Election round-up

Party leaders urge voters to break with tradition

Prime Minister Trudeau and Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield asked voters Wednesday to break with tradition when they cast their ballots in the July 8 general election.

Mr. Trudeau made his pitch in Yarmouth during a one-day tour of Nova Scotia, which saw 10 of its 11 federal seats go to the Conservatives in the last election. Privy Council President Allan MacEachen was the only Liberal elected. Mr. Stanfield, meanwhile, was in Magog during a heavy day of campaigning in Quebec, a province that elected 56 Liberals, 15 Social Credit, one independent and only two Conservatives in 1972.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis was winding up a three-day swing through southwestern Ontario with a speech in Thunder Bay.

The prime minister supported his bid for more Maritimes support with a promise to appoint a full-time fisheries minister, a portfolio that became part of the environment department four years ago. All the voters had to do, he said, was correct "the mistake made last time of forgetting good Liberal candidates."

TO REVISE PROGRAM
 He told about 700 persons at a shopping centre—his fifth such stop of a hectic day—that a revised fisheries program would be part of a re-elected Liberal government's policies.

Other major proposals were a five-year, $150-million small harbors development program and a fishermen's income stabilization program.

Mr. Stanfield, who already has promised a separate fisheries ministry, said a full-scale economic recession could be avoided only through Conservative policies, which included his incomes and prices controls.

He said a Liberal government inevitably would be forced to impose some form of these controls despite disclaimers to the contrary. But "this could come too late."

FACE PROBLEMS
 Completing a heavy day of campaigning, he told a quiet audience in Magog that "the issue in this election is whether we are going to face up to our problems and solve them all together."

Mr. Lewis told a Thunder Bay audience of about 400 persons that Mr. Trudeau has made "misleading, if not dishonest statements" about the federal budget defeated in the last Parliament.

He said Mr. Trudeau had been telling voters that the budget contained more money for pensioners.

"There was not a word about pensions," Mr. Lewis said. "You pensioners weren't offered a penny."

Earlier in Toronto, Mr. Lewis ripped into the Bank of Montreal for increasing its prime lending rate by a half a percentage point to 11.5 per cent.

In a broadcast interview, he said the bank's move was indicative of how large corporations act in an inflationary climate.

HIGHEST RATE
 The 11.5 per cent rate is the highest since Bank Act changes in 1967 allowed chartered banks to let prime lending rates float freely with economic forces.

"There is absolutely no excuse but greed," Mr. Lewis said. "It's shameful, inexcusable ... and there's no reason for it."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, staying close to home, was in Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, Que., Wednesday, saying he is against a deep-water harbor for the St. Lawrence River because of the ecological effects.

"Natural life is a lot more important than industrialization," he told a rally.

He also came out against day-care centres, saying "the only use they have is to destroy all links in the family unit."

Mr. Lewis today begins another western tour, stopping in Saskatoon to meet a pensioners group, do some mainstreeting and address a public rally.

Mr. Trudeau was in Timmins, Ont., and Toronto while Mr. Stanfield was to leave for Edmonton after taping some interviews in Montreal.

Diefenbaker blasts Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — John Diefenbaker received applause from more than 1,000 Jewish supporters of the Progressive Conservative party Wednesday when he blasted the Trudeau government's "indifference to Israel" and the plight of Soviet Jews.

The former Conservative prime minister attacked what he called Prime Minister Trudeau's failure to speak out in favor of Israel.

In a 90-minute speech at a Hebrew school in Toronto-Eglinton riding, he said Mr. Trudeau disclosed his "callous indifference" toward the Jewish people when he endorsed a Soviet call for an Israeli pull-back from occupied territory.

Mr. Trudeau also has failed many ethnic minorities, including Ukrainians and Czechs by refusing to condemn Soviet atrocities, he said, adding that a vote for the Liberals is a vote against Canada's ethnic minorities.

"Why doesn't Canada speak out for Israel?" he asked. "Canada should raise the heart and soul of the Israeli people and it would be done if I were in a position of responsibility."

ISRAEL REJECTED
 He said Israel had expressed interest in acquiring Canada's Candu nuclear generating system but had been rejected by the government because of uncertainties about Israel's credit.

Meanwhile, he said, Canada seemed to favor selling the Candu system to Iran and other countries of the Middle East, regardless of the consequences to Israel.

The Trudeau government entered into a nuclear agreement "open at both ends" with India and enabled that country to acquire a nuclear capability, Mr. Diefenbaker said. But Israel has been rebuffed.

The Trudeau government had undertaken foreign policies "of appeasement to our enemies and condescension to our friends". As a result, he said hundreds of Marxists from Chile have been admitted to the country.

"The Chilean Marxists have been given $400 a month to pursue their activities in Canada, but Trudeau ignores the plight of peoples persecuted by the Soviets."

RECALLED VISIT

Mr. Diefenbaker said that he was visited last year in Ottawa by Josef Cardinal Slypi, leader of the world's Catholics of the Ukrainian rite, who thanked him for speaking out against Soviet oppression in the early 1960s.

"Cardinal Slypi threw his arms around me and embraced me for speaking out against the Soviets," he said. "Trudeau's silence is a disservice to ethnic minorities."

Milk money spreading everywhere

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of the Senate Watergate committee says it has evidence that Senator Hubert Humphrey's former campaign manager helped engineer a scheme to funnel $137,000 in illegal corporate aid to Democrats, including Humphrey.

The campaign manager, Minneapolis lawyer Jack Chestnut, refused to testify under oath about the affair on grounds he might tend to incriminate himself, the staff said in a confidential report.

A former top campaign aide to Representative Wilbur Mills, Joe Johnson, also invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to testify about apparently illegal aid to Mills's brief 1972 presidential campaign, the report said.

It said Humphrey's 1972 presidential campaign got $25,000 in apparently illegal corporate aid from the largest United States dairy co-operative, Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI). The $25,000 was part of a total of $137,000 in illegal contributions from AMPI, the report said.

And, in separate donations, the report said, Mills's presidential effort got $75,000 in corporate aid from the milk producers and another $15,000 corporate aid from a sister dairy co-op Mid-America Dairy Inc.

A spokeswoman for Humphrey said he had not seen the report, and he "won't want to comment on it until it is in its final form."

Mills could not be reached for comment. The report said that both Humphrey and Mills have been asked to submit to interviews with one of the committee's members, but that neither complied with the request.

The report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, was circulated to members of the committee Wednesday, but hasn't been adopted by the committee.

One section of the two-volume report focuses on Chestnut's role in the payment of $137,000 to a Minneapolis computer-mail firm for lists of potential Democratic voters used by Humphrey and other Democrats in 1971.

The report cited no evidence that Humphrey or the others who benefitted from the arrangement were aware themselves that corporate money was paying for the lists, which were compiled for use in Iowa, Oklahoma, Kansas and South Dakota.

But it said $25,000 of the total went for Humphrey's presidential campaign, and said "there is evidence that Senator Humphrey's campaign manager was aware of and promoted this illegal payment."

Chestnut did legal work for the computer-mail firm, and also had been employed secretly for eight months in 1970 by the milk producers, who paid him $625 a month through another lawyer, the report said.

PROJECT BEGINS — Construction on the $2 million downtown revitalization project began Tuesday when workmen moved onto Wellington Street North to demolish the old sidewalks. Traffic flow has been reduced to one lane and municipal buses have been rerouted.

Leaders "stupid" in extradition argument

MONTREAL (CP) — There was no extradition agreement for the kidnappers of James Cross and federal party leaders are playing on the subject to win votes, a lawyer who engineered the British diplomat's release said Wednesday.

"I believe Trudeau and Stanfield are both being very stupid," said Bernard Mergler. "Nobody discussed extradition at that time; the Canadian government just wanted Cross liberated without any shooting and approached Cuba to ask them a favor."

Reports that three of the four men charged with the Cross kidnapping have left Cuba where they were flown after the diplomat's release and now have turned up in Paris have aroused speculation they could be brought to Canada to face trial.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said the Canadian government has no plan to seek extradition, while Mr. Stanfield maintains the Canadian people would be very anxious to see the kidnappers "brought back to justice."

The Cross kidnapping ended Dec. 3, 1970, almost two months after his abduction, when Jacques Lanctot, Jean-Marc Charbonneau, Jacques Cossette-Trudel and Yves Langlois, along with some members of their families, were granted safe conduct to Cuba in return for the release of the British trade commissioner.

Mr. Mergler said there was no written contract at all.

Regiment warmly welcomes Queen Mother

TORONTO (CP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth topped a full day of public appearances Wednesday with a five-hour ceremonial dinner for 1,000 guests of the Toronto Scottish and the Loyal Societies.

The 73-year-old Queen Mother, Colonel-in-Chief of that regiment, received a warm welcome, gifts and much praise from invited guests and thousands who lined streets throughout the day.

Her Majesty told dinner guests the unity of the Commonwealth finds expression "through such loyal and endearing associations as yours—Fraternal, benevolent and military."

The select company included Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon, former governor-general Roland Michener, Toronto Mayor David Crombie and officers and wives of Toronto regiments, who dined on an eight-course meal of Cornish game hen and French wines.

SEE CROWN AS SYMBOL
 The Queen Mother said Canadians, who cherish links with Great Britain, help "all Canadians to see the Crown as a symbol of national sovereignty belonging to Canadian citizens of every national origin and ancestry."

Canadians from non-Commonwealth nations are able to choose "their various ways of being Canadians, respecting others, but not forsaking their own traditions," she said. "They owe much to their own efforts, but they are also sharing an inheritance" which the Loyal Societies help to preserve.

"You are all part of a new and developing Canada which at heart is still the Canada with which I fell in love when I first came here 35 years ago."

The Queen Mother's seven-day visit to Toronto and Montreal which ends Monday with Dominion Day celebrations is her sixth to Canada. She first came in 1939 with her late husband King George VI.

Earlier, she met with reporters who had covered that first tour. She requested the private reception which preceded a luncheon with the lieutenant-governor and a provincial government garden party for 1,100 at the Ontario Science Centre.

The Queen Mother began her more than 12-hour day of public appearances with a brief stop at the Hospital for Sick Children where a crowd police estimated at 3,000 cheered her.

Today she was to fly to Montreal for a one-day visit to attend civic and military receptions and present new colors to the Black Watch Royal Highland Regiment. She also is Colonel-in-Chief of that Scottish regiment.

The skirl of bagpipes and troops clad in hoden grey fighting kilts have greeted the Queen Mother through much of the tour starting with her arrival Tuesday at Toronto International Airport.

Born in England of Scottish ancestry, the Queen Mother regards herself as a Scotswoman. The pipers awakened her at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

ADD TO COLOR

Representatives of the Queen's Own Rifles, the Royal Regiment of Canada and the Queen's York Rangers, clad in traditional uniforms dating to 1777, added to the military pageantry of Wednesday's royal dinner.

Her Majesty wore a white net organza gown appliqued in gold thread with a flared skirt, a diamond tiara and a pearl and diamond necklace.

She first met with retired officers of the Toronto Scottish.

She received a silver goblet from the regiment and two Canadian watercolors as gifts from the Loyal Societies.

Montreal busless

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Urban Community (MUC) was without bus and subway service today, as bus drivers, subway operators, ticket sellers and information agents employed by the MUC Transit Commission did not appear for early morning shift changes.

A spokesman for the union representing the 3,200 workers said the length of the strike depends on whether or not management shows "good faith" in negotiations to resume later in the day.

Paul Forget, business agent for the men, said about 700 of the 3,200 met Wednesday night and voted to walk off the job in retaliation for a decision by the transit commission to withhold part of the salary of bus drivers, who refused Tuesday and Wednesday to cross picket lines set up at two depots by striking subway security guards.

The bus drivers had refused to cross picket lines, he said, because police refused to give them protection against threatening picketers.

The drivers have also refused to work unless the commission withdraws a ruling requiring them to carry $200 on routes. Drivers maintain carrying such sums invites robbery.

They also have asked the commission to reopen contracts to include a cost-of-living escalator clause.

Magog plant first in purification measures

MAGOG (CG) — June 21st, 1974 Dominion Textile Limited held a groundbreaking ceremony officially marking the beginning of construction of a modern waste treatment system at its Magog plant.

The ceremony took place on the site of the future installations and was attended by the Minister of the Environment Department of the Province of Quebec, Doctor Victor Goldbloom, in the presence of representatives of both the municipal government and the company.

This waste treatment facility, one of the last steps of the water purification program undertaken by Dominion Textile since 1972, at Magog will cost $3.3 million. Work inaugurated at this time should be completed by the end of the year and the total project finished before the date prescribed by the provincial government December 1975.

Mr. Jacques St-Onge, superintendent of the Magog finishing plant, stated the construction of the waste treatment system represented a major capital expenditure for the firm and noted that it was the first to be undertaken by a textile company in Quebec, since the setting of standards by the Environmental Protection Services of the Province.

An earlier water treatment system at the company's Beauharnois plant, built before government's standards were called for, won Dominion Textile an award of excellence issued by the "Association quebecoise des techniques de l'eau".

Nightmare if laws passed

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia's oil legislation passed through the legislature's law amendments committee Tuesday with few changes, despite pleas from oil companies who predict an administrative nightmare if it is adopted by other provinces already eyeing it.

The Gasoline and Fuel Oil Licensing Act and its companion piece, the Petroleum Products Allocation Act, embody the government's philosophy "that the public interest is no longer served by giving the market system free rein over the allocation of petroleum products ... and that we reject world prices at the present time as the proper indication of what the price for petroleum products in Canada should be." Premier Gerald Regan told the legislature on second reading.

This pronouncement was challenged before the committee Tuesday by J.P. Carey, Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.'s manager of corporate affairs in the Atlantic provinces.

He said the licensing act, which brings prices more closely under the jurisdiction of the public utilities board, would control the industry like a public utility but without an assured rate of return.

"Gulf wants to go on record as being opposed to this legislation as unnecessary and unwarranted," he said.

The bill requires oil companies to submit to the board a notice of intent to increase prices, and this would be followed by a hearing within 90 days.

During this period the board could issue an interim order to increase prices. The board would have the ultimate power to allow the increase, order a decrease or have the price remain the same.

IMPERIAL AGREES

Mr. Carey and Trevor Houser, corporate manager of Imperial Oil Ltd. in the Atlantic area, agreed that the licensing act could mean a "horrendous" workload if other provinces follow with similar legislation. Ontario and Quebec were already reported to be considering copying it.

Mr. Carey said the administrative problem of companies having to run to the board every time the price fluctuated could be alleviated by establishing a ceiling price for each product and permit the industry "competitive freedom" to price as it sees fit below that maximum, "only governed by the laws of supply and demand."

These ceilings could be adjusted by the board as conditions change.

"By this procedure," he told the committee, "the board could more effectively administer the act and the companies still be permitted to operate in a competitive marketplace."

But the committee rejected this approach.

Oil company profits came under discussion and Mr. Carey said Gulf Canada "has not in the past or is now making unreasonable profits."

The company's return on capital investment over the last 10 years had averaged six per cent, only going to 10.1 per cent last year for the first time in 20 years. In Nova Scotia the return was 2.5 per cent, or about a cent on a gallon of gasoline.

Labour disputes slow North Sea oil flow

LONDON (AP) — Labor disputes have slowed construction of giant offshore production platforms for Britain's North Sea oil fields and dashed hopes the oil flow will get into high gear next year to save the limping economy. A fortune now is being spent on buying Arab oil.

The latest in a string of delays was announced Tuesday by the U.S. British Occidental Co.

The company, in which U.S. billionaire John Paul Getty has a big stake, said labor problems and production difficulties at its platform construction site in Scotland have set back six months the program to develop its Piper field off northeast Scotland.

The platform Occidental is building there was to have been towed to the field 135 miles east of the Shetland Islands this fall. A spokesman said the rig now will not be completed in time to get it into position in the treacherous waters before the moderate summer weather deteriorates.

So far most of the North Sea platforms being built in Scotland have been delayed by at least six months, and in some cases a year.

Occidental had expected to begin piping oil ashore from the Piper field by next April. Instead, it said it will not commence until the end of next year.

