Ten injured

Four die in bus-truck collision near Cookshire

TRUCK — Above is seen the frame of the tractor underneath the trailer as well as part of the truck cab shell at the left. The accident occurred yesterday near Cookshire.

ONLOOKERS — Curious onlookers view destruction done to the passenger bus. In the background is seen the truck trailer.

COOKSHIRE — Four people were killed instantly and another ten were injured yesterday morning when a bus collided with a tractor trailer just west of here.

The dead are four women, all passengers of the Autobus Drummondville Ltee. vehicle, which was headed from Lac Megantic to Sherbrooke on a daily run. They are Mrs. Simone Fortier, 53, and Mrs. Simone Longchamps, 58, both of Lac Megantic, Mrs. Grazielle Dionne, 66, of Drummondville and Mrs. Elizabeth Kent, a 73-year-old Bury resident.

The drivers of the vehicles both managed to come out of the accident with their lives, after what was apparently an almost complete head-on collision. The bus driver, 27-year-old Rene Cote of Nantes and truck driver Emile Gagne, 39, of East Hereford were both in serious condition at the University Medical Center (CHU) on the Stoke Road.

Seven of the other eight passengers on the bus were still in hospital overnight. They were Pierre Duchesneau, 19, of Scotstown; Carole Dufresne of Sherbrooke; Majella Poulin of Bury; Robert Boulanger, 23, Laureat Perreault, Loiset Danseur, 38, and Colombe Vallee, 30, all of Lac Megantic. The person released last night from CHU was Heliodor Perron, 66, of Lac Megantic.

The bus, heading west towards East Angus on Route 253, received heavy damage to the front and driver's side and seats were torn out inside. The driver, Cote, has been working for the Bourgeois bus company for three years and had never had an accident, according to company general manager Claude Simard. The accident occurred at about 9:20 a.m. on a straight stretch of road just on the town limits. A provincial police spokesman said the road was in good condition, and was not covered with ice.

The truck, leased to Marcel Lauzon of East Hereford, was apparently heading into Cookshire at the time of impact. The tractor of the semi-trailer was totally demolished. Somehow, it turned completely around and was facing towards the back of the trailer when it landed down an eight foot embankment. The cab part of the tractor was lying near the wreckage of the truck and part of the motor was resting on the road when the first people arrived on the scene.

Quebec Police Force officers from Cookshire and Sherbrooke 'urgence' were at the scene until the vehicles were towed away around 1:30 p.m. yesterday.

The Cookshire QPF is handling the investigation into the cause, which is still very sketchy.

Clamor over SIU donations spreads on several fronts

OTTAWA (CP) — The clamor over Seafarers' International Union political donations spread rapidly on several fronts Wednesday.

Among the developments that took place were:

—Disclosure by two Progressive Conservative MPs that they, as well as Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, Labor Minister John Munro and former labor minister Martin O'Connell, had received election campaign contributions from the union.

—Attacks by both Mr. Allmand and Justice Minister Otto Lang on the integrity of Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic member of the Ontario legislature, who last week first suggested impropriety in federal ministers accepting such donations.

—A report in the Globe and Mail quoting an unnamed Ottawa police spokesman as alleging he had a tape recording which showed that Mr. Munro had solicited a campaign donation from the union—exactly the opposite of what Mr. Munro says happened.

Police sources questioned here Wednesday night denied any knowledge of such a tape recording.

In interviews outside the Commons Wednesday, Michael Forrestal (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) and Robert McCleave

(PC—Halifax-East Hants) both maintained that their receiving donations for the July 8 election campaign from the SIU was a far different thing than Mr. Munro accepting such a donation.

SUPPORTED CAUSES

Mr. Forrestal said he had received $500 and Mr. McCleave admitted receiving $200 from the union—both for supporting causes in which the SIU believes. Both said the money was offered voluntarily and without obligation to the SIU.

The union has acknowledged it had a $10,000 fund available for contributions to various political candidates in the election.

Mr. Munro also has acknowledged receiving $500 from the union without strings attached and Mr. Allmand says he got $500 on the same basis.

But, while the two Conservatives and Mr. Allmand say they are keeping the donations, which they find nothing wrong, Mr. Munro says he returned in September the amount of money he received in June.

Although he said he knew nothing specific regarding allegations by Dr. Shulman of bribery, violence and intimidation within the union, Mr. Munro said he had second thoughts about the propriety of accepting the money.

Between catcalls, jeers and pointed questions, he told the Commons Wednesday his decision to return the money "was a value judgment I made" because he feared his accepting it would not be understood generally.

3 apprehended in Len Pub breakin

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — Lennoxville police apprehended three men yesterday morning around 3 a.m. who had broken into the Len Pub Inc. at 83 Queen St.

One juvenile and two young adults were arrested after they were caught inside the pub after they had gained access by breaking the front door window.

Constables Peter Martin and Larry Wilcox were on patrol, checking the local businesses when they spotted something suspicious at the pub. The officers walked inside and found one intruder hiding upstairs, while the other two were hiding in the basement. They had apparently taken about $80 in small bills and change from the cash register, which they had broken into.

The two were of legal age, Paul Galvin, 21, and Daniel Samson, 18, and the 17-year-old minor were all charged with breaking and entering. The latter appeared in juvenile court yesterday, while the other two were taken to Sherbrooke sessions court.

Tentative settlement could move grain

OTTAWA (CP) — A tentative contract settlement that could start grain moving again was reached Wednesday, but an angry union official said a premature announcement by Treasury Board President Jean Chretien has threatened the pact.

The settlement between treasury board and food inspectors came with about a week to 12 days left in the Great Lakes shipping season and an estimated 50 per cent of domestic supplies for eastern Canada locked up in Thunder Bay or points west.

Mr. Chretien announced the agreement—which must be ratified by union members—in the Commons. When he released the information, a memorandum of understanding was not signed.

The minister said the agreement provided for an 18-per cent pay raise in a 15-month contract. But the agreement provides for a lump-sum payment of $470, a 15-per cent pay increase back to July 29 and a further pay raise of three per cent April 1, 1975. The proposed contract would end Nov. 9, 1975.

That would provide the employees who now average $10,638 annually with a substantially larger increase.

The union urged their striking members, including 222 grain inspectors and meat, fruit and vegetable graders in several cities, to return to work today.

SOME REFUSE

When Thunder Bay grain inspectors heard of the announcement by Mr. Chretien, they said they would not return to their jobs, a union spokesman said.

Moslem pilgrims die in air crash

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Parachutists were dropped on a rocky hill today where a chartered Dutch airliner loaded with Moslem pilgrims crashed and burned, the airline reported. Police said apparently none of the 191 persons reported aboard survived.

The parachutists were dropped after helicopters were unable to land at the crash site because of continuing bad weather. A spokesman said persons in the helicopters saw no survivors.

The DC-8 of the Dutch charter line Martinair was carrying Indonesian Moslems on a pilgrimage to Mecca, Islam's holy city in Saudi Arabia. It crashed in a rainstorm Wednesday night about 70 miles southwest of Colombo in an area known locally as the Seven Virgins for the seven rugged peaks dotting the landscape.

The pilot was preparing to land at Colombo's Bandaranaike airport, and police said he gave no indication of any trouble.

Trudeau-Ford talks centre on oil

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and U.S. President Ford discussed each other's oil concerns Wednesday but came away with no apparent change in each other's point of view.

The discussions were part of their first meeting ever and included the announced Canadian intention to phase out exports to the U.S.

The two national leaders held a two-hour meeting in the president's White House oval office, the first of two sessions of wide ranging discussions.

If there was one clear message that came out of the discussions, described variously as warm, frank and friendly, it was this: Canada's decision to phase out exports is unchangeable although there will be discussions with Americans during the eight-year phaseout period on how it will be done.

Trudeau explained Canada's diminishing oil reserve position; Ford expressed support for the position of 17 congressmen who expressed fear for the future of border state refineries.

The prime minister was expected to reiterate the Canadian position this morning when he met with a group of senators. Oil was only one of a variety of subjects discussed by the two leaders who devoted half their time to international matters.

Another issue, barely touched upon, was that of beef and pork quotas imposed by the United States in response to beef quotas established by Canada.

In this case, both men expressed confidence that officials who met here last week and will meet again in Ottawa in January can find a solution to the situation.

The prime minister, who arrived here Wednesday morning, also attended a working dinner along with 27 other U.S. and Canadian officials, including External Affairs Minister Allan Rock.

Both said their meetings were successful.

Ford talked of differences between the two countries and added: "I feel that our meeting today was one of the most constructive, one of the most friendly, and with each of us expressing where we had differences."

Trudeau invited Ford to visit

Canada and continue the informal consultations that marked the days of former-president Richard Nixon.

In reply to the invitation Ford said: "I look forward to subsequent meetings with you to broaden our personal friendship and to expand our two national relationships."

LISTS TOPICS

Ivan Head, foreign affairs adviser to the prime minister, and Arthur Hartman, an assistant secretary of state, said other subjects of discussion included:

The Vladavostok meeting between Ford, secretary of state Henry Kissinger and Soviet leaders, defence, world and domestic economics, trade, environment and even creation of a park on the Yukon-Alaska border.

The prime minister made something less than a splash here. Local newspapers barely mentioned the visit Wednesday. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who started a formal visit today, was getting more news coverage.

But Ford and Trudeau appeared content, praising both Canadian-American friendship and decisions about future consultations in their dinner time exchange toasts.

While oil apparently took only a small portion of the talks, it was the one subject that interested reporters most. And under questioning, Hartman and Head gave slightly different answers, possibly indicating some confusion on the part of officials of both countries.

OPINIONS DIFFER

Talking of the phaseout of Canadian exports, Hartman mentioned the final decision on the matter has yet to be taken by Canada.

But Head said there is no question about the Canadian decision—exports will be reduced to 800,000 barrels a day in January and 650,000 in July.

Some indication of the concern over Canadian oil supply was given earlier Wednesday when Interior Secretary Rogers Morton briefed White House reporters. He was asked about the effect of the Canadian oil policy and replied: "Over time, as they develop their pipeline, this will probably give us some supply problems that we will have to make up from other areas."

Sherbrooke hit by epidemic of minor crimes

SHERBROOKE (RH) — An epidemic of relatively serious crimes hit Sherbrooke last week, typical, according to a municipal court official, of the general crime upswing that occurs prior to the Christmas season.

Two Sherbrooke men were sentenced to two years in prison last week — one for breaking and entering and conspiring to commit a crime, the other on a straight conspiracy charge.

The two, Donald Roy and Jacques Ouellet, were sentenced in sessions court to the two year terms to be served out in Cowansville. A third, Rene Dube, was put on a year's probation for his breaking and entering offence.

Another man, Gerard Lessard, was found guilty of escaping from custody and was given an additional six months in jail after he was recaptured recently.

Seven men were arrested on charges of theft last week, drawing penalties ranging from three months to a year and a half.

Of the seven, three had their trials deferred to a later date. Roland Guay and Michel Gagne will hear the charges brought against them on January 9, 1975. Laurier Beauregard will stand trial on December 6.

Meanwhile, Yvon Paquette was sentenced to three months in prison on a charge of theft. Denis Durant was given six months, while Guy Jutras was ordered to pay a fine of $1,000 or to spend a year and a half in jail.

Six individuals faced accusations of fraud and acting under false pretenses. These were: Ross Crawford, who did not appear, and Normand Pelletier, who also failed to make an appearance before the judge, Germain Lavallee, who was sentenced to two concurrent six month jail terms. Pierre de Vabre, whose trial was postponed until January 12, Raymond Lachance, to appear in court February 7, and Serge St. Louis, who will be on trial December 17.

In the same vein, Rene Laflamme was given a year in prison on a count of forgery and possessing false documents. Assault charges brought four persons to trial over the last week. These local residents were: Roger Lavigne, on two counts, to be tried January 29. Michel Paquette, fined $100 or told to spend 30 days in prison. Ulric Cloutier, who was defaulted for not appearing and Denis Compagnat, scheduled for a January 15 trial.

One man was charged with possessing stolen goods. In a trial set for December 20, Richard Fisette will have his day in court on that charge.

Also to appear on December 20, is Marcel Biron, accused of causing property damage.

Three men were accused of sex-related crimes in the last week of November. Denis Lefebvre did not appear in court when charges of indecent assault and indecent exposure were brought against him. He was also accused of causing grievous bodily harm.

Similarly, Denis Crispin was fined $25 or given the option of spending between eight and 15 days in prison for indecent exposure, and Jean Lemay, for the same offence, had his trial postponed until January 30.

Jean Brunelle, accused of possessing unregistered arms, was fined $50 or eight to 30 days in jail, while in another permit incident, Patrice Laliberte was also fined $50 or eight to fifteen days in prison for carrying a gun without a permit.

Another local citizen was found driving a car without a permit.

Andre Varasse was similarly charged $50 or eight to 15 days.

Drugs accounted for three arrests in the Sherbrooke area. Those accused were: Pierre Demers, fined $50 or 15 to 30 days. Patrice Pelletier, who received the same sentence, and Robert Dube, who had his trial postponed.

The remaining offences — and there were many of them — were charges of impaired and dangerous driving — a symptom of the approaching holiday season. In all, 36 Sherbrooke residents were arrested on these counts, receiving sentences ranging from $50 to $150 fines or between eight days and six months in prison.

TORONTO (CP) — Gold shares rebounded from recent sharp losses but other prices on the Toronto stock market closed mixed in light trading Wednesday.

The gold index rose 9.77 to 376.85. It fell 40 points Tuesday following news that the United States will sell gold next month. Analysts attributed the rise Wednesday, in part, to a statement by the South African finance minister that the country might withhold gold from the free market.

EDMONTON (CP) — Small business financing is booming in Alberta, says L. D. G. Peters, Edmonton manager for RoyNat Ltd.

The company has more than $22 million outstanding in the province.

During the last year, the Edmonton office took on 36 new clients in the lending and leasing fields and hopes to do a total of $8 million to $9 million in new business for the year.

The firm has investments in "just about any town you can name," says Mr. Peters, who wants to change the myth that most private lenders will not go into the smaller communities.

The ratio is about 50-50, he says, with far stiffer competition in the major areas.

RoyNat lends money for a variety of things, including refinancing, mergers and acquisitions—"especially in Alberta where we are seeing a lot of expansion by way of takeovers"—leasing of equipment and acquisition of facilities.

LEND IT ALL. "We can lend up to over 100 per cent on fixed assets," says Mr. Peters. "And if we feel there is a possibility of growth, then we will take a position."

The firm is not primarily interested in equity financing and will do so only to assist a client, he says. They will seldom take more than 15 per cent of a deal and although eight per cent of their investments deferred involve equity, it is normally convertible debentures or deferred shares.

"Our equity is mainly taken in the way of options," he says. "There is no doubt that the biggest problem facing a firm trying to get started."

"The businessman doesn't want to give away a portion of his business, but at the same time he wants access to capital."

In British Columbia, the Industrial Development Bank and RoyNat have worked together on several deals and are looking at the possibility in Alberta. The firm is also looking at working with the Alberta Opportunity Co. (AOC).

DOING THEIR JOB. "AOC is one of the most well-run government agencies we've met," says Mr. Peters. "They are doing their job by the act."

Nevertheless, there is plenty of business to go around.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished mixed Wednesday in an erratic session that saw investors swayed by recession worries on the one hand and bargain-hunting opportunities and optimism for an end to the coal strike on the other.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished below the 600 mark for the second straight session, closing up 2.03 at 598.64. Tuesday's close of 596.61 was the Dow's lowest since Oct. 4, when it hit a 12-year low of 584.56.

Impressive service

BURY — The annual Remembrance Day service was held at the Cenotaph on Sunday, November 10, with an unusually large attendance, due in some measure to the pleasant sunny weather.

The service opened with the "Call to Remembrance" given by the officiating officer F.O. Clayton Grey, followed by prayers in English and French by Rev. M.C. Jones and Father Breton respectively.

Accompanied by Glenn Coates, Mrs. Douglas Harrison led in the singing of the hymn "O God our Help in Ages Past."

