Office of the Commissioner of Lotteries, Baltimore, April 18, 1856.

THE undersigned, Commissioner of Lotteries of the State of Maryland, is being in receipt daily of letters from various portions of the country, making inquiry as to Lottery Schemes with which the country is flooded, and which purport to be "decided by the drawings of the Maryland Consolidated Lotteries," takes this method to answer all such letters of inquiry, and inform the public that all Lotteries purporting to be decided by the Maryland Drawings are gross frauds; that certain parties who style themselves Morris & Co, and pretend to be Managers or Sole Agents for the Grand Charter Lotteries at Cleveland, Ohio, are imposters, and said lottery a fraud, having neither legal or presumptive existence; and that another fictitious firm, styled Murry & Co., Cleveland, Ohio, are also imposters, and all lotteries which they profess to be managers or agents for, are also frauds.
RICHARD FRANCE, of this city, is the Contractor for drawing the Maryland Lotteries.—The business is conducted under the firm of R. FRANCE & CO., as Managers, and they have no sole agents in the city of Baltimore. There are, however, some forty licensed venders for the State of Maryland, who derive license under him, through this office, to sell tickets in the Maryland Lotteries.

FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 11, 1856.

OUR CANADIAN LINE OF OCEAN STEAMERS.—We called attention some few weeks ago to the very gratifying revival in the export trade of our port, more especially in the great agricultural products of the Western States and Canada.—We endeavored to show that the falling off in that branch of our trade, during the years 1854 and '5, was attributable to exceptional causes, over which we had no controul; and that the immensely increased exports of this season was merely a return to the normal condition of our trade, based, as it is, upon no mere legislative restrictions, but upon our geographical position at the head of the ocean, and at the foot of the vast inland navigation of the continent. We did not forget, however, to remind our readers that the great natural advantages of our position would be unavailing, in these days of boundless enterprise, by which capital and skill is everywhere applied to the construction of artificial channels for the transport to the seaboard marts of the surplus productions of the interior, unless developed and improved by similar exertions on our part. It is, therefore, that we return to the subject of our line of ocean steamers, the establishment and, so far as the public are concerned, the complete success of which, is so legitimate a source of congratulation to all interested in the advancement and prosperity of our country. We say, so far as the public are concerned; for while the owners of the line have spared no cost or effort in honorably and strictly fulfilling the terms of their contract with the Government, competing, as they do, with the enormously subsidized Cunard and Collins lines, we fear the remunerative result of their investments must be somewhat problematical. It is perhaps premature in this, the first season of the experiment which has proved so entirely successful to the country, to suggest a reconsideration of the terms and an extension of the obligations of the contract between the Government and the owners of the line; but so important, we are satisfied, is its continuance and extension to every interest in the country, that it is with much pleasure we observe our leading merchants have already taken action in the matter, in the form of a petition to the Board of Trade, aying that body to urge upon the Government wisdom of so revising the existing arrange- as will not only secure the continuance of ent fortnightly line, but firmly establish ly one. This effected and we be- ost important desideratum of our will be attained—that is, reliable, moderate freights for Western pro- ough carrying full home-cargoes, it the recent rise in freights, the great carrying vessels, and the large accu- produce in our stores, that our fort- ners have but very partially affected and, consequently, the rate of freights to ritain—a rise of fully 50 per cent having place since the departure of the first s of the season. Now, unless produce for e European markets can find the means of prompt shipment at moderate rates in our harbour, it is vain to expect that Montreal can ever assume her natural and legitimate position as one of the most favorably situated export marts on the continent of America; and we are greatly mistaken if the establishment of a punctual, weekly line of fast and powerful steamships, such as those now plying between Liverpool and our wharves, would not go far towards securing that result. It is not the mere increase in tonnage, which such a line would supply, by which we believe our trade would so greatly benefit, but the comparative certainty, which the regularity of their trips would afford to shippers, that their cargoes would reach the European markets within a time calculated upon. Besides the additional tonnage supplied by the steamers themselves, there can, we think, be little doubt their weekly departures would, to a considerable extent, regulate the general rates of freight during the season and, possibly, bring them more upon a par, than they have hitherto been, with those ruling at New York and Boston. Once let the European purchaser of breadstuffs in Western America be satisfied that he can depend upon finding as prompt shipments and as low freight in our port as in New York, and the advantages of our inland navigation will inevitably secure to us that large share of his business, which it is vain for us to expect at present, with our limited supply of carrying vessels, consequent uncertainty of securing shipments, and freights varying from 30 to 40 per cent. above those at New York. A weekly line of Liverpool steamships, we repeat, would not only afford a considerable increase in the tonnage required for our export trade, but such a line would act as a regulator of our general ocean transport business, and give it, what we understand from Western merchants it now wants, a character for reliable supply and prompt dispatch. True, an export trade alone is but a one-sided affair, and where vessels have to seek it in ballast, their freights must always rule high; but with the supply of the whole of Western America within our reach, we can see no reason why our imports should not keep pace with our exports. If the St. Lawrence route is, what we believe it to be, the quickest, the safest and cheapest route for the productions of Western America seeking a European market, provided our ocean transit can be put upon a par with that from New York; it must follow that the same route is the best for the transit of European productions seeking a market in Western America; and with a well-regulated and liberal "bonding system," we can discover no impediment in the way of such a trade. On the contrary, having secured certainty, expedition and moderate freights for our ocean-transit, our splendid inland navigation and, when speed is essential, our continuous line of railway, surely ought to give, and will give our route to the western interior advantages over that from any of the Atlantic ports of the United States.

