OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT THE GOVERNMENT TRAILER

Economic expansion van to terminate local stay

SHERBROOKE — Today, between 10:00 a.m. and 10:00 p.m., is the last opportunity for local residents to view the Federal Department of Regional Economic Expansion's trailer at Howardene on Portland Ave.

Bromont IBM plant gets $6M subsidy

QUEBEC (CP) — IBM Canada Ltd. announced Monday it will build a $21,000,000 plant at Bromont, Que., with financial support from the federal government in the form of a $6,000,000 grant.

The plant, which will manufacture miniature electronic components for use in IBM computers, will employ from 650 to 700 employees by 1973, company chairman Jack Brent told a news conference.

Also participating in the news conference were Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, Gerard Levesque, provincial minister of trade and commerce, Jean Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, and Jean-Luc Pepin, federal minister of trade and commerce.

A statement from Mr. Marchand's department described the $6,000,000 grant to IBM as "the most important made to date" under federal regional development legislation.

EXPORTS FOR U.S.

Most of the components manufactured at the Bromont plant will be exported to the United States.

Mr. Brent said that, although IBM will transfer some personnel from Ontario to fill higher level jobs, most of the employees will be graduates of Quebec universities and schools.

IBM was reached last Thursday.

Asked whether the election of Mr. Bourassa's Liberals in the April 29 Quebec general election encouraged IBM to locate the plant in Quebec, Mr. Brent said there was "nothing political" involved in the company's actions.

IBM had held "limited discussions" with the former Union Nationale government but "we really didn't have much to discuss with them."

Both Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Levesque heralded the "co-operation" among the federal and provincial governments and private industry to attract new investment to Quebec.

NEED CAPITAL

Mr. Bourassa, who also holds the finance portfolio, said it is "essential for the economic growth of Quebec" to have such "collaboration."

He said Quebec has 28 per cent of Canada's population but only 20 per cent of its private investments.

Under the direction of Marcel Meloche, the trailer is moving about the province using an 11-minute film and brochures to describe the efforts of the department to lessen regional disparities.

The color film entitled "A Share in Canada's Prosperity" uses three adjacent screens which are divided at times — the result being an interesting and fast-moving film reminiscent of Expo 67's film fare.

Regional disparity, we rapidly realize, is caused by insufficient resources, lack of industry, poor transportation, lack of services such as sewers and utilities and other reasons. The cost of permitting such a situation to persist is staggering, when welfare payments and lost productivity resulting from unemployment are totalled up.

The solution is the expansion of present industry or the luring into the designated area of new industry according to the terms of the Regional Development Incentives Act, July 1, 1969.

The Act provides for generous capital incentives to industry for manufacturers establishing, expanding or modernizing plants in designated areas.

Up to $12 million in cash grants based on capital investment in the operation and the number of jobs created is available for each project.

But since employment opportunities are of little use to local residents who are unskilled, an important part of the overall program involves the training and education of the potential employees.

As well as designated areas which exist in every province, there are 22 "special areas" in eight provinces.

These require special development programs covering a larger region. Examples of activity in special areas would be the creation of a major transportation network to allow the construction of a pulp and paper mill, or a program of farm consolidation.

The "special areas" should not be confused with the "designated regions" of the Incentives Act. For designated regions are simply where industrial incentives are available to secondary industry.

QUEBEC (CP) — The national assembly of Quebec meets today with a new government and a new opposition confronted by a pile of old problems.

The two priorities of Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberal government are medical care insurance and the 1970-71 budget. Both are among the unfinished business of the old legislature, dissolved March 12 for the April 29 general elections.

Lt. Gov. Hugues Lapointe will make the opening address at 3 p.m. His "very brief speech" will be followed by the premier's speech, described as a 20-minute outline of government policy.

Six of the seven members of the separatist Parti Quebecois have not sworn the traditional oath of allegiance to the Queen.

Under house rules and, apparently, the BNA Act, members must swear allegiance to the Queen before they can sit in the assembly.

With pile of problems

Assembly session starts today

The Parti Quebecois members will visit the office of the assembly secretary at 11 a.m., but would not say whether they would take the oath. The Liberals hope to accomplish their heavy work schedule in six weeks.

But for the first time four political parties will be operating under house rules conceived for a two-party system.

The three opposition parties are the 17-man Union Nationale, the 12-man Ralliement Creditiste and the seven-man Parti Quebecois.

Former premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand is Opposition leader, but the other two groups will be recognized as bona fide opposition parties.

This means that spokesman for the Creditistes and Parti Quebecois will enjoy certain debating and office privileges of the Opposition. This formula was worked out by the Liberals in an effort to counter injustices of the electoral system.

The Parti Quebecois got the most votes of the three opposition parties, but the fewest seats.

MEMBERS GREEN

Fifty-five members of the legislature, including 35 of the 72 Liberal members, are new to the national assembly. The newcomers include 10 men in Premier Bourassa's 22-member cabinet. Eighteen ministers had no cabinet experience.

The previous legislature met for only two weeks this calendar year and was used primarily as a forum for electioneering.

Routine work now vital includes presentation of a budget, approval of spending estimates and debate on the inaugural speech.

MARC BUREAU
...the step to start the run

Bureau plans to seek new mayoral term

By RICHARD SPALDING

SHERBROOKE — Marc Bureau, the 34-year-old incumbent mayor of Sherbrooke, announced last night he would seek the nomination of the Civic Action League for the mayoralty of this city.

CAL stalwart and East Ward Ald. Romeo Quintal interrupted council last night with a brief statement in which he called for a vote of confidence for Mayor Bureau.

"The obtaining of an industrial park last week was a real 'coup de maître', Mr. Quintal said, "and I am sure the population of this city will not hesitate now as to your talent at the helm of the city."

Observers at City Hall believe Mr. Quintal's statement last night, in which he eulogized Mr. Bureau's involvement in the gaining of the industrial park last week, was partly prompted by the announcement recently by former alderman Marcel Savard that he would contest the mayoralty in the Nov. 10 general election.

In addition, observers feel that Mr. Quintal's rather sudden announcement last night was made against the mayor's most earnest intentions to weight out carefully the burdens and hardships of a full term of office as mayor before making any commitments.

Judging from the expression on Mr. Bureau's face, during Mr. Quintal's rally for confidence and support, it was evident the mayor was not sure such a rapid intervention into the field of public support was necessary.

Trying to rub off some of the gratification that had just been bestowed on him, the mayor reminded he had not worked alone in obtaining the industrial park.

Mr. Bureau said that West Ward Ald. Hilaire Beliveau had fostered the idea more than two years ago, calling the park "great success, because it was a team success."

Seek largest private broadcasting network

OTTAWA (CP) — Bushnell Communications Ltd. of Ottawa will unveil a multi-million-dollar bid later this month to set up the largest private broadcasting company in Canada.

The Bushnell firm, which already holds large broadcasting interests including CJOH-TV in Ottawa and CJSS-TV in Cornwall, Ont., outlines its plans at a public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission beginning June 16.

The company has completed purchase agreements for a series of TV and radio stations as well as cable TV companies from Quebec to British Columbia, all subject to CRTC approval.

The over-all cost of Bushnell's proposed acquisitions is difficult to calculate but it is in the neighborhood of $85,000,000. The estimate is based on a compilation of figures contained in a preliminary prospectus filed with the CRTC and dated May 14, 1970.

