Black Hand Gang terrorized residents of Walmer Rd.

Terror is nothing less than justice, prompt, secure and inflexible.
Himmler

Now that Lieutenant-Governor Jean-Louis Roux has resigned and been forgiven for an ideological position he tried to fob off as youthful hijinks, it's time to confess that I, too, belonged to a secret terrorist organization at the same time.

There were about a dozen of us, none older than eight and our aim was to strike such panic into the residents of Walmer Road that old ladies and infants would be trampled in the rush to get away. We called ourselves the Black Hand Gang.

Our mark, appearing suddenly and mysteriously on the doorposts of our victims, was the print of a small black hand calculated to produce the same effect as Blind Pew's black spot had on Billy Bones at the beginning of Treasure Island.

That it had no such effect only made our gang turn to more dreadful actions.

It was the Black Hand that posted the live snake and seven white mice through the letterbox of the Rag-and-Bone Man.

When the lamp-lighter found both tires of his bicycle deflated, that, too, was the work of the mysterious Black Hand Gang.

It was the Black Hand Gang that raided Old Beesknees orchard and stole all his apples and pears.

When somebody in the canteen up-ended the salt cellar only to have the cap and its entire contents fall into the plate, the Black Hand Gang had been there.

It was the Black Hand that poured treacle into the cap of old Captain Snow as he dozed in the sun with his cap on his knew. The stink bomb that went off in the air raid shelter might have been traced to my chemistry set and the threatening message chalked on the library steps didn't really come from a German spy in the area but from the dreaded Black Hand Gang.

Our most dreadful deed, however, was slipping itching powder into Old Mrs. Hitler's knickers as they hung on her clothesline with the rest of her washing.

Every boy knew that the best itching powder came from the fibrous inside of rose hips. A pinch dropped down the neck of a girl's blouse produced the most delightful squealing and squirming. The Black Hand Gang gathered an entire matchbox full, laid careful plans and sprinkled just a little into each of Old Mrs. Hitler's voluminous bloomers.

She was generally known as the rottenest, meanest teacher in the history of St. Alphege's but she had never seen such an attentive class as greeted her the next morning.

We couldn't take our eyes off her and everything went well until she sat down and crossed her legs. Then Piggio couldn't stifle his laughter any longer. That started us all off and whenever she shifted position in her chair after that, the class was in an uproar.

Several of us got whacked across the hands with her ruler for refusing to divulge the cause of our giggles and the whole class had to stay one hour after school. But we all understood that every victory requires some sacrifice.

Holiday celebration at Bandeen

55 artists featured in Cowansville exhibit

By Tanya Tkach

Record Correspondent

COWANSVILLE — Plaisir d'Art is an exhibit featuring 55 regional artists.

Sponsored by the Cultural Committee of Massey Vanier and Arts Sutton, it is taking place at 126 Main Street in Cowansville through Dec. 15.

The committee, founded two years ago by the District of Bedford and the Commission Scolaire d'Avignon, are promoting artists of the area through a series of shows until June '97.

Committee members include director Paul Doucet, administrator Johanne Goyer, promoter Pierre Bessette, who is also an artist, and exhibit manager Michel Chevalier.

Lucie Giard began organizing the exhibit one month ago with a budget of $100.

"With the help of family, friends and the Caisse Populaire in Cowansville who willingly donated this space, it all came together," said Giard.

Bessette said the objective is two-fold.

"It's to bring the artists and students together, and to make the arts more accessible to the public," he said.

This is the third show in a series of six. The first exhibit, entitled Horse and the Environment, attracted over 10,000 people.

"There will be a very special intimate gathering for St. Valentine's Day entitled Chanteurs Françaises," said Bessette with a gleam in his eyes. "We'll be looking forward to it."

There is an interesting three-dimensional work of art entitled The Vessel by a Sutton artist named Liz Davidson, who said she is exploring the "feminine kind of knowing that exists in both men and women — a concept of full versus empty — being empty meaning not knowing, a waiting."

Davidson said the exhibit is "good exposure for other artists."

Linda Hobley, a Dunham artist, works from photographs depicting nature studies. In the exhibit, her theme is Wild Apple Blossoms.

Her prime objective in her paintings is to capture the light.

"The inner light — the essence of the subject," she said.

Hobley is one of 12 artists chosen by the Farm Credit Corporation of Canada whose art will appear in their 1997 calendar.

