THORNE AND ELLIOTT TELL!

LOCAL FASCIST ROUSED

NEAR-RIOT AS SPADA LETTER MADE KNOWN

Bitter resentment to the charges of A. Spada, editor of Il Risveglio Italiano, an anti-Fascist newspaper published in Montreal, that he was the recipient of anonymous letters from the Fascist which, he alleges, threatened him with his life, almost caused a riot at the local club of the Fascist organization at Mile End last night.

Frank Roncerelli, a leading figure in the Fascist organization in Canada, declared that members of his organization became greatly incensed after they had learned of the editor's charges.

A heated discussion arose in the club-room, he said, and had it not been for a lengthy discussion of the matter, drastic measures might have been taken against the editor. He termed Spada's letter as pure "hot-air."

"He is an anarchist and a communist bent on spreading his Red propaganda throughout Canada," hotly declared Mr. Roncerelli. "I am convinced that the man is being paid through New York by the Third International."

Spada, who was arrested on a charge of illegally entering Canada, has been a resident of Montreal for the past two years.

"He entered this country under the pretence of being a student," said the Fascist officer. "I am quite sure that he has never in his life seen the inside of a university."

"The Fascist in Canada is not a political organization. It advocates the promotion of Canadianism among Italians resident in this country."

"So far as his arrest is concerned," he continued, "I believe that it was brought about through diplomatic channels. The Italian Government were probably afraid of the bad impression he might give of Italy in Canada."

BALL LOTTERY IS ENDED BY POLICE

It costs money to sell lottery tickets unless you have the authority.

Three persons yesterday were sentenced to pay fines of $10 and costs for disposing of pasteboards for the "Athlete Baseball Lottery." They were Diana Goldberg, John Roman and W. G. Newman.

Police took over the money collected and the unsold tickets.

ELIMINATED YESTERDAY in the second round of the shoot for the King's Prize, which he won in 1924, Lt. Desmond Burke of Ottawa, shooting at Bisley. His score was 94 out of a possible 105.

GAVE VIOLET MONEY

GIRL WAS NOT STRIPPED SAY TWO YOUTHS

By JAMES R. WATSON
World Staff Writer

"We gave her money, and she laughed at us," declared Philip Elliott and Richard O. Thorne, the young men accused of assaulting Violet Anderson, pretty American actress, according to a prominent official, who last night told of an interview with them.

"I saw the men when they were at the court house for the extradition proceedings before Judge Choquette," related the officer.

"They admitted that they had had a few drinks. They invited the girl for a ride. She went. They said they gave her some money; I didn't learn how much. Then she laughed, and refused to grant their request. They swore that they didn't strip the woman, but did admit that they tore a part of her clothing.

"As far as the alleged beating with belts is concerned, the young men said nothing about it."

The interview cannot be confirmed directly, because of the impossibility to secure access to the two accused in Bordeaux jail.

Thorne and Elliott are accused of having mistreated Violet Anderson. They were arrested in Montreal two weeks ago, and fought extradition, having retained Joseph Cohen, K.C., as their attorney.

They will appear again tomorrow before Judge Choquette, extradition commissioner.

Governor Seguin of Bordeaux jail said last night over the telephone that he did not wish to comment on C. Bram De Sola's charge that the two accused were being "coddled."

"I do not want to talk," the governor told the Daily World.

VERDUN MAN IS TIED IN KING'S BISLEY SHOOT

Bisley Camp, Eng., July 15. — (Daily World Cable) — Q. M. S. Parnell of Verdun against distinguished himself in the annual shoot here yesterday when he scored 102 out of a possible 105 in the first stage of the King's prize. Major R. M. Blair of Vancouver tied with Parnell.

Canadians generally made good scores in the contest, but Lieut. Burke, winner of last year's event, was shut out with a low score of 94.

HERE'S CHANCE FOR EXPERT TO EXHIBIT SKILL

Was it, or was it not?

That's the question Judge Decarie has to decide in connection with the hair of Mrs. J. Robert, charged with selling booze without a license. Liquor commission agents swore the woman had chestnut hair; when she took off her hat in court yesterday her flowing locks were gray.

So the court adjourned the case to call an expert to rule on whether the hair is natural or dyed.

AIMEE'S MOTHER ADMITS GETTING MYSTERY 'GRAM

Los Angeles, July 15 — (Universal Service) — Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, in a signed statement yesterday admitted receiving a telegram from Oakland, on May 21st, containing information that the evangelist was alive and well. The message was received three days after Mrs. McPherson disappeared from Ocean Park Beach.

Mrs. Kennedy declared she disregarded the telegram as worthless at the time. The district attorney's office announced an expert had declared the handwriting on the message almost identical with that of Kenneth Ormiston, former radio expert at Angelus Temple, who is being sought as a witness in the case.

BALKAN FIGHT LOOMS HIGH IN MIDDLE EUROPE

Bucharest, July 15 — (Daily World Dispatch) — Bulgarian troops continue to cross the Rumanian border. Many engagements have occurred with consequent loss of life.

MEIGHEN MAY ANNOUNCE DAY OF VOTING SOON

Ottawa, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Election day is the next announcement to be awaited and Premier Meighen intimated yesterday afternoon that this would probably be deferred until his speech at the local Conservative convention to be held in the Auditorium next Tuesday night when the leader of that party will make his first speech of the campaign.

While September 15 has been the date mentioned as the most likely it would appear now that Premier Meighen is deferring his announcement until next week, that the date will be nearer September 20 as, according to those in charge of preparations for the polling, it will require 60 days to get ready.

Two explanations were advanced yesterday for the omission of Sir Henry Drayton from a portfolio in the Meighen Cabinet. One considered the more probable is that he is awaiting a vacancy in the Supreme Court of Canada, Mr. Justice John Idington now being in his 86th year and the first eligible for retirement. The second is that the Meighen Government, if returned to power, will send Sir Henry to Washington as the first Canadian representative at the United States capital.

Hon. B. B. Bennet's wide financial connection in Canada will be affected by his acceptance of the portfolio of Finance in the new ministry. It is understood that he will be compelled to relinquish his directorship of the Royal Bank of Canada as no Minister of Finance can maintain official relationship with any financial institution with which the Federal Government does business. His connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway as a director of the Irrigation Land Company in Alberta, and as a legal advisor for that railway in his home Province will not necessarily be affected.

BENCH QUILTS WHEN PEOPLE INVADE COURT

Judge Monet, that stalwart representative of Justice, who sits in police court and court of sessions, became disgusted yesterday with the lack of silence, and adjourned court so that lawyers, spectators, witnesses, and accused could finish their discussions in peace. They did, and the court resumed.

ONTARIO SOLID FOR LIBERAL IN EACH DISTRICT

Toronto, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Responsible Government, moderate tariff, and the Robb budget is the tri-issue barrage which Ontario Liberals will lay down upon Conservative defences in the coming Federal election battle.

There will be no quarter and no acclamations.

According to the decision of the Liberal management committee meeting last night there will be a Liberal candidate in every riding. Toronto Liberals have already endorsed MacKenzie King's attitude on the constitutional issue.

FOUR IN AUTO BURN TO DEATH IN FIRE AREA

Calgary, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Terribly burned to death as they were trapped in a fire-ridden area of Kootenay, the bodies of Mrs. Leslie Watt, her two children and Mrs. Nesbitt, all of Dysart, Sask., were recovered late last night. Mr. Watt and Mr. Nesbitt are in hospital here in a serious condition following an attempt to rescue their loved ones.

According to information received here the women and children were in a car on the Windermere-Banff road. They were hemmed in by flames and could not escape.

LADY ASTOR'S KIDDING OF HOUSE GETS REPULSE

NANCY HOWLED DOWN WHEN SHE TRIES TO REFUTE

London, July 15. — (Universal Service) — Lady Astor was the storm centre in Commons yesterday when members tried to convict her of playing high jinks in that historic chamber Tuesday when she entertained a party of American tourists.

Speaker Whitley declared there had been no mock debate, but he added significantly: "I hope that henceforth members will strictly observe the rule prohibiting visitors from sitting on the floor of the House."

He meant sitting on the "Green" benches but was shouted down. Lady Nancy tried to make a statement but was shouted down.

RADIO OPERATOR KILLED AT WORK

Chicago, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Lester J. Wolf, 19 years old, said to have been one of the youngest licensed radio broadcast operators in the country, was killed as he was endeavoring to replace a blown fuse at station WOK in Homewood.

Vibrations caused by applause of a dance number broadcast through the station were said to have caused the fuse to blow out.

DEER BEHAVES ITSELF IN VISIT TO NEW GLASGOW

New Glasgow, July 15 — (Daily World Dispatch) — Once more New Glasgow was visited by a deer, which again journeyed through the principal streets of the town. This time, it was an early caller, and was giving the town the once over before the citizens were abroad. It came sauntering down Provost Street, but unlike its predecessor of a week ago, made no attempt to smash store windows. Finding its environment not sufficiently interesting, on the arrival of a human, it went over Kirk Hill on high speed in the direction of the woods. It is surmised that, becoming alarmed at the long absence of the deer which visited New Glasgow the week before, it started in search of its friend.

WOMAN STRUCK DUMB AS SHE AWAITS COUSIN AT STATION

Toronto, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Mrs. Jennie Price, age about 27, of Fern Glen, Ontario, is in St. Michael's Hospital, and her daughter, Hazel, age 10, is in the Children's Aid Shelter as the result of a sudden malady which struck Mrs. Price suddenly speechless.

Doctors are at a loss to know what is wrong with the woman, but they think that she lost her speech as a result of becoming hysterical when not met at the station by To-

"QUEEN" CITY OF WEST PUTS BAN ON THE DANCE

Toronto, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Every day in every way Ontario is getting better and better—or worse and worse, according to the way you look at it.

Now Attorney-General Nickle has forbidden public dancing on Sundays, and he says that if folks persist in sprightly steps he will take action to prevent them.