Janitor dismantles bomb in post office

MONTREAL (CP) — A janitor at a west-end postal station dismantled a bomb containing four sticks of dynamite early today. The bomb, planted at the doorway of the station, was set to explode at 2 a.m.

Joseph E. Barbeau, 61, told reporters he noticed a package near the doorway shortly after midnight.

"I opened the box, took a close look inside and pulled out the wires."

He then re-wrapped the package, threw it into a wastepaper basket and called police.

Members of the police antiterrorist squad arrived soon after at the postal station, located on Decarie Blvd. in the west-end Snowdon district of Montreal.

COULD HAVE BLOWN

A police spokesman said the four dynamite sticks were old and unstable and could have exploded at any time.

Strikes may cause permanent damage

Kierans wants a "fast" mail settlement

By ROSEMARY SPEIRS

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said Monday he wants a settlement "fast" in the postal dispute because the rotating mail strikes could permanently damage post office business.

Mr. Kierans told reporters at an informal news conference that revenue from postage sales in May is down more than $3,000,000 from last year. If the rotating strikes lasted through the summer the damage to revenues could become permanent as the public turned on a lasting basis to private delivery companies.

Mr. Kierans, not personally involved in the postal negotiations which are handled for the government by the treasury board, refused to say who is to blame for the deadlock or to suggest a basis for a compromise settlement.

Asked whether the government program aimed at restricting wage increases to six per cent is a major factor in preventing a settlement and is, in fact, hurting the post office, he said:

"Ask Mr. Drury (Treasury Board President C. M. Drury) that one."

The negotiations are expected to reach a crisis point today as union and treasury board negotiators meet for the first time since last Friday when the government called a temporary halt in the talks, asking the union to return with a package offer.

A treasury board spokesman indicated Monday that the government may refuse to continue the negotiations if the Council of Postal Unions, representing the 27,000 workers, does not make a "realistic" offer at the 2:30 p.m. EDT meeting.

Mr. Kierans said public expectations of a mail strike, plus the 24-hour rotating strikes which began May 26, caused postage revenue in May to drop to $29,452,000 from $32,548,000 in May of last year.

The post office had expected to make $35,249,000 this May through increases in business, meaning the total drop in revenue was 16.5 per cent.

He said working conditions in the post office will worsen, not improve, as a result of the rotating strikes, since revenue drops mean the employer cannot afford to provide good surroundings.

Mr. Kierans said the post office is losing a number of major accounts, but added that he does not blame the unions for this development which occurred over the last two or three years.

"About 90 per cent of the losses can be traced to the post office's failure to modernize, to the lack of training and the lack of a proper physical plant."

Among the business lost was: Cancellation of an order to deliver 1,000,000 flyers for Canadian Tire; loss of the Kodak contract for delivering photographs and films; cancellation of business from Dumont Printing in Montreal which this year will send only 20 per cent of its 40,000,000-piece business through the post office.

Mr. Kierans said that as soon as the postal dispute is settled he will meet Roger Decarie and William Houle, co-chairmen of the postal council, to determine ways in which they can boost postal business.

The minister said that since this would involve changes in working conditions, the unions must be consulted. He had wanted to get at the job for some time but has been unable to do so during the contract talks which have been going on for eight months.

He said he cannot understand the union's demand for employment guarantees in the face of technological change

SUMMERTIME THREAT — The first swim of the year is always an exciting experience, especially for the youngsters. But too often these days the joy is dampened by broken glass such as above, and other hidden dangers which lurk below the surface of the water or the sand on the beach. Such dangers are the result of carelessness and irresponsibility by people who use beaches and pools without a thought of those who may come after them. The best way to avoid such incidents is to take it upon yourself to clean up after you have been anywhere and to make sure that broken glass, opened cans or anything else with jagged edges is properly stored for disposal. Remember, it's your feet or those of your kids that get cut if the responsibility doesn't start with you.

THE WELL CHILD

Daily Study, Sound Sleep
Beat Cramming Fatigue

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Examination time is a time of increased tension for all school children. This tension is normal and in 90 per cent of the pupils it helps them to do their best. For the remaining 10 per cent, which includes good as well as poor students, the tension may paralyze thought and create a mental hazard similar to that experienced by some golfers.

This is accentuated when the outcome is critical and fear of failure grips the student. Often the worry preceding the examination is far worse than the exam itself and it may be responsible for such symptoms as headache, nausea or severe depression. Parents should be watchful for these symptoms.

There is no drug that should be given to tide the student over. Drugs taken for this purpose often cause drowsiness or may even accentuate the jitters, but words of encouragement will bolster the self-confidence of the student. The best treatment, however, is the proverbial ounce of prevention.

The student who does his work conscientiously day by day is spared the frustrating fatigue of cramming and needs only a brief and relaxed period of review, which he should accomplish in less than two hours. A good night's sleep before the examination beats all the cramming in the world.

Q—Would dental X rays taken when I was three months pregnant cause my child to have cancer? No lead apron was used to shield my pelvis.

A—The hazards from X rays are deformities rather than cancer in the baby. With the short exposure and modern equipment there would be no hazard to your baby from X rays directed solely at your teeth.

Q—A short time ago my son, 8, developed two lumps in his groin. They were removed surgically and found to be the result of a cat scratch. How contagious is this disease? Will it recur?

A—Cat scratch disease is usually mild and often goes unrecognized. It is caused by an unidentified virus and, when the scratch is on the ankle or leg, it may cause swelling of the lymph nodes in the groin. Incidentally, it is possible to get the disease from the scratch of a pin or a thorn if they are contaminated with the virus. It is not contagious and never fatal. It will not recur. The antibiotic, tetracycline, may shorten the course of the disease.

Real live orange tree flourishes in library

By GERRY FLAHERTY

SHERBROOKE — It was warm and humid yesterday, but both myself and the photographer really did see a dwarf orange tree on Dufferin Avenue. Bearing 18 good-sized oranges, the tree is located in the west window of the Sherbrooke Library.

The orange tree, about four feet wide and two feet high, has been in the custody of the Library for 35 years. Librarian Mrs. W. G. Le Beau said various members of the staff have nurtured it with water and plant food over the years since it was donated by a member of the Library Board, the late Mr. Fergus Dinning.

Mr. Dinning, apparently, had obtained the seedling from the Dominion Seed House in Ontario. The plant formerly graced the old Sherbrooke Library at the corner of Frontenac and Marquette Streets, so it is indeed no youngster. And it is unique in that at times it bears ripe fruit, green fruit, and blossoms at the same time, according to Mrs. Le Beau.

When asked if anyone had ever tasted the wondrous fruit, Mrs.

Le Beau explained that about ten years ago someone even made marmalade from the oranges.

Unable to obtain the lemons she desired, a woman tried the oranges — ending up with a rather sour tasting product. She went so far as to present the library staff with a small jar of the marmalade as a token of her appreciation.

The orange tree graces a bookcase as it soaks in the afternoon sun, its weary fruit-laden arms bolstered by wooden supports. "And it keeps growing," Mrs. Le Beau said.

"This is its third pot, and it needs to be potted again. This time we may have to use a small tub."

