SHERBROOKE — The 89th annual Sherbrooke Exposition ended today in a disappointing drizzle, but, although this drove many away from the midway, it failed to dampen the spirits of 7,000 wild-eyed bingo maniacs who crammed themselves into the Sports Palace last night.

Roughly 125,000 visitors had passed through the turnstiles by midnight Saturday, so the fair is far short if they hoped for goal of 200,000; however, fair president Carlo Fabi said he was "satisfied."

However, the big closing bingo event Sunday night broke all attendance records by a margin of 1,500.

But while the bingo players were straining over their cards, hoping for the elusive — and profitable — win, the Lawrence Carr Midway was being rapidly dismantled and loaded onto trucks, ready to move on to another fair.

Peace delegate appointed

Israelis press complaint

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel accused Egypt again Sunday of violating the Middle East ceasefire also announced Foreign Minister Abba Eban would head the Israeli delegation at United Nations peace talks.

Israeli leaders had threatened at one point to boycott the planned peace parley because of alleged Egyptian violations of the military standdown along the Suez Canal.

The fifth complaint filed by Israel with UN truce supervisors since the ceasefire took effect 15 days ago charged that Egypt is continuing to construct missile bases near the canal. The standdown applies to a 30-mile-wide zone along the Suez.

Reuters news agency said Premier Golda Meir called on Israeli allies "to help us sit at the negotiation table as a strong state not as a weak one." Apparently referring to the United States, she told an American fund-raising group in Tel Aviv that "our friends in the world have a choice—either to help us in our struggle or see us struggle alone for secure borders."

Mrs. Meir said Israel was interested in a real peace and not in territorial expansion and that secure Israeli borders were needed to avoid future war.

The Israeli government named Eban as its delegate to the Savard charges new valuation way to "disguise tax-raise"

SHERBROOKE — Many Sherbrooke proprietors may face a substantial increase in their municipal taxation as a result of the new roll submitted to the city council, former Ald. Marcel Savard, leader of the Sherbrooke Party and candidate for the mayoralty in the November municipal elections, said in a statement issued over the weekend.

Mr. Savard explained the procedures necessary for protesting the new scientific roll prepared by the evaluators. His statement read:

"As a result of the many requests for information, the many complaints by Sherbrooke proprietors, it is my duty to warn the citizens of Sherbrooke against the new valuation roll.

"It is not my intention to criticize the roll in its entirety; however, when we say that the properties have been evaluated at 100 per cent according to the new roll, I call this statement conservative, because many cases have been brought to my attention where properties have been evaluated at more than their market value.

"It is normal to undertake the preparation of a new valuation roll to correct certain inequities and certain injustices. However, it seems that we have created many other injustices.

"I do not mean to cast doubts on the competence of certain civic evaluators. However, in the face of so many protests, which they advised me were justified, I must inform the people of the procedure to follow to contest the evaluation of their properties.

CONTESTATION

"All proprietors who are or believe themselves to be evaluated at more than 100 per cent of the real value or market value must advise the city clerk, Mr. H.P. Emond, within 30 days of the depositing of the roll, that is before Sept. 14.

"This notice must be sent by registered letter indicating that the ratepayer is opposed to the new valuation and must also indicate the evaluation which he thinks would be fair and reasonable."

RAISE IN TAXES

"They say that the realty tax rate will be reduced as a result. This will not be established before December with the presentation of the budget for the year 1971. This is very

Hopes for deadlock break

Postal outlook better

OTTAWA (CP) — Thomas O'Connor, newly-appointed mediator in the turbulent postal dispute, said Sunday one "contentious issue" has been settled and a second is close to settlement.

He said in an interview he hopes to see a break in the deadlocked negotiations by mid-week. But mediation efforts would be broken off if no settlement was reached by the end of the week.

Negotiators for the postal unions and government agree, Mr. O'Connor said, that present discussions must "make it or break it" within a week.

He made his remarks after a five-hour meeting with both sides in separate and joint sessions Sunday, before returning to the bargaining rooms for night discussions. More meetings are set for today.

Mr. O'Connor, a labor relations specialist, said: "There's still a helluva lot more to work on. I'll be glad when this week is over."

He first met both sides in the lengthy dispute Thursday after his appointment was announced Wednesday by the Public Service Staff Relations Board. Further meetings were held Saturday and Sunday night.

Discussing the time limit for mediation efforts, Mr. O'Connor said there seemed to be "several deadlines." He referred to Prime Minister Trudeau's statement Friday indicating a week to 10 days would be allowed for mediation.

Mr. O'Connor said Saturday he is fairly confident a settlement would be reached within a week.

Postal workers have been staging rotating strikes since May to support their contract demands in negotiations with the treasury board, the government's bargaining agent.

The government has responded by closing down regional offices in some areas affected by the strikes.

The strikes reached new heights last week with more than half the postal workers off their jobs at times and more than a million family allowance cheques undelivered.

Mr. O'Connor said Saturday that meetings so far have dealt mainly with non-monetary matters and "groundwork." Both sides have been co-operative and there has been no sign of animosity, he said.

He met privately Saturday night with individual negotiators for both sides and planned to follow the same strategy Sunday in an apparently attempt to reach agreement on isolated points before presenting them to a full meeting.