GIRL PAYS HER ROOM RENT AND TURNS ON GAS

New York, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Her weekly room rent, $6, and two notes were left by Hannah Holt, twenty years old, a waitress, who was found dead from gas in her room. The police described her death as suicide.

A note addressed to the landlady read as follows:

"Please forgive me. You will find $6 for my week's rent. Please notify my sister, Minnie Holt.

(Signed) "HANNAH HOLT." There was a $5 and a $1 bill in the note. The other note was in an unsealed envelope, addressed to her sister. The note itself was written in German and several policemen, who understood German, could not translate it, complaining of poor handwriting.

RUMANIAN QUEEN IS TO VISIT HERE

Geneva, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Travelling incog, the Queen of Rumania, with her youngest daughter, will depart from Bucharest in September for a trip to the United States.

It is expected that she will visit Montreal. She will be accompanied by only a small suite.

For storing clothing a chest has been invented that can be mounted on brackets under a bed, moving on roller bearings, to save room.

FIRE BREAKS OUT AT DOVER BLAST SCENE; 24 DEAD

Lake Denmark, N. J., July 15. (Universal Service) — Marines and firemen with regular fire fighting equipment yesterday kept within bounds a new fire that broke out in a building near the navy powder magazine which blew up last Saturday with such disastrous results.

While this fire was being fought, parts of three more bodies—victims of the big blast—were found. This brings the known death toll to 24.

It is expected that at least 12, and maybe 15 more bodies will be found in the smoking ruins.

OTTAWA HAS 162,690

Ottawa, July 15 — (Daily World Dispatch) — The city directory, which has just been published, gives Ottawa a population of 162,690. This is a considerable increase over last year.

COOLIDGE SICK OF PUBLIC LIFE FOR GOOD REASON

Des Moines, Iowa, July 15. — (Universal Service) — Senator Albert B. Cummins said yesterday he believes President Coolidge will have had enough of national politics when he will have finished his present term as president and will not run again.

Almost in the same breath the Senator expressed doubt whether Coolidge could be re-elected, saying that the farmers probably would prove a stumbling block.

GUNS BLAZE OUT AS N.Y. THEATRE CROWDS WATCH

New York, July 15. — (Universal Service) — The battle of Broadway was fought last night.

When the smoke of guns had cleared a bandit lay unconscious punctured by four police bullets. On the other side of the street six innocent bystanders sprawled in various states of injury.

It all started when Flenn Miller of Buffalo attempted to rob a restaurant at 8th Avenue and 51st Street. Pursued by police he dashed into 49th Street, in the heart of the theatrical district. As he started to cross the street a taxicab driver deliberately ran him down.

Undaunted, Miller arose and stood at bay gun in hand. Then the duel began.

LONDON SWELTERS

London, July 15. — (Universal Service) — London sweltered yesterday under its third day of torrid heat with the thermometer about the hundred mark.

Office workers doffed their coats and even the lawyers in the courts removed their wigs.

WHITTEMORE TO HANG ON UNLUCKY 13th OF AUGUST

Baltimore, Md., July 15. — (Universal Service) — Richard Reese Whittemore will be hanged at the penitentiary Friday, August 13, shortly after midnight.

His death warrant was signed yesterday by Gov. Ritchie, who set that date for his execution for the murder of Robert Holtman, penitentiary guard.

13 VACATIONISTS BURN TO DEATH IN HOTEL BLAZE

Haines Falls, N. Y., July 15. — (Universal Service) — The grim work of identifying the 13 victims who lost their lives in the fire which destroyed the Twilight Inn early yesterday was undertaken last night.

The 18 persons who were injured, mostly by leaping from windows, are being cared for by the Red Cross.

Many of the bodies were burned to a crisp. Those who died were trapped as they slept.

The building was a three storey frame hotel filled with summer vacationists.

ROBERT SCOTT GETS TERM OF LIFE IN PRISON

Chicago, July 15. — (Universal Service) — Refusing to lay the blame for the killing of his brother, and denying that he fired the fatal shot, Robert Scott was sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday for the killing of Joseph Maurer. Sentence was passed by Judge Joseph M. Gemmill. Robert had pleaded guilty.

Russell Scott, the brother, has been sentenced to die next October for the same killing.

Robert took the stand yesterday and was asked two questions.

"Did you fire the fatal shot that killed Joseph Maurer?"

Scott replied: "I did not."

"Was your brother with you the night of the shooting?"

"I prefer not to answer."

He said he would not answer that question because of the harm that might be done his brother.

AGED SHERIFF IS DEAD AT 86

Hamilton, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — J. T. Middleton, sheriff of Wentworth county for 24 years, passed peacefully away at Waterdown in his 86th year. Death followed a period of ill-health, and the end was not unexpected. For the last year he had been gradually failing, but had only taken to bed three weeks ago.

ELECTION OFFICERS OF TORONTO SEND PROTEST TO BYNG

Toronto returning officers have addressed the following letter to Lord Byng, governor-general: His Excellency Baron Byng of Vimy Governor General of Canada, Rideau Hall, Ottawa, Canada.

The returning officers for the City of Toronto, respectfully call to his excellency's attention a statement in the press that they are to be replaced by other officers.

The returning officers were appointed by his excellency in council during pleasure under amended legislation and therefore hold office upon the same conditions as almost all public servants. Dismissal without cause is a reflection upon their personal honesty and integrity. Dismissal simply because of former political affiliations is unjust, and is a dangerous precedent.

It is respectfully submitted that such action being done in his excellency's name under the present circumstances would be unfair to his excellency and most inadvisable.

(Signed) CECIL CARRICK On behalf of Toronto returning officers.

When shown the foregoing dispatch last night, a prominent Montreal Liberal worker said that, while having every sympathy with the petitioning officers, he thought they were taking the wrong method of securing justice.

"We Liberals," he said, "hold that if Mr. Meighen presents an Order-in-Council to the Governor General for signature, providing that all the returning officers appointed last year be dismissed from their posts, the Governor General will have no option other than to sign it. Any contrary action on his part would be unconstitutional.

If we approved of the Governor General's refusing to sign an Order-in-Council dismissing these election officials, we should then give our approval to his refusal of dissolution to Mr. King. Let the Conservatives have election officials of their own choosing. Nothing will save them from the wrath of an outraged people robbed of their constitutional rights."

PAYMASTER SLOW; FRITTY UNEMPLOYED RIOT; COPS BEATEN

Berlin, July 15. — (Universal Service) — The police guards at the unemployment office, where doles are handed out, were seriously manhandled yesterday by an enraged mob of men out of work owing to the serious economic situation.

The heat was intense, and those in line became infuriated at the slowness of the paymasters.

Police reserves finally quelled the outbreak.

C. H. CAHAN ADDRESSES MEETING OF HIS COHORTS

PICTURES CANADA AS "HEAVEN" UNDER TORY DOMINATION

By JAMES R. WATSON
World Staff Writer

Canada is going to be "Heaven," but details as to time are lacking. At least that was the rosy view painted last night when C. H. Cahan, K.C., ex-Conservative member for St. Lawrence-St. George division, suggested in no uncertain terms that the Liberals had run the country into a dung-hill, and the only salvation for the Dominion was a Conservative Government.

Mr. Cahan talked in Auditorium Hall, Ontario Street west, where dog shows usually are held. Prominent among these present was "Billy" Little, Lord Atholstan's right hand man, as Master of Ceremonies.

As for the speech itself it was a defence more than an attack. It was an attempted vindication of Mr. Meighen's defeat; an attempted apology for the Governor-General's preference for Conservative rule.

True, the white-bearded ex-member declared that there was no precedent in British law — with which he was very familiar — for Baron Byng's action.

Then he libelled the administration of Mackenzie King's cabinet by declaring it a "corrupt and inefficient Government, one of whom persisted in interrupting with such shouts as "Good boy, Cahan;" "Stevens is all right;" "That's the boy," and so on. Finally Mr. Cahan, mopping his brow shouted: "Shut up, you," an dthe offender was quietly subdued.

In addition to H. Weinfeld, K.C. and John Sullivan, K.C. who were joint chairmen, several women and other cohorts of the candidate were on the platform. There were plenty of seats in the body of the hall.

Sawdust covered the floor, and flags decorated the hall. Mr. Cahan did give a modicum of praise to Paul Mercier, chairman of the customs Committee, and his name drew a large amount of applause. The meeting was called, apparently, to justify Meighen and Lord Byng; Cahan made excuses for the Conservative defeat, and waxed warm in repeating history.

While he spoke a police captain and two uniformed men from No. 5 station were on hand to quell any disturbance. Andy Cordner, well-known restaurant owner, rose at the opportune signal and moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cahan for his "stewardship." Others spoke.

BELGIAN RULER IS GIVEN POWER OVER TREASURY

Brussels, July 15—(Daily World Dispatch) — King Albert today stands invested with powers making him the sole ruler of the Nation's finances.

The Chamber of Deputies, alarmed by the fall of the Belgian franc, authorized him to take any measures he sees fit to restore the currency during the next six months.

EDWARD RAYMOND, 28 years of age, 2159 Cartier St., is recovering from injuries suffered when he fell from his motor truck on Tuesday.

CAMPAIGN WORK AT STANDSTILL FOR ELECTION

Campaign work for the coming general election is at a standstill. Liberals are dubious concerning the other three members from Quebec, which Meighen promises to appoint to his cabinet. They will not fire their big guns until they are sure of the cabinet's personnel.

Patenaude and his Conservatives are waiting to hold a consultation before any moves are made in the direction of campaigning.

Two new Liberal clubs have been organized. Verdun Jacques Cartier Liberal club at 7 Rielle Avenue and Notre Dame de Grace Liberal club, organized in the school hall on Cote St. Antoine Road.

PARIS COPS CHARGE BOOING BOLSHIES

Paris, July 15. — (Universal Service) — Communists hissed and booed General Primo de Rivera, Premier of Spain and the Sultan of Morocco, during a parade in their honor yesterday as part of the Bastille Day celebrations. They also jeered at President Doumergue.