We trust, then, that our Merchants and Boards of Trade, throughout the Province, will unite in energetically urging upon the Government the wisdom and expediency of dealing in a spirit of considerate liberality with the owners of our Canadian Line of Ocean Steamers, who have so honorably fulfilled all their engagements hitherto; and of furnishing them with such reasonable aid in their great undertaking as will afford them something like a "fair field," on which to compete with the Cunard and Collins Companies, by the establishment of a weekly line of steamships from Liverpool to Montreal.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN THE UNITED STATES.—We frequently plume ourselves on the superiority of this generation over those that have gone before us; and looking at the crimes heretofore perpetrated in the world, and the laxity of principle which tolerated them, we are disposed to wonder how it was possible to live surrounded with so many evils from the "oppressor's scorn" and "proud man's contumely." We are astonished when we read that it came into the spirit of even a barbarous nation to make a pecuniary payment a full and sufficient compensation for the life of a man; and we are horrified when we read of men claiming credit for the most exact observance of the point of honor, who, by laying in wait for their adversaries, or by collecting a force of friends, and finding their adversary alone, secured the impunity of the coward while they did the work of the assassin. But if it is a truth of frequent recurrence that there is nothing new under the sun, it seems to be no less a fact that the worst evils of the past are too constantly repeated in the present. This affair of Mr. Sumner's is a case in point. All the circumstances which rendered the assaults of the nobles of the seventeenth century upon unarmed and unwarned men so atrocious, were to be found in the attack made by Mr. Brooks upon Mr. Sumner; and there were other circumstances which still heightened the exhibition of recklessness and violence. Mr. Sumner had received no warning; he was alone; he was unarmed, and in a position alike unfit either for defence or for retreat. On the other hand his assailant was acting in accordance with a deliberate plan; he was furnished with a weapon which was calculated to inflict death; and he had taken the precaution to guard against interference by having a small party of friends at his back. Thus taking every precaution to render his cowardly outrage successful, and at the same time to avoid personal risk, or even interference, Mr. Brooks was not deterred by any consideration of the sacredness of the character in which Mr. Sumner spoke, or the respect due to the Senate Chamber—the very focus and throne of the popular sovereignty; nor of the right of free discussion, which is plainly, notwithstanding its frequent abuses, the first condition and necessity of every Government by popular representatives. This is a pretty good parallel to any of the waylayings and assassinations of the by-gone centuries.

Well, for this desperate offence, Mr. Brooks is brought up before the Criminal Court at Washington. He had, under the aggravating circumstances we have mentioned, almost done to death one of the most worthy and honored of the public men of his country—a scholar, a lawyer and statesman of high rank, deputed to represent in national Councils perhaps the most intelligent of the confederate commonwealths. The injured party declined to appear; but there was plenty of evidence to substantiate the guilt of the accused, who, after the evidence had been heard, was put upon his defence. That defence seems to have been entirely of a piece with the whole transaction. A cowardly brutal criminal like Mr. Brooks, who had all but murdered a man worth a thousand blackguards like himself, stood up in Court and, apparently unreproved by the Judge, boasted of his crime, and avowed his intention to repeat it. The approbation of his deed, which has rung throughout the South, has, of course, had an echo in his own breast, and where there should have been sorrow and repentance, and where, if justice had been administered with any regard to right, there must have been remorse and regret for the consequences, the only sentiment which was uttered was that of exultation. The Carolinian knew his Judge altogether too well to have any fear of the sentence. Even vulgar rowdies, with political influences, escape among our neighbours either without punishment or with fines nicely graduated to their pecuniary means. How could any one think of inconveniencing, by any real punishment, a Senator of the the United States, whose offence had been applauded by the public voice of eight or ten States, each one, owing to its happy possession of slavery, being as influential as two other States inhabited solely by freemen? The Court did not trouble itself with any of the modern ideas of law; but went back to that great Teutonic principle which we have alluded to at the commencement of this article—the principle that everything has its price. There was nothing to do, then, but to assess the sum which Mr. Brooks should be called on to pay for the amusement in which he had indulged, and what do our readers think was the amount demanded from this wealthy man, the representative of a wealthy class, for the attempted murder of one of the best men on this continent? Seventy-five Pounds currency. Law like this is just fitted to countenance outrage and provoke retaliation; it is, indeed, the abdication of his functions by the judge, whose intervention, for the future, will, no doubt, be dispensed with. Men who have that Christian deference for the laws which animates Mr. Sumner, will be beaten as he has been, and finding that their cause has no chance of being fairly avenged by the laws, they will either retaliate in person, or hire ruffians to do so. We cannot but express our apprehensions for liberal institutions, when we regard the lawlessness which prevails even in the law courts among our neighbors. In California, New York, and Washington, the judges, so far from being a terror to evil doers, seem to form a kind of criminal insolvent debtors court, whose chief business it is to white-wash the most notorious and hardened criminals and turn them lose again upon society to commit more crime.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT ON EUROPEAN AND AMERICAN SOCIETY.—Bennett, of the N. Y. Herald, who has just returned from a tour in Europe, thus contrasts the society of the old countries with that of the United States:—

Whoever has had the pleasure of mingling with good society abroad could not but be struck with its high and pleasing tone. To be introduced into the best of English or Continental circles is to make the acquaintance of intelligent, intellectual and well-bred people, whose conduct is perfectly natural, who entertain no jealousies of their friends, and whose aims in life are something more than the acquisition of money, or its silly expenditure. In the best families of Paris or London, of education and position, there is no absurdity of manner or affectation of style; the men are gentlemanlike, the ladies accomplished, frank and rational. The subjects of conversation are of the highest order. It would be rare, indeed, to find any ignorant of the history of their own country, of general politics, the career of eminent personages, the progress of the arts, and the elegance of belles letters. Thus, in our intercourse we are exempted from the necessity of discussing the merits of a paletot, or the price of point lace. A deep interest is shown in all the interests of humanity; and if worth is not sure of success, it never goes without appreciation. Indeed, a sort of literature has arisen abroad of a peculiar character, arising entirely from the contributions of society, and exists in the shape of Ana and table talk. Some of the most pleasing works in French and English are but the records of conversations and anecdotes of good society.

