COLONIAL PATRIOTISM.

London, July 21.—The Marquis of Lansdowne, Minister of War, referring in the House of Lords to Lord Roberts' telegram announcing the death of the two young Canadian officers, Lieutenants Borden and Burch, in defending the British position in the engagement on July 16, paid a glowing tribute to the Canadian volunteers, saying: "When we think who writes that telegram and with what feelings he must have written it, I think we may say no more touching tribute could be paid to the memory of the brave young representatives of our colonial forces."

The Earl of Carrington compared the patriotism of the colonies to an Australian underground river that disappeared in the bowels of the earth, came up again and rushed onward in a mighty torrent to the ocean. It would always be so, the Earl continued, if perfect equality were preserved between the British and colonial troops.

WORLD'S CHAMPION HEALER.

"I tried many remedies to cure piles," writes W. R. Smith, of Latham, Ill., "but found no relief till I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve. I have not been troubled with piles since." Grandest pile cure on earth and the best salve in the world 25c per box, guaranteed by F. T. Ansell druggist.

General Manager Hays says the prospects for business on the Grand Trunk next winter are very favorable, and he thinks that the people of Portland will see the busiest times as far as the Grand Trunk is concerned, that they have ever known.

Lots of Vowels.
In the Hawaiian language every word ends in a vowel. A Hawaiian finds it almost impossible to pronounce two consonants together, and in English he has the greatest difficulty in pronouncing any word ending with a consonant. Mr. Hale in his Polynesian grammar says: "In all the Polynesian dialects every syllable must terminate in a vowel, and two consonants are never heard without a vowel between them. It is chiefly this peculiarity that the softness of these languages is to be attributed. The longest syllables have only three letters, and many syllables consist of a single vowel." Again, no syllable, as a general rule, in the Bantu family of African speech can end in a consonant, but only in vowels.

The Work Cure.
"The healthy brother supported the invalid brother for years and years and years, and then the healthy brother died." "What became of the poor invalid brother?"
"Oh, he had to get well and go to work."

Reported Safe July 18.

U. S. Minister says Legations were safe June 11

PERIL WAS THEN INCREASING.

CHINESE EDICTS RE-ASSERTS SAFETY OF MINISTERS.

Paris, July 21.—An edict, which is dated Pekin, July 18, was transmitted by the viceroy at Nankin under date of today, and is as follows: "For a month past, with the exception of the German minister, who was assassinated by rebels, who are under apprehension of severe punishment, we have ordered all other foreign ministers well protected by the court, and happily they are safe and sound."

The Chinese Minister at Washington communicated to the Secretary of State two telegrams, both of which stated that all the Ministers were safe, with the exception of the German Minister, on July 18. One of the telegrams also stated that the insurgents were killing each other.

DOUBTED IN LONDON.

It is reported on good authority that the British Government place no credence to the statement that the Ministers are safe and that the Government is also quite unable to understand the evidence which is accorded at Washington to Minister Conger's message to the State Department here.

Washington, July 20.—The Chinese Minister has just received a cipher cable message from Minister Conger.

It is in the State Department cipher and is transmitted through the Tsung-li-Yamen and the Shanghai Toatal. It contains about 50 words and is signed in English with the name Conger. The Minister has taken it to the State Department.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The following statement has been given out at the State Department:

"On the 11th of this month the State Department communicated a brief message asking tidings of Minister Conger in the State Department code. Minister Wu undertook to get this into Minister Conger's hands, if he were alive. He has succeeded in doing this."

"This morning the State Department received a telegram from Consul-General Goodnow, at Shanghai, saying: 'The Governor of Shan Tung informs me that he has received to-day a cipher message from Conger, of the 18th.'"

"A few minutes later Minister Wu appeared at the State Department with a telegram from Toatal Sheng, dated July 20, which had been received by Minister Wu at 8.30 o'clock this morning, reading as follows:

"Your telegram was forwarded, and, as requested, I send reply from the Tsung-li-Yamen, as follows: 'Your telegram of the 15th day of this month (11th July) received. The State Department telegram has been handed to Minister Conger. Herewith is Minister Conger's reply to the State Department.'"

