PRESBYTERIAN LEADERS MEET

Sixth Annual Conference Held in Huntingdon—Outstanding Lectures

The Sixth Annual Conference of Leaders in Sunday School and Young People's Work for the Synod of Montreal and Ottawa was held in Huntingdon July 3rd to 10th. This was pronounced by many of those present to be the best that has yet been held here. The registration was not as large as in former years but the attendance at the various meetings was quite equal to previous records, due to the fact that many visitors came from day to day to the various meetings. Rev. Dr. A. S. Reid was in charge, as usual.

Dr. Norman MacLeod of Brockville, Moderator of Synod, delivered a course of five lectures on Principles of Teaching, based largely upon the methods used in the Gospel by the Great Teacher. Besides earning his degree of S.S. and Y.P.S. work gave two lectures on Epics in Church History. Dr. Kinnaird, of Toronto, the Assembly's General Secretary of S.S. and Y.P.S. gave five lectures on the Life and Missionary Journeys of St. Paul. Dr. A. M. Hill of Verdun, Presbytery's Conventor of Mission Committee, gave four lectures on Boys' Work; and Miss Mary Hill, the Assembly's Girls' Work Secretary, gave a course of lectures and conducted several conferences with leaders of girls' work. Dr. Macleod of Huntingdon, following up his course on Literature and Religion, gave three lectures dealing with Immortality, particularly as treated in several of the great English poets. A very important feature of the Conference was the presence and the contribution of Miss Whittington, missionary from Jhansi, India, at present in the city. In a most vivid and picturesque manner she set forth the conditions to be faced by missionaries, and their methods of operation. She gave four memorable lectures to the Conference, and by special request, another to the W.C.S. of the local church.

The delegates and visitors were entertained at the School Home, where Mrs. Gouldthorpe and Mrs. Allan Reid were in charge, dispensing hospitality. Mrs. Craig of Verdun had in direction of the recreation periods. A pleasing interlude was a Lawn Social at the beautiful Summer Home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Rowat at Dewittville on Saturday afternoon. On Saturday evening an impromptu concert was given at the School Home by various talented delegates, including the Misses Robb of Montreal. On Sunday both morning and evening in St. Andrew's Church special sermons were preached by Dr. Norman MacLeod of Brockville. In the course of the morning service the three Misses Robb sang several Gospel Hymns which were greatly appreciated. In the course of the morning service the Rev. Dr. Reid thanked the minister and congregation of St. Andrew's Church for their co-operation and consideration throughout the whole Conference.

At an election of the Catholic School Commissioners on Monday last Mr. Jeremiah Murphy was elected by acclamation, he replaces Mr. Frank Smith who resigned after serving several terms in this office.

Mr. James T. Elder received the sad news of the death of his brother Robert Elder, which occurred at his home in Seymour, Connecticut, on June 28th. Elder, who was a motor trip to the Fair, Chicago, and to visit his brother in Hawkeye, Iowa. Miss Laura Walsh left on Monday, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Walsh of St. Andrews, Que., on a motor trip to the Fair, Chicago, and to visit his brother in Hawkeye, Iowa. PRIDE—The Enemy

Some would-like-to-be advertisers in the Gleaner are hanging back because they feel they cannot afford it. They forget that these are the times when pretty nearly everybody is singing low—and advertisements do not have to be BIG in order to get attention.

There is a distinct trend this year toward the use of smaller space advertisements with a multiplied frequency of contacts. What everybody wants and from everybody else is some indication of smiling hopefulness—some expression—some quiet manifestation of confidence in the early emergency of better times.

Army Citadel Band Heads I. O. O. F. Parade to Union Cemetery—Band Concert at Park and Chateau

The Salvation Army Citadel Band of Montreal was in Huntingdon on Sunday, the occasion being the day set apart by the I.O.O.F. as Decoration Day. In the morning Lieut.-Col. Peacock of the Salvation Army, conducted the service in the United Church. He was assisted in the service of music by a sextette from the Army Band. Not only did the sextette render numerous instrumental numbers, but they also sang very harmoniously.

In the afternoon the Citadel Band headed the parade of nearly 80 members of the I.O.O.F. lodges of Huntingdon, Ormstown, and neighboring communities. The parade was formed at the Lodge Hall and proceeded to the Union cemetery. The graves of the departed members of the Order were marked with flags, and as the procession moved about, the graves were decorated with flowers.

The attendance of people outside of the I.O.O.F. Order were numerous, and as a matter of fact upwards of 350 people were at the cemetery on Sunday afternoon. After the decorating of the graves, the Rev. J. B. Macleod, D.D., chaplain of the local Lodge delivered an address. The music for this service was under the direction of the Salvation Army Citadel Band.

After this service, the Band headed the lengthy procession to Prince Arthur Square. They there started a musical programme, but owing to a shower of rain falling this portion of the day's programme came to an abrupt ending. In the evening the United Church was turned over to the Salvation Army. The Citadel Band occupied the choir loft and provided instrumental and vocal selections throughout the service. Lieut.-Col. Peacock delivered the discourse.

When the Salvation Army members were in Huntingdon they were served their meals at the United Church by Mrs. Vine. For the evening meal 45 were present.

The Salvation Army is a commendable organization of social service workers, and Huntingdon will welcome them whenever they see fit to pay us the call.

Previous to holding the Church service in the evening, the Army Band gave in front of the Huntingdon Chateau and provided a programme of instrumental numbers that was much appreciated.

WHY WAS THE HEADING "The Ormstown Gleaner" Discontinued?

The answer is:

The width of a page of the Gleaner is 8 columns. The amount of space required to set "The Ormstown Gleaner" heading was equivalent to one column of reading matter. The amount of local and district news supplied the Gleaner by its correspondents required that we either curtail the news, enlarge the paper, thereby increasing its cost of production, or eliminate this heading.

Then again the system of numbering the pages did not prove to be what was acceptable to our readers. We therefore must adopt the system of one make-up of paper until such times as business warrants this sacrifice of space.

Our readers will also note that the present Gleaner heading has been reduced in size. Not only is the new heading more modern and distinctive, but it requires less space. As a matter of fact, the saving in space of this present heading represents over a year's time 7 columns of reading matter, or $34.90 worth of advertising space. The heading "Ormstown Gleaner" represented space equivalent to 52 columns of reading matter, or $400.40 worth of advertising space. The publishers have not been able to say that the Ormstown Gleaner heading carried anything like that amount of remuneration, either direct or in an indirect manner during the year it was carried. Some things we learn by experience, and this in brief has been our finding and the reason for the change.

Mr. H. E. Stephenson, an outstanding advertising executive of Canada has written the Gleaner commenting upon this mechanical change in the make-up of this paper, and heartily approves of the changes made.

Postponed Inquest Will Be Held Friday

Members of a jury under Dr. L. Savage, of Ste. Philomene, coroner of the district, opened the inquest on Thursday in the case of Normand Desparois, 27-year-old son of Mayor Rock Desparois, of Chateaugay Village, whose body was found in the waters of Chateaugay Basin, on Monday morning. Owing to the fact that various rumors prevailed in regard to the circumstances surrounding the death of the young man, the inquest was adjourned to permit Detective Robert, of the Provincial Police, to investigate the case. Further, it was learned that the preliminaries of the inquest that the Mayor's son lost his life by drowning, at eleven o'clock Sunday night. Desparois was accompanied by four or five companions when he went to the shore to cross the river by motor boat. Desparois was alone however when he reached one of three boats anchored by the shore. It is believed that he fell into the river while jumping from one motor boat to another, for the purpose of reaching the third one which was to take him across the river and to his home.

This apple maggot has been the cause of the embargo by England of Canadian apples. Last fall England sent special representatives to Canada to inquire about this insect pest. These representatives returned with the report that the government had passed measures for its control. A meeting of Dominion apple growers at Ottawa devised ways and means to control these insects. The enforcement is under the jurisdiction of the provincial government and the Quebec government has 8 specially qualified men now working on the enforcement of this law.

