Increased Vote Schedules Announced in Good-Will Shopping Club Contest

Should Make Final Two Weeks A Big Sales Event at Club Stores—Subscription Payments To Be Big Feature Also

With only about fifteen days to go till the close of the Chateauguay Valley Shopping Club Competition, it has been decided to "boost" vote schedules for the purpose of stimulating increased enthusiasm during the final two weeks.

This means that any contestant can still win the first prize award of $100.00 cash. In addition, a "bonus" cash commission is offered to every contestant who works hard in securing subscription credits.

The final result and the ultimate winners depend upon two things. First, the effort put into the final days of the campaign by the contestants themselves, and, secondly, the co-operation extended to them by the buying public.

On page 3 is an announcement in detail of the increased vote schedules which will be in effect, beginning Saturday, September 17th, until the closing date. This schedule will not be increased or altered again.

Therefore, it can be said to all contestants, "it's up to you now!" Certainly the more results you obtain during the final two weeks, the more remuneration you will receive for your efforts. And to the public, be sure to support your favorite contestant by securing vote coupons and paying subscription accounts. These can be given direct to contestants, or deposited in their favor at the Gleaner Office.

Hobby Shows And Amateur Photography Create New Interest at Huntingdon Fair

Beautiful Display of Gladioli at the Huntingdon Fair—Keen Interest Shown in the Exhibits of Model Yachts—Fruit Show is Excellent

Innovations to Huntingdon Fair commanded the interest of many new exhibitors as well as spectators this year. The special showing of Gladioli made by Albert B. Ogilvie of Lac Nantel, Que., proved to be the necessary feature to stimulate more interest in the showing of cut flowers. A number of new exhibitors made entries and have been so encouraged that they will not only show again next year, but will make a determined effort to show in many classes. Mr. Ogilvie had a grand display of gladioli, approximately 200 beautiful gladioli spikes. Spread out as they were, they were arresting to the public who admired them to the utmost. Mr. Ogilvie not only aided the fair with his exhibit but is ultimately going to aid us in beautifying our homes in years to come, as many people placed orders for bulbs to be delivered to them next spring. Perhaps some of our readers would be interested in seeing one of Mr. Ogilvie's bulb catalogues, and if so should write to Lac Nantel for same.

Mr. C. E. Petch, Hemmingford, and David Higginson, Huntingdon, exhibited a great array of cut flowers. Perhaps the fine list of special prizes had something to do with the fine flower exhibit, but most people felt the showing of flowers would be very slim as we have had so little rain, and the flowers suffered accordingly.

After viewing the cut flowers one must say to themselves, "let's look at the potted plants." The potted plants did not appear to be so numerous, neither they were, reports Mr. Higginson. The drop in numbers was not very great but was more noticeable due to the fact that the renovated red building provided more space for the showing of flowers. The one fine feature about the potted plants at this year's fair was that the plants that produce blooms were in bloom when on exhibition. The judge, R. J. M. Reid, found the classes well filled and spoke highly of the quality of plants exhibited. Owing to sickness, two of the largest exhibitors of potted plants were unable to enter but about 25% of their customary entry. Had these two large exhibitors been able to show their usual number of plants the floral exhibit would have surpassed the fondest expectations of the flower committee for a big show. The showing of coleus was considered a first class showing. The tuberous begonias were not as numerous as one might have expected to see, for in this community many people grow excellent specimens of these beautiful and colorful plants.

Fancy Work

The ladies who were seen continually wending their way to the fancy work exhibit were inspiring to the exhibitors. The people admired the entries made, and what is more, they fumbled them over, despite the fact that it is contrary to the rules of the show. Whether the fancy work was soiled or otherwise, the exhibitors had the satisfaction of knowing their painstaking efforts were appreciated by the masses. Eleven quilts were exhibited in the class displaying quality of quilting workmanship. It could not be said the quilts were all the most tasteful as to color combinations or designs, but the ladies admired the quality of work throughout. The needlework generally displayed was excellent. Two new classes were added to the fancy work exhibit, viz: Club exhibits of 25 pieces of fancy work. St. Andrew's Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Society and the W. I. made entries, the laurels going to the first named. These entries paved the way for what ought to be big classes next year.

The Salada Tea Company offered a prize for the best knitted tea cosy. No less than 13 tea cosies were entered in this competition. For the best decorated tea tables six entries were displayed.

The Hobby Shows

The individual without a hobby is likely to find he has many lonesome hours at some time or other during his life. Messrs. I. H. Bowden and H. G. Bickford organized an exhibit of sailing yachts. The contestants were, generally speaking, the Boy Scouts. The fact that several adults exhibited sailing boats lent encouragement to the boys to make boats and make them with exactitude. The thirteen miniature sailing yachts on display were arresting. The workmanship exemplified was outstanding. Mr. Ramsey of Riverfield, donated a sailing yacht he made, a copy of the Endeavour, as first prize. This yacht was won by Mr. H. G. Bickford. Mr. Bickford's yacht was what the boys would term a "pippin." Mr. Ramsey exhibited a boat he made recently, but not yet tested. The hull of the yacht was made out of pressed paper taken from the Montreal Star and the Huntingdon Gleaner. Though this is the first exhibit of this nature for boys, it is by no means the last. Larger space must be provided for the exhibit in 1939 as well as more classes, so that boys of different ages will be able to compete on a more equal basis. Mr. D. L. Kelly intimated at the fair that he would like to see a somewhat similar competition for the making of miniature air planes, whilst Mr. Ken McNair was advocating a kite exhibition. The hobby show can certainly be developed to the advantage of the youths as well as the fair.

Amateur Photography

Photography was never very seriously competed for at Huntingdon Fair, but that day is now past and from now on it will undoubtedly be a feature people will swarm to see year after year. The exhibit was given a great boost through Mr. J. Hamilton Ferns sending up an array of framed enlargements of

Their dazzling black beauty offset by the gleaming green and yellow combination decorations attracted much attention. CARR'S HOLSTEINS MAKE FINE SHOWING AT QUEBEC FAIRS

W. L. Carr exhibited 14 head of Holstein cattle at the fair at Quebec last week. He made a most impressive showing with entries, winning 10 firsts, 5 seconds and 3 thirds. He also won a beautiful challenge trophy. This is the third large fair in the Province of Quebec at which Mr. Carr's Holsteins have made a fine showing this season, the other two being at Malone, N.Y. and at Valleyfield.

Valleyfield Holds Quiet Weekly Meet

Ald. Hébert Sits After Being Absent For Several Weeks—Evaluators Voted $100. Each

Valleyfield aldermen seem to have renewed a greater interest in their municipal affairs, as was evidenced by the attendance of aldermen at the regular weekly meeting of the Valleyfield Council on Wednesday evening. Ald. Hébert who had not assisted a council session in the past few weeks, was present and only Ald. Goyette and Léger were forcedly absent from this meeting. Both these persons are awaiting their action of disqualification which is to be brought up at the next Superior Court sitting in October.

The meeting opened with the reading of letters by the City Clerk. These letters pertained to applications for policemen and were filed.

Mrs. Gilles Amyot, through her attorney, Albert Leblanc, informed the City Council that the sewers near her residence on Victoria street were defective. Water would penetrate the Amyot residence when it rains. The complaint was discussed and filed.

Mr. Raoul Charette asked the Council's permission to allow parking in front of the Larocque House, on Victoria street, as the opposite side of the road is not favorable to pedestrians.

Ald. Mallette explained that Mr. Charette had asked for this parking space facing Larocque House. Mr. Charette's request was rejected and the cars will continue to park on the left hand side of Victoria street in the evenings and on both sides during the day.

The Council voted the sum of $100. to each of the evaluators who are actually preparing the evaluation roll for 1939.

Co-operation With Teacher Is Urged

Teachers And Commissioners of Township of Hinchinbrook Hold Meeting

A meeting of the teachers and commissioners of the Township of Hinchinbrook, was held Sept. 5th, 1938, at the Town Hall, Herdman.

There was a full attendance of teachers and commissioners.

The chairman W. B. Levers, opened the meeting with a welcome to everyone, stating the pleasure of the board at the response.

The board felt the need of better co-operation between teachers and commissioners, to further the advancement in education.

He then called on Commissioner Boyce to address the meeting.

Comm. Boyce in outlining the objective of the meeting mentioned the necessity of getting acquainted, so when the board visited the schools they were not strangers.

Also that whatever was the teacher's trouble was the board's, and that they, the teachers, feel free to come and state thier difficulties, for when judgment was used they would stand behind them.

He also suggested that the teachers keep a record of all the desk copies, the board purchased, for we procure over a hundred dollars of books each year, and we would like to know where they are.

Closing requesting that teachers notify the managers, regarding all repairs necessary.

Mr. Ronald M. Bruce was then called on.

Mr. Bruce gave some of his experiences in his four years' teaching. Suggesting that the teachers of Hinchinbrook form an association, there they could talk of their problems.

Miss McGerrigle, Miss MacMaster, Miss Ritchie and Mrs. Wilson gave useful suggestions on discipline.

Huntingdon's 105th Annual Fair Attracts A Large Number of People This Year

Brilliant Sunshine and Good Exhibits in the Livestock Classes Feature the Success of the Fair This Year

Brilliant autumn sunshine and an attendance that surpassed that for several years past, together with a marked improvement in the general exhibits, set off the 105th annual Huntingdon Fair held at the Exhibition grounds on Thursday and Friday.

The number of cattle exhibited was larger than last year while the quality shown was definitely superior to last year. The crowd was appreciative of the grand parade of live stock in which many fine animals passed in review to the stirring tunes of the Black Watch Highlanders of Montreal.

The Ayrshire exhibits were quite good with James West, Ross Pringle, D. O. Taylor and Cecil Anderson among the chief winners in the competitions.

In the Holstein classes the following were amongst the winners: J. J. Murphy, Fred McGregor, Helm Bros., W. Kelly.

D. M. Rowat, Sid Barrington, T. Higgins and R. Milne were leading prize winners in the Jersey exhibits.

Reg. Graham and A. Ritchie were prominent in the Shorthorn exhibit prize winning list.

There was a good showing of sheep with the chief winning exhibitors being Pringle Bros., G. A. Daoust, J. Fennell, W. W. McArthur, Dave Ness and J. H. Kerr.

Leading winners in the exhibits of swine were C. J. Bryson, F. Monique and N. Brooks.

Taylor Bros., John Graham, J. D. Lang and Mrs. J. W. Lowden were the chief winners in the poultry classes.

The exhibits of horses were particularly good this year, both as to number and to quality. The chief winners in the various divisions were as follows:

Registered Clydesdales: W. A. McClatchie, W. D. Fraser, E. Roi, M. Kerr.

Heavy draft: L. McFarlane, F. Monique, W. A. Peddie, T. Beauchamp and Mrs. Mary Anderson.

Light draft: Cecil Anderson, Austin Kelly, W. Murray and L. Brisson.

General purpose light horses: Donald Black, W. C. Collings, T. L. Irving, Angus Black, S. Bryson, Ouimet Bros.

Saddle horses: Dave McCoy and F. Cassidy.

The magnificent black horses of Dawes Brewery as usual attracted much attention and admiration. The stallion "Kingston" was the grand champion of the Huntingdon Fair. Second prize was won by "Lav Seno" and third place by "Normand II". The fourth black horse to be exhibited was "Don Pedro". These horses were under the direction of E. Boudrias of the Dawes Brewery stables, Montreal.

Donald Black, M. P., referred to the good horse showing at the Huntingdon Fair this year and referred specially to a good pair of colts in the carriage class owned by Ouimet Bros., of Boyd Settlement.

