Sherbrooke cyclist clings to life after fall

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

A cyclist was seriously injured Wednesday night and is fighting for his life after suffering a fall in West Sherbrooke .

The 35 year old man was taken to the hospital for his injuries, which are considered serious.

The accident occurred at approximately 8:15 p.m. at the corner of Denault and Jean-Paul II.

By Thursday morning, his condition was stable, but still serious, according to Sherbrooke Police.

The cause of the accident remains unclear, and although a witness at the scene saw the rider fall, but not what caused it. police are therefore asking anyone who might have seen anything to contact them.

Police are also pointing out that the victim - given his injuries - might possibly not have survived had he not been wearing a helmet.

City's major summer cultural event has something for everyone

GORDON LAMBIE

There will be activities for Townshippers young and old at Sherbrooke's Jacques Cartier Park between noon and midnight today, tomorrow, and Sunday for the end of the annual Fete du Lac des Nations. Though today's forecasts point to a day of fun in the sun, weekend visitors might do well to bring a jacket to the rain-or-shine event.

Shhh! Don't awaken the Kraken

Nerds, you'll want to devour the endnotes as well as the book itself...

Good Reads

Eleanor Brown

Below the thunders of the upper deep,

Far, far beneath in the abysmal sea,
His ancient, dreamless, uninvaded sleep
The Kraken sleepeth: faintest sunlights flee
About his shadowy sides; above him swell
Huge sponges of millennial growth and height;
And far away into the sickly light,
From many a wondrous grot and secret cell
Unnumber'd and enormous polypi
Winnow with giant arms the slumbering green.
There hath he lain for ages, and will lie
Battening upon huge sea-worms in his sleep,
Until the latter fire shall heat the deep;
Then once by man and angels to be seen,
In roaring he shall rise and on the surface die.

- Alfred Lord Tennyson

Lord Tennyson was Great Britain's Poet Laureate under Queen Victoria, and a big fan of mythology. Thus the 1830 scary monster poem, "The Kraken".

He was also a romantic, a bit of a moralist, and one of the most quoted poets around. Yet W.H. Auden was no fan: "There was little about melancholia he didn't know; there was little else that he did."

But many have found Tennyson to be enchanting, giant monsters from the deep notwithstanding.

To find out more about Tennyson, start with Love Without Wings: Some Friendships In Literature And Politics, by Louis Auchincloss (1991, filed in the Lennoxville Library in biography at 920.073). It includes the friendship of Arthur Hallam and Alfred Tennyson.

Hallam's early and tragic death inspired some masterful poems, including "In the Valley of Cauteretz" and "In Memoriam A.H.H." Queen Victoria credited that last collection of verses with helping her cope with the death of her husband.

His Lordship's poems are in the public domain, and therefore available for free online. They are well worth your time (and the Lennoxville Library has a public computer, as well as free wifi for those with their own smart phones and laptops).

You'll be able to find the full works from which come some of the most famous lines in the English language:

"'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all."

And, on war: "Theirs not to reason why, / Theirs but to do and die."

But let's get back to "The Kraken". The Canadian teacher Dr. Philip Allingham has suggested that "the poem draws its images from the Norse legend of a gigantic sea-monster that supposedly preyed upon shipping off the coast of Norway (and was probably founded on the observation of an enormous cuttlefish or squid... It was said to be capable of dragging down to the sea-bottom even the largest ships)." The imagery, he writes (at VictorianWeb.org), suggests the Biblical end-times, while also referencing the discovery of dinosaur bones that were dug up just a few years before.

Modern folk might see this Kraken character as an inspiration for American horror writer Howard Phillips Lovecraft's iconic Cthulhu creation.

Lovecraft's works did not bring him much money or acclaim, even during his most prolific writing years, the 1920s and '30s: "Lovecraft's readership was limited during his life, and his works, particularly early in his career, have been criticized as occasionally ponderous, and for their uneven quality," wrote one critic.

But what does he know?

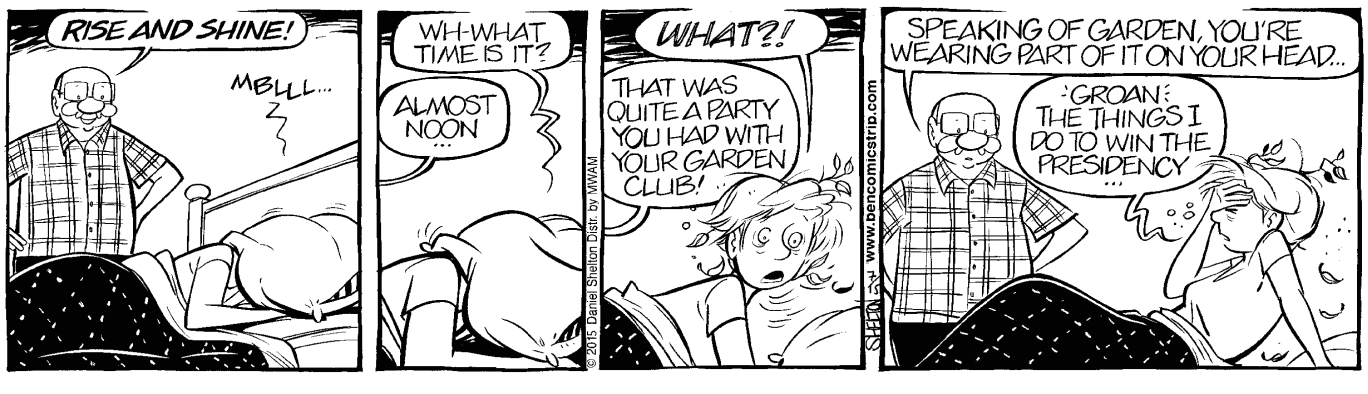

H.P. Lovecraft is now an acknowledged master of horror. There is very little gore – it's all atmosphere. Good Reads is especially partial to the terrifying short story "The Rats In The Walls", the tale of an American who returns to his ancestral lands in the U.K. to discover an evil legacy...

It can be found in the anthology The Call Of Cthulhu And Other Weird Stories, a 2011 collection with an introduction that adds all sorts of fascinating info, and a collection of endnotes to make even the most ardent academic smile happily. You can get Call Of Cthulhu via an interlibrary loan; in fact, run a search for Lovecraft in all Townships libraries (through our website), and you'll find a collection of novels and stories inspired by Lovecraft's mythos, in English and in French. (You can also find much of Lovecraft's oeuvre online, at www.hplovecraft.com, and audio recordings via www.openculture.com. And here's a warning: the good guys are invariably white; the bad guys are invariably not.)

To ease the younger set into a Lovecraftian state of mind, the Lennoxville Library has Professor Gargoyle, the first volume in a series (by Charles Gilman, 2012, filed at C-228) set in Lovecraft Middle School. Twelve-year-old Robert Arthur has transferred to a new school, and it is... filled with rats. And has an attic whose entrance Robert can only find every so often. There's a girl living up there. Maybe she's a girl. As for his teachers, they might not all be human either....

East meets West in 4-H exchange

By Claudia Villemaie
RICHMOND

They have travelled from the western plains, south-eastern Saskatchewan actually, ten young people on a 4-H Club exchange that has introduced each and everyone to new facets of food production they wouldn't normally see in their own corner of the world.