Another Dunham artist, José-Lyne Audard, works with oil pastels on photographs.

She said her unusual pieces explore "the limit of the unconscious."

When she's working, she's inspired by natural elements such as fire and water.

All three artists are pleased that the committee is promoting culture and helping artists in the region.

Unusual pieces of art are on display in an exhibit sponsored by the Cultural Committee of Massey Vanier high school and Arts Sutton.

Musical event highlights short Canadian works

LENNOXVILLE — The local branch of the Quebec Music Teachers' Association will present an unusual concert this weekend.

Taking place on Sunday, Nov. 24, at Bishop's University's Bandeen Hall and beginning at 3 p.m., the Progressive Musical is actually made up of more than one concert.

The event focuses on Canadian music and on two-piano repertoire in conjunction with Canadian Music Week (Nov. 24-30).

Several young soloists in piano and strings will interpret short Canadian works, as well as short works of other composers.

At 4 p.m., the second part of this progression begins in the form of a two-piano concert.

Piano duetists Nathalie Fortin and Anne-Lose

Longuemare of the University of Montreal, accompanied by two cellists and a French horn player, will interpret Schumann.

Also, seven duetists from the CEGEP de Sherbrooke will present pieces of Mozart, Poulenc, Rachmaninoff, Infante, Debussy and Bach.

During the third part of the progression (around 4:45 p.m.) the Brass Quintet from the University of Sherbrooke will play the Suite Monégasque by Calvert, followed by Nathalie Fortin and Anne-Lise Longuemare, who will play works by Britten, Meijering and the beautiful Waltz by Ravel.

Fortin holds a Master's degree in performance from the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y.

Longuemare graduated from École Normale in Paris.

In December, they will obtain their Diplôme d'Études Supérieures Spécialisées in music for two pianos and the University of Montreal. They are studying with Jean-Eudes Vaillancourt.

The objective of the Quebec Music Teachers' Association is to offer young musicians the chance to perform in public under the best possible conditions.

To local music teachers and their students, it gives pedagogical support through workshops, masterclasses, concerts and other activities suggested by the members.

Several workshops will be offered next year.

Anyone interested in becoming a member can write to: Quebec Music Teachers' Association, Estrie Branch, 142 Ontario Street, Sherbrooke, J1J 3P9.

Jerome Blais's new piece will premier

Musica Nova's Mahagonny a metaphor for life

Stage director Ian Gaskell discusses expressing the emotion of the piece with alto Michelle Gagné.

By Kathy Mercier

Record Correspondent

LENNOXVILLE — Musica Nova will be presenting an exciting program of three distinctive works Saturday at Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville.

Combining the artistry of 24 performers, including six singers, Musica Nova will be performing three works: George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue; Jérôme Blais's Dionysus Suite; and Kurt Weill's Mahagonny.

Rhapsody in Blue will be performed by solo pianist Brigitte Poulin, who will be backed by over 20 musicians.

Dionysus Suite will be a special treat for the audience as well as its composer, Sherbrooke-born Jérôme Blais, because it will be the world premiere of the piece.

Presenting Dionysus Suite continues Musica Nova's tradition of featuring a new piece at every concert. "We have at least one world premiere at every concert," explained Tom Gordon, co-artistic director of Musica Nova.

Blais, who has composed works for professional groups such as L'Ensemble contemporain de Montreal, wrote Dionysus for his thesis for a Master in Writing Techniques at McGill.

Having a new piece performed live is very important to many composers. In an age of CDs, live performances of modern classical music can be very rare.

"I was once told that a genuine classic of the 20th century is one that gets performed twice," said Gordon.

Mahagonny, which was first presented in 1927, was a very avant-guard piece for its time. It incorporates projections on a screen, is riddled with jazz music, and "is metaphorically set in a boxing ring," Gordon said.

This would be appropriate for a 1920s opera about people looking for a utopia, because, as Gordon illustrated, boxers at the time were celebrities comparable to today's pop stars.

"It's a politically volatile story of six people looking for a utopian life," explained Gordon.

Eleanor Gang, who plays the disgruntled hooker Jessie, agreed.

"Life is always greener until you get there," she said.

"It's about disillusionment," she said. "In 1927, it was pre-Nazi Germany. It was the beginning of the end, and I think the author saw the end coming."