Truck Driver Is Killed in Accident

Leland P. Gallagher, Malone, N.Y., Killed Instantly When Truck Plunges Into Trout River

Leland P. Gallagher, 33, of Malone, N.Y., a truck driver for the Racoil Company of Malone, was killed almost instantly Saturday night when the heavy truck he was driving left the Malone-Chateauguay road at Hawks Hollow, five miles east of Malone and plunged into Trout River after jumping an old bridge abutment.

Coroner Edward A. Cargill, who, with state police investigated the tragedy, said an autopsy revealed the victim died of a broken neck.

Mr. Gallagher was returning to Malone from Plattsburg when the truck, loaded with 1,900 gallons of gasoline and fuel oil, left the road on a curve just east of the Trout River bridge. It tore out two guard rails, crossed an abandoned roadbed and struck an abutment where a former bridge had spanned the river before the new road was built. The chassis of the truck stopped at the abutment, but the engine, cab and tank were catapulted into the stream.

The sound of the crash was heard by members of a nearby family and they investigated and notified the state police.

State police said the cab doors had apparently sprung open at the abutment and Gallagher's body was thrown clear of the wreckage. It was found in three feet of water, submerged except for the head which rested against stones. There is a drop of eight feet from the abutment to the stream.

Mr. Gallagher was a native of Malone, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gallagher.

Surviving are his wife, formerly Edith Bean; two sons, Douglas and Wayne; his father, Peter Gallagher, of Glenelm; two brothers, Frank of Malone, and Clarence of Burke; and a sister, Mrs. Harold McGuire, Malone.

Huntingdon Fair Stages Comeback

HUNTINGDON Fair impressed the public as a fair that is going to stage a comeback and not die a natural death as many were inclined to believe was its fate. A year ago considerable criticism was directed towards the Fair from many sources. It is indeed a pleasure for the Gleaner to be able to print a word of praise for the Fair in place of constructive criticism. Much constructive criticism can still be expected, but indications point to a more successful future for the Fair.

The genuine public interest that was exemplified, long before the Fair took place, provoked a warm feeling towards a successful fair for 1938. Three working bees alone proved that the farmers wanted to see the fair maintained and generally improved. Horse stalls were built, and still more stalls are required and will have to be built before next September's show. The exhibitors who used the new stalls were well satisfied with them. The permanent improvements made to the red building brought forth much commendation. The general cleaning up of the buildings was favourably commented upon.

The best Fair in years is now a thing of the past, but now is the time for a general meeting to be held to further discuss and decide upon improvements to be made for 1939. The prize list certainly should be revised so that it will be more complete, and useless classes should be deleted. The time to do such work is when everything is fresh in the minds of the directors and committeemen as well as the exhibitors. A meeting called for this purpose now and acted upon in accordance with the decisions decided upon will undoubtly mean a very considerably increased entry in 1939.

Attendance at the 1938 Fair was large, and it is hoped the prize money will be paid in full, and that the Show Board will not be obliged to hold back some of the prize money, as provided for in the prize list regulations. The holding back of prize money is not conducive to fair exhibiting and it would be much better if the prizes were reduced a small percentage than to show large prizes and then deduct a percentage after the fair. The president and directors, and more especially the secretary John Smaill, abhor this feature of book-keeping that had to be resorted to in the depression years.

The fair is regaining ground. Not so many years ago its debt was three times what it is today. Further improvements must be made to buildings and fences, and we really believe they will be taken care of as rapidly as finances will permit. It is a known fact that the buildings are now kept locked up better than in recent years, thereby eliminating much mischievous destruction and breaking of glass. A substantial gate for the entrance to the grounds is much needed so that intruders can not readily gain entry. If the show board can organize another working bee this fall, the building of a permanent gate to the show grounds will likely be the objective.

1938 Huntingdon Fair was appreciated by the public. The president and all his co-workers are to be complimented upon the success of this year's Huntingdon Fair.

Havelock Fair Tomorrow

HAVELOCK Fair, weather permitting, should be the largest and best attended in many years. The fair will be held tomorrow on the greatly improved fair grounds at Havelock. The Huntingdon Agricultural Society, Div. B., received special grants of money from both the Federal and Provincial governments. This money has been wisely spent in renovating the fair ground property. The money was spent on roofing, horse stalls and fencing, etc.

Whilst these improvements to the grounds will attract many people to see just what has been accomplished, the greatest accomplishment that will prove beneficial to Havelock Fair is that of the completion of the building of Highway 52, plus the many roads that have been so materially improved in the townships of Havelock, Hemmingford and Franklin. The improved highway arteries leading to Havelock Fair will certainly induce many to take Thursday off as a holiday and visit the Havelock Fair.

Havelock Fair has managed to stand the test of years of depression in a wonderful way. The exhibitors have stood loyally by the fair and each year one sees a grand display of the stock and produce of our farms in the east end of Huntingdon County. The general public appreciate the efforts exemplified at Havelock Fair and will undoubtedly again register their support through attending the fair in increased numbers.

War Scare Headlines

WE have pointed out before in this column the sickening practise of daily newspapers on this continent using scare war headlines every now and then. It seems to have become an old American custom.

Daily newspapers in both the United States and Canada periodically break out in a rash of war scare headlines that are not in any sense of the word a true picture of conditions in Europe.

If our word isn't reliable enough, take the word of Beverly Baxter, London, England, correspondent of Maclean's magazine, Member of the British House of Commons and editorial adviser to the Allied Newspapers of England. Visiting in Toronto recently, he called up Maclean's and stated:

"What's the matter with the newspapers over here? When I left London a week ago I would have wagered a thousand to one that there wouldn't be a European war. Yet the headlines here shriek of the imminence of the conflict. There isn't any such pessimism in England. The papers in France, and even in Czechoslovakia, aren't flaunting a fresh scare every twenty-four hours. Are we, who are much closer to the European events, all wrong, or what?"

The truth of the matter is that syndicates on this side of the Atlantic send over correspondents who are paid in accordance with what "good stories" they can send. They see to it that stories are sent every now and then packed with fear, which has a wide reader interest. Hence there is a tendency to far over-exaggerate conditions in Europe. It seems unfortunate that this should be the case, for it certainly does not do newspaper readers a great deal of good in the long run and provides a great deal of unnecessary fear about the situation in Europe.

Our Cost of Living

CANADA is at last going to make a study of nutrition and family living. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has been given authority to make a Dominion-wide survey to show how family income is spent, especially in urban areas.

Such a study is long overdue. At present the only figures available to measure price changes in a family budget in Canada are the antiquated ones carried forward from month to month by the Department of Labor.

This compilation originated some 40 years ago. It still records year in and year out the price fluctuations in laundry starch, salt pork and other almost obsolete items. Its list of "29 staple foods" is sadly in need of overhauling.

A proper study of this type should be of first-rate importance to every wage earner, every employer and to local, provincial and Dominion government officials.

Comparative cost of living figures can do much to systemize and inform our industrial and national planning. They can give factual answers to much of the loose talk concerning wages and living standards in various parts of the country. They can also throw much light on the spending habits of Canadians.—(Financial Post).

Gentlemen in Business

DANIEL Defoe, in a work less well known than Robinson Crusoe, said "A true-bred merchant is the best gentleman in the nation." But lest any reader who is active in the market place preen himself overmuch, one finds a sharply contrary view expressed by a later writer, Nietzsche: "Merchant and pirate were for a long period one and the same person. Even today mercantile morality is really nothing but a refinement of piratical morality."

The laws which annually are added for the regulation of business suggest that the statement by Nietzsche is the one which is believed. Actually it may be that regulation comes mainly at the behest of vociferous and persistent minorities. We know an official regulator whose work is made more difficult because no one ever appears to speak for the public as a whole. Always, he says, those who make representations to governamental authority are spokesmen for special groups who either desire special privileges for themselves or special restrictions on their competitors.

Thus governments gradually have been driven into legislating for business. The true gentleman needs not to study etiquette. The sound business man who has regard for community welfare and his duties as a citizen needs not a law to tell him what is right and what is wrong.

Hence it can be argued—and often is argued—that business has brought regulation down on its own head because business, on occasion, has not been a true-bred gentleman. Yet in times when there is not enough business to go around, the gentleman in the market place may be compelled to walk a plank provided eagerly by other merchants of the kind the German philosopher had in mind.

It may be, also, that the true-bred gentleman who is a merchant will be too gentlemanly or indolent to provide goods and services which are desired by the public. As a gentleman he will take his defeat with equanimity and carefully conceal the torn lining of his Prince Albert. If he complains bitterly to governments that other and more aggressive merchants have destroyed his trade he no longer can be considered a gentleman.

The competitive struggle is a hurly-burly existence, full of advertising. Often the price appeal screams above the more harmonious, musical and lasting notes of quality of the product and of the service. But in competition the watchful consumer has his reward. And from Bastiat, via Deachman, one learns that the interest of the consumer is the interest of the human race.

Above the voice of Bastiat and Deachman is Another which says that you should Do Unto Others as You Would Have Them Do Unto You. This thought is often expressed in more mundane language: "Live and let live is the rule of common justice," but it appears originally in English in Aesop's Fables and mayhap for that reason is to be taken no more seriously than Alice in Wonderland; the last, the product of a mature mind, to be sure, but composed for the edification of a mere child.

Yet one can hope that the day will arrive when politicians will not see the need of succumbing to the demands of minorities — when business will be able so to regulate itself that the era of The Golden Rule will be said to be here. Meanwhile, competitive troubles would be less, and the eternal cry for more and more laws would never more be heard, if merchants (including industrialists, financiers and all other traders) kept cautiously on the middle ground. The middle ground is somewhere between the point where might be invoked the section of the criminal code which says thou shalt not set thy prices for the purposes of destroying competition, and the policy of turning-of-the-other-cheek which merely results in someone else making all the sales. Aggressiveness is not incompatible with a middle course.

Farm Rivalry

THE Hon. P. M. Dewan, opening the Belleville fair recently, urged greater rivalry among farmers as a means of improving the quality of agricultural products.

"The farmer," Ontario's Minister of Agriculture says, "by comparing his animals and produce with others, will attempt to improve his breed and grow better produce next year."

There's something to this. All of us do better work or play a better game when there is keen rivalry with someone else. Fall fairs offer an excellent means of providing the rivalry Mr. Dewan has in mind. For that reason they deserve to be patronized and encouraged and it is well that special stress be placed on the farm exhibits department. In recent years, some persons feel, there has been too great a tendency to emphasize midways, horse racing, amusement turns, etc., rather to the exclusion of the exhibit features. It is satisfactory to know, then, that Mr. Dewan is giving leadership to the cause of rural education and improvement through stimulating a greater interest in farm exhibits and attempting, in every way, to raise their quality.

EXCHANGE CLEANUP

New president of the New York Stock Exchange is William Martin, Jr., 31, former stock broker from St. Louis, where his father is president of the Federal Reserve bank. Since the conviction and imprisonment of Richard Whitney, former president, for embezzlement, the Stock Exchange has done some house cleaning and Martin represents the cleanup forces. He will be the first paid president of the exchange. His salary will be $48.000 a year. It is interesting to note that on Martin's graduation from Yale university, ten years ago, he received three votes from his fellow classmen as the member of his class "most likely to succeed." The member who received the largest number of votes, seventy, is a clerk in a Wall street office.

