Promotion for Prof. Ness.—

At a meeting of the officials of McGill University on Wednesday afternoon, Prof. A. R. Ness was promoted from assistant to professor of animal husbandry at Macdonald College. Messrs. R. R. Ness of Howick and Peter Reid of Chateauguay were appointed to the advisory committee on agriculture.

Food Sale and Tea.—

A Food Sale and Afternoon Tea was held in the Parish Hall of St. John's church on Saturday afternoon. The event was highly successful, approximately $15. having been netted.

St. Andrew's Church Supper.—

There was a remarkably good attendance at the supper served in the basement of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Thursday night. Proceeds were $102.15. A magnificent address by Rev. Malcolm Campbell, D.D., of Montreal, on current topics including the depression and inflation were summarized, with a call to the return to faith and God to carry people through.

Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. D. F. Walker and Mr. Colin Campbell. A much appreciated feature was a violin duet by Miss Evelyn Purcell and Dr. Douglas with organ accompaniment by Miss Helen Hall.

Among Cash Prizewinners.—

In the Turret Cigarette Season's Hockey Contest two district people were among the $10. in cash prizewinners. They were Dosithée Poirier and Moise Mailloux, both of Valleyfield. In the elimination series contest Dr. J. W. Mills of Ormstown, was a $10. prizewinner, and Oscar Beauchamp, of Valleyfield, won $2.

Still Some Cash.—

The auction sale of household effects at the home of Mr. Jas. Partridge on Saturday afternoon brought fair prices. All purchases with the exception of one were settled for by cash, despite the fact that this is 1933 and depression time. Mr. James Partridge will spend the summer with his sons in the Canadian West.

Mrs. Brown Entertained.—

Through the courtesy of Mrs. Louis Hambrock, the junior rink entertained at her home, the curling members of the Outremont Curling Club at a bridge and tea on Tuesday afternoon, on which occasion a silver tea pot was presented to Mrs. E. W. Brown, as a token of esteem, on her departure to take up her residence in Huntingdon, also in appreciation of her work over an extended period as treasurer of the club.—Thursday's Star.

Her many friends here will be pleased to know that Mrs. J. F. Rollit was honoured with the presidency of the Westmount Women's Club at the annual meeting held in Victoria Hall Friday.

Electric Ranges Offered For Rental.—

What is thought to be the first public offer of its kind in the Canadian electrical business is being made by The Shawinigan Water & Power Company.

The Company offers electric ranges on a rental basis and housewives will be given the opportunity of renting them at a charge of $1.25 per month, payable on the monthly electric bill.

These ranges will be installed free up to an installation cost of $35.00 which we are told by the Company, with the present cost of materials, seldom exceeds this amount.

A survey reveals that many householders have been wanting electric ranges but felt that the initial cost was more than they cared to invest. This offer by The Shawinigan Water & Power Company has brought electric cooking within the reach of all families using electricity.

We are also told that the ranges remain the property of the Company and are maintained in good condition during the whole period they are on rental, that is, they will replace worn out elements, etc.

Mrs. F. M. Crandall, Mrs. Bertine, and Miss H. Bertine have been spending a week here with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shirriff.

Miss Hazel Merson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Merson was removed to the Royal Victoria Hospital, in Montreal, Thursday night, where she has since undergone an operation for appendicitis. We are glad to report she is recovering favorably.

Miss Gilberte Demers has been ill with a slight attack of pneumonia. Her many friends will be pleased to know that her condition has favourably improved.

After warm spring weather during the week the temperature lowered over the week-end to such an extent that there was a light fall of snow Friday night. The weather became rather warm again on Monday.

Mr. Norman Pringle, of Cranford, N.J. has been visiting relatives in town.

Miss Cécile Guerin of Montreal spent the week-end with her friend, Miss Estelle Lefebvre.

Miss Irene Cassidy and Miss L. Kearns of Montreal were week-end guests of Miss Lucille Lefebvre.

RAILWAYS WIN OVER MOTORS IN DEBATE

Benefit Debate, "500" and Dance Attended by 410 People.

RECEIPTS $144.30

Gratuitous Music For Dance highly Endorsed by Attendance—18 Sets Covered Floor

The debate on Monday evening for the Curling Club drew a great attendance. The President, Mr. E. C. Martin acted as chairman and timekeeper. In making his introductory remarks Mr. Martin said the evening's entertainment was called a "Depression Entertainment," but that did not mean the programme was depressed as to quality or quantity, but merely as to the admission price which was only 35c. He felt that within 24 hours he would receive at least $25 as conscience money, from people who had attended this Depression Night Entertainment. Early Tuesday morning Mr. Martin received his first conscience money in the form of a $1.00 bill. With this conscience gift, the proceeds from the entertainment will total $144.30. The curlers will likely net $125.00 which will be applied to the Rink Debt Reduction Fund.

Usually we hear of the railways being combatted, and quite often the losers. Monday night saw an exception to this rule, when the debate "Be it resolved that motor vehicle transportation is unfair competition to the railways" resulted in a victory for the railway supporters. The affirmative speakers were Dr. H. R. Clouston and Mr. Gilbert McMillan. The negative side was headed by Mr. Leslie Beattie and the Rev. W. S. Hatcher.

Dr. Clouston was in a witty form, he scored points and gave the audience considerable entertainment. Mr. Gilbert McMillan in his particularly Scotch accent delivered his short oration with firmness, that indicated his sincerity on the subject. Mr. Leslie Beattie who debated this same subject on a previous occasion and with a flow of language, persuaded many of the listeners to believe Dr. Clouston's arguments were very trivial and futile. The Rev. Mr. Hatcher referred to the affirmative arguments as being like "gas and steam." Mr. Hatcher did not attempt to score many points for the motor transportation, but confined himself largely to discrediting the importance of the arguments presented by Clouston and McMillan, in favour of the railways.

The debate was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience. The judges, Messrs. M. M. McNaughton, G. C. Boyce and Mayor Daniel Faubert awarded the affirmative the victory by a narrow margin.

Following the debate card tables were erected, and "500" was played at 54 tables. Quite some sight for a small town like Huntingdon. Preparations were not made for such a tremendous attendance, and had another 10 tables been prepared sufficient people were present to fill in the tables in quick order.

It was not such a great honor to win all the games played, as it was to be lucky enough to cut a high card, to see who would win the prizes. Many ladies and gentlemen stood up having won all the games, but the awards were made to Mrs. S. D. Popeck and Mr. Richard Durnin. In the second prize competition the number of people winning all games but one were still greater in number. The prizes were awarded Mrs. Wm. Durnin and Mr. Stanley Bryson.

Refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served one and all. The buffet lunch proved to be a very successful way of serving such a large number of people.

The dance that followed was attended by at least 350 people. The local orchestra played for the round dances and gave complete satisfaction, and after each dance received very hearty encores. Mrs. W. E. Barrie accompanied Messrs. Baird, Wilson and French, fiddlers from Elgin, for the square dances. These musicians were well supported by their followers, for every square dance during the night saw 18 quadrilles cover the floor. At 2 a.m. Mr. C. M. Oney announced it to be the last dance. The crowd was still willing to remain. Throughout the evening Mr. Fred Donnelly very kindly acted as the dance announcer and called off for all the quadrilles. Before departing hearty cheers were given for the orchestra and fiddlers who were largely responsible for the making of the dance possible, and without making it necessary to levy an extra admission fee.

The curlers feel they have been very generously supported and hope to have another "good-will" dance follow the Minstrel Show on April 15.

The Gore

Mr. and Mrs. C. McCready, of Brockville, were Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Henderson.

Miss Mae Montgomery and Mr. Allister Watson of Kensington were Friday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Furey.

Mrs. Hattie Herdman returned home Saturday after spending some time visiting her daughter, Mrs. Prescott, in Notre Dame de Grace.

"Doctor," said Johnny, half out of breath from running, "come up to our house, quick."

"Who's sick there?" asked the doctor.

"Everybody but me. I was naughty, so they wouldn't give me any of the nice mushrooms pa picked in the woods."

ORDINATION OF TWO MINISTERS

Georgetown and Riverfield Congregations Will Have New Pastors on May 2.

Two ordinations in one day will be performed by the Montreal Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church as the result of a decision at the presbytery meeting. On Tuesday, May 2, in two churches the Montreal presbytery will gather at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. and carry out the formal act of ordination of two young men who have been chosen for these churches.

Georgetown and Riverfield, respectively, are the two churches in which will take place the ceremonies, and Thomas J. Watson and K. W. House are the two candidates for ordination, who will become ministers of the Presbyterian Church and take over these two charges.

In the morning Mr. Watson will be inducted into the charge of Georgetown, as well as receive the credentials of his new office, and Mr. House will be ordained and inducted into the church at Riverfield, with which is linked the church of Howick as part of his pastoral field.

Officiating Ministers

Those who will take part in the service at Georgetown are: the Rev. W. W. MacLean, recently installed as minister of Outremont Presbyterian Church, who will preach the sermon; the Rev. David Scott, of Knox-Crescent church, will give the charge to the new minister; and the Rev. Principal Scott MacKenzie, who will address the congregation.

At Riverfield the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. W. D. Reid, of Stanley Church, Westmount; the charge to the minister by the Rev. William Orr Mulligan, of Park-Melville church, Westmount; the address to the people by the Rev. R. L. Ballantyne, a former minister of this church.

Both candidates for the ministry are honor graduates of the Presbyterian Theological College this year, and Mr. Watson comes originally from Scotland. Mr. House is from Cape Breton, N.S., both having taken all their university and divinity courses at McGill and the Montreal Presbyterian College.

At Georgetown Mr. Watson succeeds the Rev. Dr. Whillans, of Montreal, who retired from Georgetown after 45 years ministry to that one congregation, his first after graduation. In the course of a century there have been only three ministers up to the present in charge of this old Quebec church.

ORMST'N MAN'S INJURIES FATAL

Cyrus W. Cavers, 37, Died After Accident by Circular Saw Framework.

On Wednesday afternoon while sawing wood with a circular saw at his farm in Upper Ormstown, Cyrus W. Cavers, 37, was seriously injured when the wheel of the machine broke, scattering the wooden framework. Standing quite close to this framework Mr. Cavers received a badly broken leg. He was taken to the hospital in Valleyfield where the limb was amputated and a blood transfusion given but the injured man passed away that night about ten o'clock.

Mr. Cavers conducted a farm in Upper Ormstown, and lived with his mother, Mrs. John S. Cavers. His father predeceased him some years ago. He was an upright citizen and though of a retiring nature was active in all matters for the welfare of the church and the community. The funeral was held to the Ormstown Presbyterian Church on Saturday afternoon. Rev. Walter Ross, pastor of the church officiated, assisted by the Anglican minister, Rev. W. T. Payne.

The community tenders heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved relatives, his mother, two sisters, Mrs. Lee Bird of Carruthers, Sask., and Miss Muriel Cavers of Montreal; two brothers, Myron J. Cavers, of Noranda, and Abner R. Cavers, of Regina, Sask.

He returned to Valleyfield in 1909 and continued as professor until he was called to the chair of Canadian History at the University of Montreal.

CONFERENCE OF DAIRYMEN AT OTTAWA

Marketing Farm Produce Was Purpose of Dominion Wide Gathering.

The week just passed registered a high water mark in the investigation into the milk situation at Ottawa. The Dairy Conference which was called, unofficially through H. B. Cowan, Editor of Farm and Dairy, brought delegates from British Columbia to the Maritimes.

Comparing this Conference with the Annual Meeting of the National Dairy Council, held the 1st week of April, in Toronto, there was a great similarity in the subjects discussed, in the tone of the discussions and in the conclusions arrived at.

The outstanding additional topic at this Conference was the proposal for a Farm Products Marketing Board, to bring about orderly marketing of farm products, and especially dairy products, both within Canada and on the export market. A resolution was adopted favoring the establishment of such a board.

There was some confusion in the minds of the Committee that brought in the resolution for the Marketing Board as to how the board would be constituted and what its duties would be. The first resolution called for a board which would duplicate largely the work of the newly formed National Milk Producers' Board. Its composition was to be similar with the addition of Government appointees. Mr. W. L. Carr, in behalf of the group who had worked strenuously for over a year to bring forth the National Milk Producers' Board, made a plea for co-ordination of effort in this connection and presented an amendment which was adopted. The result of this being that all responsibility for carrying on any further representations to the authorities on behalf of the Conference was specifically placed upon the National Milk Producers' Board of the National Dairy Council.