Though first presented in 1927, Mahagonny's ideas of disillusionment can be linked with the turmoil happening in today's world, where people may be constantly looking for something better.

"We face things like that today in places like Yugoslavia," said Gordon.

The production uses elaborate sets, which is nothing new to Musica Nova.

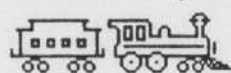

"Since our first concert we involved art," said conductor Marc David, who co-founded Musica Nova with Gordon and composer Andrew MacDonald.

In fact, Musica Nova will be presenting Sursault, a concert will include modern dance, in March Saturday's performance will begin at 8 p.m. and will be followed by a reception. For tickets, call the Centennial Theatre Box office at 822-9692.

COVER

Painter pens autobiographical book

Home is where Ann Mitchell's heart is

By Sunil Mahtani

NORTH HATLEY - Ann Mitchell hasn't left her heart in San Francisco, but parts of it are scattered across Quebec, Ontario and New England.

Home is where the heart is and throughout her life, the naif artist has cherished the places she has lovingly called home, be it in the Eastern Townships, Chambly, Montreal, Toronto, Connecticut or Vermont.

A painter for more than 20 years, Mitchell has created a rather unique niche for herself by capturing private homes and the families which give them life in whimsical detail.

A sense of nostalgia envelops each of her works, for a time, for a place, for a mood and, most importantly, for a sense of family.

"That's the key to my paintings as far as the people who own them - they're family heirlooms," Mitchell said at her charming country home in North Hatley.

"There's no market for my work as such. It's done exclusively for an individual. People say, Where can we see your work? What gallery are you showing at? I say, I'm sorry, you can't. They're all done for specific people. They're hanging in their homes and there's no way you could see them anywhere other than what I have in my own home."

Not until now, that is. Mitchell has just published a coffee table book featuring glossy color reproductions of 38 of her paintings along with the stories behind each one.

An intensely personal book, Where The Heart Is features the true stories of real people, who share a similar concept of home and family.

Mitchell's own autobiography links it all together. The paintings and the accompanying texts reveal the important relationships she has with her family in rich, vivid detail.

These tableaux, and those of friends who commissioned her to capture their own clans on canvas, give readers a glimpse into private lives where a sense of family is the most important factor at play.

No empty country cottages here, and no couch potatoes either. Every inch of these homes are used and their occupants are constantly in motion - planting flowers, playing tennis, riding a bike or a horse, swimming. These are people enjoying life and each other's company.

Many of the stories are amusing, such as the one about the real estate agent whose pride and joy is the simple outhouse next to his home; others are more poignant - the businessman, who shed a tear when he saw the painting of him greeting his family with presents. He has since died of cancer.

Mitchell said she was concerned whether the book would interest the general public.

"I knew that the people I did the paintings for would be, I knew my friends would buy it - they better - but I didn't know whether there'd be a market. I thought there might be a market, it's a happy book and I've had the feedback on my paintings for 20 years so I know people like the paintings. Kids love them, seniors like them and it sort of spans the generations, but I didn't know that anybody would buy the book."

To Mitchell's great relief, they are. Where The Heart Is seems to be striking an emotional chord with people across the Townships. Mitchell has sold 400 copies here in the past month alone.

"I wrote from the heart about these places," she said. "My feeling was that people would think it too sentimental and too mushy. But they don't. It's a glimpse, like driving by a row of lighted windows at night and you look in and you catch a glimpse of the family in there. It's intriguing. I can't walk by a house or drive by a house without looking, and here people are getting glimpses of a family."

People can catch more than a glimpse of Mitchell when she signs copies of her book at the North Hatley library this Sunday from 4 to 6 p.m.

But Mitchell is no 'Sunday painter' who spontaneously captures a landscape or still life. She goes through a rather rigorous process of research.

"Ideally, I sit down with the family all together and talk. I say, 'tell me about what's happened here'. One of the paintings in the book is about a cottage on Lake Massawippi and I sat down with the family and it turned out that, well 10 years ago we did this and now we did this, and 12 years ago he did this and now he did this. And I thought Gosh, how am I going to represent this family? So I did them twice - one as they were 10 years ago and again as they are today, with the two different representations intermingled. It was fun and they can relate to it both now and then."

Although Mitchell welcomes as many details as possible from the family she will be portraying, she said she still gets to be rather creative while working at her easel.