If Canadian apple growers are unable to export their produce successfully, it is doomed therefore all growers concerned are asked to co-operate to the fullest extent possible.

Following are the special regulations for control as published by the Quebec Department of Agriculture: I—Special Treatments Against the Apple Maggot.

1. Every apple tree must be sprayed once between July 12 and 15 and a second time between July 28 and August 1st in each year, unless otherwise ordered by the official inspector.

For each spray use 15 pound lead arsenate or 10 pound calcium arsenate per 40 gallons of water or lime sulphur solution. In place of spray use 10% lead arsenate or 7% calcium arsenate. Each application shall be made to the entire satisfaction of the inspector.

2. Fallen apples shall be carefully gathered at least once every seven days, beginning with the 10th of August, and destroyed to the satisfaction of the inspector.

3. Wild apple trees shall be treated once as cultivated apple trees.

4. Apple trees kept for ornamental purposes, if unsprayed, shall be thoroughly deprived of their fruits before the 10th of July.

II—Destruction of Unsprayed Apple Trees

Any apple tree, not treated as prescribed by Article I, shall be cut down by the owner or occupant or, should he fail to do so, by the inspector, but at the expense of the owner or occupant.

III—Rights of the Inspectors

Inspectors appointed by the Minister of Agriculture as representatives of the entomologist have full authority to enforce the present regulation.

IV—Penalties For Contraventions

Any person who contravenes this regulation will be prosecuted as provided for in the Plant Protection Act.

Ignoring Stop Signs on Streets The Huntingdon Town Council inserted a notice in the previous issue of the Gleaner advising people of the enactment of by-law 214, which defines that all streets leading onto Chateauguay streets shall be stop streets. The by-law says that a full stop must be made where the stop signs have been placed otherwise a charge will be laid and the penalties of the by-law enforced. The town policeman has authority to collect fines and give a receipt, and on refusal to pay a summons will be issued.

One of the great difficulties of driving today is to know just what to do about the various signs that are posted for guidance. You see certain parking signs giving instructions, but you see cars parked right along the same sign. You see the sign "Stop Street" yet how many do you see go right through. This is all brought about by the number of signs that are erected that do not mean what they say. You can see these signs everywhere. People have an idea that these signs are out of date or that they do not mean what they say. There is but one way to overcome such a state and the Huntingdon Town Council intends enforcing their by-law. The people must be taught that the sign "Stop" means you must stop.

The enforcement of the by-law will eliminate a number of claims and will enable the motorist who is traveling on a through street to know that he is safe. Just check up yourself and see what you can do to help make driving safer for everyone. Co-operation means success and it means the saving of dollars and cents to everyone who will observe the signs. If these signs are not enforced, then the Town Council should see that all are removed. Observe the signs and make driving safer for all. The Town Council seems determined to enforce the ruling and we trust there will be no slackening in the forced observance of the regulations.

Always a Loop-hole Supposed-to-be honest, right-thinking, and church-going people, here in Huntingdon, and in any other town of its size, or smaller, people who shudder at the thought of card-playing for money, who would stake their life for their Christianity and honesty, easily reconcile themselves to the practice of speculation in the stock market. Does everyone want to get something for nothing in this life? Is there a desire to tramp the real honest man underfoot?

When you meet the man on the street who is dabbling in stocks today he appears over-enthusiased, over-anxious to recover his lost fortune. As you stand outside the stock exchange in any city you will hear the greatest bedlam of shouting imaginable. So called business men in a mad rush to buy or sell stock as the market rises or falls. All this caused by that great desire to get something for nothing. They are gambling. This mad desire for riches is a detriment to the whole universe. It means that thousands of people who cannot afford to do it are losing their money right and left every day and the profits are rolling into those who are in charge. After the experience that the people have passed and are passing through today, one would think that sane people would be very cautious about trying to secure something for nothing. Profits can only be made by honest hard work. The man who does gamble is taking his winnings from some other poor individual who cannot afford to throw away the money. When people understand that they have to work for their living then we will have better times and there will be a better fellowship.

The dying mule always gives a last kick, and at such stage return to life seems very apparent. Misguided people, in a few months, may realize that they were watching a dying mule, and that the tail to which they had pinned their hopes, remained motionless. We hope that none of our readers will be witnesses to such a described scene.

Lack of Interest In School A public meeting was called for in the Huntingdon Academy on Monday July 3rd for the election of two school commissioners to replace those whose term of office had expired.

The meeting took place as advertised and two commissioners were elected but in order to have such done, one of the school board officials had to leave the school and go to the County Building to get two men to nominate the commissioners. It is hardly conceivable that such a ridiculous situation should have confronted the officials. When the time has come that parents of school children take no more interest than was manifested on Monday last in the appointment of new school commissioners it is high time to hand over the reins of administration to the school staff and children themselves. It is highly improbable, yes even impossible, that they could show less lack of interest.

We desire to cast no reflection whatever on the men elected. The place for ratepayers to air their grievances is at the public meeting called for the purpose of electing commissioners, when they should elect the men who represent their respective attitudes towards school problems. Apparently everything is going perfect at and about the Academy despite the fact that reports from the Department of Education inform us that such is not the case. This is not in reference to the teaching staff but in the matter of required space, sanitation, and lighting facilities, etc.

Ratepayers should blush with shame at such a condition for which they are wholly responsible. It is quite possible, that forenoon, that the hog pen needed cleaning out, or that there were some weeds to be cut near the fence by the barn, and consequently attendance at the meeting was impossible. To relegate to such second consideration matters pertaining to the future of one's own children shows strong indication of senility of mind and retrogression.

It may be that the election of school commissioners is held at the wrong time of year. It would possibly be much better if they were held shortly after school opening in the fall, some time after parents and children have become acquainted with the new teaching staff and when plans have been laid out for the school term.

Whatever may be the reason it is perfectly evident that there is something drastically wrong with the ratepayers and school officials of Huntingdon Academy. Few of the local people seem to have the courage of their convictions; and the majority of those who have convictions or opinions are jelly-fish, in the hands of a very imperfect molder.

Punishing Leader-Mail In a recent issue of the Granby Leader-Mail editorial comment was made upon the fact that today we have more new criminals serving sentences than at ordinary times. This has been credited to the depression that has prevailed since 1929. It is quite true that in many places the situation has been complicated by the fact that municipal and provincial governments are hard up financially and do not care to spend money unless it is absolutely necessary to administer justice and inflict punishment. The Leader-Mail says "the situation is aggravated by the Quebec government requirements that the complainant must pay costs in certain cases, so that many times a case is dropped to save costs." The opinion of a man who has spent his life in correction of criminals, expressed himself to the Leader-Mail said "there never were more prisoners serving light sentences than during the past couple of years. It is my honest opinion that if a young man were given a stiff punishment on his first offence he would never come back."

The situation as it stands in this Province has been set forth. What would happen if a young man or even old man, or a gang of men stole cattle or horses from a member of the Vigilant Society of this community? Would the farmer go to his municipal council for guidance? Would he go to the agronomist? Would he take action himself? or, would he have enough faith in the Vigilant Society to place the case in their hands, in place of doing the prosecution work himself? It would be hard to imagine a farmer placing confidence in the Vigilant Society that does not hold annual meetings in June, or appoint officers to vacancies on the board due to deaths. A Vigilant Society is a commendable organization for farmers to belong to, but it must keep itself organized and keep itself posted on what action to immediately take when a theft amongst its membership occurs. The Vigilant Society certainly needs re-organization and an increased membership amongst the present-day farmers might be commendable. A well organized and active Vigilant Society would be one of the best police forces our farmers could wish for. Financially, a good Vigilant Society would be much more economical than having a council pay prosecution expenses to a detective agency. In place of having the county paying big fees for detectives and prosecutions, each farmer would pay a small fee to the Vigilant Society, representing considerably less than that part of his taxes set apart for law enforcement by the County Council.