That delay probably will mean the total oil flow Britain can expect from the North Sea next year will be about three million tons.

ENOUGH FOR 10 DAYS

That is only three per cent of annual consumption—enough for about 10 days.

This will come mainly from the Argyll field due to start operating in the fall.

Occidental estimates that the delay will cost Britain about £300 million (720 million).

British Petroleum and the Shell-Exxon consortium, two of the biggest outfits drilling in the North Sea, already have announced delays due to platform construction problems at their major Brent, Forties and Auk fields.

BP, however, is completing plans to tow a production platform out to the Forties field, just south of Piper, in a few weeks.

The field, with an estimated peak production rate of 20 million tons a year, is not expected to start pumping oil through an undersea pipeline to the Scottish coast until the end of 1975.

Shell's Auk field already is a year behind production schedule and is not expected to hook into the pipeline system now being built until next summer.

Meanwhile, Esso announced Tuesday it has struck oil in the Irish sector of the Celtic Sea. The company declined to say how big the discovery is.

Oil reserves in British waters have been officially estimated at between two billion and three billion tons, enough to supply Britain for 50 years.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market were sharply lower in light trading Wednesday.

The industrial index fell 1.43 to 186.81, golds 24 to 416.96 and western oils 1.73 to 181.86. Base metals rose .30 to 79.85.

Thirteen sub-components of the industrial index fell while three rose. Industrial mining and banks dropped the most while oil refining and construction and material stocks went against the trend.

Declines outnumbered advances two to one.

Boy Scout Activities

DERBY LINE — June 15 and 16 the Boy Scouts of Troop 80, Derby Line, hosted a two day campout for all Webelos Cub Scouts from the Vermont Counties of Orleans, Essex and Caledonia which make up the local District.

The Stearns Brook Campsite at Holland, Vt., was the site for this large gathering of boys and leaders for this occasion. A program packed with activities was planned to relate to Cub Scouting. Throughout Saturday, not only Webelos but also all the Cub Scouts from the district were also invited.

Saturday evening was highlighted with a campfire which was attended by more than two hundred Scouters, Webelos, Cubscouts and their parents.

The Derby Line Boy Scout Indian Dance Ritual Team made their second appearance of the season by putting on a thirty minute fire opening ceremony. To the beat of the tom-tom, a mystified feeling seem to spread over the campfire area as the bell clad Indian Chief and torch bearing Medicine man along with a drummer approached. As the Chief, dressed in a red loin cloth and vest decorated with the thunderbird and geometric designs and a colorful war bonnet silenced the group, four braves, one at a time, stealthily came out of the woods from four different directions, bearing lighted torches to take their places around the council fire.

The braves, in loin cloths, moccasins and head dresses, then lit six torches as they explained certain parts of cubscouting. The chief completed the pyramid of torches by lighting the seventh torch. With his hand torch, the chief continued to light the council fire from seven feet away as an Indian prayer was chanted.

The medicine man, clad in black with chest plate and wearing a buffalo skin head dress with horns danced around the council fire blessing it with Indian chants and the use of a handmade Indian rattle from bone.

For fifty cub scouts, it was a momentous occasion as the braves brought them forth to be initiated as day campers by being "tapped out" with ashes from the previous council fire. To the beat of the tom-tom, the Indians, danced an Indian dance step to

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market did an abrupt about-face Wednesday, falling back as sharply as it had advanced the day before.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost 11.89 to 816.96, all but cancelling its 12.52-point gain in a technical rally Tuesday.

Losers swamped gainers by three-to-one on the New York Stock Exchange as turnover continued light at 11.41 million shares.

Stanfield urges tradition break

MAGOG, Que. (CP) — Robert Stanfield asked Quebecers would be represented in a new Wednesday night to break with government.

The Conservatives held only recent tradition and support a Progressive Conservatives government, which he said could avoid full-scale economic recession in Canada.

He told about 350 persons in a high school auditorium that a Liberal government would be about 100 persons at a yacht club forced to impose some type of price and incomes controls.

But, he said, "this could come too late."

In order to avoid a full-scale recession, the issue had to be faced now and only a Conservative government was willing to do this.

"I don't believe we can have inflation without endangering our economic institutions and even our political institutions."

He said that in two, three or four months, any government would be forced to impose controls.

He then drove about 60 miles southeast of Montreal to this town for his major speech of the day.

At the senior citizens' home, Mr. Stanfield talked about how his party's proposed incomes and price controls would help pensioners and how his government would be determined to assist all those on fixed incomes.

WANTS UNITY

At the yacht club, again speaking entirely in French, he appealed for more Conservative members from Quebec so that all provinces would be united in the fight against inflation.

Here, he criticized the Liberals for allegedly distributing literature that used the terms "Monsieur Trudeau" and "Mr. Stanfield." This reflected a party that was "desperately trying to hang on and grab every seat it can in Quebec."

He also hit out at the Liberals for making a series of election promises he said would cost Canadian taxpayers $2 billion.

"Making promises is not governing," he said. "It is a joke."

He said Quebec has a history of leading the way toward social changes and he appealed to the voters to switch their allegiance.

Completing a heavy day of campaigning in Quebec, Mr. Stanfield told a relatively quiet audience that "the issue in this election is whether we are going to face up to our problems and solve them all together."

OUT OF STEP?

He said that in the last two elections—in June, 1968, and October, 1972—the other nine provinces had rejected the Liberals only to have them saved by Quebec.

He said Quebec has a history of leading the way toward social changes and he appealed to the voters to switch their allegiance.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE IN LENNOXVILLE — Irene Pelletier, Liberal incumbent in Sherbrooke riding, met with approximately 65 voters in Lennoxville last night. He answered questions concerning his last term in office and spoke about Liberal party policies. Along with him were Liberal supporters Doug Patrick, Robert Nichol and campaign manager Roland Boulanger.

Pelletier says budget was good

LENNOXVILLE — (CC) — Liberal incumbent in Sherbrooke riding, Irene Pelletier, said that during the last parliament he had tried his best and promised to continue his work if re-elected to the federal government July 8.

Speaking to approximately 65 voters at the Masonic Hall in Lennoxville last night, Mr. Pelletier said the Liberal party had done a "responsible job" and asked that the Trudeau government be re-elected in order to continue "its good efforts."

He took time to blast David Lewis and the New Democratic party and claimed the Progressive Conservative's price and wage control platform was "unworkable."

He said that if the Liberal government was re-elected it would pass the same budget that the PCs and the NDP ganged up against to force the "unwanted election."

"It was a sound budget and a good budget," Mr. Pelletier said. "Everyone agreed it was a responsible budget."

Closer to home Mr. Pelletier reviewed his first 18 months in Ottawa.

One of his first election promises, he said, was to keep the voters of his riding informed. With newsletters four times a year and local media co-operation he said he was able to do so.

He added that he had worked to get government aid for industry and during his term 13 or 14 new industries, creating "more than one thousand jobs," were opened in Sherbrooke.

If re-elected he would continue, "Of course I would like to see more grants and industries in Sherbrooke," he exclaimed. "I will work for that."

He pledged that he would defend the wants of the voters in the riding. "It is not up to me to decide what the local priorities are," he said. "It is up to the local people, the associations and the groups. When the priorities are known I will work for them in Ottawa."

If Mr. Pelletier had any regrets during the last parliament there was one which stood out more than the others. "I only wish I had been able to speak more in the house," he said, "but as you know when there is a minority government the ministers do most of the talking for the government."

Mr. Pelletier isn't afraid to differ with Liberal party policy, as he showed in response to a question, Wednesday. A senior citizen asked why the government "hadn't seen fit to cut income taxes" for the country's elderly.

"I think the policy is unfair and unjust," Mr. Pelletier said. "There is no reason why senior citizens who have been able to put a few thousand dollars away for their retirement should have to pay part of it to the federal government."

"We have discussed this in caucus," he added. "It seems that it isn't a priority of the government."

Mr. Pelletier exclaimed that many of the problems which face the county are international in nature. He mentioned the energy crisis and inflation, both caused by factors which the Trudeau government had no control over.

Light hearted comedy will open Summer Theatre '74

PAUL CRAIG

MAUREEN MCRAE

One of the most spectacularly successful comedies in American stage history — "Barefoot in the Park" will open Summer Theatre 1974 at the Piggery Theatre in North Hatley from Tuesday, July 2nd to August 3rd.

Written by Neil Simon, the most acclaimed author of light-hearted plays of the 1960s, "Barefoot in the Park" has the credentials of having been one of the biggest smash hits in American stage history, running on Broadway for over three years. This is the third in the row of phenomenal Simon successes, following after his smashing debut in 1961 with "Come Blow Your Horn" and his musical "Little Me" the next year. Since "Barefoot," Simon has also scored with "The Odd Couple," another musical called "Sweet Charity" and a comedy at the end of 1966, "The Star Spangled Girl."

"Barefoot in the Park" is concerned with a delightful pair of newlyweds who, after six days of marriage, are learning how to bicker as well as to love each other very much, as they try to organize their lives in a dizzily inadequate little apartment that is located an exhausting five flights of stairs above ground level.

Joyce Campion will be seen as the young bride's mother, a lady of unshatterable propriety which gets uproariously shattered by her daughter's improbable domestic arrangements. An impressive list of credits behind her, Miss Campion has just completed a season at the St. Lawrence Centre in Toronto where she played in "Trelawney of the Wells," "Colour the Flesh of the Colour of Dust" and "The Good Woman of Settsuan".

Montrealers will remember her acclaimed performance of Linda Loman in Centaur's "Death of a Salesman" and her incredibly funny portrayal of Mary Deweller in "How the Other Half Loves" both at La Poudriere and the Piggery.

During three seasons at Stratford, Miss Campion's roles included Carlota in "The Duchess of Malfi"; Ursula in "Much Ado About Nothing"; and Lady Montagu in "Romeo and Juliet".

Maureen McRae and Nicholas Kilbertus will be portraying the flighty young bride and her earnestly trying-to-cope young groom. Miss McRae was recently seen as Celine in Tarragon's production of "Four to Four" while Mr. Kilbertus has come to the Piggery directly from playing Tom Roche in Playwrights' Workshop's production of "Marsh Hay".

Paul Craig plays the aging but still - on - the - prowl upstairs neighbor with an inclination toward exotic food and drink. Easily recognized as Philip I and II in CBC's "Whiteoaks of Jalna" series Mr. Craig has had extensive theatre experience in both Canada and England. At the Shaw Festival he played Broadbent in John Bull's Other Island"; Higgins in "Pygmalion"; leads in "The Millionaire"; "Missalliance" and "The Apple Cart". Mr. Craig also played Father St. Albans in Stratford's acclaimed "Hadrian VII" and the role of Dr. Astro in Centaur's "Uncle Vanya".

Nolan Jennings and Captain Edward Brown complete the cast who are being re-hearsed under the direction of Roy Higgins. Artistic Director of Montreal's new Playwrights' Workshop Theatre, Mr. Higgins directed last year's opening production of "Private Lives" at the Piggery. Earlier this spring, he directed Saidye Bronfman Centre's production of "Head, Guts and Sound Bone Dance". He had come to the Piggery immediately following the direction of Playwrights' Workshop's tribute to Merrill Denison, "Marsh Hay".

FUND-RAISING FOR TOWNSHIPS CLUBS

The Piggery will also be offering special group rates. Not only will there be the regular discount per number of people but this summer will cater to those groups, clubs and organizations trying to raise money for their own causes and charities. As The Piggery will only charge a nominal amount for each ticket, any fund-raising club may then sell its members and friends the seats at the regular or even increased price and so pocket the balance toward their project. Receptions before or after the performance may also be arranged.

Homer Tibbits, Cowansville, would have to be withdrawn by the minister of justice. Mr. Leveille then declared he had no proof to offer.

+++ Preliminary hearing in the case of Jack Woodhouse was continued to July 25. Woodhouse, of Chateaugay, is charged with possession of 18 American Express cheques, valued at $1,800, which he knew were obtained through the commission of a crime in Canada.

Crown attorney Noiseux indicated he could not proceed before that date due to the absence of crown witnesses.

Louis Jolin, in defence, asked permission to have one of Woodhouse's parole conditions altered. Judge Normandin refused, saying he had no jurisdiction as they were imposed by Judge Legare.

Woodhouse wished to leave the province for one day to attend his niece's baptism.

+++ Special prosecutor Claude Leveille told Judge Normandin he had no proof to offer in the cases of Robert Blanchard, Ron Tryhorn, Claude Perras, Rodolphe Delorme, Roland Nantel, Frank Butcher, Marc Andre Sylvain, Russell Bockus, and Wilfred Jones. The charges were of public mischief and obstruction tied to the recently settled strike at Consumers Glass, Waterloo.

Mr. Leveille first told Judge Normandin the strike was settled and one contractual clause was the dropping of all criminal charges.

Judge Normandin said he could not accept that argument, and the only way they could be dropped immediately would be for the plaintiff to declare he had no proof, otherwise the charges

BISHOP'S UNIVERSITY LIBRARY HOURS

During the summer, Bishop's University will be operating its library on a reduced schedule of service.

Until July 2, it will be open between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday. It will not open on Saturday or Sunday.

Between July 2 - August 9 — the interval during which Bishop's runs its summer school program — it will open at 8:30 a.m. and close at 9 p.m. on weekdays. On Saturdays, it will be open between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. It will be closed on Sundays.

From August 10-27, the hours will return to 8:30 a.m. - 4:40 p.m. on weekdays. Saturdays and Sundays will see the library closed.

On August 28, with the resumption of classes by Champlain College, the library will resume its normal schedule, opening at 8:30 a.m. and closing at 11 p.m. on weekdays. On Saturdays, the hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Sundays, they will be 1:30 p.m. - 11 p.m.

CHAMPLAIN SUMMER SCHOOL PROGRAM

The Lennoxville campus of Champlain Regional College will offer seven courses during the summer, including introductory physics, intermediate French, short story, introductory typing, origins of culture, introduction to physics and humanities. The courses were selected on the basis of popular interest shown before mid-June.

AGRS CLEANING MAINTENANCE

The cleaning and maintenance crew at Alexander Galt Regional High School will be at full strength, as of the beginning of July. Wendell Sparkes has told commissioners of the Eastern Townships Regional School Board.

Mr. Sparkes, director-general of the board, says he is confident the board will be able to operate a more successful service during the 1974-75 academic year than was provided by contracted maintenance companies in the past.

"While it is unfair to declare any great progress, we did incur a saving during the month of June and I believe that we did just as well in cleaning the school with our skeleton crew as Empire Maintenance did with its full crew," he reported to commissioners.

Between June 1 - June 17, six persons were on staff and, since then, another has been added. The full complement for the cleaning and maintenance functions, including security, is about 24 persons.

ETRSB TRANSPORTATION 1974-75

The Eastern Townships Regional School Board has received governmental authorization to utilize 97.44 buses for student transportation throughout the 1974-75 academic year.

According to ETRSB director-general Wendell Sparkes, the school board administration intends to use 96.55 passenger buses and two station wagons on its routes. In addition, the board plans to maintain eight spare buses for use in case unforeseen difficulty arises with one of the buses.

Mr. Sparkes has suggested the board may decide to eliminate all runs currently maintained for kindergarten children alone. At present, however, this suggestion has been directed specifically at routes of this nature in Sherbrooke, Ayer's Cliff and Danville.

The parties agree

In a confused and flabby election campaign, one hard fact has emerged. It is that all major political parties are prepared to enforce some kind of direct controls over the inflation now demoralizing the Canadian economy. Under any government elected on July 8 the existing haphazard control methods will be expanded and, hopefully, improved.

This fact has yet to dawn on many voters because the Trudeau government has attacked the basic principle of controls with increasing disdain for the last two years as unworkable, impossible, unthinkable. But it has not always followed its own advice. Despite the rhetoric of scepticism and surrender, the government has directly controlled the price of oil and indirectly, by subsidies, the price of milk and wheat. A few days ago, in Vancouver, Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde went further by assuring a group of old age pensioners that the government, if re-elected, would extend its controls over a much wider area. As reported in the Vancouver Sun, he said that, before its defeat in the last Parliament, the government had introduced a bill allowing it to order price freezes and roll backs, based on the findings of the price review board. While the bill has not been passed when Parliament was dissolved, the government would reintroduce it in the next Parliament, Mr. Lalonde said.