"I play a lot," she said with a wide smile. "They call it artistic license. One of the things that is characteristic of naif artists is the fact you can do anything and claim it in the name of naif art. I move buildings around, I took a three-car garage off one house, I turned a barn around to show the front because the back didn't look very good. I will show things that are in the back of the house that you can't see if you're standing in the front, but I put them in anyway. Usually I'm given complete carte blanche. 'Do whatever you want. Take full artistic license to represent our place the way you want'."

Mitchell, who is also a busy volunteer on The Piggery Theatre's board of directors, takes about three months to complete a painting.

Mitchell said she was naturally drawn to the naif style when she began creating her bright, colorful slices of life.

"When I saw the work of Grandma Moses back in the '60s when we were first married, Brad and I, I just adored it," she recalled. "Brad's parents' house reminded me of the type of subject she painted. In those days, nobody knew what naif art was, I don't think it was called naif art. But I loved her work, and I'm a city girl. I didn't know the country until I came and met Brad's parents."

It was 1959 when she first visited the red farmhouse in Massawippi called Drumquin and met the people she would soon call family. She married Brad the following year.

They raised three children and moved three times before she created her first painting, a Grandma Moses-inspired vision of the Mitchell family home on an old tin tray for her husband's Christmas gift. She has since painted Drumquin seven times.

Mitchell, who financed the book herself at a cost of $30,000, isn't concerned about making a profit on it. "My mother died in December very suddenly, and she left me some money and it's her legacy that enabled me to do it and as far as I'm concerned it's worth it. She was the first person to read the text and she would've wanted me to do this."

Ann Mitchell will be signing copies of Where The Heart Is on Sunday, Nov. 24, at the North Hatley library from 4 to 6 p.m.

The book is available at Galerie Jeannine Blais and Pomegranate in North Hatley, W.H. Smith in Sherbrooke, Homestead in Lennoxville, The Book Nook in Sutton and Mag Plus in Knowlton.

MUSIC

Clark and Jackson make good Christmas buys

We are getting closer to the time of the year when we have to spend hours shopping to find the right little something for this special person.

Christmas is right at our door and a new country album is always a great gift for the country music fan in our lives.

The following albums are definitely some I would recommend strongly.

Terri Clark, Just The Same (Mercury)

For Clark, this is a sophomore effort and if you rely on this album to determine whether she will make it as a country music artist, let me tell you she passed the test with flying colors.

The only thing wrong with this new release is the title, Just The Same, because it's anything but the same.

This collection is amazing with its roaring energy, the quality of emotion that Clark manages to include on every song and this new confidence that is displayed.

The Canadian Country Music Association just honoured her with three awards - Album of The Year, Song of The Year and its Vista Award for Rising Star of 1996. This by itself is enough to throw a new career into overdrive on the highway of superstardom.

As before, Clark struts her stuff as a first class songwriter, she wrote or co-wrote all but three tunes on Just The Same. The quality of her material demonstrates that she would have easily risen to Music Row's highest peaks as a composer even if she had never become a performer.

Although the long legged girl's got everything to succeed she remains modest "I still think that I have a lot of growing to do, it's like I'm learning every day. The big lesson is, 'Be Yourself'. Take country music and make it your own," said Clark. "I'm not gonna get up on any soap box and preach about where country music is going, but it's scary sometimes to think that we might be losing sight of our roots, the things we all fell in love about it in the first place."

Country Connection

By Jessie Aulis

The first single is a remake of a Linda Rondstat 's country-rock classic "Poor, Poor Pitiful Me" which she packs with spunk and the charm she's so well known for.

From the raw energy of "Emotional Girl" to the incredible emotion of "Keeper of The Flame" right off you realize you're listening to a stylist in full command of her talent.

The bent-note phrasing of the shuffle "Neon Flame", her seductive drawl on "Twang Thang", the heart-in-throat soaring in "Just The Same" and the treatment she gives "Hold Your Horses" all bares the proof that Clark has progressed giant steps during her first year as a star in the making.

You can easily imagine the couples dancing across the dance floor while she sings "You Do or You Don't" and she seems so comfortable with the winding guitar groove in "Something in the Water".

It's incredible how she matches a down lyric to an up-tempo melody and pulls it off like magic on "Not What I Wanted To Hear". But when she pours her soul and heart adding hurt, resilience, pain and strength into "Any Woman" then you know you're hearing vocal greatness.