The postal workers, who earn an average hourly wage of $3.06 are asking for an additional 58 cents an hour over two years—a 9.6-per-cent increase in each year.

The government has offered a 47-cent-an-hour increase over three years, representing a 5.9-per-cent annual increase.

Montreal stays off, Lennoxville affected

MONTREAL (CP) — Residents of Montreal and suburbs will be without mail delivery for the third consecutive regular-delivery day today when about 3,000 letter carriers and their colleagues who work as sorters walk off the job at 6 a.m.

A spokesman for the Montreal local of the Letter Carriers' Union said Sunday the 24-hour strike was called by the Council of Postal Unions in Ottawa as part of a series of rotating strikes to back demands in contract negotiations with the federal government.

Inside workers in the Montreal post office were off work Thursday and Friday and today's strike means local homes will have been without mail delivery for at least three days.

The strike will include much of western Quebec and stretch as far as Drummondville and Lennoxville in the Eastern Townships.

Windsor cleans

WINDSOR — Municipal Council here authorized the construction of a new water filtration plant in a meeting on the evening of August 20.

Passed in a special meeting, by-law 377 sets aside $675,000 for construction.

Council will explain the whole thing in a public assembly Sept. 9, at 7:30. Questions from Public associations, corporations, and the general public will be answered at that time.

Speaks to CERCE on regional development

Bourassa interested-but no immediate action

ORFORD MOUNTAIN PARK

— The provincial government has shown in recent months their interest in planning regional development in the Eastern Townships. Premier Robert Bourassa told a delegation from the Eastern Townships Regional Development Council during the course of a conference here Sunday night.

The Premier, who was a guest at the annual golf tournament organized by the Reform Club of Sherbrooke and the Eastern Townships, met with representatives of the Development Council at the JMC camp.

He said that contracts had already been let for the construction of key sections of the Trans-Quebec highway and that negotiations were underway with Maine state authorities for the opening of the Atlantic corridor through Lake Megantic linking Montreal with the Maritime provinces.

In all some 17 proposals were submitted to the Prime Minister by Gerald Gosselin, president of the executive committee, for the development of the Eastern Townships. These included the questions of pollution, municipal budgets on a regional basis, the creation of special zones, the improvement of roads in the Valcourt area to meet the needs of 5,000 employees at the Bombardier plant, the improvement of hospital facilities on a regional basis, the creation of an intermunicipal industrial park, improvements to recreational facilities at Mount Orford and Lake Megantic and town planning laws.

The golf tournament suffered from the all-day rain which deterred all but the most enthusiastic from participating in the event but more than 150 actually covered part or all of the 18-hole course.

Approximately 600 persons attended the supper held at the ski lodge.

25 selected in casting for "Hair"

MONTREAL — The selection of the 25 participants in the musical comedy "Hair" to be presented at la Comedie Canadienne starting September 15, was completed over the weekend.

Among those present at the selection were the promoters of the festival, Michel Gelinas and Samuel Gesser of Montreal, Ted Rado, of New York, the artistic director, John Bassett of Toronto, one of the producers, Mrs. Linda Hassur, director of auditions from Los Angeles, and David Radler, secretary-treasurer of the Eastern Townships Publishing Company.

In all, 350 applications had been received for the event and 25 of these were selected for yesterday's auditions.

The practices will begin today under the direction of Armand Coulette of New York.

FUTURE... By the year 2000, man's chance of traveling to a foreign country will be one out of two. (In the past 70 years, it increased from one out of fifty to one out of five.)

THE WELL CHILD

Interesting Booklet For New Mothers

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

A new mother can't start protecting her baby too soon. With this thought in mind, Dr. S. C. Southard has produced an excellent pamphlet, entitled "Congratulations to the New Mommy." The booklet is built around three key words—protection, obedience and responsibility. It can be had for 15 cents from your local Easter Seal Society or the National Easter Seal Society, 2023 W. Ogden Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60612.

Q—My 13-month-old son wakes up screaming nearly every night. What could cause this? Will he outgrow it?

A—Night terrors are usually seen in children who are high-strung or sickly. They usually outgrow them after several years. You may be able to shorten the period by making your son's waking environment as calm as possible and by making sure he is in good physical condition.

Q—My daughter, 7, jerks and tosses a lot when she is sleeping. Is this serious?

A—A certain amount of shifting of one's position during sleep is normal at any age. A child who is overtired, however, will jerk and have a very restless sleep.

especially in the first two or three hours after going to bed. You should see that she gets to bed a little earlier and that she avoids exciting games or television just before her bedtime.

Q—My niece, 4, wakes up almost every night. Should we ignore her, spank her or give her paregoric?

A—Every effort must be made to assure her that her parents or guardians love her. Try to find out why she wakes up. Usually it is from a sense of insecurity. Above all, don't spank or drug her for waking up.

Q—Our son, 3, has ringworm. How did he get this fungus disease? Is it serious?

A—The three parasitic fungi that cause ringworm are common in our environment. Infection with them depends on a personal susceptibility rather than on contagion. The organisms grow best in areas of the skin that are warm and moist. The disease is not serious but is often hard to get rid of and has a tendency to recur. Several effective fungicides are available, such as half-strength Whitfield ointment, undecylenic acid (Desenex), tolnaftate and triacetin.