In our own country, we are sorry to say, it is not so. None surpasses ours in the elegance of the mansions of its rich. Our Fifth avenue is almost unrivalled. But what do see in its interiors? Costly furniture rarely used, stereotyped copies of each other, the same courses, and unfortunately the same conversation. We know beforehand what is to be our bill of fare, and what cook and confectioner prepared the viands; we retire from the banquet fatigued with its length, without having made much advance in information, formed any new and agreeable acquaintance, or stored up any pleasant memories of a happy time.

Particularly may we regret the small influence which our American ladies exercise in improving the tone of our society. While the female sex has no more ardent admirers than it finds in the United States, yet it does not use its power in the right direction, or else is indisposed to do so. We see in the evidence made public in a recent will case, how much club life and the dissipation of late hours enter into the enjoyment of the wealthy and fashionable.

Riches are not worth having without good feeling, taste and education to dispense them; and our American women seem to regard them as the mere advantages they afford to procure a "love of a hat," or a moire antique, or jewelry from Ball's or Tiffany's. The education of our children at fashionable public schools, although many of them are perfect of their kind, results in the attainment of a smattering of the languages, a little unskilful music, and vague general ideas of history and the arts of life. When the school is finished, then comes dress and Broadway, the easy flirtations of American youth and gaiety, marriages, intense love of dress, forgetfulness of those early acquaintances so rapidly made, and vacuity of mind, only relieved by dissipation of a most dangerous character. The topics of conversation, under such circumstances cannot be very varied. Our really intellectual circles are few, and the charms of social life diminished. It is owing to this paucity of resources that our women are so fond of talking about their ministers and churches. It is scarcely possible to converse with them twenty minutes before the question is asked, "What church do you attend? How do you like the Doctor?" Madame Pfeiffer, in her recent book of travels, alludes to this very peculiarity. Every where—on railroads, or in steamboats, or at hotels—she was pestered with inquiries as to the character of her religion and the difference of her creed. Miss Murray also alludes to the vapid tone of our conversation with equal surprise, and her work contains many sound and valuable suggestions for the improvement of her American sisters, which we trust will not be overlooked.

We are compelled to admit, then certain faults in American society which, unrepaired, are giving the taste and the ambition of the young entirely a wrong direction. To be rich, to be gay, to be fashionable, is now the chief hope of the young women of the country. The men of the country aim at wealth with no less earnestness, and the result is seen in the incongruities, the ill-filled positions, the extravagance, the folly, and in truth the wretchedness of married and unmarried life. The American fireside, at least in our large cities, is no longer a place where maternal love and paternal counsels form the habits and principles of the young. The education of the heart and of the temper is out of date; the examples of domestic suavity are few and far between. The daughters are thinking of the dresses or their beaux, and Young America rushes into the street to smoke cigars, or to 'lubricate' at the hotel, or to lark it at the Bowery.

In England and in Germany the women never forget their domestic duties nor the responsibilities of their sex. The most elegant the most accomptished, do not disdain to become good housekeepers, nor to keep their own hands in many of the preparations of the pantry. They often keep the acconnts of the family and settle its bills. Here, not one woman in a hundred knows anything about figures, or can write an intelligible receipt.

In France the married women are, when necessity compels it, the best assistants of their husbands, and in the upper circles, their wit, their intelligence, their spirituality and practical talents are truly remarkable. Here, it seems as if the sex were satisfied with the life of dolls, to roll their pretty eyes, and be dandled on the lap of pleasure.

We trust that these remarks of ours will have some effect on those sensible women who read the Herald. They will perceive that we have not gone deeply into the subject, for it is one too minutely delicate to be entered upon in a newspaper; but the future of this republic will be bright or cloudy precisely as the women shall exercise their influence on their families and direct the early training of their children. Our faults of society, which appear to be surface faults merely, have in fact a deep seated origin, and should be corrected.

A SOUTHERN STATESMAN ON THE SLAVERY QUESTION.—The writer of the following letter was formerly a member of Congress from Kentucky, a staunch supporter and warm personal friend o the late HENRY CLAY:—

To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune.

SIR: I have read the speech of the Hon. Charles Sumner on Kansas affairs, in newspaper form, but desire to have it in a form better suited for preservation; and therefore ask the favor of you to send me the worth of the inclosed, $1 postage paid, including one of the speeches of Governor Seward.

I have all my life been a resident of a slave-holding State, and am the owner of a few slaves, but I feel concious that I have at all times been able to read the discussions on the slave question with calmness, and without such a degree of excitement as to unfit a person to form a cool and deliberate judgment.