$4,127.544 Worth Of Livestock In Beauharnois Dist. An interesting census bulletin has just been published, relating to the animal kingdom as they stood in the District of Beauharnois when the census was taken in 1931. We find that the County of Huntingdon leads in the total valuation of livestock in these three counties. The aggregate wealth of the livestock in this District is set down at $4,127,544. The value of the domestic stock in Beauharnois County is $691,804, Chateauguay $609,043 and Huntingdon $1,826,697.

The horse population numbered 12,823 and was valued at $1,093,365 or at an average of $85.27 each. The number of farms reporting horses was Beauharnois 760, Chateauguay 1428 and Huntingdon 1518.

The cattle census is the census that means most to us, and it is here that the big livestock valuation makes headway. The cattle here are valued at $2,828,131. Beauharnois reports $403,619, Chateauguay $1,087,344 and Huntingdon $1,337,168.

Sheep in the District number 4,672 and are valued at $25,524. Swine numbered 21,458 and had a value of $180,416. The poultry in Huntingdon county exceeded Chateauguay county by the trifling sum of 144. The total value of the 392,280 birds came to $205,639. The value of the 7,930 hives of bees was set down at $50,810.

Milk Commission Finding Trouble That the milk producers have been unfairly treated by milk distributors is conceded. The dairymen of Montreal aim at making big profits, and appear to be not too particular as to how they get them. The Milk Commission of this Province made remarkable headway this spring by getting the milk dealers to agree to pay the milk producers $1.35 per hundred for 3.5 milk, f.o.b. Montreal. True to form some of the milk dealers who agreed, and some who did not agree to this price, have broken faith, and sold milk at lower prices to the detriment of the trade.

The Milk Commission was again obliged to step in and talk turkey to the city milk distributors who are greedy, and always want just a little bit more than fair play allows. The Commission put it up to these dealers in a strong form; the threat worked, and on Monday announcement was made that the milk dealers all agreed to the $1.35 per hundred for milk. The minimum price at which milk is to be sold in Montreal was also set at 8c a quart.

By the time the Commission got through with the unethical milk dealers, it was quite evident they would not have to resort to legislation to obtain power to administer satisfaction to the producers, and the worthy and commendable milk companies. The Commission has the power in its hand to administer justice, and it is sufficient to dictate to the milk companies who are open to adopt unfair methods of buying or marketing milk.

Observing In The Editors' Den columns appears a re-holiday print from the Ottawa Citizen dealing with the observance of Legal Holidays. Huntingdon business places to quite a considerable extent infringed upon this holiday law. Dominion Day is a holiday that must be observed in Canada. Christmas is a holiday we all observe, but why should it be observed any more than Good Friday.

The Board of Trade is to hold an executive meeting between the time this portion of the paper goes to press, and when it will be read by the public. The Board of Trade hopes to arrange for the holding of a public meeting open to all business people and others interested in the welfare of Huntingdon. At this meeting it is to be hoped the business men will agree to observe all Dominion legal holidays by closing their places of business. The holidays that will be considered are New Year's, Good Friday, Empire Day, Dominion Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving, Remembrance Day and Christmas.

It would neither be practical or possible to observe certain religious holidays that some merchants may wish included. As long as we reside in Canada it is right that we observe the laws of this country and respect them. Religious holidays are not prescribed by the Dominion, therefore it is not justice to ask that one sect of people observe holidays because another sect might request it. Canadians have the freedom of religion, but religion must not interfere with the movements of people of other sects, such as setting out what holidays must be observed by all people. We are a Canadian people and should be unanimous about observing the prescribed holidays set down by the Dominion of Canada. People who wish to observe religious holidays are perfectly at liberty to do so.

Whilst this editorial is dealing with the situation as it stands in Huntingdon, it is but right that every other trading center in this District should follow suit and have every merchant and dealer lined up to observe the Dominion legal holidays.

Saves to Repay

Three years ago Thomas Merlin, Trenton, N. J., lost his wallet containing $27 in cash in a New York barber shop. A few days ago he received a money order for $27, and with it a letter of apology from the finder for having kept the money so long. He had lost his job, his wife was ill and a child had died, he explained. The $27 was like manna from heaven, but the man kept his word it would be returned just as soon as he could get that much ahead.

A Way to Block Roads

It wasn't high water that blocked state road No. 34, near Covington, Ky., but for a time three refugees driven from the flooded lowlands effectively halted traffic. Motorists refrained from using force to remove the blockade, and finally about fifty automobiles were lined up and waiting to pass. Then one person, apparently more fearless than the rest, drove three skunks from the road and traffic was resumed.

Autos Control Own Traffic

Glasgow, Scotland, has just installed its latest robot traffic policeman, and with them automobiles and street cars will control their own traffic. New traffic signals which have been placed at Sauchiehall and Buchanan streets as a test, are operated automatically by approaching vehicles. "Detector" plates have been sunk in the pavement at four approaches to the crossing, and when a vehicle passes over the detector, signs are displayed for both streets. Each vehicle is then authorized by lights to proceed in its proper turn. Street cars operate the signals by an overhead device.

Testament Returned

Sixteen years ago, on a battlefield in France, William Harris, Ellersville, Ind., lost a pocket-size New Testament. He has just received it back. It was picked up by Walter Nichols, another American soldier of Princeton, N. J., who took it home. Recently Nichols found it among his father's effects, and with the name of its owner on the fly leaf to start with, finally discovered him and returned the book.

Limbless Kobelkoff Dies

Kobelkoff, once famous as a circus freak, has failed in his greatest ambition. He had frequently declared that he would live to be 120, but he has just passed away in Vienna, Austria, at 81. Born in the Ural Mountains without limbs, he learned to write, paint, shoot and fish, and traveled over the world as a freak. He saved his money, bought a merry-go-round and scenic railway in Vienna, was married and became prosperous.

Generous Landlord

Starting out on his rounds to collect rent from his 40 tenants Max Marmelzadt, New Orleans landlord, not only found they had no money, but many were in actual want. Before getting around he had a change of heart. Going back over the route he called out the head of each house and told him to go to the neighboring grocery and buy what food he needed at the landlord's expense. By night Marmelzadt had a bill of $70 to pay at the store but he got his money's worth in the joy and satisfaction of rendering a genuine service to his fellowmen.

Dog Trick Saves Girl

Obedience to the signal for a trick an Alsatian dog saved nine-year-old Malissa Galloway from drowning in Sydney, Australia, recently. The girl had fallen into the water, and her struggles carried her far out into the bay. James Brady raised his hands above his head to dive and swim to her. Before he could plunge his dog, Losh Lady, leaped over his head, landed in the water and swam to the child. Greeting her jumper at the back of the neck he swam to shore. Brady had taught the dog to jump over him when he held out his arms.

Oldest Highland Chief

Col. Sir Fitzroy D. Maclean, Scotland's oldest Highland chief, celebrated his ninety-eight birthday recently on his Isle of Mull stronghold, Duart Castle. This home of his ancestors was built in 1250 and lay in ruins for many centuries until Sir Fitzroy fulfilled, a few years ago, a vow, made when a boy, to restore it. Sir Fitzroy was so severely injured in the Crimean war that he was given only a few hours to live.

Railway in Sewer

A smuggler's lair, complete with a narrow gauge railway for the transport of heavy loads of tobacco, has been discovered in a sewer at Halluin, on the Belgian frontier. The smugglers entered the sewer at Menin, two miles from Halluin, placing the tobacco in trucks, which were wheeled along the railway line. The trucks, which were fitted to the tracks so that people living above should not hear any rumble when a train was going by underneath. Half a ton of tobacco has been seized by the police.