Says "front members" treated him "like a brother"

By T. JEFF WILLIAMS

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Time magazine correspondent Robert S. Anson returned to this Cambodian capital Sunday after three weeks detention by Communist troops, apparently Viet Cong and North Vietnamese. He said he did not think he would cover the Cambodian conflict any more because "I don't want to see my friends die."

Looking thinner than when he drove out alone Aug. 3, Anson talked with reporters about some of his experiences but declined to go into details about his captors, or their location. He drove back in the same car in which he left here and broke into tears briefly when the first reporter to spot him shook his hand.

Anson, 25, said he left Phnom Penh Aug. 3 because he heard a battle was continuing around Skoun, about 40 miles northeast of the capital.

"Frankly, I was not as careful as I should have been," he said.

Anson said he drove past some troops beside the road just before Skoun. It dawned on him that the troops had leaves in their helmets, Anson said, and "Cambodian troops don't wear leaves in their helmets."

TORE UP CREDENTIALS

Anson said he tore up his American and South Vietnamese press credentials, keeping only his Cambodian press card, and turned his car around. The soldiers waved for him to stop, he said, and he backed up to stop and think.

Two other soldiers asked "from nowhere," Anson said, and led him away.

Anson declined to say in the interview whether his captors were Vietnamese or Cambodian. He referred to them as members of "the front."

"No one laid a hand on me or even touched me unless I said they could, like helping me upstairs. Their treatment was marvellous. They treated me as a brother."

He said they kidded him about his weight and remarked how big Americans were.

"I am delighted to be back, of course, but also I have left many friends back there. They were not my jailers or captors or enemy."

OTHERS FREED

Anson's release had been announced Saturday in a telegram from the ousted Cambodian chief of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk to this correspondent. Sihanouk is in Peking.

Earlier Sunday, French television journalist Alain Clement arrived in Paris from Bangkok, Thailand, after being freed. Clement said Lydie Nicaise, a French freelance writer, also had been released and would arrive in Paris soon.

Clement added that Agence France-Press correspondent Xavier Baron and a Dutch journalist also would be freed shortly.

Sihanouk's telegram said Anson was among four being released, but he did not name the others.

The release of the four promised by Sihanouk would leave 18 foreign journalists missing. Among them are three Americans, freelance photographer Sean Flynn, who is the son of the late Errol Flynn, Dana Stone of the Columbia Broadcasting System and Welles Hagen of the National Broadcasting Co.

Recruiting suspended pending investigation

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican announced Sunday night that the recruiting of impoverished girls from India to become nuns in European convents has been suspended pending an investigation.

It confirmed that "problems" have arisen in connection with the practice but denied there has been any traffic of Indian girls by religious orders.

The Vatican statement climaxed a feverish day of consultations following reports of a nun-recruiting scandal published in the London Sunday Times. The paper said European convents, short of recruits, had purchased more than 1,200 Indian peasant girls from the Indian state of Kerala.

The Vatican said its investigation into "accusations and complaints," presumably by the girls, began in July and is not concluded. But it said many parts of the newspaper report are untrue or unduly exaggerated.

Earlier, a high Vatican source said the Indian girls were given "glowing prospects" of training in Europe, but often their educational capacity ruled this out and they became housemaids in convents.

Addressing a television audience at the first session of the three-day conference of the Association of the Scientific, Engineering and Technological Community of Canada (SciTec), Mr. Munro said the initial step would be the analysis of all known material on the subject and the commissioning of ongoing research to provide Ottawa with "ever sharper tools" with which to assess and control pollution.

Study, however, would quickly have to form the basis of action in the form of standards, initially quality standards.

"These must be national in scope, since our aim is to reduce pollution, not merely transfer it from currently-saturated areas to relatively cleaner areas which, without foresight, may soon turn into pollution havens as bad as the worst of which we have now," he said.

These standards would have to be flexible to ensure adequate protection for the majority.

Next would come emission standards, also "sophisticated and flexible." The government could use regulatory standards by region, by industry, by type of pollutant, by polluting substance, or by sliding variations of a number of these.

Mr. Munro said the government was thinking of establishing three major bases of control—desirable, acceptable and permissible.

EXAMINING ENFORCEMENT The desirable category would represent an optimum state of air cleanliness; acceptable would be the foundation of emission standards for existing industries, and permissibles would serve as a guide to action in short-term emergency situations.

The federal government was examining the enforcement provisions open to it.

The fight for clean air would not succeed unless it was waged as an integrated campaign among all three levels of government, Mr. Munro said.

Mr. Munro said the clean air act which he will present to the next session of Parliament will be based on a preventive management concept.

Whereas in the past pollution legislation had largely fought "brush fires"—extinguished a spark already ignited before it spread too widely—the government now was "seeking to install controls which will prevent the sparks from igniting."

New marine lab to open today

By DAVE BLAICKIE

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — The Huntsman Marine Laboratory, a fisheries research venture involving 19 Canadian universities and both the federal and New Brunswick governments, will be officially opened today.

The laboratory, named after Dr. A.G. Huntsman of St. Andrew's, a pioneer marine ecologist, is located next to the federal fisheries research board biological station at nearby Brandy Cove.