I was old enough at the date of the Missouri Compromise to understand and to take a deep interest in that measure, and was exceedingly gratified when Missouri was admitted as a Slave State, with an accompanying legal provision forever prohibiting slavery in any of the then national territory, lying north of 36' 30. This measure was adopted by the unanimous vote of all the Slave States, and was opposed by part of the Northern representation — only on the ground that Missouri, lying north of the above parallel, was admitted, by provisions of the Compromise bill, as a Slave State.

But Missouri having been admitted, all opposition (or nearly so) to the Compromise ceased; and it was quietly permitted to remain undisturbed for more than thirty years, until, in an evil hour, the Nebraska bill (as it is usually termed) was introduced by a Senator from a Free State; and the South, in violation of a sacred and honorable pledge, caught at the bait, and assisted in overthrowing the wisest measure that ever was adopted to quiet agitation on the Slavery question.

The fruits of the iniquitous bill introduced by Mr. Douglas (which might have been foreseen) have for a long time been presented in a shameful attempt, countenanced by Mr. Pierce's Administration, to form a Slave State by force, out of the Territory of Kansas.

Mr. Sumner is entitled to the thanks of all discreet men: all men who are influenced by the principles of justice and honor, for exposing the abominable frauds, both in the passage of the Nebraska bill, and the means resorted to for carrying out its design of forcing Slavery into the Territory of Kansas.

In my judgment the best means of securing the peace of the country and quieting agitation on the subject of slavery will be to admit Kansas as a Free State, according to the spirit of the Missouri Compromise, extending the line 36' 30 to the Pacific Ocean.

I heartily condemn the brutal attack of Brooks upon Senator Sumner, for which he ought to be expelled from his seat in Congress.

I have always been, and still am, a warm advocate for gradual emancipation, to be carried out by each State, as its citizens shall direct, by constitutional provision. I regret that public sentiment in my adopted State, Kentucky, is not yet prepared for so wholesome and just a measure.

Respectfully,
A. BEATTY.
WASHINGTON, MASON COUNTY, KY., June 30, '56.

THE GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT IN AID OF THE NIGHTINGALE FUND.—This great patriotic demonstration came off with the greatest eclat, last night in the City Concert Hall, which was most gracefully draped and ornamented for the occasion. As we anticipated, the spacious hall was crowded to the doors and, consequently, the promenading space was somewhat inconveniently limited. All, however, seemed pleased and gratified with the delightful vocal and instrumental music, with which they were regaled during the evening—the Band of the gallant 39th, with Prince's and Nunn's Bands alternating their sweet strains with the vocalizations of the Misses Agnes and Fanny Heron, Signor Cortesi and Mr. Black. It will be remembered that the Misses Heron kindly and considerately postponed their concert, advertised for last night, that it might not interfere with the NIGHTINGALE SOIREE, volunteering their own assistance on the occasion, free of charge to the management. We write at so late an hour, that we shall only now say of these gifted young ladies, that they entirely realised our expectations and that they fully merit the extremely laudatory notices of their performances, which we have seen in the Upper Canada and United States' press. Those who listened to their delicious warblings last night, will, we doubt not, renew their pleasure at their concert this evening in the MECHANICS' HALL; and those who were not so fortunate, if they take our advice, will make a point of being there.

LA GRANGE AND GOTTSCHALK.—We are happy to inform our readers that Mr. Buckland, desirous as he always proves himself, to afford the inhabitants of Montreal the opportunity of hearing all the great talent which may be on this side of the Atlantic, has made arrangements with one of the greatest Prime Donne who has ever been here, the incomparable Gottschalk, to give us one Grand Concert. We understand that this is to take place on Tuesday the 15th instant, and take the earliest opportunity of informing our readers o this fact. The Theatre being occupied by Mr Buckland's large company, he has secured the Mechanics' Hall.

THEATRE ROYAL.—We have not time to comment on the new piece produced last evening, entitled "Flowers of the Forest," beyond stating the fact of its having made the greatest hit of any piece ever produced here. The scenery is truly beautiful, and the acting beyond all praise. Let Mr. Buckland play this piece for half-a-dozen nights, and the house will be crowded each night of its representation. This evening "Othello," with a splendid cast—and Davidge in one of his best farces.

THE WEATHER AND HEALTH OF THE CITY.—The weather continues cool and beautiful with a temperature of about 80 deg. the ground has lately been refreshed with copious showers, and there appears every prospect of a bounteous harvest, the City is, we are happy to say, exceedingly healthy.

MACKAY'S MONTREAL DIRECTORY.—We have to thank Mrs. Stuart Mackay for a copy of this very useful volume, just published, with corrections to May and June of the present year. This is the 15th annual issue of the work, since it was first published by Mrs. Mackay's late husband.—It bears evidence that no effort has been spared to maintain its establish character for varied and correct information, and contains, we observe, 26 pages of new names. It is, in short, in every respect, deserving of that public patronage, which we doubt not it will receive from our citizens at large.

FIRE.—About four o'clock this morning, the Police give the alarm of fire, which was found to proceed from a stable in rear of No. 25, St. Elizabeth Street. A stable adjoining the one was also burnt. It then spread to the carpenters shop of L. T. Lamothe, which was considerably damaged, also a quantity of lumber, carpenter's tools, &c., none of which was insured. Mr. Lamothe was insured on the building for £200. The fire brigade were promptly on the spot, and had it not been for their untiring exertions, we should undoubtedly have had to chronicle a large conflagration, as it was in vicinity of several large wood and lumber yards.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY—TORONTO AND PORT SARNIA LINE.—This line is now open to Berlin; two passenger trains beside freight go up daily and return. The working of the line is to be in the hands of the contractors till August next, and it has hitherto been highly satisfactory, the time-table being closely observed. We understand that the freight traffic exceeds anticipations, and that in a few days additional facilities for the transit of both goods and passengers will be provided. Complaints are made as to the high rates of fare charged. Those of the Great Western are much lower.—Toronto Globe, Wednesday.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.
Wednesday, 9th July, 1856.