Dyed Whiskers Melt

Clinton Wells, 12 years old, will wear no more whiskers. He is recovering from a badly swollen face caused by poisoning from a set of false whiskers worn at an amateur play at Kenton, Ohio. The doctor said the poisoning might not have resulted if the boy had not perspired so heavily under the strain stage fright and an overly warm costume. The dye in the whiskers ran.

A Verdict on Hops

Two United States Government departments have issued verdicts on the question of how far a flea and a frog can hop. An "ordinary" flea, say the Agricultural Department's Bureau of Entomology, can leap 13 inches horizontally and 7 1/2 inches vertically. An "ordinary" frog, says the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries, under "normal conditions" can leap three feet, under "deep emotion" five feet, and under "deep emotion with firm footing" six feet. The purpose of the extraordinary research was to ease the mind of a Californian "citizen and taxpayer" who wrote to the Secretary of the Interior that the question had troubled him for four years.

Grumbles For A Living

A London man earns a living by going round the city finding fault with everything. One day he went into a big tea shop and found that the shape of the teacups they used were clumsy. It was impossible to drink out of them without spilling the tea. So he wrote to the company about it and the cups were changed. He wrote to the London Underground and told them that passengers could alight at a certain station with great difficulty. Upon another occasion he saw that a sign in the West End of the city was not working properly. He told the company owning it that anyone standing on the other side of the street could not read it, and it was changed. His job arose from a lifelong habit. If ever he saw anything was wrong he used to write to the owner about it. He merely used to do it as a matter of principle, but when he was out of a job he suggested that if his criticisms were of any use he should be paid for them. Now he makes a handsome income from being a grumbler!

Lost $10,000,000

When the airship Akron went down it carried with it an investment of $10,000,000. Since 1917 the United States navy has spent about $35,000,000 on this type of airship, including equipment and the cost of training men for work on lighter-than-air craft. The Akron represents about one-third of this investment both in equipment and personnel of crew which was lost.

Bridegroom Gave His Life

The story of Louis H. Gerber, a young bridegroom who drowned after ordering a rescuer, to save his bride and another woman first, came out from Schroon Lake in the Adirondacks. Gerber was 24 and lived in Brooklyn. He and his bride, Elsie, 21, were spending their honeymoon at a tourist camp. Their canoe overturned, and the young couple and Mrs. Robert H. Epstein, 25, of the Bronx, a friend, were thrown into the lake. A small rowboat came to the rescue. There was not room for all. "Take them ashore and come back for me," shouted Gerber. When the boat returned he was gone. His body was found in 20 feet of water.

Town Clerk at Ninety-three

Forfar claims the distinction of having the oldest town clerk in Scotland. He is Colonel Alex. McHardy, who is 93 years of age and has been in office since 1903. Colonel McHardy attributes his good health and old age to constant attention to work and moderate living. His only hobby is the Volunteers, of which body he is a colonel.

Prevent Ship Fires

A new invention to reduce the risk of fire at sea, which makes all the ship "visible" to the captain, is creating much interest in shipping circles in London. It consists of channels, are fitted to every vulnerable point of the ship. At the end of each channel is a small detector and extinguisher resembling a telephone mouthpiece. A rise above a specified temperature or a wisp of smoke causes the detector to set off an alarm. Once the alarm is in action carbon dioxide automatically is pumped through the air channels and begins to smother the flames.

Short Matrimonial Career

A short matrimonial career was revealed with the filing of a divorce complaint by Nellie Frances Bennett, in the Miami circuit court at Peru, Indiana. She was a bride of only two hours when her husband, Earl Thos. Bennett, was arrested on a banditry charge. He went to prison and she went to the divorce court.

Cheap Honeymoon

When Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bockover, of Tipton, Ind., were married, they decided upon a "hitch-hike honeymoon" to Oakland, Calif. In spite of the fact that motorists have become quite wary about picking up hitch-hikers, the Bockovers walked only 14 miles of their 4,500-mile journey to California.

Wealth in Goats

A year ago Ralph Beal, ill for weeks, went to a Kansas City physician for treatment. The doctor prescribed a diet of goat's milk. Beal was out of work at the time but had money enough to buy three Swiss milk goats. In a year's time, Beal, who is one of those fellows adversity cannot hold down, has increased his herd of 112 goats, has made $5,000 and has his health back.

Antiquity of Piracy

Piracy has been practised since men first put to sea. Some of the earliest "pirate" stories on record are those thrilling adventures described by Homer in the Odyssey. Lundy Island, off the north coast of Devonshire, was for many years the headquarters of a gang of pirates. Paul Jones, a commander of the United States Navy, who was born in Scotland, in 1747, rivals the piratical fame of Captain Kidd. He went to sea when only twelve. Later he joined the crew of a Whitehaven slaver, and soon had a command of his own in the American Navy. He was responsible for the first success of that navy when he captured the Drake sloop-of-war in Belfast Lough in 1778. In the following year, after a desperate battle off Flamborough Head, he captured two British men-o-war.

Observing Legal Holidays

DOMINION Day is a legal holiday in Canada and if you do not observe it, you are liable to be charged with crime. That is the essence of an interesting correspondence which has taken place between Hon. Mr. Guthrie, minister of justice, and the city of Chatham, Ont.

It seems that the Retail Merchants' Association of that illustrious community decided that it would be to everybody's advantage this year to defer observance of the holiday from Saturday to Monday. A chain organization with headquarters in Windsor thereupon telegraphed Mr. Guthrie asking if it was not compulsory for Chatham merchants to observe the legal holiday.

Mr. Guthrie replied (sending a copy to the mayor of Chatham) that "by chapter 49 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1927," it is provided that throughout Canada, in each year July 1, not being a Sunday, shall be a legal holiday and shall be "kept and observed as such under the name of Dominion Day." When July 1 falls on Sunday, the second day of July shall be a legal holiday and observed in like manner.

Then Mr. Guthrie goes on: "It is clear from the above that all persons in Canada on that day are subject to a statutory injunction, to keep and observe July 1 as a legal holiday. Section 164 of the Criminal Code provides that everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to one year's imprisonment who, without lawful excuse, disobeys any act of Parliament of Canada by wilfully doing any act which it forbids or omitting to do any act which it requires to be done, unless some penalty or other mode of punishment is expressly provided by law. As to the question of prosecution in cases of failure to observe Dominion Day, Mr. Guthrie is non-committal. He says it is a matter which should primarily be dealt with by the municipalities.

In Ottawa some stores—bushers, chiefly—were open last Saturday, and excusably so. Others of the kind that never close holidays or Sundays were, of course, open, too. All are apparently liable to prosecution. But the wise course seems to be to allow some latitude when Dominion Day comes on Saturday. If prosecutions started, a pretty kettle of fish would result.

Lengthening the Span

THE conquest, in whole or in part, of many diseases, especially those which effect the earlier years of life, has been a triumph of medicine in recent years. It is a common saying these days that one is only as old as he or she looks. The similarity in appearance between flapper and grandmother is stock in trade of the comic section. On all sides is heard the laughing comment that no one need be told any more, and there is a truly pathetic effort not to appear so. We all talk continually of the marvels of modern medicine and try to envisage even greater achievements in the future.

But against this rosy prospect is realization of the stern fact that heart disease, kidney ailments, cancer and other maladies of middle and later life are getting in their even more deadly work. It is apparent that whatever the victories of medical science upon the germ assaults upon the earlier years, the degenerative diseases which come later are still the supreme conquerors. It is not altogether clear whether all these degenerative afflictions merely have more material to work upon because more lives are saved for old age, or whether they have increased as well.

Wheat Acreage

MR. BENNETT has said several times at London that the prairie provinces of Canada are ready to co-operate in an international scheme to limit wheat acreage.