Referred to by its founders as a "co-operative venture in learning," it is planned that the laboratory will bring together undergraduate and post-grau-date students as well as government representatives and faculty members for fisheries research work.

Facilities available include a lecture hall, fully-serviced laboratories, a live specimen-holding area, photographic darkroom and greenhouse. Further facilities are planned as the project's 20-acre site is developed.

Formal teaching programs will be fostered and integrated by an educational committee.

Prof. Keith Ronald of the University of Guelph, Ont., elected president and chairman of the board of directors at the laboratory's first annual meeting here Sunday, says the laboratory will be a centre for general education in the marine sciences.

Marine pollution, a problem of growing concern to ecologists, will provide the focal point for activities scheduled in conjunction with the official opening.

Dr. A. H.W. Needler, federal deputy minister of fisheries and forestry and the resident director designate of the laboratory, will moderate a symposium on marine pollution prior to the opening.

A spokesman for the Canadian Forces base in Bagotville, 120 miles north of Quebec City, said Sunday Capt. Lambert has enough concentrated foodstuffs to last "three or four days." He said ejection seats are also equipped with flares, a radio pack and an inflatable raft.

Weather in the search area Sunday morning was excellent but conditions were expected to deteriorate later in the day.

Ladies to boycott

BOSTON (AP) — Betty Friedan, founder of the National Organization for Women, predicted Sunday that millions of women will boycott their jobs or shut down their kitchens in support of the national women's strike Wednesday.

Mrs. Friedan made the projection during a sermon at a church service that launched a week of women's liberation activities. The campaign will centre on Wednesday, the 50th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th amendment to the United States Constitution which gave women voting rights.

Instead of their usual work, she proposed that women devote the day to "analysing the conditions which keep us from being all we might be."

Her exposition of the strike motives was prepared for a service at Arlington Street Church.

Two new jets collide, one flier missing

BAGOTVILLE, Que. (CP) — The ground and air search for a Canadian Forces pilot missing since the mid-air crash of two CF-5 jets entered its third day Sunday in a desolate area 85 miles northeast of Bagotville.

Saturday, a H-21 helicopter taking part in the search for Capt. Denis Lambert, 30, of Arvida, Que., crashed and left one of the seven men aboard injured.

The aircraft, one of four helicopters taking part in the massive search, was demolished.

Capt. Lambert and Lieut. Marc Fortier of Quebec City, both flying routine training missions, were forced to eject from their supersonic jets early Friday after the collision. Their parachutes were spotted by a third CF-5 in the area.

Samson urges unity

EDMONTON (CP) — Quebec separatism would pose no threat to Canada if Quebecers were satisfied with their living standard, says Camil Samson, leader of the Quebec provincial Creditistes.

The problems of language are secondary, he told delegates Friday at a federal Social Credit policy convention for the western provinces.

Social Crediters in all provinces must work hand in hand to attain federal Social Credit monetary policies and end the separatist threat, he said.

"We will join our hands with our brothers in the West. We need you as much as you need us."

All Quebec provincial MPPs are ready to support the federal Social Credit movement, he said.

The rally's two-day convention is designed to celebrate the 35th anniversary of the first Social Credit government in Alberta as well as to prepare federal Social Credit ranks in the West for the next federal election expected in 1972.

The Mitrione tragedy

There is a particular tragedy about the murder of Daniel A. Mitrione, 50 and father of nine, by terrorists in Uruguay, for he was a special kind of man.

As police chief in Richmond, Ind., he was an ardent advocate of bringing the police and the public into closer relationship.

He was the driving force in setting special traffic courts for students. He was active with baseball Little Leagues and bicycle and soapbox rodeos. He was a member of the boards of directors of the Child Guidance Clinic, the Public Health Nursing Association and the Welfare Council of Wayne County, Indiana. He worked closely with young people in safety campaigns. He was active in the YMCA, the community hospital and his church.

Since joining the Agency for International Development in 1960, Mitrione has pushed the same theme — that police in a country are effective only when they are friends with, and close to, the people in the communities they serve.

That is, in foreign posts, Mitrione was helping to build that new kind of police force which reformers constantly urge.

The other kidnapped American, Claude L. Fly, 65, is a soil expert, working to better the agricultural output of Uruguay and thus raise the living standards of its people.

If future Vietnams are to be prevented, then the type of work these two men have been doing must be carried on and with increased vigor.

The fact that highlights the urgency of what Mitrione and his associates have been carrying out is that Uruguay is not a dictatorship and not a county of oppressed people.

Uruguay is credited with being one of the most socially "advanced" republics in South America. Education is free, including college. There is complete religious tolerance. The country has one of the world's most extensive social-welfare programs, including old age pensions and child welfare. It has a volunteer army. Suffrage is universal.

If Uruguay has the problem of terrorism to the extent so dramatized in recent weeks, how much greater is the need of other Latin, African and Asian countries — if we are not to have chaos eventually.

Service drug problem

As if marijuana use by American soldiers in Vietnam were not enough of a problem, some troops have discovered a new way to get high — on a substance supplied by the Army itself.

Word has got around that eating or inhaling a plastic explosive known as C-4 will produce intoxication similar to that from drinking ethyl alcohol. As a result, reports Science Service, every military hospital in Vietnam has had patients made ill from the effects of the explosive, some of them accidentally, some of them intentionally.