Devlin and Smith, of Counsel for prisoners.—David Beaudry, larceny, was put on his trial and acquitted.—Mr. Papin of Counsel for prisoner.—Cyrille Brabant, feloniously wounding, was put on his trial and found guilty of assault.—Messrs, Cassidy & McKay of Counsel for prisoner.—Judgment, three months' imprisonment in the Common Gaol, at hard labor.

THURSDAY, July 10.

Present:—His Honor Mr. Justice McCORD.

Jules Robin, on three convictions of larceny. Judgment, five months' imprisonment in Common Gaol at hard labor.

Francois Grenadier, on conviction of stealing a gelding. Judgment, three months' imprisonment in the Common Gaol at hard labor. In passing judgment, His Honor Mr. Justice McCord observed that the Court was induced to mete out so lenient a sentence in consequence of high testimonials which had been submitted to the Court as to the character of the prisoner, and which went to establish that he was a person of very weak intellect.

Matthew Moore, Joseph Galarneau, and Daniel Lee, feloniously attempting to drown one James Butler, were put on their trial and found guilty, and recommended to mercy. The jury deliberated about one hour before giving a verdict. The evidence was most clear and conclusive against them; who, it appeared, on Sunday, the 22nd May last, met the prosecutor, James Butler, on the banks of the Lachine Canal, when Moore, without any cause whatever, assaulted him, by violently shoving him. Butler was annoyed at this, and said that if fair play were shown him he would fight Moore, but that he knew he would not get fair play. Yet he followed the three prisoners a few rods, when Moore seized a stone and threw it with violence at Butler. The stone struck him on the forehead and stunned him. Then the three prisoners fell-to and beat him till his head was covered with blood and he had become almost senseless. They then lifted and "pitched him into the canal." Here Butler recovered his senses and became conscious of his dangerous situation. Providentially, the cries of little children, who witnessed the scene, attracted the attention of Mr. McDonald, who went to the spot and threw out a piece of timber to Butler, who seized it eagerly and floated himself till other assistance came up and rescued him from his perilous situation, for he could not swim. The prisoners then ran away and concealed themselves in a schooner close by, where they were subsequently arrested by the Water Police.—Mr. Devlin, counsel for the prisoners.—Mr. Delisle, Clerk of the Peace, acted on behalf of the prosecution.

Jean Baptiste Rulle dit Irlande and Marguerite Boucher, assaulting a Bailiff in the execution of his duty, were tried and acquitted.—Mr. De Bleury of Counsel for Defendants.

Maria Mulligan and Sarah Prendergast, for assaulting a Bailiff in the execution of his duty, pleaded guilty of assault—Judgment: Mulligan fine 10s, and Prendergast fined 5s, and to stand committed until the said fines be paid.

PUBLIC SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—Mr. Leeming offered at Public sale yesterday, at the Merchants' Exchange, the property belonging to J. B. Greenshields, Esq., containing about 45 acres situated on the Côte de Neiges road. There being no offers for the property it was withdrawn.

Mr. Leeming also offered the following properties in the Townships, belonging to Henry Tinder, Esq:—800 acres tenth range of Ireland, at 2s per acre: 205 acre in Tinnywick, at 3s 3d per acre. The property in Ely was withdrawn.

OCEANIC TE RAPH.—The great problem of placing the old rld and the new in telegraphic connection is to be tested. Next week the U. S. steamer ic will sail from this port with a competent s tific corps on board, to complete the nec ry oceanic surveys, in which Lieut. Berrym the commander of the present expedition, ha already been engaged. It has been shown b ieut. Maury that between Newfoundland an coast of Ireland, there is, for a considerabl rtion of the distance, a comparative elevati of the bottom, which he denominates the teleg hic plateau. Along this it is proposed to c y the wires of the sub-marine telegraph; th stance between these two points is a little over 00 geographical miles. In the view of Lieut aury, with whom we have conversed, and w ives his active co-operation in the enterprise, re is no reason why this great work cannot b mpleted in one year from the present time. e wire can be made during the approaching wi er, so as to be in readiness for laying down xt spring. It was upon the plateau above n ced that the Brooke's celebrated sounding appar s brought up its first trophies from the botto of the sea. These specimens Lieut. Berrym and his officers judged to be clay, but upon ing submitted to microscopic examination, t y were found to consist of calcareous shells, mixed with sand or any foreign substance. t was deemed probable that the occupants live near the surface of the water, but that the s lls settled to the bottom after death. Accord g to Lieut. Maury, the inference is, that in e place of their deposit, if anywhere, the wate are at rest. "There was not motion enough ere to abrade these very delicate organisms or current enough to sweep them about and ix up with them a grain of the finest sand, nor he smallest particle of gravel torn from the l e beds of the debris that here and there strew the bottom of the sea. This plateau is not o deep for the wire to sink down and rest u n, yet it is not so shallow that currents or iceb gs or any abrading force can derange the w after it is once lodged."—Icebergs have b n known to ground at a depth of 700 feet."