Mr. Robert Fitzsimmons, representing Mayor Osborne Quinn, who was unable to be present, gave a most inspiring address appropriate to the occasion.

Mrs. Wright Goodenough, representing the mothers of the fallen, laid the first wreath at the Cenotaph, followed by the laying of wreaths by members of the organizations and friends in town.

The Last Post was sounded by Bugler Jean Paul Melenfort. Major Stanley Semp taking the salute and march past at the Cenotaph. Sgt. K. E. Tarrant read the names of those veterans who had given all that they had or hoped to have to ensure to future generations the freedom we enjoy today.

Members of the Legion extend special thanks to the students of Pope Memorial School for selling poppies, a most appreciated service.

Says day-care needs more government aid

SHERBROOKE (RH) — A local non-profit day-care centre is distressed over new government rulings which will affect its operation.

In one of many press conferences held throughout the province Monday night, Louise Andree Boisvert, a worker at the day-care centre located at 455 Montreal St., declared that Lise Bacon, the Quebec Minister of Social Affairs, has an unrealistic view of the problems facing such institutions.

"The department of social affairs has opted for a scheme to subsidize parents for the cost of providing their children with day-care services," she explained, "but Miss Bacon's system helps only the most underprivileged families, and does nothing to aid the large group of middle-class wage earners who also need day-care facilities."

The centre on Montreal St. is the only non-profit organization in the city, and is the only centre to be formally affiliated with SOS day-care, a syndicate of day-care centres throughout the province which have banded together to protest the Quebec government's stand on the issue.

"Almost half the day-cares in the province have been forced to close as a result of the new government policies," Ms. Boisvert went on. "The new system allows for a maximum subsidy of only $4.00 per child. That's only for the poorest of families. But our operating costs force us to charge $6.00 per child. We want the government to consider giving us $8.00 per child. That would help us defer some of the higher operating expenses."

Even better, Ms. Boisvert believes, would be a system in which the government would pay a standard sum of $8.00 for each available place per day, to be given to day-care centre operators at the beginning of each year.

"I don't see why it can't be done that way," Ms. Boisvert mused. "After all, hospitals are subsidized for the number of beds — not for the number of patients. We should receive the same treatment."

SOS day-care officials maintain that it is every mother's right to place her children in the hands of trained day-care professionals.

"This right must be exercised without question," Ms. Boisvert affirmed. "Right now, mothers are the victims of the media. They're kept in blinders by television and radio propaganda on the advantages of staying at home. They need the opportunity to get out of the house."

Moreover, day-care workers believe that their centres work toward the children's good as well.

"It's a valuable experience for the kids," another worker stated, "to be able to mix with their peers: to be exposed to others."

At present, the centre is providing a service for 18 children who come from 15 families, but the workers are extremely discouraged with the support they have been receiving from the government.

"We've been having money troubles, permit troubles and building troubles," Ms. Boisvert sighed. "We haven't yet received the official permit to let us remain open. It's a long bureaucratic struggle. First the building was examined by city health and building permit officials, but what happened after that, we don't know. We've been calling and calling to find out what progress is being made, but no one can provide us with a straight answer. They always tell us that they're moving as fast as they can. I don't think any of the officials know what they're doing either. In the meantime, we could be closed down tomorrow for not having a permit."

The $5,000 government grant that they have been awarded has proven equally elusive.

"The money is there," Ms. Boisvert exclaimed, "but we have yet to see any of it. We've had to buy materials and supplies, and make minor repairs in the building. Even things like fire extinguishers — a necessity — cost $60. All of this has been coming out of our pockets." The four day care workers have not received a salary since they began their operations in September.

"In any event, the grant is too small," Ms. Boisvert pointed out. "We have four workers, and we can't make do with any less. Kids need close supervision. If anyone is off sick, we face a real problem. With our present staff, the grant doesn't even provide us with minimum wage."

Ms. Boisvert said that at present, the centre must rely on volunteer workers to remain in operation.

Says more day-care needed

OTTAWA (CP) — About 600,000 children of working mothers need full-time, government-supervised day care—but aren't getting it, says a Canadian Council on Social Development report.

Philip Hepworth, council program director, says in the report there were only 26,500 in full-time day care in 1973.

But one-quarter of the 2.4 million children under six had working mothers "so there is an immediate demand for more than 600,000 full-time day care places."

The report reviews what current social services provide. It will be published early next year. A chapter on day-care services was carried in the November-December issue of Canadian Welfare, a magazine published by the council.

The report says that even if two-thirds of children of working mothers are looked after in their own homes by relatives or others, about 200,000 should get full-time day care immediately.

Of these children, Mr. Hepworth said in an interview, it is a "reasonable guess they are acutely in need of day-care services."

OTHERS DESERVING

The remaining 400,000 children of working mothers also deserve full-time day care, although they may be looked after by relatives at home now, he said.

Some four- and five-year-old children of working parents attend elementary school kindergarten, getting half-day day care. But Mr. Hepworth indicated the demand is for full-time day care for these children.

He noted the Royal Commission on the Status of Women concluded in 1970 that governments should provide day care. But recent evidence "suggests an enormous gap between what governments have provided or are willing to support and the actual demand."

Governments should be responsible for day care and pay some of the costs, he said. Employers of parents with children in day care could provide facilities or pay part of the cost of day care.

WON'T PLEASE

Mr. Hepworth said he is aware his proposal won't please women's rights groups who want full-time day care for all children.

"I'm trying to take a fairly reasonable line in terms of what governments are going to say," he said.

He suggests that every mother of a four- or five-year-old should be able to put her child in public schools if she wishes. There should be universal part- or full-time day care for these children—available on request.

Stanstead zoning under study

STANSTEAD (IH) — Mr. Nadeau of Lemieux-Carignan of Sherbrooke was at the December 2 meeting of the Stanstead Municipal Council to speak with council concerning professional zoning of the municipality. A study is to be made by the company. After the New Year the company will meet with council at which time the decision will be taken regarding zoning.

In the past, salary increases to municipal employees has been made in the spring. But now with the fiscal year running January to January, it was agreed to do this in January, 1975 for that year. The amount recommended by Allan Wing, chairman of the finance committee, was approved to the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Therese Winter, the maintenance chief, John Wilson, and his assistant, Larry Markwell. They will also be given a Christmas bonus. The salary increases brings the salaries up to the present living standards.

Stanstead Village is also to have a revised lighting program on all streets. A quotation was studied from Mr. Royer of Quebec Hydro. Starting in January work will start. All lights will be mercury vapor and will cost about $2,500 to maintain annually.

A representative from the Jehovah Witness Kingdom Hall was at the meeting and asked to be removed from the school valuation roll. This being a ceremony, the secretary treasurer will so inform the Protestant school board. According to law the building is exempt from municipal and school tax.

Insurance coverage for municipal-owned properties and liability is to be increased. Two tenders were opened and accepted from LePoidevin and Poulin. The municipality has a new three ton 1973 truck, plus a new tractor and some accessories.

A sum of $200 was granted to the Community Youth Center and $400 to the Ursuline Convent for skating privileges on their rink.

A lawyer's letter was read concerning the case of the municipality vs. Eugene and Philbert Roy. It was the decision of the Municipal Court Judge that the gas tanks on the Roy property in Stanstead, established in a residential zone, must be removed by the Roes between November 11 and December 11.

Because Christmas light bulbs disappear from the decorated tree at the registry building, it was the decision of council to have a large wreath on the balcony for their Christmas decoration.

Giving the financial picture to date, Allan Wing, the chairman said the municipality is in good condition. There remains another month before the year closes but councillor Wing forecasts no increase in taxes for 1975.

News briefs from the Border

BOUNDARY (IH) — Judge Bergeron, of the Municipal Court in Rock Island, serving the Three Villages has dismissed the case between Perkins-Cross and Michael Whitehouse concerning a trailer located on Hyatt Street, Stanstead. The charges were that the trailer was placed in a residential zone illegally. The judge dismissed the case on the grounds that the trailer was legally located on the street, according to the Municipality of Stanstead by-laws.

Transport funds

RICHMOND (RH) — The county of Richmond has been awarded $272,500 by the ministry of transport for the 1974-75 fiscal year, liberal M.N.A. for the area, M. Yvon Vallieres, announced recently.

The funds, to be used for road maintenance and repair, are expected to be increased by 20 per cent over the next three years.

Mr. Vallieres explained further that the extent of governmental aid is, in part, determined by inflationary pressures in the community, and expressed his satisfaction that the forthcoming financial aid will ensure better highway service over the winter months.

Pure Water

The waters of the Amazon River are among the purest in the world. Water tested by a joint U.S.-Brazilian expedition were found to have a chemical purity nearly equal to that of distilled water and greater than tap water in the United States. One reason for the water's purity is that the heavy rainfall in the river basin has almost completely washed the soil of readily soluble minerals.

Opinion from the French-language press

Ottawa Le Droit: New Brunswick voters last week returned Richard Hatfield's Conservatives to power with a net gain of one seat.

The Tories now have 33 seats in Fredericton while Robert Higgins' Liberals have 25 seats. The NDP, the Acadian Party and the Canada Party all failed to win any seats.

For the first time, Acadians had their own party, but it polled only two per cent of the total vote despite the fact the Acadians represent about a third of the province's population.

The Canada Party, which espouses Mayor Jones' anti-French ideology, only got a fraction of one per cent of the total vote while the NDP did scarcely better.

The campaign could have been a real battle but it seems the candidates' fates were determined on the basis of their stands on local issues.

Yet the major problems were there.

Tory leader Richard Hatfield failed to discuss "race" problems despite the accusations in Financial Post and Moncton L'Evangeline accusing his administration of dubious transactions.

More amazing is the Liberal party's apparent refusal to deal with the issues discussed in the newspapers. In fact, the Liberal party appeared to take a non-aggressive and even friendly stand towards the Tories.

It almost appears there was a tacit agreement between the two parties not to disturb things so as to divert votes from the third parties.

If this was the case, the play apparently succeeded.

But what will be the fate of the French minority in that province?

We would like to believe that the economic development promised by the Conservatives will favor the Acadians as much as the other linguistic groups and we also expect fairer bilingualism policies.

But we fail to see why Mr. Hatfield would risk alienating the English majority to please the Acadian minority when the Acadians themselves failed to express their discontent—Jean-C. Levesque (Nov. 21)

Sherbrooke La Tribune: No matter how rich and powerful the federal government is, it will never be able to solve the economic imbalance in this country merely by taxing the rich to support the poor as suggested by the throne speech Sept. 30 and the budget speech Nov. 18.

But who is going to foot the bill for these generosities?

Rich Canadians, of course, and the oil-producing provinces. This is where Mr. Turner's budget becomes a time bomb.

We saw the conflict coming when the oil-producing provinces, under the leadership of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, began using their oil to obtain concessions from the federal government.

The federal government forced these provinces to keep the price of oil at a uniform $6.50 a barrel March 27 despite criticism of its interference in an area of provincial jurisdiction.

The question now becomes: all for Alberta or a little for Alberta and a little for the rest of the country?

For a country in the throes of economic crises and based on a healthy federal system, the answer is clear-cut: Alberta is part of Canada.

Either the western provinces agree to contribute to the economic balance of this country, or the nation will be split into wealthy and poor regions.

Angry westerners should realize that living in a federal system entails certain responsibilities. Co-operation from the west becomes a necessity considering the economic conditions in this country and in the rest of the world.

To believe otherwise is to say that the strong deserve the best and anyone who says this is justice is a believer of the law of the jungle—Jean Desrosiers (Nov. 22)

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: Jean Chretien, president of the treasury board, recently told the House of Commons that the civil service's bilingualism policy has created 53,584 bilingual job openings.

This is slightly over the 25,000 jobs predicted by his predecessor, Charles Drury, in 1972.

The MP from Saint Maurice explained that the difference between "these figures and Mr. Drury's is due to the fact we underestimated the number of bilingual jobs required to serve the public and furnish internal services for the civil service."

"Furthermore," he said, "in order to allow civil servants to work in the language of their choice, the number of bilingual openings required to maintain supervision is higher than expected."

Mr. Chretien's revision could be sufficient to correct what language commissioner Keith Spicer termed injustices in his third annual report.

Mr. Spicer said that despite token readjustments in 1973, the number of jobs available to English-speaking unilinguals was seven times greater than those available to their French-language counterparts.

Prime Minister Trudeau's statements in October to the effect that French-language workers occupy 10 per cent of all "executive" positions seems to indicate an unhealthy and unfair situation.

Mr. Trudeau promised that French-Canadians will assume a proportionate number of these jobs within the next four years and we have every reason to believe that Mr. Chretien's dynamic attitude will help realize this goal.

Mr. Spicer will also spare no effort to ensure these policies become law. The battle has not yet been won but it has been solidly begun—Sylvio Saint-Amant (Nov. 23)

Quebec Le Soleil: An injunction ordering work to stop on the $12-billion James Bay hydroelectric project was reversed by Quebec Appeals Court almost a year to the day later.

The provincial government wasted no time, however, in making sure that things were quickly brought back to normal.

Quebec's highest court settled the whole problem by asserting that the injunction had no judicial jurisdiction because the Indians had not established their rights to the land.

The court went so far as to say that even if the Indians did establish rights to the area, they were entitled only to receive compensation and not to halt work there.

This should come as no surprise considering this was the same argument used by Appeals Court last December to reverse the injunction—the common good of all Quebecers remains the central issue.

The recent $150-million settlement given the Indians essentially meets their original demands—awakening the provincial government from its intransigence towards them.

The James Bay Indians saved face and were paid for having been assimilated. Should they really be dissatisfied?—Paul Lachance (Nov. 25)

Realistic and Adequate

The federal government's long-awaited legislation on marijuana has been introduced in Parliament and, while it may not please either those who would like to see the drug legalized or hardliners who would like to see stiffer penalties, it will probably find acceptance by the public at large. The move to transfer marijuana and hashish from the Narcotic Control Act to the Food and Drugs Act is especially welcome, as is the decision to take a more lenient attitude toward first offenders; and there should be no argument about the decision to retain relatively stiff penalties for those caught drug-trafficking.

Opposition to the bill is most likely to come from those who feel that it should have included a main recommendation of the LeDain commission — that there should be no penalties for simple possession of cannabis (marijuana and hashish), which means in effect that the use of these drugs should be legalized. But the government wisely has stopped short of taking this step. Recent findings in the United States are to the effect that habitual use of marijuana is more harmful than was supposed at the time of the LeDain report. Until and unless contrary evidence is forthcoming, the government's careful approach is the right one. It was to this that Health Minister Marc Lalonde was referring when he described the bill as "realistic and adequate" in the light of new research "which tends to demonstrate that (marijuana) is more dangerous than most thought at first."

The government, in short, while easing penalties in some instances, is maintaining a restrictive approach. Its aim is to "discourage both the use and the sale" of marijuana and its derivatives. In the light of the best evidence now available, it is hard to find fault with the bill's content and intention. This may not mean that it will have an easy passage through the House. Opinions on the issue vary widely among the public at large, and there is no reason to believe that they do not vary greatly among members of Parliament.

Ethiopian Pattern

Those who recall the Emperor Haile Selassie, when in the 1930s, he resisted to the last the unprovoked fascist onslaught, will be appalled at the report of the possibility of his execution. Savagery has always been a part of Ethiopia's bloodstained history and this week's massacre of 60 prominent Ethiopians fits a pattern that has existed for centuries. Indeed, the early 16th-century Portuguese traveller, Father Francisco Alvarez, reported that in Ethiopia all imperial sons and relatives were periodically put to death to remove any threat to the ruler.

During his long reign, the 82-year-old emperor tried to lift Ethiopia from this pattern of anarchy and intertribal warfare and bring it into the 20th century and a political climate more fitting to our era.

The new Ethiopian rulers, who seem to be imbued with Mao Tse-tung's idea that the physical elimination of a country's elite will automatically lead to the nation's rebirth, are instead dragging the country back into past savagery and toward anarchy. If their crimes are now compounded by the murder of the old emperor they will have put themselves beyond the pale of every civilized community.

