Autopsy today for victim in Levesque accident

MONTREAL (CP) — An autopsy will be performed today to determine if a man was dead before being struck and dragged 140 feet early Sunday by a car driven by Quebec Premier Rene Levesque.

But a police spokesman said police do not expect to lay charges against the 54-year-old premier because "there is no reason to suspect negligence."

Coroner Maurice Laniel said he would examine police reports to determine if there will be an inquest. In Quebec province the question of criminal charges in a death is usually determined by a coroner's inquest.

Police said Edgar Trotter, 62, was lying in the middle of Cote des Neiges Road, a hilly, winding artery, at 4:15 a.m. EST Sunday when Mr. Levesque and his personal secretary Corinne Cote were returning home after visiting friends.

Lieut. Larry Levis, in charge of public relations for Montreal Island police, said the premier told police he was travelling south at about 25 miles an hour when he spotted a man on the street waving his arms.

Mr. Levesque told police he turned around to avoid the man, later identified as George Wilson, only to see the inert body on the street in front of him.

DRAGGED BODY

Lieut. Levis said the premier slammed on his brakes but could not stop in time. He said it was not unusual the man's body was dragged 140 feet by a car travelling 25 m.p.h. because the vehicle was going downhill on icy pavement.

Police said Mr. Wilson, who had spotted the body seconds before the accident, had turned on his hazard lights and was walking toward the body when the premier's car appeared.

Investigators have no idea how Mr. Trotter came to be lying on the street. He carried no identification.

The police spokesman said Mr. Levesque was not asked to submit to a breath analysis.

"A breathalyzer test is given only when we think a person may be under the influence of alcohol," Lieut. Levis said.

Mr. Levesque, Miss Cote and Mr. Wilson were taken to a nearby police station following the accident and were released after questioning.

The car driven by the premier, a brown, 1973 Ford Capri, is owned by Miss Cote, 28, his personal secretary for the last five years.

They were returning from a social evening at the home of Yves Michaud, former editor of the defunct daily Le Jour.

Separated from his wife for several years, Mr. Levesque has often escorted Miss Cote to social functions.

Energy crunch eases slightly

Hundreds of thousands of laid-off workers and vacationing students headed back to jobs and classes today as the natural-gas crunch eased a bit in the northeastern United States. But icy temperatures persisted, threatening still more energy curbs, and much of the East and Midwest was still digging out from heavy snows.

Temperatures near 20 below Celsius were recorded today in Minneapolis, Chicago and Cincinnati, and readings were well below freezing in New York, Boston, Washington and Philadelphia.

New York state negotiated a couple of deals to bring natural gas in from Canada and California, then announced that more than 2,000 industries, shut when supplies were tight, might bring in their 200,000 employees today.

In addition, about half a million New Yorkers are returning to the gas-heated schools that were closed by Gov. Hugh Carey all last week.

But gas-heated businesses in Buffalo and some other hard-hit areas of the state remained closed.

A man was found frozen to death in a snowbank in Niagara Falls, the 25th weather-related fatality in the Buffalo area since a Jan. 28 blizzard.

PLANES DAMAGED
Snow on the roof of a hangar at a private Buffalo airport caved in the structure Sunday, burying and damaging 16 planes, officials said.

In New Jersey, natural-gas service was resumed today to more than 2,600 industrial customers, and about 100,000 of the 400,000 workers who had been laid off by gas shortages were expected back at work.

State and gas company officials said that resuming service was a calculated risk—partly because of the threat of a new cold spell—and a state spokesman said: "We will be watching the gas supplies very closely."

Sunday was designated Heat Sunday by Rhode Island churches, and congregations contributed to a special fund to warm the homes of neighbors without heat.

And in Salt Lake City, Mormons and Roman Catholics included special prayers for the cold parts of the U.S. in their Sunday service. But the Episcopalian (Anglican) church didn't go along.

"We're going to leave that up to God," said a spokesman at St. Mark's Cathedral.

Biron urges constitutional change

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Joe Clark, leader of the federal Progressive Conservatives, abandoned a text on Quebec and Confederation on Saturday night to criticize Prime Minister Trudeau, but still received less applause than Rodrigue Biron of Quebec's Union Nationale.

The two were dinner speakers at a weekend conference sponsored by the Young Progressive Conservatives. The spotlight, cheers and standing ovations went to Mr. Biron who spoke of Quebec and Canada, not the Tory leader.

The party faithful gathered at the $125-a-plate, fund-raising dinner were on their feet several times through Mr. Biron's speech, in which he described himself as a French-Canadian who has not lost faith in Canada.

He called for constitutional changes to give more powers to the provinces and reduce the might of the federal government. He said such reform would give Quebecers an alternative to separation.

Mr. Biron, who led his rejuvenated party to 11 seats and about 20 per cent of the popular vote in the Quebec election last Nov. 15, said Canada is at a climax in its history and called on Canadians to rally to Confederation.

CHANGES PLANS

Mr. Clark originally had planned to talk on Quebec and Confederation, but abandoned that field to Mr. Biron and opted for a wide-ranging speech that touched all bases.

He repeatedly attacked Prime Minister Trudeau and his Liberal government, blaming the prime minister's inflexibility for many of Canada's economic and social woes.

The Tory leader said Mr. Trudeau's style of government has helped undermine the people's trust and it is up to the Conservatives to rebuild that trust.

Mr. Clark said it is time to realize that Canada is a country with diverse interests and needs and that government should respond to those needs.

"National policy must be framed to fit the nation instead of trying to change the country to fit a theory."

He said a Conservative government would recognize regional differences. For example, he said, such programs as unemployment insurance might be geared to regional needs.

He said provincial governments should have a say in some Senate appointments, although for shorter terms.

SAVED CHEERS

The crowd of about 900 Conservatives gave only perfunctory applause to their leader, saving the loud cheers for Mr. Biron.

His call for a united Canada stirred the crowd and left Mr. Clark playing second fiddle with platitudes and well-worn party planks.

The theme of the conference was Canada's future and Mr. Biron made the best of it, speaking to seminars and news conferences on the need for constitutional change to offer Quebec an alternative.

Generally, the seminar speakers echoed the call, with a number of suggestions for reducing the power and scope of the federal government and transferring more responsibilities and increased trading power to the provinces.

Flexible and decentralized federalism was the theme of many discussions.

Snowmobile fatality

BROMPTON GORE (DS) — Mrs. Monique Beauregard, 42, of Birchton, was killed yesterday at 11 a.m. on Highway 243 in Brompton Gore, Johnson County, when the snowmobile she was driving was struck by a car. Mrs. Beauregard was alone on the machine at the time of the accident, participating in a snowmobile meet.

Mrs. Beauregard, with her husband, Maurice, was the owner of the Prevert Campgrounds, Birchton.

Wants clarity in referendum

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Sunday the referendum on Quebec independence promised by the Parti Quebecois government must clearly ask Quebecers if the province should be a part of Canada or a separate country.

In a CKAC radio interview, Mr. Trudeau said a referendum question asking Quebecers if they wanted "an independent Quebec, but a Quebec associated with Canada" would confuse the issue.

The Parti Quebecois says it wants to establish a politically independent province in an economic association with Canada.

Mr. Trudeau said if Mr. Levesque "proposes independence and an association, I find that this will complicate the referendum, and if this is what is proposed, they should spell out what kind of association this would be and how French Canada will be represented.

"How would French Canada, in a monetary union, have more weight than it has in federalism?"

He also asked how many votes an independent Quebec would have in the determination of monetary policy.

"In my opinion the clearer the question and the quicker it comes, the better," Mr. Trudeau said. "Do you want to be in Canada, yes or no?"

"If the answer is yes, then let's negotiate what sort of Canada it should be," he said.

Premier Levesque has promised to hold the referendum within his government's current mandate.

The prime minister reiterated his position that the federal government should remain "strong or relatively strong" although he is ready to start constitutional negotiations with the provinces from scratch.

PCs set sights on winning two of five Que. byelections

SPRUCE GROVE, Alta. (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives will try to win two of five Quebec federal seats being contested in byelections this spring, party leader Joe Clark said Sunday.

He said in an interview that the party will try to win the seats without seeking the support of Quebec Premier Rene Levesque.

"I will visit him only after the five byelections, just so there isn't any confusion. We are not going to seek any alliance with the Parti Quebecois."

Mr. Clark rejected recent complaints by Jean-Pierre Goyer, federal supply and services minister, that the Conservatives are trying to align themselves with the Parti Quebecois to defeat the Liberals in Quebec.

"He is just trying to put that one over in desperation," because the Liberals are in serious trouble in Quebec. "I have made it clear from the beginning that we want to build a completely independent, separate Conservative party in Quebec and we are not going to make any deals with the PQ or anyone else."

SITUATION RARE

He said the Conservatives already have several candidates for nomination in the five vacant Quebec constituencies, "something that is very rare for us."

Prime Minister Trudeau has said the byelections will be held this spring but has not set the dates.

Mr. Clark said the Conservatives are not overly optimistic but he named the ridings of Temiscamingue and Louis-Hebert as possible victories.

Temiscamingue was held by the late federal Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, and Louis-Hebert by Liberal MP Albanie Morin.

Mr. Clark said there is nothing unusual about his interest in meeting Mr. Levesque, adding that he had previously met former Quebec premier Robert Bourassa.

"And I've met with (British Columbia Premier) Bill Bennett and plan to meet with (Manitoba Premier) Ed Schreyer and (Saskatchewan Premier) Allan Blakeney."

"So there should be nothing suspicious about my intentions to meet Mr. Levesque."

The Conservative leader was visiting his new Alberta riding of Yellowhead and attended a hockey game in this community 15 miles west of Edmonton.

Warns of possible backlash

Saturday.

The premier did not elaborate except to say that "Quebec, with its basic strength in many fields, will not be manipulated or manoeuvred excessively."

"No self-respecting society will be manipulated by any kind of little terrorist campaigns organized here and there," Mr. Levesque said.

Critics focusing on the climate of uncertainty should be concerned instead with the government's promise of sound administration, he said.

have been "hypocritical, vain and completely useless" for him to have tried to disguise in his recent New York speech that the PQ stood for Quebec independence.

He also reiterated he would like to "cool down" the debate over the referendum on independence.

"I'm going to do my best to cool it down for a while anyway," he said. The referendum must be prepared very carefully to give Quebecers a "decent" chance to decide their future, he said.

The premier said it would

Smog, traffic jams mar film fest

Modernization infects Iran — no more camels

TEHRAN, Iran — (NEA) — It's probably apocryphal, but in Tehran they tell you, with a straight face, that a dozen years ago there were camels wandering up and down Pahlavi Street.

No more camels. In fact, Tehran is today so modern and up-to-date that the big problems are traffic and smog. It's gotten so bad that the Iranians are writing poetry about traffic and smog — and, in Iran, that means it's serious.

Tehran has the worst traffic jams you'll ever see. At intersections, the cars are always boxed in, because the Tehran drivers don't seem to care about what color the traffic light is. They just go, and pretty soon the intersection is a mess.

The city is ringed with brown mountains, but you have to peer through a dense cloud of smog to see them. The Iranians seem almost proud of their pollution problem, because it's a positive sign of progress — it means their capital is totally modern.

Being modern is a big thing with the Iranians. They want to be part of today's world, and that's the big reason they recently staged a whooper of a film festival.