Leaving behind saddle horses, Black Angus cattle and thousands of acres of cropland where wheat, soya and canola stretch as far as the eye can see.

These are dedicated 4-Hers, from different local clubs, each one filling out the application that would send them towards the east to visit and learn about such things as dairy operations. In some cases, they would be introduced to state of the art robotic milking systems, watch older systems where milking machines and pipelines gave them a bird's eye view of the daily milking chores.

Each visitor comes from a specific club where only one category of 4H activity is featured. As a result, each person came to visit a club where several categories of agriculture related activities are studied and practised. The Richmond club, with over sixty members has a varied program that focuses on a wide variety of subjects including dairy and beef animals, horses, goats, sheep, chickens and under the umbrella of Life Skills, members interested in this aspect of country living can choose photography, scrapbooking, gardening, public speaking and cooking.

"We have had just a great time," they echoed. But the fun's not over by a long shot as we're here for the Provincial Rally this weekend," said Chase, a young farmer on his parents ranch where Black Angus and cash crops are the norm. "No, the drought hasn't affected us too much," he answers the anxious question about the on-going drought and forest fires in the west. "But, with prices high we sell our young stock a little earlier," he admits, adding the high price of beef currently is a major motive.

The Record visited the Enright-Keenan farm where five visitors from the west were helping the Keenans get ready for the Rally. There were calves to wash, dry and begin the tricky task of clipping and trimming. The 4Hers visiting were rounding up Life Skills competition entries with folders of photos, public speeches and scrapbooks getting the final touch and 'once-over'.

Next week, they'll pack up and prepare to welcome the ten-person contingent from the Richmond club due to arrive in Sask. in two weeks.

"We've had five visitors staying here and along with our four, time flies especially as we prepare for the Rally. However, they are great kids and have been a pleasure to have them join our family,' Maria Enright-Keenan said. "Our kids have very few friends here at school who come from a farming background, so with these young people experienced in various types of farming, they were most welcome and fit in to our dairy operation very well.

CLAUDIA VILLEMAIRE

Young 4-Hers from Western Canada have been visiting their Richmond counterparts to learn about how we do things around here. Front row - Hannah, Sydney, Jessica, Victoria, Cheyenne, Brogan.
Rear row - Devin and Chase.

But time was running short. There were the show-whites to wash, calves to wash and lead about for a last minute training session and plans for the Richmond Club's decorations in their section finally put into action at the Richmond Fairgrounds arena.

"It's been busy with special trips and activities almost every day - and we'll probably admit a good night's sleep will be welcome. But we wouldn't' want it any other way," Tim Keenan admitted as a flurry of young people rushed by trailed by a spray of water that somehow wasn't accurately directed at the calf supposedly getting a bath.

New Townshippers speak to the value of community

Gordon Lambie

On Tuesday of this week, the Townshippers' Association and the office of Canada's Commissioner of Official Languages held a forum looking at the issue of immigration in the Eastern Townships. To keep the conversation grounded in real experiences, a selection of people who have established themselves in the region after moving here were invited to share their perspectives. Through these stories, presenters were able to show not just the broad range of challenges involved in settling in a new community, but also the value for both individuals and the community as a whole to providing strong support in the immigrant's native language.

"After I left Bishop's to continue in my education at Queens, I decided to try my hand at finding a job here in Sherbrooke where my husband-to-be had already started working," recalled Claire Holt, who originally moved to the area from Nova Scotia to go to school. "That was four years ago this month."

Holt now works directly with new immigrants to the area as a project manager with Actions Interculturelles de Developpement et d'Education (AIDE) in Sherbrooke. She credits the job as one of the two main factors in her decision to remain in the region.

"I was hired, despite my big Anglophone's accent, by an organization that is mainly Francophone," Holt said. "At this organization it became clear that my value was not tied to my mastery of the language; despite the mistakes I sometimes made in French, I was recognized as being able to do good work."

Now working on a pan-Canadian research project for AIDE, the project manager said that her growing bilingualism and openness to learning about and becoming a part of Quebec culture have become vital workplace assets.

"My bilingualism is very useful to my employer because I am able to work across provincial borders and I know the lingo of our projects in French and in English," Holt said. "I believe the more of us that can be bilingual, the better off we can all be; there is immeasurable value to be found in diversity. We can learn a lot about each other by talking to someone in their own terms, in their own language."

The second major support the Nova Scotia native said she has relied on is the warm welcome she has felt from the Townships' English community.

"Honestly, after working in French all day I'm tired and I'm ready to speak English at home and in my extracurricular activities," Holt shared, explaining that over the last few years she has become very closely involved with a number of local community organizations. "I find that the English speaking population in this region is extremely inspiring,"

Fabien Will, who is now the Executive Director of the Eastern Townships Research Centre (ETRC) moved to the Townships from Germany in 2012 after meeting and falling in love with the Quebecois woman at a conference. Though arguing that marrying and living with a native Quebecer made his transition a lot smoother than that of many immigrants, Will said that he nonetheless experienced some speed bumps that a better integration service might have helped with.

"Very often it's the small things which are truly discouraging for immigrants," Will said. "I'm not only talking about filling out forms for a driver's license in a language they don't understand; every society has its own codes, its unwritten rules for how things are done.

Sowing the seeds for succession

By Matthew McCully

After retirement, there are lots of things to look forward to. Travel, sleeping in, spare time to work on hobbies and passions. Some people are lucky enough to get a plaque, a gold watch or even a big bash when they sign out of the daily grind.

But how does a farmer retire?

Can a farmer even retire? Who takes on the workload, the responsibilities, and in some cases, the debt?

In most cases, farms get passed on from generation to generation, but it's not as simple a transition as one might think.

"There's a lot of head scratching," said Jimmy Johnston, 50 per cent owner of Tee Brooke Farm, a dairy operation in Melbourne. His son, Josh, recently became owner of the other 50 per cent.

"It involved a lot of paperwork," Johnson said.

Johnston and a business partner had run Tee Brooke farm together for the past 30 years. When his partner decided to scale down his operation and get out of the business, Johnston's son, who had always intended to pursue farming as a career, bought out Johnston's partner.

"If you sell your quota and it leaves the farm, you can't get it back," Johnston said, supporting his son's decision to take the leap and buy half the farm outright.

"The only way a young farmer can make it is to get help," Johnston said.

His son managed to spread the financing out over a number of years.

The long term goal is for Josh to eventually take over the whole farm.

"I still enjoy working," Johnston said, "I'll go as long as I can," he said, giving his son the time needed to build up enough equity to take over the other half of the operation.

"I don't want to rust out, I want to wear out," he laughed. "Josh is already doing most of the heavy work."

"He'll have to hire help," Johnston said, when his son is 100 per cent owner, unless he goes the route of finding a business partner to run the farm, roughly 400 acres, with 60 milking cows.

The Butler brothers, Carl and Jimmy, have chosen a different route to transition to owning their father Sydney's dairy farm.

Following an evaluation to determine the farm's value, the brothers began converting their cut of profits into shares in the farm. They started at five per cent, and are now at 15 per cent each.