The police charged the crowds and took 50 Communists into custody.

GLOBE-TROTTERS BEAT RECORDS

New York, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Around the world in 28 days, 14 hours and 30 minutes will be the title of a book to be written by Linton O. Wells and Edward S. Evans, who reached here last night after their record-breaking tour, which wipes Jules Verne's famous story off the map.

And they also beat the record of John Henry Mears, who circles the globe in 35 days, 21 hours and 35 minutes in 1913.

FIRE IN FLAT

Fire breaking out yesterday afternoon did considerable damage to the residence of Mrs. M. Lemieux at 759a Charbonnier street. The lower flat, where the flames started, is vacant. It is believed by Lieutenant Flynn that the blaze originated in some garbage.

BASTILLE'S FALL WAS CELEBRATED WITH RECEPTIONS

One hundred and thirty-seven years ago the most famous prison in the world fell. It was the Bastille, in wicked Paris. And yesterday the French colony of Montreal celebrated the anniversary.

A reception was held at the office of Baron de Vitrolles, French consul-general; luncheon was served at the Windsor Hotel, a reception was held on board the French gunboat Ville d'Ys and there was a celebration in Montreal North.

MORE VISITORS IN MONTREAL

G. A. McNamee yesterday denied the report that there were fewer motorists coming to Montreal this year than formerly. Although the weather made arrivals uncertain, the Fourth of July traffic broke all records and it is expected that this season will be the best in Montreal's history.

CHARITY HELPS CLUB TO KEEP SUMMER HOURS

The Griffintown Club will be able to keep open throughout the entire summer this year, owing to an increased grant from the Financial Federation.

The children are allowed to use the club during the summer but routine is abandoned. The yard loaned by the M.L.H. & P. Co. is used as a playground.

The Junior League Camp is used as a vacation centre for the girls, while the boys are sent to Camp Lewis.

BIG CROWD TO BELOW THE LINE

During the twelve months ending June 30 last, 99,796 persons entered the United States from Canada, according to U. S. Immigration Commissioner Landis. This figure compares favorably with totals for other years, statistics show.

Of the total number, 42,503 persons went into the States from the Montreal district.

HELD ON SUSPICION

Arraigned yesterday morning before Judge Monet, Alec Micheloff, was held by detectives for a three day investigation. The man is suspected of having been responsible for a number of thefts in Lachine during 1925.

When arrested, according to police, Micheloff was found to have a gun and a bottle of alcohol in his possession.

The Rest of The City's News

Alderman Joseph Schubert leads delegation to city hall in interest of Jewish news dealers affected by new rule.

Dr. A. Benoit, hurt in motor accident, leaves hospital.

Ephrem Miller, 38, seriously hurt at St. Hyacinthe.

Constables Belanger and Francoeur seize quantity of cocaine and heroin in St. Dominique house, and arrest alleged paddlar.

Federation of University Women to meet here during August.

E. L. Patenaude, acting minister of justice, arrives in Montreal.

Corporal J. S. Douglas wins regimental match at Point-aux-Trembles in Grenadier Guards competition.

Chicago—Two men killed in day in gang warfare.

Judges in King's Bench Court to act in turn, instead of same judge each term, is court house rumor.

FALLS TO DEATH AS HOIST DROPS

Thomas Mullings, 19, who landed in Canada but six weeks ago met death yesterday by falling from a hoist when working on the sixth floor of the new Eaton Building. He was carrying brick away from the hoist when suddenly it was lowered. Mullings slipped, was flung head-long to the third floor and was instantly killed.

He leaves a mother and father, two younger brothers and four sisters in Dunmore, County Clare, Ireland.

SAID GLADSTONE WAS HYPOCRITE; WINS IN COURT

London, July 15. — (Universal Service) — Captain Wright yesterday won his action against the aristocratic Bath Club arising from his expulsion following his denunciation of the famous statesman, Gladstones, as a "sexual hypocrite."

The judge declared the club's committee was wrong in expelling Wright without calling upon him for an explanation for his allegations. He declared he would fix the damages today.

On the witness stand Wright declared: "What I've said about Gladstone, as a "sexual hypocrite" in saying what I like, even if it is indecent and atrocious."

FOUR MILLION MORE MINERALS

Quebec, July 15—(Daily World Dispatch) — With an aggregate total of $23,824,910 worth of minerals and stone taken from mines Robert, charged with selling the government yesterday reported that the value was considerably greater than the previous year, when the figure was $18,952,890.

CIVIC PICNIC ON ST. HELEN'S ISLAND

Yesterday afternoon the first civic picnic of the year was held on St. Helen's Island. Three thousand children were supplied with ice cream, ginger ale and candy from gaily decorated stalls.

Ald. Brodeur addressed the crowd and announced that the civic authorities would soon install a swimming pool on the island.

FUNERAL OF DR. STEWART HELD

Dr. A. D. Stewart, practising physician in Montreal for some years, who died suddenly on Saturday from heart failure, was buried from his residence, 243 Prince Arthur St., Tuesday afternoon.

Flowers were sent from the medical fraternity and the clubs and associations with which Dr. Stewart was connected.

WHERE OH WHERE IS BOY IN BLUE?

Ten-year-old Ian Burnely, after being told that his father would punish him for leaving his home without permission, ran away Tuesday and has not been heard of since.

When last seen he was wearing a blue serge suit, blue overalls and a pair of boy scout boots.

YOUTH DINES AND DROWNS IN ST. LAWRENCE

Lachine police last night recovered the body of Douglas Gardiner, aged 19, of 75 King Edward Avenue, this city, who was drowned during the afternoon in the St. Lawrence opposite Thirty-sixth Avenue. He had been in company with a Montreal girl.

He dived off the Lachine wharf, and when he did not return to the surface spectators became nervous and summoned the police. They brought the body to the surface several hours after the drowning.

No reason for the death of the young man can be advanced. He was an expert swimmer and thoroughly at home in the water.

VESSELS THAT SAIL THE ST. LAWRENCE

Today will see a number of ships entering the port of Montreal, the largest port in Canada. And a number of vessels, which cleared from the harbor yesterday, are on their way to European destinations. Inbound vessels reported to the Dominion Signal Service last night were:

Sorel, 39 miles, Baron Renfrew; Three Rivers, 71 miles, Turkestan, 5.20 p.m.; Glenaster, 3 p.m.; Quebec, 139 miles, Lakefield, 1.30 p.m.; Manchester Producer, 7.10 p.m.; Fame Point, 469 miles, San Valerio, 100 degrees Southeast, 12.15 p.m.; Ilford, 180 degrees southeast, 4.35 p.m.; Canadian Sapper, 175 degrees east, 7.50 a.m.; Canadian Trapper in 5.25 p.m.; Belle Isle, 878 miles, Letitia, 450 degrees east, 11 a.m.

Outbound: Sorel, 39 miles, Laval County, 8.45 p.m.; Pointe Citrouille, 84 miles, Oremmensjard, 8 p.m.; Quebec, 139 miles, Vera Kathleen, 6.30 p.m.; Melita, 8.35 p.m.; St. Jean Orleans, 153 miles, Twickenham, 5.50 p.m.; Father Point, 297 miles, Innerton, 1.30 p.m.; Canadian Miller, 2 p.m.; Lord Stratheons, 1 p.m.; Rygja, 1.50 p.m.; Fame Point, 469 miles, Steinstad, 5 p.m.

MEN AND WOMEN MUST REGISTER TO CAST VOTES

Albert McCaughlan, special provincial registration officer, 63 St. Gabriel Street, is receiving names for the approaching Dominion elections. Hours are from 10 to noon and 2 to 4 p.m.

Men and women, British subjects over 21, resident in Canada for a year, are entitled to vote. They must be registered in person or by specially provided proxy before the elections.

ANOTHER HALT IN OPERATIONS AT GLACE BAY

Glace Bay, July 15 — (Daily World Dispatch) — Besco has another strike on its hands. Workers in two collieries quit because they had not been given a local contract.

Officials believe that they will be able to settle the matter at once.

The Biggest Lie I Ever Heard

Now You Tell One—Send it in to The Daily World

As a member of the theatrical profession L. R. White relates a story, the moonshine of which is obvious.

In the theatre every seat had been taken, and the new musical play proclaimed a stupendous success.

The leading-lady, a beautiful girl, took call after call as the curtain was raised amidst vociferous applause

Some few minutes after the performance a host of admirers besieged her dressing room to shower congratulations upon her.

Among these were a number of reporters desirous of interviewing her and publishing her photographs in the morning papers.

"No!" she cried, "I simply hate publicity and I can't bear to see myself in print."

GAYETY REDIVIVUS

An old friend of mine will manage The Gayety when the Mutual Burlesque Circuit opens that house on August 29th, none other than the ever popular "Tommy" Conway, whose thousands of friends will share my pleasure at the news. Tommy Conway managed the Gayety in the early days of the theatre's history and made it one of the most popular resorts in town. In those days "the sacred lamp of burlesque" burned very brightly. I have known the police reserves called out to manage the crowds clamouring for admission when Tommy pulled off some showman's stunt and fully expect Tommy to be up to his old tricks again. Here's wishing him the best of luck. And by the way, a little bird whispers to me that the opening Mutual show will be one of the biggest burlesque attractions that has ever played in Montreal. How many can guess what it is?

TWO CABINET MINISTERS

The new cabinet does not afford much opportunity for comment. The two Quebec men, Sir George Perley and E. L. Patenaude are well known here. E. L. Patenaude has many fine qualities even if I don't like his political companions, though I should not say that in this column. He has been known to take a high stand for principle, in the past. Sir George married a sister of Senator White of The Gazette, and has served Canada as High Commissioner in the Motherland. He is a little man, a quiet speaker, with, I always think, somewhat of a look of melancholy on his features. He is popular in the county he represents, Argenteuil, where he formerly had extensive lumber interests. Anybody will have a hard job to beat him there this time, but my Liberal friends are not without hope of retrieving the county.