The idea was, according to Hajir Daryoush, the festival's secretary general and guiding light, to show the world how modern Tehran is by inviting stars and film-makers from all over the world to the festival. After all, any nation that has a film festival must have gone beyond camels.

So there were movie people from the U.S., England, Italy, Germany, France — all over, even Australia and New Zealand. And, for a couple of weeks, they showed their films to a panel of judges representing most of the major film-making nations.

In between, Iranian films were shown, too, because part of being modern is having your own film industry. A film showing just that, the history of Iran's film industry, was the big event at the opening night festivities.

That was supposed to be "glittering." In fact, that adjective was used in all the local Tehran reports about it. But one nation's "glittering" is another nation's "ho-hum." Let me tell you about the glittering opening night of the Tehran Film Festival.

It was held in Roudaki Hall, Tehran's opera house. And it's a glittering building, all right — very new, great chandeliers, a royal box for the Shah and the Empress, all sorts of architectural pomp.

And everybody was there — the U.S. ambassador to Iran, ex-C.I.A. boss, Richard Helms. Tehran's society was there. The visiting stars and directors were there.

We were brought to the Hall from our various hotels by bus. It isn't often that you can get people like Otto Preminger in a bus. He had a few comments to make, of course, but he got on.

It took an hour to get to Roudaki Hall. It takes an hour to get from anywhere to anywhere else in Tehran. It's the traffic. You crawl, then stop. Then crawl some more.

Everybody was dressed to kill. Sally Kellerman was in a backless thing and she has the back for it. Brenda Vaccaro had brought eight gowns and picked out an antique-looking affair, all brocade and lace, and looked smashing.

We waited in the lobby for the ceremonies to begin. They served bottles of soda pop with straws in them. A waiter, in a business suit, passed trays of pastries. There were bowls of pistachio nuts, which are big in Iran.

Somebody noticed that in Iran, which is modern Persia, they didn't have Persian rugs but linoleum on the floor. The Shah wasn't there. The Empress was supposed to appear, but they said she had the flu and so wouldn't come.

Nobody recognized our stars. It's only lately that American films have begun to be shown in Iran. Sally Kellerman, shivering in her backless gown, tried to get a car to go back to the hotel, but there were no cars. Only the bus.

Hajir Daryoush, the secretary general of the festival, made a welcoming speech. He spoke, naturally, in Persian, the language of Iran. There was no translation. Then they showed the film about Iran's film industry. Some of the excerpts looked interesting. John Simon, the New York Magazine film critic, said he didn't like any of them.

Going back to the hotel, director Paul Mazursky muttered, "This whole city is one big Polish joke." That was when we were once again mired in traffic.

One night, a bunch of us had dinner together. Otto Preminger offered to treat us to caviar — Iranian caviar is justifiably famous — and drinks before dinner. He carefully explained to the waiter what he was paying for and that the dinner itself was to be separate checks.

But when the check came, everything was on Preminger's bill. He tore it up. It took an hour to straighten that out, and we almost had another oil embargo before it was done.

Preminger, like everybody, was also being careful about what he ate. We had been warned about the water, about fresh fruits and vegetables. Despite the warnings, Arthur Hill became ill. But the rest of us thrived. Preminger was careful not to have any ice in his vodka.

The local newspapers — there are two in English — were very aware of the festival, and wrote long articles about it. They called Sally Kellerman "Sally Keller." She laughed it off.

When Arthur Hill arrived, there was no hotel room for him. He had to sit in the lobby all night until a room was cleared at five in the morning. He said it was one of the most interesting nights he'd ever spent.

The big disappointment to me was the lack of Cadillacs. I suppose, like all Americans, I'd figured that oil-rich Iran would be swarming with Seattles and Eldorados. I only saw two. Most of the people drive Paykans, a local product.

I didn't even see one oil well.

While the more recent films these days have a tendency to rarely, if ever, live up to their advance billing (Jaws couldn't and King Kong didn't even try) Marathon Man is the exception to the rule. Starring Dustin Hoffman, Marathon Man contains all the ingredients necessary for a really fine thriller. While not a film for the extremely sensitive, as a few people do die during the film, it does explore a rarely exploited form of torture, the sensitive nerves in the teeth (picture above is Hoffman as the very nasty Dr. Szell drills a large hole through his front tooth during an interrogation). All in all a really fine film, excellent performances by all the main characters, and plenty of hidden symbolism for those who enjoy analyzing films. Marathon Man will continue until Friday at the Cinema 2 theatre, in the Carrefour shopping centre.

Guide to musical hits and misses

By Stan Mises

Now that the Christmas-New Year's record buying rush has relaxed, the time seems right to look past the promotion at some of the more prominent discs.

Hotel California — The Eagles — While some of their singles are representative of what California rock is supposed to be all about, the Eagles albums, to date, have been chock full of filler that reminds one of how just plain bland this band (and so-called California rock) can be. But Hotel California may be the Eagles most consistent, and engaging yet. If you've been a marginal fan, this album will register with you.

Night Moves — Bob Seger & The Silver Bullet Band — From yet another regional bag, Detroit rock, Bob Seger has scored with a terrific album that hard core rock 'n' rollers will eat alive. Again, Seger's been around, and has had several albums before this: this is the place to begin with him.

A Star Is Born (Original Soundtrack) — For Streisand junkies only.

Hejira — Joni Mitchell — It's a best seller, but we suspect that's on the strength of her reputation. This is a way-too-cool collection of melodies that dissipate and lyrics that aren't as heartfelt (for us) as her previous efforts. Still, better than most.

Heat Treatment — Graham Parker and The Rumor — Punk rock, London style, and damn good too. Parker plays with the ghost of the Velvet Underground and the spectre of the New York punk rock scene. The result is phenomenal — he's the English answer to Bruce Springsteen. This record is well worth checking into if you haven't caught pieces of it on FM.

Have A Good Time — Al Green — OK, we'll admit a prejudice: we think Al Green is the greatest living R&B singer. The album is upbeat (as is the single, "Keep Me Crying") and closer to the Al Green we first fell in love with. Thankfully, he's not a disco artist; but now we hear he's retired to become a full time preacher back home in Memphis. We think his "retirement" will be short-lived — he's just too weird to sit still.

Wings Over America — Paul McCartney and Wings — A live three record set of last year's major American city tour that's a must for Paul's partisans. Other fans might have hoped for a two record set which clearly would have sufficed, expense-wise, too.

Saturday Night Live (Cast Album) — This record makes the off-beat TV show seem better than it actually is. Well-edited and very funny.

Man With The Sad Face — Stanley Turrentine — Maybe he's had to listen to this record. Just not up to par with old Turrentine, just not up to par with the new jazz.

Destroyer — Kiss — Loud, loud, loud, hard, hard, hard, yes, yes, yes. Repetition's the key, get it? (Hear "Rock and Roll Over" for reference.)

This One's For You — Barry Manilow — Who me? There must be some mistake.

No Reason to Cry — Eric Clapton — Or sing, or dance, or rejoice: this is a boring record. Where has this great guitarist's energy gone?

A New World Record — Electric Light Orchestra — A joyous, melodic collection by the classiest rock group around. Every bit as tuneful as their excellent "Eldorado" and every bit as hard-rocking as in their first splash as The Move. This is one record that stands up to repeated listening.

Caliente — Gato Barbieri — While we prefer this hot saxophonist's efforts on "Yesterday" and "Hasta Siempre," Gato still manages to catch fire even with the occasionally tepid material here. He's still an exciting player, no matter what.

Brass Construction II — This is the most ambitious disco band, but their second lp shows how limiting disco can be. Try BC-I. It's terrific.

New Face of 1977 — Tony Bird — A most remarkable singer-songwriter has come to America, by way of England and Africa, and he's a welcome arrival. Bird's singing style is truly idiosyncratic. His tone is reminiscent of a little Dave Van Ronk, a little John Lee Hooker, a little Incredible String Band. His songs are a mixture of pastoral and protest lyrics set to blues and African-inspired rhythms. The result is the most interesting perspective we've heard in ages: a kind of white African pop music with a conscience.

His first album, simply titled "Tony Bird" contains several songs that should stick with you — "Athlone Incident," about an apartheid restriction Bird experienced in Capetown (he was born in Malawi in Southeast Africa); "Rift Valley," which invokes lovely images with a wry twist; and "Windows of My Life," a reflective, haunting melody. Bird's live performance is accented by a quirky stage presence that has enough something else about it to bring you back for more. His work is personal and powerful. We recommend Tony Bird highly.

One of the most pleasant surprises in recent weeks has been the five-years-in-the-making-overnight-success of Al Stewart, a Scottish folk-rooted rocker with a head on his shoulders. Stewart has been garnering a growing cult audience over the past few years and with each new record, the cult threatens to become a bona fide big audience. It seems now that with "Year of the Cat," his fourth American album, Stewart has enlisted a network of FM disk jockeys, and that's a sure sign.

"Year of the Cat" is Stewart's most varied album, musically, mixing his folk ballad side with some hard rockers, and the mix is comfortable. Stewart's penchant for storytelling is not diminished by the uttempo, fortunately. The result is a Top 40 album that engages your head, hands, and feet.

We caught Al Stewart in concert, and that too was a happy event. Live, he has a sound and presence vaguely reminiscent of the Byrds at their best; that is, he delivers a strong punch in an unmistakable style. The audience at New York's Bottom Line Club loved it, and called him back for three encores. But he's even bigger in Seattle and the rest of the West Coast. Now he's finally catching on in the Midwest and Southwest.

"We're breaking through the cult thing — I can feel it."

he told us backstage. "Where we might have played third on the bill to Sha Na Na in Milwaukee, now we're headlining the clubs."

He was suddenly accosted by a pretty woolly guy with a handful of paper and records. "I'm your biggest fan," he said. "I know everything you've done. I even know stuff you don't know." He cornered Stewart and recited Al's credits, to his amusement. Al turned to us, edging his way out and said: "But I'm not interested in instant recognition."

Led Zeppelin's film, "The Song Remains the Same," is leaden film. It's basically a concert film with some trick photography thrown in to break up the boredom, but we never forget how tedious and long the film was, nor how loud. The soundtrack lp's nothing you haven't heard before if you're a Zep fan, and probably only a thrill for such a diehard.

Melanie's comeback lp is worthwhile, if you're an old fan, certainly, and if you've heard "Cyclone" or "I'm So Blue" on the radio lately, you owe it to yourself to investigate the rest of the album, called "Photograph." A re-run of the Sunshine Boys? Well, close. Rock's Sunshine Boy, John Denver, has been signed to team with George Burns in a new film, "Oh God," directed by Carl Reiner. Denver's film debut will feature him as a super-market manager, and Burns as, yes, God.

Just for a goof, the Blue Goose label, sort of known for their recordings of R. Crumb and his Cheap Suit Serenaders, have released an album by Gary Lawrence that's hysterical. Lawrence has recreated several numbers in the '20s style, including a Barry White job that's great. There has been alarming talk that yet another price rise is due for albums. The move this time around has some facets: the idea is to up the price of best-sellers, and down the price of new artists. The recording industry trade papers say this move is "inevitable."

Showbeat — Entebbe exploit still exploited

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — 'Tis the season for Entebbe movies. One has already been on ABC-TV, another is airing Jan. 9 on NBC. Now, a third film about the Israelis' daring rescue of a planeload of hostages in Uganda is being made in Israel.