C-4 is a putty-like material widely used for clearing land and destroying enemy bunkers. Because it can be detonated only with an electric spark, it is relatively safe to carry and store, and because it burns without exploding it can be used as a cooking fuel. In fact, field manuals suggest the use of C-4 when nothing else is available.

The manuals are now being revised to include warnings about the possible harmful effects of C-4. However, notes Dr. William J. Stone of the Nashville, Tenn., Veterans Hospital, "Warnings have not reduced the use of marijuana, or even heroin and other drugs."

C-4, he thinks, is but another symptom of the world-wide problem of drug abuse.

Medical adjustments

A lot of wrenching adjustments will have to be made when, as it eventually must, Canada joins the rest of the world in adopting the metric system of measurement. But one that has seldom been mentioned involves the very way we talk.

Consider these metric equivalents of some common expressions, as noted by World Week magazine:

"A miss is as good as 1.61 kilometers."

"There isn't 0.06 gram of truth in it."

"He felt 3.05 meters tall."

"First down and 9.14 meters to go."

"Don't hide your light under 35.25 liters."

These adages are so much a part of the language, however, that possibly they may remain as archaic hangovers. We still say, "Penny wise and pound foolish," and it has been over a century since the pound was a unit of money in this country.

Air Pollution survey

Reductions don't hurt industry

By HARRY FOELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Occasional reduction of operations by major industries because of air pollution has had no noticeable effect on production, a survey by The Canadian Press shows.

Spokesmen for industries in Toronto and Hamilton, where air pollution is monitored by the Ontario government, agreed that what has invariably been described as reduction of operations should more properly be referred to as an adjustment in work procedure.

Under the monitoring system used in the two industrial centres, industry is asked to reduce operations when the air pollution index rises above

32. The index is based on a measurement of sulphur dioxide and floating particles. A reading below 32 is considered acceptable and if it should rise above 100 it would be considered dangerous to health.

In Toronto, the air pollution index has risen above the acceptable level set out by the provincial government's air management branch only on about a dozen occasions since it was established last March.

In Hamilton, it had risen above 32 only on one occasion in the month after that city got an air-monitoring system this summer.

Major industries surveyed said the few requests by the air management branch for voluntary reductions have produced no hardships.

The air management branch refuses to release the names of major polluters unless charges are laid, but it is known that in Toronto they include the Ontario Hydro Hearn generating plant, the works department of Metropolitan Toronto which burns 2,000 tons of garbage a day, and some hospitals. In Hamilton, the major smoke producers are the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. and Dominion Foundries and Steel Co. Ltd.

A spokesman for Ontario Hydro said it has been asked to adjust operations only about half a dozen times. He said this did not involve the layoff of any personnel, nor did he expect personnel would ever be laid off in the future because of air pollution.

"There is enough work to do in any case, so nobody is sent home," the spokesman said. "We just readjust the work."

HAS OWN SYSTEM

Ontario Hydro says it has its own air-monitoring system and does not even wait until the air management branch asks it to reduce the generation of power.

But the spokesman said Ontario Hydro has bought power from Hydro-Quebec on several occasions when operations were reduced. He said the cost has been negligible.

Stelco and Dofasco in Hamilton each reduced operations once when the index there reached 36 about six weeks ago and remained above 32 for 16 hours.

Bob Valentine, spokesman for Stelco, said the reduction involved only 40 men in the coke-producing operation and all of them were switched to other work. Stelco employs 14,500 men.

Peace through understanding taught at children's village is no barrier to communication for the 39 youngsters from 10 countries who have been attending the Children's International Summer Village at Carleton University.

By KATHY DENMAN
OTTAWA (CP) — Language

Nine different languages are spoken and the children, all 11 years old, rely mostly on pointing, signs and demonstrations to understand each other. Living together for a whole month seems bound to lead to them learning at least a few words of other languages.

Austria, Belgium, Denmark, El Salvador, Guatemala, Japan, the Philippines, Sweden, the United States and Canada are all represented at the village.

The director, Jon Carson of Ottawa, said the purpose of the camp is to promote peace through understanding.

"If we can show children of 11 that they might look different on the outside but inside they're all the same, then it might have an effect on their attitudes when they get older," he said.

HAVE SAME PROBLEMS
Living, playing and eating together at the camp are designed to help to show them that they all have the same problems regardless of color, creed or race.

Rather than have the different countries compete against one another in sports and other activities, the children are divided into four groups named after the four winds "because the winds are international."

Groups are mixed so that each country is represented. Songs, games and dances are taught in several languages, with each child contributing something from his country and in his language.

With the songs being repeated over and over again every day, the children soon learn the words, even if they don't know what they mean.

"If they learn the words to these songs then they might recognize a word or two when they hear someone speaking that language," Mr. Carson said.

The games are simple ones that don't require much explaining. The leaders use one or two children to demonstrate, and it doesn't take long before they understand how to play.

ALL JOIN HANDS
The dances are mainly all-join-hands-in-a-circle types and the children learn to sing in several languages as they dance around. The boys didn't seem very keen on one Flemish dance that required them to kiss the girls, but they all co-operated after giggles and blushes.