How greatly the machinations of these evil men are fostered by foreign influences is difficult to say. The university of Addis Ababa was staffed largely with Communist academics, and Marxist rulers are in power in neighboring Somalia and Yemen, across the Bab el-Mandeb straits. Situated, as it is, in the heart of Africa, Ethiopia is of great strategic importance. Haile Selassie, well aware of the geopolitical facts of modern life, tried to keep Ethiopia unaligned with a tilt towards the West.

Torture in Chile

WASHINGTON — Without a murmur of formal protest from the U.S. Government, an attractive, 31-year-old American art teacher was brutally tortured last month by Chilean Air Force officers in an insect-infested prison.

The young university instructor was threatened with death, forced to ride with breasts bared through the streets and thrown on a bed where she was menaced with rape. She was subjected to obscene questioning, catapulted down stairs while blindfolded, deprived of water, denied sleep and forced to stand until she almost collapsed.

When 13 days of this treatment failed to draw a false confession from her, the "officers and gentlemen" of Chile's Air Force told her she was being taken to an infamous torture center where prisoners were known to have been given electrode shocks on the most sensitive parts of their bodies, stretched on racks and immersed in human excrement.

Faced with a journey from which she might not return, she finally broke and signed a prepared pack of lies on October 24th.

Chilean junta leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet has assured the world that torture no longer exists in Chile. Yet this incredible story of torture by a regime now seeking $85 million a year in U.S. aid has been sworn to by Amy Conger, now in Chicago.

Except for a partially paralyzed thumb, the art history teacher, whose specialty is the gentle 15th-century painting school of Fra Angelico, appears to be recovering.

In long talks with my associate Les Whitten and in extensive affidavits, she has spoken eloquently of her agony.

"I was brutally arrested October 11th about 7:00 p.m. by four men in street clothes with submachine guns," one affidavit states. She was told she might be killed, then was "tightly handcuffed and literally thrown in a car."

During the ride, one of the officers pulled her sweater over her head. "Needless to say I felt conspicuous passing through the city bare-breasted," she said.

Although she was blindfolded throughout much of her 13-day interrogation, she was able to learn that "several of these Air Force officers had studied in the United States." She identified two of them as a "Lt. Col. Ceballos" and a "Col. Horacio Ibaiza." Ceballos spoke excellent colloquial English, she said.

Her relentless questioners sought to wrench from her a confession that she knew "undesirable Chileans. This, she said, could refer to almost any of the 44 per cent of Chileans who had supported the late Chilean Socialist president Salvador Allende.

"They threatened me with rape and to send me to the Direccion de Inteligencia Nacional, a military group specializing in brute physical torture, particularly electric shock, the rack, choking or drowning in excrement."

At one point, she was led blindfolded to the head of a stairs. She plunged down 10 steps and thereafter was in fear whenever she was being led blindfolded through the corridors of the Academia de Guerra prison.

"I stood for hours and hours against a wall," she attested. "They gave me two cups of water each day to drink, 900 calories of food, a perfect starvation diet."

"The bathroom had running water for only about 15 minutes a day to serve the needs of about 60 prisoners. The unflushable toilets were teeming with flies and brimming with great quantities of blood and excrement."

"The three stalls were calf high with newspaper which had served as toilet paper," she swore. All around her, guards were "nervously playing and experimenting with submachine guns, cocking them, changing to automatic," and, ironically, "a cassette player (constantly) repeated Joan Baez's 'Happy Birthday.'"

Other prisoners were tortured while she was blindfolded, she said. "I heard horrible, prolonged screams in the night... I learned to peek around my blindfold."

"I saw two officers slugging and kicking an 18-year-old... I heard his sharp, quick screams of 'No' and afterwards, long cries of 'No,' like a dying animal. Finally, he confessed to anything they suggested."

Afterwards, he was dragged off to the dreaded Direccion de Inteligencia Nacional for still more torture.

She saw the youth when he returned, "his chest covered with black and blue marks and with inflamed red points. His face was totally without color, white as plaster — it seems, anemic because of blood loss. He had a deep cut about five inches long, open and unbandaged on the inside of his left arm," she said in her affidavit.

"Another young man returned from his trip (to the torture center) with discs broken in his spinal cord, and another in a wheelchair with a broken leg."

Finally, she said, she "confessed" falsely to knowing "subversives." At about the same time, she said, word of her arrest reached the American consul in Santiago, Fred Parady. He began working for her freedom right away, but it took him 30 hours before the Chileans were willing to release her.

By that time, "the nerve in my left thumb (was) disabled due to the tightness of handcuffs. I had acquired an impressive vaginal discharge. I was somewhat black and blue, incredibly filthy...badly dehydrated, nine pounds lighter and with protein and cholesterol levels abnormally low."

"The shocked Parady took her to her apartment which had been totally ransacked. In a pathetic effort to cheer her up, he observed, 'You're not much of a housekeeper, are you?'"

Shortly thereafter, she left Chile. The United States has yet to make a formal protest, as was made in the case of American citizen Fred Morris who was tortured at about the same time in Brazil.

FOOTNOTE: Ms. Conger told us that only her American citizenship kept things from being worse. "I was fortunate... Another young woman was arrested and raped three times while awaiting her trial. She became pregnant and wished to get an abortion, but the prison doctor informed her she 'should feel honored and proud to have been made pregnant by the saviors of the country.'"

No light at end of energy tunnel

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — If you think we have coal troubles now, wait a few years.

President Ford's energy advisers have come to the reluctant conclusion that those much-touted estoteric energy sources — shale, geothermal, solar and gasification — are a long way off practically and politically.

Administration planners have therefore conveniently forecast a major increase in mining. They plan strong pressures to get oil-using utilities to shift back to coal. They have been pushing devices for sulfur control, essential to comply with environmental standards when burning coal mined in the East today. These plans look impressive on paper but they don't square with the facts of coal production and the problems which stand in the way of sharp increases.

I've been sitting through a series of meetings with the men in that industry and in others which must provide the money and the equipment for boosting coal production rapidly enough to meet the need. The outlook is dismal.

The problems in expanding near-the-surface Western coal are numerous. For one, there is the complicated ownership of chunks of the coal-bearing land. In numerous instances, the surface rights are owned by private individuals and the underground rights by government. Then there are the inevitable environmental battles.

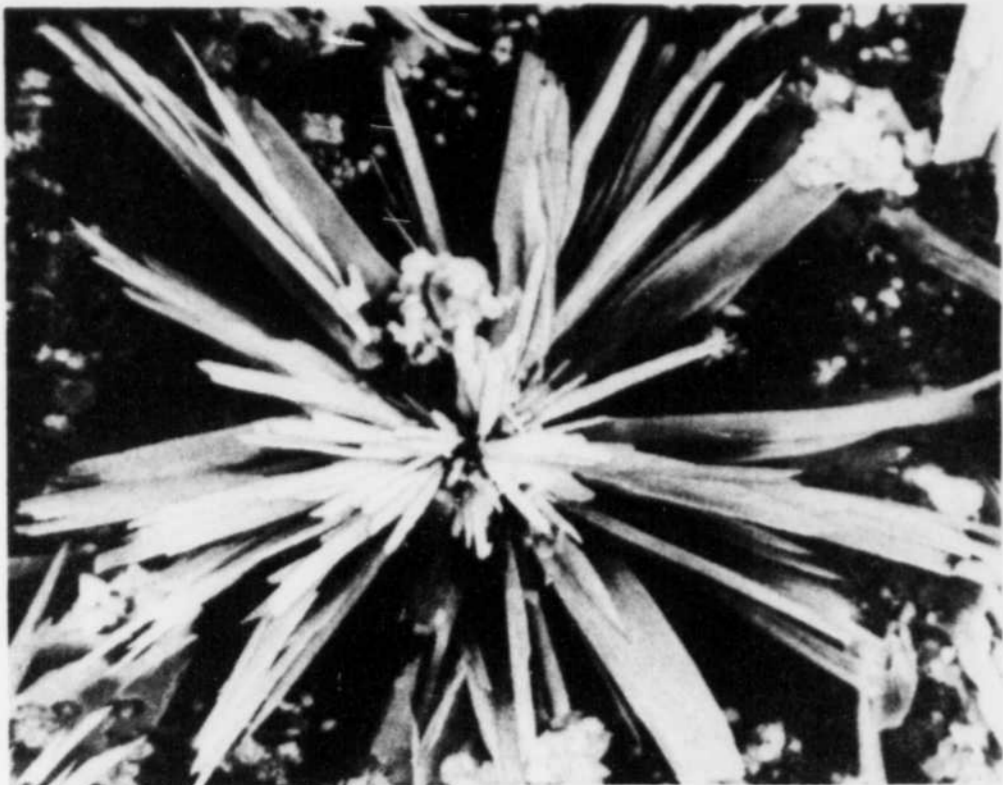

Here it's not principally the environmental restrictions as such but the delays as one group after another halts the start of operations to have its day before government agencies or in court. Even tough environmental restrictions can be handled if they are specific, the problem is that there is much disagreement among environmental groups as to what they want and what is practical.

This means we will have to depend on production from those Eastern mines where working conditions are abominable and the seams too thin for cheap, efficient mining. The introduction of new labor saving devices in many of the mines we are dependent on will be difficult indeed, which means that coal prices will go up with labor costs. The latter are pushed by an inflation we seem unable to stifle.

We have already seen the speed with which increased petroleum costs have affected prices throughout the economy. It will be no different with coal though at a slower pace. The current labor conflicts will boost the costs of electric power, steel and a host of other products. These price rises will have a domino effect on the cost of much of what we buy. Worse yet, this is just the beginning.

There has been a tendency of late to solve all problems by means of new laws. The coal dispute shows once again that this is not possible or practical. There is a law on the books — Taft-Hartley and President Ford's aides have made it clear through leaks to the press they believe the application of that law would be counterproductive in a coal strike. This is a view apparently widely shared in Congress. Believing this, it is appalling that no plans were made well in advance for alternate sources of supply in case of a lengthy walkout.

The administration doesn't want to invoke Taft-Hartley if needed. It doesn't want rationing. So far, so good. These may be logical decisions, but then what? What we have from the Senate, the House and Mr. Ford is thumb-twiddling, government officials running back and forth between management and labor pleading and cajoling. But there are no plans for an emergency.

CHRYSANTHEMUM BUSTING OUT ALL OVER is actually a blossom of another type. A lead crystal produced by chemical action on the negative electrode of a lead acid battery and magnified 2,000 times is a spectacular sight in a scanning electron microscope photo taken at Schenectady, N.Y., General Electric Research and Development Center.

Safety Council says fat can be fatal

OTTAWA (CP) — Fat can be fatal. That's the message the Canada Safety Council wants to get into the nation's kitchens in its continuing accident-prevention campaign. Thousands of homes are destroyed each year, the council says, as a result of fires started by unattended containers of fat or oil left heat on kitchen ranges. Fat, at a certain temperature, will ignite spontaneously and burst into flames, giving off acrid, black smoke and igniting any nearby combustible material such as curtains or cabinets.

Should such a fire occur in your kitchen, the council cautions against throwing the contents of a container into a sink. Burning fat and water do not mix, it says, and, if tossed into a sink with any force, will spread the fire. REMOVE CAUSE. The best prevention, the council says, is to remove the cause by never leaving a frying pan or similar container unattended on the stove. However, if all precautions fail, the council says "don't panic." The situation can be controlled. A large lid placed over a burning container will deprive the fire of the air it needs to survive and the pan can be removed after it has had time to cool. Organization is another preventive action suggested by the council. One person should be in over-all charge of the cooking functions and thus have responsibility for the stove. Should a second person be needed, that person should act only as an assistant. After all, it warns, "too many cooks ... may start a fire."

New car can double mileage

DOVER, Del. (AP) — A new automobile engine has almost doubled the gasoline mileage achieved by a car with a conventional engine in two demonstration tests.

The engine, called the LaForce Engine after its inventor Edward La Force of Richmond, Vt., showed mileage gains of 47.7 per cent Saturday over a traditional large-cylinder engine when driven at 40 miles an hour and gained 66.3 per cent over a standard engine when driven at 30 miles an hour.

The two cars used in the demonstration at Dover Downs Raceway were AMC Hornets.

Both cars were given a measured gallon of gasoline and driven around the mile-long race track until they ran out of fuel.

La Force, and his brother and co-inventor, Robert, said the engine combines additional horsepower with increased mileage by changing the way gas travels through the engine.

The two men said that by altering the camshaft slightly and dividing the manifold of the engine in two sections, they can make the engine burn conventional fuel more efficiently and with less pollution.

The two men want to patent the device, but said the Security and Exchange Commission requires them to test the engine first.

Representatives from the U.S. Federal Energy Administration looked at the engine Monday and Robert LaForce said, "They seemed to be favorably impressed."

Bribes a problem in India

BOMBAY (CP) — Michael Vasu, a government pensioner living in India's southern Tamil Nadu state, recently complained to a cabinet minister that he had to wait six days to collect his meagre monthly pension of $14.

"I had to fill several forms and pay 'speed-money' to two government clerks before I could get my pension," Vasu, 65, told this correspondent.

"Speed-money" is money demanded by government workers in return for speeding up important documents.

"Nothing can move in a government office without payment of speed-money," laments Ramanand Shukla, an exporter of handicrafts.

Shukla may be exaggerating but the fact is that the power of petty officials in India is still enormous. There are nearly 10 million of them, following antiquated methods inherited from British colonial rule and refusing to change.

But this nation's poor people are at last beginning to combat bureaucratic corruption and high-handedness.

Reports in the Times of India, Statesman, Hindustan Times, Amrita Bazaar Patrika and other national newspapers speak of a "growing awakening" among ordinary people to their rights.

For instance, residents of several villages in Gujarat, Rajasthan and Bihar states have decided not to pay speed-money to government babus (clerks).

HELD PROTESTS

Processions were held recently in the Gaya area of Bihar to protest "tyranny" by petty rural officials.

In Rajasthan state, Education Minister Khet Singh has threatened to fire officials who demand bribes from teachers in government-run schools for transfers and promotions.

The Times of India, Bombay, reports that when Singh was touring the Sirohi area teachers met him in a deputation and complained that corruption was "rampant" in his department.

How he wished, the minister said wistfully, that public opinion could assert itself and make life difficult for dishonest officials, if necessary by beating them up. The Times reported.

According to the paper, not long afterwards the aggrieved teachers beat up the minister's personal secretary who had demanded a bribe.

Villagers in the Rajkot area of Gujarat state got two corrupt government officials transferred by campaigning against them.

"Working in rural areas is no longer as comfortable as before," confessed a government official now transferred to a post in Bombay. "Even illiterate peasants now ask a number of questions. You can't bluff them easily."

Many thoughtful Indians are disturbed by the growth of bureaucracy in their country because it means a sharp increase in the number of petty officials throwing their weight about.

But after centuries of submission the proverbially meek Indian villager is showing some guts.

Sweep problems under the rug and you're going to have a mighty bumpy rug.

Depression rages in black communities

By Vernon E. Jordan Jr.

If President Ford executed some sort of consensus on the economy to come out of his series of domestic summit meetings, he got it — sort of. Everyone now agrees that the economy is a mess, something we didn't need high-powered economists to tell us. The disagreement comes on what to do about it.

The policy that appears to be developing seems to include slightly lower interest rates, federal budget cuts, some aid to business, "jawboning" to try to hold down prices and, as a sop to the poor, slightly better tax breaks for low-income families and a token federal job program.

That amounts to about as good a prescription for another Great Depression as I've ever heard, but it reflects the drift of the emerging policy consensus. It's a program that continues to place the burdens of inflation and joblessness on the minority and low-income groups now suffering most.

Black people have been the prime victims of this diseased economy and unless there is a change of heart among policy-makers, will continue to be the main victims. When the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors says, "If you really wanted to examine percentage-wise who was hurt the most in their income, it was the Wall Street brokers," he is telling black people and poor people that their concerns don't count.

Black unemployment is double that for whites, with shrinking job opportunities driving many out of the labor force altogether so that they don't show up in the official unemployment statistics. Black poverty is growing while whites are moving out of poverty.