It would be interesting to know Mr. Bennett's authority for this commitment. The Legislatures of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, presumably the organs of public opinion, have not yet passed upon the proposition to curtail acreage by law. In fact, they have not discussed it yet.

The three prairie Premiers, after a recent meeting, issued a statement similar in tenor to Mr. Bennett's but they were unable to cite any authority except their own opinions and the opinions of experts they consulted. And it ought to be clear that western Canada cannot be pledged to so drastic a measure as wheat acreage control on the mere say-so of experts and executives. A thorough discussion of the proposal is required before western Canada decides one way or the other and such a discussion has just begun.

Mr. Bennett, to judge by the cable dispatches, has given the impression that the farmers of the prairie are all ready to accept state control of their wheat sowing. Is Mr. Bennett not going rather further than the facts warrant?

Moulding Opinions Necessary

LEADERSHIP and direction are necessary in every movement. People with ideas and plans need strong foreful backing in order that they put across their thoughts. Public opinion must be formulated in order that action may be stimulated. Many an excellent policy has been wrecked because the public opinion was not moulded and the necessary leadership given. Few people think for themselves. They are carried along by the crowd or the majority. A few strong minded men with good tongues, a flow of language, a powerful pen and a good press can mould public opinion to their way of thinking. It is a dangerous program if given full sway without control. On the other hand it is a most useful factor when those ideals and opinions to be fostered are for the benefit of humanity. Thus every person who is endowed with brains should set down and analyze all these attempts to mould public opinion. Speeches, articles, stories should not be taken without some consideration. People should think out the proposals, study the background, analyze the purposes behind the move and use their brains to form the proper opinion. Those who are in a position to write or talk should not sit back in perfect contentment and let the other fellow carry on to the end. It is the duty of all who are in a position to do it, to mould public opinion. We are in danger of being our own rights and administrations for the people if we permit people to mould public opinion, as it is being moulded today by certain speakers, newspapers and writings. Public opinion should be carefully moulded by those who know what the plan will lead. Definite leadership on sane, sound practical lines of progress is what the public needs. Use the press, use the radio, use the platform and in private conversation to mould public opinion for the benefit of the public.

Hydro in Danger

THAT hydro is too important to become politicians' plaything is the view taken by the Hanover Post. In this, it is not by any means alone. The unfortunate part of the situation is that hydro is headed by a chairman credited with being politically partisan par excellence, while another of the commission is a party leader in the government of Canada. Can it be expected that men whose appointments are so largely due to their political associations and alliances can possibly so divest themselves of their party leanings as to carry on any public business without their political views having a bearing on their administration? Is it to be taken that with party advantage in so easy command that the opportunity will be lost? Is it too much to ask the public to believe and too much to expect it to accept. Generally politicians are politicians wherever they are, at least whenever they are in positions whereby their erstwhile political friends may be favored. That hydro is not an exception is a pity. It is one of the greatest factors in the industrial life of Ontario and one of its greatest boons. It, however, is most arbitrarily managed, the owners, the public of Ontario, being treated as so many puppets, with or without character. It is said they may speak through the organization of the municipalities, but how? With it controlled by men Friday of the central commission is what chance is there to give expression to open, clear cut views? Reports go to show that this was emphasized at the recent meeting in Windsor, a meeting which, by the way, representatives term as a "sacred farce, one wherein a word of objection or criticism was taken as an insult by the powers that be and their cohorts.

Word For Young People

ONE of our newspaper friends with a genuine interest in young men remarks, "Pick out 20 young men as you meet them and not five out of the 20 are making an effort to save a part of their earnings or making any preparations to provide for the future. A sad commentary, but practically universally true. Young man, stop, think. What will be your condition in life ten, fifteen or twenty years hence?" This is hardly a fair comment. Rather should it read, pick out twenty young men today and not five of them can find employment, and that if they all could there would not be five who would not be saving their money. The times are decidedly difficult for the young men and women and the surprise is that they are under existing conditions holding as strongly as they are. Until times change and they become wasteful, as probably many were during the boom years, caustic criticism and condemnation should be withheld. Instead give the young people a chance.

Men Unwilling to Work Should Not be Helped

A FEW days ago 108 single men residing at Sault Ste. Marie who had been on relief there were offered jobs at a road camp. Only 34 of them accepted the offer, the balance refusing to go to work. It is difficult to understand the attitude of these men. It is true that the pay in these road camps is not large, but the men should bear in mind that they are being taken care of during their unemployment by their fellow-citizens, to whom they owe a debt of gratitude if nothing else. Reports from these camps have been, on the whole, of a favorable character, with food and living conditions good, and nobody overworked. Why young, able-bodied men should prefer to live on relief at the expense of others when they have a chance to earn their own living is a mystery.

Public opinion is strongly in favor of eliminating the relief lists all who, although physically fit, refuse chances to go to work. These young men at the Sault have placed themselves outside the bounds of sympathetic consideration. The people of this country have been willing to help all those victims of circumstances who are in genuine need of assistance, but they should draw the line at providing food and shelter for healthy young men who would rather accept charity than work for a living.

Municipalities Not Obligated

AN important judgment was handed down in a Hamilton division court which may have a far-reaching effect. It was to the effect that municipalities are not under legal obligation to take care of all who are in distress because of unemployment, commenting editorially on this decision the Owen Sound Sun-Times remarks:

"It appears that a Hamilton man was deprived of relief by the city because he was the owner of an automobile and a radio. He entered suit against the authorities on behalf of his children and himself, and the decision of the division court was that municipal governments are not bound to provide relief; that an assistance to provide relief is a privilege and not a right so far as the recipient is concerned.

"It might be well for a good many people to realize just what is involved in a judgment of that kind. There is a certain kind of individual who looks upon relief as legally due him, who openly declares that the municipality must take care of him and his family, and who believes that the civic authorities have no other alternative but to provide him with the necessities of life.

"This Hamilton judgment shows that Canadian municipalities are under no such obligation, that they are not legally compelled to provide food and shelter for those in need. There is, however, a moral obligation which can hardly be ignored, and is not being ignored. Municipal authorities everywhere recognize this and act accordingly, but that does not alter the situation that anything that is done is not done because those citizens have a legal claim, but because the authorities voluntarily assume the duties of providing relief.

"In view of the fact that a number of municipalities have announced that they will shut off giving relief after a certain date, it is well that this principal has been established by a court decision, and those who may have a wrong impression of the obligations of municipalities will understand."

Comfort in Homes

A VERY definite interest is being taken these times in the comfort of residences. We have learned much, for instance, in insulation within recent years. Following the installation of an insulating material in the high school, several residences in Kamloops have been treated in the same way. This will also make cooler houses in the summer. But this is only a starter on the part of those who would save fuel and have both warmer places in the winter and cooler in the summer. The time has come when residences are able to make their own climate. Already some of the larger theatres and office buildings have installed air-conditioning plants. It is forecast that within the next few years a tremendous business will be seen in the new departure. One can easily imagine the control of the temperature summer time in the home by a thermostat just as in the winter with the present oil burner one sets a small instrument at 70 degrees.

In some of our old-fashioned public buildings today we find anything but pleasant conditions on a hot summer's day. The staff works in a high temperature and feels anything but happy, everyone perspiring. The good air is all used up the oxygen gone. What is wanted is air cooled and washed and moistened. If you prefer salt sea breezes there is no reason why you should not be able to have them in the future. And it would be a small step from that to having pumped into the home the fragrance of the woods.

There are boundless possibilities in this connection. With the swing of the pendulum towards better times we should see remarkable developments.

Legislated to Death by the Political Racketeer

WE can now return to our own problems, and our local affairs and national needs. The World Conference has turned out to be a gathering of political pignions.

Our gravest national problems still remain with us: the public railways and transportation.

A temporary makeshift was adopted at Ottawa last session. It was a compromise measure, in which the legislators gave all the gestures of settlement by a shifting of the rules. Instead of business sagacity we were forced to read of partisan pledges. This did not satisfy public opinion, but only jeopardized the real solution of a project which is costing Canada untold millions each year.

