

Art Bennett off to auctioneers' meet

By HUBERT BAUCH

SHERBROOKE — Art Bennett, auctioneer par excellence, has been a household word in the Eastern Townships for longer than most people care to remember.

During the 19 years he has plied the auction circuit he's been to more places than the guy in Hank Snow's song who's been everywhere.

Next week he's off to Omaha, Nebraska, but not to preside at an auction. It's sort of a busman's holiday as Art will be there to attend the Cattlemen's Auctioneers' Congress which is expected to draw about 2,500 of the fast-talking gents from all over the world.

Auctioneers will be dropping in from Canada and the U.S. of course, but also from places like England, France and even Argentina.

It takes a while getting used to understanding everything Art himself is saying once he really gets rolling, but think of 2,500 like him together in one place. And imagine them talking in different languages. The mind boggles.

Then maybe they don't all have Art's flair for speeding up a pitch because he's really one of the best.

A native of Sawyerville, Art graduated from an auctioneers college in Decatur, Indiana after winning a scholarship to attend.

It takes more than a limber lip to be a good auctioneer though.

As Art says, you have to be able to judge the value of the merchandise you're selling, be it cattle or antiques. And it has to be done in a hurry.

During his auctioneering career, which Art pursues full-time, he's been exercising his technique in places like Virginia, Pennsylvania, Alberta, Saskatchewan and more places than we have space to list here.

Despite the fact that he's on the road so much, Art still retains his home in Sawyerville.

He sells mostly purebred cattle and furniture and antiques.

The strangest thing he ever sold (and probably the hardest) were some mules in Pennsylvania a while back.

"They were real balky old mules," he recalls, "and I didn't have any idea myself that I'd be selling any mules when I went down there."

A real feather in Art's cap is the fact that he was Bobby Hall's cattle auctioneer when the latter was in the purebred business.

Another thing about Art, though he won't tell you this himself, is that he's one of the most benevolent people in the Townships, constantly giving freely of his own precious time to officiate at clambakes put on by various local organizations which call for an auctioneer.

That's one of the main reasons he's a household word around here.

Although he's on the road a lot, he still does a great deal of work in the ET and on fairly regular occasions he can be observed in prime performance at the Lennoxville auction barn.

As Mary on the switchboard commented while we were talking with Art, "If you don't find a bargain there, you're sure to find a laugh."

The trip to Nebraska for the conference is also a singular honor for Art since he's the only auctioneer from Quebec to have been invited to attend the meeting where the boys will be discussing sales methods and auctioneering techniques in general for four days from the 16th to the 20th.

Savard building his team Cloutier, Ellyson to run

By RICHARD SPALDING

SHERBROOKE — Marcel Savard, leader of the week-old Sherbrooke Party announced yesterday that Michel Cloutier and Yvon Ellyson would be aldermanic candidates for his party during the city's first "en bloc" election to be held on Nov. 10.

Mr. Cloutier, 35-year-old Dean of the faculty of Business Administration at the University of Sherbrooke will seek election for the No. 2 seat in the Centre Ward, now held by C.A.L. stalwart Raymond Martin.

As for the second candidate, Yvon Ellyson, 42-year-old businessman and well-known sports fan, he will challenge the seat now held by council rookie Carl Camirand in the South Ward.

In making the announcement yesterday, Party Leader Savard told reporters "a strong team is the only way to relieve Sherbrooke from its present state of stagnation."

Yesterday's candidacy announcements also raised the number of council contenders to three. Mr. Savard having announced last week he would seek the mayoralty.

Other candidates will be announced later during the month, Mr. Savard said, all in keeping with the pledge he made a week ago to "group serious men who could prepare a clear out program for meeting the economic and social problems facing the city."

For Mr. Cloutier, the youngest Dean of Business of any university in Canada, his candidacy will be his first experience in politics.

"Sherbrooke is my first objective," he said, "my candidacy will be the first opportunity for me to really participate in the life of Sherbrooke."

His candidacy will also fulfill other objectives.

Integration of university people into municipal affairs.

Stimulating economic development of the region by attracting new industries here.

Deciding for the future of a city.

Changing the attitude towards politicians by inciting capable men to get involved.

"If Mr. Savard is ready for change, I am willing to endorse him," Mr. Cloutier said, "his political views are sound."

Yvon Ellyson, "a real Sherbrookeois" according to Mr. Savard, is a valuable asset for the team, the latter told reporters.

"My ward is as important as the others," Mr. Ellyson said during the press conference, "and I intend to safeguard the interests in the South Ward."

Asked if the Sherbrooke Party had outlined any major plans for the city, Mr. Savard said that a master plan would be determined and introduced as time goes on.

Mr. Cloutier, whose candidacy is supported by the university, said that the major objective of his party once in power would be to consolidate municipal administration at lower costs.

Summing up his political party, Mr. Savard said "I have been thinking about it for the last four years as the only means of extricating Sherbrooke from its financial morass."

Scotstown council approves project

SCOTSTOWN — Sherbrooke artist Frederic got the final go-ahead from the Scotstown council last night when his plan to transform the 110-foot chimney formerly owned by the Guelph Cask and Veneer Co. into the world's largest outdoor painting.

The 30-year-old artist, a native of Scotstown himself, got the official council nod at a meeting last night when the councillors agreed unanimously to insure the chimney.

With the dour visage of Queen Victoria perching regally down on the meeting from her hand-carved hardwood frame, Frederic defended his vision of transforming sleepy Scotstown into the tourist capital of the Eastern Townships, if not the western world.

He was firmly supported by Mayor Hormidas Martel, but faced opposition from a number of persons who feared that the chimney, built at the turn of the century, was ready to tumble down at any moment.

Mayor Martel and Frederic, however, explained that the chimney, which is 11 rows of bricks thick, had been pronounced stable by an engineer and would most likely withstand the ravages of the elements for at least another century.

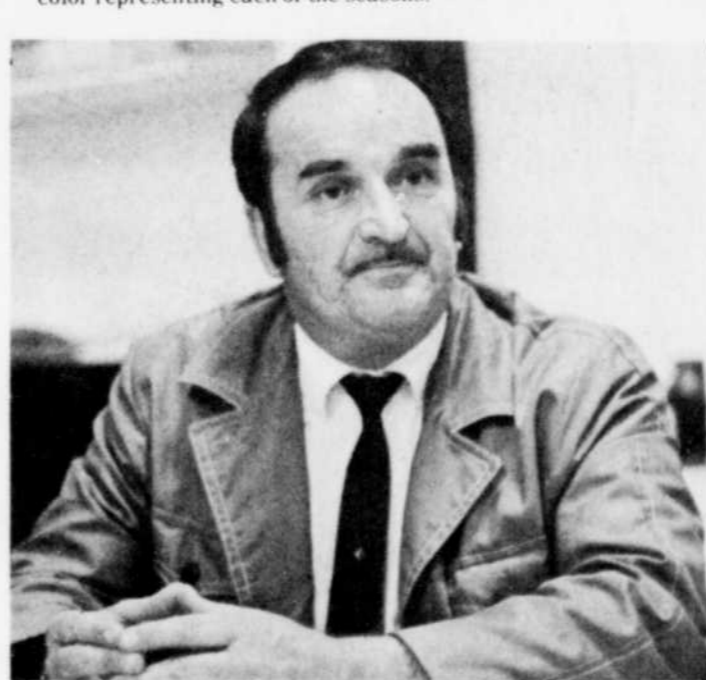

"The thing is so solidly built," said Frederic, "that there's hardly enough room for the smoke inside."

He plans to do the actual painting between April and September of 1971, working from top to bottom on a scaffold.

He said he will begin immediately seeking backers for the project and drawing up preliminary sketches in preparation for the final assault of the tower.

The theme of the painting will be The Four Seasons, with one season being represented on each face of the chimney.

At the bottom he plans to paint historical figures who have contributed to the development of the area and the province. Higher up he will feature the area's natural resources and gradually taper off toward the top with a blaze of abstract color representing each of the seasons.

Would cage farmers

MP blasts farm act

OTTAWA (CP) — Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex) fired a double volley at the government Wednesday over its proposed farm marketing act, accusing it of using cheap tactics to push legislation that would put farmers in a legal cage. The bill, which would establish a national farm products marketing council and national marketing agencies, was debated in the House for the first time since May 19 under an agreement that it would be given second reading Wednesday and be sent to committee.

The bill was introduced March 17 and since then government members have suggested the opposition was delaying it to prevent it reaching committee, where amendments can be recommended and witnesses heard.

While the government is claiming the Conservatives were keeping the bill out of committee, Mr. Danforth said, they were allowing only 17 hours of second-reading debate on it over six weeks.

FAVORED REFERENDUM

Mr. Danforth spoke in favor of a motion by Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) that would require that farmers be represented on councils and agencies set up by the act and that referendums be held in each area to be affected by marketing boards.