Mr. A. H. Mercer, General Manager of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' was chairman of this Conference. While in Ottawa Mr. Mercer gave evidence before the Committee on Agriculture and Colonization. He gave a very vivid and absorbingly interesting account of the history to date of his company, but the concluding paragraph of his statement ended on a somewhat discouraging note. He said:

"However, after 15 years of an attempt to make a success of voluntary system of co-operative effort, we have come to the conclusion, sir, that it is impossible to make a complete success of it because the farmers themselves—the people that this effort is designed to help—are the people in each and every case that conduct themselves in the way that tends to destroy the effect."

On April 19, Dr. H. C. Grant, Professor of Agricultural Economics, University of Manitoba was a witness before the Committee. Dr. Grant did not make a prepared statement but offered to answer any questions. It soon appeared that Dr. Grant was the originator of the idea of treating milk as a Public Utility. He stated that he had been called to Pennsylvania and New York State to advise on the matter of Utility Control of Milk. Both these states were planning to adopt the same measure as in force in Winnipeg as an emergency measure. Such legislation did actually come into force in New York States on Easter Monday.

Our readers will recall reading Dr. Grant's report on the Winnipeg situation in the Gleaner.

STILL SEIZED AT FARM OF J. CAMPBELL STEELE NEAR HOWICK

R. C. M. P. Make Seizure of New Still Before Ever Being Put Into Actual Use—Was a Still of Considerable Proportions.

On Friday 21st the R. C. M. P. located in this district, made a "still" seizure at the farm belonging to J. Campbell Steele. Mr. Steele reports that he was unaware of the fact that a still was in the house. The farm is reported as being rented for a year. The rental figure reported runs as high as $500.

The large copper still was set up, but had not yet been put into use. It is considered one of the largest stills ever found in this rural section. No mash was found. The still was removed from the premises and turned over to the Excise officials.

The R. C. M. P. deserve much credit for having located and made the seizure before it ever got into operation.

JAS. McCAFFREY DROPPED DEAD

Clyde's Corners Resident on Way to Neighboring Farm When Death Overtook Him.

James McCaffrey, 54, of Clyde's Corners dropped dead as he crossed a wire fence on the way to a neighbouring farm early Monday forenoon.

Complying with an urgent telephone message, Mr. McCaffrey hurried from his breakfast to go to his neighbor's, B. J. O'Connor. Taking a short cut, he climbed over a fence and apparently dropped dead. His sons who were following, found him not five minutes after he left home, one sleeve of his sweater being caught on the fence. Dr. McEwen was hurriedly summoned but stated death had been instantaneous from heart disease. Mr. McCaffrey had been in poor health for some time and consulted the doctor just a week previous, who warned him of the weak condition of his heart. The doctor advised care in avoiding over-exertion of any kind and the necessity of relaxing after meals.

The heartfelt sympathy of all neighbors and friends goes to the stricken family. He is survived by his wife, Minnie Stark, two sons, Francis and James and one daughter, Ruth, two sisters, Mrs. Kenneth Lanktree and Mrs. Dwyer of Chateaugay, N. Y. Another sister, Cassie, is known in religious life as Sister St. Pauline.

The funeral service held in St. Joseph's Church, Huntingdon, this morning, was largely attended.

Tar and Feathers Again Applied

Although Powerscourt has no recognized police force to carry out law and order they have a very representative group of citizens who see to it laws of decency are observed.

A year or so ago a certain married resident was honoured with a special ceremony one night as he was returning from a call on a lady friend. The lesson was well learned and visits were cancelled. However time healed the humiliating experience and some time ago the calls were resumed again. This time the Powerscourt representatives laid in wait again one night last week and proceeded with the former ceremony of tar and feathers, but with greater elaboration then on the preceding occasion. The candidate necessarily paid a call to a medical doctor the next day for bandages about his face where evidence of rough handling had been left by representative residents of his community.

The Beaver

Miss Rietta McCartney, Valleyfield, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCartney.

Miss Ruth Sutherland, Hemmingford, spent the Easter holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Sutherland.

Mrs. Ed. Bruce, Powerscourt and Miss Ruth Bruce, Verdun, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. McLennan.

Word was received on Monday, April 24th, of the death of Mrs. Alex. H. Cameron, Glenco, Ont., in her 90th year. The late Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Cameron lived a number of years ago, on the farm now owned by Mr. Noel Reynolds. Much sympathy is extended to her sister, Mrs. Joseph Smallman and other relatives in Dundee.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCartney, Myril, Ruth and Burton spent a few days last week with friends at Ormstown and Anderson's Corners.

Miss Vivian McCaffrey is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCaffrey, Athelstan.

A certain clergyman was much grieved to find his "special services for men only" were so badly attended. He expressed his regret to the verger one evening when, as usual, they were the only two at the meeting.

"I really think they ought to come," said he sadly.

"That's just what I've zed to 'em over and over again," said the verger, consolingly. "I sez to 'em, 'Look at me,' I sez; 'look at me. I goes to all them services,' I sez, 'an' wot 'arm does they do me?"

Valleyfield Man Seriously Injured in Accident Following Double Wedding Ceremony.

Medore Poirier, 59 years of age, of Valleyfield, was severely injured and five other persons escaped with bruises and cuts, when the motor car in which the six persons were traveling, turned turtle on the highway at Beaconsfield, between Pointe Claire and Ste. Anne de Bellevue, shortly after 11 o'clock Monday morning. The driver of the vehicle later reported that the crash had been caused by the sudden jamming of the steering-wheel of his automobile.

Poirier was taken to St. Joseph de Lachine Hospital suffering from a dislocated right shoulder and injuries about the right arm and leg. The five other victims were treated by Dr. Hubert Ranger, of Pointe Claire, and sent home.

The motor car in which the sextette were travelling, was driven by Emile Bourassa, of Valleyfield. A double marriage ceremony had taken place at eight o'clock, at Pointe Claire Church. Poirier, who was most seriously injured, was the father of one of the bridegrooms, and the mishap occurred when this car, along with others, was following the newly-married couples as far as Ste. Anne de Bellevue as a send-off on their honeymoon.

173 HEAD OF AYRSHIRES AT BURNSIDE

Burnside Blossom Andrietta Produces Another Heifer Calf—Has Won 42 Grand Championships.

The Burnside herd just recently received its eleventh annual clean test and the accredited herd certificate has been renewed. At the time this test was completed there were 173 head in the herd. The herd has also been subjected to the agglutination test for abortion semi-annually since 1930, the last test was just recently completed without a re-action.

Burnside Blossom Andrietta still continues to make history at Burnside Farm. Just recently she gave birth to another heifer calf. At 12 years of age she is the mother of six Advanced Registry sons and three daughters. She has at the same time won forty-two Grand Championships at Canadian and American Shows, including twice at the Royal and has made six records which total 60,544 lbs. milk, an average of 11,590 lbs. of milk per year testing 4.4% fat.

Barr Flourish, another of the good breeding show cows in the Burnside herd has also given birth to a heifer calf. She also has some very creditable records; in six lactation periods she has produced 63,864 lbs. of milk, an average of 10,644 lbs. per year with a test of 4.1% fat.

Animals rich in the blood of these two great old breeding cows are being offered in the Burnside Anniversary sale to be held at Burnside Farm on June seventh.

Electricity Installed.—

Mr. Ewart of Montreal spent the week-end at his bungalow. Mr. Ewart has had his bungalow wired for electricity, Mr. J. M. Hunter being the electrician. The electric company is at present putting in extra poles to convey the current from the north side of the Chateauguay.

Miss Mabel McLean of Montreal spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ward McLean.

Mrs. Sydney Pavier of Westmount is spending a week with her cousin, Miss Irene Holiday.

Mrs. Stacey Booth and daughter Helen of Montreal spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Peter McArthur. They returned home on Friday taking Miss Jean with them, who had spent the Easter vacation here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Clark are busy moving to the farm now owned by Mr. Austin Kelly on the Boyd Settlement. While we are indeed sorry to lose them from our neighborhood, we all wish them good luck and happiness in their new home.

Bank Interest to Be Reduced to 2½ Per Cent

The banks in our district are regarded as banks for the receiving of deposits for safe keeping. Our banks of course loan money, but the loans are comparatively small, considering the number of accounts they carry.

The Hon. E. N. Rhodes has announced that on May 1st the rate of interest to be paid on moneys deposited in the Post Office or Chartered Banks for safe keeping will be reduced from 3% to 2½%. Rumor has it that the date will not be far distant when the rate will be made 2%, be that as it may we will have to submit.

True a good many people here who have retired have money invested, and are living off the interest of their investments. These same people all have saving bank accounts that will be of greater amounts than the average individual who is earning money each week or month. The people with money in the banks will now feel more inclined to have less money in the banks earning but 2½%, and will consider re-investing. Be careful in that respect. Bear in mind that if the rates of interest are to be reduced by the banks it is for your safety. Do not be flighty and invest your hard earned dollars, that are to keep you, in schemes with alluring high interests. These schemes are usually promoted by schemers, and they are not to be played with. If the high interest schemes are substantially sound and endorsed by big interests, it is pretty safe to say these plums would not be offered to the public off Montreal island. Montreal is a wealthy city, and money can be easily secured on sound investments, but beware of bewildering offers made to the farmer in exchange for his savings account or good bonds.

Finance Minister Rhodes has announced this interest change, not that he wants to hurt the investor, but because it is for the good of Canada in these particularly trying times. As he views the situation, the result will be that if the Canadian dollar keeps on rising as a result of U. S. inflation, it will help people in Canada who owe accounts to the United States people. The mass sum is said to be $275,000,000 a year. If the exchange situation improves further, as much as $30,000,000 a year in adverse exchange will be saved by the Canadian debtors.

If this attainment is realized and wheat prices continue to advance a much better feeling towards forging ahead will be the result. Banishing the Russian lumber from Britain will have a reaction upon our lumber industry, and all these marked moves indicate better trading conditions for Canada.

Suggestion Towards Raising Butter Prices

Messrs. W. L. Carr and Gilbert McMillan were called to Ottawa last week to attend the Dominion Conference of Dairy Farmers. For a while it looked as though an extra organization was going to be formed, and that was considered unnecessary, but to have the present organization take on the worthwhile chore.

The Canadian market price for butter is governed by the export trade. This does not appear to be the proper governor for the product, for in the months of May, June and July 1932 Canada produced 125,000,000 pounds of butter and the export totalled only 3,000,000; yet this amount governed the price.

To overcome this situation J. R. Love, M.L.A., of Edmonton, offered the following suggestion. "Levy six cents per 100 pounds upon all butter produced, then use the money so raised to cover the loss on the 3,000,000 lbs. exported maintaining a domestic price." He believes that if this procedure is adopted the price of butter would be 4 or 5 cents a pound higher, or in other words distribute an extra five million dollars amongst the dairy farmers in this particular three month period.

Canada's Railway Debt is $225 Per Head

One of the great problems of the world today is the piled up debt as a result of of the war of 1914-18, but in Canada while the expenses of the war and of demobilization added $1,700,000,000 to our national debt that is only about 64 per cent of what the dominion has expended in grants, subsidies, loans and guarantees to aid railways.

These grants, loans and so on, as W. Sanford Evans, of Winnipeg, points out, totalled $2,653,000,000 to say nothing of the grant of over 32,000,000 acres of land which has also been given to the railways.

With this much of its money and its national resources invested in railways the Dominion of Canada has a very great stake in that feature of the country's development and the problem is one to be considered seriously.

Dominion government aid to railways, Mr. Evans points out, up to 1931 amounted to $225 per head of the population, having jumped by degrees from a per capita figure of $7 in 1903.

Meeting the interest on those amounts is one of the big factors of Canada's taxation problem.

That Spring Feeling

Man is, by nature, an incurable optimist. Were it not so his race would have disappeared from off this planet aeons ago. Were it not for the hope which springs eternal in the human breast, life would not be worth living and the best thing we could all do would be to commit universal hari-kari.

Perhaps it is for that reason that spring, the season of new beginnings, is so popular. When we see Nature dressing up in her 1933 finery, we feel like imitating her. Hence Easter fashion-parades, renewed activity amongst the house-decorators, longing glances (if nothing more) at the sleek new automobiles, and a renewed buying sentiment amongst the whole population.

It is a primal urge, this spring-like desire for something new, and the enterprising merchant can turn it to his advantage. But he will not reap profit from the season unless he rouses himself from his winter lethargy, enters into the spirit of the game, and makes some effort to help himself.

One thing is sure. Before the dust flies along our streets, hundreds of new suits, hats and coats will have been bought, thousands of dollars will have been spent on painting and re-decorating jobs or otherwise passed across the counters of our local emporia.