Consolidation of the railways under responsible ownership and individual direction is the real solution.

It is long since the fallacy was born in the minds of men that the public utility must be regulated by the Legislators. And since then, in this and other countries, many public facilities have been regulated to death and destruction.

Deprived of individual initiative, hampered by restrictions, harassed by small-town politicians, government control has driven out the real constructive action which counts in any

Island Status Unsettled

Wrangell Island is in the Arctic ocean, about 109 miles from the Siberian coast. A harbor in the southern part is in latitude 70 degrees 57 minutes north and longitude 178 degrees 10 minutes west. The island is about 70 miles long and 25 miles wide. It was sighted in 1867 by the captain of a United States sailing vessel. In 1881 officers from the United States naval vessels landed on the island and claimed it for this country. The question of ownership is unsettled.

Mocos vs. Courtaulds 7—

Mocos engaged Courtaulds at Cornwall on Saturday. The day was ideal for the game. Mocos had the best of the game in the first half but they couldn't find the goal. Courtaulds scored early in the game and Mocos tried hard to equalize, but it seemed that Moco never could score. First half ended: Mocos 0, Courtaulds 1. The second half of the game saw Courtaulds win by a score of 7-0.

Moco team: J. McCracken, Fishwick, Mackie, Greene, Taylor, R. Kerr, Ferguson, Booth, Ashworth, Laing, H. Parker, H. Warren. The team will have some new players on next Saturday.

Fire-Calls—

An overheated oven in the bakery of Mr. Emile Bourdeau caused some shingles piled nearby to take fire, about 7 a.m., July 3rd. Flames shot to the roof, and the firemen had to fight the stubborn blaze for one hour and a half, finally extinguishing it at 8:30 a.m.

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed a barn belonging to Mr. Magloire Theoret, Grand-Isle on Thursday. The fire had already reached its height when the firemen arrived, but as the barn was a good distance from the river, the firemen were obliged to stand by and watch the barn razed to the ground. Straw and hay in the building aided the progress of the fire.

Tunes to Trap Ants

Gardeners who are troubled by ants might find a tune on the fiddle an excellent preliminary to more drastic measures of extermination, for, according to Dr. H. Eltringham, President of the Entomological Society, certain kinds of ant will respond to high staccato notes from a violin and therefore might be induced to gather round and listen instead of running about like scalded hens. They can recognize each other, it seems, although to the average observer ants look as much alike as two peas, and if a stranger from another colony strolls up they know it—and he knows it, too!

Moreover, if they have a good plan for doing something worth while they can induce others to join them.

Dr. Eltringham tells us, too, that bees can be taught to select boxes containing sugar by their colour, that butterflies can distinguish between apple juice and other liquids by touching them with their feet.

"Did the Mayor show presence of mind when the Town Hall caught fire?"

"Yes, he cancelled the fireworks display arranged for that evening."

Coffee Cans in Hassock

Coffee can hassocks are very good looking and cost practically nothing. Take seven coffee cans, fill them with sawdust and replace the covers. Cover each can with a worn out sock or stocking, and sew the ends down. Place one can in the centre with the other cans surrounding it and you will find that this makes complete circle. Next tie all the cans together with strong picture wire or string if the wire is not available. Pad the outside of the cans with a bit of quilt, blanket or anything of the kind you have available. Over this sew a strip of burlap cut the exact depth of the hassock. Pad the top of the hassock, making the centre a little higher than the rest. For the covering, use a piece of heavy chintz, tapestry or velvet, placing the top on first and sewing it securely to the burlap. Then fit the piece around the side, having it come an inch or two over the bottom. Next, pad the bottom, slightly sewing the padding securely to the sidepiece which overlaps the bottom. Then cover the padding with a piece of satin or similar material that will stand the wear of moving around the floor. The finished hassock is six-sided, substantial, and firm under the feet.

"Good heavens! Who gave you that crack on the head?"

"A bridegroom, for kissing the bride after the ceremony."

"But, surely, he didn't object to that ancient custom?"

"No—but it was two years after the ceremony."

"Daddy, for homework I have to make some sentences into commands. Will you help me?"

"Ask your mother."

Stars in "College Humor"

Famous stars of the screen, radio and sports world will be seen in the huge cast assembled for Paramount's musical comedy hit, "College Humor," which opens Sunday and Monday at the Malone (Grand) Theatre. Bing Crosby, Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie, and George Burns and Gracie Allen head the big cast. Mary Carlisle and Lon Chaney, Jr. are also featured. Three new song hits are introduced in the musical numbers in which the famous O-Rand Co.-Ed chorus appears. Wesley Ruggles directed.

Easy Aids in Cleaning

Use a little linseed oil on a soft cloth for cleaning varnish of all kinds.

Clean mirrors with a pad of tissue paper, sprinkled with methylated spirits.

Clean copper articles which are very dirty with vinegar and salt. Rinse afterwards in warm water and polish with a soft cloth.

Dip a cloth in kerosene and go over the working parts of washing machine, cleansing it from all grease and dirt. Then put a few drops of first grade machine oil in each oil hole.

Fill All Cracks

Before staining and polishing wooden floors all cracks and holes should be filled in and uneven places planed smooth. There are various ways of filling holes, both putty and paper pulp being handy materials, but perhaps the simplest and quickest way of doing this is by the use of plastic wood, a tin of which may be purchased at any paint store or chain store. It is very easy to use, dries rapidly and makes a permanent repair. It takes both stain and polish excellently.

May Need Neutralizing

Milk which has just "turned" will need a small amount of soda to neutralize it and enough baking powder will be needed to leaven the mixture or make it "rise" in other words. An eighth of a teaspoon to a quarter of a teaspoon of soda to a cup of slightly soured milk and the usual amount of baking powder, called for in the recipe should be used.

Baking soda by itself not ordinarily recommended as a leaven, although it often is used alone in making ginger breads and spice or chocolate cakes and cookies. When heated, baking soda generates carbon dioxide which is the great leavening agent in flour mixtures.

Jelly Cake

One-half cup butter or other shortening, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1/2 cup egg yolks, 1 cup jelly, 2 whole eggs, 2 egg yolks, 1 1/2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/4 teaspoon cloves, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1/4 teaspoon salt.

Cream shortening and sugar. Beat in jelly and add half the flour. Mix and sift remaining flour with salt and spices. Beat eggs until very light and add to first mixture. Add remaining flour. Mix well and add sour milk with soda dissolved in it. Stir just enough to make smooth and turn into an oiled and floured cake pan which is 10 by 14 inches. Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven and cover with a boiled frosting made with the whites of two eggs and brown sugar syrup.

The Miracle of the Microphone

We hear a great deal about this machine age and about the increasing domination of mankind by mechanism. Broadcasting plants and receiving sets are electrical mechanisms which are influential not because they can create a miraculous approach to human contact. The fact that radio makes a voice heard by millions is not so wonderful as that it makes a voice which is talking to you. You feel that the speaker is close to you. You can hear his breathing. You can hear him moving the papers he has in his hand. That is why, if you are an average, ordinary, everyday citizen, you will listen to a public man making a speech into the microphone when you would not bother to read the same speech in the newspaper. We are all more easily influenced by personal contact than by impersonal means. We are all susceptible to the influence of the man who has something like the wonderful lamp which Aladdin had only to rub to bring a wonder-working Djinn to do his bidding. So people think that radio is put too largely to trivial use. Not that, if Aladdin were feeling the need of a little amusement, the philosopher would object to his occasionally setting the Djinn to cutting monkeyshines and clownish capers.

"Bill is one of those second story men."

"What! Not a burglar?"

"Oh, no. If his wife doesn't believe the first one he tells her another."