The amendment was defeated 109 to 55, nine Creditistes voting with 46 Conservatives for it and

The Council of Postal Unions, representing the 27,000 workers, is paying $500 a day in telex and organizational costs to support the 24-hour rotating strikes it has been conducting across Canada for more than two weeks in an attempt to force a settlement.

While postal leaders refuse to reveal the state of union funds, they have said repeatedly that they cannot afford a national strike and have accused the government's treasury board of trying to force a country-wide stoppage in an attempt to starve

QUEBEC (CP) — In his rapid rise to political power, Premier Robert Bourassa didn't exactly gain a reputation as a champion of the French culture.

Economic growth and administrative efficiency dominated his drive to the Liberal party leadership in January and his election as Quebec premier in April.

Mr. Bourassa kept his priorities intact Tuesday in his first speech in the national assembly of Quebec as premier when the 29th legislature opened.

But he also went out of his usual way to ensure Quebecers that cultural promotion would not be overlooked. He said his government would seek to cooperate with the federal government to maintain and enlarge Quebec's relations with French-speaking countries.

Mr. Bourassa stressed the need to make French the language of work, saying:

"... It's unacceptable that it remains too often impossible to use French as a language of work in a Quebec where the majority is French-speaking.

"... We are not demanding anything abnormal. We are seeking the respect of a fundamental right."

Mr. Bourassa has not explained in detail how French could be made the language of work, especially in Montreal where the majority of English-speaking Quebecers live and work.

He is awaiting the report of a royal commission on language established by the former Union Nationale government and plans to meet industry leaders to discuss the problem.

Mr. Bourassa believes government and business action on language can help to undermine political support for Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois.

In his speech, Mr. Bourassa said he is convinced Quebec society will progress only through economic growth.

"Our demographic and geographic situation is such that unless we become strong economically we are condemned to being weak culturally."

Mr. Bourassa called for reform of the civil service, the national assembly, speeding up of constitutional negotiations and making French the language of work.

He said the state must also resolve a series of social problems including the quality of education, health and housing, job and income security.

The other collaborators were Jean-Claude Rivest, the premier's executive secretary, and Claude Morin, deputy minister of Intergovernmental Affairs.

The speech outlining the government guidelines for the Bourassa years was written with the collaboration of Yves Michaud, a former Liberal member who bolted the caucus on the language question.

Stanstead North Women's Institute holds meeting in Red Schoolhouse

STANSTEAD — The first meeting of Stanstead North Women's Institute was held in their Red Schoolhouse on June 4.

The president, Mrs. Ralph Ashman, thanked everyone who had assisted in making the visit of the North Shore students, now at Lennoxville, such a success, and to the women who had cleaned the schoolhouse.

The roll call was to have an exchange of seeds or plants. It was voted to send the Christmas ditty bags to people of the North Shore areas.

Mrs. F. K. McLeod, citizenship convener, read an interesting item on discovery of iron ore at Sept. 15, North Shore, and how it developed that area of Quebec; education convener Mrs. Warren Soutiere, read about Snowflake Bentley of Vermont, displaying a monument in Jericho. He was born in 1865 and a magazine had a feature story on him. He spent most of his lifetime studying the snow flakes; for home economics, Mrs. Douglas Cooper read an item on saving money, also on meat grading. For the building committee, Mrs. Cooper reported small purchases for the schoolhouse.

Mrs. T. T. Keane, delegate to the County meeting, gave her report. A discussion followed about broadcasts over Sherbrooke radio and it was suggested that all Branch members should contribute material, that they may be continued on the Institute time allotted. Another member suggested the possibility of having advance tapes made.

A request was made that the branch serve refreshments at the August 10 Blood Donor clinic in Sunnyside School. Members agreed and plans will be made at the August meeting.

There will not be a meeting in July but the families of the members are invited to a pot luck supper at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Aikman at Lake Memphremagog, with the invitation to come early but supper will be at 6:30 p.m. Mrs. Erwin Taylor, Mrs. Edward Simpson, Sr. and Mrs. Douglas Cooper are in charge. The date was advanced to July 7.

A lovely quilt made and donated by Mrs. Thomas Goodsell was claimed by Mrs. Erwin Taylor, and a sum of $23 added to the treasury.

Mrs. W. J. Curran was guest speaker of the afternoon, her topic was pollution. Her informative talk was followed by a question and answer period. Mrs. Curran was welcomed as a new member. It is hoped her talk may be repeated on the Sherbrooke radio as it is one of interest to women, telling how they can help to curb the growing

Boundary Helping Circle enjoys buffet at cottage

DERBY LINE — Mrs. Bruce Lafae and Mrs. H. D. Ames, Derby Line, were hostesses for the June meeting of Stanstead South Church Helping Circle held at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Lafae at Echo Lake.

After a drive by approximately 45 members and guests, including members of the Canusa Unit, through the beautiful section of Orleans County, Vermont, a warm welcome was given them at the cottage. The evening was cool and a cosy fire gave warmth in the living room. A buffet was served of hot casseroles, salads, and desserts brought by the members.

Rev. G. Joyce conducted the devotional period to open the business meeting. He chose a selection, from the pen of Stanley Jones' book on mastering relations, and gave a prayer, asking all to think of the earthquake victims in Peru.

Mrs. Lloyd Selby presided and reports were given. A sum of over $90 was realized from the recent rummage sale, which is being divided between the three women's groups of the church.

Mrs. Raymond Grow, Mrs. C. R. Darby and Mrs. A. S. Judd, Sr., were named to a nominations committee to bring in a slate of officers at the annual meeting in September.

Several volunteered to bring refreshments for a tea for the Senior Citizens after their visit to a museum.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ellis of Newport were among the guests. Mr. Ellis spoke about a group Foster Home he and Mrs. Ellis are establishing in the former Prouty House on Second St., Newport, for unmanageable youth from these areas, aged 12 to 16 years.

He said many young people have adjustment problems, they will be given a good home life and assistance to rehabilitate, they will attend school and be taught to take their place in society with a full program of services.

Mr. Ellis said already they have received 27 applications, they can take only eight to start. Youths between the ages of 12 and 18 would be considered for placement up to one year, there will also be a place for another four emergency cases, such as fire victims.

He noted that they cannot deal with delinquent or drug problems, only those having problems, who as they approach adult life, must be made to feel they have something to give. He invited the group "to come and visit us after July 6." An interesting question and answer period followed, showing the interest of the group in the Foster Home.

Lennoxville resident gets WW 11 promo painting

By PRESTON GURD

SHERBROOKE — A Lennoxville resident is the proud owner today of a painting of himself originally used to promote cigarettes during the Second World War.

Subject and portrait were reunited yesterday, when Roland Bouchard, Quebec Sales Manager for Imperial Tobacco, presented the painting to Lawrence M. Mizener, in a short ceremony at the Le Baron Hotel.

The oil is one of a series of four commissioned to Marion Long, RCA, by the company in 1943 for wartime advertising purposes.

Mr. Mizener says, "I was in basic training at HMCS Huron in Toronto at the time. One day Marion Long came around to morning inspection with the officer of the day, and, after some deliberation, selected me as being easiest to paint."

His portrait was duly painted, but "she wasn't at liberty to tell me who she was working for."

Between wartime service on HMCS Huron, marriage, and return to civilian life, Mr. Mizener almost managed to completely forget about the painting.

After its use in the campaign, it hung in the executive offices of Imperial Tobacco, until a recent refurbishment prompted the company to present it and its three companions to the subjects. Dan Miller, an employee of the company's Granby plant, had noticed the painting on his visits to Montreal.

LAWRENCE MIZENER THEN AND NOW

When he heard that one of the paintings was given to the family of CPO J. B. Smith in December, he set the wheels in motion which brought about yesterday's presentation.

So Lawrence Mizener is now, the proud owner of the forgotten painting, re-framed, re-varnished, and fitted with a commemorative plaque.

KNOWLTON — The Municipal Public Bathing Beach is now open and is proving a very popular resort for the residents of Knowlton during the recent warm summer weather. The usual canteen offering light refreshments is also open.

KNOWLTON — Summer holidays have commenced already for many children of the junior grades of the Bedford Regional School. Most of the students of Knowlton Elementary School will be on holidays by June 23rd.

KNOWLTON — The Provincial Government Roads

department have been busy playing a 'Cat and Mouse' game. Crews were busy in Knowlton last week painting smart new white lines on the roads, then, a few days later, further crews came along and laid a new coating of 'black top' following the route taken by the white line department. Then along come the white line crews again to repaint the white lines for the second time in two weeks! A little overlapping of authority somewhere here??

Second summer of Orford concerts slated by CBC

ORFORD — For the second consecutive year, the English and French radio networks of CBC will present a summer concert series at the Orford Arts Centre. Last year's concerts were an outstanding success and, again this season, the series promises to be a highlight of the summer musical season.

Beginning Wednesday, June 24, this year's gala series will consist of eight concerts featuring a brilliant line-up of internationally acclaimed artists, almost all Canadian. All concerts will be recorded for later broadcast on both the English and French radio networks of the CBC.