However this legislation is described, it is nothing but the machinery of price control to be used as widely, or narrowly, as a re-elected government may decide. It asserts the very principle which Finance Minister John Turner had been vigorously attacking day by day in Ontario while Mr. Lalonde consoled the poor and aged people of Vancouver. Nor is that the end of the government's ambivalence. In agriculture, permanent controls under a different name, already are guaranteed by the government in its plan to stabilize farm prices in times of abundance or scarcity. And the famous "contingency plan" for use, perhaps, if inflation should become serious is a total system of control. Thus applying Mackenzie King's old phrase to new circumstances, the government promises controls if necessary, but not necessarily controls.

Even more ambiguous was a speech by David Lewis in Toronto on the same day that Mr. Lalonde spoke in Vancouver. The New Democratic leader, who had previously called a general system of controls "insane," said his party proposed to control the price of food, gasoline, heating oil and other items "essential to a decent house." This system would be completely open-ended. It would not only cover the main items in the cost of living but, as Mr. Lewis emphasized, would fix lower prices for goods used in Canada than for those exported. In addition, the NDP would fix mortgage rates at six per cent. If general controls are insane, who is looney now?

With all his fixed prices Mr. Lewis proposed no restrictions over wages and salaries, the main cost of production. Such a mathematical impossibility does not daunt him. He squares the circle by declaring that the profits of a few big business corporations, only a few, can be taxed to pay all costs. But his dizzy mathematics have not impressed Premier Schreyer, a more candid socialist, who says that prices cannot be controlled unless some incomes are controlled also.

While Mr. Stanfield's competitors were confusing the public, he did little to clarify his chosen election issue or his own answer to it. His 90-day freeze is clear enough but the more flexible controls to follow certainly are not. Needed from every side for clarification, the Conservative leader apparently has decided to weave through the campaign, if he can, without any specific commitments or detailed plans. The risk of losing credibility, it would seem, is less, in his judgment, than the risk of antagonizing various groups of voters who want everything controlled, except their own profits or incomes.

At least Mr. Stanfield, alone among the party leaders, has recognized the original cause of inflation, which is the disorder in Canada's finances. As he says, there is no magic in controls and there will be no cure for inflation so long as government increases its spending faster than the economy can grow and prints money to pay its bill. If he seriously intends to curb expenditures, balance the deficit federal budget and turn off the primary tap of inflation, then his policy becomes more understandable than it appears to be in those vague speeches that make easy pickings for his critics.

In this confusion, deliberate and unplanned, the central fact remains — that all three parties are committed, whatever they may say, to the principle of economic controls, not as a final solution but as a necessary tourniquet to staunch the inflationary hemorrhage lately running at an annual rate of more than 20 per cent.

Nixon anxious for diplomatic success in Moscow

WASHINGTON (CP) — The weight of both domestic politics and national security are rarely absent from an American president's travels abroad, but such considerations form a compelling backdrop for President Nixon's trip to Moscow this week.

There is a suspicion among some critics of the president that his week in Moscow, like his earlier trip to the Middle East, is designed mainly to distract public attention in the United States from the unrelenting Watergate saga.

Even more grave, however, is the fear that Nixon may be so anxious for a diplomatic success in Moscow, to counter his failing fortunes at home, that he will make dangerous concessions to Soviet leaders on disarmament.

The fear appears to be strongest among those in the Pentagon and in Congress who have persisted in their doubts about Soviet intentions throughout the period of détente — men who at one time believed their hard-line views were shared by Richard Nixon.

Senator Henry Jackson of Washington state, an influential member of the Senate armed services committee, has already raised questions about the agreement on nuclear arms limitation that Nixon signed during his 1972 visit to Moscow.

WATCHES NIXON

Jackson, who keeps one eye peeled for weakness in U.S. defence policy while the other watches his own chances for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, is said to be itching for a fight if the forthcoming Moscow talks seem to produce a U.S. "giveaway."

His concern is shared by other conservative members of Congress and by the leaders of the U.S. military, including the joint chiefs of staff. They believe the Soviet Union came out ahead in the 1972 arms-limitation agreement and fear the next talks will bring more U.S. concessions.

Columnist Joseph Alsop, who frequently reflects the military viewpoint, has written that Nixon "badly needs the appearance of resounding success in Moscow" and may be tempted by an ongoing nuclear arms accord that "could be dangerous advantageous to the Soviets."

Against such foreboding there is, by all accounts, the belief of U.S. state secretary Henry Kissinger that the U.S. must continue to press ahead with détente, seeking whatever reasonable agreements can be reached that would lower the threshold of danger for the world.

Striking a balance between the opposing views may be made more difficult for Nixon because he probably will have to count on the support of the congressional conservatives if the Watergate impeachment process goes to a vote in the Senate.

VISIT UNUSUAL

The forthcoming Nixon visit to Moscow is exceptional in that it will likely feature substantive negotiations involving the president and his Soviet counterparts.

Don Oakley

Free postage: a Pandora's box

By Don Oakley

Rising postal costs are a threat to the free flow of public opinion, says Sharon Stark, editor of the consumer magazine, "Everybody's Money."

An editorial in the magazine's Summer 1974 issue urges its readers to support a bill introduced by Rep. Harold Froehlich (R-Wis.) which would provide postage-free mail service for people writing to their elected representatives in Washington.

This would give the citizenry the same free postage rights that senators and congressmen have. It would, says the editorial, open the door to more "input" from the public and more responsibility on the part of our elected representatives "in this era of distrust in government at all levels."

The magazine notes that since first-class postage went up to 10 cents it has received much less mail and wonders if it could be that its readers have sworn off letters to the editors as one way of fighting inflation.

"Sooner or later," says the editorial, "consistent postage increases are bound to have an adverse effect on freedom of expression, and hence, our entire political process."

There's little doubt that free postage would encourage the sending of a lot more messages to Washington. The question is, how many of them would really be necessary and constructive? Despite inflation, if a person has a beef he thinks is important — or even a compliment — it would seem that he can still afford a dime for a stamp.

Anyway, nothing in this world is "free." To subsidize free mail to Washington, the Postal Service would probably just turn around and raise the rates on all other mail.

A 'comical' prediction

Some will say it's part of the current "nostalgia" kick. Others will attribute it to the search for "relevance." Still others may suggest it's the result of the discovery in the 1950s that "Johnny can't read."

Whatever the reasons, the fact is that comic books are the craze on college campuses these days.

According to College and University Business Reports, "Comics are so popular that more than 50,000 students now pay a dollar each to belong to a comic book society with chapters on more than 100 campuses."

A number of colleges and universities offer noncredit courses using comic books, including Brown, Tufts, Indiana, Texas Tech, Bowling Green, Auburn, Hunter, Brigham Young and Wisconsin.

The comic book industry, which was born about 40 years ago, hit its peak during World War II when sales were estimated at 600 million a year. Primarily due to television, circulation declined in the 1950s to an annual rate of less than 200 million. Growth resumed in the 1960s, and currently more than 300 million comic books are sold annually.

Some 25 per cent of young adults now read comic books or magazines, particularly at the college level. A trend toward topicality has captured the affections of a sophisticated new generation of readers, says publisher Stan Lee, who puts out a number of comic books, including one called "Crazy," a satirical magazine ribbing the establishment.

Lee insists that besides being entertaining, comic books are educational. Studies have shown their value in teaching youngsters how to read and develop their skills at comprehension. Comic books utilize a vocabulary of 20,000 words, he says. The college graduate level is 30,000 words.

"Within the next decade," he predicts, "it is my belief that comic books will come into their own as an educational medium and be universally recognized as perfectly viable forms of communication, education and art."

More paper, less fuel for the fire

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA)

A secret meeting at the White House a few days ago called in key energy officials from the departments to discuss new conservation measures.

But there was no meaningful discussion. The head men at the Federal Energy Office had made up their minds; views of the government's top practicing energy experts were clearly not wanted.

Curiously enough, the White House plan as outlined in these sessions, will not attack the major problems. It will add to the paper work, the costs and the complexities of operation for many companies through the United States for years ahead. And it will increase the number of federal bureaucrats. The plan, in the main, requires more inspections and more reports.

Specifically, the proposal would require any company receiving a government contract of $50,000 or more to meet the FEO standards for illumination, heating and air conditioning.

That is, the temperature of buildings, offices and plants could be raised no higher in the winter than government standards, or brought lower in the summer by air conditioning. The lighting would be no brighter than government specifications called for.

The companies concerned would be required to provide for regular inspections and make required reports to show they were making the inspections. They would have to be able to prove they had developed an accurate method of checking on these matters throughout their operations. One ranking government energy expert estimates these new regulations will add $10,000 to the administrative costs in a $50,000 contract.

This is picaresque stuff. Businesses, small businesses especially, are already smothered in reports and regulations. And while there would be some savings from these measures, this is not where the major gains are to be found.

The loss of energy through insufficient insulation, the failure to preheat sufficiently in industrial processes, the discarding of heat which could be recycled, the lack of automatic controls and the widespread failure to adjust furnaces regularly to make for more efficient fuel consumption — these are the problems which require attention.

There is a host of practical, already-developed methods for more efficiently using energy. Many of these are not costly; some are. Considerable numbers would more than pay for themselves over the long run in dollars saved from cut-backs in the amount of energy required. In some companies abroad, production has been increased 25 per cent while cutting back energy use by 20 per cent through the use of computer controls. The payoffs are in this sort of imaginative improvement.

But when energy engineers at the White House meeting attempted to bring these arguments into the discussion, they were waived down.

This kind of conservation, is the major hope for handling this nation's energy crisis in the several years just ahead. Sizeable new production from Alaska's North Slope, from nuclear energy, from new oil wells and secondary and tertiary production from old wells, and other sources will not be so quickly available. Dribbling and dabbling solutions won't do.

Rather than more checking, more forms and more restrictions, what's needed, first of all, are incentives for increasing the efficiency of energy use and low-cost loans for businesses and other consumers who install energy-saving devices. The government, in addition, must take steps to assure the availability of materials and components necessary for making the efficiency devices in the numbers needed.

New CIA Watergate link

Jack Anderson's

Washington Merry-go-round

WASHINGTON — CIA front man Robert Bennett, son of veteran Sen. Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, has conceded that he knew a White House burglary-bugging team was on the prowl in advance of the celebrated Watergate break-in.

A secret memorandum, written by his CIA case officer, states that the senator's son withheld vital information from the authorities.

In an interview with my associate Les Whitten, Bennett acknowledged he knew at least three days before the Watergate burglary that White House aide E. Howard Hunt and his second-story crew had plotted to break into the campaign headquarters of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and bug the place.

Instead of reporting the conspiracy to the police, Bennett kept his mouth shut. He also confided to his CIA contact that he had held back information from the original Watergate prosecutors when they later questioned him about the Watergate break-in.

Had Bennett informed the police of the plot to bust into McGovern headquarters, as the law requires, the subsequent Watergate caper would have been aborted and the course of history might have been changed.

This episode is another link in the mysterious CIA involvement in Watergate. We uncovered the first piece of the puzzle as early as April 7, 1973, when we reported that the CIA had "ordered its agents not to talk to the FBI about the explosive Watergate case." Thereafter, we published several reports about the CIA and Watergate, but the full story still hasn't been told.

The CIA used Bennett's public relations firm, Mullen and Company, as a spy front. On its payroll was none other than Howard Hunt, the Watergate conspirator, who came to the firm from the CIA and later moved over to the White House.

Bennett's nephew referred a Brigham Young University student, named Thomas Gregory, to Hunt who recruited the young man as a political spy. Gregory infiltrated into the campaigns of the President's two chief Democratic rivals — first, Sen. Edmund Muskie's staff, then Sen. George McGovern's staff.

But Gregory, a conscientious Mormon, became uneasy about his undercover work. He spoke to his bishop about it, who was concerned about the ethics of the job.

Then Gregory went back to Bennett and explained his misgivings. As Bennett related it, Gregory had been told by Hunt to work late one night at McGovern headquarters and leave a door open so the White House burglars could sneak in.

Gregory informed Bennett that Hunt was "reporting to someone higher up." Hunt's White House connections impressed young Gregory. Bennett said he also felt Hunt would do nothing illegal because "he had a full-time lawyer advising him." The lawyer, it turned out, was Hunt's co-conspirator, G. Gordon Liddy.

Bennett said he advised Gregory "to get out." The troubled student gave Bennett a letter of resignation to deliver to Hunt. Two days later, the Hunt-Liddy team broke into the Watergate.

Bennett was called in for questioning six times by the original Watergate prosecutors. He held back Gregory's vital information out of loyalty to the youth, Bennett claims.

But the prosecutors traced Bennett's long-distance telephone toll calls to Gregory. When Bennett learned this, he called the prosecutors and said: "Look, you've found Tommy. I'll tell you about Tommy."

This helped the prosecutors to break the Watergate case.

Pentagon Puppet: Once again, we have caught Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., playing Charlie McCarthy to the Pentagon's Edgar Bergen. Perched upon the Defense Department's knee, he opens his mouth and the military speaks.

A month ago, we reported that Hebert, the imperious chairman of the House Armed Service Committee, had presented to the House a report on military aid to Saigon which was copied, virtually word for word, from Pentagon testimony.

Now, the crusty, old congressional "watchdog" has done it again. Included in his committee report on the Pentagon's supplemental budget request is a section on the Navy's proposal for a permanent base on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia.

It is practically a carbon copy of testimony offered by Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, the Navy chief, before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on March 20.

Apparently, Hebert's only disagreement with the Pentagon is over grammar. He tinkered slightly with the Navy's paragraphing and punctuation. He also edited out some of Zumwalt's "Is" and "We's" and substituted a few "observers."

"I always knew Hebert and his boys were pushovers for the Pentagon," one of Hebert's committee members told us, "but I never expected them to prove it so decisively. I am ashamed to say that right now the committee is nothing but a rubber stamp for the Pentagon."

Footnote: Repeated calls to the committee for comment have not been returned.

Upcoming celebrations in the Boundary area

BOUNDARY — The coming few days will be holiday weekends and here are a few celebrations offered in the Boundary areas.

First, the evening of June 28, Friday, the Proarts Ensemble concert for piano and strings at the Haskell Opera House sponsored by the North East Concert Association. The concert begins at 8:15 p.m.

Then Sunday, June 30 is the third annual Dominion Day - Independence July 1 - 4 celebrations in Newport, Vt.

This being an International event sponsored by the Border Jaycees who hope for entries from both sides of the Border, in the parade that will travel along Main street in Newport and end at Prouty Beach at 12:00 high noon.

The remainder of the day there is a full program of "Fun at the Beach" planned. There will be food booths, swimming and many other attractions and approximately 10:00 p.m. a colossal fireworks display.

Now float or other parade entries should be entered as soon as possible with Douglas Spates, Elm Street, Newport, Vt. 05855 or phone 802-334-7909 or 8330.

The Jaycees note that this event to be a success is entirely dependent on the participation of organizations and citizens from both sides of the Border and they extend a cordial invitation to people to participate and to visit Newport and the Beach on June 30.

As an added attraction on Saturday evening, June 29 there will be a folk music concert at 8:00 p.m. at the North Country Union High school auditorium, across from Prouty Beach, Newport, with a very nominal admission ticket. The concert will feature Tom Eslick.

July 1, and another big celebration at Hatley, Que. There will be a giant parade starting about 10:00 a.m. through the Village to the Common. Dinner at noon and many fun and booth attractions. This is the 52nd Dominion Day celebration in this beautiful village of Hatley when the whole community turns out to make it a day the visitors will remember until the next Dominion day rolls around.

July 4 and the ninth Fourth of July Independence Celebration at Derby, Vt. A mammoth parade at 10:30 a.m. will start off the day and evening fun packed hours.