The Arctic wi first steer north for Newfoundland, taking out rovisions for ninety days, and a moderate sup of coal, expecting to replenish the latter at N. , as may be found necessary. The instruments furnished are the most important part of he equipment. First, is Brooke's instrument, con ting of an iron spindle about three and a ha feet in length, the lower extremity of whic is tubular, filled with the open barrels of quills This spindle passes through a perforated 68lb shot or a pear-shaped leaden weight (100 to 50 lbs.) two feet in length, suspended by bras wire. The spindle projects below the weight, o that when the latter touches bottom, the wi unhooks by a very simple, yet ingenious cont ance, leaving the weight detached. Above he weight is secured "Massey's attachment," f determining the depth—a vertical propeller urned by the downward motion of the lead, and which indicates on a graduated dial, y showing the number of revolutions made by the propeller. A clam is raised while the lead s descending, and falls when the motion ceases, s opping the propeller, so that no false indications can be given by the lateral current. Thus, thr e elements may be employed to form the basis f a calculation of depth; the length of time r quired for a weight to descend; the position f the indicator, and the measured length of the line. From the lower end of the spindle, speci ens are found, adhering to the tallow lining of the quills. The sounding line is being made at the Government ropewalk in Boston, which is the largest in the country, and will comprise 10,000 fathoms. A steam reel, with which to use the line, is making in this city. It will be run by a small engine placed on deck. It is supposed that a depth of 5,000 fathoms, or nearly ay be measured without breaking the line, as is returned, but no spindle. Besides the ters for determining the temperature of the ocean at various depths, are other instruments designed to elucidate the physical geography of the ocean.

Should the survey on which the Arctic is now employed, terminate as favorably as anticipated, it is probable the wire will be laid at the earliest practicable day. Profiting by the experience of the past, it is determined to employ two steamers in laying the wire. They will proceed from England, having on board equal portions of the line. Uniting these, each will proceed direct to the opposite shores, passing out the cable as she sails, thus avoiding the fatal difficulty before encountered, when it was attempted to tow the vessel having the cable on board, when the vessel and both became unmanageable. Furthermore, the time required to lay the line is reduced one-half by the process now proposed, so that six days is considered a liberal allowance for the execution of the work. It is thought the wire will offer little impediment to the progress of the steamers. A curious circumstance will be the manner of maintaining telegraph communication between the two vessels while this work is going on, it being in view to connect the extremities of the wire on each ship with galvanic batteries, so that the electric current will pass through the huge pile on each vessel, as well as through all such portions as may be submerged, conveying intelligence instantaneously and uninterruptedly, uninfluenced by apparent obstacles or confusion. The progress of each vessel can thus be regulated with reference to their relative position, or other incidental circumstances. Success is regarded as certain. The same parties commenced laying a wire seventy five miles in length on the 2nd instant, between Cape Ray and Cape Breton, and have now probbly completed the work.—New York Journal of Commerce.

HORRIBLE MURDER—A WIFE KILLED BY HER HUSBAND.—The first intimation of a murder having been comitted transpired at the confessional of St. Jan's church this morning. McCan appeared at the confessional and informed the priest in attendance that he had murdered two men. And subsequently he made the same statement to an ex-policeman named Feeley; but little attention was paid to his statement as his appearance indiated that he was laboring under an aberration of mind. He was, therefore, suffered to depart. A short time afterwards a woman came to the First district station house, and informed the officers that the wife of McCan had been murdered. Officers accompanied the woman to the house, when one of the most horrible sights imainable presented itself to view. The woman was lying on the bed, her head sunken deep in the pillow, and broken and chopped dreadfully. The instrument used was an axe, and from appearances, the first blow struck was with the back of the axe, which took effect just over the right eye, inflicting a deep and shocking fracture. Several other blows—some five or six in all—were then struck with the edge of the axe, cutting deep and ghastly gashes into the skull. The murder was discovered in this manner:—A German neighbor, about six o'clock this morning, entered the house for the purpose of getting a pick-axe, and not finding any one about he entered the room where they slept, and saw that some one was lying in bed. The coverlets were drawn up over the head, and he called out, inquiring why they slept so long. Receiving no answer he went up to the bed and lifted the coverlet, when he saw the head of the woman battered, as described above.—Albany Statesman.

THE GAMBLERS AGAIN.—The recent startling movements in San Francisco very naturally leads our minds to the past and present of our own metropolis. The corruption that exists in various departments of our city government is yearly becoming more open and glaring. The frauds upon the purity of the ballot box, which have been discovered through the confession of Yankee Sullivan that have played so important a part in the so-called "elections" of California, are not confined to that State alone.

All of our readers will recollect the hue and cry that was raised a few months since against gamblers. One of our citizens had been led on by their lures till his entire property passed in their possession, and he was a ruined man. Complaint was made before a Justice; the affidavits against Pat Hearne and his associates were published; the matter was brought before the Grand Jury who found true bills at that time and subsequently against twenty-five or thirty individuals, for keeping gambling dens. The community thought that there could be no escape this time from a fair trial, of at least a few of this large number. The responsibility of seconding the work of the Grand Jury then rested upon the District Attorney. A few days passed, and he announced in open court that on a certain day he would proceed with the trial of these cases, the disposition of which he intended, if necessary, to devote an entire week. The day arrive, an imposing calendar of twenty cases was prepared; they were successively called, and in not a single instance did a trial take place, on that day, or since. Subsequently, three or four motions to quash several of the indictments were argued, but we have waited in vain to see the District Attorney devote that "week to the trial of these cases." Time was given to the counsel for the accused parties for consultation, &c., &c. They again appeared in Court, and, to the surprise of all, several of them pleaded guilty, and coolly asked for a suspension of judgment! Our City Judge hesitated as to the justice, or even expediency, of such a course; when lo, the District Attorney, to the astonishment of outsiders, arose from his seat and advocated a suspension of judgment—in language that at least, as many said on the spot, equalled in warmth and eloquence that used by the counsel for the accused. In a few instances judgment was suspended; others were carried before the Recorder, where they remained in statu quo and thus endeth the chapter.