Menahem Golan, co-producer of that one, which will be released theatrically, called me from Israel with the latest report. His film, "Entebbe: Operation Thunderbolt," has no stars. (The others are all star-studded.)

"The Entebbe operation is not a Hollywood story," Golan says. "Having stars in it destroys the illusion." But Golan did ask Uganda's Idi Amin to play himself in the film. Amin has not responded to the offer. Golan, however, has Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin playing himself, and other Israeli officials will do likewise.

He says he has uncovered a few previously undisclosed facts about the incident. One widely publicized feature of the raid was the use of a black Mercedes — supposedly a duplicate of Amin's car — to fool the defenders.

"We found out," Golan says, "that the black Mercedes was a mistake. Amin had actually sold his car a few weeks before and, at the time of the raid, actually was driving a Rolls. So the ruse didn't fool the defenders. The only way they survived was through fast driving. The surprise element was gone."

At first, Golan wanted to use as many of the real hostages as he could. He found 16 who expressed willingness to play themselves. "We used them for a few days," he says. "But when we got to the Entebbe building — we built an exact duplicate, based on the plans of the engineers who actually had built Entebbe Airport — they started to cry. They couldn't go through it all again."

RICARDO MONTALBAN has to hustle more than he used to these days, as a result of the drop in guest stars' salaries on TV.

Ricardo Montalban is symptomatic of the change in TV in Hollywood.

"I used to make a good living out of being a TV guest star," he says. "I'd make six or seven guest appearances a year, at $10,000 or so each, and that was comfortable. Maybe not in Steve McQueen's class, but comfortable."

"Today, those six or seven guest appearances might net me, if I was lucky, $12,000 to $15,000 total. That's how much salaries have gone down. So I can't afford to make my living that way."

Instead, he does a lot of stage work (the pay isn't much, but it is constant), movie roles and, like many in Hollywood, keeps looking for a series of his own.

At the moment, he's excited about two projects. He did a movie-for-TV called "Fantasy Island," which has series possibilities. It's about a man who runs a resort where he charges $50,000 for three days — but, for that money, he'll make your fantasies come true.

The second is a part he's doing on Executive Suite. He was originally supposed to be killed off after four weeks, romancing Sharon Acker along the way, but now the producers have indicated that his death may be postponed.

They are thinking of having the character stick around. "They're both exciting," Montalban says, "not only because they're interesting, but because I find it exciting to be working. I'm the kind of person who grew up with the old ethic of doing a day's work for a day's pay. If I'm not working, I feel guilty."

Nora Ephron, who writes as brilliantly and funnily as anybody these days, is far from being a militant feminist. Read her delightful "Crazy Salad" and you'll understand that. Still, it's fun to get her views about what movies and TV are doing to women.

"I love Mary Tyler Moore," Ephron says. "I just hope they don't marry her off, figuring that marriage is every woman's dream of a happy ending. My idea for a happy ending is that they'd decide to continue the show a few more years."

"Edith Bunker is great, too. I don't agree with some women who feel Edith is a put-down."

But Rhoda is another matter. I liked Rhoda before but why did she marry that guy? Joe is good looking, but a big nothing. I know they're getting separated this season and I think that's a great idea. "And then there's Phyllis. Phyllis is a total nothing. She's still sharing a room with her daughter. One of them should move out, preferably Phyllis."

And that, in an Ephron-shell, is one woman's view of women on TV.

Sweetsburg Court

David Laird McCarthy, Mansonville, pleaded not guilty to a charge of impaired driving, Dec. 12 when his blood-alcohol level was .110 mgs. His case will be heard April 4.

Marcel Haineault, Adamsville, pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving when his blood-alcohol level was .100 mgs. He was fined $100 and costs, in default 30 days.

John Davis, Bolton Centre, pleaded guilty to a charge of having unlawfully prowled near a dwelling house at night. Crown prosecutor Claude Noiseux told Judge Bernard Legare: "The accused is constantly before the courts, frankly both the police and myself are at a loss in attempting to find means to protect the population. If a citizen protests his actions Davis tells them he will burn their dwelling, always between he and his potential victim, and they are more than reluctant to testify for fear he will carry out his threats."

"Davis is allright when he is sober," Mr. Noiseux said. "His trouble is he is drunk most of the time. I suggest a two year probation with a prohibition to enter any establishment where alcohol is sold for consumption on premises."

Defence lawyer Jean Paul Couture told the court the latest infraction occurred when his client telephoned a neighbor then went and slept near his house. "He has served three or four days and I suggest he be sentenced to time served."

Judge Legare told Davis he was an undesirable character. "If you are ever found guilty of arson you will be put away for a long period should you appear before me." He then suspended sentence and placed Davis on one year's probation with the condition he is prohibited to enter any establishment in the Province of Quebec where alcohol is sold for local consumption. "If you are apprehended in any licensed establishment you'll be back behind bars," Judge Legare concluded.

Ghislain Delorme, East Farnham, who earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of indecent assault on a female, was fined $200, in default 30 days, and was allowed two months to acquit the fine and costs. Crown attorney Noiseux called for a probation period of two years and a fine of $300 citing the accused had hit his victim on three occasions.

Defence lawyer Andre Bachand told the court his 24-year-old client was steadily employed, had no prior record and had known his victim for 15 years. "It was an isolated incident," Mr. Bachand said. "The couple were out making the rounds and doing some drinking and it all started when they were parking. My client has been traumatized by his appearances here and the fact the case has been subjected to press coverage. I strongly agree with the probation report which suggests he should be given an unconditional discharge under article 662-1."

Judge Legare told the accused it was fortunate the crown had not asked for a jail term. "As you knew your victim you should have been more discreet. However, there is no possibility you will benefit from an absolute discharge," prior to handing down sentence.

Walter Crandall, of the Bedford-Stanbridge East area, was found guilty, in-absentia, of a charge of joy riding in Bedford, Oct. 2, 1976. He was fined $100 and costs, in default 30 days, and was allowed 15 days to pay the fine and costs.

Henri Rolland Paris, Sherbrooke, was cited to the next term of the assizes following preliminary hearing on a count of theft of goods valued at more than $200, the property of Sylvio Lemay, in Lawrenceville, during September 1976.

Michel Jette and Donald Cleary, both of Waterloo, were cited to the next term of the assizes following preliminary hearing on a charge of theft of plywood valued at $332 from Waterloo Box and Packaging, Jan. 16, 1976. The men, who were represented by Louis Grignon, stood mute at voluntary statement.

They then pleaded not guilty to counts of breaking, entering and theft from the Waterloo Golf Club, July 31; theft of goods valued at more than $200, the property of Roger Bazinet, Shefford Township, Dec. 12; and theft of goods valued in excess of $200 from Rene Beauregard, South Stukely, Aug. 1. Their lawyer chose jury trial and preliminary hearing was fixed to Feb. 17.

Alain Muzzi, Bedford, who earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a stolen color television, was given the benefit of an absolute discharge under article 662-1. Muzzi, a student at Sherbrooke CEGEP, produced examination results for Judge Legare's perusal. "You are not too bright a student when you think you don't have to work to attain your desired goals," Judge Legare said. "As you have no prior record and the set was recovered I will not taint your life with a criminal record. You must, however, realize you are being given the chance of a lifetime."

Gerald Hebert, Notre Dame de Stanbridge, renounced his rights to a preliminary hearing and was cited to the next term of the assizes on a charge of possession of a television set he knew had been obtained through the commission of a crime in Canada.

Wayne Lawlor, 19, of no fixed address, changed his option and pleaded guilty to 11 counts of fraud in the District of Bedford between November 1976 and January 1977. Crown attorney Noiseux called for a jail sentence at the discretion of the bench citing there was little possibility the accused would reimburse his victims.

Lawlor's lawyer, Pierre Gibeau, Legal Aid Office, said his client had little formal education and came from a broken family. He explained his client, who had been able to find employment on farms, was without a job when crimes were committed prior to Christmas. He suggested a term of one month as Lawlor had already been detained for 17 days.

Judge Legare remarked: "I am amazed he has no prior record as he was abandoned by adults which led to a lack of formal structuring. I feel he has had sufficient detention. However, I will continue my sentence to Feb. 21." Lawlor was released in the custody of his sister and brother-in-law and Judge Legare instructed Mr. Gibeau to see the accused benefited from social welfare payments in the interim.

Quebec to aid ambulance services

Talks planned at Magog

MAGOG (JC) — Talks are planned this week concerning the Magog Ambulance Service.

Owner Jean-Claude Martin will meet with hospital representatives and municipal authorities to discuss the future of his firm which is slated to close next week because of severe financial problems.

The firm had been expected to close in late 1976, but urged by La Providence Hospital doctors, Mr. Martin agreed to delay closing.

(Record Reporter)

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS

Financial aid will be available to organizations that plan to set up non-profit ambulance service in areas not already served by private companies, the social affairs ministry has announced.

Ambulance service in the Eastern Townships has greatly deteriorated in the last six months - particularly in rural areas. Unable to afford the new standards set by the Liberal government last summer, most small companies closed and several larger firms have cutback services, leaving the public without adequate ambulance service in the Townships. Other rural areas of Quebec have experienced problems too.

Those to receive subsidies will be contracted to maintain ambulance service in a specific area. They will be required to meet the standards established by the former government which remain unchanged.

The subsidy policy is administered in each region by the public health department in collaboration with regional health and social service council.

The ministry has established service zones in which ambulances are to be available within a maximum time of 30 minutes.

Cowansville ambulance service by Granby firm

COWANSVILLE — Uncertainty surrounding ambulance service in the Cowansville area is over. Police chief Arthur Jacques has announced that the town is being served by a Granby firm but operations are still being administered through the police switchboard.

With the closing of the Desourdy ambulance firm on Dec. 15, Cowansville and the outlying Mansonville-Sutton-East Farnham areas found themselves with no local ambulance service. Since the closing, Cowansville policemen and firemen have been operating a temporary service with a rented ambulance, but the shortage of men and vehicles made the operation unfeasible.

Anyone needing an ambulance in the region should call the Cowansville Police at 263-2333.

Pioneer woman scholar subject of club talk

SHERBROOKE — The Women's Canadian Club of the Eastern Townships will have as guest speaker Dr. Margaret Gillett, Professor of Education, McGill University, at a luncheon meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 8, at the Holiday Inn.

Dr. Gillett's topic is entitled "Dr. Maude Abbott - The Beneficent Tornado". The subject is particularly close to her heart as she is currently engaged in a research project on the history of women at McGill. This indicates Dr. Gillett's special interest in both education and women scholars.

Dr. Gillett earned her B.A. (English, History, Anthropology) in Australia, and an M.A. and Ed.D. in the United States. She has taught in Sydney, Australia; London, England; Halifax, Nova Scotia; Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; and currently, McGill University. She is the author of numerous papers which have been published in a variety of journals of education. She has written and co-authored several books on education. Her name appears in the biographical listings of directories in many countries.

Her activities include acting as chairperson, speaker, or panelist at many professional conferences. She is a member of DR. MARGARET GILLETT numerous associations and societies. With such an extensive contribution to her field, Dr. Gillett is very knowledgeable about her topic and will be sure to excite her listeners with the story of a pioneer woman scholar, Dr. Maude Abbott.