HAVE GOOD START

Statistics prove that babies born in the months of February and March live, on an average longer than people born in other months. The reason is not because they battle during their early existence with cold weather and keen winds, making their little bodies hardy and strong; it is, according to Professor Ellesworth Huntington, traceable to the fact that the cradle of the human race originated in lands where late February and early March saw the end of winter dearth and the beginning of spring plenty. Consequently nursing mothers were able to get ample food for themselves and their babies. With the warm days of summer following on, the little child began his life in the most favorable circumstances. Nature's law of the survival of the fittest has handed down this heritage of health to the children of today born in February and March.

DOGS KNOW WORDS

A hobby of Dr. Wilfred J. Funk, publisher of dictionaries, is the study of the intelligence of dogs, of which he owns six himself. Dr. Funk says it is surprising how many words even an average dog can be taught to understand. He says a smart trick-dog can be taught upwards of 250 words. Of his own six dogs, a small French poodle knows the meaning of more than 100 words. His second, an ordinary "mutt," has a vocabulary of 85 words. Almost any mongrel can be taught 10 words in a very little time. Dr. Funk, who received world-wide publicity over his selection of the 10 most beautiful words in the English language and, later, the 10 "most overworked" words, now has selected the 10 words best known to dogs and some alternates, as follows: 1, Talk, speak, bark; 2, quiet or hush; 3, wait or stop; 4, heel, down or sit; 5, up or stand; 6, good-bye or by-bye; 7, quick; 8, bed; 9, eat; 10, siccum.

OIL TOWN SLIPS

The town of Elgin, in southeastern Kansas, had an oil boom a few years ago. Oil found on the lands of the Osage Indians across the Oklahoma line caused the suddenly rich redmen to come to town and spend their money freely. The town built sewers, waterworks, paved its street, bonding itself heavily for these expenses. Then came the depression. Now, Elgin has only about 600 population. Its total valuation is $90,000, its bonded debt, $132,000, and back interest, $44,000. The town has 310 lots. On 302 of them taxes are delinquent back to 1931 or further. Now, these 302 lots are to be sold at auction and the owners, half of whom are on relief of some kind, are up in arms, declaring it won't be healthy for any outsider to come in and buy up their property for a song.

CANADA AT R. A. SOCIETY

Canadian fox furs, a wide range of Canadian agricultural machinery, Canadian wire fencing, tree-stump pullers, cattle feed grinders, and Canadian barn equipment attracted much attention at the recent annual show of the Royal Agricultural Society at Cardiff, Wales. Agriculturists from Canada, the United States, Argentina, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa attended the exhibition.

HIS IDEA PAYS

Wishing to be his own boss, Frank Masterson, 28, looking around a big Chicago department store, got an idea. He noticed that few of the many shoppers who examined and admired the high-class luggage on display made no purchases because of the high prices. Since it usually is in use only on vacation trips, Masterson reasoned that vacationers should be willing to pay a reasonable rental price for the use of smart luggage they could not afford to buy outright. Going around to steamship, railway and even airline travel agencies he convinced them that if vacationers could save money on their purchases of luggage, they would have that much more to spend on fares. He offered these agencies a 25 per cent commission for all the business they would get for him, induced a friend to put up the necessary capital, and stocked up on luggage bought at wholesale which he is renting for $1.25 to $11 per piece for two-week periods with the privilege of applying the rental charge to purchase price if so desired. Masterson started June 1, doubled his business every succeeding week and finished the month with 100 customers.

PRINCE LIKES SPEED

Although Sweden is a small, thickly-settled country with no wide open spaces, Prince Bertil, representative of his grandfather, King Gustav, at the Swedish tercentenary celebration, held in the United States, is a speeder when he gets behind the wheel of a motor car. He demonstrated this while driving from Syossett, L.I., to Manhattan, 36 miles, in 20 minutes. His motorcycle escort of highway patrolmen found it difficult to keep up with him and, of course, they could not arrest him or even remonstrate with him, since he was a royal guest.

BULL DISLIKES SELF

Hereafter, Charles Brawner, a dairyman near Atlanta, Ga., will know better than to park a new auto in his pasture. He did that recently while showing a friend some of his fine stock. Some distance away from the car they suddenly heard a crash. The herd bull, seeing his reflection in the highly polished door of the car, had just charged the image. Bellowing in rage and pawing up earth, he walked around the car and seeing his image on the other side, rammed into it also. The car was a near wreck before Brawner rescued it.

FIGHTING RURAL FIRES

(Waterloo Chronicle)

This is the season of the year when threshing operations are in full swing on many farms in Ontario with a danger of fire from sparks from engines or spontaneous combustion. Despite precautions taken by threshermen, fires do occur and without proper fire fighting equipment the people in the rural sections look to nearby villages and towns for help.

The other day, near Owen Sound, a straw stack close to the barn caught fire and in a very short time scores of farmers summoned by phone were on the scene. With a make-shift fighting equipment, they succeeded in bringing the fire under control, saving the barn and contents. The farm owner the same day had broken a leg in threshing operations and was unable to direct the fire fighters.

That there is a real spirit of neighborliness among people in the rural districts was evident the other Sunday when a church congregation left the service to help fight a nearby barn fire. Other cases could be cited.

With the passing of the traction engine and the increasing use of Hydro on many farms, the danger of fire is lessened. However there is still much to be done in improved fire fighting equipment and a more adequate water supply before farmers can enjoy any sense of safety from fire hazard.

WALKS FOR HEALTH

The magnificent health of a British lad whose vegetarian parents restricted him to a meatless diet has led one of Great Britain's foremost physiologists to believe he has located the "most perfect boy." Sir Leonard Hill, director of research at St. John clinic and institute of physical medicine, wrote in the British Medical Journal of the youth whose father and mother retired years ago to the vegetable patch. He did not identify the nine-year-old boy who weighs 59 pounds and stands four feet four. The perfect specimen doesn't eat meat, fish, eggs or bread, walks ten miles daily before breakfast, then sits down to one slice of pineapple. For lunch he has baked spinach and onion pie with a thin crust made of whole meal flour; cheese and milk—10 ounces in all. For tea he doesn't have tea, but two apples, one orange and two small tomatoes.

The effect of the late season without frost shows in the second crop of fruit, as black raspberries can be found in perfect quality, the bushes having blossoms, green fruit and ripe fruit at the same time.

The community was saddened to hear of the accidental death of Leland Gallagher, youngest son of Peter Gallagher of Powerscourt. Young Mr. Gallaghar was driving an Esso gas truck from Chateaugay to Malone on Saturday night when the accident occurred about 10.30 at Hawks Hollow bridge, about half way between Chateaugay and Malone. It is supposed that the driver fell asleep when nearing the turn in the road and kept to the right, going over the embankment into the water and it is believed was killed instantly. The truck was a total wreck, the body part lying in the stream and the tank part found on the opposite side of the road. Much sympathy is extended to Mr. Gallaghar in the sudden death of his son.

ROCKBURN

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McLaren of Kingston, Mass., called on friends in Rockburn, en route to Huntingdon where Mr. McLaren was anxious to renew old acquaintance with the friends he hoped to meet at Huntingdon Fair. Mr. McLaren was born and brought up between Rockburn and Herdman and finds few if any relatives left in this district now.

Mrs. W. E. Rennie accompanied her son and family to their home in Guelph, Ont., when they returned Friday, and will spend a few weeks there.

The Rockburn School is opened again and the teacher, Mrs. Chester Wilson, has 35 pupils enrolled.

The Rockburn pulpit was occupied Sunday by Rev. White of Prince Edward Island.

NERVELESS LUCK

Never having had a toothache in her life, or feeling pain whenever dentists used a drill in preparation for filling her teeth, Virginia Rees, 20, of Neosho, Mo., mentioned this unusual fact to Dr. C. F. Duncan, her dentist. To discover the reason for this strange condition, Doctor Duncan used the X-ray, which showed him that not one tooth of the 32 in her mouth had a nerve of any kind or even a root-canal.

MODERN MATILDA

COOKIES

It's good psychology to let the children ask their friends home for "refreshments." Next time you see Bobby or Betty rounding up the "gang" with promises of cookies, and lemonade, cookies and tomato juice or cookies and milk (all of them wholesome combinations) remember that they are getting good training in the useful art of hospitality. Your job, of course, is to keep the cookie jar full.

It's a splendid idea, too, to allow the children to assist on baking day.

Summer Cuts

½ cup butter.
1 cup brown sugar.
1 egg.
2 cups flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
¼ teaspoon soda.
¼ teaspoon salt.
½ teaspoon vanilla.
Fruit or nuts, or both.

Cream the butter, add the brown sugar and mix well; then add the well-beaten egg. Mix and sift the flour, baking powder, soda and salt, and stir into first mixture. Add the vanilla. It should be a fairly stiff paste. If necessary, add a little more flour. Now add fruit or nuts, as desired. Glace cherries, dates, figs, citron peel, orange peel, walnuts, pecans, peanuts, cocoanut, are just a few. Chocolate or cocoa may be added, if desired. Pat the dough into a bread pan and set in the refrigerator overnight. In the morning remove the dough from the pan, cut it down the centre to make two bars, than cut it in very thin slices and place slices on greased cookie sheets. Bake in a moderate oven (375 to 400 deg. F.)

Before slicing the first bar of dough, wrap the second piece in wax paper and return it to the refrigerator until you are ready to slice it. The colder the dough is the easier it is to slice. Use a thin-bladed sharp knife.

Filled Cookie Squares

¾ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg
¼ cup sour milk
2½ cups bread flour
⅛ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt.

Cream the shortening with sugar and eggs. Add sour milk, then fold in flour which has been sifted with baking powder, salt and soda. Roll cut half the dough to a sheet as large as the baking pan. Place in the greased baking pan and spread with date filling. Cover with a layer of cookie dough. Bake in a hot oven (375 deg. F.) and cut in squares while warm. If the baking pan is a fairly large one it may be advisable to double the recipe. Slightly more milk may be required.

For the filling, combine 2 cups chopped dates, ½ cup sugar and ½ cup water. Simmer ten minutes. Remove from the fire, cool and add ½ cup chopped nuts.

Date Bars

Two-third cup condensed milk (sweetened)
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
One-third cup pitted dates
¼ cup chopped nutmeats
½ teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour and baking powder. Add chopped dates, chopped nut meats, condensed milk, and vanilla. Blend thoroughly. Line a shallow pan (8 inches square) with wax paper and spread the mixture evenly about ½ inch deep. Bake 30 minutes in a slow oven, turn from pan and remove paper at once. While warm, cut into bars one by four inches, using a sharp knife. Make 16 bars.

Oatmeal Cookies

2 cups oatmeal
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup melted shortening
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Sour milk to make a stiff dough

Mix and sift the flour, salt and soda, and add them to the oats; add sugar, then, with a knife, stir in the melted shortening. Add vanilla, then add milk to make a stiff dough. Roll thin on a lightly floured board; cut and bake in a moderate oven until brown.

Chocolate Rolled Oats Cookies

1 can sweetened condensed milk
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¾ cup rolled oats
½ cup chopped walnut meats
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cook the condensed milk and chocolate in a double boiler until the chocolate is melted and the mixture very thick. Add the remaining ingredients, and mix well. For each cookie, drop 1 level measuring tablespoonful on a greased baking pan; bake in a modern oven of 375 deg. F. for 10 minutes.

Chocolate Cookies

½ cup shortening
1 cup granulated sugar
1 beaten egg
2 squares unsweetened cooking chocolate, melted
2½ cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream the shortening and sugar. Add the beaten egg and melted chocolate. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with the milk, to which vanilla has been added. Press through cookie press, or drop from a teaspoon on a greased baking sheet. Bake in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) for about 10 minutes. Makes 45 to 50 cookies.