But it is a pretty safe bet that most of that money will be spent in stores which invite trade, and precious little of it in the gloomy haunts of the pessimists who are so busy bemoaning hard times that they haven't got a minute to spare to advertise their goods.

We are all suffering from trade-stagnation. Money, the life-blood of commerce, is not circulating as it ought to do, though the banks are bulging with funds and values were never greater in the past thirty years. This spring, there is a great opportunity to remedy this condition, to bring buyer and seller together for their mutual profit.

The question is, shall we take advantage of this spring urge, or shall we merely crawl further into our holes and make ourselves comfortable until the sheriff comes? That is a question which can only be answered by our local merchants. They hold the key to the situation.

Of one thing we can assure them. If they rise to the occasion, and "in the fires of spring, their winter garments of inaction fling" they will find the buying public ready to meet them half-way. All of us like to be coaxed to do something we wanted to do all the time. And a little scientific "coaxing,"—as for example, through advertising—will certainly pay handsome dividends.

Local R. C. M. P. On the Job

The flashing of firearms only encourages the outlaws to bring gun play into action, when their foul actions are about to be uncovered. The London Bobby does not carry firearms, nor do our Royal Canadian Mounted Police strut about flashing firearms as do the Border Patrol to our south. The Mounties were established in Huntingdon a year ago. We see them, but we do not hear of them pushing themselves into the limelight, but we find they are a very active group of workers, and working in a quiet and successful manner. The Customs Officers can tell you that the smuggling along the boundary line is less now than ever before. Liquor smuggling, silk smuggling, etc., is rapidly disappearing. Liquor stills are found and seized; and only during the past week was it that the Mounties seized a large still at the J. C. Steele farm near Howick, before the still had ever been put into use. Making such a seizure surely indicates that the Mounties are on their mettle.

Overcoming Hard Times Through Wholesome Entertainment

All work and no play is not what leads to contentedness or good fellowship. Mixing up with the neighbours and relaxing a bit is the greatest tonic for old and young alike. An entertainment that demands a certain amount of reasoning, commands the interest of the more serious minded individuals that make up our country; therefore a debate appeals to a great many. The same people who enjoy a debate, also have enough humor about themselves to appreciate the other side of life, and so enjoy a sociable evening that might be made up by playing cards or dancing.

The Huntingdon Curling Club provided just such a tonic for our community on Monday evening. Over 400 people accepted the tonic by being present at O'Connor Hall when a debate, "500" and dance was held. The 400 people thoroughly enjoyed the evening, and the fact that the entertainment was clean and wholesome is having a beneficial effect upon our people. Everywhere on Tuesday the people appeared with bright faces and were more cheerful than has perhaps been noticeable for many a day.

The Curling Club deserve commendation for promoting such a worthwhile evening, as it provided food for thought about one of Canada's greatest problems "Railway and Motor Vehicle Transportation," and was followed by relaxation which acts as an elixir of life. May the curlers, or some other group, again sponsor such an evening, not for the purpose of charging a big admission fee thereby preventing people to come, but by charging a depression admission and thereby induce a still greater number to attend. The people want this tonic providing they can buy it at a price they can afford.

Our Roads Demand Attention

It was in 1896 that the Province of Quebec spent the princely sum of $30.20 on road work within the Province. The modern expenditure is a million dollars. The advance in road building was made along different lines, and after each form of road building was put into the discard the Quebec Roads Department took over all roads in 1927 that were improved. The Roads Department now is supposed to maintain all the roads.

Gravel roads have been built on the by-roads, stone roads have been surfaced and built where traffic is somewhat heavier, and then again a network of the best type of highways has been built throughout the much travelled sections of the province. The highways may cost up to $30,000 a mile. The roads that have cost a great deal less are now in a sad state of repairs, and particularly is this so within towns and villages. Our roadways in Huntingdon, Ormstown and Howick are rough, and if not given care, will become almost impossible thoroughfares.

One need not point this criticism as one of scorn against our District Road Engineer, Mr. J. A. Racicot, for we all very well know he does his level best to give our roads good attention.

Today we all despise the word spend, but if through spending one dollar you can save many, it is well to spend to protect. The paint man's slogan, "Save the surface and you save all" can be very appropriately applied to the road game. Heavy traffic is prohibited on the roads this week, but besides that much work is required immediately, if our Province is not to shoulder another big road expense for the making of repairs.

Our district is one that has a greater number of autos than almost any other in the Province. Such being the case it means the Roads Department reaps a greater revenue from us in the way of licenses, and that gives us all the more reason why our roads should be put in repair promptly. We are the most southernly located district, and ready for road repairs just so much sooner than other districts.

The Clean-up and Beautifying Movement

Next week is "Clean-up Week" in Huntingdon. You will be busy preparing to take advantage of this week. As soon as your rubbish is cleared away you will be delving into your garden problems. You must not let the scarcity of money deter you from doing your share towards beautifying your surroundings. Buds, roots and bulbs which make the spring gay with colour are courageously straining to do their bit, and they certainly provide some pleasant surprises. Plan to do some seed planting, everybody likes to see flowers, and if vegetables is your long suit, a good vegetable garden is always found an asset and a profitable acquisition for the home.

The spring is with us and we must not lag behind. Get the cleaning done. Get the painting done. Get the planting done. You will enjoy doing every act, and will continue enjoying the labours of your spring work throughout the summer.

Judicious expenditure to keep our civic beauty spots, streets and boulevards clean and attractive will be proper—the progressiveness and personality of a community is reflected in its appearance. Let every citizen aim to make Huntingdon more beautiful.

Prisoner's Swan Song

George Walker, 30, of Massillion, O., charged with petty larcency, walked out of his cell in city prison but left a note on the cell door. It said: "I didn't steal nothing in this town and I ain't going to. You fellas was going to take me for a ride, anyway, so I'm gone. If you want me come to—Street, Akron, and ask for George, "G. W." P.S. The door has been unlocked ever since I come. I could of left sooner but I was pretty tired."

Two Lucky Reprieves

In 1930, Joseph Weaver twice came within 48 hours of being electrocuted as a murderer in the Ohio state prison. Both times the governor reprieved him just in time. Weaver spent 25 months in prison, 22 of them in the death house, never knowing which day would be his last. Now the real murderer has turned up and confessed, setting Weaver free. Ohio's legislature has been asked to pay Weaver $15,000 for the injustice done him. Money will hardly compensate him for going through such a hell for more than two years, but still it might have been worse. The confession of the real murderer might have come too late.

Cocoons For Dresses

Bulgarian villagers are now trading their silk cocoons for silk dresses, though, of course, the silk dresses are not really for the peasants. This only means the Bulgarian Agrarian bank has made arrangements to ship the products of the silk cocoon cooperatives abroad, and to receive silk cloth in exchange for them. Many housewives here not only look after a room or two full of the voracious silkworms every season, but in addition, they spin the cocoons into thread and weave the thread into cloth.

Who's Elected

Frank Gotchell's name was written in on ballots at a recent school election in Trasure county, Montana. It appeared as Fruk Gocha, Frank Gosel, Frank Galch, Frank Golchel, Frank Gutotch, and Frank Gotchel. The county attorney, Clarence E. Wohl, was puzzled as to whether the ballots should be counted. Attorney General Nagle told Wohl to go right ahead and count 'em, because the "rigid formality provided in the general laws does not apply to school elections."

The Cows Are Learning

More than 1,500 cows are being taught to respond to red and green traffic lights in a large dairy at Plainsboro, N.J. The lights are not being used to teach the cattle to cross streets safely, but to guide their progress in approaching a new marvel of the dairy industry—the rotalactor. This device washes, dries, disinfects and milks 240 cows an hour. It is a circular metal platform, 60 feet in diameter, and holds 50 cows at a time. The cows enter the milking line three times a day and, heretofore, it has been necessary to have men hold them back until their turn came to mount the machine. This function now is being accomplished through the use of the signal lights, and officials of the dairy say the cows respond readily once they have become acquainted with the idea.

Loan Could Not Wait

During the recent bank holiday in the United States a negro woman entered the Emporia bank and asked for a loan of $35. The banker told her he was sorry, but his bank was not permitted to make loans. "But Ah has to have some money to buy a round trip for a corpse, Mister," the woman pleaded. "You know yo'self you caint keep remains on'y so long." Interested in the old mammy's plan to buy a round trip for a corpse the banker learned a member of the woman's family had died and they had figured out it would be cheaper to send the body over to Missouri to let kinfolks see it than for all the relatives to come to Emporia for this purpose. The banker let her have the money even though a bank holiday was on.

A Charmed Life

President Roosevelt is to receive a new cane. Joe Mahaffey, 50, of Washta, Iowa, who claims to hold some kind of an accident record, carved it of native diamond willow. Once an automobile ran over Joe in Nebraska. He recovered but a brother, receiving a report Joe was dead, was killed en route to his "funeral." In Ohio he was hit by a train, was badly hurt, but recovered. A man who picked him up was killed later in almost the same spot. In his home town his horses ran away once and an automobile trailer hit him on another occasion, but he escaped fatal injuries each time.

Bigamist Has Dozen Wives

"I could not help marrying them. I didn't have the heart to refuse them," Stephen Kovacheff, a handsome young man of Sofia, Bulgaria, told police when arrested on complaint of at least a dozen deserted wives, all young and pretty and well-to-do. Kovacheff has married at least one young girl a year for the last eight years, and deserted them as soon as he disposed of their money. One girl in Varna brought with her nearly $2,000, a good-sized fortune in Bulgaria. He was arrested just as he was about leading a new victim to the altar. One of his former wives recognized him and ran shrieking up the church aisle. A crowd collected, part of which attempted to revive the fainting bride while the rest bore the would-be husband to the police station. His marital adventures haven't been confined to Bulgaria, Kovacheff admitted. He has seen much of the world, including North and South America, and, he said, left a string of wives behind him.

Ears Cut to Cure Ills

An old Welsh custom involving cutting the ears with a razor for the cure of rickets was condemned by the Llanelly coroner at an inquest on a four-months-old baby. Addressing Mrs. Katharine Ann Rosser, of Trimsaran, who admitted having cut the baby's ears, the coroner added: "I want you to understand that this cutting business of yours must stop. You are a fortunate woman that things are not worse than they are."

Animal Talk

Makers of phonograph records now reproduce sounds and noises of all kinds, in addition to music. You can have the scream of a hyena, the grunt of a hippopotamus or the roar of lions at $2 each. A reproduction of a thunderstorm will cost you $2.50. Eggs being fried in a hot skillet come at $1.50. The pastoral sounds of a cow being milked is on the list at $1. Snores, yawns, wheezes, coughs, laughter and spirited argumentation are priced variously from $2 to $4. The jingle of money ought to be a good seller these days.

Two Prisoners Exchanged

Climaxing one of the strangest murder cases in Mexican border history, William Jefferson Meers, American youth once sentenced to death for shooting a Juarez waiter, was exchanged at the international bridge at El Paso, Texas, for a Mexican serving a life sentence in Texas for another killing. Pardoned by the Governor of Chihuahua in accordance with the exchange agreement, Meers was brought by automobile from Chihuahua City. Mexican officials took him to the middle of the bridge where the party was met by Sheriff Chris P. Fox of El Paso county, the Mexican prisoner, Joe Carrasco, and Meers' wife and mother. Meers and Carrasco shook hands and then returned to the countries from which they had been absent for years. Carrasco had been in the El Paso county jail since last July. He was brought by two Texas rangers and his pardon was signed by Ross S. Sterling, former Governor of Texas.

Hospitals Import Leeches

Those who believe that the ancient medical practise of "blood-letting by leeches" is ante-dated may be surprised to learn more than 1000 leeches are imported into London weekly by air mail from France for up-to-date hospitals. These leeches are gathered from pools in the South of France. They are packed in light wooden boxes containing mud and damp moss. When they reach their destination they are placed in a tank of clean water, where they remain, unfed until their use is required. The manager of a famous London firm of chemists said: "We send regular supplies of leeches to hospitals, doctors, chemists, and private people all over the country. They are used for drawing blood from bruises and other cases of localized blood congestion, also pneumonia."

Care to Climb Tower

Engineers have announced plans for the construction of a concrete tower 2,296 feet hifh, the tallest structure in the world, as a feature of the Paris Exposition in 1937. It would include a ramp to enable automobiles to climb to 1,640 feet, where a "suncure station" would be installed. The Empire State Building in New York, now the world's tallest structure, is 1,265 feet high. The Eiffel Tower in Paris is 1,000 feet.