Kermit Smith is in charge of the parade and invites entries from both sides of the Border with a special invitation to the July 1 float entries from Hatley to attend.

The parade will start at the north end near the cemetery, proceed through the Village of Derby to the Common where the remainder of the day's events will take place.

There will be a chicken barbeque at noon, talent show, pet show, Little League baseball game, baby contest, you name it and they will have it, even to sugar on snow and the crowning of Miss North Country at 7:30 p.m. in the Junior High auditorium. At 8:30 p.m., there will be an open air concert by the Eastmen Quartet and a fire works display in back of the school in the open field.

Painless treatment offers life-long protection against tooth decay

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dentist Neil Randol says he has found a painless treatment that offers life-long protection against tooth decay.

Dr. Randol, 60, a dentist here for 27 years, told a news conference Thursday he has used the treatment on about 100 patients in the last year and believes it is ready for routine dental practice.

"I believe we are on the verge of a new era in dentistry in which we can envision a whole new generation growing up with no tooth decay," said Dr. Randol.

He said that in his treatment, the teeth are first coated with a mild solution of phosphoric acid, temporarily removing the enamel. After two minutes, a solution of zinc chloride is painted on the teeth.

Dr. Randol said the zinc is absorbed by the teeth and forms a protective wall against germs which cause cavities. He said the enamel grows back naturally within two weeks, enclosing the metallic barrier, which lasts for life.

The dentist said the key to the process is the fact that tooth enamel carries a negative electrical charge, allowing positively charged heavy metals like zinc to cling to it like a magnet.

He said zinc is the only heavy metal that turns white after application, so his treatment leaves teeth whiter than before.

Dr. Randol wouldn't estimate how much the treatment would cost.

financial aid program for FLOOD VICTIMS 1974

The Lieutenant Governor in Council of the Québec Government has just adopted a program of financial assistance for victims of recent flooding which occurred in various regions of the Province since the beginning of the year. To carry out the program, it has set up a Financial aid office — FLOODING 1974.

If you live in one of the designated municipalities listed below and if you were a victim of flooding which occurred between January 1st, 1974 and June 30th, 1974, you may be eligible for assistance.

STEPS TO FOLLOW

1. Obtain an official claim form from the City Hall or the office of the Secretary Treasurer in your municipality.
2. Fill the form out as soon as possible with careful attention to the description of damage sustained as a result of flooding which occurred since the 1st of January, 1974.
3. Do not forget to include the two obligatory signatures on the first page of the form.
4. Return the form immediately, or no later than July 31st, 1974, to the following address:

Office of Financial Assistance to Flood Victims 1974,
Department of the Executive Council
P.O. Box 1557, Terminus Postal, Québec 2.

To make a claim for financial assistance, it is absolutely necessary to obtain an official claim form which is available at your municipal office. Any claim which was made previously by letter or other type of form and addressed to one or another government department, will not be considered or processed.

Boy Scouts activities

DERBY LINE — The above is the theme for the Summer Boy Scouts program, Troop 80, Derby Line. The attendance is reported to be increasing fast in the Troop. Within the past week eight new boys have joined up.

Why? Because they are not in being "The Action Troop" and to prove this, part of the summer program has been announced, which are only a few reasons why any red blooded, fun loving, American lad will want to be a part of the Scouting program.

June 30, a day hike is planned up Mount Washington. Then July 10 a canoe trip on the Clyde river from West Charleston to Lake Salem, Derby, where it will end with a wieners roast on the Lions Club Beach in Derby.

July 14 - 20 a whole week campout on the troop owned Stearns brook campsite where the program will include swimming - campfires - Indian Lore - advancement - fun and adventure. August 6 a Swim-a-Rama and wieners roast at the Lions Club beach at Derby, also in August, date to be announced, a weekend campout at Stearns brook Campsite.

During the summer weeks there will be concentrated lessons in swimming - lifesaving, canoeing - rowing and water safety in general which will qualify Scouts in Scout aquatic relative to tests and badges as well as certify them for their American Red Cross certificates.

These evening classes which will be held in Derby at the Lions Beach will be taught by American Red Cross Water Safety Instructor and two Derby Line Scout troop committee members. These classes will be held free of charge to any registered Derby Line Boy Scout.

So, Boys of the Village, how about becoming a Boy Scout in Troop 80? There is still time to join and be a part of this wonderful summer planned for boys' activities in the great outdoors.

Just a note to parents and boys; during the years of eleven and 18 years your boy leaves boyhood to become an adult and take on adult responsibilities. The question arises, Isn't it only fair that he learn to accept responsibilities and become a leader before he reaches the age of 18. He will learn both these and more through Scouting.

For more information contact Scoutmaster Milton Porter, 873-3279, or assistant Scoutmasters, Ronald Blais, 873-3373 or Bruce Muir, 873-3084.

Grant awarded

MANSONVILLE — A Federal Government grant of $9,410 was awarded Carol McDuff of Mansonville, through the Dept. of Manpower and Immigration. Ten students will benefit through this type of summer employment and many Pottow Township children will benefit as well through the project set up by Mr. McDuff. This type grant is only available to students who apply for it and meet the standards required to obtain it.

The program already in progress is comprised of three teams and is based on the theme "Mansonville Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." Team No. 1, Jeanne Trudeau of Highwater, Roxanne Rouillard, Joanne Marcoux, Carol McDuff and Francis Marcoux. As in the title, Yesterday, this team will research the history of the Pottow Township and will teach those interested, by audio visual, using slides.

This team will gather history of the above teams interchanging from team to team at times. They will help to improve the environment of the Pottow Townships where they are needed and one of their major aims is to make a real clean public beach at Perkins Landing. They will have the collaboration of the Municipality of Pottow.

Volunteer children and young people will be most appreciated. Carol McDuff may be contacted at 292-5727 with any suggestions and volunteers of the grown-ups as well. This group started Tues., June 25.

Wed. evening at 7:30, June 26, the general public was invited to the French school for further information on this project, and on Fri., June 28th at the same hour, some comic films will be shown for the children and their parents or anyone else interested, free of charge.

Mansonville "Tomorrow" will have a team of three picked out of the above teams interchanging from team to team at times. They will help to improve the environment of the Pottow Townships where they are needed and one of their major aims is to make a real clean public beach at Perkins Landing. They will have the collaboration of the Municipality of Pottow.

WI meeting

NORTH HATLEY — The June meeting of the Hatley Center branch of Quebec Women's Institutes was held on June 4. The group had planned an outing to Baldwin's Mills Fish Hatchery and left the Community Hall at 11:00 a.m. under sunny skies. A picnic lunch was enjoyed followed by the meeting around the picnic table.

The meeting conducted by the president, Mrs. A. Cheal, was opened by the repetition of the Mary Stewart Collect.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. G. Bennett and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. John Johnson for Mrs. W.J. Shaw, who was unable to attend.

The minutes of the executive meeting were read by Mrs. R. McLellan. The regular May meeting had been cancelled due to the many activities that the branch were involved in at that time. A letter was received from the Canadian Cancer Society thanking the branch for their participation on Daffodil Day. Several bouquets were sent by the branch to shut-in members and friends.

The Annual County meeting was entertained by the branch in May.

The animal clinic held in April was reported as very successful and a good number of dogs and cats in the community were immunized against rabies and distemper.

A very successful rummage sale was reported, which was held at the hall in April.

The branch participated in the drama presentation at Ayer's Cliff on May 1st. Several members made home made candy which was sold during the evening. Although the skit, Changing Times, did not receive any prize, the members were invited to repeat their performance at the 50th anniversary of the I.O.D.E. at Stanstead College on June 14.

Mrs. Cheal, as branch delegate to Convention at Macdonald College, reported on the day that she and Mrs. G. LeBaron spent there. They arrived at the College in time to attend a meeting in the morning before lunch, the guest speaker in the afternoon was very much enjoyed as well as the presentation of plays at night.

Home Economics Convenor, Mrs. McLellan, solicited food and workers for the dining room at the Antique Show.

Mrs. Johnston distributed F.W.I.C. pamphlets, also tickets to be sold by the branch on a chair to be drawn at the Antique Show for their benefit.

Ditty bags were handed in to Mrs. LeBaron, Welfare and Health Convenor. Several members have purchased articles for the bags, and it was decided that the remaining articles would be purchased from the funds.

The drawing by Mrs. F. Fletcher was won by Mrs. Shaw. Before returning home, a tour of the grounds was enjoyed by the members.

SOCIAL NOTE
Recent guests of Mrs. W.J. Shaw were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Little of Springfield, Mass., Mrs. Howard Little of Lyndonville, Vt. and Miss Norma Montgomery of Montreal.

Crucial lifesaving decisions made by the federal government

OTTAWA (CP) — Crucial decisions that might save thousands of lives around the world are being made in a federal government office tower off Confederation Square two blocks from Parliament Hill.

The decision-makers are officers of the government-financed International Development Research Centre (IDRC) which is arming poor countries with the weapons that industrialized the West—science, education, technology.

A top priority is to help the inhabitants of the semi-arid regions of Africa, India, South Asia, China and Central America save themselves from malnutrition and starvation.

Canadian agricultural and food-processing scientists and their colleagues in other developed countries have a tight timetable for saving masses of humanity, said Joseph Hulise, director of the centre's agriculture, food and nutrition sciences division.

Climate changes and energy shortages have renewed the ancient scourge of famine. Four or five years may tell the story.

The sub-Sahara row of six African countries known as the Sahel region, a semi-arid band at the best of times, is already reeling from the effects of drought.

EARTH COOLER
Climate specialists said a global cooling trend has lowered the earth's temperature 2.7 degrees Fahrenheit since 1945 and may spread drought conditions though the semi-arid regions of Asia and South America.

The warning flags of inevitable crisis are up, Dr. Patrick McTaggart-Cowan of the Science Council of Canada, a former meteorologist, said of worldwide agricultural prospects in a recent McGill University convocation address.

To make matters worse the food baskets of the world—Canada, the United States and Australia, the only countries that are net grain exporters—are low on stocks. Global food reserves have hit their lowest level in two decades.

The research centre, a brainchild of former prime minister Lester Pearson, its first chairman, is modelled somewhat after the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations in the United States, except that taxpayers—not industrialists—are the centre's benefactors.

Research financed by the two big American foundations helped launch the so-called green revolution in agriculture several years ago, Mr. Hulise said in an interview.

BATTLES DROUGHT
Now, with the food production advances of the green revolution negated by drought, the centre is in the thick of an international effort to develop an agricultural science and food technology to support semi-arid agriculture.

IDRC-supported research—some at Canadian universities and some in the countries affected—is aimed at introducing improved drought-resistant varieties of sorghum, millet and grain legumes, the staple crops of semi-arid countries, and improving techniques for their processing.

The centre has a $19 million budget this year, a dwarf beside the $650 million the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) is authorized to dispense in foreign aid.

But about 80 per cent of CIDA money is in conditional grants, which means the recipient countries must observe restrictions on spending it.

Some "third world" leaders consider such foreign aid as only a slight contribution from the rich countries whose privileges are ensured by the present international order, CIDA president Paul Gerin-Lajoie said recently.

NO STRINGS ATTACHED
IDRC, in contrast, dispenses its research funds without strings, aiming at such vital aspects of third world development as agriculture, nutrition, family planning and health, requiring from applicants only a detailed program description.

Research is sorely needed, especially for agricultural science in the semi-arid regions, said Mr. Hulise.

The present plight has its roots in neglect. Colonists, motivated by the dictates of commerce, did the semi-arid regions no favors, he said.

They looked upon sorghum and millet as subsistence crops from which they weren't going to make any money. Instead, they promoted the development of international crops such as wheat, maize and rice.

The agricultural technology that made possible the green revolution was mainly to perk up production of these crops.

Mr. Hulise said some misguided specialists have done more harm than good trying to help. They have not understood that a technology can't always be transferred, that what works in one country won't necessarily work in another. Problems of scale, climate, training and culture had to be tackled.

RESEARCH PRACTICAL

This was why the centre financed mainly applied or practical research in the stricken countries while supporting basic agricultural research in universities here.

The centre has supported more than 200 projects since it was established in 1970.

Almost $4 million has been given for research into the root-crop cassava, which now provides more than half the calories intake of between 200 and 300 million people in semi-arid regions.

A grant of $496,000 was made to the International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics to support development of better varieties of pigeon pea and chick-pea.

Oysters, considered a luxury food in the West, are an important source of protein in some developing countries. The centre gave Sierra Leone $164,500 to help it develop a profitable industry based on the mangrove oyster.

Almost $800,000 has been made available to the Centre National des Recherches Agronomiques at Bambo, Senegal, to breed improved varieties of sorghum intercropped with millet. A grant of $76,800 went to Laval University to support research into drought resistance in sorghum.

The Arid Lands Agricultural Development Program in Beirut, Lebanon, got $76,800 to develop improved varieties of sorghum, millet and grain legumes in North Africa and the Middle East.

If the monsoon rains fail again in Asia and Africa, some experts say there will be a moral obligation for well-to-do countries like Canada to cut their own meat consumption to free feed grain for the world's poor.

To produce equal protein in meat requires seven times more grain in livestock feed than when grain is eaten directly.

Porridge power

DUNEDIN, N.Z. (CP) — A rolled oats company here is using porridge power to beat the country's electricity crisis.

The company, which manufactures a big percentage of the rolled oats eaten in New Zealand as porridge, uses the husks from the oats to fire a steam-powered generator for its electricity.

At times the generator produces more power than the company needs and this is fed into the national grid to help ease the country's power shortage.

The company needs 140 kilowatts each hour of its working day to run milling and rolling machines.

Thousands of tons of oats go through the machines to make products ranging from porridge to baby foods. About a quarter of the oats are discarded as husks.

What your lawyer may not tell you:

Closing: the coziest game in town

"It is my opinion that most American families, even the most sophisticated, find closing on a newly purchased home to be a bewildering and complicated experience. You can literally bury a family with closing cost information and still make this situation a most costly and complex endeavor. I think the basic question that this subcommittee is faced with is how to reduce the unconscionably high cost that American families are facing in closing on a mortgage and how to simplify the transaction."

— Congressman William A. Barrett, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing, in hearings on real estate settlement costs.

By Lew Koch

(Second in a series)

When the average citizen gets "burned" for an extra few hundred or even thousand dollars in hidden costs in buying a home, he has little recourse except to complain about it over cocktails.

But when the same thing happens to a member of Congress, new laws start being drafted.

A congressional investigation into the high costs of settling real estate transactions found that some attorneys were involved in kickbacks, price fixing and a host of legal maneuvers designed to line their pockets and empty those of the poor guy who had just emptied his bank account in order to buy a home.

How does it happen? Well, let's say you're involved in a simple real estate transaction — the selling or buying of a home.

If you're the seller, the real estate broker will impress you with the fact that the both of you want to get the highest possible price for the house. But when he asks you to sign a "standard" contract, the broker may neglect mentioning some of the small print covering (or not covering) such "petty" details as who can negotiate the selling price, multiple listings, fixtures, zoning restrictions, method of payment, default, title and when the broker collects his fee.

If you are the buyer, the real estate broker may urge you to sign a "standard" contract (prepared, of course, by the broker's lawyer). One fact the broker may not mention is that the contract will protect his interest — not yours. The contract may not detail such "petty" items as financing, title, insurance, surveys, taxes, time of occupancy, etc. If you're buying a house and think that the attorney for the institution lending you the money will check everything out — check again. If the mortgage institution (bank, savings and loan, etc.) doesn't get the highest possible interest, they may not be telling you about such "petty" details as what happens if you want to pay off the mortgage ahead of time, what's wrong with the title, special zoning ordinances and closing costs.

As Benny L. Kass, general counsel for the National Homebuyers and Homeowners Association in Washington, put it, "The mortgage industry is one of the most incestuous within our economy. Lenders refer borrowers to law firms and to title companies; real estate firms use their favorite law firms for settlement. And everyone sits on each other's board of directors, sharing the bounty."

"The net result is to deprive the homebuyer the opportunity to shop around for the best loan, the best survey, the best title insurance — at the least expensive price. Let's face it: there is no real competition in today's housing marketplace."