The typical black family earns over $100 a week less than the typical white family, and most black families earn much less than the government itself says is the minimum necessary to stay out of poverty. Add to this skyrocketing food prices that hit hardest at the poor — who spend more of their incomes for basics — and you've got a brief picture of rampant economic Depression ravaging the black community.

A program to relieve this unwarranted suffering could also be a program that leads the country out of the wilderness of "stagflation" and into a new era of economic prosperity. Such a program would include:

— Public Service Employment: Immediate federal creation of a minimum of one-million jobs in the public service sector would put people to work on tax-producing jobs while relieving manpower shortages in health care, day care centers, environmental control, public safety, schools and museums, and a host of other essential services.

Such a program should be targeted at local areas of high real unemployment and stress career development and training at decent salaries. Strictly enforced anti-discrimination provisions should assure that minorities participate in large enough numbers to offset their higher unemployment rates.

— Tax Reform and New Budget Priorities: Tax reform that relieves pressure on low-income groups and collects more from the underpaying affluent and from businesses now getting unwarranted subsidies is long overdue.

Proposals to cut social service spending from the budget are absurd. The suggested cuts won't affect the over-all economy at all while denying people services at a time of great need. Trimming the defense budget and silencing some of the nonessentials can help pay for expanded services.

— Lower Interest Rates: This is a popular notion, but lowered rates should be tied to freeing mortgage money to revive the moribund housing industry, and to help local governments raise funds for capital projects. An across-the-board cut would just help stimulate inflationary consumer loans.

— Price Controls: The President has, perhaps too hastily, ruled this out but reconsideration is in order to break the back of the inflationary price surge. "Jawboning" won't work and the controls of the Nixon era were never really consistently enforced. It may be time for some solid controls to stop inflation.

— Cash out Food Stamps: There is real hunger in the land and the food stamp program, which is supposed to help low-income families, currently reaches only about a third of those eligible. Cash should replace food stamps for all those currently eligible and disbursement should be on some kind of automatic basis to avoid stigma.

These ideas are just a few of the possibilities that exist to cut inflation, end unemployment and get the economy moving again. Black people and the poor need such steps desperately. Even Wall Street brokers will benefit from them.

He lifted the Bamboo Curtain

By Don Oakley

Only the departure of Mao Tse-tung himself to join his ancestors would have generated greater shock waves around the world than did the news of the death of Chou En-lai.

For years it was taken for granted by China watchers that Chou, premier, foreign minister and no. 2 man in the Chinese hierarchy, would inherit the aging Mao's mantle. Yet Chou himself was (insert age) and had for some time, as he told a western visitor in July, 1974, when he was hospitalized for a rumored heart attack, been suffering from the general debilitation of old age.

Nevertheless, few observers seemed to have anticipated that Chou might pre-decease Mao, or speculated what would happen when this indispensable administrator who virtually ran China on a day-to-day basis, was no longer there.

Mao Tse-tung, that remote, semi-mythical, deified figure, remains alone as the last of the original Chinese communists. All the rest are gone, either through death or defection or purge. The death of Chou En-lai now makes obvious more than anything else could, the great void of leadership that exists between Mao and the masses.

Neither today nor at any time since the "Bamboo Curtain" was parted slightly in 1972 could the average American recite the name of a single important Chinese communist official below Mao, other than Chou En-lai.

This is not merely ignorance of China. There is no one, so far as we know, who is prepared to, or is capable of, taking Chou's place. All those who might have been also, unfortunately, guilty of harboring un-Mao-like thoughts and were eliminated long ago.

Chou En-lai was well-known outside China before President Nixon's historic visit in March, 1972. For nine years before and during World War II, he had been liaison man between the communists, Chiang Kai-Shek's nationalists and western representatives in Chungking. He was named premier and foreign minister of the "Chinese People's Republic" at its founding in 1949. In 1954, he represented China at the Geneva Conference at which was laid the ground for America's later tragic involvement in Vietnam.

Spain's Iron Man

By Don Oakley

Iberia, home of two of the longest running dictatorships of the 20th century, had seemed as stable as the great rock which marks its southern extremity at Gibraltar — until this year when the winds of change swept into the peninsula with hurricane force.

In Portugal this April, reform-minded army officers threw out the heirs of dictator Antonio de Salazar who had died in 1970 and began an uncertain experiment in democracy. There was immediate speculation about what effects, if any, the revolutionary events in Portugal would have on next-door Spain where aging and ailing Generalissimo Francisco Franco was still, at least symbolically, iron man.

Now El Caudillo, the leader, is dead at 81 and his constitutionally designated successor, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, grandson of Spain's last king, is chief of state. But Juan Carlos is no more expected to govern Spain than did Alfonso XIII before he was sent into exile in 1931 by a short-lived republican government.

Under Franco's plan, his real successor was to have been Vice Admiral Luis Carrero Blanco, who was named premier in 1973. Last December, however, Basque terrorists assassinated Carrero Blanco and Carlos Arias became premier. At first seeming to promise a continuation of the modest liberalization begun in 1966 with the adoption of the plebiscite-approved "Organic Law," Arias and the ruling Falange party, Spain's only legal party, have become increasingly repressive since the eruption in Portugal.

The 35 years of political tranquility Spain enjoyed under Franco after the end of its bitter Civil War in 1939 was a period of surface calm only, an exception in Spain's turbulent modern history. Ever since Napoleon tried to impose his brother as king in the early 19th century, Spain has been racked by intermittent revolt, brief liberal government, the re-institution of authoritarian rule, either monarchical or military, and revolt again.

In that century, Spain lost almost all the overseas colonies won in the stirring age of exploration and saw itself fall into the status of third or fourth-rate power, an impoverished backwater of Europe whose days of greatness were only a memory.

To give the man his due, Franco's long rule was, by material measure, beneficial to Spain and what the country needed after exhausting itself in the Civil War. While Europe tore itself asunder in World War II, Franco, though sympathetic to the Axis, kept Spain neutral and began the process of national rebuilding. Spain shared in Europe's post-war economic recovery and profited from the ensuing Cold War in the form of American aid in exchange for military bases.

him in some of the Quebec parks, and during the hunting season he was usually in the woods around Milan, in the woods around Parent, Que., and on the prairies around Virden, Man. He was a member of the Railroad brotherhood, Browne Lodge No. 24, A.F.A.M. Farnham, Golden Rule Chapter No. 1, R.A.M., Sherbrooke, and Karnak Shrine of Montreal. Also Lewis Lodge No. 53, Scotstown.

He was predeceased by his father on Sept. 24, 1929 and his mother on April 27, 1939. His older brother Archie died accidentally Nov. 18, 1921. Left to mourn his passing is his sister, Mary, and several cousins.

He was a member of the Board of Managers of Bethany Presbyterian Church. His remains lay in repose in the church from Wednesday afternoon until Friday forenoon, Nov. 8, when, at 10:30 a.m., the funeral service was held, with the Rev. Ross Davidson of Ste. Foy, a former minister of Milan parish, officiating.

There were many floral tributes as well as donations in his memory to the Canadian Heart Fund and the maintenance fund of the Gisle Cemetery where interment took place in the family plot beside his parents and brother. On the evening before the funeral, a Masonic service was held in the church.

The bearers were Walter Murray, David Nicholson, Roderick McLeod, Duncan McLeod, Kenneth MacDonald and Eric Foster.

His friendly, genial manner, and his high moral standards had won for him the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

WILLIAM OLIVER TODD of Birchtown

Many friends of this Community, and elsewhere, mourned the passing of William Oliver Todd, when he was called to Higher Service at the Sherbrooke Hospital on November 3, 1974, which he had entered a few days previously for further treatment of the disease which culminated in his death at the age of 61.

"Oliver", as he was commonly known, was born in Island Brook on August 27, 1913, the elder son of the late Naham D. Todd and Mary Ann Todd, nee McKee. He was predeceased by his sister Phyllis in August, 1963, wife of the late Charles A. Greenlay of Asbestos.

He spent his early years in Island Brook and received his education in the Island Brook Intermediate and Cookshire High School.

Like so many young men of his day, Oliver answered the call of his country in the Second World War, and enlisted in Sherbrooke on July 22, 1940, with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Prior to leaving for England he was united in marriage to Vera Williams of Ormstown, Que., on March 14, 1942.

Following completion of his Aero-Engine Mechanic's training in Canada, he proceeded to England. After training there as a Flight Engineer, he took part in many bombing raids over Germany, his plane being shot down on October 23, 1943. He and the surviving members of the crew were taken to a prisoner-of-war camp (P.O.W.) near Dresden, Germany. There he remained until released on April 23, 1945, the date when the Americans and Russians met at the River Mulde.

Supplementing his farming operations, he worked as mail-courier from the Cookshire Post Office, where he won the respect of his co-workers and of his patrons along his route.

He was a quiet unassuming man, devoted to his family, his home, and his work. He is survived by his widow and two daughters Deborah Ann and Catherine May, both presently of Toronto, Ont., and by a brother Herbert, of Cookshire.

Remains rested at the Webster-Cass Funeral Home in Lennoxville, where funeral services were held at 2 p.m., November 5, conducted by Rev. Gordon Simons, followed by interment in the Eaton Cemetery.

At his own request, floral tributes were limited to those of his family, his comrades of the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 139, and his co-workers of the Cookshire Post Office. Bearing him to his last resting-place were friends of long standing: Ernest Cork, Robert Fitzsimmons, Malcolm Fraser, Gleason Painter, Garfield Spaulding and Melvin Thompson.

NL has expansion on agenda, three Toronto groups seeking franchise, Expos still waiting

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One of the big questions remaining after a round of trades at the winter baseball meetings is whether Dick Allen will report to Atlanta Braves.

Another question still to be answered is what the major leagues plan to do about expansion, if anything.

Allen, Tug McGraw and Lee May were among 13 players traded Tuesday in four deals.

The question remains whether Allen, the game's highest paid player at $225,000 a year, will report to the Braves, who obtained the controversial first baseman from Chicago White Sox for a reported $5,000 and a player to be named later.

Allen, 32, left the White Sox Sept. 14, saying he was retiring from baseball. However, he never made it official by putting it in writing, and recently he said he wanted to continue playing.

He was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

SEVERAL LOBBYING

Meanwhile, no report on the expansion issue was expected until today. Only the National League had the issue on its agenda although groups from Toronto, Seattle, Denver, Honolulu and New Orleans are lobbying for support among the major league owners. Both leagues have indicated they plan to add two new franchises in 1976.

Among the groups seeking a Toronto franchise are Maple Leaf Gardens; Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd.; Montreal industrialist R. Howard Webster, and a group calling itself Canadian Baseball Company, headed by Sydney C. Cooper.

As part of the Allen deal, the White Sox will keep the $5,000 even if Allen doesn't report. Chicago receives a player only if Allen shows up.

McGraw, one-time relief ace of New York Mets, moved to Philadelphia Phillies in a six-player trade.

Outfielders Don Hahn and Dave Schneck also went to Philadelphia. In return, the Phils sent outfielder Del Unser, left-handed pitcher Mac Scare and rookie catcher John Stearns to New York.

Unser, who will be 30 on Monday, is expected to provide the Mets with their first solid centre fielder in years.

Baltimore Orioles obtained May, a power-hitting first baseman, and minor league outfielder Jay Schleuter from Houston Astros for second baseman Rob Andrews, who has had an outstanding minor league career, and infielder-outfielder Enos Cabell.

May, 31, who batted .268 with 24 homers and 85 RBI last season, will play first base, making Orioles veteran Boog Powell expendable.

In the other transactions, New York Yankees sent first baseman-outfielder Bill Sudakis to California Angels for right-handed pitcher Skip Lockwood.

Expos to play 13 of 28 games at Daytona Beach's Island Park, first game slated for Mar. 8

MONTREAL — The Montreal Expos will launch a 28-game spring exhibition schedule against the Houston Astros at Daytona Beach, Fla.'s City Island Park, the Expos' spring training home, on Saturday, March 8.

The Astros are one of 10 major league clubs the Expos will meet during the spring.

Also on tap for the Expos is a game on Monday, March 10, in Daytona Beach, against Tokyo's Yomiuri Giants. The Yomiuri club, led by Sadaharu Oh, Japan's all-time home run king, will spend the first two weeks of March in Florida, working out at the Vero Beach complex of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The complete spring schedule, announced today by Vice President and General Manager Jim Fanning, has the Expos playing 13 games in Daytona Beach, all at 1:30 p.m., and 15 on the road.

Three of the Expos' home dates in Daytona Beach will be on consecutive Sunday afternoons, the last of these being an Easter Sunday, March 30 game against Houston.

Two of the road games will be night contests — against the Atlanta Braves in West Palm Beach on Monday, March 24 and against the Minnesota Twins in Orlando on Friday, March 28.

The Expos will play 13 of the 28 games against six National League rivals. Six of these games are scheduled against the Houston Astros, two each against Los Angeles and Philadelphia and one each against Atlanta, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

Fourteen games against American League opponents are split as follows: five against Minnesota, four against Texas, three against Detroit and two against Boston. Preparation for the exhibition schedule will start on Friday, February 21 for pitchers and catchers. The balance of players are to report for a first full-squad workout on Thursday, February 27.

The Expos will break camp on Sunday, April 6 and head North for the start of the National League's 1975 regular-season play the next day.

The Expos' 1975 opener, at Jarry Park, is on tap for Friday, April 18 against the Philadelphia Phillies. The 1975 home opener, previously announced, will start at 2:15 p.m.

Olympic Lottery Canada gets solid support from citizens, $52 million collected to date

MONTREAL (CP) — Julien Cote, vice-president of Olympic Lottery Canada, said Friday that with only three of eight scheduled draws completed, the lottery has contributed $52.1 million toward financing the 1976 games.

This is almost $20 million more than the $32.5-million goal set by the organizing committee as part of its over-all $310-million budget proposed for the Games.

"I received a mandate to raise a minimum of $32.5 million," Cote said. "That was the money needed from the lottery."

He said response to the project had been excellent.

Profit from the third draw was $24.4 million, more than double the amount realized from the initial series. The first draw netted the organizing committee $10.9 million, while profit from the second was $16.8 million. The first two draws featured $1 million tax-free first prize; the third draw, held in Hamilton Nov. 18 had two $1-million first prizes, also tax-free. Ticket prices have remained constant at $10.

But Cote said this may change in time for the fifth draw next June.

He said he had held meetings with provincial representatives last week, hoping the three holdout provinces would join the project. Residents of the three provinces now may order tickets from lottery headquarters by mail.

"We should know within a couple of weeks," Cote said. "If we get a positive answer we would have a few tickets available to them for the fourth draw."

"But we wouldn't be able to withdraw tickets from our customers in Ontario and Quebec to supply them."

Nova Scotia became the sixth province to take part in the lottery when it joined last July.

SAME AMOUNT

The fourth draw in the series is scheduled for Quebec City, Feb. 16, and will also feature dual $1 million tax-free first prizes.

Cote said he expects profits from the Quebec City draw to equal the amount gained from the third.

To date, only three provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia—have not agreed to the sale of tickets through banks and other outlets in their areas.

Stoke City's jaunts into transfer market paying dividends

LONDON (Reuter) — Stoke over Leicester City. Stoke's costly excursions into the transfer market continued to pay dividends recently when they moved to the top of the English Soccer League.

Stoke, who have spent about $187,500 in transfer fees this year, jumped from third to first place with a 1-0 win at home minutes from the end by Dennis Smith as he got the ball past 19-year-old Leicester goalkeeper Carl James, who otherwise made an impressive league debut.

Manchester City lost its place at the top of the league when Malcolm MacDonald hit the winner for Newcastle after City's Rodney Marsh had cancelled out an earlier Newcastle goal by Pat Howard.

Liverpool was restricted to a single point from a 1-1 draw with Coventry which left them without a victory in their last seven games.

Colin Stein put Coventry ahead from the penalty spot after 20 minutes but it was not until the second half that England forward Kevin Keegan was able to grab the equalizer for Liverpool.

Ipswich increased Carlisle's relegation fears with a 3-1 victory after taking the lead through Bryan Hamilton the second minute.