Date Crunches

1 1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
3 cups Graham cracker crumbs
½ pound (1 cup) pitted dates
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Blend together the sweetened condensed milk, Graham cracker crumbs, chopped dates, and cinnamon. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered baking sheet. Bake in a moderate over (375 deg. F.) for 15 minutes or until brown. Remove from pan at once.

Ethics of Etiquette

ARRANGING THE CENTRE ORNAMENT

In planning the centrepiece for a dinner table, always remember that the guests will want to see each other across the table, and that tall ornaments which obstruct the view are irritating. Low ornaments like flat bowls of flowers are sensible, and like all sensible things they are in good taste.

There is a wide variety of interesting centrepieces to select from in china, glass, silver. Flower dishes and fern dishes are always good, and there are some new centrepieces of clay composition that are quite interesting. Anything is appropriate that is flat, pretty, and in harmony with the rest of the table.

At the present moment, coloured glass bowls with flowers are enjoying the unrivalled vogue with smart hostesses. The colour of the glass is selected to harmonize with the flowers used. The ornamental possibilities of coloured glassware and flowers are endless, in autumn particularly, when one can mass together such flowers as the goldenrod and the purple aster. But in using wild flowers, one should remember that they must always be trimmed neatly and grouped symmetrically to avoid a ragged and weedy appearance.

To achieve decoration with simplicity, many smart hostesses choose the new, graceful bowls of marine glass, slightly opaque and often hand-bent in antique designs. These bowls come in the soft shades of amethyst, amber, and green that harmonize so nicely with fresh-cut flowers, and some are all white.

The vogue for sheers continues unabated. And jerseys, too, maintain their place in the fashion sun. You see these two fabrics everywhere in basic costumes of smart, simple lines that are marvelous when set off with your favorite accessories. They come in colors, of course, but black is far and away the favorite. You'll want at least two costumes of this type, for you'll always feel well dressed in them and will find them suitable for almost any occasion.

Matrimonial

Wiltshire-Kerr

The marriage of Margaret Galbraith, younger daughter of Mr. Robert Kerr of Howick, Que., and the late Mrs. Kerr, to Mr. William Wiltshire, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Wiltshire, of Westmount, was solemnized in Georgetown Presbyterian Church, Howick, on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 10th, at three o'clock, Rev. Donald B. Mackay officiating. The church, prettily decorated by Miss Jean Kerr and Mrs. Allister McArthur with ferns and autumn flowers in yellow shades, was lighted by yellow tapers. Miss Christena Cameron played the wedding music. The bride given in marriage by her father, wore her travelling costume, a navy blue suit with hat and shoes to match and carried a bouquet of Signora roses. Mrs. R. M. McCaig, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, and wore an ensemble of brown wool with brown satin top and brown wool bolero and accessories to match. She carried bronze and gold chrysanthemuns. Mr. Alexander Anderson of Montreal acted as best man. Mrs. J. C. Wiltshire, the bridegroom's mother was gowned in Marina blue with black hat trimmed with a Marina blue ostrich feather and wore a corsage bouquet of gardenias.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's father, Mossgul. Later the bridal couple left on a motor trip to New York and Virginia Beach. On their return to Montreal they will reside on Queen Mary Road.

Dahlia's Whatnots

The Real Thing.—

They tell me that Los Angeles and vicinity form a hotbed for cults of every description. Charles E. Kelso, head of the Spiritual Psychic Science Church was placed under a court order requiring him to dissolve the corporation under which the church originally operated.

The judge voided the church charter after it was testified that Kelso had ordained ministers "for a price" and that one of these ordinations included "Rev. Drake Goo-Goo" who (or which?) was identified as a duck belonging to Joe Penner, radio comedian. And this was perpetrated in a country supposedly, not merely civilized, but Christian. If the auspices responsible had been medical instead of "spiritual" Mr. Goo-Goo might have claimed to be a genuine quack.

High Fliers.—

In last month's news from London, England, it was stated that at a conference to discuss women workers' problems the president called Britain "a black spot" from a working-woman's point of view. She declared that recent legislation left Englishwomen with a status little better than in 1844, just over 94 years ago. But as jobs on the ground are withdrawn the skies seem to be opening to women over there. They rushed to join the Civil Air Guard. Two hundred attractive young girls, members of the National Women's Air Reserve, were among the first volunteers for a 50-cents-an-hour flying course which puts them on the government lists. There were shop girls, typists, nurses, and clerks. Their instructor is a woman who has been earning her living as a pilot-teacher for six years. "When I heard that I was to teach 200 women my heart sank, but I have been amazed at the rapidity with which they have picked up flying," was the verdict of this capable aviatrix. Why not? Weren't they all born angels just as well as herself?

A Work of Uplift.—

One of the most interesting aspects of the field of literature is the way in which you can soar in an aeroplane with a British aviatrix one moment and descend into the watery depths the next. The soil of the field may be comparatively poor, yet given good seed to start with, and intensive cultivation unremitting, from it may be wrested a product of at least five-fold moral worth.

The Bible, topping the list of literary treasures, contains some splendid rural and animal stories in both literal and parable forms. In one we read how two thousand demon-possessed swine rushed violently down a steep place into the sea and perished.

I, too, have a tale to tell with a baron flavour, but a style immeasurably inferior, though the water was not so deep. Once upon a time, not very long ago, when our neighbour, Mr. Roderick Sutton, was absent from home, his sow fell in the well. What her thoughts were, or whether she wondered if she had fallen into the Covey Hill "Gulf" or chasm, which, bounded as it is by her master's family homestead, she may have heard him mention, I don't pretend to divine, but this I do know that she had the animal instinct or intelligence, whichever you choose to call it, to work herself around so as to keep her head above the two feet or so of water in the bottom of the well. By means of two grappling-hooks and ropes Madam Pig was hauled to the top. About a dozen spectators attended the performance, but only a couple or so had the wit to bring ropes. N.B. One of these was Miss Isobel Dowling, and she is a woman.

I do not for one instant insinuate that this usually circumspect sow had the evil propensities of those Gadarene swine, but she seemed fated to take a downward course. Just as many a fallen human, seemingly reformed, has back-slidden for want of a little encouragement, so now, for lack of a boosting hand, one precious moment was lost, the rope slipped from behind poor Piggy's front legs and down she tumbled to the bottom again.

But our life-saving crew were becoming experienced in salvaging derelicts and hayhap just "mad" to that slight degree which often finds expression in a job better done. A woman, showing me a hat she had renovated with shoe-polish and altered trimming, explained the fetching effect by remarking that she had been in a temper when she trimmed it, and that she could always work better when she got mad.

Anyhow, my neighbour's sow was hoisted safely on a second attempt and landed on terra firma.

A Huguenot Lady.—

Not long ago, Miss Ellie Cole was moved by the inspection of her great-gread-grandmother's likeness to try to find out something of her ancestress' history. It was an uncommonly interesting one. This lady was a Mrs. Purkiss and this reminds us that Miss Cole's mother's second name was the same, her mother, Mrs. Barrett, having been a Miss Purkiss. From her cousins, the Purkiss family of Prescott, Ont., and other connections, Miss Cole learned that her great-great-grandmother was a Miss Marie Dubois, who, with her brother, was rescued when their parents lost their lives in the French Huguenot persecution, their estates also being confiscated. The children were conveyed to a haven in England. Later they were offered their property back again on condition that they should recant. The brother did so and returned to France; the sister refused and later married a Mr. Purkiss.

Descendant of Huntingdon Meets Royalty

Queen Elizabeth Converses With Mrs. Gaston Riou, Daughter of Late Tommy Moir

Mrs. Gaston Riou of Paris, France, daughter of the late Tommy Moir, and niece of Mrs. J. B. McIntosh, Ogdensburg, and formerly of Huntingdon, was among the select few invited to the various receptions held for their majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth of England upon their recent visit to the French capitol.

Mrs. Riou's husband is secretary to the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs in Paris. He is also a member of the French Parliament. Mrs. Riou is the former Miss Arleen Moir of Huntingdon, Que.

In a recent letter to her aunt Mrs. Riou writes concerning the honor which she and her husband experienced.

"We had a most wonderful time during the visit of the King and Queen as we were among the lucky few invited to all the receptions. Everything was perfect. The weather was beautiful throughout their visit and all the receptions were magnificient.

"I received a lot of compliments on my dresses and a great friend of ours, a Russian Princess who is a first cousin to the late Czar Nicholas of Russia, loaned me some of her crown jewels for the dedication of the Australian monument at the Villers Bretouneux.

"The Queen stopped and had quite a little conversation with Gaston which was reported during the foreign hour news broadcast in Canada. My mother in Winnipeg heard the broadcast and was thrilled when she heard her son speaking to Her Majesty the Queen."

New "Hello" Directory Is Issued

Changes Made Because Human Voice Pronounces Letter "F" to Sound Like "M" Often

The new telephone directory for Huntingdon and vicinity, just issued, is estimated to contain no less than 10,000 new and revised entries in its 176 close-set pages, including over 100 changes of "F" party-line designations to "R".

This latter change has been introduced because the letter "F", as pronounced by some voices, frequently sounds like "M", thus confusing the operators. The substitution of "R", therefore, will help to prevent such errors and reduce the "wrong number" nuisance.

It is surprising how many people lose touch with their friends in between moving day and the new directory issue. Surprising, that is, until it is learned that some 8,642 alphabetical and 1,425 classified listings are different from those in the old book.

Since the volume of changes is so large, the importance of destroying the old directory and carefully consulting the new one before making calls cannot be too strongly emphasized. It helps your service to make sure of the numbers you call.

Covey Hill

Mr. James Bartlett called on old friends here this week. He has been employed near Ottawa and also engaged in mining in the North country.

A letter received from Mrs. Kenneth K. Pearce gives some interesting first impressions of St. John, N. B. The city is considered to be more like Quebec than Montreal. The first day after arriving the family were called upon by a representative of the Welcome Wagon Service, who conveyed to them a letter of welcome from the Mayor and gifts from several prominent firms, including a bouquet of roses, etc., an attractive picture, bread and rolls, a first aid kit, a box of chocolates, a brick of ice cream, and other articles. This idea strikes one as a pleasing combination of old-fashioned hospitality and up-to-date business acumen. We wonder if those responsible for Montreal's complicated civic set-up could not learn a thing or two from those Maritimers.

Miss V. McCracken resumed teaching on Sept. 6th in the old school building as the new one was not quite completed.

Miss Ellie Cole, her cousins Mrs. Thos. Waddell and Miss Isobel Dowling, Mr. Hollis Louden and little daughter Marguerite motored to Cumberland Head near Plattsburg on Wednesday to visit Mrs. Tefft. The latter's aunt, who also spends the summer with Mrs. Tefft, is a distant connection of the famous flier, Corrigan.

Mr. Bronsetter left the Hill last week to spend some time in the city.

Labour Day visitors at Mr. Simpson's included Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gough and two small daughters and Mr. and Mrs. Tucker of St. Lambert. Mr. Norman Cavers and Mr. Chambers of Verdun, and Mrs. Leslie Austen of Montreal.

The Week at Ottawa

Foundations Laid in Canada For Manufacture of Aircraft For the British Air Ministry— Investigate Machine Gun Contract

By Spectator

As long as the situation in Czechoslovakia remains in a critical stage, all domestic problems are subordinated in interest to world affairs. Every move in the fateful game being played by the forces of peace and war on the chess-board of Europe is being watched with the keenest anxiety. As long as there is the possibility that despite the constant efforts of the British people, the forces of disorder might "cry havoc and let slip the dogs" of war which would probably destroy civilization, our own domestic affairs must take a secondary place in the interest of the Canadian people.