"Mr. Conger's telegram is as follows: 'In British Legation. Under continued shot and shell from Chinese troops. Quick relief only can prevent general massacre.'"

"This message is not dated, but it is understood it was sent from Pekin on the 18th."

"This reply was in the State Department cipher, and it is regarded by the State Department as genuine, in as much as forgeries under the circumstances seem impossible."

LONDON IS SKEPTICAL.

London, July 20.—Minister Conger's message to the State Department at Washington is not regarded here as justifying over-much optimism, but, on the contrary, is generally accepted as a further Chinese attempt at mystification. Some think that the message is undated and the similarity of its contents to Sir Robert Hart's message of June 24, suggest that it was sent off about the same time, but intercepted by the Chinese. The skeptical are confirmed in their suspicions by the fact that a message was received today by M. Delcassee, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, through the Chinese Minister at Paris, purporting to come from the Emperor and asking France's mediation with the powers. This, it is alleged, was dated July 19 and made mention of the foreign legation at Pekin.

MASSACRE OF CHRISTIANS.

London, July 20.—A despatch from Shanghai received here this morning reports that sixty missionaries and one hundred native Christians have been massacred by Boxers at Tai Yuan.

Washington, July 20.—State Department officials do not accept the conclusions reached by some of the London officials that Mr. Conger's despatch is an old one, which had been intercepted by Chinese officials. While they refuse to make public the text of the message sent by Secretary Hay on July 11 to Mr. Conger through Minister Wu, they state that the message received to-day from Mr. Conger is a satisfactory reply to the one sent by Secretary Hay. It is further pointed out, in support of the authenticity of Mr. Conger's message, that the bombardment of which he speaks did not begin, according to all accounts, until July 6, although the legations had been besieged and attacked prior to that time, but not with artillery.

Secretary Long has sent the following cablegram to Admiral Remy:

"Conger telegraphs that he is under fire in British legation, Pekin. Use and urge every means possible for immediate relief."
"LONG."

CONFIRMS THE NEWS.

GVERNOR OF SHANTUNG SAYS NEWSPAPER REPORTS WERE MERE RUMORS.

Washington, July 20.—The Secretary of State to-day received a telegram from Consul Fowler, at Chifu, dated the afternoon of July 20, saying that he had received the following telegram from the governor of Shantung:

"Received flying express from the Tsung-li-Yamen forwarding cipher telegram dated July 18, from American minister at Pekin, which I have transmitted, and by which you will see that the newspaper accounts are entirely rumors."

The State Department has also received a despatch from Consul Fowler, dated the night of July 20, in which he communicates the following message, telegraphed to him that day by the governor of Shantung: 'I have just received definite information that the various ministers in Pekin are well, and the proper Chinese authorities are devising measures for their rescue and protection.'

This message is signed by Yuan, the governor of Shantung.

Brussels, July 20.—The Belgian consul at Shanghai sends the following despatch under date of July 19.

"Sheng (the administrator of telegraphs) announces that the foreigners at Pekin were safe and sound on July 19."

"An imperial decree, dated July 16, orders the viceroy of Tien Tsin to appraise the damage caused by the troubles and orders the military to suppress the rebellion."

LOSSES AT TIEN Tsin.

London, July 21.—The Daily Express has received the following from Tien Tsin, dated July 18:

"The casualties of the allied forces in the three days' fighting before the native city of Tien Tsin exceeded a thousand. It is now certain that there were several Russians and Frenchmen fighting on the Chinese side. The Chinese killed their own women wholesale to prevent them falling into the hands of the Russians, and they says: 'Yesterday the whole native city was in flames, and the stench of the burning of thousands of corpses was unspeakably horrible.'"

"Among the incidents of the fighting on July 13 was the precipitate flight of 500 French troops from Lunan. They had been ordered to hold an important front but on being charged by the Chinese with the bayonet the entire detachment bolted panic-stricken. The Russians killed all the Chinese wounded in revenge for the Pekin massacre."

TIEN Tsin QUIET.

Washington, July 21.—The U.S. Navy Department has received a cablegram from Admiral Remy dated Tien Tsin, July 20, in which he says: 'Tien Tsin quiet. Latest report, Russian sources July 13, legations Pekin still holding out. Reliability of this information uncertain.'"

HEBREW SURNAMES.