Ostrich Not Set Down "Unclean" in Holy Writ

It has been thought by many commentators that the ostrich was reckoned amongst unclean animals, and that the writer of Leviticus 11:16 meant that bird by the word which is set down as owl in our ordinary used version of the Bible. But it can hardly be considered wise to hold that Moses, the reputed original writer of Leviticus, was so completely ignorant of the natural history of the wilderness that he was misled into confusing the name of an owl for that of the ostrich! Nor were copyists very likely to make such a blunder. Owls do live in desert places, and as experience in the Great American desert of the United States shows, exist in conjunction with serpents upon which they feed.

If unclean at all it would only be on account of its omnivorous habits which lead it to swallow almost anything it can obtain. But most likely the ostrich was left out of consideration altogether in the compilation of the clean and unclean lists, as being unlikely ever to be met with in the Land of Promise.

Although the fact is not mentioned in Holy Writ, it is true that ostriches' eggs have always been used for food by travelers, and there is no authentic old tradition which exempted Jews from such custom.—Exchange.

Roxham by Mrs. John Smith

Delore Demini's Barns Burned—

The barns of Mr. Delore Demini were completely destroyed by fire here on Monday evening. Some of the neighbours noticed the barns bursting into flames about ten o'clock at night. Mr. Demini has no telephone and is a long way from neighbours. Mrs. Wm. Smith, gave the alarm and the neighbours immediately turned out to give what assistance they could. Mr. Demini was away at the time and Mrs. Demini and children had gone to bed so they did not see the fire. The flames spread so rapidly as everything was so dry that it was impossible to save the buildings. Two pigs perished in the fire, also some hens. He also lost his cutter which was stored in one of the buildings. However, they succeeded in keeping the fire away from the house. A large crowd had gathered from Hemmingford by this time. It is unknown how it may have caught fire. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Demini in their loss.

Sour Milk Makes Delicious Cakes, Cookies and Muffins

With the coming of hot weather, every housewife finds herself with varying amounts of sour milk on hand. When there is a quart or more of sour milk, cottage cheese or curd comes in handy. But if there's only one cup or less and there's baking to do, the most satisfactory way to save the milk is to use it in cakes or cookies, muffins or quick breads.

While the acidity of the milk must be considered, the general rule to follow is to use one-half teaspoon soda for one cup of sour milk and omit one teaspoon cream of tartar or two teaspoons baking powder from the recipe.

Fill All Cracks

Before staining and polishing wooden floors all cracks and holes should be filled in and uneven places planed smooth. There are various ways of filling holes, both putty and paper pulp being handy materials, but perhaps the simplest and quickest way of doing this is by the use of plastic wood, a tin of which may be purchased at any paint store or chain store. It is very easy to use, dries rapidly and makes a permanent repair. It takes both stain and polish excellently.

May Need Neutralizing

Milk which has just "turned" will need a small amount of soda to neutralize it and enough baking powder will be needed to leaven the mixture or make it "rise" in other words. An eighth of a teaspoon to a quarter of a teaspoon of soda to a cup of slightly soured milk and the usual amount of baking powder, called for in the recipe should be used.

Baking soda by itself not ordinarily recommended as a leaven, although it often is used alone in making ginger breads and spice or chocolate cakes and cookies. When heated, baking soda generates carbon dioxide which is the great leavening agent in flour mixtures.

Jelly Cake

One-half cup butter or other shortening, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1/2 cup egg yolks, 1 cup jelly, 2 whole eggs, 2 egg yolks, 1 1/2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/4 teaspoon cloves, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1/4 teaspoon salt.

Cream shortening and sugar. Beat in jelly and add half the flour. Mix and sift remaining flour with salt and spices. Beat eggs until very light and add to first mixture. Add remaining flour. Mix well and add sour milk with soda dissolved in it. Stir just enough to make smooth and turn into an oiled and floured cake pan which is 10 by 14 inches. Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven and cover with a boiled frosting made with the whites of two eggs and brown sugar syrup.

The Miracle of the Microphone

We hear a great deal about this machine age and about the increasing domination of mankind by mechanism. Broadcasting plants and receiving sets are electrical mechanisms which are influential not because they can create a miraculous approach to human contact. The fact that radio makes a voice heard by millions is not so wonderful as that it makes a voice which is talking to you. You feel that the speaker is close to you. You can hear his breathing. You can hear him moving the papers he has in his hand. That is why, if you are an average, ordinary, everyday citizen, you will listen to a public man making a speech into the microphone when you would not bother to read the same speech in the newspaper. We are all more easily influenced by personal contact than by impersonal means. We are all susceptible to the influence of the man who has something like the wonderful lamp which Aladdin had only to rub to bring a wonder-working Djinn to do his bidding. So people think that radio is put too largely to trivial use. Not that, if Aladdin were feeling the need of a little amusement, the philosopher would object to his occasionally setting the Djinn to cutting monkeyshines and clownish capers.

"Bill is one of those second story men."

"What! Not a burglar?"

"Oh, no. If his wife doesn't believe the first one he tells her another."

Ostrich Not Set Down "Unclean" in Holy Writ

It has been thought by many commentators that the ostrich was reckoned amongst unclean animals, and that the writer of Leviticus 11:16 meant that bird by the word which is set down as owl in our ordinary used version of the Bible. But it can hardly be considered wise to hold that Moses, the reputed original writer of Leviticus, was so completely ignorant of the natural history of the wilderness that he was misled into confusing the name of an owl for that of the ostrich! Nor were copyists very likely to make such a blunder. Owls do live in desert places, and as experience in the Great American desert of the United States shows, exist in conjunction with serpents upon which they feed.

If unclean at all it would only be on account of its omnivorous habits which lead it to swallow almost anything it can obtain. But most likely the ostrich was left out of consideration altogether in the compilation of the clean and unclean lists, as being unlikely ever to be met with in the Land of Promise.

Although the fact is not mentioned in Holy Writ, it is true that ostriches' eggs have always been used for food by travelers, and there is no authentic old tradition which exempted Jews from such custom.—Exchange.

Heed Nature's Warning

Distaste for good food is only nature's way of telling you to stop stuffing and poisoning yourself. Skip a meal. Skip two or more if necessary to bring back a keen relish for the simplest of foods.

Don't dress your meals with condiments or highly seasoned sauces to whip up a jaded appetite.

Don't drown your vegetables with salt and pepper.

These are all stomach irritants. Learn to enjoy the simplest of foods—though the best of foods—with delicate flavors.

Don't Save Appetite

Leave the table without stuffing while the keen relish still remains. The elaborate course dinner which introduces a new type of food after hunger has been appeased, tempting a new set of taste buds, and mixing foods in hodge-podge combinations leads to many bodily ills.

This rule also applies to the nibbling habit. Avoid lunching between meals—let the stomach rest and digest. Eat only when hungry. Let it be eaten between meals, let it be fruit.

From Day to Day

Thursday

The World Economic Conference, on the verge of collapse early today, was saved from complete failure tonight by united action of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada and President Roosevelt of the United States.

Decision of the conference steering committee this evening will permit the meeting to continue on a restricted agenda, from which all monetary and tariff questions were removed at insistence of France and the European gold bloc.

A sudden switch in the American attitude, dictated in a telephone conversation between the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, placed the United States firmly behind continuation and received immediate, vigorous support from Mr. Bennett.

The energy of Mr. Bennett's appeal in turn won over Neville Chamberlain, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, who had been only lukewarm toward the idea of continuing under present circumstances. When the vote was taken France alone of the twelve nations represented on the steering committee held out for adjournment.

Jimmie Mattern, Texas aviator missing since June 14, when he took off on another leg of his attempted solo flight around the world, is safe in isolated and sparsely-settled Northeastern Siberia.

A telegram received today direct from the flier by the Moscow correspondent of The New York Times said simply:

"Safe at Anadir, Chukotka, Siberia. Jimmie Mattern."