"It's a way to avoid buying the farm outright," Carl said, "without having to pay out of our pockets."

"Not everyone has a good relationship with their father," Carl added, having heard of situations where a father has held onto a farm without allowing the next generation to buy into the business.

Some farmers opt to sell out rather than pass on.

"Every farm is different," Carl said.

Carl has had his eye on a career on the farm since he was 17-years-old. He has a degree in Farm Management Technology from Macdonald College.

Jimmy studied history, was in The Reserves, and did a stint as a delivery driver, before committing to taking over the farm with Carl two years ago.

The remaining siblings chose other paths.

"This is the epitome of a family farm," Carl said, explaining that their uncle, cousins and other family members are involved in keeping the operation a success.

The farm manages 100 milking cows from a total of 230 head on roughly 400 acres of land.

"Joe Blow can't just go out and buy a farm," Jimmy said, explaining that because of the quota imposed, most young dairy farmers are usually part of a family, or marry into it.

"You can't just buy the right to produce milk. There's only so much available," Carl added.

"We like making good hay, we like making good milk, and improving things on the farm that we can do ourselves," Carl and Jimmy agreed. They take the responsibility of land stewardship and the proper treatment of their animals seriously, traits they picked up from their dad that will likely benefit generations to come.

Getting out of the business is the only option for some farmers.

Flip this book's cover and the teacher morphs from human to devil, and back again.

Well, not a devil, really. Lovecraft was devoted to science; his creepy Cthulhu monsters were not evil ancient gods feasting on human souls, but rather, horrific alien beings from another dimension (still feasting, however, on human souls).

Young Robert seems to cope rather well with the scary weirdness of his school. But Lovecraft's adults are not so tough-minded. The terror they encounter invariably drives them mad.

STRANGE & NORRELL

Susanna Clarke's (very, very long) tour de force, Jonathan Strange And Mr. Norrell, is set in a world where magic is being rediscovered. It's the tale of a mage and his apprentice. The book's been filmed, and was televised earlier this month. But you can find the original 2004 novel filed in the Lennoxville Library in the Young Adult section.

HARPER LEE

There's lots of hoo-ha this month with the release of Harper Lee's second book, Go Set A Watchman, the original manuscript she turned in to a publisher decades ago that was rewritten and released in 1960 as To Kill A Mockingbird.

You may have read To Kill A Mockingbird in high school; it might be time to give it another read; looking back at an old favorite will offer a more mature analysis. The Lennoxville Library has a copy; ask at the desk! There's also a version in Audio Books. (As for the new book, please remember it takes libraries a bit of time to order and process an acquisition....)

Via interlibrary loan, you can get Mockingbird in French, and you can also order 2014's The Mockingbird Next Door: Life With Harper Lee, by Marja Mills, a memoir.

BOOK ENDS

In other news: Our children's and adult programs return in the fall. But you can register your children for the TD Summer Reading Club, a six-week program for those aged 5 to 12. The reading club is Tuesdays from 1:30 to 3:30 for the English workshop, and Thursdays from 13h30 to 15h30 for the French. Space is limited.

If you're housebound, we can bring books and audio books to you through Books on Wheels.

We have large-print books too, plus an Easy Reads section. There are sections for Young Adult novels and graphic novels, and children's non-fiction and fiction. Inter-library loans and ebook rentals are now available.

The Lennoxville Library is at 101 Queen Street, corner of College. E-mail bibliolen@gmail.com or phone 819-562-4949. The website is at www.bibliolennoxvillelibrary.ca. Older book reviews and reading suggestions are on our blog at bibliolennlibrary.wordpress.com/.

Newcomers

The ETRC director offered the example of paying for a purchase in cash. In Germany, he explained, the convention is to put one's money down on the counter so that the cashier can count it. This, he found, did not mesh with the Canadian tendency to hand the money over directly.

"It took me over a year to understand the strange looks I was getting when paying the way I had for thirty years," Will said, pointing out that little misunderstandings like this pile up for a newcomer, making one feel unwelcome and out of place quickly. While the example of checkout confusion is fairly harmless, he pointed out that little mix-ups or misunderstandings could be disastrous in trying to make new friends or get a job.

Highlighting Holt's point about the value of not being judged based on language skills, Will said that many people and prospective employers seem to judge competence based on language skills alone. Given that, he added, having a community or an integration service that immigrants can turn to in their native language can become a vital lifeline, and can mean the difference between a newcomer choosing to stay or go.

"I consider myself an integrated immigrant," the ETRC Director said. "It does not yet feel like being at home, but it's becoming like home."

Holt, drawing on her professional experience, shared that while AIDE works with new immigrants it also focuses a lot of energy on helping employers to understand the challenges faced by those trying to settle in the region. She spoke to the particular challenges facing refugees, given that they are assigned to communities rather than choosing their own homes.

"Not all employers here are used to working with newcomers," the AIDE worker said, adding that the lack of support often sends people who might otherwise make positive contributions to the community elsewhere. "While many immigrants find and appreciate the many advantages that come with living in this province, some are afraid that their children will miss out on opportunities later if they don't master English now. Connecting these newcomers to the English community is one strategy to keep them here which has proven to be a challenge in Quebec."

Jean-Sébastien Gignac is the Executive Director of The Voice of English Speaking Quebec (VEQ), an organization he described as the Quebec City counterpart of the Townshippers' Association. He explained that VEQ recognized the value of helping to integrate English speaking newcomers into the community in their own language very early in its mandate and has been working with the city for years to develop a program that will help retention.

"One of the first things that the organization did when it started in 1982 was ask how we can welcome and integrate new people more effectively," Gignac said. "A lot of the people we serve are a spouse to someone who has been recruited by one of our employers. If we're not able to integrate the rest of the family, we're going to lose the entire family."

The VEQ Director suggested that taking the Quebec City model and applying it in the Townships might be an experiment worth trying, but also admitted that the environments are different and each needs its own solution.

COLUMNIST

Despite what television ads tell us, happiness is not found by buying the right car, the latest high tech gadget, a new sofa, or a box of expensive chocolates.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Opening to the Spirit

Today's Word: Happiness

By Revs. Mead Baldwin, W. Lynn Dillabough, Lee Ann Hogle and Carole Martignacco

1) In the Disney movie, Snow White, there were seven dwarves and one of them was named Happy. Happiness is a quality we all long for in life. It is a basic human need, and when we are truly happy the struggles and problems of life are easier to bear. As we all know, however, happiness can be very elusive.

Despite what television ads tell us, happiness is not found by buying the right car, the latest high tech gadget, a new sofa, or a box of expensive chocolates. It cannot be found in a shopping mall on a Friday night as we indulge in shopping therapy. It does come as an extra bonus when we buy a new dress, or get a new hairstyle.

I once thought I could make another person happy by doing just the right thing, or changing myself into a different person, or buying the right expensive present. It took me years to discover that I could never make someone else happy. True happiness can only come from within, from accepting yourself, and being at peace with yourself and other people.

In sacred scripture Paul wrote these words in a letter to the church in Philippi; "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say rejoice. I have learned to be content with whatever I have. I know what it is to have little, and I know what it is to have plenty. I have learned the secret and can do all things through God who strengthens me."