Most of Them Date Back Only Two Hundred Years.

The family names of European Jews are of comparatively recent origin, mostly from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and the first part of the nineteenth. When they were obliged by law to assume family names they did so either according to their traditional custom, calling themselves Abrahamson, Isaacson, Jacobson, Aaronson, Davidson, Levinson or the like, or took the names of their native country, as Sachs, Schwab, Polack, Baier, Baum, Schweizer, Tyrer, Ostreicher, Hollender, etc. Others again—and these are the majority—named themselves from their native towns, such as Frankfurter, Berliner, Oppenheimer, Posner, Landauer, Fuerther, Marburg, Wetzlar, Erlanger, Bernheim, etc.

The descendants of Aaron mostly kept the names of Cohen, Cohen, Cowen or Katz, and the Levites maintained the name of Levi, Levy, Lesh or Bell, the last being composed of the initial letters of Ben Rabbi Jehuda Levi. Some few are translations from the Hebrew; Huesch and Schoen from Jafeh, Wise from Chacham, Wells from Zaban, Roth from Edom. Still there are quite a number of Jewish names much older than the eighteenth century which are evidently not taken from any town or country, also among the German Polish Jews, such as Heller, Mack, Moch, Bloch, Bloch, etc.

Eponymous and attractive names, both from the fauna and flora of Europe, were frequently chosen. When emigrating to other countries, the bearers of these names would often translate them into the language of their new habitat. Schoenberg became Belmont, Blumenberg changed to Montclair, Loewenthal to Napoleon, Gutmann to Goodman, etc. The name of Saphir, the German humorist (1795 to 1858), is said to have been chosen by his father from a sapphire he was wearing in a ring and to which the official in court called attention when he was in doubt what name to select for his family.

DeWet's Force Repulsed

Broke Into Two Sections After Battle.

ENEMY BEATEN OFF AFTER SHARP ENGAGEMENT.

ENDEAVOURED TO DESTROY A POST NEAR HEIDELBERG.

London, July 21.—The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, July 21.—Little temporarily commanding the 3rd Brigade, reports that on June 19, he came in contact near Lindley with De Wet's force, which broke through Hunter's column. The fighting lasted until dusk, when De Wet's force, being repulsed, broke into two parties. Little's casualties were slight. He buried five Boers."

"Hamilton and Mahon continued their eastward march yesterday and should join hands with Pole-Carew to-day near Easten Fabriek station."

"A body of the enemy wrecked a train carrying sick between Krugersdorp and Potchefstroom, July 19."

ATTACK BEATEN OFF.

London, July 22.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, July 22.—The Boers made a determined attack yesterday to destroy a post at the rail head, 13 miles east of Heidelberg, which they attacked with three guns and a pom pom and surrounded. They were, however, beaten off after a sharp engagement, before reinforcements summoned from Heidelberg had arrived."

METHUEN HAS TAKEN HECKPOORT.

London, July 20.—The following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, July 19.—Methuen occupied Heckpoort today without opposition to speak of."

"Ian Hamilton and Mahon continued their march along the country north of the Delagoa Bay Railroad."

"Hunter is reconnoitring the positions occupied by the Free Staters between Bethlehem and Ficksburg."

COL. SAM AUGHES RETIRED.

TALKED TOO PLAIN TO HIS SUPERIOR OFFICER.

Montreal, July 19.—A prominent military officer to-day received advice from South Africa, which explain the cause of Col. Sam Hughes' retirement from the Imperial service in South Africa. It appears that, in his capacity as an intelligence officer, Col. Sam has, on more than one occasion moved bodies of troops without authority. On the last occasion he was sharply reprimanded with by his superior officer, and Col. Hughes talked back in language more pointed than judicious. Thereupon the matter was reported to Lord Roberts, who asked for explanations. They were given, but again with a weakness of language which the commander-in-chief is not accustomed to.

The upshot was that Col. Hughes was asked to send in his resignation.

Canadian Outpost Cut Off.

A BOER SURPRISE AND AN EXCITING RACE FOR LIFE.