Residents who wish to view our dwarf orange tree or avail themselves of the Sherbrooke Library's collection of books may visit between the following hours: Mornings, Monday to Saturday, 10:00 until noon; afternoons, Monday to Friday, 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.; evenings, Monday, Thursday and Friday, 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

Located at 275 Dufferin Avenue, the Library boasts an interesting and varied Canadiana section, its centennial project.

Nader will investigate pulp and paper

PORTLAND, Me. (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader announced Monday that a team of student investigators will embark on a summer study of the pulp and paper industry in Maine and attempt to analyse its impact on the public interest.

Nader told a news conference that nine law students will explore the industry's impact on the environment, the U.S. tax structure and relevant laws and administration.

The Pulp and Paper Industry Committee, through secretary John T. Gould, pledged its cooperation and suggested a meeting with Nader's project director "to review your objectives and seek ways to assist you in meeting them."

The Maine investigation was conceived because the paper industry is a major polluter and state has a large number of pulp mills, Nader said.

FUTILE SEARCH — A handful of apparently human hair clinging to a fisherman's hook sent firemen and police out in search boats last night along the muddy waters of the Magog River to look for a body believed just off the shore. Finding nothing, the search was called off about one hour later. Divers probed the bottom of the river last night, just under Jacques Cartier bridge in an attempt to relocate the body. A man trolling for fish removed a handful of hair from the depths of the river after his hook got stuck about 20 feet from the shore.

Bail laws change

OTTAWA (CP) — By proposing a greater responsibility for policemen, a wider use of summons and the virtual elimination of cash bail, Justice Minister John Turner moved Monday toward an overhaul of the laws governing arrest and pre-trial detention.

His bail reform bill was given first reading in the Commons. If it passes—it won't be before fall—the laws governing arrest and detention in Canada will be entirely rewritten. And it's almost certain that fewer persons would be in jail prior to their trial.

One of the main features of the bill would eliminate many on-the-spot arrests for less serious offences unless the arresting officer has "reasonable grounds" to believe that such an arrest is in the public interest. Instead, the officer will be able to issue an "appearance notice," that requires a person to appear in court.

And if an arrest is made, there would be a greater obligation on the police, and the courts, to release the accused pending his trial.

Accused persons will only be detained pending trial if such detention "is necessary to ensure his attendance in court" or if "the detention of the accused is necessary in the public interest or for the protection or safety of the public."

CASH NOT NEEDED
Cash bail would be eliminated except for persons from another province. The maximum in this case would be $500.

Mr. Turner, speaking to reporters after the bill was given first reading, said "it goes a long way to eliminate the distinction in the treatment given to the wealthy and to the poor."

There is no change for persons involved in such crimes as murder, treason, manslaughter, piracy, sabotage, inciting to mutiny or intimidating Parliament or a legislature.

The offences affected are those in Section 467 of the Criminal Code, those in which the Crown has an option to proceed either by summary conviction or indictment, and offences punishable after summary conviction only. They include everything from theft under $50, to dangerous driving, common assault, operating a betting house and creating a nuisance.

The bill is based largely on the report last summer of the Canadian Committee on Corrections headed by Mr. Justice Roger Oudet of the Quebec Superior Court.

Generals seize power in Argentinian putsh

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The chiefs of Argentina's three military services seized power Monday and deposed President Juan Carlos Onganía. The president drove from besieged Government House to army headquarters late Monday night with a police escort and gave them his resignation.

Onganía spent five minutes with the junta, then left for the presidential residence in the suburb of Olivos.

The president's capitulation ended 12 hours of suspense during which he had barricaded himself inside Government House behind 1,200 loyal members of the presidential guard while military forces backing the junta moved in to control the capital and other strategic points throughout the nation.

The members of the junta said they would name a new president within 10 days but did not say whom he would be.

A number of military units throughout the nation, South America's second-largest, declared their support for the junta. Only the presidential guard openly supported 55-year-old Onganía.

The three commanders-in-chief—Lt. Gen. Alejandro Lanusse of the army, Admiral Pedro Gnavi of the navy and Brig. Gen. Juan Carlos Rey of the air force—formally advised the Argentine Supreme Court they had taken over.

Over 200 blazes to beat Rain aids western fire fighters

Overnight rains and lighter winds allowed firefighters to get closer to their targets Monday as 2,000 men fought nearly 200 forest fires in northern Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The fires had forced the evacuation of the tiny community of Black Lake, 450 miles north of Prince Albert, but some reports said residents were returning.

A fire guard thrown up by bulldozers was expected to stop any flames. Estimates of the population of Black Lake ranged from 250 to 500.

Ninety-five forest fires were reported burning in Saskatchewan and 84 in Alberta although officials said drifting smoke made it difficult to locate and count the fires. Some plotted previously may have merged with others.

Forest fires also were burning in the two other western provinces. The British Columbia Forest Service said 103 forest fires broke out during the weekend. Lightning was the major cause. Almost 600 men were on fire lines and blazes were "reasonably well contained."

MUSKEG BURNING

Eight fires were burning in Manitoba Monday, seven under control. The other was a 20,000-acre blaze near Norway House in Northern Manitoba, burning in an area of muskeg, rock and stagnated forest growth.

The largest Saskatchewan fire was burning on a 50-mile front in the Buffalo Narrows air weapons range in northwestern Saskatchewan and was being fought with water bombers and helicopters as well as men on the ground.

In Alberta, the worst fire was burning in a timbered area in the Primrose Lake Weapons Range which straddles the boundary with Saskatchewan. More than 25,000 acres had been blackened and the fire was still out of control.

Most of the timber burned in Saskatchewan and Alberta was spruce, with a smattering of jackpine.

Another useless junket

Despite its policy of grim austerity in public expenditures, the Trudeau Government apparently has acquiesced to the proposal that a special Commons-Senate committee travel during the coming summer from one end of the country to the other, holding hearings on what the people think about a new constitution.

While the parliamentarians may enjoy this summer of travel, it is unlikely they will bring forth any really useful information. Instead of hearing from the average Canadian, in all probability they will receive briefs - long and short - from the same groups of professional commentators who can table documents at a moment's notice on almost any subject, even if they do not know what they are talking about. The ordinary citizen is too different to most technical issues to bother with making his opinions known - if he has any.

Probably the simplest and most effective way to solve the constitutional problem would be for the federal government to produce a complete draft of a revised constitution based on the information it has gathered already. This could be submitted to parliament and to a joint federal-provincial conference for debate, with amendments being proposed on the basis of clear-cut suggestions rather than on vague and indefinite ideas.

The basic idea is that any new or revised constitution must be a workable document, meeting not only the problems facing the country today but providing some efficient means of amending the measure in the light of changing conditions.

Probably the best results could be achieved by revising the British North America Act in the light of technological progress and removing the archaic provision that amendments could only be made by an act of the parliament at Westminster.

No bats in the belfry

Some pleasant news comes to you from Dr. Randolph Peterson of the Royal Ontario Museum who declares that despite popular superstition bats do not attack women and get tangled in their hair. Rather, he claims, they eat insects and keep the bugs away. Furthermore, their sonar is so good that they can fly around in the darkness and never - well, hardly ever - bump into you.