Other activities at the village include drama, arts and crafts and languages.

Each child spends a week-end with a Canadian family during his stay so he can learn something of the Canadian way of life.

The leaders are volunteers. Each country sent one leader along with the children and Norway and The Netherlands each contributed a leader, but no children. Also helping out are four junior leaders from Ottawa, who have all attended previous villages.

Fifty-five countries are involved in Children's International Summer Village with headquarters in Britain. This year 15 countries are holding villages. The children are picked on the basis of intelligence and ability to communicate with others, and they have to be outgoing. Any 11-year-old can apply.

Which camp a child is sent to is decided in Britain. The names are picked at random from each camp from the successful candidates.

Soviets to talk on their terms

By LUBOR J. ZINK

OTTAWA — (TNS) — Attempts at solving the Middle East conflict and the German problem through negotiations are not new.

Made repeatedly by the West over the past two decades, they all floundered on the Soviet "Nyet". What, then, accounts for Moscow's willingness to talk now?

No two Kremlinologists I know of agree on the answer. Some ascribe Russia's readiness to parley entirely to the Sino-Soviet rift.

The possibility of an armed clash with Mao's China, they say, is forcing Soviet strategists to secure their Western flank and ease tensions in the Middle East whether they like it or not.

Others think that Russia may have extended itself militarily beyond the capacity of Soviet economy to sustain the momentum of the thrusts and that the Kremlin needs a period of relative calm on the international scene to consolidate the gains.

Some students of Soviet foreign policy maintain that Moscow is anxious to preserve the shaky Brandt-Scheel coalition in Bonn in power and to help the Soviet-supported regimes in the key Arab state bring the Maoist-oriented Arab guerrilla movements under control.

There may be a grain of truth in all these theories, although the alleged Soviet fear of conflict with China could be exaggerated. The men in the Kremlin know that even if their quarrel with Peking was to deteriorate into open large-scale warfare, they have nothing to fear from the West. They know that NATO, which sat tight during the upheavals in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, would not attack, and that West Germany could not cause trouble even if it wanted to.

So what does account for the Soviet nod to negotiations of hitherto non-negotiable issues?

I think the answer that might be nearest to the truth is that Moscow judges the political and psychological climate in the West ripe for a major diplomatic manoeuvre that would advance the Soviet long-term plan for world hegemony beyond Stalin's and Khrushchev's dreams, while decreasing the risk of a nuclear clash with the United States.

To come closer to its ultimate goal, the Kremlin must remove NATO from its path in Europe and gain complete control of the Middle East — which has not only the reserves of oil the USSR will soon need, but provides the strategically-vital link between the Black Sea, the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean.

Stalin and Khrushchev tried to get rid of NATO by threats. The pressure tactic, concentrated on West Berlin and West Germany, not only did not work but every one of the Soviet-manufactured brink-of-war crises in those areas actually tended to revitalize the Atlantic Alliance.

Seeing the futility of that approach, which was pursued intermittently until the early 1960s, Khrushchev tried the Cuban missile shortcut to frighten and black-mail the U.S., core of the alliance, into impotence. When that failed, the slow method of political disruption of NATO through psychological warfare was substituted for missile-rattling. It was patiently pursued throughout the 1960s.

The first success of the "peaceful co-existence" stratagem came when France withdrew from NATO's unified command and de Gaulle started chasing the dream of French-led Europe "from the Atlantic to the Urals."

Then, under Trudeau's insistence, Canada cut her contribution to collective Western defense.

At the same time, isolationist pressures in the U.S. started gaining ground. In Germany, the premise of eventual reunification of the country through Bonn's firm alliance with the West lost credence. Simultaneously, the prospect of the beginning of American withdrawal from Europe by mid-1971 helped Brandt launch his policy of "normalization" of relations with the Soviet bloc as an alternative approach to the attainment of basic German national aspirations.

By now, the combination of all these factors has created such a crisis of confidence within NATO that a "negotiated" demise of the Alliance is a distinct possibility.

The Kremlin certainly has nothing to lose from giving it a try. The confusion and demoralization of the electorates in the Western democracies has progressed far enough to be extremely helpful in the manoeuvre which is now backed by Soviet nuclear parity with U.S. and by a rapidly-growing Russian naval power.

In the Middle East, through skilful exploitation of the Arab hatred of Israel, the Soviet Union now has almost entirely eliminated Western influence.

There are Soviet rockets on the Suez Canal; in Libya the Russians virtually took over air and naval bases from the British and the Americans; and a string of recently-acquired Soviet naval bases stretches from Egypt via Yemen and the Gulf of Aden along the east coast of Africa as far south as the formerly-British island of Mauritius near the Tropic of Capricorn.

A clash with the U.S. over Israel could jeopardize all these precious acquisitions whose full strategic worth will come into play with the re-opening of the Suez Canal.

To risk destruction of these patiently-acquired commanding positions whose new management cannot be dislodged by any negotiations would certainly be stupid.

Hence the Kremlin's willingness to talk "peace" on Soviet terms.

Says price increases threaten world trade

LONDON (CP) — Abnormally rapid price increases in Western industrial nations, mainly the result of large wage increases is threatening world trade, an authoritative British research institute said today.

It also expressed some surprise at Canada's decision to float her dollar.