May each of you find the happiness that comes from within.

2) Happiness often feels like something we cannot control. Look for it, and it disappears. Get busy with something else, however, and here it comes to nestle on your lap. Like a cat who will never come when she is called, but will greet you with purrs and kisses when you are thinking about something else, happiness will not be controlled.

We can notice happiness. When we are paying attention, we can even make lists of things that often result in something we can call 'happy': a perfect cup of tea, a talk with a friend, walks in sunshine, trees, the pleasure of a gift given or received, plans working out, ice cream, dancing, prayer, games and swimming and seeing a friend or a sister after a long absence, seeing someone we love feeling happy... the list could go on all day.

But, sometimes, happiness is elusive. When depression takes hold, all of the things listed above just leave us feeling nothing but a dull ache or a deep pain. We wonder why we feel no pleasure in the things we once enjoyed. These are the times to most rely on God. Keep praying, even though you feel alone. Keep making yourself a cup of tea. Put on some music and dance. Happiness, like that sometimes standoffish cat, will return. And you will know, eventually, that you were loved all along.

3) Along with feeling more confident, energetic and optimistic, author and social psychologist Amy Cuddy tells us we can cultivate more happiness by changing our facial expressions and body posture. Smile more and you will feel happier. Laughing and telling of jokes can lighten the most somber of events.

To my mind happiness is not dependent on a set of exterior conditions, like accumulating wealth, finding the perfect mate or achieving academic excellence. I can be happier than I am now by simply smiling more, singing a song or playing my favourite dance music. Why then, I ask myself, do I spend so much time being so very serious? Is there a part of me that would rather complain about my difficulties than invest in activities I know will lighten my mood?

Perhaps, rather than a state of being that you either have or you don't, happiness a more like a muscle that grows with exercise. Let's experiment. Start with the corners of your mouth. Stretch them upward. Display your teeth (except when facing baboons — in which case they may get the wrong idea!) Drop the corners back to repose position. Repeat frequently until that final repose arrives.

Let me know the results. In order for this experiment to work you will have to recognize when you are getting close but have not yet arrived at said final repose. Tricky! Do your best.

4) We speak of happiness as something we can create or claim, something we have or have not in our lives. Someone or something gives or brings us happiness. We've lost it, finally found it, or are seeking it again. Somewhere out there are keys to having more, if only we had the right living conditions, education, partner, job, possessions, etc.

But what if happiness, like love, is more verb than noun? Psychologist Erich Fromm in his classic, To Have Or To Be, wrote of the power of language to shape our reality. His insight: our tendency to objectify, to think and speak in acquisitive or possessive terms, are attempts to secure life, tie it down, make concrete and controllable the spiritual, intangible, unquantifiable. We say we have a body or spirit, but we are human beings, not human havings. Being, he reminds us, is our essence, not ownership.

What if happiness is a butterfly too elusive to capture or contain? Alighting wherever it will, sometimes even on my shoulder. A vapor arising from whatever is present in my life at the moment, impossible to distill. Sometimes, I'm ambushed by a fleeting thought - could this be it, right here, now. Then ahhh - it's gone.

One of my grown daughters recently described how she realized she'd stopped pursuing happiness - or all the things she thought she needed to do in order to have it. One day, she says, she simply recognized she was content, at peace with herself and all that her life had been, was or was not. She felt at home inside just being alive.

If that's not happiness, I'd be willing to settle and give up the chase, put the net down once and for all. How long can you hold a butterfly and keep it alive once you've caught it, anyways?

One word, four voices - now add your own: What does happiness mean to you?

Succession on the farm

Henry Musty owns a 145 acre farm in Cookshire-Eaton, in the family since 1882. He will transition ownership to his grandson, but it will hardly resemble what it was decades ago.

"This is the first year the farm has not had livestock on it in over 100 years," Musty said.

"It bothers me a bit. I miss my cattle."

When he was young, Musty remembered milking between 12-18 cows, selling the separated cream to the Johnville creamery, and feeding the skim to the hogs.

"It was all being used," he said. Years later, the family would fill eight-gallon cans, load them into a trailer and deliver them to a milk stand a mile down the road, headed eventually to the Carnation factory in Sherbrooke.

"We didn't have a tractor, we had horses," he explained.

"A little farm like this can't make a go of it now," Musty said, describing how times have changed.

Maintaining even a small beef herd of 26 head, According to Musty, was not sustainable. He sold out last year.

"You need 15 head just to qualify for the stabilization grant," Musty explained, "and then you need so many kilos of meat per calf. I felt that it was worthless to try and maintain a herd and make ends meet with it," he said.

Musty now grows switchgrass, a relatively new type of crop for the area.

It is an excellent cover crop for strawberries, Musty said, and golf courses use it to cover their greens in the winter. One seeding can last between 12-15 years, with little maintenance, he added.

"It's a shame that small farms are going out," Musty said, adding that his grandson Cordell plans to take over the farm eventually.

MATTHEW MCCULLY

Henry Musty intends to pass his farm on to his grandson, but says it won't be like it used to be.

"He loves farming. Any spare minute he has, he's up here working."

"I don't want to see the farm grow up into weeds and brush," Musty said, explaining his decision to convert his fields into a low maintenance crop. "So many fields around are just vacant," he said.

With the industry geared towards large scale operations, farmers who want to continue to work their land in some way have to make compromises.

"A John Deere tractor costs around $36,000. This farm could never pay for that tractor," he said.

Musty's grandson will have to work full-time, in addition to maintaining the farm.

"He's not going to make a living farming," he said. "Switchgrass will pay the taxes, and maybe make a little profit," Musty added.

"Another problem is that our competitors are doing better. New England is expanding it's maple industry really fast and has turned to woody biomass pellets furnaces in the process."

Take that oil out of my maple syrup!

François Tanguay

There is nothing more traditional, more infused with a sense of pure springtime, than maple syrup. Nothing added, nothing changed, just boil and boil the sap and...voilà! We all want to lick the dense sugar off the wood pallet after having seperated it from the snow, we all like our pancakes with maple syrup and we all identify strongly with this natural sugar.

Only problem is, the industry has changed. Yes it is an industry, and in more ways than one. There are now over 42 000 000 tapped maples each year and the industry is regulated to keep the prices stable and to protect the consumers against bad products. All that is fine. Only problem is, with the size of the exploitations, some have over 75 000 taps, the need to be more productive and cost effective has constantly increased. No more are the boilers burning the clean-up from the maple stands. At an average of as much as 27 000 taps in some regions, there is no time, no physical possibility to boil the old way. High tech centrifuge based methods are seperating some of the water from the sap, thus densifying the liquid before going to the boiling part. Nothing new there, this has been done for a number of years. But what has changed over time is that the fire in the boilers is from fossil fuels, yes, maple syrup now comes from...oil. Most of the modern furnaces are all oil, with a few exceptions where electric heaters are used, no wood. The smaller operations still rely on wood, but their numbers are dwindling: The oil for maple option will have to change for a number of reasons. The economics : at .60/ liter of oil per liter of syrup we have a problem. At roughly 90 cents per liter, in the lower St-Lawrence and Gaspé region, for example, with 9 000 000 taps, produxcers have to dish out over $4 million a year just to buy fuel. Multiply this by 5 to cover the province and you have an idea of the bill for the entire industry.