The broker, the lender, the escrow company and the title insurance company all demand and receive the best legal protection. Their attorneys protect them — not you.

One expense involved in buying and selling houses is created by the need to establish title (ownership). The title companies go to the expense of duplicating the usually chaotic public records and consolidate and index them.

These private monopolies (as some reformist attorneys call them) then turn around and, for an astronomical fee, they check (or allow to be checked) those duplicated public records which were originally designed to be used at no cost at all!

And their check usually protects only the institution who has lent you the money — not you, unless you pay an additional fee.

Thus, the different attorneys who have accompanied you through this typical homebuying experience, have not been your attorneys at all. They have been acting in the best interests of their first client (the broker, the lender, the escrow company and the title company) and with your interests a far second. The only way to categorize this kind of behavior is by calling it what it is: a conflict of interests.

The American Bar Association, quite properly, is concerned about such behavior. They realize that if something isn't done about it, and quickly, Congress may pass some stringent legislation to rectify the matter.

Any system that has grown so complicated and so costly is also impossible to reform piecemeal.

Benny Kass offers, instead, one kind of massive and very realizable alternative: put real estate transactions under the same kind of "statute of limitations" that other legal actions fall under. Kass suggests that three years after a piece of property has been sold, no suit against the property would be allowed to be filed. Thus, in one fell swoop, those lengthy, costly 50-year title searches would become unnecessary.

There is another way for the average homebuyer to cut his costs: hire his own attorney, a lawyer who would put the homebuyer's interests first — and everybody else's last. Despite the fact that a few states require buyers to retain counsel, the majority of homebuyers are not represented by attorneys.

The only problem with that, though, is that many lawyers don't want to bother with that kind of petty business. There's far more money to be made working for the interests of the real estate broker, the bank and the title company.

But when enough congressmen feel they've been taken in buying a home, they just might turn around and pass some sweeping legislation which would make it less complicated and less costly to buy your own home.

Teens tingling at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The brashness of youth set nerves tingling in the 87th Wimbledon Championships before darkness descended on Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg.

The success of the top teenagers in the world of tennis was to be determined today, weather permitting. Miss Evert, No. 2 seed among the women, was to resume her match with veteran Lesley Hunt that went to 44 games before it was halted Wednesday night.

Borg, No. 5 seed among the men, was to continue his match with Ross Case which he nearly forfeited in a fit of pique.

Miss Evert, in a match halted 3½ hours by a cold rain, won the first set 8-6, lost the second 5-7 and was tied in the third 9-9.

Borg, playing a second-round match, was leading two sets to one but trailing the fourth 1-4 after hitting two shots out of the stadium in anger because the match wasn't stopped sooner.

THREAT TO STARS
When the two teen-agers arrived at Wimbledon, Miss Evert, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Borg, 18, of Sweden, declared they feared no one, but top-seeded John Newcombe, the 30-year-old Australian who has won here three times, warned it would take more than youthful strength to win the singles trophies.

"Matches on the centre court at Wimbledon are won and lost up here," Newcombe said, touching his head. "Ability and power are not enough."

Newcombe and fellow veterans Stan Smith and Ilie Nastase advanced Wednesday to the third round.

Toronto teen to run cross-Canada July 1

TORONTO (CP) — Mark Kent, a 17-year-old Toronto runner, leaves today for Victoria where he plans to start a 4,000-mile cross-Canada run on July 1.

Kent says he plans to cover about 35 miles a day on his way to St. John's, Nfld., carrying letters of greeting from Ontario Premier William Davis to the premiers of the other nine provinces he will travel through.

Kent, who says his coast-to-coast run will be the first ever completed, has received extensive testing at Lloyd Percival's Fitness Institute in Toronto where he was declared physically and mentally prepared to take on the gruelling trek.

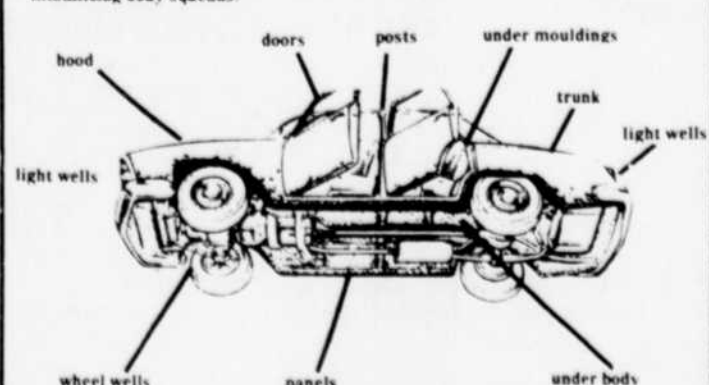

Kent's run is being sponsored by an insurance company which also hopes to raise money for the Olympic Trust fund through a mileage pledge campaign.

The Toronto runner will be accompanied by his brother, Gordon, 22, and a friend, Kevin O'Brien, who will keep pace with Kent in a station wagon loaded with camping equipment.

Edge all-stars 25-22

Rough Riders prove their point

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders proved a point Wednesday night by defeating the Canadian Football League all-stars 25-22 before 15,102 fans at Lansdowne Park.

The 1973 Grey Cup champions have been working out on their own under the guidance of Ottawa University head coach Don Gilbert and they wanted to prove to the public and the Rider club that they could win without their regular coaches.

It is only the second time in the five-year modern history of the all-star game that a defending Grey Cup champion has defeated an all-star team. Calgary Stampeders did it in 1972.

The CFL Players Association and the CFL clubs are trying to settle a lingering contract dispute. The veterans of each of the nine teams have been working out on their own.

"There is a moral in this and I haven't really figured it out yet," said Rider centre and player representative Bob McKeown after the game.

"The Rider veterans proved they can do it on their own without being whipped..."

NIXON HOT
End Rhyme Nixon caught two touchdown passes and Gerry Organ kicked three field goals to lead the Riders to the win.

Jim Young of British Columbia Lions took a pass from Saskatchewan Roughriders quarterback Ron Lancaster for a 55-yard touchdown and Montreal Alouette Terry Evanshen received a 26-yard pass from Hamilton Tiger-Cat quarterback Chuck Ealey for the all-star touchdowns.

Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos kicked two field goals and added a single and two converts for the all-stars while Zenon Andrusyshyn of Toronto Argonauts kicked a single.

The Riders intercepted four passes, three from Lancaster and another from Ealey. The interception of Ealey's pass stopped a late surge by the all-stars.

Two of Organ's field goals resulted directly from fumbles by Saskatchewan running back George Reed.

The Riders also picked up a third all-star fumble while neither Rider quarterback—Rick Cassata and Jerry Keeling—threw an interception. Neither did the Riders fumble in the game.

The Riders had a total offence of 446 yards, 336 by passing and 127 rushing. The total all-stars offence was 443 yards, 342 passing and 101 rushing.

Keeling completed eight of 11 passes for Ottawa for 126 yards while Cassata threw 10 of 19 successfully for 207 yards.

Lancaster completed 11 of 20 for the all-stars for 190 yards while Ealey completed eight of 18 for 152 yards.

Jim Evenson was Ottawa's top rusher with 59 yards on 16 carries while Roy Bell of Edmonton Eskimos led the allstars with 27 yards on five carries.

Nixon received six passes for 203 yards while Young led the stars with 69 yards on two receptions.

Rogers' pitching, hitting blanks Phillies 2-0

MONTREAL (CP) — Steve Rogers snapped a personal six-game losing streak with a four-hit performance against Philadelphia Wednesday night but all Montreal Expos manager Gene Mauch could talk about after the contest was his star right-hander's hitting.

Or, more precisely, the sacrifice bunt which set up Montreal's two-run eighth inning and carried the home team to a 2-0 National League win over the Phillies in a nationally televised game.

"I still can't believe Steve Carlton coming in with a slow curve on Rogers when he knows Rogers has only bunt on his mind," the Expos manager said.

Both Rogers and Carlton, the Phillies super southpaw, handled their opponents with ease before Carlton ran into a jam in the eighth.

Rookie catcher Barry Foote started the winning rally when he singled sharply to left and Rogers came to the plate.

Rogers laid a bunt down the first base line, advancing Foote to second and Ron Hunt followed with a double to left. Bob Bailey scored Hunt with a single to centre.

In the clubhouse, Rogers told reporters his "super sinker" made beating the Phillies easier. "I had my sinker working beautifully tonight. It's my money pitch and when it is on, I'm on," he said.

Both pitchers established their supremacy early in Wednesday's game. Rogers allowed two base runners in the top of the second but got out of the inning with a double play. He did not allow more than one Philadelphia base runner an inning for the rest of the way, walking only one and striking out seven to even his record at 8-8.

Carlton, 9-6, did not allow more than one Montreal base runner an inning until the eighth and wound up with a six hitter, walking one and striking out eight.

It was the second straight shutout for Montreal pitching over the Phillies coming on the heels of Steve Renko's 5-0 one-hit victory Tuesday night.

Ernie McAnally, 5-6, who already has two shutouts to his credit this season, takes to the mound tonight against Chicago Cubs and Bill Bonham, 5-10, as Montreal begins a six-game series.

Final entries for Saturday Queen's Plate today

TORONTO (CP) — "As long as the horse stays sound, you might get lucky and win. There is just too much money around for three-year-olds."

Those are the words of trainer Glenn Magnusson but they could also reflect the thinking of at least a half-dozen other trainers who will be making final entries today for Saturday's Queen's Plate at Woodbine race track.

None of the 15 expected entries carries impressive credentials, and, if 15 start Saturday's 1¼-mile run, they'll be going for a winner's prize of $96,541, second prize of $29,705, third $14,852 and fourth $7,425.

"Except for Police Car, which is unbeaten, they've all beaten each other," said Magnusson who will saddle Aubrey Minshall's Rushton's Corsair in Saturday's premier event for Canadian-bred three-year-old thoroughbreds.

Like E. P. Taylor's Police Car, Rushton's Corsair didn't run in last Sunday's two-division Plate Trial Stakes. Native Aid, owned by George Hendrie of Toronto, won the first division and Amber Herod, owned by Jack Stafford of Toronto, who won the Plate last year with Royal Chocolate, won the second division.

"I wasn't impressed by anything I saw in the Plate Trials, except for Amber Herod," said Magnusson.

LIKES CHANCES
As for Rushton's Corsair, Magnusson said Minshall paid $3,700 for him as a yearling and said at the time that if he didn't turn out to be a racer, then he might be made into a jumper.

Now, however, Magnusson is convinced the horse has as good a chance as any to collect some of the $148,000 gross purse that will be offered here Saturday.

Rushoon's Corsair was beaten by a nose by Norland in the Quebec Derby and has only one win in four starts this year.

Norland won't be entered for Saturday. Andy Smithers, who trains the horse for Bud Wilmott of Toronto, said he'll hold him for the Manitoba Derby July 14.

Smithers is expected to enter Naigo and Rash Move for Wilmott.

Police Car, while winning all four of his starts this year, remains a question mark because he hasn't beaten any of the competition he'll be facing Saturday.

Viscount Hardinge of Montreal, with Butterbump and Noble Answer, is the only owner from outside the Toronto area expected to have an entry in this 115th running of North America's oldest continuously-run stakes race that has had only two Western winners in its history.

New proposals may get players back on fields

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks aimed at getting Canadian Football League players out of the bargaining room and onto the playing fields were to resume here today.

Despite late Tuesday night statements by both management and players that neither could budge from their positions, player association president George Reed told reporters Wednesday night he has new proposals to put before management.

But he declined to say what they are.

The association also said it didn't authorize a picket line thrown up by veteran Hamilton Tiger-Cat players around a practice field for Ti-Cat rookies.

Asked if the idea might spread, an association spokesman said "I don't know but it seems like a good idea."

All veteran CFL players voluntarily retired last week to reinforce their demands for better pensions and higher pay for playoff games.

Both players and management agree that the two sides are

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

See doctor for blood in semen

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 54, married and have three children in their early 20s. I was born with an undescended left testicle.

About two years ago I first noticed a slight trace of blood in my semen during ejaculation. A short time before this I had hit the undescended testicle with the corner of a box when I accidentally fell.

I consulted a doctor about a month later. He examined the prostate and massaged it. When no blood was found in the discharge from the prostate he stated the blood was not coming from the prostate, and he recommended surgery to remove my undescended testicle. I had this done about two weeks later.

After surgery I again found blood in my semen. The doctor sent me to a urologist. The urologist took X rays, urine, and studied my kidneys. There was no growth and no trace of blood in the urine or from the kidneys. He recommended prostate massage and more sexual activity. The prostate was slightly enlarged. After two or three months, there was no improvement and the semen was almost completely blood. My original doctor then sent me to another urologist.

The second urologist examined me thoroughly and said there was an infection in the seminal vesicles. He prescribed massive doses of antibiotics over a period of time. This did clear up the bleeding almost completely for a time, and then it reappeared. He then performed a cystoscopy. There were no tumors. He informs me that he thinks I have small stones in the prostate that are causing the bleeding. Incidentally, I do not have, and never have had, venereal disease. The semen continues to be mostly blood. I would appreciate any opinion you have pertaining to my problem.

DEAR READER — You certainly can't go on having many more testicles removed for the problem. Some doctors believe that an undescended testicle should be removed anyway before it causes trouble.

Blood in the semen is more common than you might think. Anyone who has this problem should have an immediate examination. Blood in the urine is usually more serious and sometimes is related to cancer of the kidneys or bladder. So, it is important not to delay having an examination.

I always remember one of my former patients who had cancer of the kidney, and his first sign was sudden, painless massive bleeding in the urine. Fortunately, he was in the hospital within a day, and within two days had a kidney with a cancer in it removed. His early treatment enabled him to live well for another 10 years. Ordinarily, with the type of cancer he had he would not have lived a year. So, early diagnosis is extremely important and that means an early trip to the doctor, as soon as he will take you.

You had all the right tests for those problems, and it is extremely unlikely that your problem is related to cancer in any way.

Blood in the semen can come from any point along the reproductive tract, including the testicles, the prostate, the seminal vesicles, or along the urethra within the penis. The prostate and seminal vesicles are the most common location.

The seminal vesicles are paired saddlebag-shaped structures. They accumulate seminal fluid much like the gall bladder accumulates bile. Then during the ejaculation they contract, and the fluid is a major part of the seminal discharge. The seminal vesicles do not store sperm, as some sex books wrongly state. They are located at each side of the prostate gland. They are probably the most common cause of bloody semen, usually from inflammation but sometimes from disease of the small blood vessels to them.

The fact that you improved with the antibiotic treatment suggests an infection. The prostate gland can be a source of bleeding, either from an inflammation or from stones. The prostate secretions sometimes harden and start the formation of small stones. Sometimes these can be felt during prostate examination. More often the prostate can be infected.

The infection does not need to be venereal disease at all. In fact, most prostate infections are not from venereal disease, but from other germs. These gain access to the prostate gland apparently from the bloodstream or possibly through the urethra. A common germ causing the problem is from the colon. The treatment for inflammation of either the seminal vesicles or the prostate is the proper use of antibiotics. This is sometimes difficult, and it may take a long time to obtain maximum benefit.

Perhaps the best thing for you to do is to continue to go to your present urologist and continue to tell him that you still have the bleeding. Ask him to check you again to see if there is an inflammation that might be helped with more or continued antibiotic treatment. Then be patient because it may take some time. Meanwhile, keep in mind that you don't have a serious disease, and it is not likely to cause you serious harm.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My friends and I would like to know more about the female hormone, estrogen. There are pros and cons about hormone pills and hormone shots. Is it best to use the hormone pills or the shots? One doctor will give nothing but hormone pills and another just hormone shots. And, what is a half c.c. and a whole c.c.? What is the most that can be taken in a shot?

DEAR READER — Some of the estrogen preparations need to be taken by shot so they can be picked up by the circulation without being destroyed by the digestive enzymes. Other preparations can be swallowed and the active ingredient absorbed in sufficient amounts in spite of the digestive enzymes. So, it makes a lot of difference which preparation the doctor thinks should be used.