Dr. Peterson gave out this information during the course of a press conference which he held, presumably in his belfry, the other day surrounded by 20,000 pickled bats, the folklore being to clear up what he called the "mystery, folklore and misinformation" about the flying mammals.

Really, there are not many bats in Canada, he said, and those that are here are quite harmless. They just look a bit tough because of their ten-inch wing span, pig-like snout and sharp teeth.

If that does not make you feel any better about these unpopular flying rodents, Dr. Peterson also had some pleasant things to say about vampire bats.

You will be glad to know they are not big enormous things, lurking in corners. No, they are just small and they eat mainly cattle.

He did not say what they are eating when they are not eating mainly. But we do not need to worry too much about that. We will just say thanks a lot for the nice information, Dr. Peterson.

And get that flying beast out of here.

BUTCH BOURASSA and THE GUNDANCE KID

WASHINGTON — You don't see as many fathers and sons dining out as you used to. The problem seems to be that not many restaurants are set to handle some of the clothes their clients' sons are wearing.

The other night my friend McGrory suggested to his son, Marshall, that they go to a first-class restaurant to celebrate his graduation from high school.

"Great," said Marshall, "let's go."

"I think you'd better put on a shirt," McGrory suggested.

"I have a sweat shirt on. What's wrong with it?"

"I thought you might put on a shirt and a tie," McGrory said.

"What are we going to, a wedding?" Marshall demanded.

"Most good restaurants prefer you to wear a tie," McGrory said.

"What for?" Marshall demanded.

"So you can get soup on it!" McGrory shouted. "Now put on a shirt and tie and don't give me any lip."

McGrory's wife came rushing in. "What's all the shouting about?"

McGrory said, "I'm taking him to Paul Young's restaurant for graduation and he won't even put on a tie!"

"I don't want to go if I have to wear a tie!" Marshall yelled.

"Put on a tie," Mrs. McGrory said. "And a coat, too. Your father wants to be proud of you."

"What does putting on a shirt and tie have to do with him being proud of me?"

McGrory shouted, "It isn't that I want to be proud of you. It's just that I don't want to be ashamed of you!"

Dinner for one

Marshall came down in a few minutes with a wrinkled shirt and a torn tie on. His face was red.

McGrory was just about to leave the house when he looked down.

"You have no shoes on," McGrory said.

"Nobody's going to see my feet," Marshall protested. "They'll be under the table."

"Someone will see your feet as you're escorted to the table. People get very upset when they see a customer without shoes walking in a good restaurant."

"But it's summer. No one wears shoes in the summer."

Mrs. McGrory said, "Marshall, go upstairs and put on some sneakers. Your father asks so little of you."

Marshall stomped upstairs. "I didn't want to go to a restaurant in the first place."

He came down a few minutes later and got into the car and didn't say anything.

"Marshall," McGrory said, "would you take the red band off your head before we go into the restaurant?"

"What kind of place are we going to where they won't let a guy wear a band on his head?"

"It's a very good place, Marshall. They have fine food. You're growing up now, and you should be interested in other things besides milk shakes and French fries."

"You mean they don't have milk shakes and French fries at this place? I thought you said it was a good restaurant."

"Marshall," McGrory said quietly, "you see that McDonald's hamburger stand? Well, here's two bucks. You go over there and have anything you want for your graduation."

"You coming?" Marshall said.

McGrory shook his head sadly. "No, you'd only be ashamed of me."

Only for the affluent

By Heward Graftley.

Last week in Ottawa, Dr. L. Cappon, professor of urban and environmental studies at York University testified before the Senate Poverty Committee.

He said that "20 per cent of all Canadians are relatively poor, - and they account for perhaps 75 per cent of all illness".

The people so effected live in the hard-core poverty areas of our cities and depressed rural regions. A visit to the health department of any large North American city, or a glance at statistics involving low-income people in rural areas tells the story.

In comparison to the more "affluent" they have a shorter life expectancy, infant and maternal mortality rates are higher, as are rates for the incidence of such diseases and illnesses as cancer, coronary disease, diabetes, tuberculosis, flu and pneumonia.

Even before medicare programs have really begun to take effect in most of Canada, we are faced with the above situation.

Not only must our medical schools produce more competent doctors, but existing medical manpower resources must be better and more efficiently organized and distributed.

Prof. Emile Gosselin of the University of Montreal estimates that in the south-west part of the city "half the families have inadequate nutrition".

In Montreal, The Point St. Charles' Clinic was opened on July 2, 1968, by a group of medical students in order to provide health services for thousands of low income families.

Up until that time there were only one part-time and two full-time doctors in a population of 25,000.

Minimum requirements of the World Health Organization are one doctor per 600 population. Statistics can be misleading. Manhattan Island, New York, reports a well-above-average doctor to population ratio.

While some sections of the island are adequately staffed by doctors, the story is clear when we move into the ghettos. Until the Martin Luther King Medical Centre was established in 1966, three doctors treated 55,000 people in a depressed ghetto area, mainly populated by Negroes and Puerto Ricans.

Towns with populations close to 10,000 aren't escaping the pinch. Many such towns all over Canada, with thousands of low-income families, are often served only by one or two part-time doctors and are crying out for the establishment of community clinics.

Rural counties from British Columbia to Newfoundland used to be served by four to six full-time general practitioners.

Today, many of them are lucky to have two and sometimes one part-time practitioners for populations of over 20,000.

In many city areas, low-income people are often forced to seek treatment in the crowded outpatient units of city hospitals far removed from where they live.

These units, invariably, are also emergency treatment centres. In spite of denials from the Canadian Medical Association, Point St. Charles citizens claimed "welfare recipients are being refused care from private physicians all the time".

One of the solutions, apart from producing more doctors, for the lack of health-care facilities in urban and rural areas surely lies in the establishment of community and regional clinics.

To a large extent they should be adequately staffed by well-trained paramedical aids and public health officers.

These clinics could have a full-time doctor or doctors in regular attendance, or a doctor or doctors would be at these strategically located units at regular times.

Clinics for group medical practice also constitute part of the answer. Medical staff attached to these community or regional clinics would have, in most instances, admitting privileges in regional hospitals.

In order to establish clinics such as this, truly responsive to local needs, much co-operation between local and provincial governments is needed. - As things stand now, it is "not!" too early to start things going.

How about party fund-raising?

There was a small ripple of comment, most of it favorable, when the Government recently introduced proposals to change the Election Act.

The notable changes would lower the voting age to 18 and require the placing of the candidate's party affiliation on the ballot. A less noticeable amendment which would provide rather severe penalties for anyone caught ripping down a candidate's posters seems to promise lots of future election-time wrangles.

The surprising aspect of the press comment about the reforms is the general censure of the Government for failing to bring in changes on fund-raising and spending. Some 16 papers out of a score whose pages I canvassed regretted this failure. The question runs: Has the Government forgotten the report of the committee on election expenses, published in two volumes late in 1966?

The Government, through House leader Donald MacDonald, is shocked at suggestions it has forgotten the report. He recapitulates that it is an involved question, requiring complex changes, perhaps a switch to subsidies for candidates (as is done in Quebec elections) and there hasn't been time to accomplish all this.

And so we get into the Macdonald litany of a packed Parliamentary schedule, too busy committees and the whole matter of priorities.

This hoary response arouses suspicion among moralists.