Another problem is that our competitors are doing better. New England is expanding it's maple industry really fast and has turned to woody biomass pellets furnaces in the process. With savings of up to 60% in fuel costs, it's a wonder we remain competitive! Quebec's share of world production has fallen from 80% to 70% in recent years and the trend shows no sign of slowing down. Also, and this could be a major bump in the road, our export markets could potentially suffer from the use of fossil fuels in the chain of production. A carbon free production could very well be a necessity very soon. More and more importers are demanding a declaration of chain of custody for their imports. What this means is that, for example, illegally cut wood from, let's say Southeast Asia, shipped without the proper paper work confirming harvest and woodlot management that respect established environmental standards, cannot enter certain markets. This is already the case for Europe and many Western importers.

The same kind of logic could very well apply in the near future to maple syrup. A high carbon emissions content because of oil based boilers, could put our exports in jeopardy. A rising use of woody biomass boilers could serve as an argument to give a black eye to our exports. Furthermore, we are getting closer everyday to a global agreement on a price on carbon, this would have a direct effect on the balance sheet of those who rely on fossil fuels. In the long run, oil will have to be taken out of the mape syrup industry, it's that simple.

There are at least three ministers who should be aware of this. David Heurtel at Environment, because greenhouse gas emissions must be curtailed, Pierre Arcand at Natural Resources, substitution of oil by woody biomass via transition away from fossil fuels will reduce our oil dependency and Laurent Lessard at Forestry, forests management, and better use of woody residues fall under his responsability. Turning the maple syrup industry around is not an option, it's a necessity. Let's hope the decision taking process to turn the industry around will be short, the wake-up call could be brutal. It would be too late to say : we never saw this coming.

Kevin Richard argued that attributing heinous crimes to mental illness obscures the reality of evil. In particular, he suggests that using mental illness as an excuse absolves the individual of personal responsibility whereas recognizing evil does not.

I agree that knee-jerk reactions that such acts must be the consequence of a crazy mind are not helpful. Indeed, they are circular: the only evidence of craziness is the act itself. However, despite the media spotlight on some cases, the mental illness argument is rarely invoked for felonies (less than 1 per cent in one study) and the verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity" is also unlikely (about 28 per cent of the 1 per cent of cases in that study). Nevertheless, the fact remains that, because of a psychological/brain disorder, some people ((albeit a few) really did not understand what they were doing and were not in control of their behaviour.

So what about other cases and what about the heinous acts committed in war? One psychologist, Philip Zimbardo, in his book "The Lucifer Effect", suggests that the line between good and evil is less fixed than we might think. Indeed, circumstances can play a role. When atrocities occur, people often have a story in their head to justify the action, and they may depersonalize themselves by disguising their identity. In addition, they also depersonalize and compartmentalize the victim, seeing them as less than human. Notably, these people often display strong normal emotional reactions within their own families, showing how permeable the line is between good and evil.

Although Zimbardo's account brings in other factors to account for acts that are evil, he does not conclude that they absolve the person of responsibility and, like Mr. Richard, he offers suggestions for resisting the influences It is interesting that modern psychology ends up in a place that is similar to the old hymn ("Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin...")..

Notably, and perhaps ironically in light of Mr. Richard's argument, when a person is found "not guilty by reason of insanity" (to use legal terminology), they are sent for "treatment". The purpose of this treatment is to restore the person to "normality", which includes building up and strengthening healthy self-control.

An open question is whether these considerations help us deal with atrocities committed in the name of beliefs, and where full responsibility is actually taken for heinous acts that are committed without remorse.

Don Quixote critiques the world at Theatre Lac Brome

By Olivia Ranger-Enns

Miguel de Cervantes' Don Quixote can be interpreted in a variety of ways. But it will be interesting to see what Theatre Lac Brome will do with it.

Since opening night, the comedic theatrical adaption of the novel has been applauded globally for Cervantes' subtle critique of the world. As anyone acquainted with the work itself knows, the play centers on Don Quixote, a middle-aged gentleman from Spain who is obsessed with chivalrous ideals which he gleaned from books. Along with his faithful laborer Sancho Panza, Don Quixote sets off to conquer the world and fight evil. But nothing is as easy or simple as it might initially appear. Gradually losing his sanity, Don Quixote gives up food, shelter, and comfort for the sake of a peasant woman he has come to perceive as a princess, Dulcinea del Toboso. Poor Don Quixote's quest to correct the wicked and justify the poor becomes more of a muddled, error-prone expedition as he mistakenly steals from people and abandons a little boy to the clutches of a scheming farmer. In short, Don Quixote creates more chaos than provides solutions. Meanwhile, Sancho bears most of the brunt of the punishments meant for his master.

OLIVIA RANGER-ENNS

You could say that the play is one that deals with major issues in a rather lighthearted manner, but this production is slightly different in that it adds a burlesque element to the project. Actors Michael Hughes and Davide Chiazzese might agree with this statement. They have come to know the play very well. After all, they have been rehearsing for three weeks and took a quick break to share their insights about the play and how rehearsals are going.