Because of the popularity of last year's concerts, the CBC has made special arrangements with JMC for distribution of tickets.

Tickets are free for all concerts, but all tickets are reserved.

Reservations will be taken by phone — and tickets may be picked up at JMC centres in the Eastern Townships — but only one concert at a time may be booked.

No tickets are available through CBC. JMC will accept reservations starting the Saturday prior to the concert date, and tickets may be picked up from Saturday on, and will be held at the Orford Arts Centre until 8:15 p.m. on the evening of the concert.

In Montreal, those wishing tickets are requested to call 274-4378; in the Eastern Townships, phone 843-3981.

This year's concert series opens on Wednesday, June 24, at 8:30 p.m. — with all concerts scheduled for consecutive Wednesdays at the same hour.

On June 24, the concert series will be inaugurated by The Orford Quartet, founded in 1965 at the Orford Arts Centre, under the direction of Lorand Fenyes who was, at that time, a violin professor at the Centre. The Orford Quartet is composed of Andrew Dawes and Kenneth Perkins, violin; Terence Helmer, viola; and Marcel Saint-Cyr, cello.

After making their musical debut at Mount Orford in 1965, the members of the group settled permanently in Toronto where they continued to augment their repertoire. In 1967, they made their Carnegie Hall debut and since, have performed at festivals in Spoleto and Puerto Rico, at Salle Gaveau in Paris, in Britain, Normandy, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany.

The Orford Quartet's program comprises String Quartet, Op. 18, No. 5, Beethoven; Quartets, Schubert; Third String Quartet, Bartok; String Quartet No. 2, Jean Papineau-Couture. The last named work was commissioned by CBC in 1967 and, on this occasion, will be performed for the first time.

On July 1st, one of the greatest artists of our time, the celebrated Canadian contralto Maureen Forrester, will give a recital, accompanied by John Newmark.

Philatelists and numismatists get their own Sherbrooke shop

SHERBROOKE — Ever seen a 1917 Bank of Hochelega $10 bill currently valued at about $50? How about stamps which have been printed in error, such as a St. Lawrence Seaway issue with inverted centre, catalogued today at $2,500?

Well local residents for whom stamps and coins are the living end now have a store to themselves at 4 Windsor St., the Stamp and Coin Shop.

The store has been open for a week, and it is operated by Maurice (Dick) Deconninck, example is a special illustrated hingeless album for Canadian stamps, made in Germany. The album is unique in that the stamps are mounted without hinges. The owner hopes to start a club for youngsters interested in stamps and coins similar to the one in Trois-Rivieres of which he is president.

who successfully ran a similar shop in Trois-Rivieres for three years.

The store is a buy or sell setup, and it features stamps, coins and their accessories.

Mr. Deconninck said he is making every effort to have the latest in philatelics on hand. One More than 300 young persons belong to the Association Loisirs des Jeunes Philatelistes. The members meet every Sunday, receive free stamps and instruction, and even have the odd picnic.

But before a similar group can be started here, Mr. Deconninck said he will have to have help from other interested persons, and a school or church to provide meeting facilities.

Water level to be lowered here Sunday

SHERBROOKE — The water level of the St. Francis River, which flows through Sherbrooke, will be lowered up to four feet Sunday to permit the department of energy and resources to carry out a work project in Bromptonville.

A spokesman for Sherbrooke Hydro told The Record Wednesday that the water flow in the river will be stopped completely between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. by means of upriver dams.

"The low level will be something we haven't seen around here for quite a few years," he said, adding that the reduction will provide a good opportunity for river-bottom treasure hunters.

The Magog River, which also flows through the city, will have its level reduced by a similar amount for several hours over the weekend, enabling parks workers to proceed with beach-cleaning operations.

Highwater Dunkin

The Misses Greta, Norma and Meribel McKelvey spent the weekend at their country home in Dunkin.

Recent visitors at the Aiken-Macey home were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Aull and son, Bobby, Sawyerville, and Miss Edith Macey of Sutton.

HEARTFELT THANKS — The Sherbrooke branch of the Heart Foundation kicked off its first Sherbrooke campaign yesterday when Marcel Savard, president of the chapter, tagged Florence Zoor, the first donor to the campaign, which hopes to raise $10,000 before it closes June 15. Miss Zoor has a special interest in the foundation, as her father, Elie Zoor, was one of the first heart transplant patients. Today, Friday and Saturday, a small army of high-schoolers will take to the streets to solicit contributions from Sherbrooke residents. The balance of the funds will come from industries and businesses.

No dope traffic detected at Rock Island crossing

ROCK ISLAND — Canada Customs officers have never made a seizure or arrests under the Narcotics Act at this important border crossing to and from the United States, O.J. Palmer, Collector of Customs and Excise, told The Record yesterday.

He underlined that during "zero hour" searches, when a vehicle is given a thorough going over at the whim of an officer, his personnel are on the lookout for drugs of any kind.

Motioning towards the window, he said "once you've been out there for a while, you can tell if someone is up to something. When we think that is the case, a zero hour search results."

"Were we to find anything, Canada Customs is permitted by law to confiscate the suspected illegal narcotics, and detain the persons in question until the R.C.M.P. arrive. Were this to occur, such persons would be jailed by the R.C.M.P. in Sherbrooke," Mr. Palmer said.

Speaking of Quebec border points in general, Mr. Palmer said the movement of narcotics is directed into the U.S. rather than into Canada.

Knowlton Lions present cheque to Foster Home

KNOWLTON (Special) — The Knowlton Lions Club held its annual general meeting and Ladies Night June 3 in the Legion Hall. The highlight of the event was the presentation to the Lions Club from the Foster Home Show Committee of a cheque for about $3,000 making up a total of over $9,000 presented to the Lions Club from proceeds of the Foster Home Shows over the past two years.

This money is earmarked for Lions Club welfare work, and in particular new work to be completed at the Lions Park, a soft ball and baseball grounds, and new wash room facilities, which will cost upwards of $3,000 and $1,000 is needed immediately to provide food, fuel, purchase of more wheel chairs, and sending children to summer camps.

The cheque was presented by Fred Southam, Chairman of the Foster Home Show Committee. Also present for this occasion was Mr. Vince Melancon, Past District Governor, who was guest speaker and Installation Officer.

Warning to CBC prexy

One general complaint among listeners to CBC news and information programs is that too often these presentations are slanted to say the least, a view which was expressed in the House of Commons by Conservative MP Walter Dimsdale.

He spoke of the continuing complaints that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is anti-American on its English network, pro-separatist on its French network and that it over-emphasizes New Left views.

In a rather weak reply, George Davidson, president of the Corporation, declared that the CBC was just reporting the news.

But to assure that his future comments reflect a true knowledge of the situation it might be available for President Davidson to follow the CBC news programs more attentively.

Both in news and public affairs, there have long been disturbing indications that the United States is being put in the worst possible light, both with respect to its international image and its domestic affairs.

Left-oriented criticisms of United States policy receive ample prime time. But defenders of the U.S. government tend to receive short shrift — sometimes to the point of having their remarks cut off.

There is more validity in Mr. Dimsdale's criticisms than Mr. Davidson seems prepared to admit. This is unfortunate because the Corporation cannot afford a further widening of the credibility gap already existing between the CBC news service and its viewers.

Inconsistent justice

Arguing that today's youth is maturing earlier than preceding generations, the British Columbia Government has decided to lower the juvenile age in that province to seventeen.

Probably this is a valid philosophy, already recognized by the lowering of the voting age to 18 in several provinces and the plan to do so in federal elections. More and more, young people like to regard themselves as adults, but if they wish to be treated like adults they must act responsibly.

Leslie Peterson, the B.C. Attorney-General, reported a growing attitude among some juveniles that there are certain laws which they can ignore because of the exemption from open prosecution as adults they now enjoy.

Not only does the British Columbia mean action that seventeen-year-olds will be treated as adults before the courts but that those below this age will be liable to acquire criminal records for delinquencies.

But the B.C. changes point up the discrepancy among the provinces regarding the juvenile age, with seventeen being the rule in British Columbia and Newfoundland, sixteen in Ontario, Saskatchewan and the Maritimes and eighteen in Manitoba and Quebec.

Such inconsistency is undesirable and there is marked unfairness in the fact that a youth in one province may be classified as an adult offender while in another he is billed as a juvenile.

Beer-operated radios

In New Zealand, within recent weeks, an amateur technician has come up with an unusual invention which is attracting world-wide attention. He has built a radio that operates on beer.

It all started as a party joke.

A friend remarked to Jim Coyle, who lives in Wanganui, that since people worked so well on beer, it was a pity radios did not do the same.

Coyle reflected that there was enough acid in beer to run a transistor radio, so he built one. It requires no batteries.