Montreal, July 21.—The Montreal Star publishes the following from its special correspondent:

London, July 21.—Mr. H. S. White, the correspondent of the Montreal Star with the Second Canadian Contingent, writes from Kroomstadt under date of June 23, as follows:

"Yesterday the railway was attacked by a party of DeWet's commando with two guns, the attack commencing at the camp about twenty miles north of Kroomstadt, occupied by two companies of Shropshires and fifty men of 'D' Squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles, under command of Capt. Davidson."

At dawn Lieut. Inglis, with twelve men, started to occupy, with Cosack posts, two kopjes, side by side, about a mile east of the camp. Inglis had posted men on one kopje, and was just about to take the others to the kopje when a party of mounted Boers were observed already occupying it.

ENEMY APPEARED IN FORCE.

Immediately large numbers of the enemy came galloping over the ridge, and made a dash forward to cut our men off from the camp. Lieut. Inglis ordered his men to retire as quickly as possible, some firing, while others retired after a while covered by fire from the main body. Our men were under Capt. Davidson. The Boers got within two hundred yards of the retiring outposts, pouring into them a continuous fire at this short range, while they were doing their best to get back to camp.

A RACE FOR LIFE.

On our men's part it was a race for life, and the hottest experience they have had during the campaign. I am sorry to report that Corporal Fred. Morden, Trooper Robert Kerr, and Sergeant Pattison were killed; Lieut. Inglis and Troopers Aspinall and Burney and Corporal T. R. Miles are known to be wounded, and Trooper Bell and Ermatinger are prisoners.

PTE. NICHOL DEAD.

The Toronto Evening Telegram had the following special yesterday:

London, July 20.—It has been reported to the War Office that Pte. D. Nichol, of the Strathcona Horse, died of enteric fever on the nineteenth. His relatives reside in Edinburgh, Scotland.

CANADIAN INVALIDS.

The Toronto Evening Telegram had the following special yesterday:

London, July 20.—The Canadian invalids from South Africa living at the Soldiers' Home in this city will on Tuesday visit Hampstead Hospital for inspection by the Prince and Princess of Wales. Major Thompson will command the party of Canadians.

News has been received of upwards of twenty deaths lately near the deltas of the mouth of the Yukon River.

The July crop report of the Manitoba Government shows that the improvement was not so great as hoped for.

IMPERIAL TROOPS WILL GO THROUGH CANADA.

Ottawa, July 21.—There is the best of reason for believing that Canada will shortly be recognized as the great Imperial highway to the Far East. Communications have been received by the Government from the War Office within the past two days looking to the transportation of men, supplies and munitions of war to the Pacific Coast, thence to China. The Canadian Pacific Railway, who will have to undertake the transport, is understood to be fully prepared for any emergency, but it is recognized that whatever is done in Canadian territory will be under the supervision of the Dominion authorities.

Victoria Crosses have been gazetted for Capt. Meiklejohn and Sergt.-Major Robertson, both of the Gordon Highlanders, for bravery in the battle of Elands-laagte, and Lieut. Norwood of the 5th Dragoon Guards, for rescuing a fallen trooper at Ladysmith.

Mount Azuma, near Banda, Japan, which was the scene of a volcanic disaster in 1888, has broken out again. Two hundred persons were killed or injured. Several villages were engulfed by the streams of lava, and great damage was done in adjacent districts.

There is a New Disease of the scalp and hair called Folliculitis. It is a catarrhal inflammation of the hair follicle. It is caused by a parasite that attacks the glands that furnish the nutriment for the hair. These glands are soon destroyed and the inflammation rapidly extends to the membrane lining the hair follicle. Here small quantities of pus are secreted, the hair roots are destroyed and the hair easily slips from the collapsing walls of its follicle.

Slow growth of hair comes from lack of hair food. The hair has no life. It is starved. It keeps coming out, gets thinner and thinner, bald spots appear, then actual baldness. The only good hair food you can buy is - APT'S HAIR VIGOR. It feeds the roots, stops starvation, and the hair grows thick and long. It cures dandruff also. Keep a bottle of it on your dressing table. It always restores color to faded or gray hair. Mind, we say "always."

Write the Doctor. He will send you his book on The Hair and Scalp. Ask him any question you wish about your hair and you will receive a prompt answer free. Address: Dr. J. C. A. B. Lowell, Mass.