At the present time, the number of houses apparently uninhabited in and near Broadway, tha rumor designates as being devoted to the mysteries of the "greenblind fraternity," appear to be more numerous than ever, and the recent accession to their ranks of the herd that arrived from California on the Illinois, will no doubt cause more "dens" to be opened. Among these arrivals were William Mulligan and Wolley Kearney, who are highly elated at escaping from the hands of the Vigilance Committee, and arriving safely in New York, where they can ply their respective "trades" with at least greater security, if not profit. The former, it seems, has already commenced operations by knocking down in the street one or two respectable gentlemen, recently returned from San Francisco.—N. Y. Tribune.

PUBLIC LANDS—SQUANDERING OF THE PUBLIC PROPERTY—ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.—Every day we perceive new evidences of the disposition of Congress to foster private speculations, at the expense of the public interest. The bills which are before them for giving away millions of acres of lands to railway companies are gradually being pushed through, and there is indication of a good understanding as to all these bills. Many a large fortune will be made by some of these incorruptible patriot legislators. We hope, however, they will show their hands, and let their schemes have an airing before they are pressed through.

We have endeavored to arouse public attention to this subject. But one member of Congress has as yet had the courage to denounce these land schemes—the noble minded Letcher, of Virginia. More than twelve millions of acres are about to be given away to five or six companies; and this is not the last of it. The President signs such bills without a why or wherefore, but he vetoes the small and necessary appropriations to clear out the public rivers and enlarge our commercial ports. For the general welfare he can do nothing—for partizans and speculators he appears ready to do everything.

TRIAL OF THE SUMNER ASSAULT CASE.—The case of Mr. Brooks, for an assault and battery on Senator Sumner, came up before the Judge of the Central Criminal Court this morning. There was a large attendance, including Senator Butler and other members of Congress. The District Attorney read the correspondence between himself and Mr. Sumner to show he had used due diligence, though unsuccessfully to obtain the presence of Mr. Sumner, who had expressed himself as having no desire to take part in the proceedings, and had left the city. Testimony was then given by Wm. L. Leder, who caused the arrest of Mr. Brooks after the assault on Mr. Sumner, and by J. W. Simonton, Mr. Keitt, and Senators Foster, Pearce and Toombs. The last witness (Toombs) wished to read in mitigation of the assault, at the instance of Mr. Linton, counsel of the accused, extracts from Mr. Sumner's speech reflecting on South Carolina and Mr. Butler. Drs. Boyle and Lindsley, and Senator Benjamin, also gave their testimony. The last expressed the opinion, judging from what he saw of Mr. Sumner's notes, that he (Summer) had had his speech printed before delivery. Mr. Brooks made a short speech, regretting that Mr. Sumner was absent. He had hoped for the benefit of interrogation concerning his (Sumner's) testimony before the House Committee. He took the ground that there are some offences for which the law affords no adequate remedy. He said, while he had a heart to feel and a hand to strike he would redress the wrongs of his political mother from every effort to cover her with obloquy and dishonor. His property might be squandered and his life endangered, but he would be true to her who bore him He then bowed to the majesty of the law to receive his sentence.

Judge Crawford said, as the matter might, perhaps, at that moment be subject to investigation, he would not weary the members of the House of Representatives. He would forbear to comment on the testimony, and pronounce, as the judgment of the Court, that Mr. Brooks pay a fine of $300.

Mr. Brooks then retired with his friends.

IOWA ENTERTAINMENT.—The following notice of the opening of the "Red Barn" is from an Iowa paper:—"First night of the dancing goat, who goes through the intricacies of the cotillion like a feller critter. The performance of the goat will be followed by an exhibition of the mathematical attainments of the dog Billy, a quadruped that reckons up figures like a piece of chalk, and works problems in algebra with one leg tied behind him. Admission one shilling. No corn taken at the door. P.S. The free list is entirely excluded, except the press and Ministers of the gospel."

THE MYSTERY OF THE "FAR WEST."

When the famous St. Patrick died and was coffined, and about to be consigned to his mother earth, all the world, that is, Scotland, England, and Ireland, got to logger-heads on the important question. Where shall he be buried? Each of the three countries put forth special claims to the remains of the departed Saint. All the Kirkpatricks, Kilpatricks, Portpatricks, Downpatricks and other Patricks in the "three Kingdoms," contended for the honour of bestowing a sepulchre on the body of the great and holy man; and the contention was just about to resolve into a general melée, when, lo, a thick mist fell upon the field of strife, and in that mist fell a shower of heavy coffins! The belligerents were stumbling upon a coffin, picked it up and ran off with it, and the real burial ground of St. Patrick would have been unknown to this day, had not the patriotic Saint himself, some years afterwards, settled the dispute by shoving his right arm through a grave in the Churchyard of Downpatrick, in the North of Ireland! This orthodox legend is the closest parallel we can find to the railroad mania of Canada and the traffic of the "far West."