"WHEN IGNORANCE IS—"

At a certain meeting in the Townships, a speaker made a number of disparaging remarks regarding the two chief Universities, Laval and McGill, finally expressing gratification that he himself had not been corrupted by contact with a college.

"Do I understand that the speaker is thankful for his ignorance?" asked a youthful heckler.

"Yes," thundered the speaker, "if you care to put it that way, I am."

"Then," said the young man, "all I have to say is that you have a great deal to be thankful for!"

And with these words he slunk silently into the night.

"THE GENTLE SCRIBE"

I find it very difficult to keep away from political questions in these harmless notes, in which I try to speak the kindly word of everybody. In other writings I may let myself go and my soul "declare the whole counsel of God" as I see it, but here I am trying to be the genial friend, the gentle scribe, the mild-mannered commentator. I hope I succeed, but as I say I find it hard to get away from the political scrap. So if on occasion I appear to cut too wide a swath I must ask absolution in advance. After all, politicians with whom one profoundly disagrees are as conscientious as one's self, although one can not always feel it to be so. I'll try to be good in this Merry-go-round, anyhow, and say the kindest thing I can about everybody, friend or foe.

Rodolphe Monty, I notice, has not been included in the Meighen Cabinet, which is a great pity. He has been a devoted follower of "the man from Pinto Plains," and deserves better treatment. But I warrant that Monty will still carry the same smiling face and not desert the cause he has served in

by
'Bluebeard' Watson
as told to
H. Edwin Mootz

CHAPTER XI.

A few days after I had determined to make short work of my new bride I remarked to her: "Sweetheart, you are not looking well. A little fresh country air will do you a world of good, and I love the country. Suppose we make an excursion up the river above the falls to-morrow?"

"Oh, I would be delighted to spend a day out with you, quietly, where we can talk of the future and map out the days when, hand in hand, we shall be together through life!" she exclaimed.

"Your wish, my dear, is my law," and I smiled. "Now you may order a big lunch for the day."

It was a lovely October day. The sun came glinting down between the leaves, and the birds sang and twittered among the branches. We spent the afternoon loitering until dusk, when Jennie spread the lunch. She had filled a thermos bottle with hot tea for our luncheon, and while she busied herself arranging the dainties I opened the bottle and emptied a small vial of (Editor's note: The name of the poison mentioned in Mr. Mootz's manuscript cannot be disclosed here) into the tea.

So we sat down and had lunch together, while the doomed woman drank her tea.

"It was so good of you, Bennie, to give me this outing."

"Good of me, sweetheart, to do anything for you? What is there I would not do for you?"

"Then it is good of you," whispered Jennie softly, "to love me so much."

"Let us go and watch the falls," I suggested.

As we neared the stream she became sick.

"Kiss me, dear," she murmured.

It was the silent kiss of death!

As we stood together on the high bank of the river, I fixed my eyes on the woman whom I had so completely charmed. She looked at me and shuddered as she felt herself growing faint.

Instinctively the frightful and staggering truth flashed across her vision, as the convulsive symptoms began to show. For a moment I held my breath.

Removes Evidence

As she fell rigid and lifeless I made a search of the body at once, taking her wristwatch, earrings and rings. Into the dark waters, where the faint orange hues of the departed sun still lingered, I threw the body of Jennie Curtis.

Thus was the evidence of my crime removed, leaving me free to call on Miss Harte.

The very next afternoon, in the same town, I rang the doorbell at the address of Miss Helen Harte.

The door was opened by a maid just as Miss Harte appeared.

"Come in!" she cried, coming toward me and involuntarily stretching out her hands, her young face transfigured with joy. "Oh, Mr. Melrose, how good of you to come! And thank you for the beautiful flowers you sent me."

"Are you glad to see me?" I asked.

"Yes, yes! Very—very glad!" she returned, nestling close to me like a bird.

We sat side by side on the divan and talked together of people we knew, the "on dits" of the day as suited time and our socially limited acquaintance. I told her of my wealth and loneliness, and how happy I was to be with her.

But nothing that Helen said was trying to me. I watched the play of her pretty features and listened to her soft, clear voice as she told me of her school work and her success as a teacher.

She placed her little hand confidently in mine.

"I believe you are a good, noble man," she said.

I laughed softly.

"How wonderful it would be," I observed mockingly, "if we all were what the people who honor and admire us believe us to be."

"You are a bit enigmatical, are you not, Mr. Melrose?" she queried.

"I suppose I am perverse," I laughingly declared. "Yet it is a truth."

"I am sure you are not," she answered.

I drew her beautiful head against mine and kissed her.

"Helen!" I exclaimed. "I love you! Tell me, dear, do you love me?"

The color flooded her cheeks, "I love you with my whole soul," she whispered.

Trembling, half dizzy with emotion, she withdrew from my arms, pressing her hand to her brow.

"It seems like a strange, happy dream," she murmured faintly.

Two days later, on October 6, at the home of her sister, in Colfax, Washington, I married her under the name of Melrose. It was while we were on our honeymoon that she gave me her savings of $550. Then, after securing her diamond ring, I deserted her. I learned later that she lost her mind and was committed to an asylum.

The following newspaper clipping after my arrest tells the sad ending of Helen Harte:—

"She married Watson under the name of Samuel Arthur Melrose, at Colfax, Wash., October 6, 19— He left her soon afterward with $500 of her money, causing her to lose her mind, according to a sister."

Following the death of Mrs. Curtis and my marriage and desertion of Miss Harte, I returned to Vancouver and began compiling a memorandum regarding every woman I had married, with notes on many others whom I had met through my advertisement or in some other way. Through the advertisements I still received a large volume of mail and photographs from all over the Coast and from the East.

As I was not successful in my oil venture of Calgary I returned to Vancouver, going back later to Edmonton. During all this time I would tell my wife, Katherine Busse, that I was away on important business.

Think of my having, at this time, two or three wives in the same town! I would go about with these women on the streets, go to the cafes and places of amusement, and yet manage at all times that they did not meet one another or their friends and relatives.

During this period I was living with three women at Vancouver, going about freely. I had an attorney there who knew that I was married, and at the same time I was going with another girl who knew me by another name, living the second door from this attorney and well acquainted with both of us. In fact, on several occasions I had driven downtown with this attorney in his car. One night he was on the same street car and got off at the same corner, walking home ahead of us.

CONFESSION OF BLUEBEARD AN ASTOUNDING DOCUMENT

Editor's Note:—"Bluebeard" Watson is in many respects the most astounding criminal of the century. He is serving a life sentence in the San Quentin Penitentiary and from his cell comes the confession of his crimes.

He was a swindler, burglar, white slaver and murderer. His confession is a human document without parallel.

I would spend an afternoon with one wife in one part of the city, and that night take another out to dinner and to the theatre. Then I would spend another day with one in a different town, and the day following return and marry another girl in the former town.

All the time, while being very successful in my marriages from a financial standpoint, I was also very successful in business. I made frequent trips to different cities, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Seattle and then back to California, always stopping at the very best hotels. If I found it advisable to stay in a city for some time I placed my advertisement in a daily paper. Marriages generally followed.

I was now successfully playing the role of a man of wealth and became more daring in my operations. Through one of my matrimonial advertisements, I got in touch with a charming little lady named Mrs. Eleanor Frazier, a widow whose husband had been killed in an automobile accident, leaving her several thousand dollars and some very good furniture worth about $1,000. On the third occasion that she invited me to call, I began to scheme to possess myself of her property. My ineffable courtesy and charm of manner, coupled with tender sibilant phrases breathing a pure and manly affection, soon captivated the widow.

"I Love You"

"My dear, darling girl," I said at last, "I love you. Eleanor, dear, promise me that you'll be mine."

She hid her face against my shoulder.

"Give me a few days to decide, dear," she murmured.

I strained her closer and said very softly, "Give me your answer now, Eleanor."

"Must I give you the answer now, Bennie?"

I swept away all opposing thoughts with the swift rush of my pretended love.

"My own precious love—yes! It was strange sympathy that brought us together, and now let us not waste the golden moments. Come, sit down by me." I drew her to a seat, pressing my lips to hers. "Darling, you are mine."

"Your wife, dear, your own forever," she whispered.

"Ah, it will be hard to be an hour from your side now. The future looks glorious."

"Tell me something of our future, dear," she pleaded.

"We won't look into it now, dear."

Eleanor's face changed. "Don't you think there is a certain rascination in trying to peer into the future?"

"No," I asserted. "That is only a desire of the ignorant and superstitious."

"I wonder," she mused, with an attempt to veil her eagerness under a careless manner, "what plans you have mapped out for our future. Do you think it will be happy?"

"KEEP CONSTITUTIONAL WITH KING"

We have one piece of advice to give to the people of Canada in facing the issues of the coming General Election, and that is that they "keep constitutional with King" rather than make mischief with Meighen.

In the realm of Canadian politics, especially in our relationships to the British Empire, of which we are proud to be a part, Meighen is nothing else but a mischief maker. For the sake of office, honor, and power he has embroiled the Governor General in a political squabble, as unseemly as it was unnecessary.

By every act of Meighen's in relation to the Governor General he has proved himself a mischief maker. His assurance to the Governor General that he could carry on in the House if called upon to form a government, his appointment of a "shadow" government which invited defeat, and received it, in the House of Commons, his asking for dissolution after he had been defeated and repudiated in Parliament, and then later his betrayal of confidence in giving out to the Toronto Mail and Empire the memorandum which Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, had left in the hands of the Governor General — an absolutely confidential document, which only Meighen could have given out—all show the mischief-making propensities of the man.

On the other hand, the severest critic of Mackenzie King cannot honestly charge him with being anything but a strict constitutionalist. Day by day it is becoming more and more evident that Mr. King acted strictly in accordance with the constitution in the advice he gave the Governor General, in the offer he made to remain in office until a successor was appointed, and in every other way.