THEY STRUCK IT RICH. For three years in succession the Weston Bros., of Dunham, have lost a calf by lightning in the same pasture adjoining Mr. Arthur Longway. The first time the animal was struck whilst making a stride, and the carcass was left rigid, two legs reaching back and two forward, and the neck and head upright. The second time, last year they were not at first sure that lightning was the cause of death until a thrifty young tanager two rods off turned red and showed the unmistakable evidence of having been killed by the electric fluid. A week ago, this year, the one killed was paralyzed, so singly as to have the tongue curled round a bunch of grass in the act of eating. This relation, though strange, is vouched for by the owners, who also add the statement that in each successive loss, it was the best calf of the year's raising.

Quite a large gathering was at the Forester's Hall on Thursday evening and were pleasantly entertained by the Waterville people. The ladies of the place are hard at work on garments for the India women. Miss Weston went away last week on a two weeks visit to Abenakis Springs. Her niece, Miss Brook, accompanied her. Quite a number of people from this place have been attending the revival meetings held at Lawrenceville by the Rev. Mr. Howard, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Howard and assisted by Mr. Sykes and Miss Howard. Mr. Boyes, from Minton, was calling upon friends here to-day. Delayed despatches by the Empress of India intimate that a series of earthquake shocks have been experienced in Yokohama recently, no less than three occurring on June 25. Five hundred houses were destroyed by fire at Takook, Yetchin Province, on June 27, and the fire was still raging when the mail left.

FAITH.

A happy child plays on the floor
And stacks his blocks and rings,
And he knows naught of ancient lore
And naught of worldly things;
But faith is in his heart, and when
The dark he looks to pray,
And what is all the lore of men,
The fairest fruit of truth or pain,
Against the faith he has, the faith I, too,
Could claim one day!

Beside the great cathedral door
A poor old woman stands,
A stranger unto worldly lore,
With knotted, tired hands,
But faith is rooted in her breast,
She hears the bell above,
And on the look her lips are prest,
And when 'tis said she goes to rest,
Triumphantly believing in her Saviour's holy love!

Oh, sage, what is the lore you teach?
The lore of science, all
The wise conceptions that you reach
Are pitiful and small
Beside the faith of him who plays
About the blocks of truth,
Beside the faith of her whose days
Were sunnier if she might not raise
The look to trusting lips to say 'Ave at the door!'

DECEIVERS EVER.

The Sorry Justification of Miss Porter's Judgment.

BY GWENDOLEN OVERTON.

It is all a mistake to suppose that good judgment and a level head are the outcome of experience. They are born, not acquired. The man of the world who has tried all things and held fast that which is his, may go all to pieces over the green bay from the country district would see in an instant. The capitalist and the bank president fall victims to quite as many lunko games as the farmer and the cowboy. And the same lack of rule holds good in the world of women. The blushing maiden from a French convent may be quite as able to take care of herself as the young woman who has absorbed modern fiction, seen men and numbers of many sorts and been given her own head in all things. It is a matter of common sense and intuition, and it all depends upon the girl.

But Miss Porter's father did not see that. He had theories to the contrary, and he believed in letting a girl from her earliest infancy see all she wanted of the world, that, having attained to maturity, she might be able to judge accurately for herself. It was a comfortable theory, moreover, and saved Judge Porter trouble. There were these—certain neighbors and friends of little Miss Porter's deceased mother—who would not admit that it was a theory at all. They said that Porter neglected his only child and let her run wild.

At the age of 5 little Miss Porter was a gourmet, smoked her cigarettes with an air and swore fluently. But at the age of 20 she was as innocent, if not as ignorant, as the aforesaid convent maiden is popularly supposed to be.

It was at this period that she met Calverley. He was English and handsome and agreeable. One of her not entirely unobjectionable friends had presented him, and after the custom of America, and more especially of the west, nothing further was necessary. If Miss Porter thought about it at all, she thought it would have been the height of folly and inhospitability to have asked further questions. She had to manage all these little matters alone. Judge Porter believed that she was equal to it by reason of his training, and, besides, he had other things to attend to.