Dave Johnson made it 2-0 before Les O'Neill pulled one back for Carlisle, but Mick Lambert wrapped it up for Ipswich eight minutes from the end.

West Ham's 2-0 success over Queen's Park Rangers moved them into contention for the championship on 23 points—two behind the leaders.

Massawippi Club realizes dream

By BRUCE PORTER
 Record Reporter

LENOXVILLE — The Massawippi Valley Snowmobile Club Inc. has finally realized a dream that began almost two years ago. A bridge was completed at the end of November crossing the river in Huntingville for snowmobilers to use in the coming winters.

The club has always endeavored to promote safe snowmobiling, but the river posed a seemingly impossible problem until this fall. In the past, ice has formed on the water late in the season and gone out early. Thus, the snowmobile enthusiasts often had to use the car bridge in the center of town. While one problem had been solved, another had risen.

Crossing the highway was necessary when the car bridge was used, and was done at a great risk to the snowmobiler. Visibility on the corners is bad and local residents complained about the extra noise. Club members decided after much discussion and planning last spring to erect a bridge. On Sunday, Nov. 24, the project was finally completed, after several months of hard work.

Over 800 hours of voluntary labour was required to construct the 120 foot bridge. The wooden structure is feet wide and is suspended by steel cables. A 36 foot long ramp was built on the north end of the structure, so that the whole bridge would not be effected by high water in the spring. The total weight of the span is about 10 tons.

The bridge was built on land owned by Huntingville farmer Lorne Butler. Therefore, the structure has been named the Butler Bridge. He has also been generous enough to give the snowmobile club a five year right-of-way on his property to use the bridge.

Last weekend, the builders of the club ventured a test which could have been disastrous. They drove two cars and a truck onto the bridge to check its strength. The three vehicles, weighing almost 6.5 tons, were driven off the same way they went on — dry. The bridge is believed to be the longest unsupported structure of that capacity, built exclusively for snowmobilers, in the Eastern Townships and possibly the province.

Two men are primarily credited with the planning and off, John Bucyk scored his first of two goals to reduce Montreal's lead to 4-2 with 5:59 remaining.

With less than two minutes remaining, Carol Vadnais and Bucyk scored in an 18-second span and the Bruins had a 4-4 tie instead of their seventh loss of the year.

In other action, New York Rangers downed Detroit Red Wings 4-2, Pittsburgh Penguins came from behind to defeat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2, Chicago Black Hawks outscored Kansas City Scouts 7-3, Los Angeles Kings downed Minnesota North Stars 4-1 and California Seals defeated Atlanta Flames 3-1.

Wiltrud Drexel cops Downhill

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Wiltrud Drexel, Austria's Olympic bronze medalist, won the season's first major international downhill ski race Wednesday, more than a fourth of a second ahead of Bernadette Zurbriggen of Switzerland. Danielle Debernard of France was third.

Cindy Nelson of the United States wound up fourth in the First Snow competition, opening the 1974-75 World Cup competition.

The big surprise of the race was the defeat of Austria's champion, Anne-Marie Proell-Moser, who finished sixth, more than 1 1/2 seconds behind the winner and just ahead of the top-placed Canadian, 17-year-old Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., who toured the course, which had a total drop of 1,821 feet, in one minute 27.48 seconds.

It was only the second downhill race since 1972 that the 21-year-old Mrs. Proell-Moser has not won. She was beaten by Miss Nelson last January.

Miss Drexel, a 24-year-old racing veteran, completed the 7,050-foot course in 1:25.90. She was favored with an early start—No. 8—on the perfect course in ideal, cloudless weather.

Miss Zurbriggen, who was first down the course, finished in 1:26.16 while Miss Debernard clocked 1:26.74.

Betsy Clifford, 21, of Old Chelsea, Que., placed 17th with a time of 1:28.44. Other Canadian finishers in the starting field of 63 were Laurie Kreiner, Kathy's 20-year-old sister, in 20th place in 1:28.54, and Betsy's sister, Susan, 17, in 1:29.94.

Karen Cloutier, 18, of Ste. Agathe, Que., did not finish her run.

replying for Detroit.

Third-period goals by Nels Debenedet, Chuck Arnason and Vic Hadfield gave the Penguins their comeback win over the Maple Leafs.

Debenedet tied the game with 18 seconds gone in the final session and Arnason got what proved to be the game winner 11 minutes later.

Two goals by Jim Pappin keyed a six-goal outburst in the first period that carried Chicago past Kansas City. Darcy Rota also scored twice for the Black Hawks.

BROKE TIGHT BATTLE

Mike Murphy, Bob Murdoch and Bob Nevin scored in the third period for the Kings to break up a tight defensive battle against the North Stars.

The victory left Los Angeles in sole possession of first place in the Norris Division with 35 points, one more than second-place Montreal. The Kings have three games in hand.

Butch Williams scored twice to lead the Seals to their fifth win of the season before 2,913, the smallest crowd of this season at Oakland.

In games tonight, the Leafs visit New York Islanders, Buffalo Sabres are at home to Washington Capitals, Chicago travels to Philadelphia to play the Flyers and Boston plays host to Detroit.

The Capitals, 2-20-3 in league play, have called up defenceman Murray Anderson from Richmond Robins, their farm team in the American Hockey League. The Caps sent centre Andre Peloffy and defenceman Gordon Smith to Richmond.

Beavers move to Cornwall tonight, back home Friday

Two goals by Marc d'Amico led Chicoutimi Saguenens to a 5-1 win over Trois-Rivieres Draveurs in Quebec Major Junior Hockey league play Tuesday night.

In another game, Hull Festivals downed Sorel Black Hawks 7-3.

The win moved Chicoutimi into first place in the QMJHL's East Division, one point ahead of the second-place Draveurs. Chicoutimi has 25 points in 26 games while the Draveurs have 24 points in 27 games.

Daniel Lecours, Gilles Quintal and Jean-Paul Leblanc got the other Saguenens goals with Claude Periard scoring for the Draveurs at 3:15 of the third period to ruin Richard Castonguay's shutout bid.

Denis Pomerleau's second of three goals broke a 3-3 tie early in the third period and Hull to defeat Sorel.

Jim Vanni scored twice for the Festivals with Gary McFayden and Nelson Burton getting the others.

Pierre-Yves Giroux scored all three Sorel goals.

Play resumes Thursday with Sherbrooke Beavers visiting the Royals in Cornwall.

Bishop's Gaiterettes hold down first spot

LENOXVILLE (BP) — The Bishop's University Gaiterettes have sole possession of first place in the Eastern Townships Women's Basketball League after Tuesday night's victory over Clark's Pharmacy. Humbert Hatchery and the Army Navy Ladies Auxiliary also picked up wins.

Nancy Knowlton scored 24 points in her team's third straight win of the season. Mitch Skena and Maureen Hogan had eight and seven points respectively for the Gaiterettes. Judy Oxford tallied for 16 points in her team's 49-22 loss to Bishop's. Clark's were faced with a player shortage in the game, with only five players showing up.

The Army Navy squad pulled a squeaker over Lessard Bus Lines by a 17-16 overtime final. Debbie McLeod had five points for the victors, while mates Wendy Stuart and Maryse Goulet made three each. Sheila Clark and Sylvia Leech scored five points each for the Travellers. Miss Clark evened the score at the end of regulation time with a foul shot, making the score 16-16. Colleen Cooney gave the winning point to her team on a foul shot in the first three minute overtime period.

Rand took their third loss of the season as they dropped a 47-9 decision to Humbert Hatchery. Ann Perrier totalled 16 points, with Penny Love making 15 and Nancy Love netting 12. Sue Arel was the high scorer for Rand with seven.

ANLA is in second place after three league games, with two wins and a loss. LBL is in third, also with a 2-1 record, but has less points for than the Army Navy team. Clark's and Humbert Hatchery follow in fourth and fifth spots, with one win and two losses, and Rand is still winless.

Next week the team will wrap up this year's schedule before they take a Christmas break. Rand meets Clark's, LBL opposes Bishop's and ANLA tackles Humbert on Tuesday evening at Alexander Galt Regional, beginning at 8 p.m.

In other local action, the Champlain Regional College hockey Cougars kept their win record unblemished by losing to Sherbrooke CEJEG 4-3. Bill Flock scored twice for Champlain, while Tom Hunting made the other marker. Sherbrooke goals were made by Bertrand Gosselin, Claude Beland, Alain Letourneau and Jasmin Morin.

The CRC men's basketball squad plays its last pre-Christmas contest tonight against Seminaire at 7:30 p.m. in the Bishop's gym.

Both Bishop's University teams are busy this weekend. The basketball team travels to UQTR and SGWU on Friday and Saturday, while the hockey boys host UQTR Friday at 8 p.m. and McGill on Saturday at 4 p.m.

Expos complete trade with Orioles

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Baltimore Orioles dropped another bombshell on baseball's winter meetings Wednesday, swapping veteran left-hander Dave McNally to Montreal Expos in a five-player deal that sent outfielder Ken Singleton to the American League.

Meanwhile, Dick Allen apparently has declined a chance to return to the National League with Atlanta Braves.

In exchange for McNally, outfielder Rich Coggins and minor league pitcher Bill Kirkpatrick, the Orioles obtained Singleton and right-handed pitcher Mike Torrez.

It was the second major deal for Baltimore at these meetings, coming less than 24 hours after the Orioles had acquired veteran slugger Lee May from Houston Astros of the National League.

"There are three or four other possible deals that we're working on," said general manager Frank Cashen of the Orioles. "Whether they will reach fruition, I don't know."

What Cashen does know is that he came here shopping for stock and has picked up two proven National League hitters in as many days.

Singleton batted .276 with nine home runs and 74 runs batted in last season. In 1973, he hit .302 with 23 homers and 103 RBI.

May has averaged 32 homers for each of the last six years.

"We needed power," said Cashen. "It was tough to give up a pitcher like McNally, who has contributed so much to us."

McNally, 32, won 181 games in more than 12 seasons with the Orioles and has a string of four straight 20-victory years for Baltimore. He was 16-10 with a 3.58-earned-run average last season, but Montreal manager Gene Mauch discounted those so-so statistics.

"McNally's a craftsman," said Mauch. "He's a quality pitcher. When you get a pitcher of McNally's stature, you're confident."

While the Expos and Orioles were making their trade, Atlanta was getting the bad news from Allen.

RECEIVED TELEGRAM

Eddie Robinson, vice-president of the Braves, said he received a telegram from the controversial slugger which read: "Received your message. However, at this time, I must decline. Thank you for your interest in me and may you have continued success."

"It's no more than I expected," said Robinson. "but we'll continue to pursue it."

Robinson paid Chicago White Sox a reported $5,000 Tuesday for the negotiating rights to Allen. Had the slugger agreed to end his retirement, the Braves would have added a player. Chicago keeps the $5,000 in any case.

An Atlanta spokesman said the club understood that the White Sox received a similar message from Allen when they acquired him from Los Angeles Dodgers three years ago.

Meanwhile, commissioner Bowie Kuhn summoned the major league owners and general managers to meetings at a private mansion 40 miles from the city. The move out of town was made to give the assembled executives some privacy.

NFL playoff picture clearing up slightly

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite still another wave of weekend upsets, the National Football League playoff picture is now in better focus, only the American Conference East far from decided.

Only two more teams—Houston Oilers and Denver Broncos—were mathematically eliminated from the playoffs during the weekend. And with three titles officially wrapped up, nine teams still are in the running for the three remaining berths, although some of them—such as Detroit Lions and New England Patriots—have only the slimmest of hopes.

Minnesota Vikings, combining its victory Sunday over New Orleans Saints with Green Bay Packers' loss to Philadelphia Eagles, secured the National Conference Central title, joining Los Angeles Rams in the West as a divisional winner.

And St. Louis Cardinals, despite a loss Sunday to Kansas City Chiefs, remained a game ahead of runner-up Washington in the NFC East, thanks to Dallas Cowboys, who beat the Redskins on last Thursday.

The Cards need only one more victory to sew up the East. They play a pair of losing teams the last two weeks—New Orleans next Sunday and New York Giants on Dec. 15.

Similarly, the Redskins need only one more victory to secure the NFC's "wild-card" playoff berth as the team with the best runner-up record in the conference. They play the Rams next Sunday but finish against Chicago Bears.

So it would appear, barring a total collapse by St. Louis and Washington, that these two teams will wind up one-two one way or another in the East and both will be playoff-bound.

Assuming St. Louis wins the division and Washington finishes second, the NFC playoffs will begin with the Cards at Minnesota on Dec. 21 and the "wildcard" Redskins at Los Angeles, Sunday, Dec. 22.

SLIM CHANCES
Dallas and Detroit still can make it as wild-card teams, but the Cowboys must beat Cleveland Browns and Oakland Raiders and hope Washington drops its two games. Detroit not only has to beat both Cincinnati Bengals and Philadelphia but hope both Washington and Dallas collapse.

In the AFC, only Oakland, in the West, has a division title in hand although Pittsburgh Steelers are a victory away from taking the Central crown.

The Steelers remained 1½ games ahead of Cincinnati when the Bengals lost Monday night to Miami Dolphins.

Pittsburgh plays at New England next Sunday and, if the Steelers lose and Cincinnati beats Detroit, it'll set up a Bengals-Steelers showdown Pittsburgh on Dec. 14. But if Cincinnati loses to the Lions, Pittsburgh wins the title and Cincinnati is out of the playoffs.

The Dolphins kept the AFC

East race and conference wild-card possibilities in turmoil. Miami remained tied with Buffalo Bills at 9-3. The Patriots, with a loss to Oakland, dropped to 7-5 and they virtually fell out of wild-card range.

In order to make the playoffs, the Patriots must win their last two games—against Pittsburgh and Miami—and the Bills and Dolphins must lose their two.

In that unlikely event, all three would end up tied at 9-5. Buffalo would win the division title by virtue of two victories over New England, and the Patriots would take the wild card with two wins over Miami.

It's more likely, however, that Miami and Buffalo will end up one-two in the East. Assuming Miami takes the title, the Dolphins will begin the AFC playoffs in Oakland on Dec. 22 and the wild-card Bills would play in Pittsburgh on Dec. 23.

Freddie (Curly) Neal - Harlem Globetrotters.

Globetrotters at Sports Palace

The first time you see him, the incongruity of his name versus his physical appearance hits you right in the eye. Freddie "Curly" Neal has a pate that gleams under arena lights like a well polished apple.

Curly is a standout performer with the Harlem Globetrotters, who will be at Sports Palace on Dec. 15th, and is a favorite of Globetrotter fans the world over. Curly's hairless appearance is not an act of nature. As a youngster he patterned his clean shaven dome after Yul Brynner. Neal saw a Brynner movie, liked the unique look and gave himself a trademark.

Neal's extremely high forehead is not his only trademark. He happens to be one super basketball player. "I was never a tremendous natural athlete, so it was hard work more than anything that got me to where I am today. I set my goals and went after them," Neal says. "I have to work every day to keep the sharpness required of a Trotter. You get a lot of work playing every day as we do, but there's also the opportunity to develop bad habits. It's too easy to begin going through the motions. One day you wake up and haven't got it any more," Curly concludes.

Neal has always been a hard worker. At Johnson C. Smith

University, he developed as an athlete and studiously applied himself as an art major. Today he uses his art as an outlet while traveling with the Globetrotters.

A sketch pad and a basketball are an odd combination. Curly Neal never forgets what he has to do with each.

Ohio's Griffin walks off with Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) — Until he became the fifth underclassman to win the Heisman Trophy, Ohio State running ace Archie Griffin wasn't aware that none of the four previous players who won it as juniors had been able to repeat as seniors.

Now he knows. "Everyone's searing it into me now," Griffin said Tuesday when he was announced as the 1974 winner of the Heisman Trophy, which annually goes to the outstanding college football player in the country.

Griffin, a 5-foot-9, 185-pounder who holds the Big Ten and Ohio State career rushing records, intends to give it his best shot in 1975 in an attempt to become the first two-time Heisman winner.

"I'm gonna put my best foot forward," he said, "and if the voters think I'm good enough to win it again, then I'll win it."