Let any true Canadian read either of the two last speeches that Mr. King made in the House of Commons on June 30th and July 1st, and his soul will be stirred to sublime heights, and he will acknowledge that William Lyon Mackenzie King is the greatest Parliamentarian of his day and generation, and probably in all Canadian history.

Let us keep constitutional with King and Canada will be safe and secure—a self-governing Dominion of the Community of Nations known as the British Empire. But out of such mischief-making, blundering grasping for power as Meighen has revealed in the present crisis may come untold danger to both Canada and the Empire.

We dare not take the risk of endangering the Imperial connection which Meighen's policy of turning Canada back into a Crown Colony with a Governor to govern it makes for. We must keep constitutional with King and make the position of Canada secure as a self-governing Dominion of the Community of Nations which is known as The British Empire, and a full-statured member of The British Commonwealth of Nations.

MEIGHEN THE MILLIONAIRE'S MAN

At last Mr. Meighen appears before the people of Canada in a role they can understand and appreciate. His swallowing of Patenaude and giving him the portfolio of the Minister of Justice has been done at the bidding of "St. James Street," meaning thereby the millionaires of Montreal's Wall Street, who, in behalf of the Big Interests they are part of and represent for electoral purposes, have forced Meighen to swallow Patenaude.

St. James Street picked out Patenaude last fall to lead a campaign with the slogan of "country against party," with their hired leader declaring himself "Independent of Meighen." We say "hired," because Patenaude

Plain Talks To The British Born

By "John Bull, Junior"

Discussing the conduct of Baron Byng, the Governor-General of Canada, in refusing dissolution to Mr. King, the then Prime Minister, and the series of events that followed in the train of that most egregious blunder, I refuse to give any consideration whatever to the argument that the Liberal ministry was facing a hostile vote and were likely to be defeated and, therefore, were not entitled to get dissolution. That is quite beside the question.

I hold that the correct constitutional view is that the Governor-General had no knowledge of what was proceeding in the House of Commons, except what the Prime Minister cared to acquaint him with, and that whatever knowledge he may have possessed from that or any other source should not have been allowed to influence his decision in any way.

The moment the Governor-General was asked for dissolution it was his duty to give it, whether Mackenzie King was defeated or not, no matter what the circumstances under which dissolution was sought. He is not there to use his judgment, his knowledge, or his prejudices. He is there to do as he is advised and must not refuse the advice of his Ministers at peril to the whole fabric of Canadian nationhood and the Imperial tie.

Patenaude was publicly charged with accepting $100,000 as his "fee" for saving his country, and has never denied or taken the opportunity of defending himself from the charge in the only place where he could properly defend himself—the Courts.

Mr. Meighen was flouted, repudiated, scorned, and rejected by Patenaude in the October elections. Of course, we know the reason for the Patenaude campaign. It had a two-fold object; first, it was to blunt the edge of Meighen's unpopularity in the Province of Quebec, and second, it was to elect a group to Parliament who would be able to force a railway policy on the Conservative Party, if the latter was triumphant at the polls but dependent on the Quebec Patenaude vote.

That railway policy was nothing more nor less than the handing of the National Railways over to private enterprise, which policy Patenaude at Farnham declared he was prepared to carry out. "St. James Street" put up the millions for the Patenaude campaign but its candidates failed of election, excepting two. Now it seeks to "protect its investment" in Patenaude and has forced Patenaude on Meighen under the threat of no campaign fund and a disunited Conservative Party in this province if their hired man was not put into the Cabinet.

All this makes Arthur Meighen "The Millionaire's Man." He becomes the servant of "St. James Street," the factotum of the Big Interests; the valet de chambre of predatory wealth—"The Millionaire's Man." For those who stand for the rights of the Canadian people in this conflict it will be Poverty against Millions; for Meighen and his followers it will be Millions against Poverty. But Meighen is welcome to the millions and to his millionaires. Posterity, after his abject surrender to James Street, will label him as we do—"Meighen, the Millionaire's Man."

perial tie.

This is what I contend—that the servant is not greater than his master. The Governor-General is in Canada to represent His Majesty the King. He symbolises the personal bond between the King and the Dominion of Canada, which is the main factor in holding the Empire together. He is the servant of King George but he is not greater than King George.

King George has never refused to grant dissolution under any circumstances nor has any King of England done so in one hundred years under any circumstances. Let me give one specific illustration. The Labor Government in England was defeated in the House of Commons in 1924. The Labor party was a minority party. The government was under a cloud because of being charged with having interfered with the course of justice by dropping a prosecution against a Communist.

Ramsay Macdonald, defeated in the Commons, after only six months of office, went to the King and asked for dissolution. The King, without demur or question, granted him dissolution and Ramsay Macdonald appealed to the country at the head of the government.

Now, notice how closely the parallel runs. The Liberals were a minority party in the Canadian House of Commons. They were not defeated but let me admit, for the sake of argument only, that they might soon have been. They were also charged, or rather one of their Ministers, Hon. G. H. Boivin, was charged, with defeating or delaying the ends of justice in the Aziz case. The parallel is nearly exact. The King Government was, if anything, in a much better position than the Ramsay Macdonald Government; it was still undefeated.

But, whereas King George granted dissolution to Macdonald in almost similar circumstances, Baron Byng refused it to Mackenzie King. Thereby, I contend, he attempted to make himself greater than his master; thereby he acted unconstitutionally, thereby he denied to the people of Canada the right to manage and conduct their own affairs through their elected representatives and their Parliamentary institutions, and set up himself as dictator to the Canadian people whom he relegated to the position of serfs and helots, unable to govern themselves and compelled to accept the will and decree of an outsider, an importee, a stranger within our gates. That is the crime of Baron Byng against the people of Canada and their free institutions.

POSTAL FORCE SHOCKED BY STRANGE THINGS IN MAIL

By FRANK SWEENEY
World Staff Writer

It was a rather warm day in the postoffice. So great was the humidity that clerks forgot the usual decorum of the office and forsook their coats.

Despite the unfavorable condition of the weather, men worked feverishly and the steady click of typewriters gave evidence that the stenographers were not busily powdering their noses or applying other cosmetic measures.

It happened right in the "Dead" letter office. There was no doubt about it that there was something dead in that office on that hot afternoon. An obnoxious odor prevailed. Work ceased abruptly. A woman's shrill shriek, and all hands rushed excitedly to where a number of employees were busily engaged in unwrapping a package. The task of unwrapping the package was indeed a strong one. A package within a package—and then to the consternation of the clerks, the last one yielded a dead rat. That night many clerks went without their supper.

Postoffice officials declare that the number of queer things sent through the mail is surprising. On a number of occasions—it was said, decomposed fowls have been sent through the mail. Chickens, meats of all kinds and a score of other things are daily received.

Last but not least are the "heart-breaking" love letters that are claimed by the dead-letter-office for want of adequate addresses. It is said that some of these missives would prove an inspiration for any novelist.

St. Catharines, July 15.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Carl Fisher, Lincoln county registrar, here, reports a curious circumstance in connection with his fruit farm, near Queenston, on the Niagara river.

Mr. Fisher and all leading growers admit there are scarcely any peaches in Niagara peach belt this year, due to the heavy frosts last winter, and that the Fisher orchard escaped seems miraculous.

Our Daily True Story

SAY IT WITH SMILES

Jane's presence was a joy to those who knew her. Her happiness was contagious — but no one dreamed it was only a beautiful mask until suddenly it was torn away, and then —

In the hospital where I got my training every room had one of those little framed mottoes, "Keep Smilin'" and I think every doctor in the city had one in his office; but you would be surprised to know how few people ever seemed to see them. You see, being a nurse, I had plenty of chances to see the way different persons took their afflictions. Some just seemed naturally to smile through life while others never saw anything but their own troubles. I have noticed, too, that many times smiles and tears are very close together; at their source at least—the heart.

Some one has said somewhere, "Death is not what it seems." I like to change it and say, "Life is often not what it seems." In my profession, one faces both life and death many times. Always the latter seems much the same, but life is always different, and many times is far from what it seems.

The most striking example of this I have known was Jane Weatherby. Perhaps it is because I knew Jane better than any one else, and it may be that I am just partial to her. Anyway Jane and I had much in common at the beginning, because we both had absolutely nothing. We entered the county orphanage only a few days apart. Jane was a real orphan as both her parents had been killed in a train wreck; I was only half so, but I might as well have been one entirely. My father deserted my mother when I was born, and six years later she died of tuberculosis and a broken heart.

Different

When Jane came she was only five, but she was not like ordinary children; I noticed that. I did not see things quickly either, as other people do, but I did notice Jane; anybody would, with her dark eyes and brown curls—and her smile. I was happy for the first time since I could remember, when the matron said, "Susan Bigbee, here's your roommate."

Jane just seemed born to smile. Her smile warmed my heart when I first saw it and soon it permeated the whole institution and she became the pet of the place. There is an old saying that opposites are drawn toward each other. I know it was true in this case, anyway, for Jane and I became the greatest of chums. It was sometimes a mystery to me, as I grew older, why she cared for me, but so long as she did I was satisfied and flattered to be her friend.

From the first Jane liked school, and she smiled her way through the grades and on through high school. Then she went into old Dr. Baxwell's office and smiled herself into Bobby Clayton's heart and won a happy home.

Dr. Baxwell had been the orphanage physician ever since I could remember, and long before that. He said he "hated to lose Jane as an office girl, but Bobby needed a wife and he was glad to see Jane get the place." So she smiled and left him.

You see, as I have already said, I was different from Jane so I left school as soon as I finished the elementary grades, and went to work wherever I could get places in homes throughout the city. Of course the little I earned went to the institution.

The matron was kind and I still think she really meant to do her best for the children under her care; but there were often many children and little to do with. So when a farmer picked me out as a strong girl, able to do plenty of hard work, and said he would give me my board and clothes in exchange for my work, Ma Havens saw one less mouth to feed and let me go.