Recovering following shooting

SHERBROOKE (JM) — Andre Duffault, 30, Ste. Cecile de Milton, is reported out of danger at the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital following surgery to remove shotgun pellets from his face and shoulder following a shooting in a Ste. Cecile hotel at 5:30 Thursday afternoon.

Quebec Police report Duffault and his brother-in-law, Maurice Borduas, 29, of Granby, spent the afternoon drinking and playing cards. The police revealed Borduas left the hotel to return with one of his brothers when he burst into the hotel brandishing a .20 gauge shotgun.

He ordered Duffault's drinking companions to leave the table, fired two shots at Duffault, asked his brother to return the arm to their father's domicile. Borduas then asked someone to call the police, ordered an ale and awaited their arrival.

A police spokesman said there was a long-standing argument between the brothers-in-law.

Borduas was remanded in custody following his arraignment in Sweetsburg Court Friday afternoon and preliminary hearing was set, pro forma, to today.

Autoroute fatalities decrease

MONTREAL — For the first time since 1958, the Quebec Autoroutes Authority, which rules the toll roads, set a double record. While the number of tolls was increasing, fatalities dramatically lowered on its 285 kilometers autoroutes network.

According to last year statistics, the traffic went up 15.08 percent, with 117,967,763 vehicles registered at 15 toll gates.

The most significant performance of the Authority refers to a sharp decline in traffic deaths. Only 17 persons died in 16 crashes. Statistically, this means that the death rate on the autoroutes is 0.87 victim per 100 million vehicles-mile. Last year, 29 persons were killed in 26 accidents.

Thus, the Quebec Autoroutes Authority's road network is known as one of the safest among the 18 countries where toll facilities exist.

Borduas was remanded in custody following his arraignment in Sweetsburg Court Friday afternoon and preliminary hearing was set, pro forma, to today.

Danville to float bond issue

DANVILLE (GB) — The Municipality of Danville has opted to float a $71,000 bond issue in accordance with statutes governing municipal loans and debts.

The decision taken by Mayor Jean Paul Petit and Councillors Germain Deshaies, Ernest Lockwood, Paul Couture, Pierre Grimard was to effect the renewal of a 10 year loan of $110,000.

The bonds, to be emitted on Feb. 14, are made payable to holders at any Canadian branch of the Provincial Bank. An interest rate of 10 1/4 percent will be made payable to bond holders on the 14th of August and February each year. The bonds are scheduled to be emitted in $100 series or multiples of 100.

The Municipality of Danville has demanded authorization from the Ministry of Municipal Affairs to float the above bond issue.

Miss TEEN SHERBROOKE to be chosen

SHERBROOKE (JC) — While most of us are going about our normal lives, several area girls are busy preparing themselves for a chance at becoming the next Miss Teen Canada.

This year's Miss Teen Sherbrooke pageant, the first since 1973, will be bigger and better than ever before. To be held Feb. 24, at Le Baron Motel, the pageant will be open to the public.

Entry forms have gone to all area schools, technical colleges, and CEGEPS. Any girl between the ages of 14-18 years who is a Canadian citizen is eligible to enter.

Miss Teen Sherbrooke 1977 will spend a week in Toronto where she will participate in the Miss Teen Canada pageant. She will receive a $200 wardrobe, a Bulova Acutron watch, and her trip to Toronto, while all of the contestants will get flowers.

Contrary to general opinion, the pageant is not a beauty contest, and although neatness is a necessity, judges will not be looking solely at appearance. More important, they will be looking for poise, intellect, a girl's interests and her ability to communicate with people.

US energy policy

The wrath of this year's winter has thrown the United States into varying degrees of an energy crisis. Schools have closed, factories have shut down, and occupants of homes have been shivering in less than 60 degree temperatures.

However, if newly elected President Carter lives up to his campaign promises, this crisis will not be forgotten as was the past gasoline shortage which resulted in much talk, but no action on the need to conserve gas.

President Carter has said he is prepared to have a permanent energy policy ready for April and that he will not back down on measures that may prove unpopular. He has advocated a ceiling at or below current oil import levels. Since domestic oil production has been declining while demand has increased, that would have the effect of limiting consumption by limiting the supply of imported oil. This could ultimately lead to self-imposed shortages that would require allocation or rationing.

He has also said that the price of newly produced natural gas should be deregulated thus removing the price ceiling and promoting new production. At the same time the price of gas already being produced would be restrained by regulation or through existing contractings.

He has also called for a shift to coal as a major energy source, with a heavy investment in the development of solar energy, and with nuclear power as a last resort.

Now that he is in power, President Carter must lead the American nation to a new energy policy which will reject waste and submission to the nation's voracious appetite for gadgetry and power on wheels.

Parisians are going burglar-proof Carter looking for new solution on Rhodesia

By Rosette Hargrove

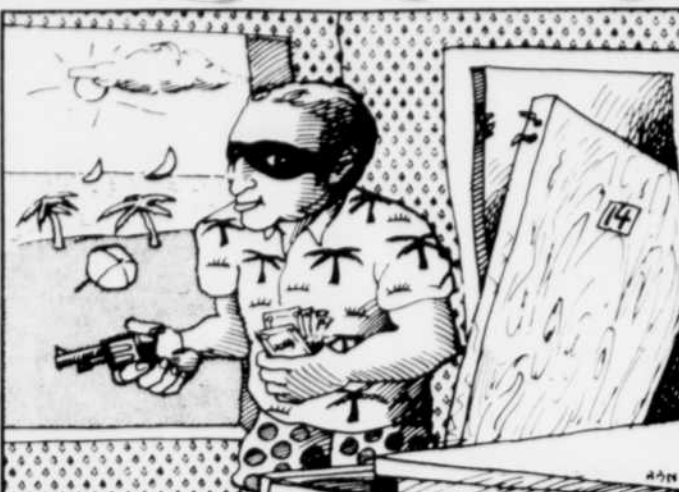

PARIS — (NEA) — Holidays are the burglars' busiest times.

From July to the end of September, Paris and its suburbs are the happy hunting grounds of professional and amateur housebreakers. Last summer alone, some 200,000 break-ins were reported here.

This sign of the times, perhaps the result of an affluent society, engendered the proliferation of firms specializing in anti-burglary devices, some guaranteed to halt any attempt at breaking into a home.

The situation has led to the distribution by the police of warnings and instructions to too-confident house owners, shoppers, as well as to travelers and unsuspecting pedestrians.

Explained in detail are the methods of thieves operating in the metro, public transports, crowded areas, department stores and supermarkets. Also outside banks, social security centers and post offices where citizens, often pensioners, are followed and divested of their money. People are warned that it is better to be accompanied by a friend or relative, if a relatively important sum of money is concerned.

Women are told, in streets and avenues, to carry their purses or baskets on the side bordered by buildings and to watch out for motorcyclists riding against the traffic, who may reach out to snatch purse or package.

Again, police warn householders never to keep large sums of money at home, and to have a peephole installed in the front door. The next must be to install an inside safety catch which allows the householder to open the door only a few inches, preventing anyone forcing an entrance.

It is also advised to ask to see the credentials of any strange visitors, man or woman, whatever the mission. In the case of an official identity card holder, be careful to shut the door behind you and fix the security bolt yourself. Never allow an unknown person alone in a room and arrange to have all official papers, such as identity card, permits, tax receipts, bank statements ready at hand and, above all, never anywhere where you may keep ready cash.

In the event of men claiming to have been called in to do urgent repairs of which you have not been informed, ask them to come back accompanied by the janitor or superintendent of the building.

If, in spite of all these precautions you are victim of a holdup, do not panic. Inform the police immediately.

Out of the countless criminal cases judged during the first nine months of 1976, statistics show that 78 per cent concerned burglaries, many coupled with violence.

It is no wonder that there are few householders today bereft of any means of protection. There are consequently a thousand and one gadgets on the market. It is a common occurrence to receive anti-theft publicity in one's mail. The appliances range from the armored front door to a radar signal, from a strident alarm to tear gas.

Things have come to such a pass that most insurance companies refuse compensation to a householder who does not doublelock the door, even for as brief an absence as a half hour. It seems it now is up to the individual to ensure his security, especially if works of art, jewels or antiques are in danger.

Security manufacturers warn that making a door look like Fort Knox is of no earthly use if the lock itself is not absolutely burglar proof. Many locks fill a burglar's heart with joy, those which are child's play to force. So-called armored doors are not foolproof if only because they can be jimmied off their hinges.

Another fact is that thieves are well informed about the latest inventions. "Some professionals," said artisan Jean Pourchot, "buy the latest standard models used in new apartment houses and study the tools capable of forcing locks with the least possible delay."

All thieves, however, are not old hands. Usually, if at the end of five minutes a potential housebreaker is unsuccessful, he abandons any hope of getting in. But many burglars profit by a householder's negligence. Recently a young delinquent told the judge with disarming candor: "I can burgle as many as 30 apartments in one day just by finding the key under the mat." Hiding money in the flour bin, refrigerator, gas stove, behind a radiator, and such is no security. Burglars usually make straight for these points.

Again, a letter box jammed with mail, in the modern apartment buildings without the eagle-eyed "concierge" of old, who seldom missed any comings and goings past her cubby-hole, is just another invitation to the potential law-breaker.

A complication with the new burglar-proof gadgets is their high cost — from $500 to $1500. According to the leading firm specializing in such devices, there is no surefire burglar-proof system.

Antitrust chief could have broken price squeeze

WASHINGTON — Donald G. Baker is a decent sort, a lawyer of excellent reputation, with an upright air and a scholarly demeanor. As the Justice Dept.'s antitrust chief, he is supposed to police the cut-throat corporate world. But the business tycoons who inhabit this world make Baker look like Snow White among the seven dwarfs.

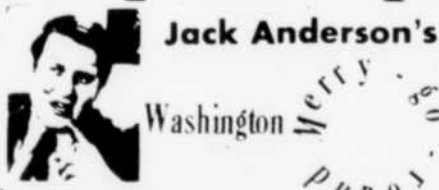

He discourses upon the evils of economic concentration; he espouses the theory of antitrust enforcement. But when it comes down to protecting the public from rigged prices and corporate monopolies, Baker has not exactly been a bold champion of vigorous action.

His latest tilt with the barons of Big Business is described in a confidential memo, which was never intended to be circulated outside the Justice Dept. It reveals how he settled a price-fixing case with the two electrical giants, General Electric and Westinghouse, without demanding concessions that might have brought down energy prices.

The pursuit of lower energy prices is one of the top objectives of the federal government. Yet Baker could have broken the price squeeze in return for dropping antitrust allegations against General Electric and Westinghouse, the memo suggests.

Between them, GE and Westinghouse sell 90 per cent of the giant turbine generators, which produce electricity in America's power plants. Each generator costs millions, which, in turn, has an impact on the price that the public eventually must pay for electricity.

The story is worth telling from the beginning. The Justice Dept. charged that for the past 12 years GE and Westinghouse had "deliberately" eliminated price competition in the giant turbine industry. The two companies allegedly accomplished this through an elaborate pricing scheme, which resulted in very similar prices for both GE and Westinghouse turbines. Baker got an agreement from the two companies to stop "stabilizing" prices through this complex method. Yet GE and Westinghouse had promised the Justice Dept. years ago not to fix the prices of turbine generators. In other words, the companies merely promised again not to do something which they had already sworn never to do.