Brings Up Ten

When he was 40 years old, Eli Bowers, Hurleyville, N.Y., lost his wife. They had ten children at the time, including a baby only two weeks old. Bowers set about to be both father and mother to his brood at the same time earning a living for them as a carpenter and mason. He died a few days ago at 65, his family raised, all taking care of themselves.

Knew His Work

Back in the '80s a noted physician, a teacher in a London medical school, was named a member of the staff of physicians at Buckingham palace. Explaining why he could no longer conduct his classes the doctor wrote this message on the blackboard: "Dr. Blank regrets he can no longer meet his classes as he has this day been appointed a physician to Her Majesty, Queen Victoria." Beneath this announcement some student wag later wrote: "God Save the Queen."

Mice Find Money

When Mrs. J. R. Blackeney, Summerlands, Miss., started breakfast on a recent morning, she found an old $2 bill dated 1899 lying on a pan with a bit of nibbled potato. She believes the bill was left there by a mouse that knows the hiding place of a long concealed bank roll. Tasty tidbits are now scattered about the home to encourage the mice to keep up the good work.

Human Vulture

The depths to which a human being can fall are shown in the case of Joseph Agree, of the Bronx, New York. He has just been sentenced to five years in prison for swindling unemployed men. It was estimated that Agree had obtained $10,000 from men looking for work. Seventeen of his victims testified against him. The punishment does not fit the crime.

Cure For Love

Many students in the University of Washington, Dean Herbert Condon reports, give "falling in love" as an alibi for failing in their studies. A certain number of their failures call for dismissal. One student who suffered this penalty requested reinstatement later on and was asked to fill out a petition blank. One of the questions to be answered was "Has the cause of failure been removed?" The student's answer was, "Yes, I married her."

Washing Pillows

Pillows may be washed without removing the feathers. Scrub in a weak washing soda solution, using a good suds. Repeat in a second suds if necessary. Rinse in two or three lukewarm washes. Squeeze out excess water and place on sheet in a warm place, preferably in the sun. Beat pillows at intervals while drying.

How Garibaldi Escaped

The story of Garibaldi's narrow escape from capture during his stay at the little capanna in the Ravenna marshes, may interest some of your readers. I have not seen it in print. It was told me some years ago by an old woman to whom I was introduced at Ravenna. While Garibaldi was in hiding news came that soldiers were on their way to search every corner of the marsh. What was to be done? It was decided to secret him in a hole dug for rubbish not far from the cottage. Boughs were laid over it, and children were instructed to play a sort of "Here we go round the mulberry bush," jumping over the hole, singing and dancing. The ruse succeeded.—London Times.

Growing Screens

There are few gardens, indeed, where one cannot work in screening material to advantage. Even if there are not dog kennels, chicken runs and telephone poles to be hidden, the general lay-out is improved where all is not visible from one point. Of course permanent screens are only produced by the use of perennials, such as evergreens, shrubs and long-lived climbers. But quite satisfactory results can also be secured by selecting the right type of annuals. For instance, African Marigolds, Cosmos, Ornamental Sunflowers, Larkspurs, Castor Beans, and other bushy, fairly tall plants will make satisfactory screens by early July. Among the climbers of an annual nature there are Morning Glories, Nasturtiums, Sweet Peas, Hops, and Scarlet Runner Beans.

Lawn Repairs

Early spring is the proper season for lawn repairing and few indeed are the lawns which do not require a little extra attention after the recent and unlamented winter. If at all possible a heavy roller should be used when the earth is soft, but lacking this implement a home-made pounder will serve. This treatment forces the small roots back into their proper element and encourages quick growth. A spring tonic in the form of some good commercial fertilizer high in nitrogen is also advisable. This stuff must be applied carefully, to avoid burning. Bare spots should be thoroughly raked and then seeded heavily with a good mixture. Cover by raking lightly one way only and roll or pound. It is well to cover such spots with brush or wire or the birds will get most of the seed. Where clover is in favor, the old practise of sprinkling a pound or two of White Dutch over the lawn every spring and than raking lightly if there is no convenient rain to wash in, has much to commend it. Good seed, commercial fertilizer, and frequent mowing, are three essentials in the development of a splendid lawn of fine stemmed grasses free from weeds. For shaded corners, all seed houses put up a special mixture of grasses which do not require full sun.

Rock Gardens

Steep pieces of ground can be turned into the most beautiful parts of the garden by the judicious use of old weather-beaten stones and alpine plants. Such gardening is not to be confused with the old-fashioned and very artificial rockeries. In the kind advocated here, boulders are set into the side of the hill, embedded so deep that frost will not seriously disturb them, and also in such a way that the soil between will lead back into the main bank. Between the rocks a miniature Rocky Mountain Range is created with gulleys, alpine meadows, crags and steep canyons. Seed catalogues usually list alpine rock garden plants separately. It is most important to secure seeds and plants suitable to Canadian conditions and it is also advisable to get special literature in the subject, or visit a neighboring rock garden, before attempting too elaborate a lay-out.

Hot-Bed Notes

Seedling flowers and vegetables in the hot-bed, or in flats in a sunny window, will be requiring some attention. After the second set of leaves has developed, the plants should be thinned out, so that they have at least half an inch space each way. The soil between should be stirred a little, and, of course, regularly watered. On warm days, expose by lifting the window a few inches, gradually extending the process in height and time as the season advances. When the plants are a couple of inches high, it is well to transplant once into colder quarters where they should remain a couple of weeks, at least, before being put outside. Any space left in the hotbed may be planted with radish, cress, lettuce, and other short season crops, and harvested directly from there.

PUT OFF

The older, fatalistic view that everyone must pass through a series of attacks from the common communicable diseases is entirely unsound. Ignorance prompts the speaker, who says with regard to children and certain communicable diseases: "they must have it, so the sooner it is over, the better."

A few generations ago, the same attitude was held with regard to smallpox, plague, typhus fever and typhoid fever. These diseases are onw rare because methods for their prevention have been discovered and applied.

We have tne means to make other communicable diseases rare. Diphtheria will disappear from our midst just as soon as all children are immunized against this disease.

Because our knowledge is limited and because we lack the specific means for prevention, such communicable diseases as measles and whooping-cough cannot be eradicated. But even with our present limited knowledge, a great deal can be done to lessen the number of deaths for which measles and whoopinécough are responsible.

It should be clearly understood that measles and whooping-cough are serious diseases, and that they are directly responsible for a large number of deaths. It should be known also that more than half of the deaths from whooping-cough take place before the first birthday, and that over ninety per cent of these deaths occur during the first four years of life. In other words, children over four years of age comparatively seldom die from whooping-cough.

Measles takes its heaviest toll from among children one year of age. A large number dies from this disease before they are a year old. Three-quarters of the deaths from measles occur before the fifth year of life.

The lesson to be learned appears to be that measles and whooping-cough are particularly fatal during the earliest years of life.

Because these diseases are serious, every effort should be made to protect children from them. There is never any excuse for carelessness which leads to the exposure of a child to the danger of disease. Above all does this apply to children during the first years of life. The parent whose care has kept his child from the dangers of measles and whooping-cough during these early years has accomplished something that is very much worth-while.

It is unusual to advise anyone to put off, and we do not give the advice in the sense that it is sufficient simply to put off these diseases. Rather do we wish to stress the particular dangers they present during the earliest years of a child's life.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Lemon Honey

In the spring when the supply of sweets runs low is a good time to make lemon honey. It is delicious served with either fresh rolls or biscuits. Blend 1 tablespoon of cornstarch with ¾ cup of cold water and cook until clear. Then add 1 tablespoon of butter, 1 cup of sugar and juice of ½ lemon. Cook 5 minutes, then fold in 1 well beaten egg. Simmer about 3 minutes over hot water. Chill before using.

Spring Cleaning Begins

Here is a new and wonderful method of washing woollen blankets. Putting away the winter beddings is often perplexing. Is it best to wash them or send to a dry cleaner? Try this method for the woollen blankets, for hooked rugs or chair pads and you will be more than pleased with results. The life of the blanket is prolonged, it will not shrink and it is economical.

Place the blanket in a tub of very heavy suds, using warm water (never hot for woollens.) Use a pure mild soap or soap flakes and use two or three times as much as in ordinary washing. The extra soap is needed to make up for lack of rubbing or agitation and keeps the fibres in good condition.

If the blanket is very soiled and suds are insufficient, add enough more dissolved soap or flakes to keep them abundant. Squeeze out with a wringer that is loosened a little to allow for bulkiness. Once through the wringer will remove the greater part of the soil. Place again through the same suds three or four times.

The balnket should now look clean and should be placed in a second tub of lukewarm suds (do not use as much soap this time). Wring through only once to remove the last bit of soil. Rinse twice in clear, lukewarm water. Wring dry as possible the last time, and hang out in warm sunshine.

Cotton blankets are best washed in a machine, as agitation does not harm them as it would the wool. Shake out well before hanging to dry and choose a warm breezy day for drying.

When washing ruffled curtains add a little starch to replace dressing removed in washing. They will look much nicer when ironed if you first iron a narrow outer edge lengthwise then run iron vertically into the gathers. Use a moderately hot iron for rayon curtains.

The best method in ironing rayon or part rayon is not to hang them out to dry but fold them over wet about four thicknesses—spread over a dry bath towel and roll up tightly for a few minutes, then iron.

Glazed chintz, used for draperies or slip covers, may be successfully cleaned by spreading out flat, sponge with lukewarm suds, then with clear water. Iron right side under damp cheese cloth with a moderately hot iron.

To make a fine, inexpensive polish for varnished woodwork or furniture, add a tablespoon of pure linseed oil and a tablespoon of turpentine to a pint of hot water. Dip a soft, clean linen cloth—or cheese cloth will do—in the water, wring out dry, then use. This removes dirt and covers scratches, leaving the original gloss.

STOPS a Headache

There seems to be no safer way to end a headache—and there certainly is no safer way—than to take two tablets of Aspirin.

You've heard doctors say that Aspirin is safe. If you've tried it, you know it's effective. You could take these tablets every day in the year without any ill effects. And every time you take them, you get the desired relief.

Stick to Aspirin. It's safe. It gets results. Quick relief from headaches, colds, or other discomfort.

"These Dodge and De Soto Cars are the greatest values I have ever sold" says E. A. McHARDY

"In all my years of experience as an Automobile Dealer I have never presented to my friends and to the public a line of cars of which I could be so justly proud. These Dodge and De Soto cars are the greatest values I have ever sold. Imagine a Dodge priced right down among the lowest priced cars! I ask you to come to my showrooms to see them, then compare them with competitive cars, point by point.

"If you will do this and then try them out on the road I know you will think the same about them as I do.

"You will experience a wonderful new sensation of smoothness because these cars have patented Floating Power engine mountings. You will feel safe in a Dodge or a De Soto car, because they have all-steel bodies and safety glass windshields; because they have Hydraulic Brakes with Centrifuse Brake Drums, which give you wonderful control of the car. You will find that they hug the road on the turns because they have strong X-type double-drop frames. New "Oilite" springs will give you the smoothest ride you ever had, and they never squeak, and never have to be greased. Alloy steel valve seat inserts reduce expense by doing away with valve grinding for many thousands of miles. The transmissions are silent in all speeds, even in reverse. All Dodge and De Soto cars—even the lowest priced Dodge—have these features.

"These Dodge and De Soto cars are big cars—lots of room to stretch your legs. The interiors are beautifully upholstered and the seats are designed to give you a most comfortable ride.

"Nothing can take the place of actually seeing and riding in one of these new Dodge or De Soto automobiles. You are cordially invited to come and learn for yourself that what I say about these cars is true."

Maple Trees Declare Holiday

Last week the Dominion Maple Tree Association held its Annual Convention. The recent increase in the tax on sugar was the principal topic of discussion. Strong opinions were expressed in favour of this method of collecting revenue.

The President, Mr. Forspout Tree of Lachute, Que., stated the situation very clearly in an eloquent address. He said:

"Gentlemen, you all know that our Government have searched every neck of the woods for something new to tax. This year they have placed a tax on cane sugar and beet sugar. We cannot understand why they should overlook maple sugar when it is one of the greatest industries of our fair Dominion. Nevertheless, this appears to be the case and we have as yet received no explanation for the oversight. I know that some of you have taken this matter to heart rather bitterly and consider it a slight, not to say an insult. Although every one of us knows that we have a product far superior to either the cane or beet sugar fellows, they always seem to horn in ahead of us when there is any free advertising. It would not be so bad if all this hadn't happened just on the eve of our productive season when a little publicity would have done the industry a lot of good." Loud applause.

"At this late date," continued Mr. Tree, "there is only one method by which we can obtain the public recognition that has been denied to us. As many have pointed out in this discussion, the time has come to strike. Strike, boys, strike! While the iron is hot!"