The Manufacture of Aircraft for Royal Air Force

The members of the British Air Mission have sailed home after successfully laying the foundation for the manufacture of aircraft for the British Air Ministry. Air Marshal Sir Edward Ellington, Sir Hardman Lever, Mr. F. Handley Page and Mr. A. H. Self, who comprised the mission, are all convinced that the scheme will soon be "running sweetly" as one of them expressed it. The British government will first approve the arrangements made by the mission with Canadian manufacturers, which will sail for London to complete arrangements and receive a contract. Briefly the mission arranged with aircraft manufacturers in Canada that a central company would be formed here in which the whole aircraft industry would be associated, and this central company would be given a contract by the British government. There would be two central plants, one near Montreal, the other near Toronto. These at first would be assembling plants; later they might produce aircraft themselves. There would be two groups in the central organization, one in Montreal consisting of three large aircraft companies, the other in Toronto also of three companies. Other companies will work on sub-contracts from these groups. The central company will allocate orders to the various associated companies. Later on orders for aircraft will be given to firms in Fort William and Vancouver. The general principle on which the scheme was planned was to "mobilize the whole of the existent aircraft industry and to develop it on a long range programme to supply British planes required". The Canadian plants will make the frames and engines will be shipped from Britain so that the completed planes will be flown to the British Isles. Thus from Canadian plants, relatively safe from attack on account of their distance from the storm centres, air fleets in the next few years will be flying to the United Kingdom. What this will mean to the aircraft industry in Canada and to the various industries which supply aircraft plants may easily be surmised. It will also mean a great deal to our own defence plans as these plants will have facilities to turn out aircraft for Canada at a moment's notice.

Inquiry into Machine gun Contract

Justice H. H. Davis, of the supreme court of Canada will investigate the contract for Bren machine guns, which has been the subject of so much controversy. An article which appeared in a Toronto magazine assailed the contract on a number of grounds, the principal being that it would result in excessive profits for the shareholders of the company manufacturing the guns. Mr. Ian Mackenzie, the minister of national defence, announced on September 1st that a judicial inquiry would be made into every phase of the contract. The statement of the prime minister announcing the appointment of Judge Davis said: "The article published by Col. Drew cannot but create suspicion on these matters in the minds of the Canadian people. For this reason the government desires that the inquiry be conducted as expeditiously and as thoroughly as possible". The order-in-council appointing Judge Davis says the commissioner will "inquire fully into preliminary discussions and negotiations leading up to and completion of said contract, into shareholdings —sale of shares . . . and generally to inquire fully into all matters relating to the said contract and to the steps taken to protect the public interests and to report upon the same". The inquiry, according to Judge Davis, will be started "at the earliest possible moment". It is generally held that the government acted very wisely in instituting a judicial inquiry so quickly, so that uncertainty created in the minds of the people may be removed.

The minister of trade and commerce, Mr. Euler, has returned to Canada from a short visit to the British Isles. He cut short his business trip abroad as the progress of negotiations on the new trade pact with the United States required his presence in this country. There is plenty of business facing the cabinet. The Prime Minister who has been kept pretty well chained to his desk through the summer, with some of his ministers away and some sick, is himself recuperating from an attack of sciatica. The main subject of concern for the Prime Minister and his cabinet, naturally, is the world situation, but there are plenty of domestic problems requiring attention, among them, the new trade treaty with the United States and the related treaty between Great Britain and the United States, the wheat situation which has been further complicated by the policy announced in the United States of subsidizing flour export. The wheat market trend is causing a great deal of concern. There are federal by-elections in the offing, possible cabinet changes caused by illness, appointments to our foreign legations and a host of other matters. News which gives universal satisfaction is that Mr. Dunning, the minister of finance is making a steady if slow recovery from the heart trouble which attacked him last session. He is in Prince Edward Island.

Undoubtedly, one of the fundamental and very real functions of advertising is continually and everlastingly pounding home the facts and features and facilities of the advertised products and services. The reasons, of course, — if, indeed, there be need for the mention of reasons, — is not the too often attributed fickleness of the buying public, but rather that other things in numberless quantities lay claim to the buying power of the public and that it takes more than single and casual mention of articles to make impressions; and that each day brings to the markets new members of the buying public. Fundamental and basic as such a statement is, it is well for all of us who are concerned with distributing things which have been made, to the places and peoples where they are used, to repeat it frequently to ourselves. For there has been too much advertising waste resulting from the very lack of — repetition. Too many beginnings of advertising programs, based on well-laid plans, which have for varied reasons not gone beyond the beginning stage. And thereby they have made a squandering of the cost of that beginning. But, what is more serious, they have failed of fruition for lack of continuity, which is, broadly, another way of saying, REPETITION.

Huntingdon Agricultural Society Trophy is Won by Ormstown -- Dundee Girls Win

Huntingdon Fair Attendants Witness Five Softball Contests on Thursday and Friday—Huntingdon Srs., Falcons, Riverfield Girls, Huntingdon Girls Are Losing Teams During This Tournament

Excellent softball exhibitions were presented during Huntingdon's 105th annual fair which was held on Thursday and Friday. The first ball program on Thursday featured four boys' teams: Valleyfield Falcons, Huntingdon, Ormstown and Kensington. The winners of these two games were Ormstown and Kensington. Huntingdon lost to Ormstown while Kensington walked away from the Falcons. The final ball program on Friday afternoon was witnessed by a large attendance. The first game between the Huntingdon Girls and the Riverfield Girls resulted in a victory for the latter team, with Dundee defeating the winners in the final game of the afternoon by a large score.

The final boys' game which was played between the Ormstown team and the powerful All-Star Kensington team, was won by the Ormstown nine by the close score of 9-7. The winners were awarded a beautiful trophy which was donated by the Huntingdon Agricultural Society to be played for annually. The Girls' champion team was awarded softball equipment.

Games on both days were closely contested with the winners in each instance being successful to score one or more runs at a time when the opposite team would not have a chance to recover soon enough to take the lead and win the contest.

The first game of the afternoon on Thursday was played between the Falcons and Kensington, with the latter winning an easy contest by the score of 30-7. The Valleyfield players were somewhat disorganized as their starting pitcher was unable to make the trip on the occasion and had to be replaced by pitchers of practically no experience. Kensington scored in each of their seven innings, while the Falcons tallied three runs in the last half of the first and scored their four last runs in the fourth inning when the Kensington players were playing nonchalantly.

The Huntingdon-Ormstown contest was one of the best games played at the Fair Grounds during the Exhibition. Save the third inning, when Ormstown scored eight runs on errors and slow fielding, the teams were held scoreless for twelve innings, six on each side. The one and only double of the game was effected during this battle when Huntingdon cut off a runner at second and the batter was called out at the initial sack. The score at the end of the seventh inning was 11-1.

An impromptu game was presented the fans attending Huntingdon Fair on Friday afternoon when the Agricultural Society invited the Huntingdon Girls to play the Riverfield softball team with the winning team playing the powerful Dundee nine. The local girls lost 14-8. The final girls contest ended in a victory for Dundee when the Riverfield Girls lost 21-10.

Kensington weakened at Ormstown's fourth inning at bat with the result that four scores came in before Faubert, on the mound for Kensington, was able to retire the side. This nine inning contest was a close struggle throughout and it was only when the third put-out was made in the final frame that Ormstown was sure of winning the Agricultural Society trophy. The score was 9-7.

Rufus G. Kelly, on behalf of the Huntingdon Agricultural Society presented the trophy and the softball equipment to the winning teams after each final contest.

The players on the winning combinations included:

ORMSTOWN—B. Boyle, M. Smith, G. McAdam, H. McLean, C. French, B. Campbell, J. Murphy, J. Cartier, B. McGerrigle, P. Martin, Scully.

DUNDEE GIRLS—P. Platt, J. Arnold, R. McCartney, J. Thompson, M. McCartney, T. McMillan, D. Fraser, G. Stowell and J. Fraser.

Umpires—I. H. Heath, C. Faille, C. Elder, H. Parker, May.

In order to speed up the games on the last day of the Huntingdon Fair, the Huntingdon Skating Rink in conjunction with Hunter's Electric, installed a sound system which was most useful in clearing the diamond and getting the games started at stipulated time.

Gleaner Nine One Game Away From Championship Of H'don Town League

Chateau Lose First Contest Through Errors—Winning Team Secures Timely Hits in Monday's Tilt—Probable Last Game to be Played Thursday

The Gleaner team are one game away from the championship of the Huntingdon Town League and the McColl Frontenac trophy as the result of their double victory over the Chateau nine on Friday and Tuesday evenings. The third game of this series for the championship will most likely be played on Thursday evening when the Chateau team promise to take the next three games if they can...

On Friday evening the Chateau players made a series of errors at the beginning of the game and throughout the remainder of the contest which made the result of the battle a one-sided affair. The score was 21-11. Hood started on the mound for the victors and was replaced later by Lefebvre, who was not able to stop the Gleaner from accumulating more runs as the game progressed.

The Gleaner team also made several errors in this first game of the final series and both teams' averages will be greatly diminished in their chance for the special prize, which is donated by S. D. Popeck, to the player with the highest fielding and batting average in this series.

Monday's tilt between the finalists was one of the best games seen since the playoffs started three weeks ago. The score at the end of the regular time was 8-4. Both aggregations played good ball with the Gleaner making startling hits at the most opportune time. Pat Ross was slugging everything that came his way with the result that he gathered a homer and a triple to score several runs. Frank Lalonde, the Gleaner's initial sacker, also hit a homer in the first innings with no runners on.

George Hood, who went the whole route for the Chateau, heaved one of his best ball games. Although he was caught on the short end twice on bunts, his delivery was beyond expectations.

Following is the line-up:

GLEANER:—Rene Senecal, Guy MacDonald, Frank Lalonde, "Red" White, Pat Ross, Louis Lalonde, P. Lefebvre, McCallum and E. Prevost.

CHATEAU:—Emile Senecal, Geo. Hingey, John C. Lefebvre, Isale Saumier, L. DeRepentigny, "Chick" Fortune, Remi Galipeau, George Hood, L. Lefebvre.

"The Ticker Tape Murder"

Involuntary Manslaughter

Only the efforts of his parents prevented Donald Gardiner's trial from being a nation-wide sensation; as it was, even with the proceedings hushed as much as possible, it attracted much local interest. On the one hand, Gardiner was a member of a leading family, whose power in the community had to be reckoned with. His parents, shocked beyond measure, stood nobly by him, however, and stinted neither expense nor influence in their efforts to gain an acquittal. On the other hand, the victim was an admittedly criminal character of no particular service to society. Medical evidence supported Gardiner's claim that Farrell had been killed by his fall and that Gardiner had left his prints on the bar while he bent over to examine the body. If his blow had had sufficient strength, Farrell might easily so have been killed against the andirons. But the fact remained that the two men had quarreled, and one of them had met his death during that quarrel.

The jury was lenient and found it involuntary manslaughter; Gardiner was sentenced to a prison term of from two to five years. It was during the trial that the girl displayed her true character. For whatever had occurred, she had been partially responsible; nevertheless, as soon as notoriety touched her erstwhile lover, she utterly deserted him to his fate. On the stand she denied any close acquaintanceship with him or that she was the cause of the disagreement between the two men. Much of her evidence incriminated the prisoner; only because the jury failed to place credence in it did it fail to carry much weight.