I believe that there is neither antagonism nor enthusiasm in the Trudeau ministry about party fund-raising.

The best way to get action would be public uproar. Unfortunately, a scandal is unlikely at this mid-term time. The present practices do have advantages for the party in power. A diffused belief by those much interested in politics that there must be reform may have a mild moral suasion. This is not worth much in forcing change.

Our parties require funds for three purposes: To fight elections; to sustain a party organization between elections; to provide expertise and research for party leaders and MPs through the life of a Parliament.

There have been several developments and the sharpening of a few trends since the committee on election expenses reported.

Firstly, the committee did not deal with the money problem which emerged in the fervor of the leadership contests of the two old parties in 1967 and 1968. Some of the candidates blew over $100,000.

Candidates like Pierre Trudeau and Paul Hellyer flew around the country in planes owned by large corporations. Both the winners and the runners-up were wealthy men.

Secondly, the spread of cablevision has added more to the dimensions of both coverage and costs. Thirdly, the Liberals tried seriously to raise funds on a mass basis through their central office, using a direct mail campaign. It bombed.

Fourthly, all the parties are turning to the promotion of "think" conferences to stimulate interest in the party and interest in the party policy. These are expensive.

Finally, a trend noted by the committee has grown stronger. Provincial parties find it easier and easier to raise money. Gradually they have slipped out of dependency on the Federal parties. Clearly, the Robarts' Conservatives find it easier to raise funds than the Stanfield Conservatives. The same could be said about the Thatcher Liberals vis-a-vis the Trudeau Liberals so far as the latter operate in Saskatchewan.

tions were important contributors.

The fund-raisers were comparatively mysterious figures and few in number, their directing agent being an appointee on the party leader.

Senior party organizers I have spoken with recently are optimistic - more so than I think they should be - about broadening the base of givers to their party.

I believe that none of the recent developments, including the optimism about mass-giving, has taken anything away from the merits of the committee's 1966 recommendations.

In brief these were:
(A) The legal recognition of parties, making them legally responsible for their actions in raising and spending funds;

(B) Each candidate who gets 15 per cent or more of the vote would get two cents subsidy per elector;

(C) There would be a 10 cents per elector ceiling on constituency spending.

Professor Paltiel, the research director for the committee, has pointed out that these changes are not revolutionary. They would not change the style of Canadian political campaigns.

The simple conclusion I can give this run through the problem of party funds is that it will take a miracle of aroused public pressure if we are to get reforms before the next general election.

American forces leaving Cambodian people's soil

SAIGON (AP) - More than half the 31,000 United States troops sent into Cambodia have been withdrawn to South Vietnam, informed sources reported Monday. At the same time, however, Thailand was reported considering the dispatch of 12,000 men now in South Vietnam to a Cambodian hot spot 80 miles from the Thai border. Communist command pressure around Siem Reap eased Monday after Cambodian troops and planes pushed a command force off the town's airstrip, taken Sunday, while other Cambodian forces drove North Vietnamese troops and Viet Cong guerrillas from the centre of Kompong Thom in central Cambodia. Informants said 18,400 Americans have drawn back into South Vietnam from Cambodia where they had been sent May 1. This left 12,600 Americans still in Cambodia. An indication of the effects of the war in Cambodia came Monday from the International Red Cross Committee and the League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva. They said 165,000 persons had been displaced by the Cambodian fighting. They appealed for foodstuffs, tents, sleeping mats and medical supplies for 75,000 Cambodians who had had to leave their homes and for about 90,000 Vietnamese civilians awaiting transfer to South Vietnam. Generally scattered ground fighting both in Cambodia and South Vietnam was reported Monday. The U.S. command said three more U.S. planes were shot down. A five-man Laotian military mission flew to the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh for talks believed aimed at better co-ordinating information on North Vietnamese activities. Also in Phnom Penh were two members of Nixon's 13-man fact-finding team to Indochina. Later Monday, the entire group left Saigon for Hawaii to prepare its report on Indochina for Nixon.

No Chinese reported in Vietnam

SAIGON (Reuters) - The United States military command in South Vietnam has no evidence to indicate that Communist Chinese advisers are working with the Viet Cong guerrillas either in South Vietnam or in Cambodia, informed sources said Monday. Only the vaguest of unsubstantiated references have been made by defecting or captured guerrillas about the possibility of Chinese having been with Communist command forces in Cambodia, the sources said. They said there is no evidence to indicate there are Chinese advisers-or advisers from the Soviet Union-with the guerrillas, as had been suggested last week by Cambodian Foreign Minister Yem Sambaur.

BALLISTICS EXPERT FIRES GUN INTO WATER

Ballistics experts are vital to police forces

MONTREAL - On the street, Yvon Theriault, 49, can pass easily for just another business man. But once inside the new Department of Justice building, he quickly sheds his street wear - becoming a white-coated ballistics expert in the process. Mr. Theriault, a retired Canadian Army major, is employed in the Quebec Medical Institute's ballistics laboratory. Thanks to the most modern equipment of its kind in Canada, it can be proved which bullet came from which weapon. This legal-medical evidence may then be used by police forces when criminal charges require substantiation. The most sophisticated microscopes are used to determine the calibre of a given bullet, and the weapon, if it is in the hand, from which it was shot. Once identified conclusively, the weapon is shot once in such a manner as to prove that the firing mechanism is functioning correctly. In other words, the weapon won't fire accidentally if it is struck anywhere with an object. It is shot into a water-filled tank for two reasons: One, this permits easy recovery of the projectile; and two, the bullet retains intact with the minuscule streaks which distinguish it from others. Mr. Theriault explained that once this has taken place, bullets found at the scene of a crime and the bullet shot in the lab are compared using various microscopes. When study indicates the streaks on the bullets are exactly the same, they are photographed. This provides the required proof. Experts from the Medical Institute have appeared in courts across the province 49 times since the beginning of the year. Its facilities being available to all police forces, last year 963 investigations were conducted.

Art display at Barn Village

Jay Barn Village's first Annual Art Show will be held on July 11 and 12 spotlighting a manifestation of summer activities in the Jay area. The show will last from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday with cordial invitations being extended to all artists over 17 years of age in the Vermont and Canadian areas. Exhibits will be displayed on snow and split rail fences, stone walls, barns, treetrunks and anywhere the artist may best creatively show his work on the spacious lawns of Jay Barn Village located on Route 242 in Jay, Vermont. Mr. Snow, named by a Toronto newspaper last week as a frequent visitor to the Duke home, said he gave the family advice on the renovations but was not asked to do the work. He visited the home again in 1966, with about 200 people invited to a lawn party; and in 1967 when he was one of 1,500 persons invited to a display of lawn equipment manufactured by Mr. Duke. Mr. Snow said the visits were not unusual in a town like Oakville.

