a little slow this week in the TV department with a few notable exceptions, particularly the spectacular Live Aid concert which will be telecast in various forms on several networks including a three-hour package on CTV. The MuchMusic Network is unscrambling its signal tomorrow, beginning at 7 a.m. to bring the beginning of the London, England concert to any and all cable subscribers who have a converter. They will start switching between that gig and the Philadelphia concert at around noon and will continue coverage until 6 p.m. CTV and ABC begin their three-hour package at 8 p.m. Just in case you haven't heard the line-up for what is probably the biggest TV event ever, get a load of this: In London, the show will be opened by Chuck and Di, Britain's favorite royals and will include the Boomtown Rats, David Bowie, Phil Collins, Elvis Costello, Dire Straits, Bryan Ferry, Paul McCartney, Queen, Sade, Spandau Ballet, Sting and many more, while in Philly Eric Clapton, Bob Dylan, Paul Simon, Duran Duran, Bryan Adams, Neil Young, Julian Lennon, Hall and Oates (not Haulin' Oats), Madonna, Cyndi Lauper, Mick Jagger, Kris Kristofferson, Judas Priest, Huey Lewis and the News, Pat Metheny, Jimmy Page, Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers and oodles more. Plus Nobel laureates Linus Pauling and Bishop Desmond Tutu will also be on hand. This concert will be a benchmark in modern technology and will include a duet by Bowie and Jagger, which, considering the fact that they will be on opposite sides of the planet, should be extremely interesting. If you're a rock fan, you might just as well be dead and in heaven during this thing — a milestone of gigantic proportions. And the best part is that this show should translate into anywhere from $20 million to $65 million in aid for starving Africans. This isn't just television folks, it's history. Don't miss it.

In the meantime, the show to catch tonight is on Vermont ETV at 11. Whatever Happened to Baby Jane stars as a faded child movie star who lives in seclusion tormenting her handicapped sister played by Joan Crawford. This is an extremely chilling tale, not soon forgotten.

Tomorrow, just watch the concert folks and forget about everything else until midnight, when CTV brings us Rocky followed by Rocky II. Sylvester Stallone wrote and directed the original Rocky — the story of a small-time boxer who gets his chance at the championship for reasons that would never be considered in the real world. Be that as it may, Rocky-cum-Cinderella, suddenly turns from a down and out loser into a prince and struggles to put on the fight of his life. It's not a bad film, as far as fairy-tales go, and it earned Stallone an Oscar for best screenplay. This, of course, was ridiculous, but it was a reflection of the emotional attachment most Americans felt toward this movie. It also enabled Stallone to get out of the porn business which was lucky for him, at least.

On Sunday afternoon, the CBC presents Laughter in my Soul at 1:30, a portrait of 90-year-old cartoonist Joseph Maydanyk. Maydanyk came to Canada in 1911 (before personal income tax) and worked in Winnipeg where he created an Archie Bunker-like comic strip character named Shteeff.

At 2, CBC follows up with Fire: From Ashes to Forest which, according to the press blurb I have here, focusses on the pros and cons of forest fires. This is particularly timely, and with half of B.C. and Alberta burning down at the moment, I'm sure the denizens of those regions can hardly wait to hear about all the pros of the forest fire business — job creation, mosquito reduction, etc.

After this, we can all join Jennifer Epps in a fine afternoon of rodeo watching at the Calgary Stampede, whereby grown men in funny hats torture farm animals in front of huge crowds. That's entertainment! If we're really lucky we might get to see some Brahma bull gore some poor stiff to death in revenge.

At 6:30, on CTV Pierre Berton takes us on a trip down morbidity lane as his Pierre Berton Revisited show repeats interviews with Bruce Lee and Jimmy 'Alpo' Hoffa.

At 8, on Vermont ETV John Williams and the Boston Pops share the stage with guest John Denver and a 500 voice chorus in a celebration of the orchestra's 100th anniversary.

At 10, the CBC presents Lawren Harris: Journey Toward the Light a look at one of the pioneers of abstract art in Canada. One of the Group of Seven, Harris is one of the most influential of all Canadian artists.