A terrific storm broke out at the close of this stirring appeal. The tree delegates slashed out and seemed to be tearing each other limb from limb. Several delegates swooned and had to be revived by the pulmotor hurried to the scene by the Hickory squad, who restored order very quickly.

Finally, after prolonged and violent arguments, a resolution introduced by Miss Sugar Maple of Muskoka, was unanimously adopted. It read:

"WHEREAS the Government of this Dominion has placed a heavily increased tax on cane and beet sugar;

AND WHEREAS no tax has been placed on maple sugar;

AND WHEREAS this failure to tax Maple Sugar is keenly resented by all patriotic Maple Trees in Canada;

THEREFORE be it resolved that the period between April 1st and April 20th, 1933, be and the same is hereby declared a Holiday for all patriotic Maple Trees in Canada."

Presented and carried unanimously at the Annual Convention of the Dominion Maple Tree Association, March 31st, 1933.

This action has caused consternation in the ranks of the sugar-bush owners but as they are all farmers and poorly organized there was nothing they could do to prevent the order of the highly efficient Tree Association taking immdiate effect.

This startling development in the Maple Sugar Industry has received widespread comment in the press of the country. We have space for only two or three at this time.

"The Maple Trees have taken strong exception to the method of applying the sugar tax and in protest have declared a nation-wide holiday. For the first time, some farmers who always make syrup will have none to supply their own table if, as many are doing, they dispose of their entire make in an effort to satisfy their customers."—(Lachute Watchman).

"Ever since the Budget was announced the palms of the thrifty sugarbush-owners have been itching to get at the syrup making, hoping to cheat the tax collector by increased consumption of homemade maple products. The promptness with which these would-be tax evaders have been brought to justice makes one suspect that the Weather Man has been recently added to the staff of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police."—(Bulletin des Agriculteurs, translation).

"Perhaps this freakish sugaring season should be regarded as an omen. Nature, growing tired of complaints of over-production, in this first crop of the year, is voluntarily co-operating by putting into effect the proposed crop reduction programme in the swift Rooseveltian manner."—(Sherbrooke Record).

This Problem in Phonetics

The conductor and a brakeman on a Montana railroad differ as to the proper pronunciation of the name Eurelia. Passengers are often startled upon arrival at this station to hear the conductor yell:

"You're a liar! You're a liar!" Then from the brakeman at the other end comes the cry, "You really are! You really are!"

They arrived home late from the party. Wifey took off her hat and slammed it down. Then she confronted her hubby. "I'll never take you to another party as long as I live," she said.

"Why?" he calmly wanted to know.

"You asked Mrs. Jones how her husband has been standing the heat."

"Well?"

"Well, her husband has been dead two months."

"And would you like some nice horse-radish, madam?" asked the shopkeeper.

"I think not," replied the young wife. "You see, we keep a car."

Young People's Society Debate.—

St. Andrew's United Church Young People's Society held a very interesting meeting on Tuesday evening, when the piano they had recently purchased from Messrs. Willis & Co. Ltd., Montreal, was used for the first time. This piano is well adapted for the purpose for which it has been purchased, being neat in appearance and of good tone. The main item of the evening, a debate on the subject, "Resolved that the train service is more valuable to Hemmingford than motor vehicle service," was ably conducted by Messrs. Lynwood Cookman, Donald Orr and Earl McNaughton for the affirmative, while Miss Evelyn Cookman, and Messrs. Elmer and Robert Hadley put up a splendid argument for the negative. The debate was carried out with enthusiasm, and presented the audience with an interesting and helpful argument on both sides of this important question. So close was the debate that the judges, Mr. W. Bradshaw, Mrs. Fulcher and Miss Mabel Keddy, had to weigh the verdict very carefully. After a lengthy deliberation, Mr. Bradshaw congratulating both sides on the splendid debate they had presented, said that counting by points the decision had to go to the affirmative but only by a small margin. The audience expressed its appreciation of the entertainment offered them by the debaters in a cordial manner.

Chuck Steak With Onions

2 pounds chuck steak, 5 or 6 onions, bacon drippings, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper.

Slice onion in water. Drain thoroughly. Place onion in shallow saucepan, cover closely and cook over a slow fire for 15 to 20 minutes, until tender. Use no water or fat, as the onions contain both moisture and richness. When the onions are done, uncover and brown slightly if preferred, but they are most digestible without browning. Heat in frying pan smoking hot, and put into it the steak which has been wiped with a damp cloth. Brown the steak quickly on both sides; reduce the heat and turn the meat frequently until it is cooked through. Season the steak and salt the onions. Serve with onions surrounding the meat.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown me in my recent sad bereavement.

Mrs. John Sadler.

Good Quality in Sheets

The features to look for in sheets, whether these are cotton or linen, are a close weave, one, that is, where the number of threads per inch in warp and filling is very numerous; a strong, tapelike selvage; and thread-drawn hemstitching within the selvage, leaving this intact. (Sheets which are merely hemmed are hemstitched, for this handsome trimming is necessarily a vulnerable point.) Characteristics to be shunned are a deceptive weight resulting from the introduction of sizing, usually cornstarch, and a big top luster. The sizing is not in itself detrimental, but it is usually employed to fill up impressively a weave which, without it, would at once reveal itself as sleazy and perishable. The high lustre is an indication of the presence of starch. They will disappear after a few washings.

Good and Strong

The best cottons are Sea Island and American Upland, because of their long staple—by which is meant their long fibres. These are conducive to strength. Such cotton, moreover, will preserve its bleach through numberless washings, whereas inferior grades are likely to become yellow eventually. Percale is probably the handsomest cotton sheeting and the one which most resembles linen; muslin is usually conceded to be stronger, but a good quality of either is a wise purchase.

DOES OWN HOUSE-WORK AT 70

With the Help of Kruschen

"For nine years now I have used Kruschen Salts and could not do without them. I take a third of a teaspoon in a cup of water as hot as I can drink it. No sickness, no headaches now. I am 70 years of age in April, and just with taking Kruschen Salts am able to do all my housework duties myself. I recommend Kruschen to all my neighbours. Before I began taking it I was never away from the doctor, but now I never need him. I used to have sick headaches and then was not able to do anything. But now it is different—thanks to Kruschen Salts."—(Mrs.) J. G.

Kruschen keeps the organs of the body working actively, cleanses all clogging impurities from the system, and sends clear, vigorous blood coursing through the veins. And the result? An end to all Life's minor ills and miseries. No more headaches, tiredness, depression, "nerves," or constipation. Instead, a sensation of delightful freshness, high spirits, happy outlook—in short, sheer good health!

When doing hand work, garments frequently slip to the floor (particularly if one is conversing). A lap-board 8 inches by 18 inches, or even 27 inches long, will give needed support without unnecessary weight if made from light wood, heavy cardboard or compoboard.

Wednesday

In a day of historic financial action, U. S. President Roosevelt moved boldly forward tonight for controlled inflation on an international scale.

He swung the United States off the gold standard in world trade as an opening shot and tonight sanctioned legislation giving him broad authority to carry through his programme to lift American prices, to seek stabilization of world exchanges on a revised gold basis and expand the use of currency.

The swiftly executed manoeuvres by the confident Roosevelt brought a turbulent reaction throughout the world. American stock and commodity prices shot upward. The United States dollar fell off in the world exchanges. Wall Street quotations on foreign currencies rose spectacularly.

The Soviet Government today retaliated against a British embargo on Russian goods by ordering a prohibition of any purchases in the United Kingdom and other restrictive measures.

The London Government recently decreed an 80 per cent embargo against importation of Russian goods in an attempt to protect British subjects who were tried in Moscow on charges of sabotage, bribery and espionage in electrical construction in the Soviet Union.

Other restrictive measures were:

The chartering of cargo vessels flying the British flag was forbidden.

Restrictions were applied to the passage of British goods in transit through Russia.

Utilization of English ports and bases was ordered reduced to a minimum.

Increased duties were ordered on British ships entering Soviet ports.

The Week-End

Cardinal Jean Marie Rodrigue Villeneuve, of Quebec, fourth Canadian to be elevated to the cardinalate, will be awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the annual convocation of McGill University to be held on the morning of May 26. Other distinguished Canadians who will receive the same honor at this time are Hon. Vincent Massey, of Toronto, who will deliver the Convocation address, as previously announced, Dr. Henri A. Lafleur, Dr. W. W. Chipman, and John Alexander Dresser, of the Bureau of Mines, Quebec.

McGill's official recognition of the honor that Cardinal Villeneuve has brought to the Roman Catholic Church in Canada and through it to the Dominion as a whole comes soon after his triumphal return from Vatican City where he became a cardinal on March 13. A month later he was welcomed back to Canada and received at Quebec by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minisiter of Canada; Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Prime Minister of Quebec, and Hon. H. G. Carroll, Lieutenant-Governor of this province.

Greeted by rousing cheers from a large crowd, the British technicians who were deported from Russia as a result of their sabotage and espionage trial, arrived in London Sunday, still showing traces of their experiences in Moscow, but smiling happily over the warmth of their welcome.

The deportees, Allan Monkhouse, John Cushny and C. H. Nordwall, were accompanied by A. W. Gregory, another Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company's engineer who was acquitted in the Moscow hearing last week, and Nordwall's Russian wife, who had never before seen England.

The four homecoming Britons stood bareheaded as the crowd sang the National Anthem, and then greeted their anxious friends and relatives. Subsequently, Sir Felix Pole, chairman of Metropolitan-Vickers, accompanied them to a hotel for a quiet reunion with their more intimate friends.

The board of directors of The Associated Press has adopted a resolution, it was revealed Saturday, at New York, instructing the managment not to supply any news in future to radio broadcasting chains. Whether broadcasting by member papers themselves will be permitted is expected to be the chief subject discussed at the annual meeting of the members.

The controversy over radio broadcasting among Associated Press members dates back to the annual meeting of 1925, when the members adopted a resolution authorizing the board to permit the broadcasting of news of transcending importance. As a result of the broadcasting of the 1928 national election results some members protested, and the subject has been discussed from year to year at annual meetings, but the year 1925 resolution has not been rescinded.

After the broadcast of results of last fall's election many protests were received from newspapers opposed to news broadcasting. The board of directors then instructed Frank B. Noyes of The Washington Star, president of The Associated Press, to canvass the members.

Mr. Noyes reported the results of the canvass to the directors last week, showing an overwhelming vote against further chain broadcasting. Kent Cooper, general manager, at the same meeting, reported that no chain broadcasting of news had been authorized since the 1932 election. The board then adopted the resolution against any further supply of uews to radio chains by The Associated Press. This does not prevent individual members from giving A.P. news to individual radio stations in their own territory.

Monday

The "father of the ice cream soda" —Joseph Anton Euper—is dead at Los Angeles. It was back in 1870, when Euper was in the confectionery business in Denison, Tex., that he formulated the drink now known as the ice cream soda. Its popularity spread to many parts of the world. Pioneers in the soft drink field recognized Euper as the first to dispense ice cream with syrup flavoring and carbonated water. He died yesterday at the age of 82.

Washington was convinced tonight that excellent progress had been made by the conferences in which Premier Ramsay MacDonald and President Roosevelt have been the central figures, Great Britain and the United States are so completely in agreement in theor plans for the world economic conference that they feel it should now be held at the earliest possible date, with the opening probably between June 12 and June 18.

Canada, represented by Premier R. B. Bennett, and France entered the discussions today, therefore under most auspicious circumstances in an atmosphere in which optimism prevailed. Secretary Cordell Hull, of the United States State Department, outlined to a press conference today how much in common were the views of Britain and the United States as to the best methods of rescuing a world harried by depression. He was emphatic that the plans of the two countries were not self-centred, but of a nature in which he was convinced the other nations would join.

GARDEN CLUB MAKES PLANS FOR SEASON

Regular Flower Shows to be Held—Children to Receive Seeds.

Splendid results from small beginnings made by the Garden Club of Atlanta, Georgia, was the subject of an interesting article read by Mrs. C. Bryson at the opening meeting of the Ormstown Garden Club held Tuesday evening, 18th, at the home of Mrs. Stalker.

The program prepared by Mrs. W. J. Murphy also included a talk on "Roses and their Care" by Mr. H. B. Patton. The past winter has been a trying one for our Town Flower, and it is feared that many bushes have failed to live through the repeated thaws and freezing. However, severe pruning should be done, especially if the plant does not seem vigorous. Branches should be cut, leaving two or three buds only. This seeming sacrifice will give the best results later on.