There are some individual variations in response to the different medications available. Most women can get along just fine with one of the pill types of preparations. A c.c. is a measurement. It means a cubic centimeter. It is the same thing as an ml, which is an abbreviation for a milliliter (one thousandth of a liter). There are five c.c.'s in a teaspoon. The amount that can be taken in a shot depends entirely on how strong or concentrated the medication is, that is, how much it has been diluted.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on menopause, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for "Menopause" booklet.

Silver anniversary

MR. AND MRS. CECIL GIRARD

STANSTEAD — Saturday evening, June 15, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Girard of Toronto, Ont., were the very much surprised guests of honor for a silver wedding anniversary dinner held in Christ Church Parish hall about 7:00 p.m.

The couple had come to Stanstead for the weekend and to attend the marriage of their niece, Joyce Hyatt and David Archer. They had supposed Mr. and Mrs. Hyatt were having the relatives for a buffet at the hall, but upon entering the hall, they were greeted with Happy Anniversary and Mrs. Hyatt pinned on her blue gown a corsage of lily of the valley and yellow shasta daisies.

As they recovered from their surprise, they were extended good wishes by the 30 guests attending.

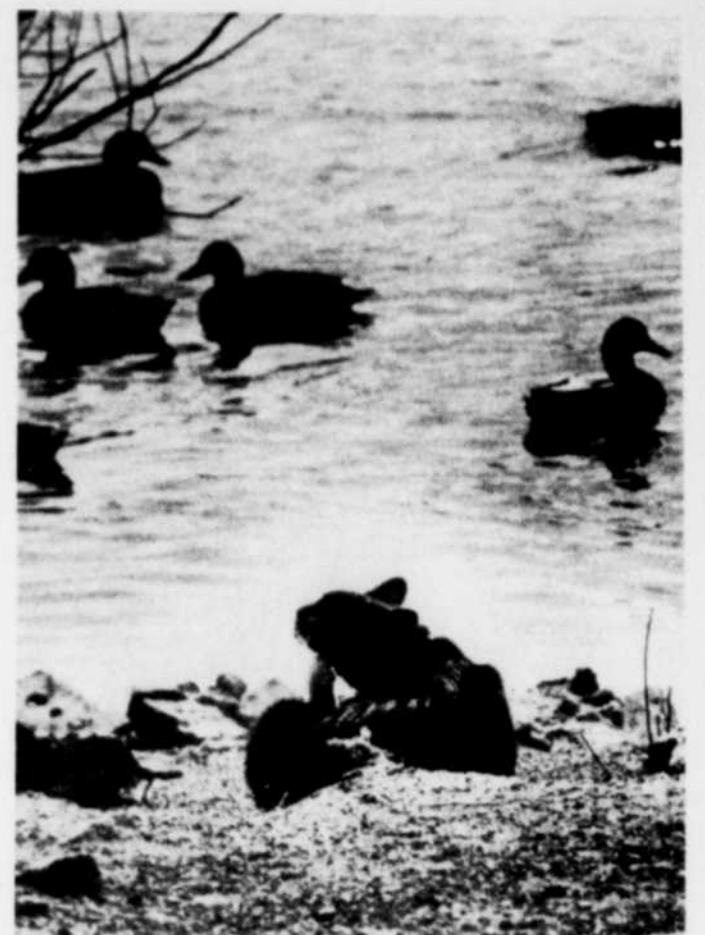

Edward Hyatt, groomsmen at the wedding twenty five years ago, was master of ceremonies.

The family were seated at the long table with the honored guests at the side center. A toast was proposed by Mr. Hyatt and throughout there was a great deal of reminiscing of the days of yesteryear.

Mrs. Hyatt, the eldest of the Girard family, on behalf of the family presented the couple with a chest of an eight piece setting of silverware.

The anniversary cake which centered the table was fruited and made by Mrs. Hyatt. Mrs. Doyon decorated it in white with blue roses and green leaves and suitably inscribed it in blue. This was cut and served by the couple. The table was further decorated with seasonal flowers and lighted candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Girard were united in marriage on May 7, 1949, in Montreal. This union has been blessed with four children and two grandchildren.

HOW NONCHALANT can you get? Birds of any feather ordinarily can be counted on to turn even the most placid housecat into nature's perfect hunter. But confronted with a pond full of ducks, Cinder, a resident with the J. Meyers family of Castalia, Ohio, puts on a good show of being totally disinterested.

position with a promising future to take a job for less pay in the accounting department of a suburban hospital. We couldn't understand it. She said she wanted to "be part of an institution that served humanity."

About three months later, the real reason became apparent. She wanted to become friendly with someone who could help her gain access to drugs.

It was a nightmare. She changed from a bright, energetic, outgoing person into a secretive, temperamental stranger. Some days she was talkative and full of energy. Other days she was depressed and non-communicative. When I found a huge supply of pills and a syringe under her mattress, I knew the answers to many questions that had mystified me.

She is under a doctor's care now and returning to her old self. But it's been an uphill fight all the way.

Why don't hospitals keep all narcotics under lock and key? I'm sure if this happened to our child it has happened to others. Thanks, Ann, for any boost you might give this crusade.—Been

Thru Hell

Dear B.: I know of no hospital that allows employees easy access to drugs. Almost all hospitals have a carefully monitored drug-dispensing system. But no system is fail-safe. Drug addicts are among the cleverest of all thieves, and the most daring as well. When drugs become the center of a person's existence, he will figure out a way to get them.

Dear Ann Landers: I've seen some letters in your column from teen-agers who do baby-sitting, but I've never read a letter from a "career-sitter."

I've "raised" over 50 children, from newborns to 11 years of age. Some mothers insist on calling me "the baby-sitter." ("Say hello to the baby-sitter.") I have a name and the kids use it. So why can't their parents?

Staying with youngsters has been my only source of income for many years. I pay taxes on my earnings. Yet, I've had mothers call and cancel two hours before I was due to leave the house. "Mary is going to stay with a friend," they say, or, "My husband doesn't feel well and we've decided to stay home." Frequently I've turned down other jobs and saved the evening for them. But they never think to pay me when they cancel.

Most of the people I work for are sophisticated, yet they act as if they've never heard of overtime. When they say they'll be home at midnight, and arrive at 2:00 a.m., I get the same pay for my "night's work."

In spite of my complaints, I've been happy with my children. They've kept me active and saved me from loneliness. I guess I just wish people would be more considerate and I figured your column was a good place to tell them.—Granny

Dear Granny: Your complaints could be easily remedied if you would discuss them with your employers instead of Ann Landers. Tell them you expect to be paid if they cancel without giving 24 hours notice. Charge by the hour instead of the job if people don't know the meaning of "overtime." And when they refer to you as "the baby sitter," remind them that you have a name. Simple, isn't it?

Archer-Hyatt united in spring ceremony

STANSTEAD — A pretty late spring wedding took place at Christ Church, Stanstead, on Saturday afternoon, June 15 at two o'clock, when Joyce Arlene, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hyatt of Stanstead became the bride of David Patterson Archer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Archer of Arvida, Que.

Rev. Canon Harold Church officiated for the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Alfred Middleton, sister of the bride, played the organ music and was accompanied by Mrs. Harold Church who played the violin during the processional and recessional. The Junior Choir under direction of Mrs. Church sang Psalm 67, Deus Misereatur, and during the signing of the register, The Lord's Prayer, and All Things Bright and Beautiful.

Mrs. Church decorated the sanctuary using arrangements of mauve and white lilac with white bridal spirea on the Holy Altar. The guest pews were marked with white satin ribbon bows, faced with lily of the valley and blue forget-me-nots, against green leaves.

The bride was escorted down the aisle on the arm of her father and given in marriage by her parents. She was wearing an original colonial gown, made by herself and her mother, Mrs. Hyatt, of heaven blue reflecting silver mystique nylon over matching blue peau-de-soie. The sleeveless bodice featured ruffles at the armholes, around the high neck and in bib effect back and front, from a midriff the skirt slightly flared and was edged with a ruffle from the waist to encircle the slight chapel train and to form a scallop at the left side hemline. She wore a white nylon lace straw picture hat having a side spray of pink baby's breath and carried a colonial of white shasta daisies, pink baby's breath and ivy.

Miss Emily Hamilton of Cookshire, the bridesmaid, was in a princess model of white nylon voile sprinkled with multicolored flower clusters over rose pink taffeta and featured a bertha collar around the scooped neckline. She carried a colonial of white daisies and blue baby's breath.

Miss Debora Middleton, niece of the bride, as flower girl, was in a gown of white nylon voile sprinkled with flowers over rose pink taffeta fashioned with an empire bodice having ruffles at the armhole edge and a bib ruffle, the skirt slightly flared. She carried a natural basket of blue daisies and white baby's breath.

Mr. William Archer, of Asbestos, uncle of the groom, was groomsmen. The ushers were Gordon Hyatt, brother of the bride, from Ottawa, Ont., and Vydas Gurekas of Lasalle. Master Mark Middleton, nephew of the bride was ring bearer and carried the rings on a square satin cushion adorned with satin ribbons and lily of the valley boutonnières.

Mrs. Hyatt, mother of the bride, chose a gown of peach-coral peau de soie with matching color sheer long sleeves gathered to wide cuffs, her accessories were in white and she wore a corsage of white shasta daisies.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Archer was in a two piece gown of silver cloud peau de soie enhanced with silver accessories and a corsage of pink shasta daisies and baby's breath.

Mrs. Norman Girard, of Scarborough, Ont., maternal grandmother of the bride was in a gown of blue multicolor floral georgette crepe over blue taffeta, her accessories were in white and her corsage, pink carnations and baby's breath.

The bride's paternal grandmother, Mrs. Charlie Hyatt, Lennoxville, was in a gown of turquoise knit having an all over lacy pattern, she wore toning accessories and a corsage of pink carnations and baby's breath.

It being a beautiful day, the reception was held on the lawns of Ripplecove Inn, on the west shores of Lake Massawippi, Ayer's Cliff, where colorful table covers and the song of birds added to the occasion.

The reception line was formed and good wishes extended the happy couple. Punch was served and a toast proposed by Mr. William Archer to the couple. The groom responded and proposed a toast to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Archer, Mr. Gordon Hyatt proposed a toast to the bridesmaid and flower girl. He also read telegrams of congratulations.

The wedding cake, a light fruited, was made by the bride and her mother, Mrs. Hyatt, and decorated by Mrs. Horace Doyon in Italian motif with lacy wedding bells, scroll and tangerine color roses. High columns separated the double tiers which were enhanced with white flowers, the bride and groom under a wedding bell between the tiers. The initial cut was made by the couple. Later, the cake was circulated by Mark and Debora Middleton in a basket to all the guests.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Archer left for their overnight stay at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec City before leaving the day following for their honeymoon to Lake HaHa in Northern Quebec. On their return they will reside in Montreal.

The bride travelled in a pastel pink ensemble having a pleated skirt and belted jacket over a white turtle neck, her accessories were in white and she wore a corsage of yellow roses and lily of the valley.

Miss Maureen Ethridge of Scarborough, Ont., a cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

Guests attended from Arvida, Montreal, Compton, Lennoxville, Sherbrooke, Ayer's Cliff, Coaticook, Asbestos, Thetford Mines, from Inwood, Kingston, Waterloo, Ottawa and Toronto, Ont., and the Boundary Villages.

As the bride departed, she threw her bouquet which was caught by Miss Diane Hyatt, a cousin of the bride, the traditional blue garter, thrown by the groom was caught by Lyndon Cruickshank.

As the bride and groom came out of the church they were amused to see on the sidewalk his bicycle, decorated and bearing a sign "Quebec City or Bust." A cart-trailer was hitched to the bike for the bride.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Archer are bicycle enthusiasts and he came to Stanstead, previous to the marriage, on his bike.

The bride is a graduate of Sunnyside High, Rock Island, and of Bishop's University with her B. Sc. degree, from Queen's University with her M. Sc. and will graduate from McGill University this year with her D. Ed. degree.

The groom is a graduate of Saguenay High, Arvida, Bishop's University and from McGill where he is preparing for his M.D. degree.

REHEARSAL PARTY

Following the wedding rehearsal on Friday evening, June 14, for the marriage of David Patterson Archer and Joyce Arlene Hyatt on June 15 at Christ Church, Stanstead, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Archer of Arvida were host and hostess for the rehearsal party.

This was held in the lounge at Ripplecove Inn, Ayer's Cliff and attended by the immediate families of the couple and their attendants.

Buffet refreshments were served. The bride and groom exchanged gifts and they presented gifts to their groomsmen, bridesmaid, flower girl, ring bearer and ushers.

A social as well as get acquainted evening was enjoyed.

Givran-Cadarette wed

MANSONVILLE — The wedding of Miss Doris Jane Cadarette of Mansonville, and Mr. Barry Albert Givran of Brome, took place in the Mansonville St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sat., June 1st, at 1:30 p.m. Rev. I.N. Dodd officiated at the beautiful double ring ceremony.

The bride was escorted down the aisle to her waiting groom by her godfather, Mr. Bernard Hamelin of Mansonville, while the organist, Miss Marion Atwell, played The Bridal Chorus. Miss Atwell also played O Perfect Love during the signing of the register and Mendelssohn's Wedding March upon departure of the wedded couple.

Miss Cadarette's bridal gown was of white crepe pompadour with an empire waistline, long sleeves and ring collar. The lace trimming the dress was highlighted with miniature pink flowers and green leaves and a tiny pink bow caught at the back of the waist. Her three tiered waist length veil was edged with lace and held by a lace camelot cap. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink bridal roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Sheila Barlow of Montreal, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Barbara Oliver of Vaudeuil, and Miss Dale Givran of Brome, sister of the groom, wore floor length gowns of blue dotted swiss with short two-layered bell sleeves, empire waist, low square neckline with a wide ruffle at the hemline. A long sash fastened at the back, flowed freely. The maid of honor wore elbow length gloves, and a large brimmed white hat with pink daisies and carried a white daisies bouquet tied with a pink bow. The bridesmaids wore the same type hat with blue daisies and a braid of white nylon which ended in streamers trailing at the back, and they wore short white gloves and carried a white daisies bouquet tied with a blue bow.

The flower girl, Rhoda Pearson, cousin of the bride, from Knowlton wore a floor-length white gown with a print of pink roses and pink and blue daisies with pink ribbon in her hair. She carried a basket of daisies and wild violets.

dropping the violets in the aisle leading to the altar.

The ring bearer, Stephen Daigle, cousin of the bride from Cowansville carried a white satin pillow trimmed with lace and ribbon streamers and lily of the valley: the rings were held in place by ribbon and a gold circle.

Best man was a friend of the groom, Mr. John Matovka, and ushers were Ricky Givran, brother of the groom, and Guy Daigle, cousin of the bride, from Cowansville.

The reception was held in the Fairview Hotel, Brome, Que., where approximately 100 invited guests enjoyed a cold-cut and salad buffet dinner and dancing to the dance band music. The traditional wedding cake graced the head table where the bridal party sat.

For her honeymoon outfit, the lovely bride wore a street length peach and white fortrel dress and a corsage of pink roses. The happy couple spent their honeymoon in the Maritime Provinces and have taken up residence in Montreal.

Mrs. Barry Givran will resume her nursing duties in the Montreal General Hospital.

Prior to the wedding, Doris was honored with a miscellaneous bridal shower held by Mrs. David Oliver in the Mansonville St. Paul's Anglican Church Hall.

Bridal shower

BURY — On Saturday, June 8, 1974, Miss Mary McHarg, a popular bride-to-be of the month, was feted at a largely attended miscellaneous shower held in the auditorium of the Pope Memorial School and given in her honour by four friends, Mrs. Alma Quinn, Mrs. Diana Gillam, Mrs. Gail Mayhew and Mrs.

Rosemary Lowe. The auditorium was attractively decorated for the occasion with pink the predominating color. Upon her arrival, Mary was presented with a corsage of red roses by Gail, her mother was given a similar one in tangerine by Rosemary and Mrs. Wood was given one in blue by Diana.