At midnight, Channel 12 gives us Gregory Peck and Orson Welles in a fairly good version of Herman Melville's monster classic Moby Dick.

On Monday at 8:30, John Boorman's overlooked masterpiece Excalibur is aired on CTV in a mystical, marvelous look at the glorious legend of Arthur and the Round Table.

At 10:30 on Vermont ETV, From the American Film Institute offers When the Bough Breaks a story of a horny California teenager whose need for romance conflicts with her father's desire to control her.

At midnight Clint Eastwood and Lee Van Cleef star in For A Few Dollars More, your basic Spaghetti western about a gang of cut-throats and the bounty hunters out to stop them.

On Tuesday at 8 on Vermont ETV NOVA takes a trip with Soviet filmmaker Yuri Ledin to Wrangel Island some 300 miles off the coast of Alaska for a visit In The Land of the Polar Bears.

At 10 on Vermont ETV, Wild America looks at Animal Oddities — some of the strange physical qwerks found in some species of animals and explains how these very oddities are the features that have allowed these animals to survive.

On Wednesday at 9, Vermont ETV offers the masterpiece My Dinner with André. Wallace Shawn and André Gregory share a dinner conversation that develops into an intriguing drama about the men, their relationship and the different approaches each — one a playwright, the other a director — has taken to life and art.

Radio

Ever hear of a Native American science fiction writer? Well me neither, but Craig Strete is just such a one, and tonight on CBC Stereo's Vanishing Point, two of his stories are dramatized. The Bleeding Man is the story of a young Indian man who has been bleeding from the chest since birth. Naturally, scientists are interested in the kid and keep him in a cell where they observe him until the day that they decided to 'use' him. His uncle warns the scientists that they'd better leave the kid alone, but do they listen? — no-o-o-o-o. So, they pay the price. The second story is called Saturday Night at the White Woman Watching Hole, and tells of two young Indians eating dinner at a fashionable Manhattan restaurant who watch the arrival of a stunningly beautiful and elegant young woman. When she leaves, something rather remarkable happens.

At noon-o-five tomorrow on CBC Radio's Quirks and Quarks, the first of a five-part series on cancer and its treatment begins with a discussion on Metastases — secondary cancers that are often resistant to treatment.

At 1, on CBC Stereo, Saturday Afternoon at the Opera features Die Walküre, the second part of Richard Wagner's Rings of the Nibelungen cycle. The great Edo de Waart conducts the San Francisco Opera.

At 8:05 on Jazz beat René Lavoie and Guido Basso perform from Ottawa followed by a performance by the Michel Petrucciani Trio.

At 10:10 on CBC Radio, Toronto writer Graeme Gibson's short story Pancho Villa's Head is read.

On Sunday at 3:05, Command Performance features a recital by Jon Kimura Parker, winner of the 1984 Leeds Piano Competition during which, I presume, he either got his piano to go faster, or jump higher, than any other competitor. No?

At 4:05, Sunday Matinée presents A Truthful Witness by Robin Rowland. In 1975, police informer Champ Landers was murdered and police had virtually no evidence at all. However, murder charges were soon laid against two men, based almost entirely upon the allegations of a young woman named Nadine Deveau. But was she telling the truth? I don't know.

At 7:05 on CBC Radio, the Toronto Symphony highlights 13 year-old violinist Mi Dori (not to be confused with Do Re Mi) as well as violinist-conductor Pinchas Zukerman.

Also at 7:05 on CBC Stereo, The Scales of Justice presents Snow Job, by Guy Gavriel Kay. This story focusses on events that occurred during the summer of 1977, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police launched an all-out war against drugs and ended up arresting a young man named Victor Amato, who had no police record and no previous involvement in the drug world. Charged with trafficking in cocaine, Amato claimed he had been illegally entrapped and fought the case all the way to the Supreme Court. Naturally, we now know that the RCMP won the war on drugs and there are none to be found anywhere anymore.

At 8:05 on Testament also on CBC Stereo the religious communities of Taize and L'Abri are examined.