Griffin has felt the pressure in rushing for more than 100 yards in every game during the last two years—an NCAA record 22 consecutive regular-season games, plus the 1974 Rose Bowl—and he expects to be even more of a target now that he stands above the crowd as the 40th Heisman winner.

His next outing is against Southern California and the Heisman runner-up in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1.

"I'm sure they'll probably come and shoot at me more, but I'll just go out and do my best in every game. Coach (Woody) Hayes says you either get better or you get worse and I'll just try to improve next year." That will take some doing since Griffin has 4,064 yards rushing in his college career and gained 1,620 yards this season—most among the nation's major collegians.

HAD BIG MARGIN
Griffin captured the Heisman in a runaway over Southern California senior tailback Anthony Davis. The two will meet in the Rose Bowl for the third year in a row.

Griffin received 483 first-place votes—each worth three points—and 1,920 of a possible 2,547 points from a nation-wide panel of 849 electors. He was named second on 198 ballots and third on 75 others. The votes were tabulated on a 3-2-1 point basis.

Davis received 120 first-place votes, 148 seconds and 163 thirds for 819 points.

Joe Washington, a junior half-back from Oklahoma, finished third with 87 first-place votes and 661 points. Then came Notre Dame quarterback Tom Clements and Nebraska quarterback Dave Humm.

Rounding out the top 10 were Michigan quarterback Dennis Franklin, Oklahoma linebacker Rod Shoate, Brigham Young quarterback Gary Sheide, Maryland defensive lineman Randy White and California quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

The other juniors to win the Heisman were Doc Blanchard of Army in 1945, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist in 1948, Vic Janowicz of Ohio State in 1950 and Roger Staubach of Navy in 1963.

Marv Levy has high praise for members of staff along with Front Four and linebackers

MONTREAL (CP) — Marv Levy was asked Tuesday if he had felt his Montreal Alouettes had a chance of winning it all before the 1974 Canadian Football League season got under way.

"Winning it all is always a longshot," said Levy, who coached Montreal to a Grey Cup championship in his second year as head coach.

"I thought we were as good as anybody else and better than a few others. I knew we were not going to finish last but after that it would be a dogfight."

Levy said if there was a turning point in the season it was the "two tie games we hung in there against Edmonton and Toronto."

The Alouettes came from behind to tie Edmonton 28-28 Oct. 8 and battled to a 13-13 draw against the Argonauts five days later.

HAD SLUMP
There was one point where Montreal went winless in four games—losing the two out west and tying Edmonton and Toronto.

"Everybody has slumps. Edmonton did too. Nobody waltzed through the season. I keep saying that if you ever get the feeling, even if it's only subconscious, that it doesn't take 100 per cent effort all the time to win, then you're in trouble."

Levy said his linebacking trio of Carl Crennell, Chuck Zapiec and Mike Widger was the best in the country and also praised his front four.

Levy also lauded his three assistant coaches—Rod Rust, Dan Sekanovich and Gene Gaines.

"A good head coach can't be afraid of hiring assistants who know more than he does. I have three great ones right here."

Levy said the Alouettes have the Canadian negotiation rights to Archie Griffin of Ohio State, this year's Heisman Trophy winner as the top player in U.S. college football. Griffin graduates in 1976.

Montreal also has the rights to Anthony Davis of University of Southern California, the runner up in this year's Heisman voting.

Bubba Smith's injury suit to stand as filed

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge refused Monday to dismiss a $2.5 million personal injury suit filed by Oakland Raiders defensive end Bubba Smith against the Tampa Sports Authority and the National Football League.

Smith, 29, claimed he injured his knee in a fall during a pre-season game at Tampa Stadium on Aug. 26, 1972. Smith was a member of Baltimore Colts at the time of the alleged injury.

He filed suit last August charging negligence in the handling of sideline markers by game officials and said the markers should have been removed from his path before he fell.

The suit does not specifically allege that Smith struck the marker.

In a hearing before district court judge Ben Krentzman, Tampa Sports Authority lawyer Bill Hahn moved to throw out the suit.

How to mix exercise into regular working schedule

OTTAWA (CP) — A gym in the office basement where the stockroom used to be? Or a ten-minute stretch-and-jerk break for the girls in the steno pool? Those are among a number of ideas under discussion at a three-day conference of business executives, workers, bureaucrats and others interested in mixing exercise into regular working days.

Idea of the conference, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said as it opened Monday, is to show workers and their bosses that physical fitness "might even be good business."

Proper exercise can make executives and employees happier and more productive.

Philippe de Gaspe Beaubien, president of Telemedia Communications Ltd., of Montreal, and a consultant to the health department, agreed, saying it was imperative that people find ways of "sweating out their tensions."

Mr. Beaubien said exercise and fitness programs may eventually become as much a part of the work-a-day world as health benefits and fire protection.

EXERCISE INEXPENSIVE

Many worthwhile programs could be started with little cost: Companies could convert small, unused rooms, for instance, into exercise parlors.

To encourage those attending to take the word back to their offices and plants, conference organizers offered delegates various fitness tests to point out problems brought on by stress and strain of modern working.

Two hours before sessions began at 9 a.m., technicians took blood tests from delegates which, along with medical histories, were fed into a computer to produce print-outs predicting the chances participants had of dying during the next 10 years.

The health department is letting a limited number of doctors use the test on a trial basis to show people the type of risks they run in their day-to-day lives.

Idea of the test, called the "health hazard appraisal," is to give people a "clearer understanding of their health bank balance."

Delegates are also given a clear idea of just how many calories they'll soak up and expand during the conference.

CALORIES LISTED

Itineraries handed out to the 250 delegates come complete with graphs showing, for instance, that they will consume 841 calories at lunch—a cold buffet of ham, olives and asparagus together with pea soup and coffee—and another 339 during "nutritional breaks," for coffee, juice and muffins.

Each will tuck away at least 175 more at an evening reception if they drink 1.5 ounces of booze and fill their glasses up with mix.

All told, delegates would take in 2,946 calories if they ate the lunches and banquets provided at the meeting.

But they will burn up even more—a total of 3,074—by taking part in the activities set out for them.

Four and three-quarters hours of lectures, for instance, consumes 566 calories, the itinerary said. Another 391 would be used up if a delegate talked with others for three hours.

Organizers also built exercise sessions into the conference program.

For 15 minutes during the afternoon session, all 250 were to stand beside their seats and take part in an exercise program that may someday be used by workers in offices across the country.

All the delicious baked goods were sold by Mrs. Eileen Richards and Mrs. Mae Dunn.

The work table articles and also the raffie tickets were looked after by Mrs. Bea Drew and Mrs. Mabel Peck. Mrs. Jean Dillon and Mrs. H. Heath sold the white elephant articles. Mrs. H. Flanders sold tickets at the door.

The lucky ticket was drawn by Mrs. Black, which was claimed by Mrs. Frances Varney. The prize was a beautiful blanket.

The Guild wishes to thank everyone who helped in any way, especially those who brought in food and gave donations. It all made such a successful tea. A card party is planned for Jan. 16 at 8 o'clock. Everybody is welcome.

Being no further business the meeting was closed with prayers by Rev. Harold Brazel. All sat down to a lovely cup of tea, a birthday cake was lighted and brought to the table for Mrs. Mabel Peck who had a birthday recently. All sang the Birthday Song. The next meeting will be held on Jan. 9 at the Rectory.

Dr. Lamb Tests needed to spot disease

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is hypoglycemia, but I do not understand it. How can a doctor suspect it from a routine office test? What blood level is considered too low?

When I am at my worst I become semi-comatose and before the condition I feel faint, weak and a bit as if I were drunk. I am aware that I invariably have terrible leg and feet cramps if I indulge in high carbohydrate foods in the evening. I don't smoke and do not have a weight problem. I am a compulsive overeater and arrest this compulsion by belonging to a life-saving fellowship called "Overeaters Anonymous," which is similar to Alcoholics Anonymous.

DEAR READER — Hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) is a complex problem. Many of the symptoms it causes are from the outpouring of adrenaline. Whenever the body is threatened our adrenal gland pours out adrenaline, our so-called "fight or flight" hormone. It causes the body to release stored glucose so its energy can be immediately available. So, when the blood sugar falls, pouring out adrenaline is one way the body protects itself.

There are a lot of other situations in life to cause your adrenaline to start pumping out. Anxiety of any sort can do this, fright or any emergency. A hairy ride in heavy traffic can do it.

Adrenaline causes increased and forceful heart beats. It causes sweating, tremors, and other symptoms identified with low blood glucose. But, anything that causes an excess release of adrenaline can cause the same symptoms. It is not too surprising then that anxious people, for psychological reasons, often have the same symptoms a person has with hypoglycemia. This is why so many people with basic anxiety problems and who do not really have hypoglycemia get wrongly diagnosed as being victims of hypoglycemia. It is a waste basket term for the frequent anxiety situations of modern society. Often an obese person is fat from overeating because of underlying anxiety, not from real hypoglycemia.

Your symptoms are consistent with hypoglycemia but the only way to find out is to measure the blood glucose level when you are having these symptoms, preferably during a spontaneous attack.

A casual blood glucose test in the doctor's office may not tell you much. In between attacks the level may be entirely normal. The blood glucose level is controlled by many factors. For more information on this write to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. and ask for the booklet on Hypoglycemia (Low Blood Sugar). Send 50 cents to cover costs.

And, a word about alcohol to all those who have the hypoglycemia-type problems. Leave it alone. Alcohol prevents your liver from using the enzymes. Alcohol prevents the normal enzymes in your liver from being able to form glucose from proteins and releasing glucose into your bloodstream. One of the consequences of overindulgence is hypoglycemia. It just makes good sense then to avoid alcohol at all times. You need those normal liver enzyme functions to keep your blood sugar in balance.

Pakistan seems to be collapsing into shambles

Suffering two years of economic reversals, Pakistan appears to be collapsing into a political shambles as it continues to fight off the after-effects of the Bangladesh independence war.

Amid the turmoil is the threat that Prime Minister Ali Bhutto would use a Canadian-built nuclear reactor to produce a nuclear device to match India's test blast of last May.

Bhutto has already suspended normal governments in Baluchistan and Northwest Frontier provinces, installing his own governors in their places.

The national parliament in Islamabad faces a walkout by opposition members to protest Bhutto's strict—sometimes violent—crackdown on separatist and anti-government influences.

Since the Bangladesh war of 1971, which removed Pakistan's Eastern wing, the country has experienced continual battles between the central government and separatist-minded provinces.

Thousands have been imprisoned during the conflicts, which have been marked by riots and terrorism.

POOREST TERRITORY
The bloody Bangladesh war relieved Pakistan of its most unhappy and poorest territory.

Freed of the drag of supporting poverty-ridden Bangladesh (East Pakistan), the Pakistani economy enjoyed fast recovery after the war and Pakistan became a grain exporter.

But with 1973 came disastrous floods, followed by equally damaging drought this year.

The economy, which Bhutto had hoped would solve the wounds of the war, is in disrepair.

India's nuclear test—aided by Canadian technology and material—added to the peril Pakistan has always seen in its neighbor.

But Bhutto's real military problem is that the United States has not lifted its embargo on arms shipments to Pakistan, imposed two years ago.

If Pakistan cannot get enough conventional arms, Bhutto has said, "we can't do anything but explode some sort of nuclear device."

STRICT AGREEMENT
To use the Canadian reactor at Karachi to supply plutonium for a nuclear blast, Pakistan would have to violate an agreement with Ottawa providing for inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

That agreement is stricter than the one covering India's CIRUS reactor which apparently provided India's explosive material.

There is no evidence that Bhutto will resort to a costly nuclear explosion against his international commitments, although Pakistan has not signed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

His references to the possibility seem aimed at prompting Washington to send additional arms.

But observers are suggesting that his mind might be changed if he cannot get more arms, if his personal power within Pakistan continues to be threatened and if Pakistanis see a renewed danger from India.

In Canada and US

Says natural population growth almost zero

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A UN study says that the natural population growth rate of Canada and the United States appears to be approaching "close to zero."

The study was prepared by the UN Secretariat based on its own estimates and projections. It was part of a lengthy report by the UN economic and social council on the world social situation, dealing initially with North America.

Recent demographic changes in both countries are a continuation of the trends of the 1960s, the report says.

In Canada, the birth rate declined to 15.9 per 1,000 in 1972 from 17.6 in 1969.

"Since the proportion of women of child-bearing age changed little during the period, this fall in the crude birth rate represents a real decrease in fertility," says the report.

Young wives in the U.S. anticipated having an average of only 2.3 children in a survey taken in 1973, down from 2.9 in a similar survey in 1967. The "replacement level" is an average of 2.2 children per wife, the report says.

The report noted that infant mortality rates were lower in Canada than in the U.S. and life expectancy higher for Canadians.

INFANT DEATHS DOWN

Infant mortality rates declined to 17.1 per thousand in 1972 from 19 per thousand in 1969 in Canada. Crude death rates did not change significantly. Life expectancy at birth averaged 72 years for males and females in Canada and 71.1 in the U.S.

The report also showed these other trends in the population of Canada: —The average size of households dropped to 3.6 persons from 4.0 between 1961 and 1971.

This change was partly due to the decline in birth rates and partly to an increase in the number of single-person households, young adults or the elderly living alone.

—A significant effect of the recent decline in population growth has been a change in the distribution of population by age. Between 1966 and 1971, the proportion of the population 15 to 24 years increased to 18.6 from 16.5 per cent and the number under five declined to 8.4 from 12.4 per cent. Those above 65 made up 8.1 per cent of the population in 1971 compared with 7.7 per cent in 1966.

—The over-all distribution of population by ethnic group also changed. The most rapid growth was among persons of Greek, Portuguese and Chinese origins. Immigration also swelled the Italian ethnic group which comprised 3.4 per cent of the 1971 population compared with 2.5 per cent in 1961.

The European ethnic groups, including the French, Scandinavian and eastern European groups, were those which were not replenished by immigration.

The higher birth rate among native Indians was mainly responsible for their growth to 1.4 from 1.2 per cent of the total population during the 1961-71 period.

It is estimated that by next year, 78.4 per cent of the population will be living in urban areas compared with 75.6 in 1970 and 69.6 in 1961. The proportion of Canadians living in cities of 100,000 or more rose to 47.5 per cent in 1971 from 43.4 in 1961. Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia were the only provinces to increase their share of the population in the decade 1961-71.

SHOWBEAT

Are you ready for aura horror?

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Every once in a while, a new kind of horror movie comes along which sets a trend and inspires copies. "Frankenstein" started the monster movies and "Willard" started the evil-animal movies.

Now Mardi Rustam, in his first production, thinks he has a new trend-setter in a film called "The Kirlian Force." It's what he describes as an "aura-horror" movie.

It is based on scientific (or at least pseudo-scientific) fact — that every living thing gives off an aura which can be photographed. Kirlian photography, developed in Russia, is the basis of this concept.

"The Kirlian Force" takes this idea one step beyond science. What if the aura could be willed to act on its own? How does that grab you?

From that idea, Rustam and his team have dreamed up a spooky story about a man — Jim Hutton — who sits quietly in his living room while his aura rushes around town knocking off his enemies.

This is a major step in Jim Hutton's career. He's the man Hollywood always stuck in frothy little comedies and he always did well by them.

"I was always the comedy actor," he says, "but Hollywood would never let me do anything serious. Now I even get to do a kind of Dorian Gray finish — all the sins my aura has committed settle on my face at the end."

The film ends with a nice horror touch. As Hutton's body is being cremated, his aura is still off doing dirty deeds. But there's one more swiftoero which you'll have to see the picture to find out.

I'll tell you, however, that the way is left open to a sequel.

Rustam is an Iraqi, who grew up wanting to get into the film business and, in particular, the Hollywood film business. When he was 20, he emigrated to the United

JIM HUTTON: A Dorian Gray finish.

States, settled in Chicago and studied film. He got into the film laboratory business and prospered. Then he moved to Hollywood and prospered even more.

Over the years, Rustam has put money into some films and backed them to success, but this is the first time he's the producer of record.

"It was," Jim Hutton says, "the best-prepared film of any I've done — everything, from the script to the locations, was set to go before the first shot was made. That must be something of a record."