But by and by one of the aforesaid friends of her mother decided, after much prayer and fasting, that it was her obvious duty to warn Miss Porter, since there was no one else to do it. She trembled at the necessity. Once, in the days of Miss Porter's tender infancy, some other good advice had been met with a storm of bad language, at the mere memory of which the good lady had shuddered and shivered ever since. But that had been long years ago, and Miss Porter's language was moderate now, not only moderate, but slightly British, as appeared when she received her mother's friend and led her to a cozy corner and proceeded to brew tea.

The 5 o'clock tea had never been very strong with "Porter. Don't do it," it was another result of the influence of Calverley, who was just then in the library across the hall smoking and reading and making himself entirely at home.

"I saw you at the theater the other night," began the elderly woman.

"Yes," said Miss Porter.

"Who was the man you were with?"

It was the scandal of Miss Porter's set—which was a good one in spite of all—that she did without champagne upon most occasions. "I dare say it was Mr. Calverley," said Miss Porter. She knew it was, and so did the other.

"Calverley? Do I know him? What is the rest of his name?"

Miss Porter tried not to look proud as she spoke the sonorous syllables and emphasized the hyphen. "It was Giles Hartpole Clayton-Calverley," she said.

"Oh!" said her mother's friend. "And where is he from?"

He was from England, from London.

"Oh!" she said again. "And who is he?"

Miss Porter informed her that he was well connected—splendidly connected. She was a little vague, but that was because she could not keep all the names at her tongue's end.

How had she met him? It was becoming decidedly cross questioning, and Miss Porter raised her brows. There was the same look in the baby blue eyes beneath them that had preceded the evil language years ago. But she was quite deadly civil now. "I met him through a friend. Were you at the dance last night?" she asked.

"I'll tell you about that later. Tell me about Mr. Calverley first, dear. Are you perfectly sure about him? One has to be careful of these Englishmen who are not properly accredited."

Miss Porter laughed—a haughty laugh. Not properly accredited, indeed! A friend of the prince, a relative of none or less half the peers, on nickname terms with all sorts of dukes and lords and things, a man of his perfectly apparent means! Not properly accredited, indeed! Her rebuke was terrible, though brief. She mentioned her own judgment and knowledge of the world, and her mother's friend withdrew, baffled, yet doubting.

As she went she caught sight of Calverley in a big leather chair before the fire, smoking his brier pipe, and that night she told her husband about it. "What can John Porter be thinking of?" she demanded.

"His own troubles perhaps," he suggested.

"The man is taking possession of the whole place."

Her husband dropped into poetry:

Primly sits, unsmiling heart he looks
From Labrador to Guadalupe,
Till, eluded out by seven friends,
He camps at suffrance on the stoop.

"The Spanish is bad, but the sentiment's all there."

"Some one ought to put a stop to it."

"Don't you be the same one, then. Let her work out her own salvation. If she is in love with him, she'll do as she likes; if she isn't, it won't matter."

There was presently no doubt about her being in love with him. She was frank in most things, was Miss Porter. There was but one matter in which she could bring herself to dissemble, and only then because Calverley impressed the great necessity for it upon her. He explained that though he loved her to madness and must marry her, there were sometimes reasons which Americans could not understand why it was best for Englishmen who were friends of the prince and so very well connected as he was, to keep their marriages secret for a time.

The girl from the French convent might have seen through that. But Miss Porter believed it. Anyway, the notion of an elopement rather appealed to her Call for a note which she found at the house explained otherwise. It was all about circumstances over which he had no control and sudden financial reverses and how he so always loved her and cherished her memory. Miss Porter believed it, and her heart was broken—really broken. She even went so far as to be desperately ill for six weeks, at the end of which time she came forth again, pale, subdued and wilted, but with unshaken faith in Calverley.

The faith remained unshaken through long months of silence, a silence so profound that she thought it must be of the grave, and decided that he had probably killed himself. But one day that her peace which filled her constant heart with hope once more.

"I saw," a man said to her casually, "I saw your friend, Clayton-Calverley, down south the other day."

Miss Porter turned white, after the most approved fashion of the shilling shocker, and clutched at her throat. The man very naturally wondered what the denuce he had got into anyway and explained in answer to her hoarse cry that Calverley had been in London on business and had seen the Britisher in the street.

Miss Porter asked if he lived there.