I did get my board and I must have eaten a lot in those days, but as for clothes, it was a good thing I brought a few with me from the orphanage. A day was from four in the morning until the dishes and milk were put away in the evening, which was usually about nine-thirty. I was so tired when I got up some mornings that it seemed as if I ought to be going to bed instead. There was only one redeeming thing about that year's work and that was I met Jimmy Farlow and we were married.

We were very happy except for one thing. Jimmy's family was wealthy and did not look favorably on an "orphan hired girl" as a daughter-in-law. So Jimmy's allowance was cut off and he had to go to work. It hurt him, but it did not hurt me for I was used to it. He got tired of it in about two years and went back home, leaving me just where I was when I married him—with nothing.

This was where I really needed a friend; so I wrote to Jane and she sent for me at once; for she needed me, too. Jane had a lovely home with a beautiful garden and as I entered it that evening the summer sun shone on her as she was cutting roses for her table. In her white dress, her lovely skin matching the roses in her lap, the sun glints turning her dark hair to copper, she looked to me the rarest of all the blossoms; but when she saw me her smile was the rarest thing about her.

"Susan Bigbee!" she said, "how glad I am to see you, but how sad you look!" "Yes, Jane," I answered, "It's easy for you to smile, for you have everything. It isn't so easy when your heart is broken and you have nothing."

"Yes, Susan, that's true," she said, but a woman has two souls, a soul of smiles and a soul of tears; just as they say a man has two souls, one to face the world and one for the woman he loves. Save your tears for yourself, but face the world with your smiles." These seemed such empty words at the time, spoken only to cheer me, but not long after this I was destined to see her live the words she spoke that day.

I stayed with her and Bobby and soon little Margaret Susan was born. She was a delicate child from the first, but always smiling, like her mother. Some way I thought Jane's smile became a little sad in those days though just why it should be I did not know. She had so much, a lovely home, a good husband and a darling baby that smiled every time you looked at her. What more did a woman need to make her smile? When I thought of my own empty life hers seemed full to overflowing.

Every few days she took Margaret to old Dr. Baxwell. The child did not seem very strong, but hardly sick enough for this, I thought. I decided Jane was just nervous about her—being the first baby, you know.

An Old Friend One morning we were going along, wheeling the baby in her cab, when we met a man who had known Jane since she, too, was a baby. Of course he admired Margaret.

"Just like her mother," he said, "giving her smiles to the world." This is where I really began to know Jane. As we walked up the street I saw she was crying.

"What's the matter?" I asked, thinking she must be ill, for it was something new to see her in tears.

"Susan," she answered, "that's the best thing any one ever said of me. Is it true? Am I giving smiles to the world?"

"Of course you are; and I'd be laughing aloud instead of crying if any one said such a thing about me." I did not get much praise, so very naturally it would have gone to my head. But what Jane told me then showed me how big and grand she was behind her smile.

"You see," she began, "I learned a lot about diseases when I worked for Dr. Baxwell, and I've had my suspicions about the baby from the first. She's not normal, Susan," she sobbed. "It's her heart, overlarge and a leakage. She may live for some time and she may go soon. I asked Dr. Baxwell if I was right and he said I was."

"How long have you known this, Jane?" I asked.

"Almost from the first," she replied.

"Does Bobby know?" I inquired hastily.

"No, that's it, Susan. I want you and him to enjoy her smiles as long as you can without feeling they may last only a day."

She was brave. We did not tell Bobby till we had to, but it was not long. About two weeks later, the child contracted a heavy cold and lived only two days.

"God doesn't take our loved ones from us," she said. "He only keeps them for us."

The way Jane bore up then was wonderful; she was always thinking about others. I heard her telling Bobby:—

"God doesn't take our loved ones from us. He only keeps them for us. Some day we'll be going to her."

I could not understand how she did it then, but now I know that although her heart was broken she bore up for Bobby's sake.

She didn't need me much longer, so Dr. Baxwell took me in his hospital for training, and I stayed there when I wasn't working; it was my home, you see.

Along in July of that year, about six months later, when it was hot and dry and every one was praying for rain, and had been for two weeks, there came a day that was almost unbearable, what with the heat and all. Toward evening it grew worse than ever, so sultry, with hardly a leaf moving. Then suddenly the wind began to blow, the sky darkened and an electric storm was upon us, the like of which I hope never to see again. The city was soon in darkness; the wind disabled all electric service. Trees and many buildings were blown down.—The lightning struck several houses throughout the city that night, and Jane's was one of them. It destroyed everything she had. But the worst was Bobby; he was injured by an electric shock.

They brought him into the hospital at 1 o'clock in the morning and I saw at once it wouldn't be long. Jane, good girl, followed, drenched and weeping. She changed into some of my things, but they wouldn't let her see him. She was frantic, and he was calling for her. So I said to myself, "Susan Bigbee, you've got to fix it." I found Dr. Baxwell, and after about two minutes he went to Jane and this is what he said:—

"Jane, you've smiled through life. This is your darkest hour. Do you think you can smile now? You can see Bobby only on condition that you don't excite him. And remember it may be the last time."

She looked blank, and only said: "Leave me alone five minutes."

At the end of that time I went for her.

She had changed from a nervous, crying woman into her old smiling self. As we turned to lead her to his room I heard her breathe, "God give me courage to smile."

He surely answered that prayer, for at first glimpse she couldn't help but see that Bobby was rapidly passing from her.

'TIS NOT THE SAME TODAY AS 'T WAS TWENTY YEARS AGO

BY FRANK SWEENEY
World Staff Writer

He was a distinguished old gentleman. His age? Perhaps 70. Distinguished he was, despite the fact that a long beard and an unkempt moustache hid the deep furrows in his kindly face. Slowing he ambled his way up and down the streets of Montreal looking for a barber-shop; not the kind of a barber-shop that is in existence now, but a kind that existed in his youth—a kind where men smoked their pipes and read their favorite dailies until they were distracted by the familiar, "your're next."

Disillusioned he was, as he stepped into what he termed one of the "modern shops." He was obviously disturbed with the presence of a number of the fair sex who had monopolized the chairs. Impatiently he sat down in a chair to await "his turn." We are prone to be live that patience is a virtue with some persons, and certainly, it was a virtue with him.

The old-time discussion of the daily topics—which prevailed so promiscuously in the old barber-shop days, was not in evidence. The only sound that broke the tranquility of the shop was the interminable swish of scissors, and the occasional giggle of a "flapper" as she admirably gazed at her "bob" in the long mirror.

The old gentleman could stand the suspense no longer. Turning to the writer who sat next to him he gave full vent to his suppressed feelings.

"Young man," he said, "things have changed in Montreal since I was a young man. Barber shops have become beauty parlors. Gone are the days when the young men used to visit the barber-shop; not only to enhance their appearances, but to have the usual gossip with the barber and to comment with fellow customers on the general topics of the day. Those are gone forever, for today the "flapper" commands the shop and we men are used as 'bench warmers.'"

The conversation was interrupted by a welcome "your're next" and the old gentleman slid into his chair.

Memories often bless and burn and perhaps he lived in his memories.

The Well Dressed Man

New York, July 15.—For lack of a better term men might be called "ambisexual" in their attire today. In outdoor apparel they seek an air of extreme nonchalance. Beneath the surface they vie with women in a sense of the fastidious. We find the well-dressed man wearing soft collars on his shirt, the same this season being extremely long. The trousers of the period are loose and comfortable. Shoes are broad. Even straw hats lend themselves to softer weaves with brims that may be turned down to give a rakish tilt to the chapeau and at the same time emphasize an air of easy indifference.

Efforts to make men's attire semi-formal have not been especially successful. Such efforts have not aroused the support of men idea is underwear hosiery, generally. Even the stylists concede that "fallen men" cannot be restored to starch and rigid effects, summer or winter.

Then men are like the flappers; they are limp and lazy-looking. They lop rather than lounge. They droop when they are at ease. Hence the nonchalant note in outer apparel; an effect almost as difficult to achieve gracefully as the other extreme. Some men can wear insouciant clothes and others have them thrust upon them, but at any event the majority of well-scrubbed citizens are aiming at

For a second only her face went like death itself, then it lighted up and she said: "Bobby, you're better—the doctor has let me see you."

"Dear old Jane! Your Bobby's done for, but I knew you'd have the courage to brave it through, it's good to see your smile."

That's all I heard, but it was enough. I saw the courage for which she had prayed.

It was all over before dawn. Everything Jane possessed was swept away that night. The only things rescued from the fire were Bobby's writing desk and safe. They were moved to Dr. Baxwell's office, and later Jane went back to work there.

A Sad Smile

A short time afterward I met her in a store. She looked terrible, and smiled sadly enough. She called me aside and said:—

"Dr. Baxwell wants me to be a nurse, but I can't do it, Susan; my heart is honeycombed with sorrow. However, I've one little piece of good luck to tell you. In looking through some of Bobby's old papers I found some of the stories I wrote long ago. I picked out two of the best ones and sold them to a magazine."

"Yes, Jane, those were cheerful things. I read them when I stayed at your house. But do you think you can follow up with more of such things now?"

"I'm going to try," she answered. "One must live, even if her heart is dead." And she smiled the beginning of a new life that moment.

Just then a well-dressed lady stepped up to her.

"Isn't this Jane? I thought I knew you, but I was sure I did when I saw you smile."

She had known me as long as she had Jane, but although I have red hair and a Roman nose, she didn't seem to see any earmarks of recognition about me, and didn't notice me at all until I told her who I was. You see, people just naturally thing of some friends while there isn't much reason for them to remember others. I think I must have been that way; there wasn't any particular reason. I knew, why she should remember me.

Se was a girl we had known away back in the orphanage days. She had married a newspaper man who later had become editor of a magazine. There was Jane's chance and she knew how to grasp it.

A few years afterward her cheerful stories were being read and causing many laughs all up and down the land: Old Dr. Baxwell said he gave his patients pills and powders and tried my hand at nursing them, and then along came one of Jane's stories and cured them.

She gave the world smiles and happiness and grew rich in doing it.

A few years ago I accidentally met Jane in Oakwood Cemetery by a little mound, made long ago. She was crying, poor girl!