Her first album was a statement of her talent and Clark still have a hard time to realize what's happening.

"I honestly do feel like I'm in some kind of fairy tale" said the million-selling artist who could be Cinderella providing the story would send her to the ball with cowboy boots instead of glass slippers.

"I feel like I'm living in a dream. Everything I've ever dreamed about, ever since I was a little girl in Medicine Hat, Alberta, has come true this year," added the cowgirl who always wears jeans, a Stetson hat and a t-shirt.

She is an artist who sings with astounding conviction, one who can belt a rocker with a lot more confidence than before. She interprets lyrics with a lot of subtlety and invests so much in her ballads including honky-tonk moans, cries and slurs, all there to confirm her status as one of our genuine country female vocalists of the 90s.

There's no doubt about it. This album is a little gem.

Alan Jackson, Everything I Love (BMG)

This is Alan Jackson's seventh album and a perfect illustration of the singer-songwriter's success.

The first single "Little Bitty", already a hit is a take on the Tom T. Hall song and it fits Jackson's style to a T.

The title track has all the power of most of the superstar's ballads, it sweeps you off your feet.

"Buicks To The Moon" will ring true with country music fans and "Between The Devil And Me" is just loaded with emotion Jackson's way.

"There Goes" has the easy-going, upbeat swing that characterises the tall, gorgeous Georgian.

Jackson's feelings about this album are pretty positive.

"It's more relaxed," he said. "I have more experience in the studio and I have more confidence as an artist."

The collection is less up-tempo than what we are used to.

Whether you talk about "A House With No Curtains", "Who's Cheating Who", "Walk On The Rocks", "Must've Had A Ball" or "It's Time You Learned About Good-Bye", it is really hard to make your choice.

This album is 100% Jackson and everything is good, and if it's not good to dance to it's fantastic to just sit, relax and listen. It is not important to read too much into his superstardom because as he says himself, after all he's just a guy who sings.

One factor seems to keep the fans on their toes with Jackson, everything he sings is and there's no debate here, as country as country can get. His heartfelt honky-tonk music contributed to his rise to super stardom and have been determinant of his huge following.

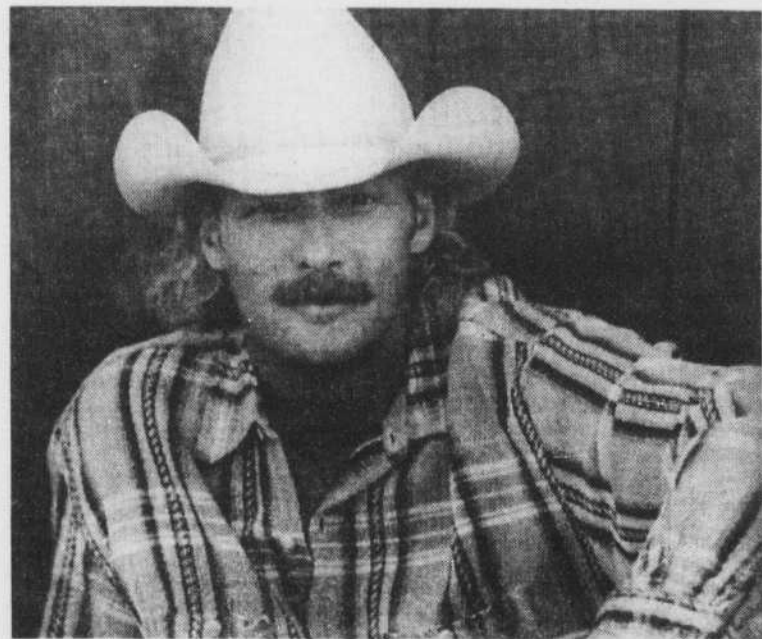

Jackson is the country singer with the biggest fan club in the industry and it keeps growing, regrouping people of very different ages. His songs are at once highly personal and totally universal and this is what he wants.

"As far as getting something out of my music, other than people relating to it, the writing has been the most important part for me," Jackson said.

"Of all the things I've done, places I've been and awards I've won over the past few years, I still get more excited when I sit in the bus and write a good song. It's a whole rush to do something you just created and have people like it. That's been real gratifying."

Jackson is doing everything he loves, remaining just a guy who sings.

Have a nice week and keep your country state of mind!

Alan Jackson... seventh album is a peach.