Mrs. McIntyre displayed a "Depression Plant" sometimes called a chemical garden. Salt, coloring matter and other ingredients had been placed in a glass bowl containing several pieces of charcoal which combined to make a unique curiosity.

Some diseased gladioli bulbs were exhibited which called forth numerous questions regarding the new enemy, "Thrips" which has not yet invaded this section to any extent, but against which it is important that we should take preventive measures lest the pest prove as destructive of bloom as it has in Ontario and elsewhere. Bulletins on "Thrips" secured from the Department at Ottawa were distributed. Should anyone in this community desire a copy it may be obtained from the president.

There was a good attendance at the meeting, 15 being present, which makes a good start for 1933. As formerly, the fee is 25c which includes the privilege of participating in all the competitions to be held this season. The committee having these in charge presented a report giving the list of the different exhibitions, classes in each, and probable date. The first one, Tulips, May 25th, includes A. Best Single Bloom, B. Three blooms dissimilar, C. Collection 10 varieties. Deciding upon the dates at the beginning of the season is an innovation but these are only approximate and are subject to change, depending on weather conditions. Members will receive due notice thereof.

It was decided that the Boys' and Girls' Competition should again feature the Zinnia and this committee was instructed to procure seeds and distribute them at both our schools. The members feel that by encouraging the young people in the love of beauty in nature and in the care of plants that one of the highest objectives of our Club is promoted. By request of many it was decided to purchase roses similar to those offered by the Club last year and due notice will be given when these are on sale.

The Club greatly appreciates the offer of Mr. Paul Deacon, Huntingdon, of a climbing rose to the member winning the largest number of prizes this season.

St. Paul's United W. M. S. Monthly and Easter Thankoffering Meeting.—

The regular W. M. S. meeting was held in McDougall Hall on Tuesday afternoon, April 18. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Hastie occupied the chair. The devotional exercises were in charge of Miss M. Welch and Mrs. J. A. McNeil. A request for a shipment of clothing, etc., for early in May was read and as soon as all business matters had been finished the remainder of the afternoon was spent in sewing and a quilt was quilted.

On the following evening, Wednesday the 19th, the Easter thankoffering meeting was held, Miss Bazin presided and Mrs. Patton conducted the devotional exercises, after which the pageant "Voices of the Women" was repeated. This represented the women of Mexico, China, Africa, Corea, Japan, India, also child-widows each begging for the gospel to be sent and relieve them of their bondage. Several C. G. I. T. girls sang a suitable chorus. The speaker of the evening was Miss Hope Jack of Montreal, who told briefly something of the customs, conditions and life of the people of Mexico where she had spent eleven years teaching and working for the Master. Many interesting articles made by Mexicans were displayed, showing remarkable ingenuity and handicraft. A large and appreciative gathering assembled and the entire programme was very much enjoyed.

CHAPTER 4

Jerry, as any pretty girl her age had had several boy friends. After Bob, her first and most glamorously sophomoric, there had been a keen-minded, witty youngster studying law at the University of Chicago, a young bond salesman with a sport roadster who had made it necessary for her to walk home from the forest preserve one night, and a West Pointer who came home on visits now and then.

But Jerry was so deeply engrossed in the children it seemed temporarily impossible for her to love deeply elsewhere. Besides, none of the boys she had known could command her unwavering admiration. And she could honestly say she had never fallen in love.

But now there was an intriguing sensation fluttering around her heart whenever she thought of Joe Middleton. He was mature, sophisticated and dashing. He was rich and romantic and good-looking. In fact, Jerry had to admit, he was the kind of man and the kind of boss whom stenographers dream about.

And Jerry could see no reason at all why she should'nt fall in love with him. She even permitted herself a few rosy dreams of orange blossoms and bridesmaids.

What glamorous possibilities! Jerry standing at the prow of the Sea Gull dressed in a smart blue and white yachting costume so flattering to her blue eyes and flamelike hair. Jerry in a slinky, silky afternoon thing having in friends at the Gold Coast apartment. Jerry at Lake Geneva in a brief green bathing suit poised for a dive high up on the diving tower.

And always in the background would be Joe Middleton, adoring his young wife, saying chivalrous, romantic things and showing her off to his friends.

She would have clothes and a chance to see Europe, and her family would be safe forever from such terrifying experiences as the one they had just been through.

Yes, Jerry dreamed a great deal these days. But she was frightened, too. Deep down in her heart she knew the way of men like Joe with girls like Jerry. She had been drilled scrupulously throughout her childhood, and above that she had seen the unfortunate results of too many a stenographer-employer romance.

Jerry wasn't a moralist in any sense of the word, and she was not a girl with a Victorian hangover. But she was a courageous modern girl with principles and she was saving her heart for the man she would marry. And so one day, when she arrived home to find a small package for her in the mail box she ran away to her room without telling the family about it, locked the door, then untied it.

As she hoped, but also feared, it was from Joe. It was from the ritziest jeweler on Michigan avenue, and it was a beauiful platimum wrist watch.

Jerry went into muffled ecstasies over the watch, trying it on and running her fingers over the delectable surfaces.

It was in such perfect taste, she thought. So chaste and unobtrusive. And so thoughtful. Joe must have noticed she didn't wear one.

But, of course, she couldn't keep it. She would have to send it back that very hour with a polite but firm little note which would make Joe understand he must never send gifts like that again. Flowers or candy were perfectly permissible, but an expensive watch like this was out of the question.

She paced up and down her room and stopped at the window to watch the yellow leaves drifting in the street, trying to determine what she should do. If she returned it tactlessly he might be offended. He might even tell her she was discharged. It would be so easy for him to do that. All he needed to do was nod his head to Miss Wilson and ask her to draw the salary check to date.

It was terrible how one person could have the power, almost of life and death, over another like that.

For now the problem stared her very boldly in the face, and the details that Jerry had hidden from herself all these days stood bleakly before her like a mask of tragedy at the theater. If she had been a free, unencumbered girl, with no one to care for but herself, she would not have hesitated a moment. She would have sent the watch back instantly with a curt refusal.

But, after all, the girl was possibly in good faith. It was quite conceivable this was merely a trinket for the future Mrs. Middleton.

On the other hand, if it wasn't, where was one to draw the line? Was it, after all, a crime to accept a piece of jewelry from a rich man who could easily afford to give it when its return might mean her family would go hungry?

Could anything be a greater crime than to let children go hungry? Jerry wondered, gazing silently at the wicked and beautiful thing there on her wrist. One thing was certain. She would say nothing about this gift either to Sarah or the children.

Sarah would never understand how impulsive and extraordinary Joe was. She would be sure to take the thing in the wrong light.

Jerry would never be able to explain to her Joe was not like ordinary mortals, likely to think nothing at all of established conventions. He had lived in so many countries, Jerry argued, and among people of such varying customs that nothing he did could be completely judged by her own views of propriety.

But what should she do with the watch? She dared not wear it and she dared not send it back.

Maybe after all the best thing to do was to slip it quietly into the drawer of her dresser and say nothing about it to anyone. That was the solution. She would'nt so much as thank Joe for the watch, beautiful as as it was. She would wait for him to bring up the question if he dared, and then say something flippant, something utterly inconsequential that could not be construed to mean she had been embarrassed by his gift.

Oh, it was hard, very hard, and Jerry recognized the difficulty of her position as keenly as any girl could.

But she must forget her troubles and be gay and go on believing as best she could that she could be perfectly independent and yet keep her job. It was still believable his intentions were entirely honorable and his proposal—when and if it came—would be one of marriage.

With this dream of marriage still floating in her mind Jerry went to the office next morning to receive a stunning blow. It came quite casually when Harriet Wilson mentioned "Mrs. Middleton."

"Mrs. Middleton is giving a dinner for department heads and the more important employes," Miss Wilson said, "and you are invited, Miss Hartford. Please dress very quietly and don't flaunt your charms too brazenly."

"You're a perfectly hateful person," Jerry said in a subdued but passionate voice. Then she dashed into the washroom for fear of crying right there in the office.

"Mrs. Middleton, Mrs. Middleton!" the words went over and over in her dazed mind. Why hadn't any one told her that Joe was married? Why, oh, why, had they been so cruel as to let her put her heart at his feet with an adoration so closely resembling love that Jerry couldn't tell the difference?

They had let her love him when all the time she had no right to think of him that way.

And then, in the midst of her agony, came an even more demanding, question, "What can I wear to the dinner?"

Life is like that. In the midst of the most tragic moments one is likely to count the number of petals on a flower in the grass where he has thrown himself down, or notice minutely the gyrations and graceful rhythms of sea gulls over the water when what he really means to do is to think about his wasted life.

And Jerry at this moment, when she saw her whole dream house collapsing before her eyes, was thinking, "What can I possibly wear to the dinner?"

She smarted, too, under the direct implication made by Miss Wilson that she would dress too gaudily and not conduct herself like a lady.

"Please dress very quietly and do not flaunt your charms too brazenly."

The nerve of the woman! Did she think Jerry was another little Violet who would go into the home of Joe Middleton like a street urchin? Did Miss Wilson imagine for a moment Jerry would be more out of place in those surroundings than any other member of the office staff?

And why, after all, should Miss Wilson worry?

Oh dear, he was married. He was married. And nothing whatsoever could be done about it. All this time there was a Mrs. Middleton whom Jerry hadn't dreamed existed.

Jerry was unreasonable now and blamed herself and felt a deep sense of shame whenever she thought how she had allowed herself to be thrilled by her employer. She felt she would like to leave the office that day and never return. All of which was absolutely ridiculous, as she well knew. She couldn't possibly afford to give up her job and she would simply have to make the best of a bad situation.

When she went home that evening she was so obviously blue Sarah and the children noticed it.

"Do try to be cheerful, Jerry," Sarah said. "I work all day taking care of the children and I can't bear to have you so glum when you come home at night. You should think of your old mother sometimes."

Jerry shut her lips tight to keep from uttering the sharp retort which came to her tongue, and instead offered to wash the dishes and put the children to bed.

"I'll try to be cheerful," she said with a wan smile.

After the dishes she played with the children awhile and cut out paper dolls for Kitten.

"That's all wrong," Kitten cried, "Why, Jerry Hartford, you cut off all the foldover things on my paper doll's best dress. And now what will the poor doll wear to her party?"

"That was just what I was wondering, too," Jerry confessed.

CHAPTER V

Joe never said a word about the wrist watch and Jerry could have sworn he had forgotten all about the gift. Their first meeting after the event was so totally devoid of unpleasant self-consciousness that Jerry could have laughed when she thought how seriously she had at first taken the incident.

But that was the difficult thing about Joe. Everything he did was so totally gracious and urbane, so frightfully disarming. Yes, he was a charming person.

Jerry, however, was never again capable of feeling an unalloyed thrill when he made his daily triumphal entry into the office. She had to admit she was deeply stirred when she thought how forbidden was the fruit but she hid her own emotions from herself and sternly denied herself the pleasure of thinking romantically about him.

Her curiosity as to the person of Mrs. Middleton knew no bounds and she found herself picturing a tall, silver-haired, cold, impeccably correct matron with a lorgnette, a toy Pomeranian and a slight English accent. Jerry knew she would be frightened to death when she met her and she hoped dreadfully she would say and do the right things.

The office, of course, was abuz about the dinner. Only a handful had been invited. Brown, the short, stocky fellow with glasses, who handled advertising and publicity; Stein, the business manager; McDowell, the sales manager; Harriet Wilson, Jerry, and one or two others.

To a certain extent the affair split the office into two groups: those who were invited and those who weren't. The girls in the washroom frankly scoffed, but betrayed an envy in their voices that concealed their real feelings from no one. The department heads were all a trifle worried but much flattered.

* * * *

Jerry was in a daze over the problem of what to wear, and one day, not long before the event, got up enough courage to broach the question to Joe Middleton.

"I'm scared silly about this dinner," she told him. "I don't know what in the world to wear."

"You'd look delightful in a housedress," Joe said. "In fact you'd look marvelous in anything. I can't imagine what you're worrying about. After all, you see these dull people every day at the office."

"To be perfectly frank, I'm worrying about your wife," Jerry blurted out, and then wished sho could have cut off her tongue.

"Think nothing of it," said Joe, "just be yourself. She'll think you're priceless."

"But I do wish I knew what to wear."

"You've certainly asked the right man about that," said Joe. "When it comes to women's clothes I've got better taste than Patou. . . . That's an idea. I'll go along and help you choose a dress."

"Oh, no, Mr. Middleton. That wouldn't be right at all," Jerry said.

"Right? Why wouldn't it be right?" Joe asked. "You want some help in picking out the dress, don't you? Well, I'm the kind of hero who comes dashing up the last moment to help little girls choose the right dress. I'm always doing good deeds like that." Jerry shook her head. He pleaded. She capitulated.