Mary was escorted to a table laden with a profusion of daintily wrapped gifts, with her mother, Mrs. Robert Mayhew and prospective mother-in-law, Mrs. Carl Wood on either side, also Miss Ruby Wood and Mrs. Douglas Maxwell, sisters of the prospective groom. She was assisted in opening the many and varied lovely gifts by her mother and mother-in-law to-be which were then passed along for the other guests to see and admire.

When the last gift had been opened Mary expressed her sincere thanks, both for the useful and lovely gifts and to her friends whose kindness had made such an occasion possible. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, accented by the shower cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Alfred Goode in pink and white.

Miss McHarg is to be married to Mr. Carl Wood on June 29 in St. Paul's Church. They will be residing in Orleans, Vt., where he will be employed.

MOE'S RIVER — Miss Agnes Gemmell, from Montreal, was spending the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gemmell, and was happily surprised to find that she was the guest of honour at a miscellaneous shower on Saturday afternoon, June the fifteenth at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Haseltine. After having opened the many useful gifts, the July bride-to-be thanked everyone for their kindnesses. Lunch was then served by the co-hostesses, Mrs. Ron Haseltine and her sister, Miss Linda Ewin. Tea and coffee were poured by Mrs. Kenneth Gemmell and Mrs. Edgar Caron.

Guests, in addition to those from the Moe's River Compton area were from Montreal, Lennoxville, Mansonville, Hatley and Huntingville and totalled over thirty.

By Oswald &amp; James Jacoby

Hard Luck Joe played slowly, carefully and ineffectively. Each card was played ceremoniously and accompanied by what was supposed to be intense concentration. Eventually, Joe came down to a four-card ending. He was holding three diamonds and a trump, as was dummy. West held two diamonds and two clubs and East four diamonds. Joe should have known this. East had shown out on the third club so that West had started with eight clubs. West had played two hearts and shown out and had held exactly one trump. This left him with two other cards that had to be diamonds. Joe had been playing slowly but instead of counting the hand he had been thinking about the king of diamonds. He thought some more led a low diamond and covered West's jack with dummy's queen. East took his king, led a diamond back, and collected 100 points instead of paying off.

Joe complained about bad luck, but as usual the loss was due to bad play. If Joe had known that West held exactly two diamonds he could have played the ace first and let west hold the second diamond trick. West would have had to lead a club and give Joe a ruff, discard, game, slam and rubber.

Bury to celebrate Canada Day

There are very few communities in Canada that can lay claim to a 47 year record in support of Canada's July 1st Dominion Day, but that is the proud accomplishment of Bury in the Eastern Townships.

Deep in the rolling green hills of this beautiful part of the province of Quebec, Bury has proudly shown its Canadian colours every July 1st and it has continuously staged an event that brings the sort of enjoyment that national holidays are supposed to be all about. Parades and games, and the fun that summertime proposes in everyone's mind.

This year it will be the same — only better.

Garry Smith is the president of the Bury Athletic Association, the organization which each year drafts its membership to stage the event that includes everything from a horse pull in the morning through semi-professional wrestling in the afternoon to fireworks and dancing in the evening.

The committee in charge, though, is keeping its fingers well crossed on the weather outlook. Rosemary Lowe, secretary for the big fair day, admits that July 1st falling on a Monday may have special holiday advantages, but is disturbed with the awful possibility "that it might rain, then there would be no substitute day for us to fall back on."

A lot of expense is incurred in staging an event of this kind — and the weather could be a dampener if it poured and poured. But indications were that a warming trend was on the way, and if the sun shines, and you are interested in marking Canada Day in a manner that best celebrates the country, there is no better place to do it than in Bury. It's a celebration.

The horse pull starts at 9:30 a.m. with many of the top teams in the area entered. At 12 noon the street parade features majorettes, floats, decorated cars, ponies, bands — it will all start at the Concord Woodworking at 11:30 a.m.

At 12:30 there will be bar-b-q chicken, and after the sumptuous noon meal the field events will start at 1:30. There will be bingo in the afternoon, and a teen dance.

One of the specialties of the day will be at 7:30 in the evening when the "amateur hour" will be presented. Miss Bonnie Everett is the chairwoman for the special event and it will be a fun-filled affair.

The fireworks display at 9:30 will mark Dominion Day in the excitement phase, and it will be followed by the dance with Bob and the Western Stars at 10. The sponsors note that refreshment booths will be on the grounds and that there will be games for the adults, and children and picnic tables are available. It should be the best of times.

Maritime premier believes in special new car

NEW YORK (CP) — Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick says "You gotta believe" in the Bricklin. He has staked his reputation and possibly his political career on its success.

The people who for three years planned, financed and put together the sleek, four-foot-high sports car had their big day when four production models were shown to the press Tuesday.

Premier Hatfield easily was the star of the show as he milled with hundreds of guests and media representatives intrigued by the fastback with the panelled plastic body and gull-winged doors.

"Evidence of faith, they say, is evidence of things not seen," he said. "I've invested a lot of faith in this car."

He elaborated in an interview. "When I say that I've invested a lot of personal faith in this car, that's what I mean from the point of view of my political career because if it all goes bust, as a lot of people said it would, everybody would say I was a damn fool."

"I still don't think so. I still think you've got to try, and you've got to believe, and you've got to try new things. Some may go under and some of them may succeed. But nothing will happen unless you try something."

"I don't know how much it will mean to me politically. But my concept of politics is that if you're going to take the safe approach, you should be in something else."

CONTROLLED BY N.B.

The New Brunswick government has invested $5 million in Bricklin Canada Ltd., in which it owns a 51-per-cent interest.

But Hatfield said the government will not stay in the automobile business.

"Our objective is to get out of the business as quickly as possible," Hatfield said.

But he wants to see the Bricklin venture mass-producing cars first. But it figures to be slow going at first since start-up problems in any new industry are inevitable.

"I think that as soon as this thing is really going, and I believe it's really going now, that I'll be quite prepared to sell out our interests in the business to the Bricklin Canada Ltd. I'll be as ready as they are."

The parent company, General Vehicle Inc., based in Phoenix, Ariz., owns the other 49 per cent of the shares in Bricklin Canada.

The Bricklin, to be mass-produced in Saint John, N.B., has been described as a "poor man's Maserati," mainly because of the price.

The Bricklin will carry a dealer's price of $6,495 but it probably will go higher as costs mount and refinements are added. Maseratis run $30,000 and up.

While Malcolm Bricklin, president of General Vehicle and the man who started the whole idea of an independently-produced car, extolled the virtues of his two-seater, Premier Hatfield and others did not try to hide the fact that there are problems ahead.

SHORTAGES SEEN

The acrylic body panels are made at Minto, N.B., and trucked 100 miles to the Saint John assembly line. Since half the components for the car come from the United States, there are bound to be shortages of some of them.

Bricklin, a 35-year-old millionaire with the flair for the spectacular, began experimenting in 1971 with the idea of a safety-designed sports car that would use off-the-shelf components from its working parts.

The Bricklin's engine is a V-8 provided by American Motors. But a designer working in Bricklin's plant in Livonia, a suburb of Detroit, disclosed that American Motors has agreed to provide only the first 3,000 engines for the Bricklin.

This means that when they are used up, the company will have to seek a new engine elsewhere, possibly from Ford. And that might mean delays because certain modifications will have to be made in the Bricklin to fit the new engine.

Bricklin gave no hint of this in his talk Tuesday.

About 350 pounds of plastic are in the sports car which weighs 3,520 pounds. It has an unusual front-back bumper system which the company said can withstand a 10-mile-an-hour impact.

Bricklin said 200 dealers will be involved in handling the car, which is strictly for export to the U.S. He plans to bring each dealer up to the factory, give them pieces of the car for their showrooms until the completed models start arriving.

AUGUST IS TARGET

Bricklin said the first cars should be in the hands of the dealers in early August, and by the end of September there will be a minimum of 1,000 cars being produced a month.

Premier Hatfield indicated that there was no production going on at the moment. A lot of people are being trained.

"There is a car on the line now. It's on there to train the workers to build the car at the rate of 1,000 a month."

In addition to New Brunwick's $5 million invested in the venture, the Canadian government is into it for another $3 million in loan guarantees.

Hatfield said he had to chance going into a venture such as Bricklin's because of the high unemployment rate in the province and the need for new industry and publicity, and the reluctance of Canadian banks to provide risk capital.

Politics not so glamorous

ABERCORN, Que. (CP) — Politics, Margaret Trudeau said Tuesday, is not a glamorous life or one that allows many personal pleasures.

But it is a good life, she told a gathering of 45 persons in this tiny community near the Vermont border, because it gives her and her husband a chance to do "something for the people we love—Canadians."

Mrs. Trudeau made the comments at one of five communities in Brome-Missisquoi riding in eastern Quebec. She had slipped away from the crowds of her husband's national campaign to help a friend, lawyer Peter Turner, 32, in his first bid for federal office.

At each stop she made sincere, gentle appeals—in English and at times in faltering French—for support for Liberals in the July 8 general election.

She spoke publicly four times, to groups ranging in size from 45 to 150, and spent the rest of the time chatting with people, admiring babies and, at one point, telling a local astronomer the birthdates of her family.

HELD BY PCs

Farnham was the first stop in her short helicopter trip from St. Hyacinthe to this riding held in the last Parliament by Progressive Conservative Heward Graffey.

She told about 150 in the town hall that her husband "had a vision" in 1968 that "enflamed all Canadians."

But in this election, the prime minister's feet "are planted firmly on the ground."

He was now a husband and father of two boys.

"People say that Mr. Trudeau's image has changed," she added, tongue in cheek.

"Well, I'd like to take all the credit for it."

She said that it was a "terrible time for an election" because it interfered with vacation plans, but told voters to use advance polls July 1 if they were unable to vote election day.

Later, in Abercorn after a steak supper at a ski resort nearby, Mrs. Trudeau leaned up against a table at the front of the town hall and commented on the life of a political family.

It involved, she said, "long hard hours of being alone."

LIFE IS GOOD

Yet it was a good life, and she and her husband "very pleased to do it."

She added that she felt the prime minister was "very competent."

"But I'm biased—I love the guy."

Mrs. Trudeau said she felt she had three roles in life, that of a mother, that of a wife, and that of a person with her own part to play as a Canadian.

Later, at Sutton, she urged women in a group gathered outside to "stand up strong and straight with their husbands" in the various walks of life.

In politics, women were important because they helped bring the process "back down to earth."

As well, 52 per cent of the country's voters were women.

GIVES REASONS

Finally, outside a house in tiny Brome, she said:

"My husband said he didn't want me to take part in the election campaign. He said I'd just get discouraged. 'You're too sensitive—it's a hard grind out there and there are many skeptics.'"

But she said she felt she had a duty as a Canadian and a person to join him.

Now, after spending a few weeks studying party policies and "doing what I was told," she said she was ready to participate.

Her philosophy, she added, was based on a feeling that "liberalism—small 'l' liberalism—was the kind of thing Canadians are into."

"It means sharing and caring for one another in a country which is free."

Sharp decline in U.S. border traffic

OTTAWA (CP) — The latest Statistics Canada report on foreign travel shows a sharp decline in travel by car across the Canada-United States border.

During the first four months of the year, there was a 12.4 per cent drop in the number of Canadian residents visiting the U.S. and a 6.8-per-cent decline in the number of U.S. residents visiting Canada, compared with the January-April period of 1973.

The number of air travellers rose by 23.3 per cent for trips to the U.S. and 16.7 per cent for trips to Canada.

The total number of Canadian residents travelling abroad was down by 7.8 per cent during the first four months of the year and down by 9.7 per cent in April compared with a year ago.

Trips to Canada from all foreign destinations was down by 4.7 per cent for the four-month period and 6.8 per cent for April.

These figures do not include immigrants, returning residents, military personnel, diplomats and crews of commercial vehicles and ships.

Total visitors to Canada during the four-month period was 8.33 million and Canadian residents travelling abroad numbered 6.87 million.

During the first four months there was a decline in the number of vehicles entering Canada in each of the border provinces, ranging from 17.7 per cent in Manitoba to three per cent in Ontario. Yarmouth, N.S., ferry traffic was off 11.4 per cent and declines in other provinces were New Brunswick, 8.9 per cent; Quebec, eight per cent; Saskatchewan, 7.6 per cent; and Alberta and British Columbia, five per cent each.

Vehicle trips into the Yukon rose by 9.5 per cent.

Beef prices could show sharp drop

OTTAWA (CP) — A beef specialist with the food prices review board says retail ground beef prices, which have been easing recently, will continue to drop in the next few months due to decreases in the price of imported boneless beef.

John Morris said recently that beef imported from Australia and New Zealand makes up only 10 per cent of the content of ground beef but sets the retail price of ground beef to consumers.

Imported boneless beef prices, he said, have dropped to about 63 cents a pound from 72. In a month or two, he added, the price of hamburger may drop by 14 cents a pound.

Beryl Plumtree, chairman of the board, warned that a contract dispute in the packing industry might throw the predictions off kilter. A lockout of employees now in effect in Alberta could spread to other provinces.

The board recommends that tariffs on imported boneless beef should be removed when it is clear removal of the trade barrier will not have a detrimental effect on domestic cattle production and trade.

Ground beef accounts for nearly 30 per cent of beef consumption in the country, the biggest single item of beef products sought by consumers.

A board spokesman said ground beef prices, in particular, required study because the product is important to lower and moderate-income families.

Bury celebrates Canada Day in finest manner

From June 24th to July 1st, 1974, an active, yet modest, organization called the Canada Committee is sponsoring a special period of festivities known as Canada Week. Another business-bred promotional venture? Another overly patriotic appeal to our sentiments? No, Canada Week is a concerted effort by a large group of people in all provinces to bring Canadians of different backgrounds to a better understanding of one another.

Now in its sixth year, this special week involves an ever-increasing number of Canadians in activities that range from the educational to the entertaining. The feeling of pride in our past achievements and faith in a promising future animate the many projects now being planned for Canada Week '74.

A non-profit, non-political organization, the Canada Committee will coordinate a host of activities right across the country, ranging from picnics to band concerts to sports events, from film festivals to art and essay contests, from teach-ins to social projects, from parades to historical pageants, involving thousands of Canadians anxious to manifest a desire for community of spirit, of values and of ideas. With concern for their fellow man as a basic premise, Canada Week hopes to act as a catalyst to bring the people of this vast country closer together, so that we may realize how our linguistic, political and regional particularities can be used to unite rather than divide.

Support for Canada Week

should be automatic. Yet many of us look at concern for and pride in one's homeland as unmentionable if not shameful traits. Patriotism, once an envied moral attribute, has become synonymous with different types of excessive nationalism. Flag-wavers are chauvinists. Patriots are reactionaries. Perhaps this is due to the fact that certain groups, in the name of patriotism, turned attachment to their country into hatred for another.

Montesquieu said that "What I distinguish by the name of virtue, in a free state, is the love of one's country, that is the love of equality". Therein lie the two essential principles of the democratic state: patriotism and popular government.

Patriotism is a form of attachment to one's homeland that absorbs the lessons of history, adds respect for one's neighbours, attachment to one's surroundings and the satisfaction of one's achievements, to produce a feeling of pride and desire to rid the nation of inequality and injustice.

Montesquieu went on to say that patriotism's principal function may well be "to remind citizens that they are compatriots and that they live in a community". These factors will not make them good, but will give them a basis for respect and cooperation, necessary ingredients for the establishment of democratic institutions.

In his official proclamation last year, Prime Minister Trudeau said that Canada Week "is a time to learn more about ourselves. It is a time of self-questioning which should lead neither to complacency nor to an immobilizing self-doubt, but to reaffirmation. It is a time to celebrate once more that direction towards realizing the great potential for good which lies in our land."

Yes, Canada Week should be an occasion to learn more about ourselves. How little Canadians in different parts of the country know about one another. How little we seem to care, at times. Yet, if we expect to maintain even a semblance of stability amidst the demands of our constituent regions, we must make an effort to understand the aspirations of each element of the population. Canada Week is an ideal occasion to make this effort.