The young man's lawyer expressed his opinion that not even a two-year sentence was too great a price to pay to be well rid of her.

When this term was completed, it was obviously impossible for Gardiner to have remained at home, the center of gossip and local scandalmonging. James Gardiner's connections in the East, in regard to rubber had at one time brought him into close contact with the American Motors Corporations, and Philip Nixon in particular, and a friendship had developed between them. It was this connection that enabled Donald to obtain a position as the financier's secretary, the latter having consented for the sake of the father. It was the idea of the old man to give his son another opportunity to settle down, and begin life anew, having been taught a bitter lesson by experience. Because of his wishes, Gilmore now realized, the financier had employed the young man in his office, even while he disapproved of his attitude toward his daughter.

"And yet, I think he did learn his lesson," Mr. Pastor had said. "I'm given to understand that he had been doing most satisfactorily. I wouldn't be surprised if he finally made good, and earns the right to the Gardiner fortune that originally would have been his."

And according to Mrs. Phipps' favorable report of the secretary, Gilmore realized that this was very possibly true. The entire tale confronted him with the problem of deciding what he should believe about the young man's character. This was one point in his favor. Another was the fact that Gardiner was not a fortune hunter. A penniless adventurer would have had much to lose besides a wife if the financier's objections had borne fruit; Gardiner, himself of good family, with the likelihood of being wealthy in his own right, did not seek Eleanor Nixon's wealth. He would forfeit only the girl he loved.

Significant Point

Nevertheless, Gilmore did not believe that these facts weakened Gardiner's possible motive for killing Philip Nixon. Philip Nixon's opposition would have been fatal, whatever view his daughter might take of the secretary's fall from grace. The fact remained that Gardiner, unrestrained and intractable, had killed another man. The detective's knowledge of the law informed him that his quarry had come off most fortunately. Murder was the crime of premeditated killing without any justification. Whenever the deed was done, however, under the stress of a justifiable anger, then the crime was lessened to voluntary manslaughter. A verbal argument such as Gardiner had with his victim, was not enough to lower the magnitude on the crime. And yet, the secretary had been found guilty merely of involuntary manslaughter for killing, through inexcusable negligence!

It was significant that Nixon had met his death in the same way that Farrell had . . ; the heads of both had been crushed by a blow from some heavy weapon.

With all this information, the dilemna had yet to be faced. Either Gardiner was a much-maligned young man who had killed some one through sheer accident, or else he was an innately vicious villain who had committed one and perhaps two murders. It would now be for the girl to swing the balance one way or the other. It was true her judgment was likely to be colored; but that very mercenary shrewdness that prompted her subsequent desertion of the man informed Gilmore that she was canny and capable of drawing conclusions.

It was middle afternoon before he found himself at the door of the new home of the Santells, a bungalow about which there was already an air of neglect.

The little veranda needed sweeping and the garden of dying flowers that fronted it needed weeding. Gilmore required no introduction to be told that the woman answering his ring was the former Ella Denby. She was a youngish hard-eyed woman, whose painted lips were an incongruous contrast to the house dress she wore. The three years that had passed since Gardiner had first met her had not dealt kindly with her; her underlying coarseness was fast becoming apparent on the surface.

Mrs. Richard Santell eyed him suspiciously while she tucked in a few wisps of straggling brown hair.

"Mrs. Santell?" he began. "I'd like to introduce myself and my mission. My name is Gilmore and I've come to make a few inquiries regarding some one whom you once knew quite well, Donald Gardiner. * * *"

He had quickly decided that an appearance of frankness, leavened by a shrewd flattery, would bring best results. The statement appeared to startle her, but she was more curious than alarmed. After a moment, she said quickly:

"Don Gardiner? What 'bout him? What's he been doing now?"

"You know, he's in Philadelphia now?" and as she nodded, "Well, I represent a Philadelphia merchandising concern—the Cornell silk people; I'm their agent in this district. Some weeks ago we employed Mr. Gardiner on the recommendation of the firm for which he last worked. He has proved quite satisfactory to us, but last week a rumor reached us that, though trustworthy, he was some years ago, concerned in some sort of difficulty of the most disgraceful nature. For the sake of our reputation we cannot afford to keep him in our firm, if the rumor is true; and I have been delegated to find out what I can about the matter."

"Well, why do you come to me?" Mrs. Santell asked. "While it's true I knew him I really don't know him as well as all that."

A Bad Temper

Now that he saw the woman, Gilmore was certain that she had sent the wedding announcement to reproach the man who had suffered on her account. It was as though she blamed Gardiner for exposing her to unpleasant publicity and wanted him to know that, despite it, she had come out advantageously for herself. But these thoughts the detective kept to himself.

"I wanted to give Mr. Gardiner a fair trial," he replied warmly, "by seeing some one about it who was quite unprejudiced and who has enough ability to form accurate conclusions and express them sensibly."

As he had hoped, Mrs. Santell applied the compliments to herself.

"Oh, all of that you heard was true enough, I'm sorry to say. Don got himself into an awful jam out here, and he only had himself to blame for it, too. As you say, I guess I could tell you all about it better than some, anyhow. I don't like to make any trouble for Don, but there's no hiding a thing like this. A person who can't hold himself in hand just deserves to get what's coming to him, don't you think?"

And then, as was inevitable, she began to relate the tale Gilmore had already learned, for the sake of justifying the part she had played in it. Her version minimized her own portion in the tragedy, and by so doing she persuaded herself anew that in reality she was in no way responsible for her former lover's death. Gilmore listened intently to her viewpoint as much to the expression and the nuances of her speech as to the actual words she uttered. Callous and resentful that Gardiner's folly should have embroiled her in such an affair, she was at all times selfishly careful not to involve herself too deeply in her own narrative. In all other respects it was an accurate recital of the facts.

"The whole trouble with Donald Gardiner was," she summed up at the conclusion of the account, "he always had his own way. He never was refused anything—nobody ever stopped him from getting anything he wanted. They didn't dare to, I guess, because he was so wild and uncontrollable. He never knew enough to keep his head then. Maybe he is different now, but if he'd have learned some restraint, maybe there wouldn't have been any trouble at all."

"He has a bad temper, then?" Gilmore queried interestedly. "You think that caused all the trouble?"

"I guess it did. I can remember once that he got so furious that he didn't know what he was doing. We were at a club in Cleveland, and drinking a little bit, when a waiter accidentally spilt something on him. I honestly believe he'd have brained him with the seltzer bottle if we hadn't held him. And Bob Farrell—I'm sure he didn't mean to say anything really wrong; still, it'd be just like Don to take it the wrong way and see red. * * *"

"I must say, Mrs. Cantell, that you were lucky to be rid of him. I'm sure my employers will be glad to hear of all this before it is too late."

She appeared to repent slightly for having created such an unfavorable impression.

"Oh, I don't suppose, Mr. Gilmore," she replied, "that it was a bad streak; it was just the way he was brought up. And maybe he's changed, for all I know—you know, two years in prison must be a pretty tough grind."

"That's true," Gilmore remarked, "but it more often breaks a person than makes him."

"I guess that's so, too. It's hard to tell about these things, I suppose. But I don't think Don would have gotten himself into a jam at all if he'd been more used to hard knocks. Now Dick—that's my husband—doesn't have it so easy, but he makes good money on the racetrack; and like me, he enjoys a good time. We'll get along together, I guess; I don't think Don and I would ever have managed * * *"

After that, she began to discuss her personal life, her marriage and the prospects of the future. Gilmore, realizing that he had elicited from her all the information she possessed regarding his suspect, excused himself as soon as it was conveniently possible. He had acquired as thorough a picture of this complicated series of events in the single day as it was possible to acquire with a week of investigation; and the intelligence gained, though bearing only indirectly upon Philip Nixon's death, might well prove invaluable.

The sum and substance of Ella Denby's tale had told rather heavily against the young secretary. Discounting the petty malice that actuated many of her statements, the detective could, nevertheless, not discard it altogether. Where there is smoke, there is fire; and the account of Gardiner's unbridled temper seemed well substantiated by Bennett's story of the quarrel he had overheard in the financier's conservatory. There was no blinking of facts; the balance of the scales was no longer even. The side of Gardiner's discredit overweighed the items on the credit side.

As Gilmore boarded the train for Philadelphia that night, his brief summary of the day's developments was as follows:

"If I could discover that Donald Gardiner had, in some fashion, the opportnity to commit the murder, I would have him arrested at once."

RALPH CONNOR'S GREATEST BOOK TO BE PUBLISHED IN SERIAL

It is seldom that so great a book as Ralph Connor's "Postscript to Adventure" is made available to readers in serial form immediately following its publication. The fact, therefore, that the Family Herald and Weekly Star has secured exclusive publishing rights for this book is indeed interesting news.

"Postscript to Adventure" as many admirers of the late Ralph Connor (Rev. C. W. Gordon) will know, is the last book he wrote, having been completed just before he died. It is an amazing tale built around his lifetime of rich experiences, from his boy-hood days in Glengarry County, Ontario, to his breath-taking adventures during the World War. Critics have called it his most exciting book—as thrilling as "The Sky Pilot".

The Family Herald and Weekly Star is to be congratulated on its foresight in purchasing the rights for "Postscript to Adventure", thus making it possible for over a million readers to enjoy this great book inexpensively in serial form. Instalments start in the Family Herald this month.

"Where are you going with all that sandpaper?"

"I am taking it to my poor grandfather; he has gooseflesh in his wooden leg."

scenes he had taken, principally about Dewittville. Mr. Ken McNair and Mr. Nelson White of the Gleaner augmented this showing through displaying a large number of enlarged pictures with a local significance. Several people and firms interested in photography donated special prizes for the classes. As a result of this effort some beautiful samples of photography were displayed. The honors being well divided between Dr. H. R. Clouston and Dr. Gordon P. Kelly of Montreal.

The amount of space for the photography exhibit will of necessity have to be trebled for 1939. Mr. C. E. Petch, who judged the photography, informed the committee he would be pleased to supply the necessary pictures to portray scenes of local orchards. The pictures have been done in color.

Best Fruit Show On Record

Mr. D. J. O'Connor is chairman of the fruit committee of Huntingdon Fair and is to be congratulated upon the wonderful show produced for this year's fair. Approximately $40 was added to the fruit prize list. This money provided prizes for hampers, boxes and baskets of apples in addition to the usual plates of five apples. The fruit growers are averse to the plates of five apples, because they do not portray the truth as to what an orchard is producing. The fruit growers prefer showing baskets and hampers of apples for they also then know that the exhibitor is showing the apples he has grown in his own orchard and not those from a neighbour. One exhibitor of apples had 30 plates on exhibition yet it was known to the other apple exhibitors that he had not more than 12 varieties of apples grown in his orchard. Another exhibitor with 27 entries on display grew less than half that number of varieties of apples in his orchard. If the fruit exhibit is to be encouraged the exhibitors must be fair with one another, otherwise the show will suffer. If the showing is administered on a fair-to-all basis, more apple growers will be found exhibiting each year. The time to correct the governing rules and regulations is now, so that the fruit show will be greatly increased as the years roll around.

McIntosh and Wealthy apples were the principal varieties shown. Spy and Fameuse apples were not numerous. The showing of apples was very encouraging for the fair.