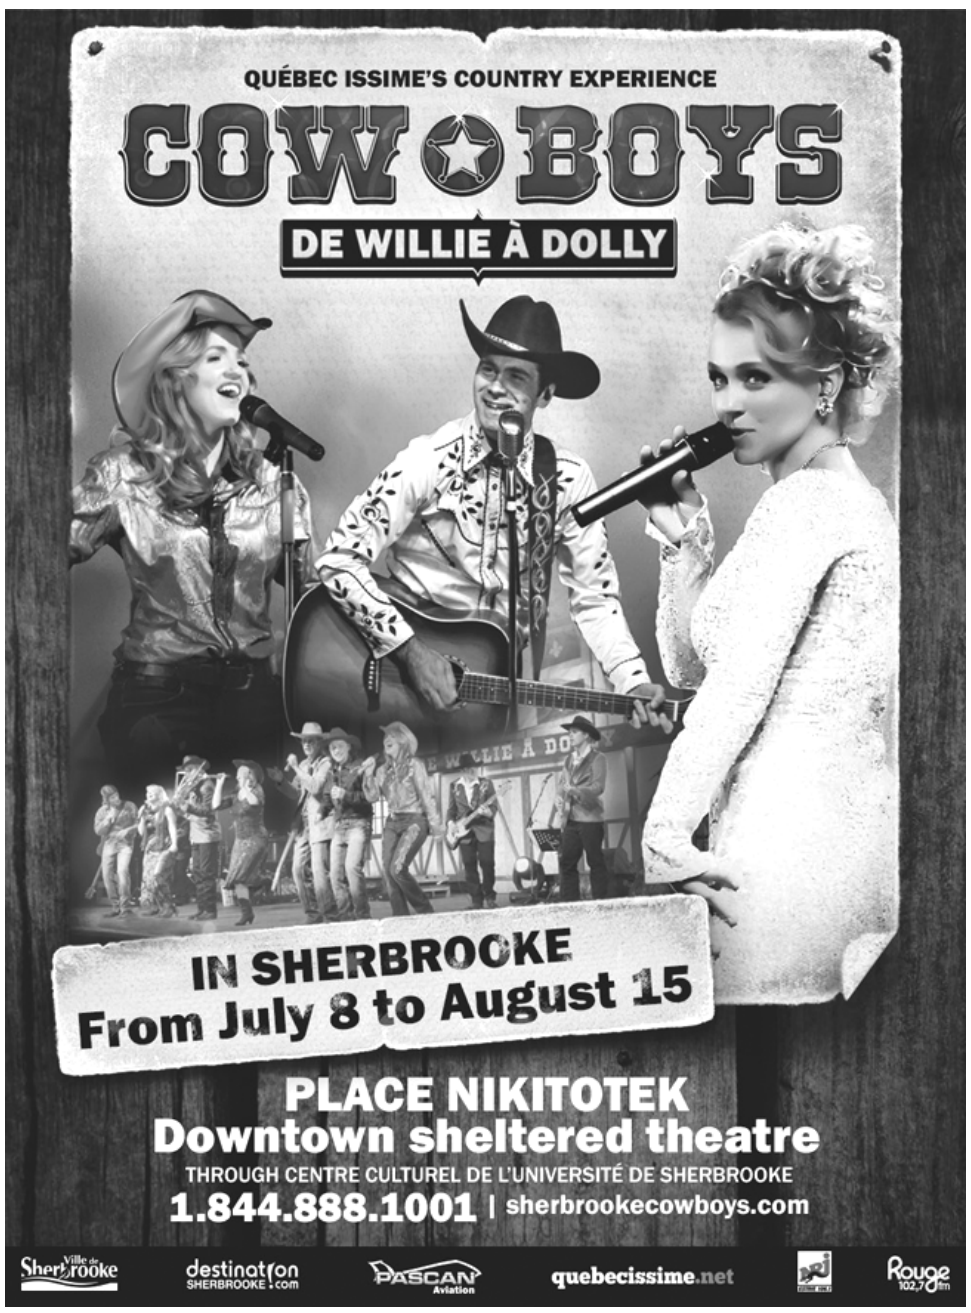

Hughes, who plays Don Quixote, fits the part perfectly with his reddish-brown beard and a lanky frame. As for Chiazzese, the Sicilian can definitely impersonate Sancho with his black hair, conservative beard, and broad shoulders. The actors joke that they have grown to know each other very well, on stage as well as off.

"We're from Montreal, so rehearsing in Knowlton meant that we had to find a place to stay. That means spending every hour of every day together," said Hughes, who currently shares a flat with Chiazzese. "We even cook together," put in Chiazzese with a light laugh. When Don Quixote comes to a close, their professional relationship won't come to an end: the two are scheduled to play at Montreal's Centaur's theatre Province in the fall. "Once we finish here, we pack up and immediately start rehearsing for that production," said Chiazzese, whose family has always encouraged their family members to keep Sicilian culture (food, theatre, music) alive and strong.

The actors have already worked together as clowns in last year's production of the 39 Steps. It was also at this point that they also got to work with Mary Harvey, who plays Dulcinea. According to the theatre director Nicholas Pynes, this particular trio was instrumental in bringing the play to life. "I probably would not have agreed to put on the play without them," he said.

Both Hughes and Chiazzese agreed on the importance of slapstick comedy in the play. "We jump around a lot," said Hughes with a laugh. "There is just the right amount of tension between me

60 years ago, Disney unveiled an elaborate theme park called Disneyland

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Editor's note: On July 16, 1955, Associated Press reporter Bob Thomas wrote a story about the imminent opening of an elaborate theme park in California that was conceived by none other than Walt Disney. The park opened the next day.

Like the animator and entrepreneur, Disneyland was ambitious and imaginative — a real-life play land for children and adults alike. Thomas, a longtime Hollywood reporter for AP and author of a Walt Disney biography who died in 2014, wrote that Disneyland cost $17 million to build, and that no detail was spared. He also noted that a day trip was doable but "you'd no doubt end up with a headache."

Sixty years later, the AP is making this report and photos available.

Knight, left, Walt Disney, right, and Virginia Knight, wife of the governor, back seat, take a ride in an antique-styled automobile at Disneyland near Anaheim, Calif., at the premiere opening. Twenty-two thousand guests, including many notables, were invited.

Walt Disney's 20-year dream comes true tomorrow when the gates of the $17-million Disneyland opens for the first time.

This is the modern wonderland that a mouse built. Well, Mickey Mouse started it anyway. The cartoon star was the first success in the fabulous career of Walt Disney.

Then came the Three Little Pigs, Donald Duck, Pluto, Snow White, The Seven Dwarfs, Dumbo, Pinocchio and a host of other characters who became famous around the world. Somewhere along the line the cartoon wizard got the notion for an amusement park. Not the usual Coney Island affair, but an imaginative playground that would delight young and old.

Disney made his move a year ago. He succumbed to the lure of television and arranged to tie in the TV show (he hosted) with a Disneyland park. A survey showed that this citadel of sunshine and orange groves, accessible to 10 million population, was the best location.

A year later the brightly painted Disneyland is open for business.

Twenty-two thousand invited guests are expected to pour into the park tomorrow for the opening festivities. They include mayors and officials, education leaders and businessmen from southern California, press from throughout the nation, move stars and their children.

The opening ceremonies will be telecast by ABC from 5:30 to 7 p.m. (CST), with Disney, Art Linkletter, Irene Dunne, Fess Parker, Davy Crockett and others.

Some 2,500 men were labouring to finish Disneyland for the premiere.

Despite the last-minute rush, the entire park has been planned down to the smallest detail. And Disney is a great stickler for detail. The interior of the railroad and Sancho." The play promises to be a spoof of Don Quixote, but a spoof of other things as well: theatre, television, and musicals. In some respects, the production is an apt but playful critique of the world.

Don Quixote

Hughes and Chiazzese agreed that the play is a timeless classic, no matter if you had read or just heard about it. Pynes sided with this view. "I think a lot of people might think: now what is Don Quixote about again? Some will have a vague recollection of the work in question, which is why I think a lot of people will be drawn to come and check the play out," he said. He occasionally has to battle forces like snowstorms and Netflix to get people out of their homes. "We're bringing back a classic."

Don Quixote will be playing at Theatre Lac Brome until August. A number of other shows like Her Point of View featuring Natalie Choquette and Always Patsy Cline will be featured. For more information, call 450-242-2270.

Disneyland

station, for example, had to be designed with the ornate woodwork of the 1900 period. The 72 horses on the $102,000 King Arthur's carousel were rebuilt so they would appear to be leaping instead of merely galloping.

The site of the park was a 160-acre orange ranch just off the Santa Ana Freeway. The plan was drawn up with an old-fashioned city park at the hub and the realms of Fantasyland, Frontierland, Adventureland and Tomorrowland fanning out in four directions. The Disney people estimate a patron need travel no more than 1.4 miles to see the whole place.

Disneyland had cost its backer $17 million. What will it cost the doting father who brings his family here?

Well, Pa, you'll have to shell out $1 apiece for you, your wife and any other grownups you bring along. The kids get in for 50 cents.

You probably could have a good time without spending more. There are many arresting sights to see, and many industrial firms have fascinating exhibits for free.