"Give it up. I didn't speak to him, and he didn't see me. Only he and I had had chosen to hide his identity. A name like Clayton-Calverley would naturally be unweirdly in a rough mining town."

Now she was a young woman who had always done exactly as she pleased without asking any one's leave—frequently for the excellent reason that there was no one about of whom to ask it. Such was at present the case. Judge Porter was away, to be gone indefinitely. So she packed her own bag and bought her own ticket and took that night's express for her south, and in due time the stage set her down in the town of Sandburg, where her appearance—although she was gowned with what had seemed shabby simplicity in San Francisco—caused considerable excitement and some little levity.

The hotel man was very civil, however, when she asked where she could find a man named Myers. He took her out into the street and pointed out a small, unmarked house some distance away. "That there's his shack," he told her, with a distinct note of inquiry in his voice, which she chose to ignore, "but he's on a day shift, and he won't come up until 6 o'clock."

She went to her room and threw herself on the bunk and waited until 6 o'clock. It began to be borne in upon her that she had done a decidedly bold thing even for her, and the way out of it was not altogether apparent. But, then, Calverley would show her that, and at 6 o'clock she went in search of him.

It was very much of a shock indeed, his place of abode. Her soul yearned toward him that she should have lived in luxury all these months, the while his life had been so low as this. It was also a very untidy woman who opened the shaky door in answer to her not too confident knock, an untidy woman and weary looking, but pretty, vital, and young. And the tired, shabby-looking man to her left wore pretty also. There was a third child. It was sitting on Calverley's knee before a red covered supper table, and Calverley was feeding it something. He sat with the spoon poised and a blank look in his eyes.

A terrible misgiving took hold of Miss Porter. With most women it would have been a certainty. "Giles!" she called, losing all presence of mind.

But he kept his. It was not the first trying situation he had had through, though it was a pretty one. He rose from his chair and spitted the child. His voice rose above its injured howl. "Miss Porter!" he exclaimed. "How charming! How unexpected! Let me present my wife. Mrs. Myers, Miss Porter."

She tried hard to take it well, to accept her one from him and turn the tragedy of her life into a society skirt after the manner of women and of the day. But she failed. When she opened her mouth to speak, no words would come, and she fell forward into Mrs. Myers' arms.

Mrs. Myers was very kind to her. She took her back to the hotel and stopped there with her that night. "You should not have been all alone," she said in her sweet English voice. "And when the girl started to sobbingly explain she checked her. "I understand," she said. "You need not tell me. He had sold a claim well and he went away to have a 'good time.'" She looked at Miss Porter with a wistful sort of pity and admiration. "And I dare say," she added, "that he had it."—Argonaut.

At sunset she reentered the bay alone, a sadder but not yet a wiser girl. Such were her judgment and knowledge of the world that she thought Calverley impressed her with a horrible accident.

A note which she found at the house explained otherwise. It was all about circumstances over which he had no control and sudden financial reverses and how he so always loved her and cherished her memory. There is no halt in the despatch of troops for South Africa, though chiefly now in the shape of drafts to replace casualties.

Lord Wolsley will resign the office of commander in chief of the British army this year, and it has been definitely decided that the position will be offered to Lord Roberts.

At sunset she reentered the bay alone, a sadder but not yet a wiser girl. Such were her judgment and knowledge of the world that she thought Calverley impressed her with a horrible accident.

A note which she found at the house explained otherwise. It was all about circumstances over which he had no control and sudden financial reverses and how he so always loved her and cherished her memory. Miss Porter believed it, and her heart was broken—really broken. She even went so far as to be desperately ill for six weeks, at the end of which time she came forth again, pale, subdued and wilted, but with unshaken faith in Calverley.

The faith remained unshaken through long months of silence, a silence so profound that she thought it must be of the grave, and decided that he had probably killed himself. But one day that her peace which filled her constant heart with hope once more.

"I saw," a man said to her casually, "I saw your friend, Clayton-Calverley, down south the other day."

Miss Porter turned white, after the most approved fashion of the shilling shocker, and clutched at her throat. The man very naturally wondered what the denuce he had got into anyway and explained in answer to her hoarse cry that Calverley had been in London on business and had seen the Britisher in the street.

Miss Porter asked if he lived there.