Now the big problem facing Coyle and his fellow amateur scientists is to develop a car that will run on lemon juice. Its operating cost might be higher than that of a gasoline-driven vehicle but it could solve much of our pollution problem.

Frederic

Regarding the article that appeared in Friday's Record, June 5, "World's largest outdoor painting for Scotstown."

"I feel that this should have a question mark after it." I never really noticed the chimney before," said artist Frederic Doyon, "but this time I see it there naked against the sky with the old saw mill no longer there to shoulder it."

That was reason No. 1 why this chimney was doomed to be demolished a short time ago.

Reason No. 2, it is so close to the railroad track, Hydro power lines, and the Salmon River bridge, that if it fell it could take the power lines down, land on the bridge or on the railroad tracks.

Reason No. 3, this is a useless brick chimney 70 yrs. old, 110 ft. high, the bottom of the chimney is only 8 1/2 ft. by nine ft., set on stone base.

The property owners in Scotstown should think twice before allowing a bogey trap of this nature on their land, in case of a disaster who would have to pay the damage?

It appears Frederic was scared when he saw the magnitude of his vision, tourists looking and walking the terrace built of green marble and a glass podium out over the river.

Considering this, and age, location size and height of said chimney, I am surprised he didn't have cold sweat all over him instead of cold sweat coursing down his back.

Considering the above facts, I fully agree with Frederic when he states, "To succeed as an artist you've got to be a little crazy as well."

It appears his manager, Yvette Gaudet, set the wheels in motion deciding that the time was ripe for escalating the idea, she confided in Mayor Martel and sold him on the project.

He responded almost immediately and bought the chimney back. I wonder what he paid for it? Did he buy it for himself or the Town? Who is going to pay for this two year project?

Would it not be much better for the Town of Scotstown if Mayor Martel and his friends worked harder to get the wheels of commerce rolling in industries rather than painting useless smoke-stacks, thus relieve the welfare department of some of the burden they are carrying?

I hope Mr. Frederic Doyon didn't go on an LSD ride on May 14!

I trust I will be granted space in The Record like the space allotted to the man with a flower, a tower, and a dream.

Rejected

I was under the impression that the Canada Council was supposed to give grants to help encourage the arts and culture of our country.

So I asked them for help in publishing a History of Canterbury, Quebec. This work consists of the history of the church and school, the eight pioneer families, and other chapters dealing with their various activities.

To have their story, along with their pictures, setting forth their trials, their struggles, their triumphs, so that it won't be lost that is the purpose of this history.

The reply from the humanities and social sciences division of the Council was, in part, as follows, "... we have no funds available for the kind of enterprise with which you are concerned."

However, they had funds, $5,000 to offer to an avowed communist, who had the decency to refuse it. I must admit he showed more sense than they did.

Imagine a government agency using public funds to help people who advocate the overthrow of that very government. It sounds like a scene from Alice in Wonderland.

New light on Kremlin aims

WASHINGTON — New facts about Soviet arms deliveries to the Kremlin's Arab client-states have now shed a lurid new light on the Kremlin's Middle Eastern aims. The aims are to beat the Israelis to their knees, or to destroy Israel absolutely.

These, one must further conclude, have been the aims ever since Israel's magnificent and humiliating defeat of the Kremlin's Arab clients in the Six-Day War. The evidence is now clear, in fact, that the Soviet pilots flying MIG-21s in Egypt represent only one stage in a long-range plan, which has always had these aims.

After the Six-Day War, it may be recalled, the Soviets soon began arms shipments to Egypt and Syria on an emergency basis. Since the Egyptians and Syrians had virtually lost their entire armed forces, the arms shipments were at first interpreted as being purely defensive in purpose.

Unfortunately, this interpretation is now shown to have been pure, wishful bosh. The quantities of arms the Soviets have shipped are simply too enormous to be consistent with a defensive purpose. The aims have clearly been offensive from the outset. If you doubt this, consider the following chilling figures.

Before the Six-Day War, the Egyptians had 300 tanks and the Syrians had 350. Today, the Soviets have provided Egypt with 1,600 tanks, and the Syrians with 1,000. Before the Six-Day War, again, the Egyptians had 400 pieces of heavy artillery, and the Syrians 200. Today, the Soviets have provided the Egyptians with 1,600 heavy artillery pieces, and the Syrians with 1,000.

The contrast in planes is even more startling. The Egyptian air force has been increased from 100 planes in 1967 to 600 today, including 170 MIG-21s and 150 Sukhoi bombers in the supersonic category. The Syrian air force has been comparably increased, from 55 aircraft in 1967 to 260 today.

The 100 MIG-21s of the most advanced model, which the Soviet pilots are flying in Egypt, are additional to the figures given above for the Egyptian air force. And without counting the planes given the Egyptians and Syrians, just those 100 MIGs being flown by Soviet pilots considerably outnumber the Israeli air force's entire present stock of supersonic Phantoms and Mirages.

No one in his senses can read the foregoing figures without reaching a grim conclusion. The Soviet armed shipments were obviously planned, from the first, to give the Arab client-states enough sheer weight of metal to crush Israel. That is the only possible interpretation. And this in turn explains Gamal Abdel Nasser's declaration of a "war of attrition" last year.

By that time, the bulk of the Soviet arms had already been delivered. As Gen. Moshe Dayan told this reporter during a recent trip to Israel, "Both Nasser and his Soviet bosses really believed they had enough weight to crush us." But this first stage of the plan went wrong because of the dash and brilliance of the tiny Israeli air force.

The Israeli air force checked the war of attrition by proving to Nasser, and indeed to Nasser's Soviet advisers, that no target in Egypt was safe from Israeli bombing attacks. The threat of those attacks was the deterrent that took the pressure off Israel's Suez defenses, for many months on end.

Seen against this background, the recent Soviet take-over of almost the entire air defense of Egypt is even more sinister than it appeared at first. It is in fact a way of patching up the long-range plan, to bring the Israelis to their knees, or to crush Israel altogether, that went wrong last year when the war of attrition was checked.

The Soviet pilots and SAM-3s have already put Nasser's war of attrition back into high gear. How serious this is may be hard for Americans to understand. For instance, we read of 30 Israeli soldiers lost, the other day, in a single fight on the Suez front, and no one was concerned. But for little Israel, that loss was exactly what a loss of over 2,800 Americans would be to us.

In view of all these facts, the present intellectual climate in this country is utterly incomprehensible. The facts show the Soviets have been long maturing and carefully preparing a cold-blooded plan for Israel's destruction. By destroying Israel, the Soviets undoubtedly expect to gain predominance in the entire Middle East. The proofs, by now, are abundant and glaring. Israel has nowhere to turn for help, except the United States.

But on this policy-making flank, President Nixon is uniquely immune from left-wing liberal attack. One wonders why.

What is wrong?

WASHINGTON — People who have been wondering why things have been unraveling so badly in Washington these days may be interested in the explanation of a distinguished Chinese scholar who visited the Capitol last week. Dr. Chun Ling is an expert in Feng Sui, otherwise known as the study of things in relation to where they are placed.

"Americans," Dr. Chun Ling said, "do not put much significance into what is in good harmony and bad harmony, but if buildings are not in harmony with each other, it is impossible for people to be in harmony."

Dr. Chun Ling said that the most striking example of this could be illustrated by the fact that the White House faces north and the Capitol of the nation faces east, and both have their backs to the Washington Monument. When buildings face in different directions, they do not have common goals.

"The Supreme Court faces Lincoln and that is good, but Lincoln from his tomb must look at the back of the Senate and House of Representatives, and this is bad."

Dr. Chun also said, "It is very sad the President's office is located in the west wing of the White House, because this puts him on the side of the Pentagon and away from Health, Education and Welfare."

The Feng Sui expert said it is no accident that the Pentagon is as strong as it is in Washington. "The Pentagon is much larger than the Capitol and White House, and the two smaller buildings cannot control the bigger one. Not only that, but the Pentagon has too many faces and too many entrances directed in all directions. This multi-faceted design has forced the Pentagon to get involved in every direction it faces."

Dr. Chun Ling pointed something out to me that I had never noticed before, which shows you how important the study of Feng Sui can be.

"The Pentagon is across the Potomac River and that is why the State Department, Capitol and even the White House have no control over it."

One of the most interesting things that Dr. Chun Ling said was that because the White House faces north, it looks on Lafayette Park. In the center of Lafayette Park is the Jackson Memorial, consisting of four giant antique guns. These guns have dominated every recent President's thinking. When the President is trying to think, it's inevitable that the guns in Lafayette Park can suggest military solutions to world problems. Dr. Chun Ling believes the guns should be removed at once and replaced with flowers.

When studying the science of Feng Sui, Dr. Chun Ling says that it is very important to know on what axis our nation's leaders sleep. If they don't sleep on the same geographic poles, they can disrupt the flow of the earth's magnetism.

I had my doubts about Dr. Chun Ling's last statement, and so I did some Feng Sui research on my own. It appeared there was a lot to what he said. For example, I discovered that Sen. Fulbright sleeps south to north and Martha Mitchell sleeps west to east. This is why they have never been able to see eye to eye on anything.