Jack Anderson's

Washington Merry-Go-Round

The agreement was opposed by two senior antitrust officials, Bernard Hollander and Richard Stern. The determined Stern put his objections in a confidential memo, which he submitted to Baker shortly before the settlement was approved.

Stern reminded Baker that Westinghouse was "extremely anxious" to settle the price-fixing case. This gave the Justice Dept. an opportunity to gain some important concessions from Westinghouse in a separate but related antitrust case, Stern pleaded.

In the latter case, Westinghouse allegedly used its contracts with the Mitsubishi Company to prevent the Japanese firm from shipping giant turbine generators to the United States.

The entry of Mitsubishi into the American market, Stern contends, would cause a "sharp price drop." He, therefore, "strongly urged" Baker as part of the settlement to insist "that Westinghouse agree to permit Mitsubishi to ship turbine generators to the U.S."

The memo concludes forcefully: "For the Antitrust Division to fail to grasp this unique opportunity to bring in new competition, and thus relieve the energy sector, and the public generally, from the poor state of competition in the domestic turbine-generator industry, appears to me to be a grave mistake."

Footnote: In a telephone interview with our reporters Gary Cohn and Richard Sokolow, Baker said he approved the settlement because the government got all the relief it was seeking. He acknowledged that both Stern and Hollander had opposed the agreement but said Stern's memo called for "an inappropriate use of prosecutorial discretion." Both Stern and Hollander refused to comment.

Another Fix?: Another price-fixing case, involving the giant Atlantic Richfield oil combine, will be presented to a California grand jury this week.

The case has been prepared secretly by investigators from the district attorney's offices in Los Angeles and San Diego. Price fixing is a serious crime in California, where it is considered to be a felony. The prosecutors are expected to seek criminal indictments against both the company and the responsible executives. The investigation has been kept hush-hush. But we have learned from insiders that the state's case will probably be similar to a lawsuit, which has been brought against Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) by franchised dealers in southern California.

In affidavits prepared for the civil suit, former ARCO sales representatives and dealers will describe attempts to control their prices by coercion. Many of these people are expected to be called before the grand jury.

An ARCO spokesman "categorically denied" the accusations brought against the company in the lawsuit. "We are confident our practices are legal and that we haven't been coercing our dealers," he said. He had no comment on the grand jury investigation.

LONDON (CP) — The Rhodesian crisis is ticking like a political time bomb on a 30-day fuse under the new administration of President Jimmy Carter in Washington.

Carter has told his ambassador to the United Nations, Andrew Young, that he wants positive action on Rhodesian peace moves within that time.

However, observers here—who have been close to the explosive southern African situation much longer than Carter and his relatively inexperienced aides—see a harsh reality facing the new president.

In the first place, they point out, Prime Minister Ian Smith clings to the stand that he has accepted the peace plan drafted last year by former state secretary Henry Kissinger.

That being the case, Smith argues, he expects the U.S. to support him.

On the other hand, black nationalists in that troubled land argue that their case is a test of the new U.S. administration's professed devotion to liberation and majority rule.

Young has stated that the U.S. wants to see a resumption of talks leading to a transitional administration for Rhodesia which in turn will evolve into a popularly-chosen government.

What is unclear here is whether the Carter administration will press for something like the original Kissinger plan or something closer to the subsequent British proposals devised to satisfy the so-called "front line" states that border Rhodesia.

Young has said that South Africa will be expected to deliver Ian Smith back to the bargaining table, taken here to mean that Smith will be blocked in his announced plan of dealing only with the moderate black element inside his country.

Experts here say it is becoming clear that the Carter administration expects Britain to take the lead in new peace efforts, with the U.S. in a support role.

They feel the strategy will be to confront Smith with the prospect of bankruptcy by tightening sanctions against Rhodesia with South Africa's help and by choking off vital U.S. markets for Rhodesian chrome.

This plan is believed to have been discussed between Carter and Ambassador Sir Peter Ramsbotham in Washington and between Prime Minister James Callaghan and Vice-President Walter Mondale in London.

Carter is reported to be giving top priority to the situation out of fear of Soviet intervention on the side of Robert Mugabe's black guerrillas if a racial war erupts in the former British colony.

Observers here feel the U.S. may be putting too much hope in South African co-operation.

Prime Minister John Vorster has given a firm "no" to any possibility of South Africa putting pressure on the Rhodesian government to accept a settlement dictated by outsiders.

"Demands to shut our borders and impose boycotts cannot be acceded to because they are contrary to the policy of this government," the South African prime minister has said.

Carter's 30-day deadline is expected to culminate in the visit to Washington of Callaghan and Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland.

Africa-watchers in London see a possibility of Carter taking direct control should the strategy meeting end without progress toward forcing Smith back into negotiations.

Pressure off Ted Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Senator Edward Kennedy, the political pressure is off—at least for now. He's no longer seen as a prospective Democratic presidential candidate, and he likes it this way.

Kennedy catalogued the issues on which he means to be heard—which doesn't preclude many—and said he thinks he can be more effective in dealing with them now.

With President Carter in the White House, and the Democratic course firmly set for at least four years and probably eight, Kennedy's role is clear, too. It is in the Senate.

Before Carter, Kennedy said, the positions he took and the programs he pushed were assessed as moves that might be part of a coming presidential campaign.

He constantly denied it, but the suspicion persisted. No longer, though.

"Being a senator, the issue or cause that you're interested in may not be as highlighted, but there may be more credibility," Kennedy said.

HAS RECOGNITION

The senator from Massachusetts, beginning his third full term at age 44, does have a political base and recognition that can highlight his causes.

Furthermore, he is not ruling out national candidacy forever. He simply isn't discussing it.

"We've got a president, and I think he's gotten off to a splendid start," Kennedy said. "I think he'll be re-elected."

If Carter is re-elected, and if it is with Vice-President Walter Mondale, that takes care of the Democratic ticket through 1984. At that point, Mondale, now 49, probably would be in a commanding position to claim Democratic leadership.

Kennedy knows that.

"I think I've been rather philosophical about public life, and I'll continue to be," he said.

In the Senate and in appearances elsewhere, Kennedy said, he intends to press such issues as national health insurance, welfare and tax reform, arms control, energy problems, economic measures.

Thoughts

Let every person be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been instituted by God. — Romans 13:1.

"No art can conquer the people alone — the people are conquered by an ideal of life upheld by authority." — William Butler Yeats, Irish dramatist.

"He has stripped from me my glory and taken the crown from my head. He breaks me down on every side, and I am gone, and my hope has he pulled up like a tree." — Job 19:9,10.

"Hope is the feeling that you will succeed tomorrow in what you failed at today." — Herbert Prochnow, American author.

"They have healed the wound of my people lightly, saying, 'Peace, peace,' when there is no peace." — Jeremiah 8:11.

"It must be a peace without victory. Only a peace between equals can last: only a peace, the very principle of which is equality, and a common participation in a common benefit." — Woodrow Wilson, 28th U.S. President.

For thou dost meet him with goodly blessings; thou dost set a crown of fine gold upon his head. He asked life of thee; thou gavest it to him; length of days for ever and ever. — Psalm 21:3,4.

"Reflect upon your present blessings, of which every man has many — not on your past misfortunes, of which all men have some." — Charles Dickens, English novelist.

But I will stay in Ephesus until Pentecost, for a wide door for effective work has opened to me, and there are many adversaries. — 1 Cor. 16:8,9.

Paris talk show stirs up natives with sex and sobs

By Rosette Hargrove

PARIS, France — (NEA) — There is a woman who, five days a week, speaks over RTL, a radio network out of Paris, and has accomplished more in the field of Women's Lib here than all the raucous flagwavers.

Her name is Menie Gregoire and her listening audience, six months after she initiated the program, was rated at more than two million while the potential audience was rated twice that figure.

Menie Gregoire is the wife of a high government official and has three married daughters plus grandchildren. Nearly 10 years ago she dared explain to her listeners the ABC's of Freudian theories in great detail. Her soft voice ricocheted through the monstrous apartment buildings of the dormitory towns and was heard loudly in remote villages.

Five days a week, from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., when most women (having dispatched the family lunch and the children to school) would be free to listen. And, listen they did. Very soon she became a sympathetic, attentive ear into which hundreds and thousands of women could pour out the problems, frustrations, anguish of their lack-luster lives.

Here was the first radio program of its kind here. Not a sob sister, Menie Gregoire, but a woman who had undergone psychoanalytical discipline over a period of five years. And was, therefore, entitled to launch into such a venture with some confidence. Menie explains, "Because there never was any confrontation but a faceless voice at either end of the microphone, soon women were revealing their innermost thoughts, feelings, revulsions, frustrations in an endeavor to find a new interest in life and not just give up."

Nine years ago she started with one secretary. Today she has a team of four researchers, students in psychology and sociology and an impressive filing system because letters also come in at the rate of 500 a day.

Seated in her small office, Menie Gregoire has dared to discuss impotence, frigidity, despair, anguish, abortion, rape and sexuality in no uncertain terms and she will tell you that at the outset letters from every social strata revealed people were somewhat loathe to reveal their problems openly. As time went by they became more and more explicit, liberated. "From the Middle Ages to today," says Menie, "women have changed everything in the last 10 years."

Detractors were plentiful. Men, especially, smile, shrug their shoulders or sneer whenever Menie Gregoire is mentioned. She says it is solely because she dared attack the masculine citadel and was teaching women to think of and for themselves.

Menie Gregoire came in with the impetus of the social revolution. "However," she explains with a whimsical smile, "we are 50 years behind the United States in the field of psychoanalysis. In the space of six or seven years Frenchwomen of all classes have learnt that they have a of losing their boy friend. The boys, because they often are just as shy as the girls. Yet with all the talk of sexual equality the greater majority of young men getting married are eager for a "white" wedding.

Letters of protest are quite numerous among the one million filed away and reveal how deeply shaken the ruling classes were that a woman dared reveal realities or truths which they preferred to ignore, specifically feminine sexuality, lack of understanding between married couples and the emancipation of the young.

In her book Menie Gregoire tells how psychoanalysis revealed how traumatized she had been in her youth by her mother who, like the majority of women of her generation, had never been anything but a passive figure in her marriage. She also confessed she had been madly in love with her husband.

Many letters which reach her from middle-aged and even older women are those who never before had heard of the subconscious and complexes. Usually they lament a misspent life.

Comments Menie, "I must admit that the thought of growing older is very distasteful to me. I fight it with all my might. (Menie looks a young 40, stands 5 feet 3, weighs 100. Always impeccably groomed, she dresses with that understated chic which is truly Parisian.) I will always fight off old age. Getting older is definitely harder on a woman than on a man. People are kinder. A woman, apparently, should never show signs of age, you will constantly hear people say of an older man that he is still a handsome figure or that he has great charm or tremendous allure. An elderly woman is seldom referred to in those terms."

She goes further, "I know that inwardly I shall never grow old. At 80 I shall still have the same enthusiasm, the same enjoyment of life, or else I shall be ill."

Busy surgical ward leaves patients lonely

TORONTO (CP) — A United States medical anthropologist pretended for nine days to be dying of cancer of the pancreas in a Montreal hospital to compare care given the dying in a surgical ward with care in a special unit for the terminally ill, a medical magazine says.

A report in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal says R. W. Buckingham III, 31, of Yale University found more warmth and understanding in the special palliative unit of Royal Victoria Hospital where patients had more opportunity to talk to staff, among themselves and with their families.