Vegetables

Some fine vegetables were shown at the Fair, but were they all grown in the fertile gardens of the Chateauguay Valley or were some of the exhibits bought from Montreal markets? This thought is foremost in some minds. It is generally conceded this custom has been practised on more than one occasion at Havelock Fair, and perhaps it is now spreading to Huntingdon. The judges of vegetables can easily determine whether celery or melons and many other vegetables are local or otherwise. When they know it is not local produce they should feel perfectly justified from giving judgment on any entries bearing such an exhibitor's number.

The potatoes were nothing short of perfection. The only criticism offered about the potato exhibit was that they had been washed. The vegetable showing on the whole was very commendable, considering the dry summer experienced.

Domestic Cooking

Mrs. J. D. Lang has again won her supply of McDonald & Robb "Our Best" flour for baking the best loaf of white bread for Huntingdon Fair. How often Mrs. Lang has won the McDonald & Robb prize we do not know off-handed, but it is quite safe to say she has won it more often than any other individual throughout the Chateauguay Valley. Mrs. Lang did not satisfy herself with the one winning on white bread but extended her honors through winning the society prize for best biscuits and Graham biscuits.

Mrs. John Waddell is another champion cook and takes a great deal of pleasure and pride in showing her culinary art at our fall fairs. Mrs. Waddell was rewarded for her efforts, being accorded the Dominion Stores prize for the exhibitor winning the most prize money in bread and cooking. Mrs. Waddell was very successful in winning several of the special prizes. The cooking exhibited was considered very excellent.

Preserves are not an easy thing to judge, yet year after year we find Macdonald College is able to send a judge to Huntingdon Fair to carry out this laborious and exacting task. The preserves, canned fruits and vegetables and home made pickles, jellies, etc., were again numerous and from outward appearances were of high quality. It was amusing to listen to the comments made by some spectators when they viewed the preserves. If the entered bottle of preserves was not of good color it was quickly detected and commented upon. Only the best must be exhibited at our fall fairs if they hope to win prizes.

In the white building the Shawinigan Water & Power Co., had a display of electrical equipment for home and farm. The milk cooling tank appeared to be the captivating exhibit in the eyes of the farmers.

Mr. Albert Howden had a DeLaval Milking unit on display. It also interested many of our dairy farmers. The ladies aids of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and the United Church of Athelstan conducted bazaars and report very commendable financial returns.

The dining hall was well patronized on both days of the Fair. The ladies of Elgin Presbyterian Church served excellent meals. The financial returns showed that nearly $275.00 would be added to the treasury.

Seek to Promote Better Relations Between Industry, Agriculture And Labor in Quebec

(The Public Relations Committee of the Quebec Division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association are preparing a series of articles for the purpose of attempting to promote better relations between industry, agriculture and labor. Pointing out that the broad interests of the three are common, the first of these articles appears herewith):

That the time has come for stock taking in these days of turbulency is evident, since old-established foundations appear to be disturbed, and in the matter of industry, and its partner, labor, since the two factors cannot be divorced, the problem of the consumer arises.

In this province of Quebec there is a special angle to the matter, and this turns us farm-ward. Prior to the war, it was recognized that the farmer was the best customer of industry. Perhaps in considerable measure this still holds good, even if in a varying degree, since with the growth of industry, workmen of one branch of industry have more than ever been able to absorb the production of workmen of another branch of industry. Still, we may assume that the basic foundation of the domestic market is the farming community, and industry, and its ally, the workman, pray that the farmer may be permitted to buy manufactured goods as freely as was the case in normal years.

Industry in Quebec has been spreading out within a comparatively short period. No longer is it a case of the City of Montreal, and the City of Quebec, and perhaps Sherbrooke, but the turn of the century, and specially the last twenty-five years, has seen the rise of such industrial centres—at haphazard—as Drummondville, Shawinigan Falls, St. Hyacinthe, St. Jerome, and others, not to mention the newsprint towns such as Grand'Mere, Three Rivers, La Tuque, and at Hull.

This growth has meant development of agricultural communities which are called upon to feed the growing industrial centres, and without which the rural communities could not have existed.

Hence, it may be taken for granted that without the expanse of industry in the last quarter of a century in this province, there would have been no means of rural subsistence, and, consequently, that industry, within which is embraced labour, that partner which absorbs most of the income of industry, when taxation is ended—may be given credit for the continuation of agriculture.

Industry has been called upon to do much more than this for rural Quebec. It has been called upon to absorb the flow from the farm into the cities, a fact that is painfully apparent in huge "dole" costs, involving higher taxation. The task of industry is consequently not to think in its own individual terms—not to live in a water-tight compartment—but to fit itself into the whole general picture of Quebec life.

One distinguished writer recently said: "If our business system is to preserve the right to continue its contributions to the general welfare, it must learn to interpret itself in deeds and in words that have meaning to others than itself. For it is not what industry can do for itself that matters. Industry's destiny rests and must necessarily rest not on the system's benefits to capital, not on its benefits to labour alone, but in the final analysis on its benefits to that most important group that is the common denominator of all—the consumer, the group that outnumbers and includes all others".

This expresses the matter tersely. We have mentioned the farmers as part of the consumer group, and for the moment may rest there. The importance of the farmers cannot be over-estimated. They require goods; we require their food-stuffs. There must be a balance.

Obviously, farmers as a class want goods at as low a basis as possible, and with lowered price of food-stuffs, this is readily understood. The failing power of purchase of the farmer has created havoc in industrial ranks, since what should prove to be the most lucrative markets has been largely shut off. Does it occur at times to the farmer that were it not that manufacturing in this province has been developed on a large scale, meaning thereby lower costs, because of export markets, that the cost of goods would have risen because of a lessened market? It is on the large overturn that business is enabled to bring down costs, and that the large overturn has succeeded in this direction has been manifest.

Maintenance of prices at as low a basis as possible is consequently essential. Here enters the problem of taxation. Taxation means federal, provincial, and municipal levies. The municipality, for example, which overtaxes is directly striking at the very basis of the system whereby industry seeks to bring goods to the farmers at low costs. The matter is one for pondering by municipal governments and those who elect them.

Our dairy rations are well balanced, made with the best ingredients, as per approved formulas. While increasing milk production these mashes also contribute greatly to the health of cows, containing a correct proportion of minerals as well as laxative and invigorating nutriments. Considering the low prices of our "CHAMPLAIN" dairy rations and results obtained, they certainly represent the best values compared to cost, and consequently are the most advantageous to feed.

It's No Surprise That You're Constipated!

If constipation has you bogged down so you feel tired, sunk, all played out—it's time you asked yourself some questions!

What have you had to eat lately? Just meat, bread, eggs, potatoes? It's no surprise you're constipated! The chances are you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and take a new lease on life! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

A FEW CANDID WORDS ABOUT BANK EARNINGS

Half of one per cent. a year on total assets is not much of a profit margin for any business, corporate or individual.

Yet that is all the "velvet" there is in the business of Canada's chartered banks.

Banks pay interest on personal savings deposits. They charge interest on loans.

The difference is not all "velvet" by any means—for these reasons:

(a) It costs money to operate a bank.
(b) The cash reserves held by the bank earn nothing.
(c) A bank must provide for losses.
(d) Earnings on a great deal of a bank's assets are very low.

More than 25,000 people are employed in Canada's banks. In the last ten fiscal years Canada's chartered banks have paid in wages and salaries, some $376,000,000 — purchasing power distributed over the Dominion.

In the same ten years banks paid in taxes to municipalities $40,831,930; to provinces $14,429,320, and to the Dominion, $24,027,324, a total of $79,288,574.

Banks have other costs, too: Rent on premises; stationery and printing; light, water and fuel; contributions to pensions and group insurance for employees. Depreciation on buildings takes a large amount each year.

Any money a bank pays—taxes, wages or other costs—can come only from the bank's resources—and must be paid in cash. No magic can produce it.

Banking is not all sunshine. It has its cloudy aspects too. Banks must stand ready to pay their creditors—the depositors and note-holders — a hundred cents on the dollar; but banks unfortunately cannot always collect a hundred cents on the dollar! They have losses, inevitably, and must set aside substantial sums to meet them.

A bank must keep itself in such a cash position as to be able to pay you your deposit whenever you see fit to withdraw it.

Chartered banks are required by law to lodge with the Bank of Canada, or hold in Bank of Canada notes, five per cent. of their depositors' funds; but, in practice, they always carry about twice that percentage. Deposits with and notes of the Bank of Canada earn no interest for the chartered banks.

It is necessary also to keep a further amount in short term investments readily convertible into cash. The yield on such investments is low, firstly, because Treasury Bills and other short term securities mature at short date; secondly, because—banks having no monopoly of money or credit — cash reserves of many industrial concerns compete for this type of investment.

Bank earnings depend very largely upon loans, but a bank can lend only when the customer wants to borrow.

Ordinary bank loans in 1929 averaged $1,342,000,000; in 1937 only $731,000,000.

When business falls off or prices slump, businessmen borrow less money. A given volume of business is handled on less money, too. It would take $150,000 to handle 100,000 bushels when wheat is at $1.50 per bushel, but only $100,000 to handle the same volume when the price is $1.00 a bushel.

When ordinary loans are not in demand, money, instead of lying idle in the banks, finds investment in Government bonds. These earn substantially less than ordinary loans.

Very obviously bankers would prefer commercial loans.

Money invested in Government bonds is, however, just as much a loan for the Government's purposes as a loan to a farmer is a credit for his purposes. In 1937 the average of bank loans and investments combined was $2,158,000,000; in 1929, $1,841,000,000.

Thus bank credit in Canada was actually greater in 1937 by $317,000,000 than in the same period of 1929, the boom year.

As with credit, so with cash. As of October, 1937, over $17,000,000 more in bank notes were in the hands of the public than in October of the boom year 1929.

A word with you about dividends.

The Bank Act fixes the par value of bank shares at $100. The average price paid to banks by the shareholders when shares were issued was $165 per share. Of this, $100 has gone to Capital Account, and $65 has been placed in Reserve.

Over many years undivided profits, now amounting to $34 per share, have been left in the business by shareholders and added to reserve, for the greater security of depositors and noteholders.

The average shareholder's investment in Canada's chartered banks now, therefore, amounts to $199 per share. A dividend of say 8 per cent. on the $100 par value is, in fact, only slightly over four per cent. on the money actually invested, or left with the bank by the shareholder.

FAIR ADMISSION RECEIPTS INCREASED BY $99.25

In 1937 the Huntingdon Fair receipts showed a decrease in gate receipts of $103 but 1938 sees this drop regained, for this year the admissions to grounds and dance were $99.25 more than in 1937.

Due to the cool weather during the fair the receipts at the refreshment tents dropped $32.51 over 1937, and the dance was down $10.00, but the total receipts for the fair aggregated $1,138.30 which is $99.74 more than in 1937.

The financial returns prove beyond a doubt that the Fair attendance was considerably increased over recent years.

The expenses in connection with the Fair will be kept well in line with other years. The Fair managed to considerably reduce its debt last year and it is hoped a further reduction will again be made.

The receipts for 1938 were: Thursday admission $185.15; Friday admissions $490.65; Space rentals $33.00; gross sales at refreshment tents $347.50; Dance $82.00; Total $1,138.30.

ALL UNBRIDLED REVENGE IS A BOOMERANG ALWAYS

We live today in a world wracked by revenge. Nations at sword's point. Peoples against peoples. Hate brewing in men's hearts. And yet we hear it said, "Revenge is sweet." We everyday folk are often infected by that hoary sophism. But it mistakes the dangerous side of a fundamentally noble trait of human nature, self-defense. Unbridled revenge is about the bitterest thing on earth.