Shulman in Sicily to prove Mafia-OPP link

TORONTO (CP) - Donald MacDonald, Ontario leader of the New Democratic Party, said Monday Dr. Morton Shulman is in Sicily to "pursue a lead" in his investigation of the alleged Mafia connections with the Ontario Provincial Police. Mr. MacDonald said Dr. Shulman, NDP member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, left Saturday for Sicily and will not return until later this week. Dr. Shulman claimed in a legislative meeting last Thursday that senior OPP officers are close friends of a man with alleged Mafia connections. The MPP said George Clinton Duke, a wealthy Oakville businessman, is friendly with high OPP officials and has bragged he has influence in the force. He said Duke shared an apartment in Hamilton with Johnny Papalia, whom Dr. Shulman described as a Mafia enforcer. A Burlington, Ont. man, whom Dr. Shulman also described as having links with the Mafia, challenged the NDP member last weekend to repeat the charges outside the legislature where they would not be privileged. DENIED CHARGES Dan G. Gasbarrini said: "I deny categorically and unequivocally being a member of any organized crime syndicate, Mafia or any other illicit organization in Canada, the U.S. or anywhere else." Dr. Shulman told the legislature committee that Duke's Hamilton apartment is owned by Terrace Creek Developments Ltd., a Hamilton company which lists Daniel Gasbarrini as president. He said Papalia and Gasbarrini both were named as Mafia men in Canada during a U.S. Senate crime investigation in 1963. Dr. Shulman has charged that senior OPP officials, including Commissioner Eric Silk, had been entertained at Duke's Oakville home the same day Papalia visited the residence. J. W. Snow (PC-Halton East) told the legislature Monday he met Mr. Duke when he was called to advise on extensive renovations. Mr. Snow's construction firm had built the house for a previous owner in 1953. Mr. Snow, named by a Toronto newspaper last week as a frequent visitor to the Duke home, said he gave the family advice on the renovations but was not asked to do the work. He visited the home again in 1966, with about 200 people invited to a lawn party; and in 1967 when he was one of 1,500 persons invited to a display of lawn equipment manufactured by Mr. Duke. Mr. Snow said the visits were not unusual in a town like Oakville.

Air pirates seek political asylum

NUERNBERG (AP) - Eight Czechoslovaks who had a two-year-old girl with them commandeered a Czechoslovak airliner at pistol-point Monday and forced it to land in this West German city where they sought political asylum. Nuernberg police did not immediately release the names of the nine-four men and four women accompanied by the baby-who commandeered the Ilyushin 14 aircraft with 16 other passengers and three crew members aboard. Police said the nine fled to the West for political reasons, but did not elaborate. Shortly after the Soviet-built plane took off from Karlovy Vary, Czechoslovakia, on a flight to Prague, police said, two men armed with pistols forced their way into the cockpit and ordered the pilot to fly to West Germany. Two other men and a woman, also armed, trained pistols on the passengers and there was no effort to resist. Some of the hijackers also carried knives, Nuernberg police said. Karlovy Vary is 20 miles from the West German border and Nuernberg is 100 miles from the Bohemian resort town. GIVE THEMSELVES UP Police rushed to the airport and when the plane rolled to a stop the hijackers turned themselves over to West German authorities. Police said the adult hijackers are 19 to 25 years old. There are two married couples. As one reason for giving only sketchy details, police said questioning was slow because the hijackers spoke only Czech. The plane, with its pilot, copilot, flight engineer and 16 passengers, left Nuernberg after four hours to return to Czechoslovakia. The Nuernberg district attorney's office said it was checking whether charges should be filed against the hijackers. In Bonn, the West German government expressed "regret" at the hijacking. Government sources acknowledged that the incident could prove embarrassing at a crucial point in Bonn's efforts to better relations with the Communist East.

Czech fashions limited

By MARGARET NESS
PRAGUE (CP) — Mini-skirts aren't plentiful in the streets of this lovely Czechoslovakia capital, and the women don't seem to be fashion-conscious at all — whether for political reasons or otherwise.

Livia Roubickova, a designer with the state-owned Institute of Interior and Fashion Design, says that women over 40 in the Communist world just aren't interested enough in themselves, not even to the extent of using makeup.

Certainly this lack of fashion interest among the older women isn't the fault of the institute, which North American fashion writers would consider as avant garde as any in the world. Its designers are allowed to go to Paris and London to study the latest trends, even though the Communist higher-ups don't encourage their citizens to travel abroad.

RAPPORT LACKING

The trouble seems to be a lack of rapport between the designers and the foundry type of dress production at the manufacturing level. The institute has a team of six designers—one is a man—who create the Prague collections but then must submit them to the state-owned manufacturing industry for production.

But the catch is that the manufacturers can alter the designs to more conservative styling, which the designers find frustrating.

The largest manufacturer is Great National Enterprises in northern Moravia, producing women's coats, dresses and costumes. There's another factory for women's clothes, and for children's, in Prague itself. The other seven factories are scattered in Moravia and Slovakia.

The institute designers are already working on spring, 1971, in order to give the manufacturers plenty of time for production. Asked about midis, Mrs. Roubickova said they had a few in this spring's collection and will have more for fall, but less than 20 per cent. Colors for spring, 1971, will include the usual classic marine blue and white, as well as pale lilac, caramel, pastel turquoise and coral.

CZECH FASHION — This heavily beaded mini-length cocktail dress is among the styles turned out by the Czechoslovak Institute of Interior and Fashion Design in Prague. However, although the institute designers are up-to-date with their styles, state-owned dress factories can alter the designs to more conservative styling. (CP Photo)

This fall they like aubergine, olive and black.

Only domestic fabrics are used in the collections since this will be the fabric most used by the manufacturers. But imported fabrics can be bought in the stores by the yard, in the larger cities.

STRONG ON COCKTAILS

The 1970 spring-summer collection includes a smart pants-and-mid-thigh-jacket with a quilted border. An amusing linen beach dress has a kangaroo pocket under an apron effect. Oddly, the collection was strong on cocktail and late-day dresses, since the demand for these would be fairly limited, except in Prague itself.

One short ruby red velvet was trimmed with matching ostrich feathers, a popular spring touch in New York. The gowns were heavily beaded and ornamented, since this is a specialty of Czechoslovakia, and much of the beading can be bought by the yard — a good buy for tourists.

Sawchuk's death termed "completely accidental"

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — The Nassau County grand jury decided Monday the death of hockey goalie Terry Sawchuk after a fracas with New York Ranger team-mate Ron Stewart was "completely accidental."

The grand jury did not recommend that anyone be charged in connection with Sawchuk's death.

County District Attorney William A. Cahn, who reported the grand jury's findings, said both Sawchuk and Stewart were drinking in a bar when an argument over the cleaning of their rented house started and they "may have been slightly intoxicated."

Cahn said the case was "closed ... so far as any further criminal investigation by this office is concerned."

He said that 3½ hours of testimony before the grand jury by nine witnesses, including Stewart, disclosed that it was "mainly a verbal argument and while a lot of pushing and shoving took place at the bar and the home and although some blows may have been attempted, none was struck" by either Stewart or Sawchuk.

The argument took place April 29. After a fall at the home the two players shared during the hockey season, Sawchuk, 40-year-old Winnipeg native, was admitted to Long Beach Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery for removal of his gall bladder.

DIES OF BLOOD CLOT

Several weeks later he was transferred to a New York City hospital, where he died Sunday, May 31 of a pulmonary embolism—a blood clot.

Cahn said that after Sawchuk and Stewart, 37, had words in a Long Beach bar, "the argument continued at the home ... and apparently Stewart fell backward over an obstacle in the yard and Sawchuk and Ben Weiner, who had hold of Sawchuk, fell and the injuries which caused the embolism leading to the death of Sawchuk occurred."