On Monday morning on Morningside Graham Barclay's Vivian is dramatized. This is the true story of a young woman who single-handedly brought down the government of Alberta premier John Brownlee. In the summer of 1930, Brownlee accepted a ride home from a speech with the mayor of Edson and his family and encountered 18 year-old Vivian, whose later allegations of personal misconduct (the dirty old geezer) led to the defeat of the United Farmers and paved the way for a Social Credit victory. The story examines the case to find out whether the old coot really did mess with the young lady or whether the scandal was politically motivated. Sounds to me like the pig had his nose in the wrong trough.

Historic forts offer lessons from Canada's past

There is a surprisingly large number of forts along the longest undefended border in the world.

In the East, they are a reminder of the days when Britain and France were at war and, later, when the United States attempted to "liberate" Canada from the clutches of Britain.

Much of the early history of the U.S. and Canada took place on both sides of what is now the border.

Fort George, at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont. has been reconstructed as it was during the British occupation of 1796-1813 and was officially opened in 1950 in a ceremony attended by both Canadian and American military forces.

Originally, an unimposing structure, poorly situated strategically, it assumed considerable importance when war broke out with the U.S. in June, 1812.

In October, troops from Fort George inflicted a serious defeat on the Americans at Queenston Heights, one km to the south. Canadians lost their commander, Major-General Sir Isaac Brock in what was one of the decisive battles of the War of 1812.

In May, 1813, the outnumbered British and Canadians had to abandon the fort to the Americans who rebuilt it on much stronger lines.

The British soon recaptured it and remained in control until the end of the war. Fort George, which had by then been replaced by the more formidable Fort Mississauga, was abandoned in 1815. By that time, the War of 1812 was over.

Today, silent guns still point across the river at Fort Niagara and although the spiked gate and the log palisade look as menacing as ever it is hard to imagine a war ever took place here.

Fort Erie, Ont. across the Niagara River from Buffalo, is another interesting fort. It was built in 1764 and occupied for five months by the Americans during the War of 1812.

Fort York, where Toronto, Ontario's provincial capital, now stands, was captured, sacked and partly burned by 1,700 invading Americans who crossed Lake Ontario in the spring of 1813 aboard 14 ships.

It was a definite American success, but a costly one. Commander, Brigadier-General Zebulon Pike was killed along with several others when a powder magazine blew up.

The fort had been defended by 700 men and the whole population of the town of York, now the metropolis of Toronto, was about 650.

The partial destruction of the small town led to the eventual burning of Washington.

Today, the Fort Guard are dressed and equipped like the soldiers of 1813 and the eight buildings of the fort contain interesting displays of weapons, uniforms and equipment of early days.

The Upper Canada Mace, taken from York in 1813, spent 121 years in an American museum until 1934 when it was turned to its rightful place, at Fort York, by President Roosevelt.

There are several forts of inter-rest along the 540 km route between Toronto and Montréal.

Fort Henry, at Kingston was, in its day, considered the strongest fortress west of Québec. It was built in 1812 and is completely restored with an animated museum and the world-famous, precision-trained Fort Henry Guard.

Fort Frederick, also in Kingston, has one of the best collections of historic weapons in North America. The fort is in the grounds of the Royal Military College.

Fort Wellington, at Prescott, across the St. Lawrence River from Ogdensburg, was the site of the Battle of the Windmill and the Battle of Isle Royale. It has an excellent military museum.

Most Québec forts, like those of the maritime provinces, go farther back in history than those of Ontario.

Fort Chambly, for instance, goes way back to the mid-17th century when Capt. Jacques de Chambly was sent to Canada with his troops by Louis XIV of France.

He built a log fort at the rapids on the Richelieu River from which he carried out several raids against the Iroquois.

Rebels from the 13 colonies captured Fort Chambly in 1775 during the Revolution, but they were forced back to their own lines a year later leaving their commander, General John Thomas, dead of small pox.

During the War of 1812, the fort served only as a supply depot and it was occupied briefly during the rebellion of 1837 and the Fenian raids of the 1860s.

Early French settlers and British and American soldiers are buried in the nearby cemetery. Best-known is General Thomas.

The fort is only 500 m from the Chambly Canal, a direct link for pleasure craft between Montréal, Lake Champlain, the Hudson River and New York City.