Vice President Agnew, on the other hand, sleeps south by southeast. Most Eastern Establishment newspapermen and commentators sleep north by northeast. This, and only this, is what is causing the disharmony between the Vice President and the press.

I tried to find out what direction President Nixon sleeps to make my study complete, but Ron Ziegler, his press secretary, told me emphatically "The President never sleeps."

The seaway: 'I like to forget it'

By DON McLEOD
DETROIT (CP) — Shuffling papers on his desk, economist Dick Miller lets his shoulders sag wearily, sighs and shakes his head.

"The seaway—I like to forget it," he grins.

"The thing was built on a romantic issue—the fourth sea coast and so on. But you can't romanticize iron ore and wheat.

"It was built for bulk cargo. Hanna (Hanna Mining Co. of the United States) needed the iron ore. . . I think (President) Eisenhower may have approved it (the seaway) for that reason."

Dick was policy review and information director for the U.S. St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp. for seven years until 1969.

Now a private financial counsellor in Detroit, he says the seaway is seeing its bulk cargo foundations rattle while it has failed to generate expected general cargo traffic.

"It's been a political thing—like motherhood. You could sell it."

Too much political has been made of the romantic appeal and too little hard-nosed economic research has been done on its real potential, he says.

HEAT'S OFF STEEL

Now, he says, a lower level of steel industry activity and increasingly competitive alternatives to the seaway for ore delivery mean "the heat's off" the steel companies. He says they're just not that interested any more in future seaway programs.

A source at Pickands Mather Co. of Cleveland, managers of iron mines in Labrador, source of the bulk of the seaway ore, seemed to agree.

"When you talk about the future of the seaway, you're really talking about the future of the iron ore industry—where the ore is going to come from," the source said.

Seaway tolls and proposals to increase them as well as the uncertain future effects of the recommendations of the Carter royal commission on compared with seaway locks which can handle ships only up to 800 feet long, 80 feet wide and with a draft of 25 1/2 feet.

taxation in Canada have caused steel industry people to wonder about the future cost of Canadian ore, he said.

Pickands Mather also manages the Erie mine in Minnesota—a 10,000,000-ton-a-year operation compared to the 6,000,000-ton Wabush Mines Ltd. works at Wabush, Nfld.

Iron ore from Duluth, Minn., will soon be carried in two huge freighters being built for steel companies which will be unable to pass through any lock except the Poe lock at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., opened last year.

Mr. Miller says political pressure prevented the international seaway locks at Messina, N.Y., across from Cornwall in eastern Ontario, from being the same size.

PRESSURE PUT ON

"The U.S. Corps of Engineers has all set to build the Messina locks to the same size as the Poe lock," he said.

"But the Canadian government put on political pressure to have them built to the same size as those at Welland."

Where the Poe lock is 1,200 feet long, 115 feet wide and 32 feet deep, the seaway locks can handle ships only up to 750 to 800 feet in length and 75 to 80 feet wide.

In shipping bulk cargoes, the bigger the ship and the more cargo it can carry, the cheaper are the final transportation costs of each ton of cargo.

Captain F. Manzutti of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., president and former owner of Yank-Canuck Steamship Lines, said Poe-sized locks at Messina would have admitted ore carriers of 125,000 to 150,000 tons from Sept. 1965, Que., to the Great Lakes, compared to about a 32,000-ton limit currently.

The larger freighters are loading alongside the smaller seaway carriers at Sept. 1965, he said. But they're going to eastern U.S. ports.

The result is to make imports of iron ore for U.S. steel mills through its east coast more competitive with seaway shipping costs.

Jack Jones, chief engineer of the Toronto Harbor Commission and this year's president of the International Association of Great Lakes Ports, links these problems of the bulk shippers to the general cargo trade.

Toronto's seaway-generated cargo is about 90 per cent general cargo and it is the only Canadian port to receive substantial general cargo flows from the seaway, experts say.

"Bulk movements and general cargoes are tied together in success," says Mr. Jones. "It would be suicidal if bulk cargo was diminished and general cargo had to carry the price of the seaway."

But, except in this way, port officials and others claim the physical size of the locks has not been the major problem in building up overseas general cargo traffic among lake ports.

They say any general cargoes except for the largest "express" ships can pass through the seaway instead of stopping at Montreal to trans-ship by railway and highway to and from the heart of the continent.

Competition from East Coast ports and overland carriers—some of it natural and some said to be artificially imposed for political reasons—is cited as a bigger hurdle than lock sizes in increasing general cargo in the seaway.

MUST MOVE FAST

Some, like Captain Manzutti, think technology, such as the use of bulk containers for general cargo, is passing the seaway by.

"Within a few years, 85 per cent of general cargo will go containerized," he said. "This stuff has to move fast," meaning by rail or truck to a coastal port.

"The other 15 per cent, such as heavy equipment, which cannot be put in a container, will go to the nearest (seaway) port."

Dick Miller didn't think so when he started with the U.S. seaway authority. He said his office spent some $100,000 annually on promotion of the seaway. But a dearth of hard facts and figures on port facilities, available cargoes and the like, together with red tape in the seaway authority itself, defeated much of the effort, he says.

Now, "I just don't think the cargo is there" because of the growth of competition from railways, highway transport and even air freight, he added.

"But if it is, or the ports think it is, let them go out and get it. That's not the federal government's business."

But, he says, port authority desks too often are occupied by political appointees rather than people expert in cargo movements.

He dismisses talk of a "super-agency" to manage the lakes.

EFFICIENCY NEEDED

"There's no chance for either seaway authority to achieve its goals if they start at the wrong end. They've got to clean up the ports first and make them more efficient."

Technically, the Canadian seaway authority is supposed to stay out of the promotional field, which has done so far to the annoyance of the lake ports.

Now there are indications it may be moving to skirt legal stumbling blocks, perhaps by working with or through the ports.

"The seaway has got a big selling job to do," is a familiar comment and apparent consensus.

The product offered would be fundamentally attractive: "Consultants have estimated that, on the average, the seaway has made possible savings of about $1.80 per ton for the traffic which makes use of its facilities compared with the cost of alternative routes," says George Sainsbury, the Canadian authority's economics and research chief.

An officer of the Toronto Harbor Commission made a similar point, in calling for removal of restraints and impediments such as tolls and unfair rail rates and terminal charges.

"All things being equal, it's cheaper to ship by the seaway," he said.

Postal

The problem resolves, too, around union inability to pay for proper support staff—economists, labor relations experts and public relations men—during the protracted negotiations. When talks resume today the bargaining will have been going on for more than nine months with no sign of a quick settlement in view.

This week, however, following announcement of the government's intention to stick to a six-per-cent ceiling on wage increases, other unions began to move to assist the postal council.

CUPE LOANS PR MAN

The Canadian Union of Public Employees, Canada's second biggest union with 140,000 members, loaned the postal council CUPE's own public relations man, Norm Simon. Mr. Simon will be paid by CUPE while he serves the postmen as the first public relations help they have had during the negotiations.

Treasury board has at least four public relations personnel working part-time on the postal dispute, plus a battery of economic and other experts who support government arguments in negotiations.

Also this week, Mr. McGregor met privately in Ottawa with William Houle and Roger DeCarrie, co-chairmen of the postal council, and offered them the use of railway union research resources and staff during coming weeks.

The 20 railway unions also go into contract bargaining with the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways later this year and have said they will battle the government wage ceiling.

CLC MAY HELP TOO

Help could also come from the 1,650,000-member Canadian Labor Congress, which is scheduled to hold an emergency executive session Tuesday on the wage guide question.

Although the CLC has not yet been asked to canvass its affiliated unions for money for the postmen, the CLC biennial convention in Edmonton last month pledged support for the postal workers' fight.

Whatever help is given would be based on self-interest as well as on principles of labor solidarity.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian tobacco industry announced Wednesday that after July 1 "cash prizes and major gifts associated with various brands of Canadian cigarettes will not be offered or advertised."

Paul Pare, chairman of an ad hoc industry committee involving the four major manufacturers in Canada—Benson and Hedges, Imperial, Macdonald and Rothmans, said in a statement.

"We have made this decision in response to criticism of these marketing practices by certain government authorities.

"We feel this action is necessary to demonstrate our sense of responsibility as an industry. It is consistent with our long-standing policy to co-operate in every way possible with the government."

A spokesman said nine brands are affected by Wednesday's ruling. They make up about 50 per cent of the Canadian market.

COUPONS TO CONTINUE

Brands offering coupons that may be saved for prizes from a catalogue will be allowed to continue that type of promotional advertising after July 1. There are two such brands in Canada.

The nine brands involved in cash or major gift prizes are: Sweet Caporal, Matinee, Number 7, Peter Jackson, all distributed by Imperial, Belvedere, distributed by Benson and Hedges; Sportsman, distributed by Rothmans; Contessa, Export, Export A, all distributed by Macdonald.