TERRY SAWCHUK

Weiner, manager of a Long Island restaurant, was a friend of Sawchuk's.

Cahn said that while "the exact cause of Sawchuk's injury remains unknown ... there was no evidence by any of the eye-witnesses that any blows were struck."

Stewart, who signed a waiver of immunity before testifying, was on the stand for about 45 minutes, longest of any of the witnesses.

The other witnesses were Dr. Denis Nicholson, who first examined Sawchuk after the fall; Dr. Elliott Gross, a deputy New York City medical examiner who conducted the autopsy; Rosemary Sasso, Canadian-born nurse and a friend of Stewart's, who was at the house during the second scuffle; Emile Francis, general manager and coach of the Rangers; Weiner; Margaret Wilson, a waitress at the Long Beach bar where the argument started; Joseph Craine, the bartender, and detective Conrad Kessler of the Nassau County police department's homicide squad.

Sport Notes

...G.M.W.C. with Lawrence Huckins aboard, ran the mile in 2:11.4 to capture the $250 purse in the ninth race at the Sherbrooke race track Sunday afternoon. Favored The Great Spencer had to settle for fourth place. Ray Bang won the $225 honors in the fifth race, a trot, with a time of 2:11.4 to register a second victory in seven starts this season.

Sunday's action saw five new entries in the winner's circle — Contess Jersey in the second frame, Mighty Todd in the third; Tarport Jimmy in the sixth; Nettie Herbert in the seventh and Lover Hal in the final race.

On Sunday, June 14, $3,000 in total purse will be up for grabs in the 10-card program, which is likely to attract entries throughout the province.

...Jos and Paul Leduc swore revenge last week and on Saturday night before more than 2,500 wrestling fans, at the Sports Palace, they delivered the goods with a convincing win over bad boys Fidel Castillo and Michel Dubois.

The Leduc duo from Godbout, Quebec, captured the deciding fall when brother Jos squeezed out Castillo with his patented bear hug.

Ring-side commentator Claude "Mutt" Dussault absorbed his lumps when he found himself on the receiving end of a Fidel Castillo kick. The blow sent Dussault sprawling against the ropes and in the process he lost his microphone. Promoter Claude Genest later disclosed that Castillo would have his earnings confiscated and have to present himself before the promoter's office to plead his case.

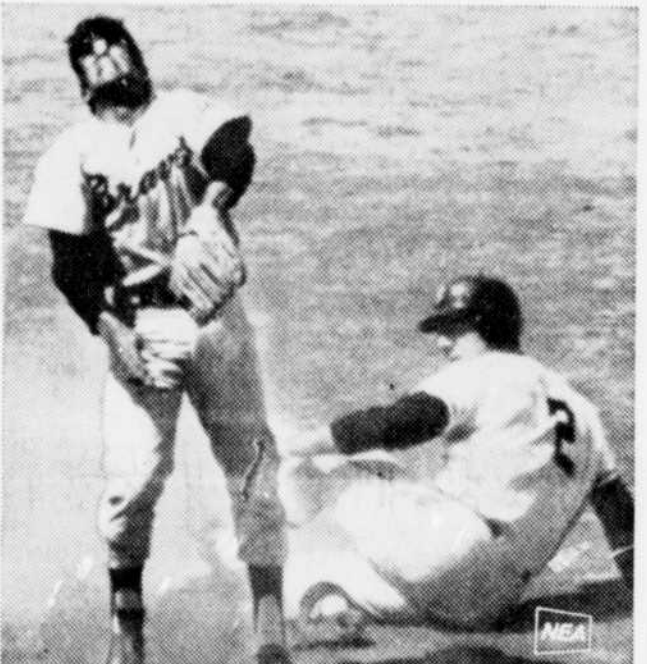

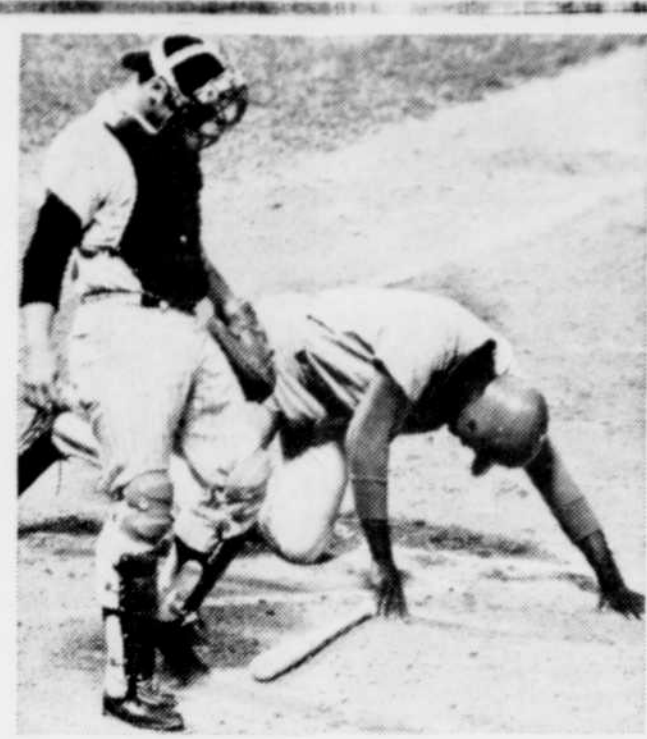

In other bouts, The Green Hornet I disposed of Lionel Robert, while his partner Green Hornet II defeated Juan Lopez with a vicious kick to the head before the pin.

Strong man Antonio Baillargeon won over Bull Ramos of Mexico in another featured match-up.

In an exciting match, Chinese grapplers Chin Lee and Luigi Suto employed unnecessary tactics to rid themselves of the Kelly brothers.

A heady performance by rookie Yvon Lemaire and brilliant net minding Normand Dionne enabled the Drummondville Jets to post a 13-4 win over the Cowansville Tigers in ET Lacrosse League action.

In Sorel, the Titans locked themselves in first place with a tight 13-11 victory over the Magog Hawks. In other games, the Granby Lions defeated the Windsor Eagles 7-5.

Provincial League action

Als sweep double bill to climb into second

QUEBEC — The Sherbrooke Alouettes took two giant strides last night in an effort to reach the top of the heap in the Provincial League standings.

Playing on foreign soil, the Als reeled off two victories, 4-3 and 3-2 over the Quebec Indians to nestle into second place with the Trois Rivieres Eagles.

In the first game, the Alouettes notched six hits climaxed by a four-run uprising in the fourth inning and managed to hold on despite an Indian rally late in the game.

In the fourth frame, Al Fernandez reached first on shortstop Everest Contremaestre's throwing error, followed by Tim Harkness' single which advanced Fernandez to third. Haley Young, the burly third baseman who is currently leading the league in hitting, promptly walloped a triple to drive in both runs. Erasmo Felipe brought Young home and scampered to third on Teo James' double. Jim Ridley lofted a sacrifice fly scoring Felipe.

That was all the Sherbrooke squad needed.

Matt Gayeski was credited with the win and his mound opponent, Luis de Leon suffered the loss—his fourth of the campaign.

In the second game, the Als were outhit 6-3, but managed to play tenacious errorless ball, giving starter Henri Corbeil a 2-2 overall record. Corbeil fanned five and issued but one walk.