"But it will have to be very reasonable," Jerry warned. "I haven't much money."

"We'll get something well within your means," Joe said, "and something becoming as well. Come on. Get on your coat."

Jerry, feeling very guilty, but arguing with herself that she was doing absolutely the right thing in getting Joe to help her choose the dress, allowed that knight errant to guide her into an elevator and out to his limousine.

He gave the chauffeur the name of an exclusive dress shop on the boulevard and settled back beside Jerry, his hands on top of his cane.

"But I can't possibly pay for a gown from that shop," Jerry protested. "Tell the chauffeur to take us down on State street somewhere. Oh, please, tell him, Mr. Middleton."

"Now, don't be ridiculous, Jerry. You said you wanted the right thing for the dinner and we're going to get it."

"But I won't be able to pay for it in months."

"We can worry about that after we see the bill."

And now Jerry felt guilty, indeed, but she didn't know what to do. She must have the dress and she must have help in selecting it. So she clutched her purse and hoped against hope she could find something marked down to $11.50, which was all she had brought along to buy a dinner gown.

They stopped in front of the smart Michigan avenue shop with its tall doorman who looked like an admiral in the czar's navy at attention. They walked under the striped awning into the shop. The modern metal work and wood-paneled interior was so quiet and unassuming that at first Jerry was a bit disappointed.

There was not a dress in sight, but at a word from Joe the neatly dressed woman who had stepped forward to meet them slid back panels to reveal gowns which were so beautiful Jerry gave a cry of happiness.

Velvets as sheer as georgette with wide shoulder effects and scarfs to match, new rough silk crepes in bright colors, white pebble crepe evening gown of lacy blue wool so sheer as to be almost transparent, gowns of uncut velvet called Bagheera, very soft and dull and in exotic tones. Dresses in the shades of all the berries. Dresses like the stain of blackberries and others like blueberries.

Jerry feasted her eyes on this display and on the tiny hats with waxed veils, the beautiful shoes and gloves and purses in matched sets, and all the luxurious things she could never own.

It made her sick at heart to see this unattainable apparel there almost within her reach, but unbelievably removed from her because of her poverty.

The quiet woman who had met them at the door led them into a private salon where models came and went showing them a score of new creations fresh from Paris.

But after a few minutes of this Jerry wanted desperately to leave. She could never in her life have frocks like these and it would only make her discontented for the rest of her days with the kind of dresses she must wear.

However, she could not help exclaiming when a model with almost her own hair and eyes stepped before them wearing sheer yellow velvet with a narrow girdle of brown velvet ribbon, and brown suede pumps and other accessories to match.

"Oh, but I can't buy it," Jerry protested, almost crying. "Please, please, let's go, Mr. Middleton."

"There's no hurry," Joe protested. "Won't you let me watch these girls a while? Really, I think this is a very pleasant way to spend an afternoon. And, by the way, why don't you slip on a few of these gowns yourself? You are much prettier than any of the models."

"Yes, do, ma'am," the woman urged.

Jerry hesitated for just a moment, then with a grateful look for both of them slipped into the dressing room and, pulling her little office dress off over her head, slithered into a white pebble crepe evening gown she had so admired.

At first she felt shy, parading before Joe Middleton, but after a few moments she caught the spirit of the thing and, holding her head proudly, stepped forth and, turning gracefully, flashed a little smile at Joe.

After all, this would be her only chance to try on such gowns as these. It was her moment and she would make the most of it.

Gown after gown she modeled while Joe and the women smiled, but at last she returned to the sheer yellow velvet that felt like so much thistle-down between her fingers. If she could only own it!

"Yes, the yellow velvet is the one," Joe was saying. "And I feel sure that it is within reach of your pocketbook." He added a few words in undertone to the woman beside him.

Tennyson Prophecy Amiss

Of Alfred Tennyson, the story is told that when a boy his grandfather asked him to write an elegy on his grandmother, who had recently died, and he put a small sum of money into the future poet's hand on the completion of the "job," saying: "There is the first money you have ever earned by your poetry, and, take my word for it, it will be the last!" A singularly false prophecy, as probably no poet who ever lived made more money by his poetry than Alfred Tennyson.

Stamen Craft in Jewelry

The tiny bunches of stamens used for the centres of artificial flowers afford many opportunities for the craftsman, and an artist is now employing them with remarkable effect in jewelry.

The wide range of delicate tones and the variety of shapes in which the stamens are made give scope to the designs, making possible much originality in brooches, pendants, buckles and other ornaments.

Many Colors

The tiny stamen heads are planted on a central composition mounted on a metal foundation. Thus they form miniature and brilliant nosegays, which may be carried out in circular, square or oblong shapes. Bunches simulating groups of pearls, set in old-fashioned patterns, form charming pendants, while a variety of stamens in silver color, delicate pink and mother-of-pearl worked in together to form a flower head, are most effective as brooches. Mauves blended with blues or pale orange shading into pink give a pleasing touch to a coat ornament. And a powder box mounted with a circle of iridescent "petals" forms a novel addition to the dressing table.

Now that the evening ensemble is often carried out entirely in one shade, a shoe buckle, which tones in exactly with the general scheme, is attractive.

No Harm in Ripe Banana

We now know that past attacks of "biliousness" from eating bananas were as much our own fault as cramps from eating green apples. Bananas, just like any fruit, if eaten raw, should be fully ripe. All suggestion of green at the tips should have disappeared and the skin be a deep yellow slightly speckled with brown. In this condition, the flavor is delicately mellow and the fruit easily digestible. For cooking purposes, the slightly green fruit may be used with safety.

Well Protected

Sealed by nature away from dirt, bacteria and insects in a neat package of its own, the banana is one of the most convenient fruits we have. It is ready for use with almost no preparation. It may even be sliced or cut up several hours in advance of serving without discoloration if proper precautions are taken. Just cover the fruit with a simple syrup made of 1½ cups of sugar to 1 cup of water. Or if used in salad or fruit cup mix the bananas with the juice of the fresh fruits or with the syrup of the canned fruits, whichever is used.

"Tiger"

who nodded in approval.

"Why, that gown has been marked down to $10," Joe said with evident surprise in his voice, "and I'll be glad to advance the amount for the accessories and take it out of next week's pay check."

"Ten dollars! That's absolutely impossible," Jerry protested. "It's a new Paris importation."

"No, madam, he is perfectly right," the woman said. "The dress trade has been very hard hit by the depression and you are fortunate in choosing a dress which has been drastically reduced in price. The dress is $10, the little jacket $5, the gloves, shoes, hat and purse together another $10. The total is $25."

Jerry could scarcely believe her good fortune, and, although she looked searchingly into Joe Middleton's face, there was not so much as a hint of subterfuge visible.

She went out of the place walking on air and stepped into the limousine as though she were a princess.

Later that afternoon Joe sent the dress shop a check for $300.

CHAPTER VI

On the night of the dinner at Middletons Jerry left the office at noon and hurried home to try on her marvelous new clothes, which until then had been undergoing slight alterations. She took an extra long time with her bath and for the first time in over a year she went out to have a hair dresser shampoo her hair and set her natural wave.

She manicured her own nails, however, and straightened out her pencilled eyebrows by plucking a few obstreperous golden hairs.

Then she dressed slowly and carefully before the long mirror in her room pulling on the dainty yellow silk step-ins she had purchased to go with her outfit, and the opera-length stockings, and a wisp of a slip. Her gown she wiggled into with great caution so as not to muss her hair and she finished the ensemble with a touch of jasmine behind each ear.

When she was ready even Sarah had to admit enthusiastically she was lovely and the children danced around her singing songs.

Jerry was even going to take a taxi on this night of all nights, but as she emerged from the dark doorway of the old house with the street-light shining on her dress and in her eyes she recognized Gus, Joe Middleton's chauffeur and the long black sedan.

"We thought we'd surprise you by bringing around the carriage," Joe said, stepping out of the car to help her in. "Don't spare the horses, Gus."

Jerry protested vigorously that Mr. Middleton had more important things to do than drive all the way to the south side to bring her to the dinner. But she settled back warmly in the big, comfortable back seat, while the frosted street lamps flashed by on either side. She felt as nearly perfectly happy as she had ever felt in her life.

She didn't bother to think, or to worry, or to look ahead. She simply let herself live for the moment and revel in the luxury of it all. Tomorrow would be soon enough to remember she was only a typist.

As they drove along the Outer drive with the great dark Century of Progress buildings looming up around them she had the magic feeling of being whisked through a world of unreality in a coach as ethereal as Cinderella's.

As a little girl she had often thought of herself as a princess, identifying herself with the heroines in her story books. And now she was on her way to a ball, or at least a dinner, as exciting as any in fiction.

The lighted towers of Chicago's skyline were set there only as backdrops for this intimate drama, and the autumn lights and the lake were nothing but bits of the same stage scenery. Nothing but a stage and she the leading lady.

She was drunk with the loveliness of it all, and her heart expanded until she felt all the world was good and beautiful, and that every one in it was kind, considerate and lovable.

She wondered how she had ever been able to distrust, even for a moment the man who sat beside her. Joyously she told herself he was the good prince in the same fairy story in which she was the Cinderella.

Of course, there were dreadful dangers lying between them and happiness, but in any fairy story these dangers are at last surmounted and every one lives happily ever after.

Then she realized the big sedan had turned eastward, just north of the Administration building and was heading across the bridge to the island where the Planetarium and the 12th street beach are located.

She looked at Joe, but he, without apparent concern, was lighting a cigarette.

"But this isn't the right way," Jerry protested. "We're supposed to be going to your home and we'll be late in another ten minutes."

"What of it," said Joe Middleton, "they can wait a while for us, don't you think Jerry?"

"I don't know what you mean, I don't know what you're driving at," Jerry said. Her lips trembled and her dream world tottered about her head.

"I mean," said Joe Middleton, "that you and I are going to come to a little understanding before we go any further. There is no one on the island at this time of night and it will do very well for a tête-à-tête."

Jerry shrank far back in her corner and looked at him through frightened eyes. She jammed her knuckles into her mouth for fear she would scream.

Then suddenly she wasn't afraid. She was the old Jerry. The self-sufficient little panther of a girl, and wildly furious.

"I know what you think, Joe Middleton," she said. "You think you can do with me like you've done with every other girl in your life. You think I'm that kind of girl. You think just because you are paying me $40 a week to be your private secretary I won't dare fight you; that I'm afraid of . . . "

Her voice broke into dry, hysterical sobs.

"You're everything Harriet Wilson said you were and worse. . . . You are a tiger . . . you're . . . " Jerry stopped, paralyzed. Joe's eyes were shining with the fierce green light she had noticed that first morning. Then the light was gone again.

"Well, this is interesting," he said coolly. "I suppose you would call it a woman's intuition. As a matter of fact it was nothing quite so crude. Indeed, I might say you were absolutely wrong.

"What I wanted to suggest was that you are a poor girl with a mother and two children to support, while I am well to do despite the depression and have enough in the bank to satisfy all why whims.

"You've got a little boy who needs to go to Colorado. And you yourself would like a better place to live in, with some assurance of an easy life after you are too old to work. You want to be sure Kitten and Jackie and your mother Sarah won't be without food this winter when the bitter weather sets in.

"I was merely going to suggest, my dear, before you went into those perfectly inexcusable hysterics, that I should like to do all these things for you. We'll send Jackie west with a private nurse this week. I've chosen a pretty little place on the north shore with some lake front and trees and a garden where you can take the rest of the family. And then we'll provide a trust fund and a car.

"Think it over, Jerry. It's a rather decent proposition."

"And in return?" Jerry asked, still shivering uncontrollably despite the pleasant warmth of the sedan.

"I'm asking nothing at all," said Joe. "I'm a gambler and a sportsman and this is a sporting proposition. When you go big game hunting in Africa nobody promises you'll get big game no matter how much you spend on guns and equipment."

Jerry wanted to ask, "And if I refuse?" but for the moment she waited. She looked out of the window of the sedan, over the cold black water of the lake which reflected the sparkling stars standing in frosty constellations above the city.

She thought of the oncoming winter in which it would be up to her to provide for her little family there in their attic apartment where in winter the cold crept in.

She thought of the ragged breadlines she had seen with her own eyes. Gaunt-faced mothers with babies in their arms, old men, young white-faced boys, and she remembered all she could expect from charity would be a dollar a week per person for her small family.

She thought of Jackie, who could scarcely stand another winter in Chicago, and Sarah, whose complaining wasn't entirely selfish, but more the natural result of approaching old age.