The National Institute of Economic and Social Research backed last month's cry of alarm from the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development over the rising tide of inflation in its 21 member-states, the most advanced industrial nations.

The British institute said it was less hopeful than the OECD on the chance of slowing the rate of inflation next year, despite what appears to be a levelling off of prices in the United States.

The institute in its quarterly survey was also pessimistic about Britain's future economic development and said it is drastically cutting its previous forecast of the size of the country's expected foreign trade surplus.

Britain's economy, the institute said, is hit by a dilemma: rising prices, costs of manufacturing and wages need strict curbs to keep British prices competitive in foreign markets but stagnation of industrial production and investment and rising unemployment call for a relaxation of those curbs.

The institute is an independent, non-profit-making research organization which is supported financially by various British and international foundations. It is headed by Sir Eric Roll, former British delegate to the International Monetary Fund.

The survey noted an "exceptionally rapid increase in the value of world trade" and said it expected this to continue through the rest of the year and at a slightly reduced rate next year.

But it also noted that almost all of the increase came from higher prices while the volume of world trade showed little expansion and appeared to be slowing.

The institute said some aspects of the Canadian government's decision to float the dollar seem surprising.

Its survey says that the appreciation of the Canadian dollar since fixed parity was dropped should provide some relief to the United States balance of payments.

A SURPRISING DECISION
"Economic relations with the U.S. must obviously have been an important consideration," the review says. "In other respects their (the Canadian) decision seems a rather surprising one."

"Apart from the apparent conflict with the present articles of agreement of the International Monetary Fund, unemployment in Canada had been increasing for several years and wage costs per unit of output as well as export prices had been rising faster than in most competing countries."

"Though Canada was certainly not immune from the almost universal problem of inflation, it could hardly be said that pressure on resources was excessive, and it is questionable whether Canadian exports in general were unduly competitive overseas."

"Their recent high level was attributable to rather special factors—the aftermath of the strikes in the docks and the metal industry; wheat exports to Russia, and high metal prices; and the stability of imports could only have been temporary."

"On the other hand, Canada's holdings of foreign exchange increased in the first five months by some $800 million, the bulk of it in May, when a further $360 million was acquired for future delivery."

"The monetary system may be less fitted to cope with such inflows in Canada than in other countries where they have become a familiar problem."

Says Niarchos being persecuted

ATHENS (Reuters) — The Greek government Sunday rejected an accusation that a public prosecutor is hounding millionaire shipowner Stavros Niarchos over allegations that he fatally injured his wife Eugene.

Constantine Fafoutis, prosecutor for Piraeus, has asked that Niarchos stand trial. Mrs. Niarchos, 42, died on her husband's private island of Spetsopoula in May.

Rene de Chambrun, a lawyer for Niarchos, said Saturday in Paris that the charges filed against the shipowner amount to a "veritable Greek tragedy."

"I do not understand this new action of the public prosecutor, who from the beginning of the affair seems to want to hound Mr. Niarchos," the lawyer said.

In a statement Sunday, Greek Justice Minister Angelos Tsoukalas said: "I can give positive assurances that Greek justice has never fallen from its acknowledged high level of integrity and independence."

Fafoutis has formally submitted to the council of magistrates of the Piraeus courts a request for an indictment against Niarchos, 61. It contains a charge that he inflicted fatal injuries on his wife.

Greek penal law provides for prison terms of up to 25 years for any person found guilty of causing fatal injury.

The council of magistrates is expected to sit in mid-September. Legal sources said here the council can commit Niarchos for trial, modify the charges or acquit him. A decision is expected in mid-October, the sources added.

In a statement issued Saturday from his yacht, Creole, anchored in the French Riviera port of Villefranche-sur-Mer, Niarchos said there is "only one sad truth" about his wife's death. The statement continued:

"A commission made up of six professors at the University of Athens, who are the greatest Greek experts in legal medicine, handed in their report on July 15.

Their unanimous conclusion is categorical: Mrs. Niarchos took an overdose of a powerful sleeping draught which caused her death."

important, I must warn the people against the promise that the tax rate will be readjusted accordingly.

"Moreover, it must be clearly established that the proprietor who has suffered an increase of more than 74 per cent will necessarily see his taxes raised, and this even if the mill rate is lowered proportionally.

"The new valuation roll is according to the mayor, at 100 per cent of the market value. But I believe that the 100 per cent is exceeded and furthermore that the evaluation roll at 100 per cent is too high. For example, in Montreal, the role we say is 100 per cent is really 90 per cent. Why exceed this level?"

TENANTS

"This new evaluation roll will necessarily once more affect the tenant, because the owner of multiple dwellings properties will probably make the tenants absorb this tax increase and many will take advantage of this to raise the rent more than the increase in taxes. Again the little man will pay.

"I fear that this increase in evaluation it is really a way to disguise an increase in taxes."

UN negotiations following a six-hour cabinet meeting, The Israeli UN ambassador, Yosef Tekoah, will serve as alternate, cabinet secretary Michael Arnon said.

The peace talks are to be conducted by UN special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring, although the site has not yet been determined.

Eban's selection was seen as Israel's way of stressing its preference for the talks to be held on the foreign minister level, while accommodating Arab demands that the contacts start between UN envoys. Egypt and Jordan, the two Arab countries in the pact, already have named their UN ambassadors as their delegates.