Sherbrooke talked with their three runs in the fifth inning on a two-run homer by outfielder Jack Weiss, an error and a double off the bat of Joe Proctor.

In other Provincial League action last night, the host Thetford Miners outclassed the Drummondville Royals 7-4 to hang on to first place.

The Alouettes travel to Trois Rivieres tonight to tackle the Eagles and to continue their four-game winning streak.

Staub delivers key blow

Expos catch Boston with 'sox' down

A two-run homer by Art Shamsky destroyed pitcher Jack Billingham's shutout streak Monday night as New York Mets trimmed Houston Astros 2-0 in the only scheduled National League game. Righthander Jim McAndrew limited the Astros to five singles as the Mets ended a five-game losing streak.

In the only American League contest, Tommy Harper's home run off the first pitch of the game sparked Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-2 win over Chicago White Sox.

Three inter-league exhibitions were played Monday night. Baltimore Orioles downed Philadelphia Phillies 7-4, Montreal Expos outscored Boston Red Sox 8-6, and Kansas City Royals beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4.

A bases-loaded single by Rusty Staub in the fourth inning was the key blow for the Expos in a four-run rally, erasing a 6-4 Boston lead, at Montreal.

Carl Yastrzemski struck a two-run homer off Montreal reliever Howie Reed in the fourth to break a 4-4 tie.

Two consecutive walks in the fourth finished Red Sox' starter Jim Lonborg and Jose Santiago came on in relief. Jim Gosger singled to load the bases and Staub's hit drove across two runs to tie the score 6-6. A single by Mack Jones and an error by Santiago accounted for the Expos' final two runs.

In one other exhibition game Monday, Cincinnati Reds of the National League posted an 8-0 win over Indianapolis Indians, their Triple-A farm club in the American Association.

At Houston, McAndrew and Billingham were locked in a shutout duel over five innings. Cleon Jones started the New York rally in the sixth with a one-out single. Shamsky followed with his sixth home run of the season to cut Billingham's string of scoreless pitching at 25 innings.

The Astros threatened to score

Plante unveils mask made in Sherbrooke

JACQUES PLANTE

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Plante, first National Hockey League goaltender to wear a face mask nearly 15 years ago, will introduce a new, improved version today.

He plans to manufacture the new mask which he says will bear up under shots travelling up to 135 miles an hour. He developed it with the cooperation of the University of Sherbrooke in Sherbrooke, Que.

The mask is made of woven fibres with resin added to keep them rigid. At nine ounces, it weighs about a pound less than a baseball catcher's and will cost between $15 and $25.

Intra-league draft today

DON MARSHALL

MONTREAL (CP) — Veteran forwards Ron Stewart and Donnie Marshall, along with defenceman Tim Horton, were left unprotected by New York Rangers going into today's National Hockey League intra-league draft.

Today the 12 NHL teams draft from one another in one phase of the annual four-day meetings. Each club is allowed to protect 18 players, with all goaltenders and first-year professionals exempt.

Some of the other better known names dropped were Claude Provost, veteran right winger of Montreal Canadiens, defenceman Pat Quinn of Toronto Maple Leafs, forward Billy Dea and defenceman Paul Popeil of Detroit Red Wings.

Boston Bruins protected Ted Green, out all last season with a skull fracture, but did not protect Bill Speer, acquired from Los Angeles Kings.

The Bruins were forced to protect all-star Bobby Orr for the first time since he became a pro.

St. Louis Blues were forced to protect veteran defenceman and captain Al Arbour, despite the fact he was named coach of the club last week.

General manager Scotty Bowman apparently was taking no chances another club would pull his newly-appointed coach from under his wing.

Ski station to be facelifted

QUEBEC (CP) — Mont Ste. Anne, one of the finest ski stations in Eastern Canada, is to get a $12,000,000 facelift in the next three years.

The Canadian and Quebec governments Monday announced joint plans to transform the ski station 25 miles northeast of here, into a year round tourist and recreation centre.

The plans are part of a $52,000,000 economic expansion program undertaken by the two governments in three areas of Quebec.

To be developed are more ski slopes, more lifts, a golf course and camping sites.

The federal government will provide $2,000,000 in grants and $10,000,000 in loans for development of the region, part of a provincial park.

Two million dollars will be spent this year to develop the skiing potential of Mont Ste. Anne, scene of World Cup skiing in the spring of 1969.

There are 14 ski runs and two major lifts on the southern slope of the mountain which has a vertical drop of 1,000 feet.

Mike Garrett to switch game

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Garrett, at the height of his career as a star running back for Kansas City Chiefs, formally announced his retirement from pro football Monday to begin playing baseball.

The 26-year-old member of the Super Bowl champion Chiefs confirmed that he would play out the final year of what is reported to be a $450,000 five-year contract with Kansas City next season, and then turn to baseball.

Friday baseball's Los Angeles Dodgers picked him in the free agent draft.

"I'm not tired of football ... I love it," he told a press conference Monday. "I just want to try something else. It's not an achievement. I just always wanted to play for the Dodgers."

Intrepid wins in Cup trials

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — In the first two races of the America's Cup preliminary trials Monday, the remodelled 1967 Cup defender Intrepid beat the new American boat, Valiant, in both races on Long Island Sound.

Intrepid won the first race by two minutes 17 seconds over the 4.8-mile triangular course in light wind and took the second one by 49 seconds over a 12.7 mile modified Gold Cup Course in a fresher breeze.

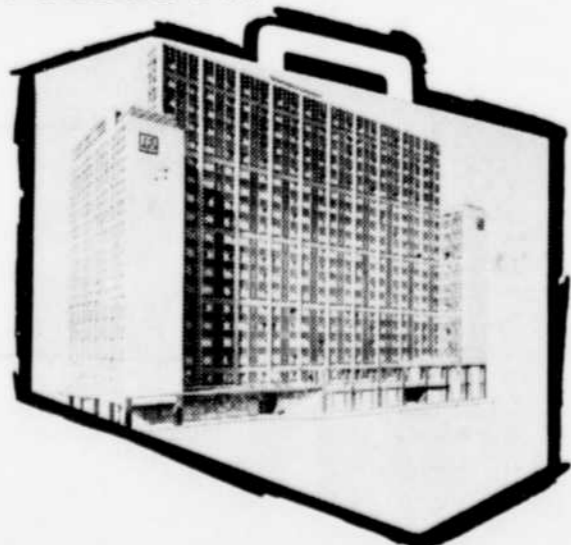

Heritage, the third America's Cup defence candidate is not due to race until Wednesday.

The series here will continue through Friday. After that the defence candidates will move on to Newport, R.I., to be prepared for a set of races in July.

The America's Cup series between an American defender and the winner of the French-Australian elimination series will begin Sept. 15 off Newport.

The Datsun 1600 automatic?

It runs by itself or almost.

Sure you have to put gas in it once in awhile, but all that is important is that you can jump in and go where you want with no trouble.

(After all, men are there to know how a carburetor works, no?)

The 1600 automatic is really made for us, this lovely little car goes up to 35 miles on a gallon of gas, and mechanically it needs very little attention. As far as driving it, you won't break your finger nails trying to park it, it's that easy. Do as I did and join the ranks of women drivers: the men love us so much.