And there was Kitten just starting school who deserved at least as pleasant a girlhood as Jerry had had.

God knew how hard it was for a girl to decide, when by being nice to a man who was in every way attractive she might have everything her heart desired and when to say "no" spelled certain suffering for those she loved.

Jerry really believed no other girl had been in quite so terrifying a predicament, and she wondered if the principles she had been taught as a girl were meant to apply in these awful times, when a girl with a job was virtually at the mercy of the man who employed her.

Jerry didn't condemn Joe. She did not even think of him as a wicked man. But she knew he was a hunter, and therefore cruel as all hunters are. She felt like a wounded thing in a trap with the hunter approaching and she looked at Joe with eyes that were ready to flood with tears.

She wanted to ask, but dared not, what he would do if she should refuse. And she crouched there in her corner of their sedan with her cheek against the cold glass of the window and her hair in disarray—but she did not notice or care about that now.

She was a trapped thing. A hare pursued by hounds, a field mouse hiding in the grass when the shadow of the hawk passes over.

At last she said, "And if I refuse?"

"Then I may have to find another secretary," said Joe. "Drive on to the house, Gus."

Loses Valuable Cow.—

On Friday morning on going to the stable, Mr. Willie Maither, of Brooklet, had the misfortune to find a valuable purebred cow dead.

A four-year-old Holstein daughter of Brookholm Inka, bred and owned by Hon. D. Raymond, Vaudreuil, Que. has been credited with a production of 14,726 lbs. milk showing an average test of 3.70% fat, according to an R.O.P. certificate which has just been issued from Ottawa. This heifer, Raymondale Brookholm Alcartra, was in milk 346 days, and produced up to 2083 lbs. in a month.

Het Loo Abbekerk, a three-year-old Holstein heifer sired by Abegweit Pluto, and owned by Hon. D. Raymond, Vaudreuil, Que., has just finished a 365 day record with 17,293 lbs. milk containing 756.25 lbs. butter to her credit. This record was made on twice-a-day milking.

Economy in Old Papers

Here are a few newspaper uses: A folded newspaper slipped beneath thin clothing keeps the body warm in emergency.

If the shoe soles have worn thin, a fitted innersole of newspapers will keep out cold and dampness, and is not bulky.

If necessary to stand long hours on a cement or concrete floor these innersoles help wonderfully.

When travelling in the summer time a newspaper on the lap not only furnishes a cool place on which to rest the hands, but keeps the dress skirt fresh and crisp for the journey's end.

One laid along the window sill in train or bus protects the sleeve, and provides a comfortable arm rest.

Mornings, when the breakfast room is cold, or at camp on a chilly day, a few folded newspapers warmed in the oven makes comfortable cushions for small children and aged persons' chairs.

Newspapers make ideal kneeling pads for gardening, washing up floors and so forth.

One kept under the pets' feeding dishes can be renewed daily.

The amateur chicken raiser will find newspapers indispensable. Used freely in home-made coops as insulation against wall drafts, flor dampness; used for droppings trays and so forth they serve the same purpose as expensive materials.

MILK PROBE NEARING END OF TESTIMONY

George Hogg, Guaranteed Pure Milk Company Head Heard.

Several Clashes Occur

Segregation of $138,000 Profits For 1932 Leads to Exchanges.

Ottawa, April 25.—The Parliamentary milk enquiry probably will table its report in the House of Commons late next week. Under present plans, the hearing of witnesses will be completed on Thursday or on Monday.

Three witnesses remain on the slate for the givinig of testimony before the probe. Today a representative of City Dairy, Toronto, will be on the stand. On Thursday, an official of Silverwoods Dairy, Hamilton, will testify. The date for hearing W. G. Marritt, secretary, Ontario Producers Association, Toronto, had not been fixed tonight.

Holding its 21st sitting yesterday, the committee heard George Hogg, president, Guaranteed Pure Milk Company, Montreal, give further evidence. Mr. Hogg was before the enquiry in its early stages.

Segregation of the profits of $138,000 made by the Guaranteed Pure Milk Company, Montreal, in 1932, caused a series of clashes in the Parliamentary milk probe today.

Members of the enquiry committee frequently interrogated George Hogg, president of the concern, on what profits were made on cream and butter as distinguished from whole milk sales. Witness answered he was unable to make this segregation as the statement for this "closed" company was not arranged so as to make this information available.

An estimate was made that the firm made a profit of 300 per cent. on creams. The dairy official was not prepared to admit this was the case.

Only four firms in Montreal—J. J. Joubert, Borden's, Elmhurst and the Guaranteed Company—were paying association prices to producers for milk. Mr. Hogg believed. He warned that if producers continued to be paid by some dealers below association prices, which are agreed upon by conference between producers and the large dairy concerns in Montreal, there would have to be a "change in prices."

$150 First Investment

His business was started 50 years ago with a $150 investment and the capitalization of the company today was $2,000,000, Mr. Hogg teestified. His salary was $1,200 a month.

His firm purchased from producers 35,739,069 pounds of fluid milk in 1932, Mr. Hogg told the committee. Of this total, 88 per cent. was paid for at association price averaging $1.52½ cents per 100 pounds. The balance was paid for at surplus prices averaging $1.02 per 100 pounds.

Questioned by W. E. Tummon, (Cons., Hastings South) witness stated the average cost per quart of association milk to his company was 3.91 cents. The average cost price for all milk was 3.75 cents per quart; and the average price his dairy received for milk was 8.45 cents per quart.

"How is it that the average price you received for milk was so low when other Montreal dairies for the same year were getting nine and ten cents a quart?" asked Mr. Tummon. "That is hard to understand."

Other dairies might have sold more milk from door to door, Mr. Hogg replied. His dairy had sold 6.3 per cent. of its milk retail; four per cent. to stores; one per cent. to charity, and 22 per cent. for manufacturing.

"Well, it appears to me your dairy had an even higher retail sale than many of the others," returned Mr. Tummon.

Mr. Tummon pressed witness for details of cost of operation of the sweet cream and butter sub-divisions of his dairy. He could not give all this information, answered Mr. Hogg. A clash followed between Mr. Tummon and witness.

"I cannot understand that a company like yours would not know whether it was making a profit in one special item," Vincent Dupuis (Lib., Laprairie-Napierville) interjected.

Mr. Tummon recalled that witness previously had testified that his company made a pross profit of $223,000 in 1932 and a net profit of $138,000. "Then," said Mr. Tummon to witness, "you tell the committee you do not know what branch of your industry was paying a profit."

Witness denied he had made such a statement; but he could not tell something he did not know.

"I want to find out how much of your cost was charged to fluid milk distribution," pressed Mr. Tummon. He was not prepared to say, answered witness. The "spread" per quart was 4.95 cents.

"You say the spread between the cost price of fluid milk and the average selling price was 4.95 cents per quart; can you not tell the committee whether or not you make a profit on that spread?" asked Mr. Tummon.

"Yes, we made a profit," answered Mr. Hogg. He doubted if a profit were made on any milk sold by his company to other dealers. The profit was made on milk retailed to consumers at 10 and 11 cents a quart.

He was unable to state how much surplus milk went into sweet cream sales, witness asserted in answer to Mr. Tummon. His company was doing business on the "square," Mr. Hogg warmly declared as other questions were put forward. There was no desire in the least to "hedge," he continued; and all business of his company with farmers and consumers was absolutely "above board." He wished this to be understood. He could not give information he did not possess, witness concluded.

Answering further interrogations, witness could not say whether his firm made a profit on surplus milk that went into butter. Mr. Tummon interjected that he thought the "surplus" milk for this company was comparatively low and it was on charging a large "surplus" against producers that other companies made a large profit.

"As far as our company is concerned, that is beside the fact," Mr. Hogg declared.

Mr. Bouchard said apparently 40 per cent sweet cream cost the company $1 per gallon and was sold at $4, while 10 per cent cream costing 30 cents was retailed at $1.20 a gallon.

Questions on the financial set-up of the company by J. L. Bowman (Cons., Dauphin) brought from witness the statement that he had control of the stock.

Use Maple Syrup For Desserts

Few, indeed, are the food products that are wholly seasonable and cannot be produced in a hothouse or grown "under glass" any time and any where. But maple syrup is completely seasonal. To be sure the fresh syrup can be sealed and kept for months, but it can be made only during the "freezing and thawing" period of early spring.

Served plain with warm biscuits, pancakes and waffles, maple syrup adds much to these popular and simple foods. A supper or luncheon of potatoes au gratin, poached eggs on a bed of well seasoned spinach, warm rolls or baking powder biscuits and maple syrup, a fruit or vegetable salad and a drink is a satisfactory and delightful meal that is inexpensive and easy to prepare.

Desserts sweetened with maple syrup have a taste that can't be imitated. Cakes, puddings and frozen desserts are amazingly good and not hard to make.

Many delicious candies are made with maple syrup. Creams, taffy, nougats and caramels are a few of the concoctions that gain distinction by the use of the natural sweet.

Maple Bavarian

This dessert can be given to a small child or an invalid, but will be liked by grown-ups in normal health, too.

One and one-half tablespoons granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, ¾ cup hot milk, ¾ cup maple syrup, 2 eggs, ⅛ teaspoon salt.

Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Add scalding hot milk and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Let stand until mixture begins to thicken. Put unbeaten whites of eggs into a large bowl and beat until stiff, gradually adding maple syrup. Slowly add gelatin mixture, beating constantly. Add salt and beat with a dover beater until mixture is stiff. Turn into a mold first dipped in cold water and let stand on ice until chilled and firm. Serve with boiled custard sauce made with the yolks of eggs.

Maple Mousse

This is a very simple rule but the result is delectable. It can be packed in ice and salt and frozen without stirring or frozen in an electric refrigerator.

One and one-half cups maple syrup, 2 eggs (whites), 2 cups whipping cream, few grains salt.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff. Cook syrup while beating eggs and add gradually, cooking while beating in each addition of syrup. Begin to add syrup as soon as it has boiled one minute. Fold in cream whipped until firm with a few grains of salt. Turn into mold and freeze without stirring. Pack in a mixture of eight parts of ice to one part ice cream salt. As the mixture freezes, scrape it from the sides of the mold with a stout spatula.

Maple Frozen Custard

Maple custard is another "ice" that can be frozen in an electric refrigerator or packed in ice and salt and frozen without stirring.

One cup maple syrup, 4 eggs, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup cream.

Add yolks of eggs to syrup and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture boils. Add milk and flour stirred to a smooth paste with a little cold milk. Bring again to the boiling point and remove from the fire. Let stand until cold and fold in cream whipped until firm. Turn into a mold and pack in six parts ice to one part ice cream salt. When mixture is partially frozen, fold in whites of two eggs beaten until stiff. Let stand two or three hours.

Good Lather For Blankets

In order to get the best results woollens should be washed quickly in a very good lather, the water being comfortably hot to the hands, but not luke-warm. If the water is hard and soda is resorted to, it should be used very carefully. A better plan, however, is to put a little soap into the last rinse. A soiled blanket may need two washings, three minutes being allowed for the first and two minutes for the second. If only one wash is required not more than three or four minutes is needed. If additional soap flakes are found necessary do not throw them into the lather but dissolve them first in a jug of hot water.

Be careful not to overfill the washer with water or with clothes, and do not try to hurry things up by putting two blankets into the washer together; it is much quicker to deal with one at a time. Squeeze out the water from the hem and put the blankets into clear water of the same temperature as they were washed in.

Use a wringer containing hard and soft rubbers in order to get all the water out; shake the blankets well, and dry in a hot cupboard or in the open air.

No Substitute For Tomatoes

Canned tomatoes are no doubt our greatest bargain in canned foods. The citrus fruits and tomatoes, the latter even when canned, as we all know, are the richest and most reliable sources of that vitamin necessary to all ages, vitamin C.

When the food budget has been reduced to such a level as not to permit the purchase of oranges, then canned tomatoes may be relied upon to furnish the necessary elements, with, of course, other fresh vegetables, as cabbage. But when the expenditure does not permit even cabbage, the tomatoes should be reckoned as a necessity.

For Sound Teeth

The infant needs vitamin C. not only to prevent scurvy but to build strong bone, to develop sound teeth, to promote normal growth and to build up resistance to disease. Growing children need it for the same reasons. Their so-called growing-pains may be more often than not traced to the deficiency of this element so serve tomatoes and serve them frequently.

In buying canned tomatoes, the most expensive brands give the most perfect tomatoes with the least amount of tomato juice. In the less expensive grades, we have more juice and the broken tomatoes. The latter are satisfactory to use for making tomato soups and for preparing the ever-popular tomato cocktail.