Rustam may have set a record, too, for speed of making a movie. Not just the filming, but the whole process. From the day the first shot was made until the answer print was ready took only 120 days.

They think they have a winner and that's the reason for the speed. They want to rush "The Kirlian Force" into the theaters as soon as possible.

Before somebody makes another aura-horror movie. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Book tells how to cut food costs

By paying close attention, a shopper can knock a few pennies off his grocery bill after reading Hard to Swallow. Walter Stewart provides a 13-point battle plan to help the customer win a few rounds over his friendly neighborhood supermarket.

The reader is cautioned not to expect miracles. Even if he acquires impeccable buying habits, scornful impulse purchases and convenience foods, taking advantage of specials and buying house brands, the odds are still against him.

Some of the factors pushing up his food costs are beyond human control, such as drought, excessive rain and the disappearance of a small fish off the coast of Peru which was a major world source of protein. And the individual can do only so much to cope with global overpopulation.

These and other inflationary influences, national and international, are enough to ensure the permanent end of the era of cheap food. But Stewart suggests that improvements can be achieved by dealing with a few problems closer to home.

BOARDS CRITICIZED
In prose that is anything but hard to swallow, the author guides the layman through the intricacies of vertical integration, production quotas, marketing boards and bait-and-switch selling.

He absolves the farmers from the major share of the blame, conceding that they receive a barely adequate return for their labor, but is critical of producer-controlled marketing boards that push up prices by limiting production.

Stewart is harsher in his assessment of processors and retailers, whom he accuses of taking windfall profits by imposing additional markups in passing on price increases granted to the farmer. And he is critical of the industry for its advertising and packaging methods.

The author gives the back of his hand to Beryl Plumtree and her food prices review board, but acknowledges some efforts by the federal and provincial governments to grapple with the complex problem, while offering a few legislative suggestions of his own.

By JACK TRACY

The Canadian Press Gregory Clark, one of the country's great story-tellers, has turned out another collection of his short pieces identified as The Packstack, which appeared in many Canadian daily newspapers over 14 years.

The book is entitled Grandma Preferred Steak, also the title of the first story in the collection of 125 little yarns which Greg calls "obiter dicta, things noted in passing."

It is a homey piece about Greg's grandmother who preferred sirloin steak to all the game—partridge, duck and deer—that Nimrod friends distributed in her day.

While many of the bits of comment and homespun tales are in that vein, one of the pieces Greg prefers has a more serious note.

In it, he gives his thoughts on a visit to a military cemetery, burial place of war dead. The 82-year-old writer, decorated for his service in the First World War, writes:

"Captains and corporals, colonels and privates, they do not lie, they stand, and have stood for year upon year. Not strangers as we will be when we take our place beside other strangers but companions of a special order of men."

Greg joined Toronto Star as a reporter in 1911. He has been an associate editor with Weekend Magazine since 1951.

Although he has covered many of the world's big stories, he calls himself a writer rather than a reporter. The kind of human little pieces in his new collection—one of a series that began in 1971—is an indication of that.

SLEEPING ON THE JOB is no serious offense as far as the Montagnard tribesmen of Vietnam are concerned. Mother carries her day-care center on her back while working the fields of Pleiku where the usually restive Montagnards have settled down to farming.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

According to National Wildlife Federation estimates, demands for U.S. forest products is projected to double in 30 years though production will not double for 50 years. The World Almanac notes. Wildlife officials project that production could be increased dramatically by efficient management of timber areas.

In order to preserve its neutrality, Switzerland, on April 2, 1946, announced to the world that it would not join the United Nations, and has remained outside of that organization to this day.

The theater's orchestra comes from the Greek and literally means the "dancing place." It was that portion of the ancient theater reserved for the dancing of the chorus, and also for the instrumentalists.

European fashion takes to the road

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — It was almost like taking a hurried trip through the fashion markets of eight European countries. The din of voices talking excitedly in French, Italian, Hebrew, English, German and even Turkish added to the glamor of previewing 1975 European spring/summer fashions at a European Fashion Fair right in New York.

Fully a month before the pre-a-porter showings in Paris, European Fashion Fair was shown here and at the California Apparel Mart where western department stores and boutique buyers had the opportunity of buying these fashions for their customers.

European ready-to-wear fashion has come of age for the American woman. Almost all the problems of fit, styling and delivery have been eliminated so that now we have fashions really geared to our lifestyle and our pocketbooks. But none of the fashion excitement has been eliminated.

Lengths for day are mid-calf or just below the knee. For evening skirts reach mostly to the floor. The chemise and smock looks continue into spring. A trend is indicated via a more constructed fashion with belted or defined waistlines, with interest centered in shoulder, yoke and collar treatments.

"Instant" dressing with chic is achieved with body shirts and matching skirts that double as playsuits or dresses and can be easily rolled up and packed.

Dresses include shirt-dresses with a "Kitty Foyle" flavor. There are sundresses and pinafores in a heady variety of colors and prints. Skirts are often on the bias, wrapped, fuller than A-line and even dirndl. Pleating is popular with released pleats, box pleats and stitched-down pleating.

Emile Tubiana, Director of the European Fashion Fair, was born in Tunisia of French parents. His vast business enterprises are headquartered in Düsseldorf, Germany, with offices in many major cities all over the world. In a few short years he's made international trade fairs a vital selling force for many industries.

"Even now some buyers cannot go to Europe for pre-a-porter and most European manufacturers haven't showrooms in the U.S. I know that European Fashion Fair is performing a service for people on both sides of the Atlantic," he said.

"Buyers have been enthusiastic," he added. "We had 500 for the first show 18 months ago. We now have 2000."

This coming May, Cavin & Tubiana will be responsible for the First World Congress on Energy and Petrochemicals in Teheran, Iran. So you see, fashion's not Tubiana's only interest. He is working energetically toward making the trade fair a means of solving one of the most important aspects of survival today — the field of energy.

TORONTO, December 5th — Do you feel snowed under with last minute shopping? Then do look at the Bissell Handi Sweeper. Small enough to fit a Christmas stocking, it comes boxed ready to gift wrap. But it's not just cute — it's a real worker. Its rotary brush flicks up ash tray spills, needles under the tree, dirt out of corners and other tight spots — even grooms the pool table. No cord, no batteries makes the trouble-free Bissell Handi Sweeper a great "person" gift for either a "him" or "her". Costs about $6.00. And for a free Home Carpet Care booklet, write Bissell, Ltd., Niagara Falls, Ont.

FOR THOSE BUSY PRE-CHRISTMAS DAYS:
Beef Casserole
2 lbs. beef cut in pieces — not browned
1 tin beef consomme
1 tin small onions (Cudneys)
1 - 28 oz. tin tomatoes
Pepper
4 tbsp. tapioca
Combine and cook in 300 deg. oven for 4 hours.

WHAT WOULD CHRISTMAS BE without the festive treats and traditional foods that help make this the merriest of all seasons? And because of their size, you'll find a good selection at DOMINION STORES. Now is the time to stock up on candies, nuts, raisins, fruit cakes, mince pies and plum puddings. And don't forget the fun holiday decorations — candles, paper table cloths, and napkins — all the things that add so much to the enjoyment of this happy Yuletide Season. Instead of making several hectic, last minute trips, I plan to pick up a few of these items each time I'm shopping at Dominion.

MORE AND MORE CANADIANS are serving wines. A few helpful hints: Champagne and all sparkling wines are always served chilled. White or rose-tinted wines very cool or ice cold; sherries and madirans cool. Red wines, sweeter red ports and all sweet wines at room temperature — or slightly cooled.

Spring/summer 1975 European ready-to-wear fits into the American lifestyle with a brushed blue denim blazer and art deco print skirt that sings in 1975. The '30s and '40s fashion were a popular theme at the European Fashion Fair preview. The ensemble (left) is by Clubman of France. Paco Rabanne filmy crepe georgette water-color floral print (right) has top that bares the midriff. The matching long skirt can also be paired with apolyester shirt in the same print.

Ann Landers

Teens ought to take heed

We drank to forget and were forever haunted.

We drank for freedom and became slaves.

We drank for friendship and made enemies.

We drank to cope with life and invited death.

—Daily Reader
Dear Reader: Your friend sounds like a man who knows what he's talking about. It was good of you to share his wisdom. Thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to comment on your advice to the young bride who took her teenage sister in to live with her when their parents were killed. It seems the teenager was uncontrollable, gave her older sister ulcers and was ruining her marriage.

Your suggestion that "perhaps a foster home would be the best place for Dee" was, in my opinion, not very good. Before resorting to foster placement, why didn't you recommend seeking out other blood relatives — cousins, aunts, grandparents, even Dee's stepfather, despite her sister's allegation that "he doesn't want her."

In our family-destructive culture, it seems to me that your powerful influence ought to be used to strengthen blood-related family ties. — Dr. R.S.M., Department of Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois
Dear Dr. M.: Those "Blood thank you for taking the time to relatives" you refer to were certainly aware of the death of the teenager's parents. If they were interested in making a home for the girl they would have made their wishes known. "Blood-related family ties" are often more bloody than related. I've received many letters from children reared in foster homes, expressing tremendous affection and deep appreciation for their foster parents. I believe my advice was correct, but I express another point of view.

Dear Ann Landers: Our young teenagers read your column and I am so pleased they do. You tell them the same things their parents do, but somehow it sounds "different" from Ann Landers. They listen to you.

As a token of thanks I send a little bit of wisdom I ran across recently in a small local publication. It was written by a friend. I hope you will print it. Here it is:

Positively Negative
We drank for happiness and became unhappy.

We drank for joy and became miserable.

We drank for sociability and became argumentative.

We drank for sophistication and became obnoxious.

We drank for friendship and made enemies.

We drank for sleep and awakened without rest.

We drank for strength and felt weak.

We drank "medicinally" and acquired health problems.

We drank for relaxation and got the shakes.

We drank for bravery and became afraid.

We drank for confidence and became doubtful.

We drank to make conversation easier and slurred our speech.

We drank to feel heavenly and ended up feeling like hell.

Ladies Aid — card party

HUNTINGVILLE — The Ladies Aid met on November 19 at the home of Mrs. H. Aldrich, with eleven members and three guests present, and the President, Mrs. Bradley, in the chair. Carol Aldrich read the Parable of the Good Samaritan. The various reports were read and accepted and it was decided to hold the next meeting on December 10.

Mrs. Lyonnais thanked all the members for their work selling tickets on the afghan. Mrs. W. Aldrich led a discussion on the Christmas baskets, final details to be settled at the next meeting. The roll call was answered by naming an article on sale in the stores 25 years ago, and now no longer available.

After the Mizpah benediction, a contest was held, which was won by Mrs. Deveny. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter and Carolyn Booth. +++

The prizes at the 500 party held on Nov. 6 went to Lou Pickett, Audrey Comeau and G. McLaughlin, and the men's, to Reg Dewing, A. Pickett and Byron Labonte.

Door prizes were won by Daisy Herring, G. Sims, Margaret Hover, Jessie McBain and Henry Hunting. Myrtle Sage took home the box of groceries.

At the card party on November 20, the ladies' prizes were won by H. Harvey, Alice Hart and G. McLaughlin. The men's went to Ayton Cromwell, E.J. Smith and A.G. Smith.

The lucky winners of the door prizes were L.M. Johnston, Mrs. Alberta Cutler, Cliff Nutbrown, Miss F. Wright, and Margaret Hover. The Sages again won the box of groceries.

PERFORMANCE — NEW HOUR DRAMAS — Performance, a 22-week series of one-hour anthology dramas, makes its debut on CBC-TV, Sunday, December 8 at 9 p.m. Here are scenes from four of the two score plays to be seen during the season, which run until next spring. UPPER LEFT: Paxton Whitehead and Patricia Gage in Shaw's delightful two-character comedy, Village Wooing (for telecast Dec. 29). UPPER RIGHT: Helen Burns and Cyril Cusack in The Good and Faithful Servant (TC Jan 5), a biting and funny play on the effect of "employee relations", in human terms. LOWER LEFT: Francois-Regis Klarner and Jackie Burroughs demonstrate "the Bennett buggy" of the Depression era in Ten Lost Years (TC Feb. 2). LOWER RIGHT: John Calicos as the president of the court in The Trial of Sinyavsky and Daniel (TC in March), based on actual transcripts of the Moscow trial of two Russian authors in 1966.

St. James Evening Guild

FOSTER — Twelve members of St. James Evening Guild met at the home of Mrs. Ethel Marsh of West Bolton on November 14. Mrs. Muriel Whitehead, president, opened the meeting and reported that the October card party had been successful. No financial report was given due to the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. Dot de Solla. The corresponding secretary, work convenor and forgotten patient convenor gave reports. The president reported that two boxes of good used clothing had been sent to Douglas Hospital, and that the members of St. James Guild had contributed 30 articles to the Christmas Shopping Spree held at the Douglas Hospital.

Each member is asked to bring a Christmas gift for Virginia our "forgotten patient" to the December meeting. These gifts will be forwarded to her at the hospital.

Mrs. Whitehead reminded the nominating committee that the new slate of officers should be presented at the next meeting. Final plans for the table taken at the Legion Community Mart in Knowlton were made.

The president moved a vote of thanks to Bern de Solla for fixing the organ in the church.

The lucky package was won by Margaret Dawson. The ladies will meet with Mrs. Ethel Bissell for the December meeting.

It was moved by Ethel Bissell and seconded by Frances Johnston that the meeting close. The hostess served lunch, after which Mrs. Muriel Whitehead thanked her for opening her home for the meeting.

Down and out after eight years of TV stardom

Paul Petersen is back — as an author

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — From 1958 to 1966, Paul Petersen was America's best-loved teen-ager. As the son of The Donna Reed Show, he was invited into America's living room every week, and given a place in the nation's collective heart.

But that doesn't help much after the show is cancelled. And Paul Petersen had some tough years. Now, at 29, he's back—but not as an actor.

Petersen was part of the Donna Reed family for eight profitable years. He was 12 when it all began and 20 when they dropped the show, in '66. He grew up on the show, changed from a boy to a man while playing a youth.

He says he's remained close to Miss Reed ever since, and Carl Betz and Shelley Fabares (who played his father and sister), too.

"Donna cried with me when things weren't going so well," he says.

Until he started on the show, Paul Petersen had been planning on a career as an architectural engineer. He was a bright child, particularly so in arithmetic. He had his future clearly mapped out in his alert young mind.

He had done a little acting and modelling, mostly at the behest of his family, and enjoyed it. He recognized that it was a profitable venture.

"But I had never thought of making that my career," he says. "I knew what I was going to do, and acting wasn't it."

When he was offered The Donna Reed Show role, the family conferred and accepted. It was, they thought, just another few weeks of work.

"Nobody thought that it would be a career in itself," he says.

A few years later—some where around 14 or 15, as he remembers it—he changed his life goal.

"Things were going well as an actor," he said, "and I was enjoying it. I decided that I would be an actor, that I would learn my craft and work hard at it."

PAUL PETERSEN: Over the cliff to a new career.

So the dream of becoming an architectural engineer was abandoned in favor of the path of least resistance. It seemed, at the time, to be a sensible decision. As one of the stars of one of the top-rated TV shows, it seemed logical that his career and his success were both assured.

"Then I was 20," he says, "and suddenly there was nothing. The show was cancelled. I did a few parts in a few movies, but, year by year, the work slipped."

When he was 21, the trust fund that his parents had been investing in, according to California law, came to him.

"What a time that was!" he says.

He took his money, which was considerable. He rented a limousine and an airplane, to take his father on a big trip to Las Vegas.

"I took $500 and placed my very first bet," he says. "This was at the blackjack table. I remember I was dealt a 13, and I stuck. The dealer went over 21, so I won."

He won some more and figured this was a pleasant way to make a few bucks. Then he took his winnings and went over to the chemin de fer table, where the big boys play for big money.

"I lost nine straight hands," he says. "That was $4,000. That cured me of gambling forever."

He went through the money that his 12 years with Donna Reed had brought him. He figures he squandered $1 million by the time he was 24. He gradually went broke.