"Give it up. I didn't speak to him, and he didn't see me. Only he and I had had chosen to hide his identity. A name like Clayton-Calverley would naturally be unweirdly in a rough mining town."

Now she was a young woman who had always done exactly as she pleased without asking any one's leave—frequently for the excellent reason that there was no one about of whom to ask it. Such was at present the case. Judge Porter was away, to be gone indefinitely. So she packed her own bag and bought her own ticket and took that night's express for her south, and in due time the stage set her down in the town of Sandburg, where her appearance—although she was gowned with what had seemed shabby simplicity in San Francisco—caused considerable excitement and some little levity.

The hotel man was very civil, however, when she asked where she could find a man named Myers. He took her out into the street and pointed out a small, unmarked house some distance away. "That there's his shack," he told her, with a distinct note of inquiry in his voice, which she chose to ignore, "but he's on a day shift, and he won't come up until 6 o'clock."

She went to her room and threw herself on the bunk and waited until 6 o'clock. It began to be borne in upon her that she had done a decidedly bold thing even for her, and the way out of it was not altogether apparent. But, then, Calverley would show her that, and at 6 o'clock she went in search of him.

It was very much of a shock indeed, his place of abode. Her soul yearned toward him that she should have lived in luxury all these months, the while his life had been so low as this. It was also a very untidy woman who opened the shaky door

PARKER W. NAGLE DEAD

PASSED AWAY SOMEWHAT SUDDENLY YESTERDAY.

We regret to have to chronicle to-day the sudden and somewhat premature death of Mr. Parker W. Nagle, which took place yesterday afternoon at his late residence at Rock Forest.

It was confidently expected that the local men would turn the tables on the men from Quebec, in retaliation of the big defeat they suffered at the first of the season.

The game all through was fast, and though at times loose, was a very interesting one.

During the second game Quebec never touched the ball. Sherbrooke drew and from a piece of good combination work Ross notched number two in exactly half a minute.

The late P. W. Nagle was well known in this part of the country, having for about twenty years filled very creditably the important position of wood ranger and inspector of wood rangers of the Province of Quebec.

The deceased leaves a widow and five children, three sons and two daughters.

Mr. W. E. Paton is about to erect a house on Moore Street on the lot adjoining Mr. W. B. LeBaron's residence.

LACROSSE. Sherbrooke Whitewashes Quebec. SCORE FIVE STRAIGHT.

The match between the Ancient Capital representatives and the local team in the Interprovincial Lacrosse Series was an interesting one, and the large number of spectators had an opportunity of witnessing the local men get back to their old time form.

STORIES OF WEBSTER

ODD ADVICE THAT MADE A YOUNG LAWYER FAMOUS.

A Quaint Incident That Illustrates How Broad Was the Great Statesman's Sense of Humor and How Reckless He Was With His Money.

It was one of the noblest traits of Daniel Webster's character that he never treated the men who worked for him as menials.

He assured me that a man of more sense and habits, customarily than Mr. Webster, from him I learned more of Webster's home life and of his character as a man than from all the histories and biographies that have ever been written.

Every man, woman and child in the neighborhood had a full run of Webster's house from cellar to garret.

Of children he was particularly fond. Strangers children would nestle in his arms as readily as those who were familiar with his features.

"No human being could induce him to say a word about politics," he said. "I was a political subject, if any one mentioned politics, his brow darkened in an instant."

"Farming, fishing, horses, cattle, pigs and hogs—these were his favorite themes. He knew every one of his cattle by name as well as he knew the names of his brother senators.

A young lawyer of the village once came and asked him what he had better study to build himself up in his profession.

"Turnip seeds," was the laconic reply. The disciple he Blackstone followed his advice. He studied up everything that bore upon the subject of turnips until he became a master of the principles of that vegetable.

Mr. Williams, of Montreal, was referee and gave good satisfaction. The team lined up as follows:

WATERVILLE.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the Guild of St. John's Church, Waterville, was a great success. The town hall was filled to the door and most favourable comments in regard to the performance were heard on all sides, particularly in regard to the Fair and Tambourine Drill under the direction of Miss Parsloe, and the acting of Miss Amy Wells in "My Lord in Livery," and the solo so "cently" rendered by little Master Heath.