Fort Lennox, Québec, 16 km from the American border, was built on a strategically-situated, 85 ha island in the middle of the Richelieu River.

The original fortifications, built by the French on Ile-aux-Noix, were part of a north-south line of forts that included Carillon (Ticonderoga) and St. Frederic, both in the Lake Champlain area.

Being on an island, the fort on

Ile-aux-Noix could make it virtually impossible for any British flotilla to slip by.

The French fort was captured by the British in 1760 after four days of fighting. The garrison surrendered on Aug. 28, 10 days before France capitulated at Québec.

The president Fort Lennox dates from the War of 1812 when a shipyard, barracks, hospital and storehouses were built.

Fifteen warships were built at Ile-aux-Noix during the war, including the largest warship on Lake Champlain, the Confiance, which met defeat at the Battle of Plattsburg.

Fort Whoop-up, in southern Alberta, was the largest of the whiskey forts.

Former sports great shows at Galerie Lac Brome

By Merritt Clifton

KNOWLTON — Evan at age 63, Rhoda Eaves is a more exciting athlete than she is a painter. Unfortunately, her paintings rather than her physical talents are on display through July 14 at the Galerie Lac Brome.

At a time when women athletes were rare, Eaves and her twin sister Rhona Gillis were internationally famous swimmers, divers, track and field competitors, and skiers under their maiden name, Wurtele. The Wurtele twins represented Canada in both the 1948 and 1952 Winter Olympics, but never claimed a medal, partially due to injuries suffered in practice.

"We still ski hard," Eaves laughs. "Alpine skiing, if you can believe that." The sisters also golf and wind-surf. "I was a member of the Quebec seniors golf team for seven years," Eaves adds, "so moving to Toronto and having to leave that was a bit of a wrench." Born in Montreal, she still spends her summers in Acton Vale.

So much for biography and charisma. Eaves isn't really a bad artist, either. She has been painting and drawing for as long as she has been involved in sports, and practice has produced fair-to-middling technical skill. "Art has been in the family for years," she notes. "Mother painted. I've always liked to go sketching, around the Townships and the Laurentians."

And there's the problem. When celebrity athletes display moderate artistic talent, their celebrity status helps them sell what others couldn't. Too often they don't develop the drive to excel at art that marks their competitive performance. Too often their work becomes dull, repetitive, commercialistic, uninspired. Eaves is in good company. The blandness afflicting her work also afflicts former major league outfielders Curt Flood and Gene Locklear, who each retired in the early 1970s to paint full-time. Flood never did fully develop his artistic potential; Locklear has made progress only after his original clientele of awestruck baseball fans drifted away.

Eaves, meanwhile, churns out palette-knife oil after palette-knife oil showing essentially the same scenes of sugar-shacks, horse-drawn sugar sleds, and snow-covered woodlots. It's all office-wall stuff, offering no startling colors, no striking composition, nothing out of sync with the piped-in Muzak. At least a hundred other Townships painters offer comparable work at lower prices - but then, they're not famous and never will be.

The Galerie Lac Brome does offer many paintings worth a look at any time. Among this weekend's most outstanding offerings is John Muhl's impressionistic view of the Missisquoi river. Muhl borrows composition techniques from Henri Rousseau, brush-strokes from Rembrandt, to produce a work uniquely his own. Drop by and look around if you're in the area. Just don't expect a lot of the featured exhibit.

A sampling of Rhoda Eaves' work now on display at the Galerie Lac Brome.

John Muhl's view of the Missisquoi river borrows from Rousseau and Rembrandt to create a unique style.

Making Our City Blossom Is Beautifying It

I'm a gardener with some 28 years of experience. As director of our municipal gardens, each year I oversee the planting and care of 500,000 plants.

In my role as president of the committee charged with beautifying Sherbrooke, I'm gratified to see that many others are adopting my passion.

Throughout the city, I've seen an increasing number of landscaped yards and flower-decked balconies, making the setting of our homes much more attractive. Our committee is doing all it can to encourage Sherbrooke residents to participate in the "Ville Fleurie" contest. After all, making our city blossom is beautifying it. And what more original way to contribute to making Sherbrooke more than a city?