In a busy surgical ward, geared to intensive treatment and cure, doctors often did not look directly at or address a patient and forgot requests, the report says.

Mr. Buckingham was asked by the hospital administration and financing agencies to assess the special palliative unit which had been operating for one year.

His preparation for the hospital admission included loss of 22 pounds, an incision above the collar bone to indicate a biopsy and ultraviolet irradiation to produce reddening of the skin over the stomach and spine to suggest x-ray treatment.

Mr. Buckingham spent one day in the emergency holding area, four days on the surgical ward and four days in the special unit.

SPEND LESS TIME Staff members spent less time with patients in the surgical ward although patients in both units saw the same number of staff members.

In the surgical ward, only one head nurse and one student nurse explained their positions to Mr. Buckingham. Student nurses and orderlies were the only staff members to start conversations.

However, surgical staff members seemed highly efficient technically, the report says.

In addition to nurses and doctors, Mr. Buckingham and his room-mate in the palliative unit were visited by clergy, a dietitian, a social worker and volunteers.

Relatives found doctors inaccessible on the surgical ward but doctors on the palliative unit came in person or spoke on the telephone to relatives.

The report concludes that patients and families can provide tremendous support to one another, and the interest and care of student nurses and volunteers is important "in bringing the person out of the patient."

Southern-style stuffing

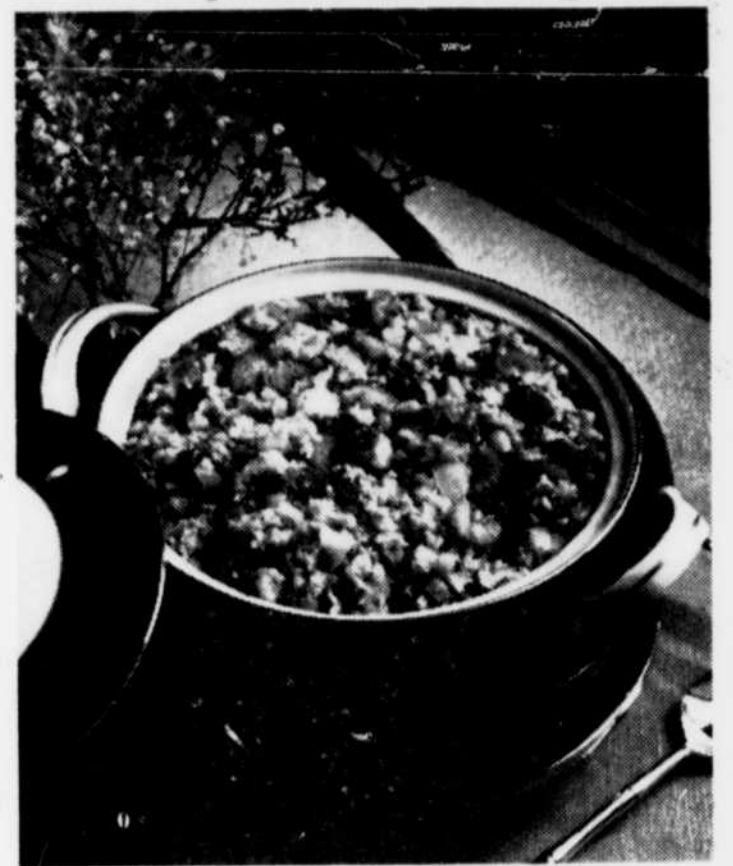

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

A moist dressing with lots of flavor goes well with turkey or chicken roasts and also makes a good stuffing for a pork loin roast.

A stuffing that combines sausage, canned corn and its liquid, egg and homemade cornbread cubes also has its special Southern style dressing flavor when baked in a casserole dish. With time an important factor, such a casserole-dressing is welcome since poultry and roasts cook more rapidly when not stuffed.

SOUTHERN STYLE DRESSING
1 pan corn bread, cooled, crumbled
6 cups white bread cubes
1 12-ounce can whole kernel corn
1/2 pound bulk pork sausage
1 1/4 cups chopped onion
1 cup celery slices
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon thyme leaves
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 cups hot water
1 egg, beaten

Combine corn bread, bread cubes, corn, in large bowl. Combine sausage, onion, celery, salt, poultry seasoning, thyme and pepper in skillet. Brown meat mixture until vegetables are tender. Add to bread mixture; mix well. Stir in water and egg; toss lightly. Place in three-quart casserole. Cover; bake in preheated 350-degree oven

HOMEMADE CORNBREAD is basis of a moist dressing for turkey or roasts.

45 minutes. Serve with poultry, ham or pork roast, as desired. Makes three-quarts of dressing.

CORN BREAD
1 cup milk
1 egg
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 cup enriched corn meal
1 cup all-purpose flour

1 tablespoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt

Add milk, egg and oil to combined dry ingredients. Beat until smooth, about 1 minute. Bake in greased 8-inch square baking pan in preheated 425-degree 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 8-inch square pan of corn bread.

ANN LANDERS SAYS

Educate readers about VD

Dear Ann Landers: Thank God you have enough courage (and clout) to print information in your column that most writers wouldn't (or couldn't) get past an editor. I refer to educating readers about VD. Please, Ann, rerun that VD quiz along with the answers.

Me and Millions
Of Others

Dear You: In a free society, knowledge is the one weapon that can eradicate VD. We must acknowledge the following: Over three million people in the U.S. become infected every year. VD doesn't care who has it. Some very "respectable" people get it and pass it on. VD can be prevented. Silence, fear and guilt are no longer warranted. Anyone who suspects he has VD can go to the city or county health department for a free test and free treatment. Parents of minors will NOT be notified.

Here's the test. The answers can be found at the end:

(1) VD is transmitted by: (a) Sexual relations with an infected person, (b) Toilet seats, (c) Kissing.

(2) If not treated, gonorrhea may turn into syphilis: (a) True, (b) False.

(3) The largest number of reported cases of communicable diseases in the United States last year was from: (a) Measles, (b) Chicken Pox, (c) Gonorrhea, (d) Syphilis.

(4) A person with VD will have: (a) Symptoms all of the time, (b) Symptoms part of the time, (c) No symptoms ever.

(5) If you get syphilis and see a doctor he (or she) can: (a) Help you some but not cure you, (b) Cure you some of the time, (c) Cure you all of the time.

(6) The symptoms of syphilis and gonorrhea are: (a) Usually painful, (b) Almost always noticeable, (c) Often hidden, (d) Almost always hidden.

(7) If a man and woman both get gonorrhea: (a) The man will notice symptoms first, (b) The woman will notice symptoms first, (c) They will both notice symptoms at the same time.

(8) The symptoms of gonorrhea may be: (a) A sore on the sex parts, (b) Discharge from the sex parts, (c) A rash on the body.

(9) The symptoms of syphilis may be: (a) A sore on the sex parts, (b) A rash on the body, (c) Sore Throat, (d) All of the above.

(10) Once you have had syphilis or gonorrhea you can catch it again: (a) Yes, (b) No, (c) Only gonorrhea, (d) Only syphilis.

(11) If a pregnant woman has syphilis and it is not treated, her baby: (a) Will always be born with syphilis, (b) May be born with syphilis, (c) Will never be born with syphilis.

(12) Venereal disease can be a serious problem: (a) Only to people who are careless, (b) Only to people who don't behave properly, (c) Only to teenagers and young adults, (d) To anybody and everybody.

(13) It is correct to say: (a) A "negative" blood test always means you don't have syphilis, (b) A "positive" blood test always means you do have syphilis, (c) If you have syphilis, sooner or later your blood test will be "positive."

(14) VD education in the schools will: (a) Make young people curious and lead them to experiment with sex, (b) Teach them that the disease can be cured and make them less careful about protecting themselves against it, (c) Provide them with accurate information so they will know how to avoid the disease and emphasize the necessity of seeing a doctor if they should become infected.

The correct answers are as follows: 1. (a), 2. (b), 3. (c), 4. (b), 5. (c), 6. (c), 7. (a), 8.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this important message to pet owners everywhere. Thank you.

To Whom It May Concern: As I write this letter your dog is smeared all over the road. I killed him. Maybe you heard the tires screech when I tried to avoid hitting the poor critter, but it was too late. It was him or a head-on collision with a gasoline truck.

Pretty soon you'll find what is left of your pet and it won't be a pretty sight. You'll curse "the lousy driver," and hate me. But the person who should be blamed is YOU.

Your whole family will probably cry their eyes out. I'm sure, too, you believe you loved your dog, but apparently you didn't love him enough to make certain he was safe at home tonight.

Tomorrow, a man who works for the county will scrape him off the pavement. You will probably get another dog in a few days, but unless you learn your lesson the man from the county will have something to do again soon.

Disgusted In Covina
Dear Covina: Strong language - and I agree with every word of it. Thanks for laying it on the line.

Reader query on quilting frames

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — Both my mother and I would like to know how to build a quilting frame and thought some of the senior citizen readers might be able to help us. — BARBARA

DEAR BARBARA — I am sure other readers would also be interested in knowing this since quilting is now so popular. How about it, readers? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Recently I made a discovery that I think will be of interest to other homemakers. When washing tile floors, and you wish to remove the wax, put a cup of washing (not baking) soda in a quart of hot water to dissolve it. Let stand for five minutes. This is easier than using any stripper I have ever tried and the floor is whiter. It is also economical. Even a large box of washing soda is still quite inexpensive. — FLO.

DEAR POLLY — If you want an attractive picture frame in a hurry, use any kind of wood trim such as chair rail molding, etc. Mitre the corners and glue or nail together. Rub the raw wood with regular chalk and polish with a wax type brown shoe polish and shine. No waiting for varnish and stain to dry and the frame has a slightly antiqued look. — MRS. R.V.

DEAR POLLY — Those who like extra width on the window ledge for plants can adjust a spring type sash curtain rod. Position it even with the top edge of the lower sash. This adds enough space for the flower pots. — MARY.

Polly will send you one of her "peachy" thank-you cards, ideal for framing or placing in your family scrapbook, if she uses your favorite Pointer, Pevee or Problem in her column. Write Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

Opening lead — ♣ A

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "One of the interesting things about bidding seems to be that it goes through cycles. In the very first days of contract there were no forcing bids at all, so the jump to game became a very strong bid. Then the pendulum swung back and it became a preempt or stop bid."

Jim: "Today, it has all sorts of meanings. Thus, the jump response of three notrump to partner's opening suit bid is supposed to show an opening notrump of 16-18 balanced points."

Oswald: "We don't use the bid often. When we do we won't have 18, but will have from a good 15 up to 17 and every reason to like notrump played from our seat as the right final contract."

Jim: "South was very bitter about his bad luck. West opened the queen of clubs and the defense had five tricks in before South could gain the lead."

Oswald: "It was bad luck, but he brought it on himself. He had sixteen balanced points, but he really did not want to be declarer. Had he just responded with two of a red suit, North would have bid two notrump, played at game and made at least ten tricks."

ASK THE JACOBY'S

A New York reader wants to know if the late Harry Fishbein invented the Fishbein convention.

He certainly did. It was designed to stop people from making silly preempts. It served its purpose whereupon Harry and all other experts abandoned it.

Seaman completes....

Risky Pacific Crossing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Japanese seaman, who risked death to make his sailing dream come true, guided his crippled 26-foot craft through the Golden Gate to end his solo voyage across the Pacific.