But the chances are the kids will hound you into buying them tickets on the 35 out-of-this-world rides. If you are a glutton and try everything, it could cost you $8.70 for yourself and $5.15 for each tot.

You can take a trip around the whole park on a miniature railway that costs 50 cents for yourself and 25 cents for youngsters. For the same prices you can travel down an American riverway on the paddle-wheeler Mark Twain, take an excursion boat through land and be scared by the life-like animals or be rocketed to the moon.

Most of the other attractions run around 35-25 cents for adults and 25-10 cents for children.

How long will the visit take you?

You could probably do it in one day, but you'd no doubt end up with a headache. The Disney people expect patrons will spend an average of four and a half hours in the park. They anticipate 60,000 a day, but will try to hold the total at one time to 46,000.

A Memorable Piper Classic

By Robert Fisk
Special to the Record

The 7th Annual Piper Classic Golf Tournament raised $14 657.93 this past weekend at the Milby Golf Club. It is the most money the tournament has ever raised in its short history as it keeps getting stronger and more supportive ever year. The tournament, which honors the late John Haller helps to raise money for the Alexander Galt High School Athletics program.

The 104 golfers were greeted with a small gift as they registered and ate lunch. The Milby staff under professional Guy Faucher did an outstanding job at preparing the long day event as the course was in immaculate shape to go along with the great weather.

After playing 18 holes, the golfers gathered in the clubhouse for cocktails and supper. Retired teacher and coach Morgan Quinn was named the honorary chairman for the event to commemorate his dedication and commitment to the Galt Athletics program for 25 years. Quinn was and is also a good friend of the Haller family who were in attendance as always.

Fifty-six door prizes were donated by local businesses, graduates and friends, which were handed out to the participants. More prizes were given out for closet to the pins and longest drives. The Golden Lion even donated a keg of beer for closet participant, which was won by Scott Muth. Solutions ID from Waterville (Ian Warcup) gave participants a crack at a hole in one for $10 000 cash that nobody won, but they all had fun trying. They then donated $360 to the tournament. The Organix Foundation also donated $1000 to the event. Mike Bresee donated $2900 on behalf of the Eastern Townships Friendship Cup which is made up of several former Piper Athletes that get together every year for some golf fun and decided to donate the generous amount to the Athletics program. BRP Evinrude under Krista Sparkes and Ian Macauliffe donated a boat motor for a hole in one that nobody won. They graciously donated it back to the tournament in which it was auctioned off for $3900.

The tournament also ran a raffle with 11 great prizes:

50" TV (Jared Haller), Wine Fridge (Mike Bresee), Sports Concentration certificate, 20 Phoenix de Sherbrooke flex tickets, 2 Montreal Canadiens tickets (Jimmy Moore), 4 Ottawa Senator tickets (Alex Ross), one VIP Phoenix de Sherbrooke lodge (Danny Bennett), Dominos Pizza Party Pack, PK Subban jersey (Adam Spirk), Joe Ford painting and a New England Patriots helmet (Riddell).

The team of Kevin Bennett, Tim Call, Dave Beaulieu and Steve Dunn won the event with a score of -12, but the real winners on this day were the student athletes at Alexander Galt. Next years tournament will be held on June 25, 2016 at the Milby

Thank you!

The organizers of the Piper Classic would like to say a special thank you to all of the businesses listed below who sponsored the event as well as the the help provided by Jimmy Donnachie, Dave Beaulieu, Nancy Dubeau, and Steve Dunn in organizing this wonderful event. Lacrosse league reaches final week

By John Edwards
SHERBROOKE

The final weekend of the Quebec Senior Lacrosse Circuit is upon us, as the final series between the Windsor Aigles and the Laval Milice begins this evening at the J.A. Lemay centre, a rematch of last years final series.

The Aigles are the defending league champions and cruised to an 11-1 record this regular season. Interestingly their only loss on the year was to the Milice, an 11-9 defeat at Laval on May 31.

This seaons Windsor scored 176 goals while only giving 63 thanks to strong performances by goalies Alexandre Massé (8-0) and Pascal Nolet (3-1).

Offensively Windsor is difficult to contain as their deep roster is full of multiple scoring threats. Alternate captain Francis Côté led the league in goals and points with 34 and 73 respectively, but six other Aigles were within the top 12 in points Ghyslain Richard (63), William Beauvais (53), David Massé (39), Karl Parent (38), Alex Veilleux Kendall (29), and Vincent Dubreuil (29).

Laval, who went 7-5 this season, scoring 147 goals and giving up 90, are looking to return the favour after falling the Aigles in two straight games in last year's championship series. It is still not known if captain Alex Hamel will return for this series after he missed the semi-final the game against East Angus last Saturday. Hamel was the Milice's leading scorer with 29 goals and 45 points.

If he is not on the floor for the Milice other key forwards will have to take up the charge like they did against the Wolfs. Jean Guy Thouin was fifth in points overall with 43, and 20 goals during the regular season, and Jason Lachapelle, who had 17 goals and 36 points. Marc André Pilon, Gabriel Desrosiers, Ian Hébert, Antoine Champagne have all also scored over 10 goals this season.

Laval goaltending is also likely to be solid as Hugues Tremblay (4-1) has done very well in relief of Nicolas Leboeuf (3-4) this season.

Game 1 will be at Windsor's JA Lemay centre at 8 p.m. Game 2 will move to Laval for a 7 p.m. start at Cartier Arena. Game 3, if necessary, will return to Windsor on Sunday at 4 p.m.

— Junior finals get underway —

The best-of-five series to decide the Quebec Junior Lacrosse League title also begins this weekend as the first two games between the Extreme (6-5) and the Longueuil Patriotes.(9-3) will be also be tonight and tomorrow.

The Patriotes finished the regular season comfortably in first place. However, two of the Patriotes' three losses this season came at the hands of the Extreme on May 17 and June 14.

Laval will host the Sherbrooke squad at Rosanne Laflamme Arena in St-Hubert tonight at 8 p.m. The Extreme will return home to the Julien Ducharme centre for Game 2, Saturday at 8 p.m. Game 3 is set for next Friday, with games 4 and 5 to follow on July 25 and 26, if necessary.

Abenakis take doubleheader

By Mike Hickey
Special to the Record
SHERBROOKE

Last year the Sherbrooke Abenakis men's rugby teams missed a promotion from Division 2 to Division 1 by a mere two points and this year the club has set a goal of finishing first on both the A and B sides and moving up to Division 1 for the 2016 season.

"We thought last year that we were going to move up (to Division 1) but we didn't" coach Charles Goode said in an interview yesterday. "So our goal this year has been to finish first and get promoted."

They certainly appear on track to reaching their goal, they are coming off a strong weekend performance as they travelled to Ottawa and swept the Ottawa Beavers in a battle of the league's top two teams. The Division 2 game featured a pair of undefeated teams but Sherbrooke quickly took control of the game en route to a convincing 34-0 shutout. In the A contest Ottawa jumped out to a 13-0 but Sherbrooke rallied for a 36-20 win.

"In the B game we had no possessions in the first half but still manage a 14-0 lead at halftime," Goode said. "Ottawa was a huge, older team but in the second half they couldn't handle our subs. We dressed 22 guys and any one of them could have been starters."