An old schoolmate of mine used to brag, "Nobody can do me dirt and get away with it." Years later, when a business associate tricked him out of a profit, he spent his best five years getting even, instead of settling out of court, as urged, and fixing his mind on his own growing enterprise. He ruined his enemy through court battles and ceaseless personal abuse. But he also bankrupted himself with legal fees and through neglect of his own affairs. He wrecked his health and character as well. Recently he died, a friendless misanthrope.

Revenge is a boomrang, as this man found too late. Mind you, we must all fight for our rights at times—but revenge goes far past that. Self-defense breeds self-respect. Revenge kills it. "Biting off the nose to spite the face" is a recipe for ruin. Some famous men learned so by experience. Benedict Arnold won a flying start for the front row in the Hall of Fame. But instead of taking it in his stride when envious foes tried vainly to undermine him, he fed a grudge until it burst. Arnold betrayed the country he believed against him, and fled to lonely exile for life. Aaron Burr lacked one vote of being the nation's president. Then he fought and killed Alexander Hamilton, who had swung that vote against him, and ended his own career.

Revenge holds another irony. It so often proves unnecessary. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord," wrote an ancient Hebrew sage. No mere pious platitude. An anxiom of human psychology that is too little understood. Substitute "Nature" for "the Lord," if you desire. Those given to harming others bear within themselves the seeds of their own destruction. When a man injures you, it's often better to let nature take her course. That wise old lady is pretty sure to do a juster and more artistic job of punishment than you.

"When I was a youngster," a business leader told me the other day, "I worked for a firm managed by a roaring Simon Legree. He got so tough I couldn't take it, and I quit, swearing revenge. Luckily I found a better place and it was ten years before I saw Simon again. He had become a prematurely broken old man, holding a dinky clerks job. His arrogance, that had so nearly broken me, had cost every good position he ever had. I could tell you a dozen such stories. I'm getting almost superstitious about it."

But there's a right side to that basic trait of human nature, which going wrong, leads to revenge. Keeping on that side calls for a self-restraint that tests charcter. When you must curb a foe, do it promptly and effectively, but stop there. "Never break your enemy's rice bowl," says a Chinese proverb. It will only turn your satisfaction into regret and mar your own character. Generosity to a thwarted foe takes the wind out of his sails instead of forcing the blast of his fury until you have started something you can't stop.

Capitalize your wrongs when possible, instead of avenging them. When you find you have an enemy, do some self-searching. Perhaps it's your own fault. You may unearth some bad habit of your own whose curing will pay dividends.

Last year a leader in a certain public cause found himself blocked by a man he had thought an ally. It puzzled his until he recalled that he himself had taken the whole credit for a piece of work the other man had suggested. He had unwittingly formed the habit of "hogging the limelight." He reformed just in time to save his leadership.

Learn to sublimate your grudge. A well-known inventor and manufacturer began life as a poor orphan in the home of a rich uncle who abused him and denied him an education. He decided to show his uncle. Starting as laborer in a machine shop and studying nights, he won wealth and culture. Many an abused boy has thus made injury a spur to success.

Revenge is what we call that sturdy horse, Self-Defense, when it runs amuck. Curb it and train it to stick to the road, and it will carry you far.

"Wait a minute, fella, I'm going to the big city, too."

"So what?"

"Sow wild oats, you dope!"

How is Your Frame of Mind?

Worry is A Bugbear And is Mostly Wasted

It has been very wisely said that the "picture of health" requires the proper "frame of mind." An improper mental attitude soon makes itself manifest in physical conditions which detract not only from charm and appearance, but also may really endanger the health of the individual concerned. We know for instance, in the case of a person with a so-called "nervous breakdown," that, while practically all of the trouble of this individual has been of a mental kind, his body simply gives way and it takes weeks, sometimes months, of careful nursing to build it up again.

After giving a little thought to the matter, we also realize that if we really wish to be popular among our friends and to be healthy and happy, the way is open to this objective through a wholesome and sensibe mental attitude.

1. Worry, the Bugbear:

One of the common difficulties in maintaining a sensible mental attitude is worry, about which we hear so much.

Most of all worry is wasted. A great writer has said that there are just two things about which a person should not worry: first, about the thing that cannot be helped, for all the worry in the world won't change the situation; second, about the thing that can be helped, for, if it can be helped, he can get busy and do something about it. This may sound obvious, but in an actual test it is really good advice.

Of course, it is not so easy to train the mind as it is to train the muscles, but it is possible to develop a normal mental life. Mental activity that is hurried, driven, anxious, depressed or charged with worry is injurious to the body, as well as to the mind.

Sometimes, it is amusing to consider the things about which people worry. The important ones can be listed as follows:

(a) Worry over what we have done.

(b) Worry over what we are going to do.

(c) Worry over the opinions of others.

(d) Worry over health.

Worry over what we have done is very common. Why? All people make mistakes and, if we have made mistakes, they should constitute lessons and not be a subject for regret and self-accusation. The interesting thing about this type of worry is that it is more destructive usually than the thing which is worried about. Many people, for instance, wonder if they have locked the door to the house, when they go to the theatre. Probably it would be better for a burglar to break in and steal the things in the house than to endanger one's health and mental comfort by worrying during the entire evening.

Obviously, when one worries about a task that is to be done, one destroys, at least somewhat, the power to do the task well. The sensible way to do is to give a groper amount of attention to the thing to be done and then to do it. Sometimes important problems have to be considered and they are not to be solved perhaps at once, nor do they admit of analysis over a long period of time. Possibly one may make mistakes; others do and have made mistakes. This is all a part of the game of living. Don't worry.

Worry concerning the opinions of others is very much over-rated as an important factor in our lives. As we are all going to be criticized anyway, we cannot afford to be sensitive to criticism because of its danger to mental health. An intelligent way to respond to the opinions of others is to be thankful for criticism and, if it is good, to use it; if it is destructive and silly, then it should be discarded. Another way of viewing the situation, according to an eminent health authority, is to forget unreasonable and foolish criticisms, but to swallow our pride, bend our knee, and do the right thing, if the criticism is just.

Obviously, worry over health will not improve it. The usual effect is to depress both physical and mental activities. Again common sense is to be used. If you think you you have anything wrong with you, seek good medical advice and discover what the actual condition of your body is. Having secured this advice, act upon it and proceed to carry out health habits, adapting them to your living in such a way that your health will be improved.

2. What You Can Do:

After all, most of the things about which we worry are such that we are reminded of the words of the old Chinese philosopher: "The legs of the stork are long—the legs of a duck are short—you cannot make the legs of the duck long—neither can you make the legs of the stork short—why worry?"

It has been well said by one of our health authorities that it is not the great sword thrusts of affliction that strike people down and cause them to become confused in their human relationships, but rather the pinpricks of worry and cumulative friction which cause difficulties so great that the balance between human beings is badly disturbed.

There are a number of factors in proper living that are highly important. They are skill, honesty, diligence, sportsmanship, courage, self-control, faithfulness, loyalty to high ideals and love for play. These can all be acquired by training.

The development of wholesome mental habits is possible by keeping a calm, sane and intelligent attitude in an unimportant situation. The so-called "third class" worries—the pinpricks of life—should be ignored.

The healthy mind requires wholesome mental habits. These can be gained only by practice and by patient attention to their development. They are confidence, faith in the goodness of life, open-mindedness and unselfishness.—The Blue Bell.

Household Note

"What do you find best for cleaning windows?"

"I have tried lots of things, but I find my husband best."

"Gosh! I wish I knew what to do with a drunk."

"Well, for heaven's sake, divorce him."

"Don't be silly. He's not my husband."

"No? Then marry him!"

TOOTH IN LUNG

Smoking his pipe, William MacDonald, a farmer near Antigonish, N.S., took several deep, satisfying puffs, when he felt a trickle in his throat. He coughed, and up came a tooth. Four years ago, after having several teeth pulled, MacDonald had considerable trouble breathing and thought he was developing a case of asthma. There were also symptoms of tuberculosis. Now he knows the whole trouble was caused by the tooth in his lung.

OTHERS' WINDOWS

I looked through others' windows
  On an enchanted earth
But out of my own window—
  Solitude and dearth.
And yet there is a mystery
  I cannot understand—
That others through my window
  See an enchanted land!

—Jessie B. Rittenhouse.

It is reported that 590 millions of acres of land in the United States, representing 30 per cent of the total area, have been subjected to sheet erosion, resulting in a loss of nearly three-quarters of the surface soil. Gullying has been responsible for the practical destruction for agricultural purposes of 115 million acres.

Wifey—Beast, you have a naughty past!

Hubby—You're telling me!

Wifey—No, I'm telling a judge.

MISUNDERSTOOD!

One fine day this spring Salesman James Sweeney (Southam Press) had a job which called for an oil painting of Florence Nightingale, the famous nurse. The deadline called for quick action. From the movie companies photographs could be obtained. The public library could supply magazine illustrations galore. But no oil paintings.

Following up a happy though, Mr. Sweeney called a large Toronto hospital to see if an oil painting of the famous lady chanced to hang in the halls. Rather breathlessly he asked the switchboard operator: "Do you happen to have a Florence Nightingale?"

"Sorry," replied the efficient lady-of-the-plugs, "there is no patient here by that name. You might try—"

Breaking in impatiently, Collector Sweeney explained, "We mean a picture of Florence Nightingale."

Without a pause the switchboard operator crooned, "Just a moment please. I'll connect you with the X-ray Department."

Rush or no rush, James hung up on that one, muttering, "Don't bother, thanks. We'll try somewhere else."

Quebec's Market

If you sell your goods in Quebec, you could, with advantage, take note of some recent comments made by Mr. Rene Morin on this French-Canadian market. This industrial and financial leader pointed out that Quebec was no longer an agricultural province, for there are now nearly twice as many people living in urban areas as there are living on farms. After deduction of the cost of raw materials, of fuel and power, the net value of products manufactured in the Province is $380,453,666. Wages paid to the 180,000 people engaged in manufacturing these products amount to over $160 million. The actual value of the agricultural production of the Province, on the other hand, is only about $200 million. In other words, the value of manufacturing in terms of dollars is worth nearly double the agricultural wealth. Quebec manufactures 85% of the tobacco consumed in Canada, 60% or more of the cotton textiles, silk goods, shoes and men's ready-to-wear, as well as 53% of the women's ready-to-wear and 45% of the railroad rolling stock. These are but a few of the major industries of the Province, which obviously depend for their very existence upon the national market.

No separatist, Mr. Morin also pointed out that the French-speaking Canadians in Quebec represented but about a fifth of the country's population and that the Province's industries were inseparately bound up with the rest of the Dominion. If only on an economic basis, Quebec needs duty free entry of her industrial goods into the other eight provinces — Confederation. — Canadian Business.

KILBAIN

Misses Helen Donnelly and Rita Donnelly of Saranac Lake, N.Y., also Mrs. J. B. Myers and Mrs. Ella O'Reilly of St. Agnes were callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bannon on Saturday last.

Mr. Raymond Smythe returned to Montreal on Monday where he has secured a position.

Word has been received by Miss Madeline Bannon from the Eliminations Exams which she passed with honors.

A very pleasant time was spent on Friday evening husking corn at the home of Mr. Francois Trépanier. Cards and dancing were afterwards enjoyed after which dainty refreshments were served.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Thomas McKenna of Malone, N.Y., formerly Edna Hall of Huntingdon.

"Mrs. Newrich crashed into society," remarked the blonde. And the brunette nodded, "Yes, she wasn't used to highly polished wax floors."