Tomio Ikegawa, 25, weary from his accident-plagued journey, stood barefoot Sunday night aboard the blue Seagull's Friend, waving to about 60 reporters and well-wishers as a U.S. Coast Guard cutter escorted him to port.

Arriving 120 days after leaving Japan, he surprised reporters when he ducked into his cabin and emerged with a camera to snap pictures of the crowd.

In the tradition of adventurers everywhere, the bearded young sailor, answering through an interpreter, said he made his solo trip "because I wanted to do it."

Gifts were waiting for Ikegawa as he ended his 4,600-mile mission—a bottle of West Indian rum from a fellow sailor here, a half-bottle of wine, some cheesecake and a bit of leftover steak.

SAILOR TIRED

"I thank all you people," he said. "You've been so nice. But I'm very tired."

He was to spend the night in his boat and check in with customs in the morning.

With only two year's sea experience, Ikegawa set sail from Ehime, Japan, last Oct. 10, planning a seven-week trip to San Francisco. But his boat's mast was broken Nov. 24 in 60-foot seas.

Ikegawa, a carpenter in a boatyard in Japan, said he rigged a makeshift mast to continue the trip, using his engine occasionally to correct course.

He had stored provisions, mostly rice, for 72 days, but ran out of water the last week and sipped sea water to survive. Still, he said, he managed to gain weight.

Ikegawa's damaged boat was spotted last Thursday by a fishing trawler and towed by a coast guard cutter into port at Fort Bragg, a tiny coastal community about 120 miles north of here. The sailor set sail again after only 15 hours in port, turning thumbs down on an offered auto ride to San Francisco.

The harrowing trip across the world's largest ocean has inspired the young man onward. He said he plans to travel the Pacific again to return home.

"I want to go to Japan by sail," the young mariner said.

Obituaries

MRS. SIDNEY BLODAH

of Stanstead
Mrs. Sidney Blodah, a life long resident in Rock Island passed away at the Sherbrooke Hospital on Saturday, January 29, 1977.

The former Laura Neveu was born in Rock Island on January 1, 1903 a daughter of Desire and Almaide (Hermier) Neveu, who came to Canada from France and to Rock Island where Mr. Neveu was a bank manager.

Laura attended the Ursuline convent in Stanstead and graduated at the age of 15 years. On May 12, 1918, she was employed in the office of the Butterfield plant as a summer employee and that September enrolled at Bugbee Business College in Stanstead. However in October, due to illness in the office at Butterfield's she was invited to return to the Costs and Billing Dept. where she had worked that summer. She accepted this offer and remained in the employee of Butterfield's until her early retirement on December 31, 1965.

A brilliant mind and a mathematician she was promoted to Supervisor of Costs and Billing after a short period in the Shipping Room. The employees under her gave Laura their loyalty for she was a friend and always treated them fairly which gained their respect. She was one of the original members of the Butterfield Quarter Century Club.

As a young woman she was united in marriage to Sidney Blodah who died in 1975. Following his death she shortly afterward went to the home of Mrs. Doris Gibson in Stanstead where in failing health she was given every care.

Prayers were recited by Father Yvan Malouin at the Cass Funeral Home in Stanstead at ten o'clock on Tuesday morning, February 1 where several former co-workers and friends were in attendance.

The committal will be in the spring and will be followed by a Memorial mass to be celebrated in Sacred Heart Church, Stanstead, the date to be announced.

Mrs. Blodah is survived by her family of nieces and nephews: Albert Neveu, of Lock Arbour, N.J., Mrs. Larry (Pauline) Hyman of Beebe, Vt. and Florida, Mrs. Beatrice Sanborne, Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Doris Decost, and Miss Vivian MacGlanfin of Plymouth, Mass. and a host of friends.

MRS. HAROLD STEVENS

of Bedford
Clara Buchanan Stevens was born in Dunham in 1901, the daughter of Edward Buchanan and his wife, Esther Baird.

In 1924 she was united in marriage to Harold George Stevens, also of Dunham. They lived in Massachusetts and then in Arcadia, Florida, where their three children were born, and where, in 1932, Mr. Stevens passed away.

Returning to Dunham with her children, Mrs. Stevens made her home with her mother, for some years, and later lived with her daughters in Bedford.

Mrs. Stevens was a semi-invalid for many years, the last of which she spent in the Marie Drapeau Nursing Home.

She passed away, after contracting pneumonia, on Jan. 25, 1977.

Funeral was from the Diou Funeral Home to the United Church in Dunham where she had always retained her membership, where she had attended Sunday School as a child and where she had been married.

Rev. Jean Barkley, pastor of the Sutton-Dunham Charge, officiated. Miss Helen McElroy presided at the organ and members of the Christian Youth Group (of St. Helen's) sang "The Old Rugged Cross" and "Amazing Grace", very beautifully. The congregational hymn was "The Lord's My Shepherd".

Burial was in the Dunham Protestant Cemetery.

Bearers were her four grandsons: Fred Gilman Jr., Ralph Gilman, Bruce Stevens and Harold Soles and two nephews, Wayne and Duncan Kemp.

Other surviving members of her family are her son George and wife, of Ottawa Ont., daughter, Esther, husband Fred Gilman Sr., daughter Hilda and husband John Soles, granddaughter, Ann Thompson and her husband, Ross, of Prince Rupert, B.C., granddaughter, Mary Gilman, granddaughter-in-law Lil-ianne Gilman, two great-grandchildren Julia and Robert Thompson, a sister Mrs. Eric Kemp, a brother Mr. Chas. Buchanan of Cowansville and other members of his and the Kemp families.

The many floral tributes were tokens of esteem and sympathy for the family.

Following Mrs. Stevens' burial service, the members of the Dunham U.C.W. served tea to the family and friends in the Church Parlours and this thoughtful gesture was greatly appreciated by the Stevens, Gilman and Soles families.

Sunday School report

BOUNDARY (IH) — Under the supervision of Allan R. Nourse, the Sunday schools of Centenary and Stanstead South United churches continue to be a success as indicated by Mr. Nourse's report submitted to the annual congregational meetings of both churches.

Mr. Nourse says that this Sunday school is unique because it serves both churches. There is a registration of 97 children. They are taught Christian education by 27 dedicated teachers to include 124 persons and, in addition, 18 substitute teachers, to total involvement of 142 persons.

He noted there is a faithfulness and keen enthusiasm in the work, with an average attendance each Sunday of 83 children and teachers.

Only seven parents of 55 families are teaching Sunday school. Eight of the teachers are people with no children in the Sunday school, 12 are teenagers, former students of the school.

Last April the school viewed a film "Rascal" by Walt Disney.

In June, Promotion Sunday was a delightful event held outdoors at Merrybrook in Derby, and 62 attendance pins were awarded to members of the school, whom had not missed five Sundays at classes or less.

Labor Day in September, the annual food and fudge sale was a success with excellent co-operation from all connected with the school. The tidy sum of money raised goes into the costs of some one thousand dollars to operate the Sunday school each year.

October 16, the school hosted an Arts and Crafts

Carter to name C.I.A. head

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is putting an old U.S. Navy schoolmate high on his list of possible nominees to head the Central Intelligence Agency.

Admiral Stansfield Turner, who attended the Naval Academy with Carter, is one of the leading candidates for the post, says presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan.

Carter summoned his cabinet for a meeting today. He also scheduled a session with Defence Secretary Harold Brown and Thomas Lance, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Carter plans to hold his first formal news conference as president Tuesday. He has scheduled personal visits to government departments later in the week.

Jordan said Sunday night that Turner was among a handful being considered to head the CIA. Carter's first choice, Theodore Sorensen, withdrew Jan. 17 in the face of stiff Senate opposition.

Others who have been named as possible nominees include Bill Moyers, former top aide to Lyndon Johnson, and Enno Knoche, acting director of the CIA.

Turner, 53, is visiting in the Washington area. The commander of NATO forces in Southern Europe, he graduated from the Naval Academy in 1946. Carter was in the class of 1947.

The admiral is a former president of the Naval War College and commander of the 2nd Fleet. His naval career has been primarily on destroyers.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, attended the baptism Sunday of their youngest child, nine-year-old Amy, who was fully immersed in a tank of water at the First Baptist Church.

As she stepped out of the water, Gladys Silo Mbua, 16, a black from Cameroon, stepped in and was similarly baptized. Both ceremonies were performed by Dr. Charles Trentham, pastor of the church.

Says U.S. not forceful enough with U.S.S.R.

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky said in a television interview broadcast here Sunday that the United States should be more forceful in its dealings with the Soviet Union.

Bukovsky, recently allowed to leave the Soviet Union after spending 12 of his 34 years in Soviet prisons and mental hospitals, was interviewed by CBS correspondent Mike Wallace.

He said the U.S. in recent years has tended to be over-cautious and even afraid in its negotiations with the Kremlin.

Referring to former president Ford's refusal to meet Soviet dissident, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Bukovsky said: "They are afraid to have even a conversation with Mr. Solzhenitsyn. Why is it? They are too afraid to make Soviet government angry."

Bukovsky said he hopes to meet President Carter when he comes to the United States later this month.

"I would like to meet Carter because he is a new man and I suppose we have some sort of common line with him because during his campaign he made it a special point—morality, the moral stand of the nation, of government," Bukovsky said.

He also criticized the U.S. policy of détente with the Soviet Union, saying "it is a betrayal of the cause of liberty, a betrayal of our rights, a betrayal of our fight."

Speaking of his long incarceration in Soviet mental hospitals, Bukovsky said: "They demand of every prisoner in such a place to recant, to condemn, to accuse his own actions, to recognize himself mentally ill."

"Without such recognition, without such expression, they will never let anybody out of it."

Timely bomb defusing saves Rome building

ROME (AP) — Police defused a time bomb on a crowded passenger train near Rome Sunday and said only a faulty fuse on another bomb saved the Milan apartment building that houses a Communist party office.

Police said dozens could have been killed if the powerful bomb found in the toilet of the 13-car train had exploded. The bomb was wrapped in leaflets signed by the extreme rightwing organization Black Order which said, "We are avenging injustice."

A dynamite bomb weighing more than 6½ pounds was found Sunday in the doorway of a Communist office in Milan. Experts said it could have collapsed the entire building, including several floors of apartments, if it had gone off.

A right-wing group called the New Phoenix claimed responsibility for the attempt in Milan.

Police also said three police stations in different quarters of Rome were the targets of firebomb attacks. They said in all three attacks the assailants fled. Damage to one of the police stations was heavy, but no injuries were reported.

The bomb actions followed a week of political violence, mainly in Rome, where leftist and rightist students clashed with police in and around the city's university.

One policeman and three students were seriously injured.

ACTED ON TIP

Acting on a telephone tip, police said they searched the train after its arrival at the Tiburtina station en route from Reggio Calabria in the extreme southern tip of the Italian peninsula to Milan in the north.

Police said they found seven sticks of a highly explosive substance connected to a battery-operated clock set to explode at 3:30 a.m. Sunday, when the train was scheduled to arrive in Florence.

This discounted reports that the bomb was timed to coincide with the arrival at the Tiburtina station of a train carrying Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti from Reggio Emilia, in northern Italy.

As a precaution Andreotti was told to leave the train at Settebagni station, about seven miles north of Rome, and take a car to Rome, which he did.