It was a similar story in the A game as the Abenakis overcame an early deficit to dominate in the second half as their balance and depth proved to be the difference.

"The boys started to come back after we fell behind 13-0," Goode said. "We shut them down in the final 20 minutes. The weekend showed we are the fittest team in the league."

The women's team won their second league match of the season with a 17-7 victory over the Montreal Rugby Club while the Division 3 Abenakis dropped a 35-7 decision to the Brockville Privateers.

"The A and B teams are now 5-0 with five games to play," Goode said. "We play home this weekend against the XV de Montreal, a team that we haven't played this year. They are made up of French nationals who have had a weird season. They recently beat Westmount 48-13 so we have to be prepared for some tough games."

In Memoriams

HENDERSON, Alfred (Manny) - In loving memory of a very special husband, father, grandfather and great-grandfather who left us July 19, 2002.
Those we love don't go away,
They walk beside us every day,
Unseen, unheard, but always near,
Still loved, still missed and very dear
For death leaves a heartache
No one can heal,
But love leaves a memory
No one can steal.
Always remembered and sadly missed by

It is not unusual to remember something disturbing and periodically think about it

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 2015

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My wife and I have been married for 40 years. When we were first dating, my future wife unexpectedly set me aside to explore the possibilities of seeing another man. It was a difficult time for me. The other man was a mutual acquaintance, for whom I didn't much care, which intensified my hurt. Within two months, they stopped seeing one another, and in due time, we started dating again, fell in love and married. Sounds good — and it has been. But I have one mental demon with which I struggle.

About three decades ago, when casually chatting about our previous romantic interests, my wife revealed that when seeing the aforementioned man, they had sex. Since being made aware of it, I can't let it go. All of those painful memories were revived by her disclosure.

My wife has been a wonderful friend, partner and parent and does not deserve my periodic fixation on something that was a tiny moment in time. Why can't I, as she requests, just forget about it? How can I reconcile myself to it and downsize its larger-than-life status in my consciousness? — Living in the '70s

Dear Living: It is not unusual to remember something disturbing and periodically think about it. But if you are doing this more than a few times a year and becoming fixated on it to the point where it is affecting other areas of your life, you might need professional help to put it aside. You've been holding in your resentment, jealousy and fears for 40 years and they are still eating at you. Please talk to a counselor so you can air your feelings to someone other than your wife and get help managing them. Your doctor can refer you.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Had Enough," the 68-year-old woman who was tired of her husband's demand for sex. At about that same age, my wife told me that she really didn't want to have sex. In a loving way, she said that she physically couldn't put up with it anymore.

I was hurt at the time and somewhat angry. But when I thought about it, I was also somewhat relieved, because in the few months prior, I felt my heart racing and was exhausted when making love.

I obeyed my wife's wishes and we stopped having sex. Then, several months later, I almost suffered a heart attack. I needed extensive heart surgery and it took me months to recover. To this day, I am grateful that my wife was the first to call it off. I might have been dead otherwise. — Ever So Thankful

Dear Thankful: While it is true that exertion can strain the heart, chances are that your heart troubles would have happened whether or not you gave up sex. And a lot of men would not be willing to accept that solution, regardless of health. But if abstinence works for you and your wife, that's fine with us. You have found a way to make the lack of sex work in your favor.

To all of our Muslim readers: Happy Eid.

Graduation

Karolyn Kirby

Gertie Raymond of the Connaught Home (North Hatley) is pleased to announce her granddaughter, Karolyn Kirby, graduated from the University of Saskatchewan. She received her Masters Degree in Educational Adminstration on June 3, 2015.

Karolyn is presently working as a high school teacher specializing in Canadian History at Lashburn High School. Karolyn manages her time well between coaching basketball and badminton, teaching, and volunteering for 4-H. She has also been recently elected as the Mayor for Paynton, Saskatchewan.

Karolyn is the daughter of Bruce & Sharron Kirby of Canton de Hatley, sister of Karyn Kirby Dolloff of Ayer's Cliff and wife of Jonathan Rhicard of Paynton, Sask.

I miss her smile and stories from when she worked at Alexander Galt. However, I wish her all the best and am very proud of all her hard work.

Your Birthday

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 2015

If you focus on getting ahead at work this year, good things will happen. A professional change will prove to be stimulating and rewarding. It's your life; don't let anyone talk you out of doing what will bring you the greatest joy. You can accomplish your goals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Take a close look at your current partnerships. Don't place yourself in a vulnerable position by ignoring signs showing that someone is taking advantage of you. Back away from users.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — An investment opportunity will be offered, but make sure you read the fine print and make adjustments before signing on. Be aware of your financial limitations before moving forward.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Take a break from your usual routine. Check into ways of making your home more comfortable and easy to maintain. This is a good time to get rid of unused or unwanted items.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Love and romance look promising. If you are single, you will have the chance to meet someone special. If you are attached, prove to your partner how much you care.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Be prudent. Don't fall for a fancy sales pitch or sob story. You work hard for your money. Avoid anyone trying to take what you have. Protect your money and possessions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Follow your heart. New beginnings and adventures are just around the corner, so be bold and forge ahead. It's up to you to make things happen.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Do your research carefully before becoming involved in a scheme that could jeopardize your reputation or financial standing. If you gamble, you will likely suffer a loss.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Make the most of any opportunity you get to meet new people. You never know where or when you will discover an inspirational someone.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Your destiny lies in your hands. Don't wait for someone else to make the first move or offer you an opportunity. You are best off being proactive if you intend to advance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — If you take pride in the way you look and the services you can provide, you will become an important mentor or adviser to someone who looks up to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Behaving in a stubborn, selfish or erratic manner will upset those around you. Think twice before you take action or speak in order to avoid conflicts at home or work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Whatever you do to help others, your efforts will draw favorable attention. Put in long hours and show your dedication in order to reap unexpected benefits.

Suit preference when following suit

By Phillip Alder

Natalie Maines, who was the lead singer for the Dixie Chicks, said, "Music is a personal preference. Everyone's free to connect and like whatever they want."

At the bridge table, personal preference is relevant, especially when deciding upon bidding agreements with your partner. So far this week, we have been looking at suit-preference signals when partner is receiving a ruff. However, it is possible to use suit-preference signals in nonruffing situations.

Agreed, these signals are not easy to employ, because you and your partner must watch the cards like eagles. But if you do, your defense will improve in great swoops. The opponents will be your prey, not the other way round!

South is in four hearts. West leads the diamond king. How should declarer plan the play, and how, without guesswork, should the defense overcome South's best line?

Declarer has four losers: three spades and one diamond. But he has 10 potential winners: five hearts, two diamonds and three clubs. He should win the first trick with his diamond ace and immediately return his second diamond. West wins with his queen, but what does he do next? If he finds a spade shift, the contract dies; but if he leads a club, South gets home. How does West know?

At trick one, East follows suit with his diamond four, denying a doubleton (with which he would play high-low). On the next round, he should play the seven, his higher-remaining diamond, to signal interest in spades, the higher-ranking of the other two side suits. If West is watching, he will know, not have to guess, what to do.