Mr. Pare said cash prize and gift certificates in circulation will continue to be redeemed after the July 1 deadline, but no more such inserts will be placed in packages after that date.

He said he has been dismayed by the recent statements of some federal authorities that resulted in the decision to cancel the industry's current promotional programs.

Farmers

17 New Democrats with 92 Liberal votes voting against it.

The bill then was given second reading on a voice vote.

The Conservatives' main disagreement with the bill, Mr. Danforth said, is that "from start to end it is government agencies and appointees who make all the decisions, with or without consulting the farmers."

All parties agreed Wednesday that the bill would go to committee after two hours of debate, on government assurance that it will allow amendments of substance within the committee, except for proposals involving additional financial expenditures, and that it will allow witnesses from farm groups to present their views.

COULD STOP CROPS

Mr. Danforth said the government will be able to stop further competition by preventing new farmers from raising crops or livestock.

Leonel Beaudoin (Creditiste-Richmond) said he will vote against the bill if it does not specifically give producers the right to representation on the marketing agencies.

All Gleeve (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggan) said farm organizations have asked for assurance that appointees to agencies be nominated wherever possible from producer organizations.

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said farmers are unanimous in their desire for institutions to ensure orderly marketing but none have recommended the handing over of decision-making to government.

Rod Thomson (NDP—Bathurst-Kindersley) said farmers should have some form of control on the council.

KNOWLTON — Sympathy of friends here is being extended to the family of Mr. J. Terrio, Bolton Centre, in the tragic accident on June 6 that took the life of Miss J. Terrio, in her 22nd year.

Miss Terrio was driving home from Knowlton to Bolton Centre when her car came into collision with a car driven by Mr. Keith Webster of Knowlton.

Miss Terrio was killed instantly, while Mr. Webster's passengers, Mrs. Webster and their five-year-old daughter sustained injuries that necessitated hospitalization.

Mr. Webster was slightly injured and both cars were a total loss.

Requiem Mass for Miss Terrio was held at 11 a.m. June 9 in St. Thomas' Church, South Bolton, with burial in Bolton Centre.

Provincial Police are investigating. Miss Terrio was have been married in two weeks time.

Charges letters seized at airport

MONTREAL (CP) — A Toronto woman, just back from North Vietnam with two friends, said Wednesday customs officials at Montreal International Airport seized letters from United States prisoners of war late Tuesday.

Judy Gumbo, 22, told a news conference in front of the U.S. consulate officials seized a picture of books, postcards, sutures and newspapers as well as 143 letters from imprisoned American pilots.

In Ottawa, Revenue Minister Jean-Pierre Cote said in the Commons he had investigated the seizure.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said it appears Mr. Cote's officials "have seized or detained 140 letters written by captured American servicemen in North Vietnam to their relatives and other material in the possession of visitors to Canada."

Miss Gumbo said Wednesday the suitcase was brought into Canada by her two female companions who were returning to the U.S. on board an Air Canada flight from Moscow after a one-month tour of North Vietnam. The women are members of the Youth International Party—Yippies.

Miss Gumbo said the officials seized the material and "knew what was in the letters when they took them, but refused to say whether they would be returned or not."

NEWSPAPERS TAKEN

Also seized were some underground newspapers published in the U.S., she said.

"They even took those, telling me they are illegal here."

The letters were given to the women—Miss Gumbo, Nancy Rubin, wife of Yippie spokesman Jerry Rubin, and Genie Plamondon—by the Vietnamese Committee for Solidarity with the American People.

Mrs. Plamondon is reported to be the wife of a man on the FBI's most wanted list in connection with a bombing incident in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mrs. Rubin told the news conference it is a common practice to send letters from North Vietnam through intermediaries because it is two to four months faster than regular channels.

Jean Bellemare, deputy minister of customs and excise, said in an interview.

"These items were not seized but held for examination pending further analysis of their contents. The girls were given receipts for all the articles."

Larose returns,
Rousseau leaves

MONTREAL (CP) — Minnesota North Stars and Montreal Canadiens exchanged right wingers in a National Hockey League trade announced Wednesday.

Canadiens sent Bob Rousseau to the North Stars for Claude Larose. This deal completed a transaction which began Tuesday when the North Stars acquired defenceman Ted Harris from Montreal in the intra-league draft.

The Canadiens received the North Stars' first choice in Thursday's amateur draft in the same deal. Minnesota received Montreal's second pick.

Montreal also acquired forward Bill Collins, completing a deal which sent Jude Drouin to Minnesota May 22.

NHL teams clothe Canucks, Sabres

By AL McNEIL
MONTREAL (CP) — Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres both emerged from Wednesday's National Hockey League expansion draft with a mixture of old, established pros, young legs and former minor-leaguers.

The two new NHL clubs each drafted 18 skaters and two goalies from the 12 existing teams for their league entry in the coming season.

Buffalo general manager Punch Imlach lifted veteran forwards Don Marshall from New York Rangers, Phil Goyette from St. Louis Blues and Reg Fleming from Philadelphia Flyers. Marshall and Goyette are former teammates with Montreal Canadiens and New York.

Immediately after the draft proceedings, Imlach grabbed another proven player in return for a virtual unknown. He exchanged his first draft choice, Tom Webster obtained from Boston Bruins, for veteran Roger Crozier, a goalie with Detroit Red Wings for the last six seasons.

The deal for Crozier had previously been set up by Imlach, who apparently reached agreement with Detroit to draft Webster.

CHOOSE GOALIES

In addition to Crozier, Imlach chose Rocky Farr from Montreal Canadiens and Gary Edwards from St. Louis as his goaltender choices.

Vancouver general manager Bud Poile selected goalie Charlie Hodge from Oakland Seals, defenceman Gary Doak from Boston and towering centre ice veteran Orland Kurtenbach.

Poile also grabbed defenceman Pat Quinn from Toronto Maple Leafs. As his first goalie choice he drafted promising young Dune Wilson from Philadelphia Flyers.

Buffalo took eight defencemen and Vancouver settled for five.

Imlach picked young Allan Hamilton from New York, Tracy Pratt, Mike McMahon and Doug Barrie from Pittsburgh, Jim Watson from Detroit, Jean Guy Legace from Minnesota North Stars, Francois Lacombe from Montreal and Chris Evans from St. Louis.

Poile, in addition to Doak and Quinn, picked up defenceman Darryl Sly from Minnesota, Barry Wilkins from Boston and Poul Popiel from Detroit.

VETERANS UNTOUCHED

Tim Horton of New York and Jean-Guy Talbot of St. Louis, both veteran blue-line operators, were untouched despite the fact neither was protected.

Montreal managed to fill with right wingers Claude Provost and Leon Rochefort. New York filled with Ron Stewart and Detroit with Bob Baun.

Imlach, in addition to getting Marshall, Goyette and Fleming, drafted Skip Krake and Craig Cameron from Los Angeles Kings, Brian Perry and Howie Menard from Oakland, Jerry Meehan from Philadelphia and Paul Terbenche from Chicago Black Hawks.

Poile, besides Kurtenbach, obtained forwards Ray Cullen from Minnesota, Rosaire Paiement from Philadelphia, Jim Wiste and Garth Rizuto from Chicago, Danny Johnson and Ron Ward from Toronto Maple Leafs, Ralph Stewart and John Schella from Montreal, Wayne Maki from St. Louis, Mike Corrigan from the Kings, Bob Dillabough from Oakland and Ed Hatoum from Detroit.

Oakland, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Montreal each lost four men including a goaltender and three skaters, while the other eight teams lost only three skaters each.

When the league doubled to 12 clubs from six three years ago, the newcomers received 20 players for $2,000,000. It cost Vancouver and Buffalo $6,000,000 for the same privilege.

Three years ago, the six existing teams were each able to protect 11 skaters and one goaltender from the newcomers. This time the 12 clubs held out 15 skaters and two goalies from the two new teams.

Buffalo earned the right to the first choice in Wednesday's proceedings when Sabres' general manager Punch Imlach won a lottery from Bud Poile Tuesday.

Imlach elected to take the first choice of skaters, giving Vancouver the first choice of goaltenders.

Maximum loss to each of the existing clubs was three players, with first-year professionals exempt from the draft.

New waiver rules benefit players

MONTREAL (CP) — Significant changes in the waiver rules governing players appearing on the 18-man protected list of National Hockey League clubs were announced Wednesday after meetings of the league's players-owners council.

Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson, executive director of the association, described the changes as the "most significant step in the players' favor" ever.

The new agreement says that any player who has served two years in professional hockey at any level and appears on a protected list may not be sent to the minors without the team first asking waivers on him from the other members of the league.

"This is to keep a player from being on a protected list just to send him up and down between the minors and the majors," Eagleson said.

An exception will be made when a player is sent down for disciplinary or conditioning reasons.