Around the Eastern Townships

BIRCHTON

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Dulos have taken up residence in the S.J. Taylor bungalow. Roger has just finished several weeks of training in preparation to assuming his duties at the Sherbrooke Municipal Airport off the Ascot-East Angus highway.

Quite a number of motorists have had to have help, recently, to get out of the ditches between the Taylor homestead and the C.P.R. tracks. The reason? A quick look at the road will give the answer. The ridge of snow left by the scraper, or plow, along the north side of the highway, is farther out than the inner edge of the deep ditch. We wonder if there is any reason why the supervisor of the road can not have this danger corrected, an error it would seem, on the part of the driver of the scraper, or whatever. Tow trucks are expensive for the ditch-victims.

Mrs. F. Louis Gosselin and daughter, Susie, spent a week in Port Hope, Ont., with their son and brother, Mr. John Vanderleden, Jr. Mrs. Vanderleden and family.

Mr. Wayne Dunbar has gone to Oakville, Ont., for an indefinite time. Mr. Andre Lamelin, also of Second-Mile House, spent a weekend in Montreal.

Several local folk have been enjoying the Wednesday-afternoon card playing at the Hut in Lennoxville.

Do remember the date of the B-B Sports Association meeting, the second Monday in February, the 14th, Birchton Hall, 8 p.m.

Steve Rogers of Lennoxville, spent Saturday, Jan. 29, with his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers.

As usual there was plenty of variety in the eats brought in at the Pot-Luck Supper at the second-Mile Ministries House, and the folk there were from various localities, Lennoxville, Sherbrooke, Eaton, Cookshire, Birchton.

Hedberg breaks hockey's cherished goal-scoring record

WINNIPEG (CP) — Anders Hedberg broke one of major professional hockey's most cherished goal-scoring records Sunday night, and in doing so has shown the value of old-fashioned hockey talent.

The 25-year-old right winger—called the Swedish Express because of his speed—scored three times Sunday to give him a record-breaking 51 goals in just 47 games.

The previous record was 50 goals in 50 games set in 1944-45 by Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens and equalled in 1974-75 by Bobby Hull of the Jets.

The Jets have played 49 games this season but Hedberg sat out two after breaking a rib three weeks ago.

Hedberg broke the record with talents seldom seen in this day of over-expanded professional hockey. He has one of hockey's hardest wrist shots and probably the best backhand shot since the days of the old six-team National Hockey League.

"I don't think Anders has taken a slapshot this year," said line-mate Ulf Nilsson.

His 49th goal was scored on a backhand as he cut past the net, and his record-breaking 50th came on a hard wrist shot from about 20 feet that beat goaltender Gary Bromley cleanly.

WORKS WITH TEAM

The soft-spoken Hedberg is also the ideal team player. He sacrificed the most when he and his Swedish teammates convinced management last year to do away with individual bonus clauses in players' contracts. Instead every player gets an equal share based on the team standings.

Sunday night, he was almost embarrassed by his feat.

"I can't explain how it feels," he said after the 6-4 World Hockey Association victory over Calgary Cowboys. "I know it's happened but I really don't think I know what it means to me yet."

"But I know that when my name goes in the record book, people will read Maurice Richard, 50 goals in 50 games, and Bobby Hull, 50 goals in 50 games. Then they'll read Anders Hedberg and say: 'Anders Hedberg? Who is he?'"

Hedberg was forced back into action despite his rib injury because of a rash of Winnipeg injuries.

He scored 11 goals in the last three games. But the record almost eluded him after he suffered stretched knee ligaments in the second period Sunday.

Hedberg was hit hard by Paul Terbenche as he tried to split the defence moments after scoring his 49th goal, and he missed the final six minutes of the period.

HAD TO GO BACK

"When I went off the ice I thought I might not be back. But in the dressing room I had a feeling I had to go back out even if I didn't score."

"I could feel the fans wanted me out there and expected me to score. But when I went back I didn't think I'd get 50."

He labored to skate but still had the shot needed to get his 50th goal on a good setup by line-mate Bill Lesuk and to put his 51st into an empty net.

"The 51st was the easiest of them all. And it was so typical of Ulf. We were two-on-one with an empty net and he could just as easily have scored."

Hedberg gave Winnipeg a 3-2 lead in the second period with his first goal and then scored the winner at 11:21 of the third and the insurance goal at 19:59 after the Cowboys were pressing for the tying goal.

It was his fifth game-winning goal this season, second in the league only to Norm Ferguson's seven for San Diego Mariners.

Shaver and Nightingale both

World championships look good — Canada

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's hopes of winning its first gold medal in the world figure skating championships since 1973 are looking up after impressive performances by Ron Shaver and Lynn Nightingale in the Canadian championships.

One reason for optimism is that although both skated slightly flawed free-skating programs in winning the men's and women's senior titles, their performances were mature, confident and clearly world class.

"Things look really good for the worlds," said Shaver, the 25-year-old skater from Cambridge, Ont., who placed second on three occasions to six-time Canadian champion Toller Cranston before establishing himself as the best.

"I've done better performances in the past but I've got one better to come in Tokyo in March. Everything is according to schedule."

Nightingale, 20, of Ottawa, who has gained polish and finesse under the tutelage of new coach, Carlo Fassi of Denver, Colo., said she didn't try to reach a peak here.

"I knew I had to skate well but my best performance has to be saved for the worlds and that's three weeks away."

After winning her fourth consecutive Canadian title, Lynn said she is not going to Tokyo with the intention of being second or third.

TOP SPOTS TAKEN

"The last three years I knew the top three positions were taken. I finished seventh last year but four ahead of me have retired from amateur competition and I think I have as much chance as anybody else."

Among those who have left the world scene are Dorothy Hamill of the United States, who was also coached by Fassi and won the 1976 Olympic and world titles.

Nightingale has Hamill's haircut and Hamill's coach and now she wants something else Hamill had—the gold medal.

The Canadian championships ended Saturday night with powerful free-skating performances by at least half a dozen men, including Brian Pockar of Calgary who placed second and Vern Taylor of Toronto, the most athletic jumper of the competition, climbing to third.

Heather Kemkaran of Toronto performed an elegant program to take second place in the women's competition, edging Kim Alletson of Ottawa, runnerup to Nightingale the last two years.

Cheri and Dennis Pinner of Stoney Creek, Ont., won the senior pairs in a two-team competition with Janet and Mark Hominuke of Calgary. But the Pinnars were disappointed when the Canadian Figure Skating Association decided not to send them to worlds.

RELIES ON YOUTH

Explaining that it was seeking to restore Canada's reputation in world pairs competition by relying on youth, the association announced it would send Sherri Baier, 14, of Mitchell, Ont., and Robin Cowan, 17, of Waterloo, Ont., the 1976 world junior champions, to Tokyo.

Baier and Cowan placed second in the Canadian junior pairs to Josie France of Cambridge and Paul Mills of Sheffield, Ont., who are representing Canada in the junior world championships in Megeve, France, this week.

Black Hawks shut out 3-0

Minnesota North Stars had lost 10 straight National Hockey League games on Chicago ice since November, 1972, including six by shutout. Sunday night, the Stars finally turned the tables by shutting out the Black Hawks 3-0.

"They played the type of hockey I asked them to play," said North Stars coach Ted Harris after goalie Gary Smith kicked out 38 Chicago shots for Minnesota's first shutout of the season.

"Smith played super," said Harris. "He was the difference in the third period. The rest of the guys checked well and they made their own breaks."

In other NHL games Sunday, New York Rangers blanked New York Islanders

4-0, Boston Bruins defeated Washington Capitals 5-2, Colorado Rockies beat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-2 and Detroit Red Wings edged Vancouver Canucks 3-2. The Atlanta at Philadelphia game had earlier been rescheduled to tonight. Tonight's other scheduled game, Toronto at Buffalo, was postponed due to continuing problems with snow in the Buffalo area.

MINNESOTA TIES
On Saturday, Minnesota tied Vancouver 5-5, Philadelphia beat Toronto Maple Leafs 7-5, Pittsburgh defeated Detroit 3-1, Cleveland edged Chicago 3-2 and St. Louis Blues downed Buffalo 6-5. Montreal at Los Angeles and Washington at New York Islanders both ended in 3-3 draws.

HE WHO FALLS BEHIND, GETS LEFT IN A CLOUD OF SNOW, or so it seemed Sunday afternoon as snowmobile enthusiasts from all over took part in the annual snowmobile races in Beebe's Memorial Park. Blowing winds and freezing temperatures did little to discourage the racers, or the spectators as enthusiasts lined the racetrack side lines. These brave souls are seen rounding the first turn, and as in most races, he who gets out in front eats no one's dust ... or in this case snow.

Act as a clearing house for all international matches

International hockey committee could end all confusion

MONTREAL (CP) — Hockey Canada's newly formed international committee could end the confusion that existed last December and January when more than 50 teams from Europe and North America were involved in international matches at the same time.

Don Johnson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said in an interview Sunday the committee, created last December, will act as a clearing house for all such competition.

"The committee will be a clearing house on all international matches for Canadian teams and in this way we hope to avoid the situation which developed a couple of months ago,"

Johnson said.

Alan Eagleson is chairman of the committee whose other members include Johnson and Gordon Juckes representing the CAHA, Doug Fisher and former NHL player Bill Hay.

Although the CAHA has no control over National Hockey League and World Hockey Association teams in the United States, Johnson said that because Eagleson is director of the NHL players association, he had no fear that NHL teams in the U.S. would go against the committee's aims.

As CAHA president, Johnson will be Canada's official representative at the World Hockey Championships in Vienna in March and there are hopes in the association that Eagleson will agree to serve as an alternate delegate.

During a news conference after the CAHA semi-annual meeting, Johnson denied that the CAHA has taken a back seat to the professionals in international hockey.

"We're realistic and accept that the pros can put together a much better team than us," he said. "With the inception of amateur-professional tournaments, our work switched to the development level for amateur players."

He said the semi-annual meeting approved a $523,000 development budget for coaches, referees and managers.

Gordon Renwick, CAHA vice-president said: "We could use five million for our development programs. If you know where we can get the money, we'll gladly take it."

Renwick will become CAHA president this spring.

Johnson said the CAHA is happy with the money obtained from the Canada Cup hockey tournament, but refused to say how much was received. Profits from the Canada Cup were split evenly between the CAHA and the NHL and WHA players associations.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY

The CAHA will try to organize a symposium on women's hockey for the summer, to "see where they want to go," Johnson said. Some women's leagues are affiliated with CAHA branches.

"They're more than welcome to join our association," Johnson said. "We feel they'd be better off with us because of our contacts and they would also avoid a great deal of duplication."

The 1978 World Junior hockey championships will be held in Canada and the choice of both a site and dates will be made at an upcoming meeting of Hockey Canada's international committee, he added.

As part of Canada's exchange with the Soviet Union, a Russian midget squad will tour Canada beginning Feb. 12 in Moncton, N.B., with other contests at Ottawa, Feb. 14, Thunder Bay, Ont. Feb. 18, Cornwall, Ont. Feb. 20, Sorel, Que. Feb. 22 and Quebec City, Feb. 23.

YES, UNDER ALL that equipment there is a young lady. And spectators at the Huntingtonville Carnival saw quite a few of them around the rink Sunday afternoon as they took to the ice to show any and all sceptics, that they knew just as much as their male counterparts did about the art of hockey ... even if they were a little rough around the edges