The Canada Committee is often termed a nationalist organization. Yet we have no desire to exalt our country above others, nor to place emphasis on promoting our culture or interests to the detriment of those of other nations or groups. We believe in national unity. Only in its present geopolitical makeup can the Canadian nation remain viable, both internally, for the betterment of the social conditions of its people, and externally, in relation to the other countries of the world.

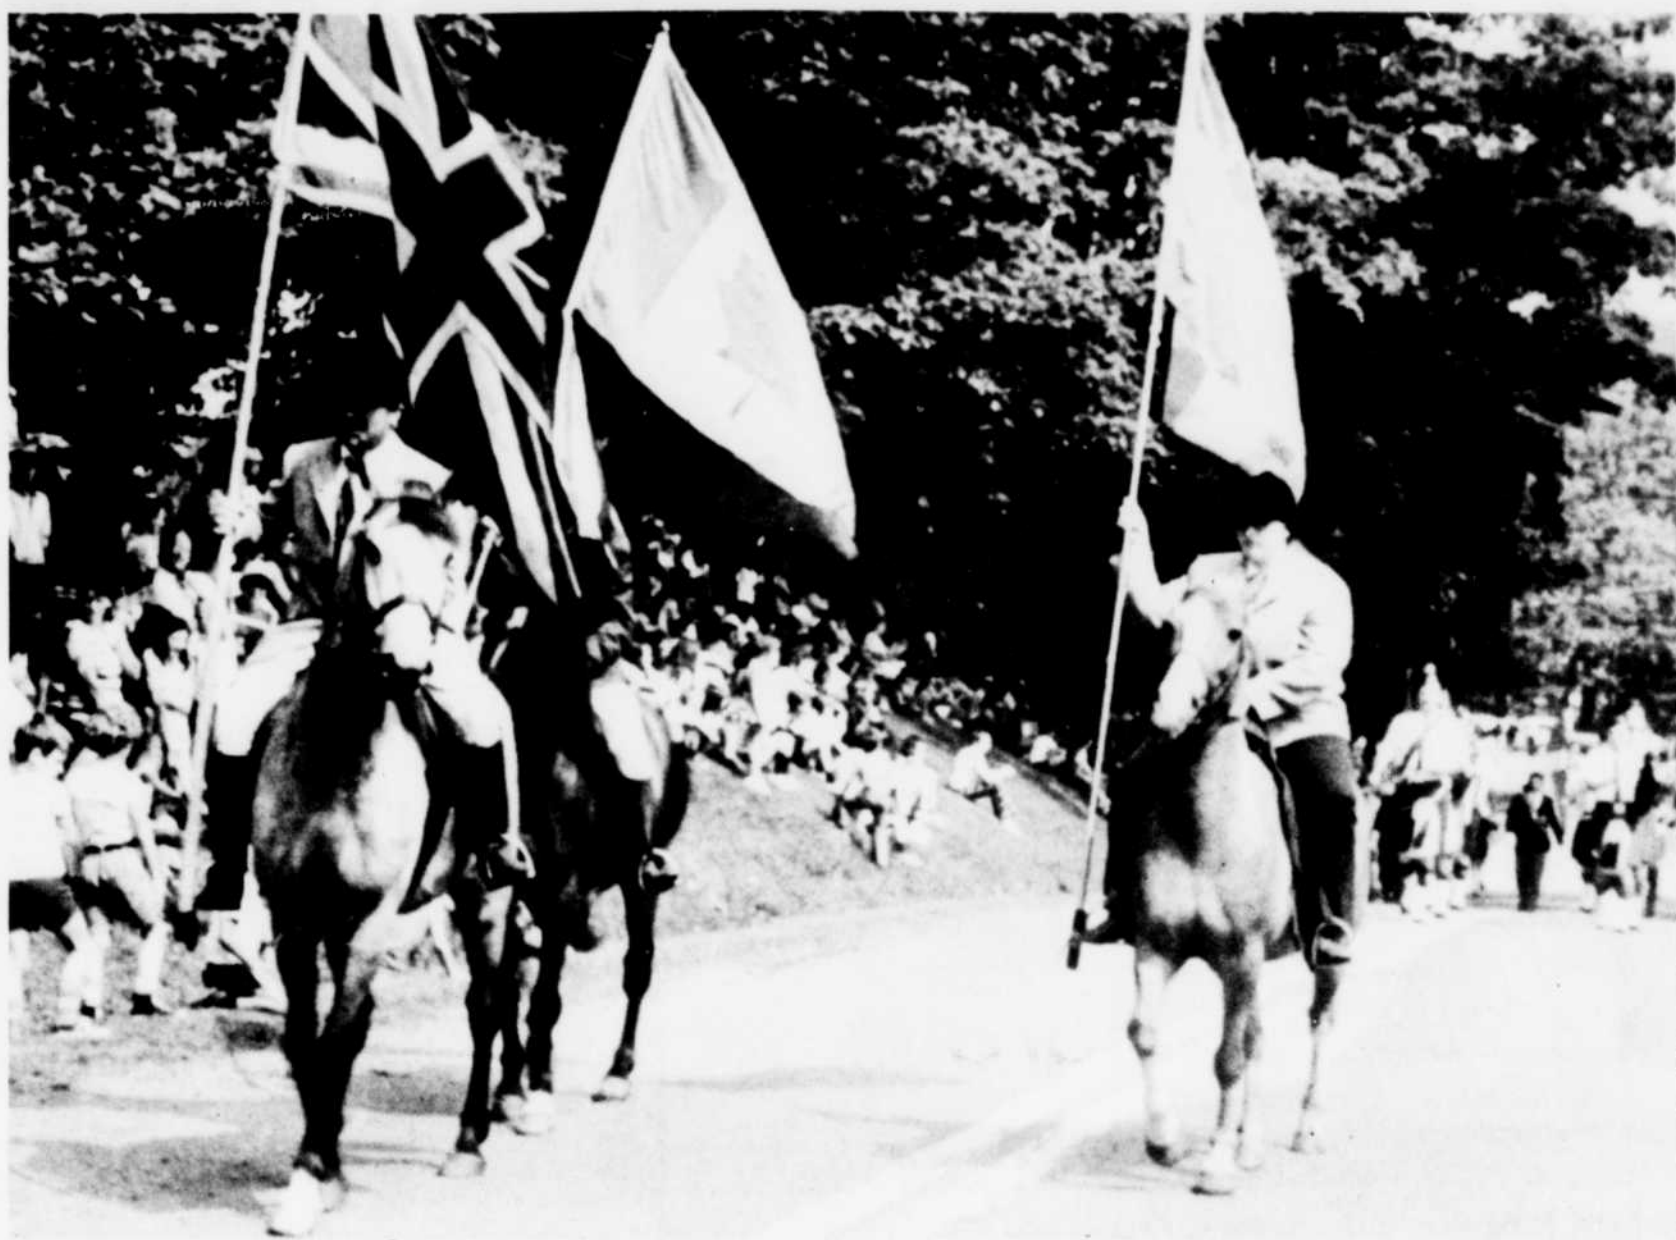

We are nationalist insofar as we are attempting to promote a sense of national consciousness. The advantages of this country are manifold and obvious, and depend largely on progressive elements both within our borders and without. Still, destructive elements exist and it is imperative that all Canadians be made as much aware of them as of the positive. These are the ideals the Canada Committee is working towards: increased interchange amongst the elements of our society, greater comprehension of our differences and pride in our accomplishments.

History, however, has shown us the nefarious effects of excessive nationalism. The resultant isolation or upheaval usually engenders a kind of arbitrary power in the hands of leaders who are rarely as tolerant as those they have replaced.

Successful social groupings have always based their way of life on understanding and exchange and this fact is underlined by the current world trend towards international cooperation, common markets, et cetera.

We are nationalists in that we believe in the viability and integrity of our nation and in the confederal system of government. But we spurn the supranationalism promulgated by certain groups who build themselves up at the expense of others, as this can only lead to the breakdown of our country. Those elements of French speaking Canada who blame their shortcomings and build themselves up by attacking their English-speaking compatriots, and the English-speaking Canadians who berate their French-speaking neighbours and consider their language useless do little to generate harmony and good-will, attitudes which are prerequisites to the future of Canada.

The Canada Week theme, "Canada - Think about it!", invites thought about these attitudes, and invites Canadians to examine ways in which they can understand one another. This is the rationale for Canada Week, not blind patriotism, but respect and reflection; respect for all the diverse elements that make up this community of people and reflection about the institutions that have enabled them to live in harmony.

George Hamilton is taking his musical career to new territories

TORONTO (CP) One month away from age 37, George Hamilton IV has taken his extensive music career to new territories and is becoming involved in new things.

The North Carolina country singer, by now a Nashville standard and graduate of the Grand Ole Opry, has been caught in the enthusiasm of a relatively new industry here and has signed an exclusive contract with RCA Canada.

In addition, several months ago he completed visits to Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union, where he produced the pure country and western sound of America and lectured on the roots of the music.

Hamilton said he looked to Canada for a fresh sound. He insisted that he has not turned his back on Nashville, nor is he putting down the abilities of the musicians of "Music City, U.S.A." But in Canada, musicians were still almost astounded that their sound was appreciated and worthy of any note.

PROMOTES CANADIANS
Canadians have not had time to become blasé toward their product, he said. Thus they do not take it for granted.

He is so enchanted with young Canadian singers that he is doing his utmost to promote undiscovered talent on his television show out of Hamilton, Ont., which enters its second season this year. The weekly program is syndicated nationally and is expected to have 20 to 25 outlets next season.

Hamilton's role as music tutor to the youth of Moscow came about by accident. While performing a "freebee" at the United States Embassy during his annual stint at the country and western festival in Britain, he was approached by Soviet and Czech officials who asked him to perform in their countries.

"I began to suspect that I was kind of being auditioned at the U.S. embassy for a trip into Eastern Europe, which is the way it worked out," he said in an interview.

BAND OUTSTANDING

"They just wanted to look me over and see if I was a weirdo—whether they thought I'd be the kind to go in there and shoot my mouth off and get political."

The soft-spoken singer appealed to the officials and he became the first American country and western performer to appear in the Communist world.

"I went over there with preconceived ideas about everything being black and white and grey and Doctor Zhivago. I came to Czechoslovakia and found a country music band, Jiri Brabec and the Country Beat—only one guy in the group could speak English—and they played every one of my songs just like the record, only better."

"It was the best backing I've ever had—in Canada or America or England or anywhere else."

In Moscow, he was invited to lecture on the country sound to the University of Moscow, where he spoke through a translator, and at the Institute of Foreign Languages, where the students "speak our language better than I do."

STUDENTS RETICENT

Hamilton admits having felt a sense of frustration when the students—whether through shyness or through previous coaching from school officials—did not respond to his request for questions following his lecture.

However, at the foreign language institute one girl stood up and said: "We want to sing with you."

The ensuing singalong, which moved Hamilton to the point where "the hair on the back of my neck was standing straight up," covered such numbers as The Saints Go Marching In, This Land is Your Land and a variation of Down By the Riverside—"We're gonna lay down our atom bombs down by the riverside."

Hamilton committed himself eagerly to Canada in February this year, when he signed with RCA Canada.

In the past, being a Nashville act, one of the problems

I had was that so much of the music I recorded was Canadian," he said. "I've got this real thing about Canadian folk-country music—the type of songs that Gordon Lightfoot and Ian Tyson and Joni Mitchell write, and in recent years more and more of the stuff I've recorded has been of Canadian origin. So I've done several albums of Canadian music but only one of them has been recorded in Toronto. The rest have all been done in Nashville."

SEES MOVE ESSENTIAL

In this light, Hamilton sees his move to Canada as a necessity. American musicians are great, he said, but someone from Nashville can't possibly capture the mood of a song about the Canadian Rockies, the Blueshoe schooner or the Prairies like a Canadian can.

Hamilton became especially attracted to the Canadian folk sound nine years ago when he heard Lightfoot perform. He considers Lightfoot "a genius."

"I started to take notice of Canadian performers and became impressed with the fact that they weren't singing the same old hackneyed cheating songs about booze, broads and slippin' around."

He said it was the gentle poetry behind music characteristic to Lightfoot and Tyson, and the go-get-'em enthusiasm in songs such as Anne Murray's Hey What About Me, that made him decide to become a part of it.

Hamilton said he is afraid that a major music centre like Nashville may become so big that it starts to get small—that the musicians may start to turn out an assembly-line product as a strictly routine matter. It hasn't happened yet.

George said and he hopes it will not. Music stops being music when it becomes that kind of work.

This land's been good to 'Badlands' nice girl

SISSY SPACEK ... a long way from the Dogwood Festival.

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — "Badlands" is a fascinating film. Some people love it, some people hate it. But everybody agrees it has made a star out of Sissy Spacek, who plays opposite Martin Sheen in Terrence Malick's film.

Stardom couldn't have happened to a nicer girl. Sissy — she's really Mary Elizabeth, but her brothers called her Sissy and she's stuck with it — is one of those delightful young things, eternally cheerful and chatty. She also happens to be a tremendously talented actress.

She comes from Quitman, Tex., a place, she says, that has very little except an annual Dogwood Festival. "But I have deep roots in Quitman," she says, "and I love it."

Her father was the Wood County agricultural agent. As a child, she rode horses and had a pleasant childhood. She wanted to dance, and danced at the local functions, then augmented her act with singing and guitar-playing.

For two years in a row, she was runner-up in the Dogwood Festival Beauty Contest. Even though she didn't win, she attracted the attention of a woman who was the fashion editor of the Longview paper, the nearest big town. She was a judge and she liked the fair-haired little girl.

The editor invited Sissy to go with her to New York, to cover the fashion shows. Sissy's parents thought that would be a good experience for her and let her go.

In New York, she stayed with her cousin — who happened to be actor Rip Torn — and his wife — who happened to be Geraldine Page. Miss Page was then in "Black Comedy" on Broadway and Sissy saw the play some 45 times that summer.

She loved New York. She went back to Quitman, finished high school, then returned to New York "to seek my fortune."

She was still singing at that point and she made out all right, doing background singing on records. For a time, she even had a recording contract of her own, but Roulette records changed her name to Rainbo and made her sing a song she didn't like. It was "John, This Time You've Gone Too Far" — she was supposedly singing to John Lennon, after he and Yoko Ono had their nude album cover.

But watching her cousin act made her want to try it. She studied with Lee Strasberg and got lucky. The first thing she tried out for was a part in the Lee Marvin-Gene Hackman film, "Prime Cut," and she got it. It wasn't much of a film but it started her acting career.

She's done a lot of TV — including the memorable "The Migrants" — but "Badlands" is only her second feature. The only way her career can go from here is up.

"I'm 24," she says. "This is probably the last time I'll ever tell anyone my true age. I was born on Christmas Day — people always say I got robbed, but I think I gained more than I lost. Folks never forget my birthday."

And folks will never forget Sissy Spacek, either.

TAKE IT FROM A COLOR EXPERT...

You'll save work with quality Pittsburgh Paints.

Weather-tough Finishes

Everyone wants to give his home lasting protection... and have a long, long holiday between paint jobs. For this reason, Pittsburgh Paints are formulated from quality ingredients and are fully weather-tested. They stand up to the severe extremes of Canada's climate and look great, year after year.

One-coat whites

Most people use more white than colors when painting the outside of their homes. That's why Pittsburgh Paints developed work-saving one-coat exterior whites in both latex and oil base. They give you the hiding and lasting qualities of two-coat paints—with a single application.

Fade-resistant colors

Some people re-paint sooner than necessary because the sun dulls many paint colors. So Pittsburgh made a line of exterior paints called "Sun-Proof" that really lives up to its name. With Sun-Proof, you get a choice of 720 fade-resistant colors—in tough oil base or long-life latex. Ask your Pittsburgh Paints dealer about the best type for your home.

Here's a BIG work-saver!
ONE-COAT WONDER WHITE

This brilliant white exterior paint gives you a solid, long-lasting finish with one coat! Wonder White is a self-washing paint that does not stain masonry. So you get a white that stays bright—and you can safely use it above brickwork. Ask your Pittsburgh Paints dealer about the finish that can cut your painting time in half!