An additional benefit is that any player on the 18-man list, should he be waived out of the NHL to a minor league, will still get a full season pension benefit.

TAKES EFFECT NOW

This move will apply for the coming season. The 18-man lists effective for the coming season will be derived from those made up after Wednesday's expansion draft.

In addition, the owners agreed to changes whereby the waiver price of the player with more than 10 years service will be one-third of the then-current waiver price. The current price is $30,000.

The price of a player offered on waivers for voluntary retirement purposes will be one-sixth of the then-current waiver price and the waiver price for a player who has been unconditionally released will be $100. This figure is currently set at $1,000.

Another significant fact is that a player cannot voluntarily consent to be sent to the minors if he is on the 18-man protected list and has two-year service as a pro.

Eagleson said the NHL Players' Association and NHL Services Inc. have been promoting endorsements as separate entities. A committee has been appointed to explore the possibility of the merger of these two with respect to endorsements.

Als thump Eagles in re-match

TROIS RIVIERES — jumped to a 3-1 lead. Beaten 6-5 Tuesday night, the Sherbrooke Alouettes turned the tables on the Trois Rivieres Eagles to the tune of a 6-3 win last night in Provincial League action.

Six glaring Alouettes errors were overlooked by the fact that the Sherbrooke squad unleashed a 17-hit attack.

Pedro Rodriguez relieved Andy Occhionero in the sixth inning after the Eagles had Ridley contributed with a three-for-five performance, while catcher Al Fernandez also collected three hits.

The Alouettes return to the Amedee Roy ballpark Saturday night when they host the Quebec Indians. At the game, 100 balls autographed by the home team will be distributed among the crowd.

Big right-hander Craig Anderson will likely be on the mound for Sherbrooke.

General Manager Normand Ainslie disclosed that he intends to get in touch with pitcher Gerry Magness in the next few days in order to find out if the right-hander plans to play for the Alouettes this season. Magness is currently with Charlotte in the Southern League.

Cincy puts it all together, win 7-0

MONTREAL (AP) — Jim McGlothlin pitched a three hitter and Tony Perez clouted a three-run homer Wednesday as the sizzling Cincinnati Reds blanked Montreal Expos 7-0 for the Reds' fifth consecutive victory.

The Reds, who have now won 10 of 11, erupted for three runs in the first inning when Angel Bravo opened with a single, advanced to third on Pete Rose's double and scored when Perez unloaded a three-run shot over the left-field fence off loser Mike Wegener, 0-1. The Cincinnati third baseman leads the majors with 21 homers and 63 RBI.

McGlothlin, 8-3, struck out six and walked four.

The Reds added four more runs in the seventh off rookie reliever John Strohmayr when Rose doubled, Perez walked, Johnny Bench doubled and Bernie Carbo hit a 430-foot blast over the centre-field fence.

Woman publisher claims Canada a 'disaster area' for books

By CAROL PASCOE
MONTREAL (CP) — Deep in the heart of Old Montreal an energetic woman with a love for beautiful books is trying to confront a book publishing system which she says is alienating and destroying Canadian literary talent.

Publishing in Canada is a "disaster area," says May Ebbitt Cutler, who started Tundra Books three years ago.

"Do you know there are fewer Canadian books—250 in 1969—being published now than there were before the Second World War?"

"Large Toronto publishers won't even produce a book until they can line up an American publisher to handle it in the U.S."

Mrs. Cutler, still glowing from the receipt of an award from the American Institute of Graphic Arts for one of Tundra's poetry books, publishes about six books a year in French and English.

The Kings Have Donned Their Final Mask by Malcolm Miller, chosen as one of the Fifty Books of the Year by AIGA, is the fourth hard-cover book published by her. The tribute was given for top-quality printing, binding, design and illustrations.

HAS FULL SCHEDULE

"I can't handle any more than that," she said. "I already have a full schedule for this year because I look after all the editing and supervise production myself."

Mrs. Cutler is particularly interested in children's books and although they are generally poor sellers except to libraries, she has begun a series on ethnic origins with Grandmother Came From Dwortiz by Ethel Vineberg.

She says children are no longer interested or stimulated by "lost puppy" stories and, with careful guidance from her own children, she has attempted to find manuscripts which are educational as well as entertaining.

Her headquarters is on St. Francois Xavier Street, a tiny, old-fashioned bookshop jammed with books, a type-setting machine, desks and vibrantly colored silk-screen prints which she sells. Outside, a small brass plaque reads: Tundra Books—Canadian Books Only.

Mrs. Cutler's obsession is quality—in printing, design and binding—and she says that once she gets out of debt, perhaps this year, "I won't care if I make any money."

CANADIAN PUBLISHING A "DISASTER AREA" — May Ebbitt Cutler says publishing in Canada is a "disaster area" and that there are fewer Canadian books being published now than before the Second World War. Mrs. Cutler started her own company — Tundra Books — three years ago, and one of the books she has published was chosen as one of the Fifty Books of the Year by the American Institute of Graphic Arts.

A former newspaper woman and English lecturer at McGill University, Mrs. Cutler says she got into the publishing business without previous training simply "because the only way you can get things done in Canada is to do them yourself."

"I wrote a novel for my MA at McGill and there was no one to tell me what to do with it, what it needed."

"Large publishing companies in Canada, unlike their counterparts in the U.S., don't have good editors. They can't afford them. So they say the only way a good book can be written is to select an author and give him a topic."

Mrs. Cutler doesn't agree. "Sure, the manuscripts need work, but I go by the theory that you can edit out but you can't edit in."

"Therefore, I try to go through the manuscripts that are sent to me, pull out some parts, switch them around, throw away others and then see what I've got."

"Established Canadian publishers think editing is no more than correcting spelling mistakes."

Mrs. Cutler, who has a degree in journalism from Columbia University, is herself a prize-winning author, having been awarded the top Centennial Literary Award for The Last Noble Savage.

LISTS THEIR SINS
Savage is the true story of an Indian woman Mrs. Cutler met as a child while vacationing in the Laurentians north of Montreal.

"It is the story of the Indian's life style," she explained, "and shows that they are perhaps more civilized than we are. We are becoming more and more depersonalized."

Mrs. Cutler now is "exorcising" her anger at Canadian publishers by writing a book on their manifold sins.

Her interest and concern for each one of her authors is evident as she says: "Writers are a lonely bunch. They spend six or eight months writing a book and they don't even know if it's good or bad or what kind of reception it will get. They need encouragement."

The Canada Council is in a prime position to offer support but falls down terribly, she says.

"The council gives .003 of its total subsidies to book production," she calculated after some hasty figuring on a scratch pad. "I think it should be judged on the same basis as theatrical productions—after all, we're both bringing something into existence."

Since Tundra Books was set up in 1967, Mrs. Cutler has received slightly less than $3,000 in council grants.

"The ironic thing is that with my two MAs they would probably hand over $5,000 if I said I wanted to tour Europe on a year's sabbatical."

LOOK FOR EXCUSE
She feels the council "is not genuinely interested in promoting the arts."

"They're only concerned with avoiding confrontations. They look for excuses for not bothering with books."

Each year, however, the council was spending $100,000 to subsidize two magazines, Arts Canada and Vie des Arts, which publish six editions annually.

"The council is nepotistic—it has its little pets and is completely unsympathetic to anything new."

"Critics, with their nastiness, don't help either. They are smart-alecky and seem to have the attitude of 'How dare a Canadian try to write a good book.' "There are a fantastic number of Canadian authors who never write a second book.

Why? Because they've been destroyed." Mrs. Cutler paused, then added:

"Look at Saul Bellows. He is considered one of the brilliant American writers today. Did you know he was born in Canada? He got out soon enough, thank goodness."

At 67, Dr. Quintin is a professor of medicine at the University of Sherbrooke, is on the staff of four hospitals and has retained his lectureship at McGill University, which he has held since 1958.

Born at Harbour Grace, Nfld., he received his preliminary education at Harbour Grace and St. John's. After graduating from McGill University in 1930 with his M.D. degree, he went to New York and Montreal for post-graduate training.

From 1938 to 1946 he was on the staff of the Barrie Memorial Hospital in Ormstown, during which time he was a member of the village council for five years.

Certified in internal medicine by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons (1948) and the Quebec College, Dr. Quintin was made a fellow of the American College of Physicians in 1949.

He has served the Sherbrooke, St. Vincent de Paul, Hotel Dieu and Youville hospitals since his arrival in Sherbrooke more than 20 years ago.

Dr. Quintin, who was a consultant at Bishop's University in Lennoxville from 1949 to 1964, was elected chairman of the general council and the executive committee of the C.M.A. from 1961 to 1964.

In view of his intimate knowledge and interest in the field of medical economics and prepaid medical care, Dr. Quintin, along with other C.M.A. officials, made a comprehensive study of medical services insurance in Australia.

From 1952 to 1956 he served as a commissioner of the Protestant School Commission in Sherbrooke and in 1960 he became a trustee for Stanstead College; a post he still holds.