"Why, Jane, I thought you had smiled away all your tears long ago," I exclaimed.

"Ah, Susan, how true it is that when we weep, we weep alone. The world soon forgets. I have smiled my way into the hearts of a thousand friends and it is my great joy to make them forget their ills even for a moment. I could not cure my own. I have lost the great thing in life—the love of husband and child."

But soon she dried her eyes and added: "Yes, Susan, it pays to give your smiles to the world and shed your tears alone. Even though the smiles be only the mask for a heavy heart, they do you good and help to cheer the passer-by whose burden may be heavier than your own."

How thoroughly she lived up to her own precept! She was able to do so because she had in her heart the one great thing of life, that for which so much of the world is starving: LOVE.

JULY 15

MILLIE BUTTERFIELD

Eddy Brown, well-known violinist, today celebrates his birthday. Miss Millie Butterfield is another Cancerian who has found success on the stage and who unites a strong dramatic instinct with the tenacity of purpose which is so fully developed in the Cancer individual.

Although the Gemini-born are said to be the most versatile of all people and the cleverest with their hands, those of you who were born on July 15 are also gifted in this way and may even experience considerable difficulty in determining which of your abilities is likely to bring you the best return. You may, however, look forward to a prosperous and happy year, and to the child born today a life of joy and contentment is promised. He may dabble in many things, but will be kindly and sociable and a person of all-around ability.

It is more than probable that those who were born between July 10 and 20 will meet with many storms as they go through life, and whether they will attain success or not depends largely upon their mental outlook, for it is said that a tranquil mind will carry them to the shores of safety. It is through such storms that our endurance is tested, as Edwin Markham so beautifully puts it:—

When, in the dim beginning of years,
God mixed in man the rapture and the tears,
And scattered through his brain the starry stuff,
He said: "Behold! Yet this is not enough,
For I must test his spirit to make sure
That he can brave the vision and endure."

COOL and REFRESHING DRINKS

The tingle of ice in the glass on a hot day has its effect in reducing the temperature. For health's sake these drinks should come between meals and when one is not overheated from strenuous exercise.

Lime Punch Royal

Make a syrup of two cupfuls of sugar and two and a half cupfuls of water, boiling gently ten or twelve minutes. Set to cool. When cool turn into the syrup a cupful of strained lime juice, two cupfuls of strained orange juice and a cupful of grated canned pineapple. When ready to use half fill the tumblers with cracked or shaved ice. Dilute the stock with ice water to taste. This will serve about eighteen people. A spray of fresh mint, wet and dusted with powdered sugar may be placed on top of each glass.

Grape Ginger Ale

Take a cupful of sugar and three-quarters of a cupful of water and cook to a syrup. It requires about five or six minutes' boiling. Cool, add to the strained juice of three lemons a medium-sized bottle of grape juice and three bottles of ginger ale. Turn into glasses half filled with cracked ice and serve at once.

Loganberry Punch

To one large cupful of Loganberry juice add the juice of a large lemon and two oranges, three cupfuls of freshly made and cooled Ceylon tea. Sweeten the tea when hot with a half cupful of sugar. Chill and turn over cracked ice.

Cider Punch

Boil a quart of water with two cupfuls of sugar to a medium syrup, then cool. Add the juice of two lemons and two oranges and

Daddy Dusk

Nothing pleases a child more than to feel that people are interested in him. A nationally-known newspaper man who loves children, will tell here every day a story about Daddy Dusk, who takes little boys and girls for Dream Journeys every evening. Send Daddy Dusk the name of one or more of your children, so that he may print their names in the Daily World and take them on a journey to sleep. It delights a child to see his name in a Dream Story.

DADDY DUSK,
Care of Daily World.

Daddy Dusk was all alone in his home—even Doodle wasn't there. "I am lost—absolutely lost—without Doodle. I will have to look in his desk and find the name of a little girl and a little boy."

Sure enough, he came across the name of Ruth and Harry Krieger, 1226 Cadieux St., Montreal.

"I guess I will have to take them to the Land of King Thoughts," he said to himself as he went out and hopped into his airship.

It wasn't long before Daddy Dusk and Ruth and Harry were seated on a grassy knoll in the middle of the picnic ground in the Land of Kind Thoughts. In a few minutes came a beautiful fairy, all dressed in sparkling white, with a wand.

"I crown you King and Queen of Kind Thoughts," she said, as she waved her wand and touched the children's foreheads.

Daddy Dusk was delighted. "Now," he said, "you are King and Queen of Kind Thoughts, and rule in a little world all your own. No evil thoughts can come to you because you rule over all the kind thoughts in the world. You will love everybody, and everybody will love you."

The children stood up—threw their arms around Daddy Dusk's neck and gave him a sixty horsepower hug and a tiny kiss.

one quart of cider. Cool and strain over cracked ice.

Pineapple Fancy

Squeeze the juice from a ripe fresh pineapple or use a quart can of preserved pineapple. Add the juice of two lemons and one orange. Dissolve a cupful and a quarter of sugar in a pint of water, boil five minutes, cool and add to the pineapple. Strain over cracked ice and put a thin slice of lemon and a maraschino cherry in each glass.

Eggnog

Melt two cupfuls of sugar in a pint of hot milk (do not cook it), then cool it. When cold turn into the second pint of milk. Beat the yolks of six eggs and stir in the whites of two, blend with the milk and sugar, strain into a pint of rich milk and add a half pint of heavy cream. Stir in a tablespoonful of rum flavouring. Dust with nutmeg lightly, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the two eggs and a teaspoonful of powdered sugar and a little nutmeg to it while beating. If preferred the egg whip may be served on top of the tumblers.

Three-Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

Korea, or Chosen, is a little land between China and Japan, occupying the peninsula below Manchuria and Russian Siberia. And it is doubtful whether any country in the world can offer so charming a contrast between the Old World and the new.

Modern civilization has, of course, invaded it to some degree. There are automobiles and street cars. There is a floating cosmopolitan population. But the Koreans themselves remain aloof and apart from all this.

In their native garb, they wander through the modern scene like beings from another world. Korean men are tall and have the bearing of dignity. The women are considered the most beautiful of the Orient. The little brown children, with their bright, oblique eyes, rosy cheeks and short, black, straight hair, romp about the streets in liveliest fashion.

The fact that the two lower classes of society in Korea dress entirely in white adds to the general attractiveness of the scene. They always seem to be dressed in their Sunday best. Even the men of the upper classes, although they wear robes of transparent silk, wear the usual jacket and trousers of white cotton under them.

Needless to say, the constant wearing of white—and this white, in accordance with general opinion, must be scrupulously unsoiled—means that there must be a good deal of washing going on at all times.

That is why a great many women of the lower classes spend most of their time washing clothes. That does not mean, as it would among us, that they spend their time bent over a washtub; quite the contrary. Their washing is usually done out-of-doors. Wherever you find a brook or stream there will you find women paddling their soiled clothes on smooth stones.

Instead of ironing the garments they are pounded until they take on a silky lustre. The cloth is wrapped around a large wooden roller or is folded and laid on a block of stone. Then the pounding begins.

Delaney, Biggest Card in Ring Today, Was Sold to Pete Reilly for $900

While Jack Dempsey tore into his sparring partners in several exhibition bouts at the West Side Rink near Columbus Circle six years ago, Jack Delaney, then unknown to the pugilistic world, looked on and studied every move the heavyweight champion made.

The tall handsome young strippling smiled as the crowd applauded wildly when Jack dropped three of his adversaries in succession and vowed that some day he would meet this human tiger and conquer him.

Delaney felt then as he does now that his right would beat Dempsey's left to the target and that a speedy boxer with a deadly punch would find the champion an easy mark.

Filled with this laudable ambition he continued on his way to visit his brother in Detroit.

He was invited to box at the Grand River Club in Detroit and attracted so much attention that he was matched to fight an opponent whose name he fails to recall, in a ten-rounder at Saginaw, Mich.

This boxer broke one of Jack's ribs with the first wallop he delivered. Delaney refused to quit and knocked his man out in the third session.

The Bridgeporter boxed at Saginaw after that and ran up a streak of knockouts. In one of these matches he injured the third knuckle of his right hand and lost much of his punching power.

Jack Meets Doc Casey
Delaney returned to Bridgeport shortly after this and while training in the gym became acquainted with Eddie (Doc) Casey, who has been his trainer ever since.

Casey recommended him to Al Jennings, boxing promoter and manager of boxers in Bridgeport. The latter took him in hand and after Jack had won several bouts at Providence, R. I., matched Delaney, who was still far from the polished boxer he is today, with Augie Ratner, then in his prime. They met in Stamford in 1922 and the big French Canadian suffered his first knockout when Augie put him away in one round.

All the while, Jack's right hand was practically useless due to the injury he sustained while boxing in Detroit.

While still crippled, he was counted out when he essayed to battle Young Fisher, the rugged Syracuse battler, in three rounds during the same year.

Repeated treatments failed to cure his painful knuckle and he visited surgeon after surgeon without receiving any aid until he finally despaired of recovering the use of the hand and decided to quite the ring.

Thirty-three doctors had examined, cut and pawed away at the troublesome hand so Jack thought his case was hopeless until he heard of miracles of surgery performed by Dr. William G. Fralick of New York.

As a last resort he consulted Fralick, who discovered that a severed small ligament was the cause of the trouble, and he operated upon Jack, who disdained the use of an anesthetic, and calmly looked on as the surgeon cut open the skin and deftly pieced the broken ends of the ligament together.

Delaney's real boxing career dates from this point, and he has never suffered an injury to either hand since.

Fralick has been a potent factor in the boxer's life, and has always been the benefactor who rescued Delaney from his dire misfortunes.

The doctor saved the boxer's life last August, when septic poisoning of the throat brought him close to death, and later, when Jack cut a deep gash in his knee while training for his last bout with Berlenbach, Fralick's surgical skill brought Delaney into the ring on time, though the wound had but six weeks in which to heal and was aggravated by the fighter's attempts at training.