He grew a beard, a mustache, long hair. He took to going to parties—he was still invited to parties—so he could eat the hors d'oeuvres. That was what he lived on.

He didn't work any more. But he went to parties, to eat. At one party, he met a man named David Oliphant, who wondered why everybody seemed to know the bearded young man.

"Because," Petersen explained, "I am the walking dead. They all know that I am dead. They are afraid they may become some day."

Oliphant took an interest in him. They talked about writing, and Oliphant took Petersen back East with him, so he could write.

But there was one more adventure, in Hollywood, before he went East. He drove his car over a cliff. He walked away from the wreckage with $2 to his name, all that remained of his fortune. It was a symbolic gesture, at best.

Oliphant took care of him and encouraged his writing. Petersen, who had become a crack driver, wrote a book called "High Performance Driving."

And then Simon & Schuster, the major publishing firm, heard about him and his writing and asked him to create a character and write a series of paperback novels.

Petersen dreamed up "The Smuggler," alias Eric Saveman, a Bond-type operator who does everything and does it all well. Four books in the series are already out, two more have been written, two more are on order.

If you see one, you'll see a picture of "The Smuggler" on the cover—a handsome devil with a thick, flowing black mustache and a challenging look in his eyes. You may think that's Eric Saveman, but it's really Paul Petersen, who, besides everything else, modelled for the cover illustration.

Some good news from St. Croix

Island Center cultivates culture

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Not so long ago one of the most delightful and popular of Caribbean ports of call, the Virgin Islands have suffered greatly from the publicity of recent years.

For many mainlanders, the mention of St. Croix conjures up visions not merely of a tropical paradise, but of one overcast with racial tension and unrest.

As real and troubling as headlined incidents have been, however, they are still not the entire story of the islands today, as many concerned islanders are anxious to point out. There are great efforts among thinking residents toward reconciling and harmonizing the interests of a multiracial people.

There is particular emphasis on the island's unique cultural heritage.

An amateur theatrical group of blacks and white recently sang and danced its way through five memorable performances of Rogers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella." More than 800 residents and tourists turned out each night to applaud this venture of the Island Center, a community facility built for the people of St. Croix through private contributions.

Perhaps the most unique feature of the Center is the opportunity it affords the natives to explore their cultural heritage and that of the West Indies and to share it with their white neighbors and visitors from the States. Native dances and art are among the most popular attractions. And there is a growing exchange of talent between the islands of St. Croix, St. John and St. Thomas with neighboring Puerto Rico.

At the celebration of the 25th anniversary of a landmark hotel in Christiansted, guests danced to the music of a traditional Scratch-Band (the players make music from a variety of home-made instruments), ate island foods and drank famous Virgin Islands rum. Among those present were the governor and his wife and film star Maureen O'Hara, who with her husband Captain Charles Blair resides on St. Croix.

St. Croix remains as colorful and historic as ever, and responsible citizens are interested in maintaining their place in the Caribbean sun. This is also part of the story.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

Children of St. Croix participating in the production of "Cinderella" at the Island Center await the arrival of the prince.

Waiting for Harry

Houdini is the life of a seance

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The big question concerning the 13 people at the table was this: would Harry Houdini decide that this was a convenient time for him to come back from the dead?

If he was ever going to make the trip tonight was the night. Everything seemed to be favorable. A distinguished magician, Mark Wilson, was hosting a dinner party in the Houdini Room of the Magic Castle. All the guests were men and women who were receptive. And there was a medium, Sandy Spillman, who was an old hand with dead bodies, so to speak.

The Houdini Room houses what the Magic Castle call the greatest collection of Houdiniana anywhere — many pairs of his handcuffs, a straitjacket he once wriggled out of, chains he unchained, posters, letters, everything.

And, to make the entire evening more conducive to things spiritual, it was Halloween. Not only were there spirits abroad naturally, but Halloween was, Wilson said, the anniversary of Houdini's death.

When he died in 1926 he had promised his wife, Beatrice, that he would try to return. Every year, for 10 years, she had held a seance on Oct. 31. No luck. So she had abandoned her annual spiritual invocations.

Now Wilson was reviving the attempt. He assembled his guests, and, while the spirits warmed up, everyone had food and drink and watched a few card tricks.

Then Spillman, the traditional 13th guest, arrived. Tall, white-haired, distinguished-looking, he explained the ground rules of the seance.

He made no promises. He would try, via the spirit of a Houdini friend, a certain Dr. Saint, to get the old gentleman to return. It was all in the spirit of fun, he said.

Before he began, he pointed out some of the more interesting examples of Houdiniana around the room. The framed pair of locked handcuffs the great one used. The old, broken music box he had once given Beatrice. The tambourine, broken beyond repair, he had used in a seance once himself.

The lights dimmed. Spillman called for Dr. Saint to show himself. A candle flickered. A breeze breezed. A glass on the sideboard crashed.

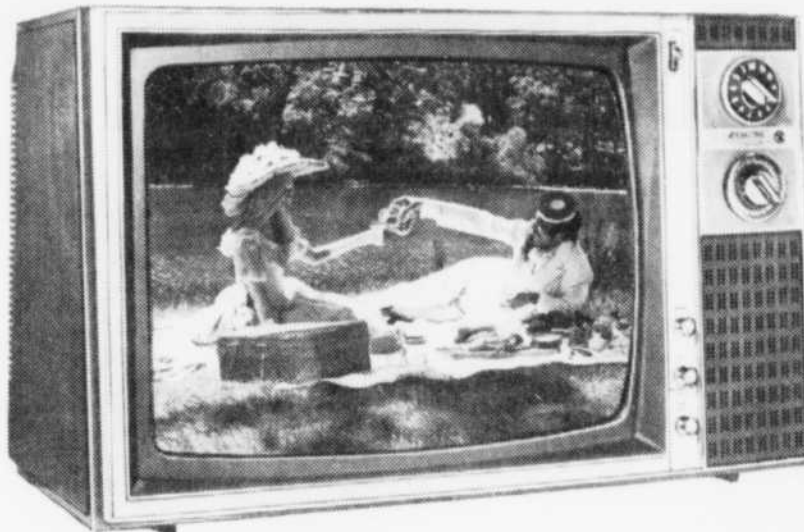

The old, broken music box tinkled a merry tune. The tambourine, broken beyond repair, jangled a few beats. And then, in front of our very eyes, was the very face of Houdini, as though carved out of smoke. As a light flashed from somewhere, the face revolved and, standing behind the scared 13, briefly there was another figure. Dr. Saint?

No words were exchanged with the (?) visitors (?). The medium made no claims. All I know is that there was something there and that when the lights came on again, the framed pair of locked handcuffs were unlocked.

Debt troubles expert says...

VANCOUVER (CP) — "We're guys with a heart. I don't think there's a creditor in town that will repossess furniture between Dec. 1 and Jan. 1," said the secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Bailiff Association.

With his experience, John McLeod qualifies as sort of an expert in advising about troubles with debt, and his advice to a person falling behind with the bills is to stay in touch with the creditor.

"People who fail to do so constitute 70 per cent of our business.

"If you change your address or don't answer his phone calls, what else can he think but that he should get his collateral back? The public image of bailiffs is that we go around repossessing hearing aids from old age pensioners.

"We don't brow-beat people or exercise physical force—we merely exercise the right they gave us when they signed the chattel mortgage or the conditional sales contract."

Bill Henke, president of the bailiffs' association, said legislation affecting bailiffs

NEED LICENCE

He said it should be noted that bailiffs have to be licensed by the provincial government.

"Local finance company representatives lock a bailiff's rights," said Mr. Henke.

"They do have the right to seize goods, but not through inferring that they are bailiffs. If a consumer asks one of those fellows to leave his property, the finance company representative must go. We bailiffs are very aware of the rights of the public," said Mr. Henke, adding that all bailiffs are required to carry proper identification or a letter stating their purpose.

Only three per cent of the public are ever visited by bailiffs but it can be a tense experience. Both Mr. Henke and Mr. McLeod have been assaulted while performing their jobs.

"One woman got so mad she bit me," said Mr. Henke.

Mr. McLeod doesn't buy on credit and Mr. Henke uses only 30-day credit.

"Common sense should prevail. You don't have to buy everything at once. Some people go to four different department stores, three different finance companies. They want to be up there with the Joneses, until the day a sickness or layoff comes.

"Then when things go wrong, they find us at the door."

Yuletide bazaar and tea

AYER'S CLIFF — The church hall of Beulah United Church, Ayer's Cliff, was the scene of a festive occasion when the U.C.W. ladies were hostesses for their annual Christmas Tea and Bazaar on Friday afternoon, Nov. 15.

The hall was beautifully decorated with a small Christmas tree lighted with blinking coloured lights, bright garlands, gay Santas on the walls, baskets of greenery etc. The center of the hall was filled with tea tables covered with red cloths and centered with small baskets of cones attractively arranged. These decorations were done by Mrs. L.O. Piercy, Mrs. A. de St. Croix and Mrs. A.C. Keeler.

UCW meeting

SAWYERVILLE — The United Church Women held their regular meeting on Nov. 20 in the Church Hall with a good attendance and Mrs. E. McCallum in the chair.

Smith. Press — Mrs. P. Flaws, Social action — and citizenship — B. Burrows; Program — Mrs. I. McBurney.

The various sales tables were arranged at one end and down one side of the hall.

Mrs. W.S. Keeler and Mrs. C. Libby were in charge of the candy table and had a good supply of sweets which soon disappeared. Mrs. Opal Smith was in charge of a table of home cooked foods which is always the center of attraction.

The theme was Armistice. Hymn 662 was sung and Mrs. L. Goodhue read Hebrews 12, and also gave a reading on Armistice.

A donation was given to the Music Workshop. The members of the Bulwer U.C.W. were our guests as well as a large number of other visitors.

Mrs. A. Keeler had a generous display of mystery packages for those who are curious.

Miss A. Webster, Mrs. A. de St. Croix and Miss B. Thompson were in charge of the gift table. Mrs. J. Cunliff sold cards and notes and Mrs. P. Temple sold the ever popular second-hand paper backs. These were all well patronized by the many guests attending.

Cheer reported 15 cards sent, several more were signed by all to go to sick. 92 visits had been made.

Col. Lewis Bishop was guest speaker and was introduced by Mrs. I. McBurney. Mr. Bishop spoke on several of his war experiences and about comrades who had been with him. He was thanked by Mrs. E. McCallum.

The tea table was covered with a white cloth and centered with a Christmas candelabra with lighted red tapers. Mrs. Pearl Berwick and Mrs. N. Pierce were in charge of the silver tea services with Miss Jane Pierce keeping them supplied with hot tea.

Church — a communion cloth had been received from the Randboro ladies.

A delicious supper was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Gordon Smith, Mrs. K. McBurney and Mrs. Lloyd Morrison, assisted by other ladies.

The guests were served by Mrs. W. Robinson, Mrs. W. Little, Mrs. R. Dezan, Mrs. M. Dezan and Misses E. Boyes and M. Allen.

Work — plenty of material on hand.

Christian Education — gave a report on the Music Festival, also the Youth Club which has over fifty members now.

The kitchen duties were in the hands of Mrs. E. Astbury, Mrs. L. Piercy, Mrs. D. Sutton, Mrs. A. Little and Mrs. E. Whitcomb, assisted before tea time by Mrs. N. Pierce, Miss E. Boyes, Miss M. Allen and Mrs. W. Robinson. Mrs. R. Clough assisted with the dishes.

It was decided to buy Church Calendars again.

More books have been ordered on Church Union.

The members deeply appreciate the support they were given by the public and those who helped in any way to make this annual pre-Christmas event so very successful, both socially and financially.

A package of material has been received on the church's anniversary.

The black bags are to be given in before end of the year.

The original Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States was first published in the Sept. 8, 1892, issue of Youth's Companion, a weekly magazine then published in Boston. The original pledge contained the phrase "my flag," which was later changed to "flag of the United States of America." An act of Congress in 1954 added the words "under God."

The nominating report was read by Mrs. D. Mackay.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The code word "ARCH" can work for defenders as well as declarer. Analyze lead. Review the bidding. Count your winners and losers. And finally, "How can I beat this contract?"

East analyzes the opening lead as either a singleton or the top of a doubleton. In either event he is glad that he stuck in his miserable heart overall. His review of the bidding tells him that South has two heart stoppers.

A first count of his winners tells him that he can be sure of just one heart and one club. A further review of the bidding shows that West will probably have exactly one king and maybe a jack. There aren't any queens unaccounted for and South certainly holds that heart ace.

Then East asks himself the $64,000 question: "How can I beat this hand?"

He finally finds the answer. If West's king is the king of clubs and he will cooperate, a fancy play will set declarer.

So East plays his eight of hearts.

South can do no better than win the trick with the jack and lead a club. West hops up with the king and leads a second heart. East gets his hearts set up and the defense winds up with three hearts, two clubs and a clear profit of 100 points.

'UN voice of the air' putting down his mike

NEW YORK (CP) — A Canadian who has been "United Nations voice of the air" will shortly be heard no more.

Don Pringle, erstwhile chief of the English-language radio service, deputy chief of all radio service and UN radio-TV commentator, will put down the mike at the end of the year.

Born in Fredericton in 1914 and a graduate in arts from University of New Brunswick in 1935, he spent two years as an announcer at CFNB in his home town.

His connection with CBC began when he went to Ottawa late in 1937. He was afterward with network stations in Toronto and Halifax.

Pringle went back to CBO in Ottawa as chief announcer and programme director. In that post he was announcer for the late prime minister Mackenzie King, during the latter years of the Second World War and was also doing special events from Parliament Hill.

Major assignments of this period included production of a special series on post-war readjustment, reporting of news conferences and liaison with the diplomatic corps and various government departments.

BUILT REPUTATION
In those years Pringle was building a reputation as an accurate reporter—one who could not only quote a speaker's exact words but also catch the mood and general atmosphere in which the words had been uttered, often in no more than a capsule comment.

In 1946 he was chosen by the UN Security Council as Canadian commentator on the international radio service.

Eventually he was appointed to the permanent staff of UN and became presentation supervisor of the newly inaugurated UN Radio. Later he held the post of supervisor, North American broadcasts; and chief of English-language Service, UN Radio.

Over the years Pringle had continued the voice training that had begun in St. Paul's United Church choir back in Fredericton. This led to his membership in a group arranging a United Nations Day concert involving the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Soviet pianist Emil Gilels then making his first appearance in the United States. Two days before the concert the sudden illness of the late Sir Thomas Beecham left them without a conductor. Somebody had the idea of calling Leonard Bernstein, then touring the southern United States, and asking him to conduct. He consented by long distance phone, then asked about the music.

Pringle recalls the conversation: "The Tchaikovsky No. 1 Piano Concerto," Bernstein was told.

"No problem there," he said. "What else?"

"The Beethoven Missa Solennis."

"Haven't seen it in years but I'll look at it."

STUDIED IN BAR
Bernstein spent the night in a bar in a southern town so he could make an early plane. There he scanned the Missa Solennis music to a continuous background of honky-tonk piano.

"But when he arrived in New York he knew it by heart," Pringle recalls.

Pringle was radio and TV commentator on the program. Knowing its cliff-hanger background, he had some misgivings.

"But the concert turned out fine."

As a member of the Collegiate Choral for a number of years, he sang with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic in their concerts at Philharmonic Hall.

Pringle has had a faculty of being in the right place at the right time.

Tagged on vacation in Europe in 1958, he was sent as UN liaison officer to Beirut following the rising of the Palestinian refugees. When the U.S. Marines made a landing on the Lebanese coast near Beirut, Pringle and a French cameraman managed a beach-head coverage contrary to orders.

In Beirut, Pringle had a passing acquaintance with Kim Philby. (The one-time official of the foreign office was questioned by British security and later granted Soviet citizenship and political asylum.)

"When I knew Kim Philby in 1958 he seemed the archetype of the educated Englishman," Pringle recalls.

What does a retired commentator do?

"I don't know. I might go into television," Pringle said. At any rate he will be keeping his Manhattan apartment and he has various network affiliations both in America and Europe.