Dr. Quintin, who has been active in the Canadian Cancer Society, is a past-chairman of the health committee of the Chamber of Commerce in Sherbrooke.

Dr. and Mrs. Quintin have two children.

MONTREAL, June 11th — Now that the barbecue season is here I'd like to share a recipe for our favourite never-fail barbecue sauce. This can be used for basting chops, steak, chicken, kabobs or as a marinade.

LIPTON'S BARBECUE SAUCE

1 envelope Lipton Onion Soup Mix 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
1 cup catsup 1 tsp. oregano
1 1/2 cups water 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
Bring to boil; simmer 10 minutes, stirring frequently. About 2 cups sauce. The Lipton Onion Soup Mix gives the sauce a very special flavour. And I find a jar of this makes a welcome hostess gift.

ALL CONSUMERS WILL BE INTERESTED, I'm sure, in "Behind the Scene" facts I recently learned on Eggs and Egg grading. Just what is grading? It's classifying an egg for exterior appearance — a 'spotless' shell with no rough, ridged area. It's also the interior quality, screened by 'candling' when every egg passes over a high intensity mercury vapor lamp. A Government approved grader scientifically measures the mandatory air-shell size for Grade A. And size has no bearing on the quality of eggs! It came as no great surprise to me that DOMINION STORES, who have the country's largest egg grading station, sell about 108 million of their Grade 'A' eggs each year in Ontario alone.

Bridal showers

BULWER — Mrs. Gerald Lowd, Mrs. Kenneth Johnston and Mrs. Fred McElravy were hostesses at a miscellaneous bridal shower at the Bulwer Community Centre on May 29, in honor of Doreen Little, a July bride-to-be.

Mrs. Lowd met the bride elect at the door and pinned a corsage of carnations on her and escorted her to a chair where the decor was carried out in blue and white. On behalf of friends and relatives, Mrs. Lowd presented her with the attractively wrapped parcels.

Mrs. McElravy presented the bride's mother, Mrs. Harry Little, with a corsage and escorted her to a seat beside her daughter, where she helped the bride-elect open her gifts. Miss Little was also assisted by two of her bridesmaids-to-be, Marjorie Robinson and Mrs. Sue Butler.

After the gifts were admired, a contest was conducted by Mrs. Fred McElravy, where the names of flowers were the answers to blanks left in the wedding story. The prizes were won by Mrs. E. H. Parker, Mrs. G. Lake and Mrs. R. Mastine.

For refreshments the guests were seated at long tables, centered with blue and white flowers and blue tapers.

The bride expressed appreciation for the lovely gifts and a special thank you to the hostess.

The foursome sat together where a table was piled with stork wrapped and ribboned packages to reveal a wide selection of lovely things for the expected wee one.

Mrs. Florence Blake made a hat of the ribbons and bows which was presented to Mrs. Peters as a souvenir.

Mrs. Peters voiced her appreciation for the lovely party and the gifts. A card game was played with the winners claiming the prizes.

The buffet refreshments included the shower cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Albert Simoneau in stork motif with booties on the top.

The hostesses were Mrs. Ellen Lyonnais, Mrs. Marilyn Rever and Mrs. Beth Dubois.

Guests attended from Beebe, Heathton, Baldwin's Mills and the Boundary.

"I listen to Bob Bell In the Country"

Things are beginning to slow down a bit here now at CKTS, so next week will be our "Charley Pride Week." Here are several copies of Charley's latest LPs we have to give you, besides many copies of "San Antonio." By now I would imagine you've heard his latest, "Wonder, Could I Live There Alone." The song itself surely isn't that much, but the production is out of this world. It's really an extremely well produced session.

With the holiday season almost upon us, we'd like to get post cards from you who'll be going away for considerable distance on vacation. Drop us a line with your name, town and address, response to which we'll give away a few records over the holidays, choosing names from the post cards we receive. Just one thought occurs to me, it wouldn't be wise to mail us the post cards until you take off for home. It isn't uncommon these days for dishonest individuals to seek out vacationers, and rob their homes while they're off enjoying themselves. Believe it or not, these characters get their tips the strangest ways... comprehend?

Gotta scoot for now... things to do as usual. Keep smiling, and keep it country!

'Supreme tree-man' says he wants more Canadians in the woods

OTTAWA (CP) — Richard St. Barbe Baker, 80, who's been called "the supreme man of the trees," came to Ottawa recently because he'd heard federal forestry programs were being scrapped as an anti-inflation policy.

The silver-haired silviculturist said he is "telling the federal forestry people they should send more Canadians into the woods."

"I'm perturbed about the draining of Canada's forest resources by the big American newspapers," Mr. Baker said.

"One edition of the New York Times denudes 320 acres of forest."

Even worse was the toll of wrapping paper used in stores — it accounted for 30 per cent of wood production.

The tree expert also expressed concern about the spread of Dutch elm disease in Ontario.

"But I don't agree with this spraying business. It's not nature's way."

Because disease-carrying beetles prefer trees on the decline, Mr. Baker contends healthy trees should not "get sick."

"I've seen Dutch elm disease and chestnut tree blight overcome by good nutrition." Concern for trees "is in my blood," he says.

He grew up in rural Hampshire, England.

"My great-grandfather, an Anglican rector, married money and spent it on trees. My grandfather carried scorns in his pockets for planting. My father put apple pits in pots in my playroom."

In 1910 Mr. Baker came to homestead in the dune country south of Saskatoon. He paid for his education by working in lumber camps near Prince Albert.

"I was one of the first hundred University of Saskatchewan students. I drove there with six horses and a load of hay, built a barn on the campus and put up a shack for three students. John Diefenbaker was a freshman when I was a sophomore."

After serving as a gunner in the First World War, Mr. Baker began his work with trees as assistant conservator of forests in Kenya in 1920 and Nigeria from 1923 to 1929.

Nigeria is one of a score of countries bordering the Sahara that Mr. Baker has encouraged to co-operate in building a "green front" to check the desert, which advances 30 miles a year in some places.

During the Depression of the 1930s he helped produce a forestry plan for President Roosevelt which employed 6,000,000 men in conservation corps camps.

After a summer in Canada Mr. Baker will return to New Zealand, where he settled in 1959 in the foothills of Mount Cook.

Newfie Bullet reaches end of line

By JAMES H. HUSSEY
CP Correspondent

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Units of the old "Newfie Bullet," the passenger train that once hauled people over 530 miles of jiggly, narrow-gauge railway track spanning Newfoundland from St. John's to Port aux Basques, may end up in the Yukon, the United States and some off-the-beaten-track places in Newfoundland itself.

When Canadian National was given permission to discontinue its rail passenger service in the province last year, the Canadian transport commission specified that CN must keep enough equipment ready to run two passenger trains in case of emergency.

However, CN buses, put in operation in December, 1968, have run through two Newfoundland winters without major difficulties and have proven more dependable than the trains. CN now has been given permission to sell the railroad equipment.

CN's Newfoundland area manager, Gordon McMillan, says he expects the passenger cars belonging to "The Bullet" will go on sale some time this year.

He says that because of the sentimental value thousands of Newfoundlanders have for the old train, CN has had many offers for the passenger cars from local sportsmen and others who would convert the units into summer cabins.

A narrow-gauge railway in the Yukon and several hobby railroads in the U.S. have shown interest in purchasing the cars, but Mr. McMillan feels shipping expenses will discourage them.

The sale will be handled by CN's Montreal offices, but Newfoundlanders will be notified so they can place their bids.

On her last run "The Bullet" left Port aux Basques July 2, 1969, and arrived in St. John's the following day. Some 260 revenue passengers used the train on her final trip.

For the first six months of 1969 the buses operated in competition with the train to provide a basis for comparison. During that time they carried from three to four times as many passengers as the trains. They also recorded a general increase over the number of passengers they carried in 1968.

Mr. McMillan says: "Passenger traffic is growing on the average of eight per cent a month. In the first three months of 1970 a total of 31,451 paying passengers used the buses compared with a total of 27,292 paying passengers using both buses and trains in the same period last year."

To meet this growth CN has ordered two new buses to bring the fleet operating in the province to 22 units.

Despite early criticism voiced by passengers about travelling on the buses and the twinge of nostalgia felt for "The Bullet," the highway service apparently is a profitable and popular operation.

FREIGHTS STILL RUN

The 530 miles of the Newfoundland Railway were completed in 1897. It was the first overland link between east and west Newfoundland and a major factor in opening up the interior of the island. Over the years "The Bullet"—its real name was "The Caribou"—hailed people from all walks of life over its three-foot-six-inch track and built up a legend all its own.

The main reason the service was never modernized was the narrow gauge used in the original tracks. The cost of changing the line to the standard gauge of four feet 8½ inches used on the mainland was considered too great.

The line still carries freight trains, however, and is connected with CN's mainland tracks by ferries across Cabot Strait to North Sydney, N.S.