The traffic of the Western States is the grand guarantee for profit, for nearly all the Railroads of this Province. Most of them, would never have been chartered—never dreamt of, only for this mighty and mysterious traffic. The projectors and advoates of nearly every successive Company that applies for a charter and then for "a grant," admit that the line will not pay for the working, or the fuel, if solely dependent on Canadian Business. But look at the far West! —consider the immense traffic of the Western States, which will be wafted across the Lake by a line of first-class steamers in connection with the "Road!" All, all, are groping in the mist for the traffic, and, in perspective, it is like the shower of coffins quite sufficient to satisfy all! A terminus at Windsor, say the projectors of the Great Western, will command an amazing amount of business from the United States. A terminus at Collingwood, say Mr. Capreol and Joseph C. Morrison, will bring the traffic of the Western States to Toronto. A terminus at Goderich, say Mr. Wadsworth and the Buffalonians will furnish by far the nearest and cheapest line of commerce between the Western States and the Atlantic sea-board. The Grand Trunk Company declare that a terminus at Port Sarnia is the very thing to command the traffic of the Western States. Mr. Foley and his constituents affirm that a terminus at Saugeen cannot possibly fail to draw thither a large share of the traffic of the Western States; and lastly, the Ministry and their French bottle-holders, have just discovered that a terminus at Penetanguishene, with its line extending right through the wilderness to the lonely residence of Mr. John Supple on the Ottawa, must necessarily engross the whole traffic of the Western States!

That a majority of these gropers will, in due time, discover that they have picked up empty coffins, is a proposition which requires no demonstration. But flimsy and utopiau as some of the others may be, John Supple's railroad, for downright absurdity, throws all the rest into an invisible shade! A railroad actually extending from no place to no other place; passing through perhaps 200 miles of an untrodden desert, where the wolf, the bear and the raccoon would be the principle auditors of the steam whistle, is unquestionably, the nearest parallel to the long-talked of railroad to the moon, that our planet is capable of affording! The mere supposition of anybody out of bedlam making such a proposal would be altogether improbable, only for one circumstance, namely that a grant of four million acres of the public lands of Upper Canada is already given or voted to the projectors! This single circumstance explains the whole matter, and renders the extravagant humbug completely worthy of the present profligate Government.—Huron Signal.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF PLINY.—Translated with copious Notes and Illustrations by the late John Bostock, M. D., F. R. S., and H. T. Riley, Esq., B. A. Vol. IV. London—H. G. Bohn. New York—Bangs, Brother & Co.

The whole learning of the ancients in the natural sciences seems to be embodied in the great work of Pliny, which is for this and other reasons one of the most curious and interesting studies in the catalogue of the classics. The present volume relates entirely to agriculture, meteorology, and botany. Some of the ideas inculcated in regard to farming are quite conformable to modern notions, and, indeed, we are afraid that our contemporaries have not made such a wonderful advance in the principles of agriculture as they imagine. The chief progress has been in the improvement of tools and the invention of machinery. Pliny says:—

The ancients were of opinion that before everything, moderation should be observed in the extent of a farm; for it was a favorite maxim of theirs, that we ought to sow the less and plough the more: such too, I find was the opinion entertained by Virgil—[He alludes to the famous maxim in the Georgics, B ii. l. 412:

———Laudato ingentia rura,
Exiguum colito———

"Praise a large farm, cultivate a small one."] and indeed, if we must confess the truth, it is the wide spread domains that have been the ruin of Italy, and soon will be that of the provinces as well. Six proprietors were in possession of one half of Africa, at the period when the Emperor Nero had them put to death. With that greatness of mind which was so peculiarly his own and of which he ought not to lose the credit, Cheius Pompeius would never purchase the lands that belonged to a neighbor. Mago (the Carthagenian) has stated it as his opinion, that a person, on buying a farm, ought at once to sell his town house; an opinion, however, which savors of too great rigidity, and is by no means conformable to the public good. It is with these words indeed that he begins his precepts; a good proof, at all events, that he looks upon the personal inspection of the owner as of primary importance.

And again, speaking of the points to be observed in buying land, Pliny tells us:—

Atilius Regulus, the same who was twice consul in the Punic War, used to say that a person should neither buy an unhealthy piece of land in the most fertile locality, nor yet the very healthiest spot if in a barren country. The salubrity of land, however, is not always to be judged from the looks of the inhabitants, for those who are well-seasoned are able to withstand the effects of living in pestilent localities even. And then, besides, there are some localities that are healthy during certain periods of the year only; though, in reality, there is no soil that can be looked upon as really valuable that is not healthy all the year through. 'That,' says Columella, 'is sure to be bad land against which its owner has a continual struggle. Cato recommends us before everything, to see that the land which we are about to purchase not only excels in the advantages of locality, as already stated, but is really good of itself. We should see, too, he says, that there is an abundance of manual labor in the neighborhood, as well as a thriving town; that there are either rivers or roads, to facilitate the carriage of the produce; that the buildings upon the land are substantially erected, and that the land itself bears every mark of having been tilled—a point upon which I find that many persons are greatly mistaken, as they are apt to imagine that the negligence of th previous owner is greatly to the purchaser's advantage; while the fact is, that there is nothing more expensive than the cultivation of a neglected soil.

Nothing uttered at the meetings of the Farmer's Club can be more judicious than these observations of agriculturists who flourished many centuries ago, Pliny's theory of the winds, and his prognostics of the weather, derived from the sun, moon, starts, thunder, clouds, mists, water, fire, tempests, &c. challenge comparison with all the modern meteorological science of Mr. Merriam of Brooklyn Heights; and his enumeration of the various remedial powers ascribed in his day to each plant far exceeds the materia medica of the modern botanical physicians. Verily, "there is nothing new under the sun.—New York Advertiser.