Tekoah is to represent Israel at the opening round of talks while Jerusalem is expected to seek to have them elevated to foreign minister level.

Jordanian Foreign Minister Antone Attallah said in Amman his country will be represented only by its UN ambassador, despite the Israeli decision. He said, however, that he would lead a delegation to New York in mid-September for the opening session of the UN.

The Arab states want New York as site of the talks. Israel suggested a location closer to the Middle East but it did not make this a strict condition.

In another development, King Hussein of Jordan and top officials of his government returned to Amman after a three-day trip to Egypt during which they are believed to have hammered out a joint strategy with Egyptian President Nasser for the peace talks.

The Jordan-Egypt representatives were reported also to have discussed the challenge to the Arab-Israeli ceasefire by the Palestinian commandos in Jordan and the bitter dispute between Egypt and Iraq over peace moves.

Observers think Hussein and the Jordanian leaders will ask the Palestinians to avoid any large-scale military action that would jeopardize the peace talks before anything concrete emerges from them.

The Egyptian-Jordanian position in the talks is that Israel must withdraw from all territories occupied in the 1967 war and a just settlement must be reached in the Palestinian refugee problem, in accordance with UN resolutions on this subject.

Plan for cleaner air

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Forty-four vehicles went through pre-race trials Sunday for a cross-country clean-air car race beginning today.

The race is one of air quality rather than speed. The winners will be the vehicles emitting the least pollution during the 3,600-mile trip from Massachusetts Institute of Technology to California Institute of Technology.

The cars were tested Sunday for pollution emission and were given points for performance trials which included simulated urban driving, braking while travelling at a speed of 60 miles per hour, acceleration and noise tests.

Thirty entries use the internal combustion engine of standard cars. But some use liquid propane, some compressed natural gas and a number run on non-leaded gasoline.

There are also steam, turbine, electric and electric hybrid engines in the race.

The National Air Pollution Control Administration, a division of the health, education and welfare department, is providing $5,000 prizes in each of five categories. The administration also will test the winners for two months after the race in hopes of finding alternatives to the present smog-causing cars.

There are two Canadian entries.

The University of Toronto has entered a hybrid car using a battery-powered electric engine for city use and a propane gas-fuelled internal combustion engine for rural use.

St. Clair College in Windsor, Ont., has entered a car with a modified internal combustion engine that burns propane.

in her hair and carried a colonial of tangerine and white baby poms. Mr. Marcel Cote was groomsmen and Mr. Nadeau stood as witness for his son.

Mrs. Cunningham, mother of the bride, wore a dress of rose pink crimplene trimmed in white and wore white accessories and a corsage of mauve mums.

White and blue carnations and white tapers in crystal completed the decor.

Buffet refreshments were served. Mr. Cote proposed a toast to the bride responded to by the groom.

Brothers are reunited

EAST FARNHAM — Two brothers were reunited on June 29, 1970 when Mr. George Hunt of East Farnham decided on an overseas flight to London, England to visit his brother, Frank, whom he hadn't met for 44 years. Best two-of-three series begins tonight

Indians, Red Sox in LL final

SHERBROOKE — When playoff time rolls around, anything is liable to happen.

Especially in Sher Lenn Little League action. The Senators can attest to that. The Sherbrooke Kiwanis Club sponsored regular season champs fell by the wayside at the hands of the Indians 7-2 Friday night while the Red Sox advanced to the final with a 4-3 squeaker over the Orioles.

In Series A, the Senators had won the first game, 8-5, of a best two-of-three affair, but succumbed to the aggressive Indians by a 6-3 count Thursday night to even up the series and lost the rubber match on Friday.

The Indians climaxed their victory to the league final with a six-run outburst in the sixth inning. Rejean Cabana paced the offensive attack for the Tribe with two singles and a triple, while Claude Grenier, Claude Brouillard and Jacques Williams each chipped in for two safeties. Sher Lenn all-star Pierre St. Cyr was credited with the win, scattering six hits along the way.

In Series B, the Red Sox bounced back to capture their rubber match against the Orioles. The Sox had won the initial encounter, 5-3, prior to bowing in the second, 10-4.

The Orioles had taken an early lead in Friday night's deciding game with two runs in the first frame, only to have the Red Sox counter with three tallies in the second. The winning run, however, came in the bottom of the sixth, enabling the Sox to meet the Indians tonight in the first game of a best two-of-three series at the Parade Grounds.

The Red Sox, coached by Andre Boisvert, were led offensively by Jacques Ellyson with two singles and a double and mates Daniel Denault and Daniel Roy each collected two singles. Franco Zol registered the mound win while Alain Watkins was tagged with the loss.

Game time tonight is slated for 6:00 at the Parade Grounds.

MONTREAL (CP) — George Springate, rookie backbencher with Coach Robert Bourassa's Liberals, current leaders in the Quebec Political League, was signed Sunday for a five-day trial with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference.

The Als hope Springate, elected member of the Quebec national assembly for the Montreal riding of Ste. Anne in the April 29 provincial general election and a backbencher in Premier Bourassa's Liberal government, will be the solution to their place-kicking problems.