Meanwhile, Doc Casey had told Pete Reilly, the Brooklyn sportsman and Jack's present manager, of the latent possibilities of the Connecticut battler.

Jennings, who probably thought that Delaney's bad hand would never mend, sold his contract to Reilly for $900.

Reilly will receive close to $25,000 for his percentage of the receipts of the coming bout with Berlenbach, and has earned more than $100,000 on his original investment.

Under Reilly's smart management Delaney was rapidly piloted into stardom. As soon as his hand was fit for battle Jack met Tommy Madden in 1923 and knocked him out with the once useless right.

He got revenge on Ratner when he roundly trounced the latter in New York in 1923, flooring Augie several times during the engagement.

His knockouts of Tiger Flowers, Paul Berlenbach and Mike McTigue gave him the distinction of whipping two men who now hold titles and a former champion, McTigue.

TOPPING RUNS-IN WITH "STEAMBOAT" OF C.P.R.

YOUNG RIOT FEATURES LAST NIGHT'S GAME

Glenyards, 2; Grenades 1. There was a peculiar scene at the game last night. Steamboat aggravated Dickson all the time. He kept going with that stick, not meant as a reproach.

But it was directed against Dickson.

Bert Topping and he are half brothers.

There was a scrap.

Nobody seemed to know who were butting into one another.

Had to make the necessary inquiries.

These were the contestants, and while there was no blood drawn, the result of the conflict rested with Topping.

It was stupid of "Steamboat" to interfere. Dickson could have made a pancake of him.

The regret I have about the matter is that the incident should have occurred.

Why people will fight at a sport which has been arranged for their own entertainment.

Was standing on the line and I got a poke in the "kitchen" to remind me that once upon a while a meal had reposed there.

Very nice fellow and all that sort of stuff, but as a linesman he should hand over the flag. He should confine his attentions entirely to juvenile football. For purely mercenary reasons I withhold his name.

The rather unpleasant incident to which I have referred was relieved by the exhibition which the "old timers" put up.

Burnett scored two goals and Johnny Rooney put in the best that he could do for the Grenades.

Percy Lock was sent off. He kidded himself on that he was Jack Dempsey.

He is not—as all of us know.

He got mixed up with an opponent.

"Nobody is allowed into this dressing room who is not over forty years of age." So it was announced by Rooney, and yet on the field there was a fight.

It was a good game to watch and I am only sorry that it should have been necessary for Davy Grundy to send a man off the field.

Might as well tell you that there was another who was about to get his marching orders. But there was quietude for a while, and a certain voice was heard.

Where the Grenades made the mistake was that they did not feed Colin Grant. He was there all the time, but apparently he was not wanted, even taking the new rule into consideration. It was from Colin that the Grenades got their goal.

Burnett has done his duty. He was a plunger all the time.

The idea at half time was that Dickson should give Colin Grant something to do. The idea did not materialize.

At last Colin did get a pass and then he sent one over to Rooney and he accepted the invitation.

Mathieson for the losers was brilliant. That there should have been so much unfriendliness in the game was the regret of a wonderful crowd of enthusiasts.

At some later stage in the world's history I propose to deal with this particular game, but it seems to me that there is going to be some battle when the Glenyards and Coachyards meet in the final.

What vexes me most is that when I go up to Glenyards ground there are always rows. Why is this?

TO SELL NAGS OFF AT EMPIRE CITY

New York, July 15 — (Daily World Dispatch) — Sale of horses in training, which is scheduled to take place at the Empire City paddock, Friday, July 23, is receiving much attention here. The sale is to be conducted by F. Hill's Thorough Sale Company.

Imported horses, jumpers and flat runners comprise the list.

P.Q.F.A. IGNORED IN TODAY'S TEAM AGAINST ENGLISH

Would you believe that the P.Q.F.A. were consulted as to the composition of the team which is to oppose the Eastern Canadian team today?

Isn't it a shame?

Everybody working as hard as they know how to make this final game one of the events in Canadian soccer. It is scandalous.

It seems tolerably certain that Billy Westwater will be at inside right.

This is not certain. But almost.

The English team will arrive at Bonaventure at 9:25 a.m. There is going to be a banquet. We do hope the boys are to enjoy their meal. Wouldn't put them off that for a world.

But it has to be written that the team which has been chosen to represent Eastern Canada are going out to give the people of Montreal one of the best games which has ever been witnessed.

Believe me the English boys will be told what they will be up against. People keep on saying that to beat this team is an impossibility. It is not. The team to represent Eastern Canada is almost wholly Scottish. You can never beat the Englishmen at their own game. Try it if you want to. You cannot.

When General Foch got the better of the Germans he did one thing. He selected his own battle ground, and he chose his own tactics. We must do the same today.

The Eastern Canada team must play the Scottish game, and if they don't, then England will go home with an unbeaten record.

There is only one chance.

Will the boys take the advice of an old campaigner?

ENGLISH TEAM WIN EASILY

The English soccer team touring the Dominion which tour will be concluded today in Montreal, had weak opposition in Ottawa yesterday, as weak almost as when the Scots were at Lansdowne Park. The Englishmen won by 8-1. They took things very easily. They had no need to do otherwise.

RAILROADERS GO UNDER TO GURNEY

GURNEY 2; RAILROADER 1

This Gurney bunch are likely to prove one of the surprise teams of the year. They don't command a great deal of respect because they live out in the wilds. But they are some team. They beat Railroaders yesterday in the Mutual Society contest by 2-1, this with the main idea of contributing to the gaiety of the nations. It was an amazing result, but when you have a Laglands in the goal he makes deadly sure that there is not very much passing him. He is Scotch.

"NICK" SAYS BIG FOUR ENTRY WILL BE A GOOD ONE

Coach Nicholson of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association is optimistic regarding the football team he will enter in the Big Four senior group this season.

"Nick" said that he had nothing extraordinary in the way of material, but that he felt confident that he had plenty of it.

The squad of the Winged Wheel is not known as yet, but assurance is given that the C.N.R. stars of last year will turn out and that they will be supported by many newcomers.

NOT A BAD IDEA

Why does not the ex-President of Railroaders come along with his $10 and be exonerated?

He has got the money to spare.

Why not add to the P. Q. F. A. funds.

Surely they will not refuse a donation.

BEWARE OF HOOLIGANS!

Montreal League officials are to have badges to give them more authority than they possess at the present moment. It was a trenchant remark by Jock Somerville at last night's meeting of the Montreal League that "Hooliganism has stepped into the game," which was very largely responsible for the resolve to give League officials a sort of policeman's badge.

QUESTION

Railroaders are very anxious to know if there is a better left wing operating than McCutcheon, Todd, Rossiter and Syd Harrowing.

Couldn't tell, of course, not having seen them in harness.

LEAFS RE-BUMP INTO ORIOLE JINX; LOSE AGAIN

ORIOLES MADE IT 3 IN 4 IN TORONTO SERIES

Toronto, July 15—(Daily World Dispatch)—The Baltimore Orioles downed the Leafs yesterday by a score of 11 to 1. Faulkner and Maley were not in good trim, and Quellich hit a clean homer in each of his first two times at bat for the Orioles. Toronto is blue today.

The Bisons and the Bears mingled for an even break on the former's ground. The Bisons captured the first with a ninth inning rally 5 to 4, but were defeated in the second, when Hankins scored a 3 to 0 victory.

Syracuse was stopped by Reading after the Stars had won ten games, 12 to 6, and 3 to 2.

At Rochester Jersey City won and lost 5 to 3 and 4 to 3 respectively. Syracuse lost two, 1 to 0.

Pittsburg, July 15 — (Daily World Dispatch) — Pittsburg fans got the shock of their lives yesterday, when they witnessed the Pirates lose two consecutive games to the Giants. The scores were 12 to 8 and 5 to 2.

The Giants drove Don Songer and Joe Bush from the box in quick order.

With the Pirates losing two games Cincinnati increased its lead by humbling Philadelphia 5 to 1. This marked the third consecutive defeat for the Phillies.

At Chicago Boston drove Charley Root from the mound in the first inning, piling up a commanding lead to win 6 to 4.

St. Louis saw the Brooklyn Dodgers bunch hits in the third and eighth innings today for a total of 5, while the home team managed to get only 2.

New York, July 15. — (Daily World Dispatch)—A desperate rally in the ninth inning yesterday enabled the Yanks to trim Boston. Huggan played a wonderful game making five runs which tied the score, at six apiece. In the twelve inning fans were given a treat when Henry Louis Gehrig knocked a triple down to right field foul line, scoring George H. Ruth from first base with the winning run.

BIG FIGHT INTEREST SEETHES

DELANEY THREE POUNDS LIGHTER THAN CHAMPION

By JOSEPH GORDON

Universal Service Staff Writer
New York, July 15.—What will go down in current boxing history as one of the three important bouts of the decade will be staged tomorrow evening at Ebbets Field, home of the Brooklyn National League Club. It will bring together Paul Berlenbach, light heavyweight champion, and Jack Delaney, the young French-Canadian, who inherited the fighting heart of his sturdy pioneers ancestors.

The title will be at stake. Not since Dempsey was matched to defend his title against the Frenchman Carpentier has a fight attracted so much attention as this battle; not since Dempsey was put up against the wild-eyed Firpo has a bout caused so much speculation among the followers of the fist art.

From present indications the fight will draw a gate of between $450,000 and $500,000. Tickets are at a premium and it is expected that at least 45,000 will pack the park.

Both men are down to the light-heavyweight limit, with the probability that Delaney will enter the ring almost three pounds lighter than the champion.

ST. PIERRE WIN OVER REFEREE'S DECISION

St. Pierre aux Liens scraped a 4 to 3 victory over Westward in the Montreal City and District Amateur Lacrosse League fixture last night at Ville St. Pierre. Westward had lead 3 to 2 when St. Pierre scored a goal which was ruled out by the goal umpire. This decision was overruled by Referee Lantaigne.