The message was dated at the town of Bocharova. The sending time was 11 p.m., July 5th.

There had been no reports of Mattern since he took off June 14 from Khabarovsk, Siberia, with his objective Nome, Alaska, from where he hoped to head down the home stretch of his long flight.

Anadir, or Anadyr, Chukotka Peninsula, in Northeastern Siberia near the Bering Sea. It is a trading post, 2,605 miles almost due north of Vladivostok.

Capt. Roald Amundsen reached there in 1920 after being lost more than a year and a half in the Arctic regions on one of his dashes to the North Pole.

When the Government sets the seal of its approval on the plans of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission for a high-power station in Montreal, the work will be proceeded with immediately. It was announced by J. Arthur Dupont, director of broadcasting, eastern division, in the course of an interview. Plans are to be submitted in the near future. It is understood, meanwhile, no details of the cost or power of the proposed station are yet available, but it is believed the power will be in the neighborhood of 5,000 watts.

Alive and grinning, David Waterworth, 12 years of age, whose body it was thought had been found in the river in Longue Pointe seen in a sack a week ago Thursday, met the surprised gaze of newspapermen at Montreal Detective Headquarters to-night, a few hours after the afternoon papers had disclosed identity of the victim.

Surrounded by the other members of the Waterworth family, consisting of his father, mother, two brothers and one sister, David laughed and replied when asked if he were alive: "I'm alive all right." He and the family posed for a picture in the corridor of the detective office and a short time later Assistant Inspector Brodeur released the family for whom detectives had been looking for over a week.

With the finding of David and the Waterworth family the sole clue that the detectives had been working on for a week was destroyed in one sweep. The assistant inspector and his men are now at a loss to explain the mystery of the boy's death. It was admitted they would have to start at the beginning again.

The Department is discontinuing altogether this year compensating farmers whose cattle react to the test if they are under the municipal tuberculosis order. However, under the other policies the compensation will be paid as heretofore.

The object of the Department is not primarily to protect the health of the public by this battle against bovine tuberculosis. The protection of the health of the people is a provincial and municipal matter. It is for the authorities to see that milk and milk products free from tubercular germs are provided to the consumers of the Dominion.

The new trade agreement between Austria and Canada went into effect today. It was completed last week. Before the war the trade between the two countries was considerable and it is expected that the new pact will bring back substantial exchange of goods.

Prior to the war, Canada and Austria (Hungary being then included) had a much larger trade than at present, Canada participating in the "most favored nation" clauses of the imperial treaty which then existed. The outbreak of war automatically abrogated that treaty and nothing had been done until now to resume the old trade arrangements.

Special Rolls For Lunch
Rolls made by the following recipe have an unusual method for putting the ingredients together, and are especially nice for luncheons. Another advantage is that an amateur need not fear to attempt making them if the directions are carefully followed.

Follow Directions.
Cream together 1 cake soft compressed yeast, and 1 teaspoon sugar, then set aside. Next cream together a quarter pound butter and half a cup sugar; add 3 well-beaten eggs and 1 cup tepid milk. Now add the yeast mixture that was set aside. Sift together 4 cups flour and 1 level teaspoon salt and add to the above mixture. Stir thoroughly together, then set the bowl containing the dough in a warm place where no cold draft will reach it, and when the dough has doubled in size turn it on to a well-floured bread board. Cut it into two equal parts. Roll each half into a flat circle about one-fourth of an inch thick; spread with melted butter, and with a knife cut the circle into halves, then into fourths, then into eighths, then into sixteenths. Take each of these pie-shaped sections separately and begin at the wide end, roll toward the point. Set the rolls into a baking pan and allow to rise. This will take about three hours. Bake in a moderate oven for about 25 minutes. As a variation one-half of the dough can be rolled into a rectangular sheet, about one-quarter of an inch thick, spread with melted butter and cinnamon, rolled into a cylinder and cut into one and one-half inch pieces. Allow to rise and bake in a moderate oven.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Hanna—
This, the attainment of the 48th anniversary is a matter for congratulation on the part of your relatives, neighbors and friends. We would rejoice with you who do rejoice. So—
On the lawn if it is fine,
In the house if it rains,

See the folks from the Centre,
Friends, both old and new,
For an evening of enjoyment
We gather with you.

While Mrs. John Beattie was cleaning the floor Saturday she slipped and fell striking her shoulder against a table leg, dislocating the shoulder bone. Dr. Abrams was called and at time of writing Mrs. Beattie is suffering considerable.

The ladies of the W. M. S. met at Knox Hall on Thursday afternoon and quilted.

A number of men started work on Monday on the continuation of the good road here from the church east for a short piece.

Destructive Fires.
Mr. Fred Dauphinais had 5 acres of hay cut and bunched in a young orchard which was just beginning to bear fruit when someone passing by carelessly dropped a lighted match or cigarette stub which burned the hay, also destroyed about 50 of the apple trees. If help hadn't been secured the house and barns would have also been destroyed.

Mr. Fernie Beattie had to summon help the past week to check a fire which spread into his farm threatening his wood lot.

Friday four fires could be seen from here. One being on the Altona Rock where 250 foresters and all the available help around were trying to check it. One on the American side south of Covey Hill, and one in Mr. Prevost's at Corbins, so needless to say all were rejoiced when the rain came on Friday night. The ground was parched and the crops in general are only fair, hay and grain being very short and thin, several of the farmers having planted corn and roots the second time.

CHAPTER XXVII

At breakfast the next morning Joe was his old, impeccably smooth self again.

"Did you sleep well?" he asked.

"Never better," Peter said. "It's great what these long conversations will do toward putting a man to sleep."

"I've been for a little gallop along the bridge path," Joe said; "in fact, I have been up since dawn. And now are you two ready to give me your answer?"

"Our answer to what?" Jerry asked, remembering her talk with Joe the night.

"Why on the proposition I made you both last evening."

Jerry looked at Joe in open-mouthed amazement. Was she dreaming, or had she misunderstood him? Had he not promised her that they were safe under her roof? But who could ever predict the caprices of Joe Middleton? He was like the little poem by Edna Millay which now came to Jerry's mind.

And if I loved you Wednesday,
Well, what is that to you?
I do not love you Thursday—
So much is true.
And why you come complaining
Is more than I can see.
I loved you Wednesday—yes—but What?

Is that to me?

Yes, Joe Middleton was as fickle and as unpredictable as the "I" running through Edna Millay's numerous thin volumes. Just before dawn he was sitting on the edge of her bed crying. Now, looking a trifle older and tired, and cynical, he was denying he had ever weakened from his first cruel purpose.

"You haven't forgotten, have you?" Joe asked, lifting his eyebrows while his coffee cup hesitated halfway to his thin lips, poised in slender, nerveless fingers. "You haven't forgotten the terms, I presume?"

"We haven't forgotten anything," Peter said.

"Of course there can be but one answer," Joe said. "I know you are both willing to forget my past, and Peter will leave Chicago quietly and that you, Jerry, will move into the home I have built for you tomorrow—because if you don't agree—"

He pointed out of the window of the pleasant dining room into the flagstone courtyard where half a dozen swarthy-faced men were sitting against a sunny wall with their soft felt hats pulled well down over their eyes.

"You're the world's most infamous liar," Jerry stormed. "It doesn't matter what you promise, ten minutes later you have broken that promise. What did you tell me last night after you had broken into my room? What did you say about the fact that while we were under your roof—?"

"So you broke into Jerry's room!" Peter said, rising from the table and throwing down his napkin. "This has ceased to be funny. I'll break you like a nut."

He took three quick steps and planted a stinging blow on the side of Joe's jaw. Joe stepped back, smiling evilly. He pressed a button and the row of gunmen sprang into action. Men appeared from everywhere.

"Darn you and your rat army," Peter said. "You haven't the guts to fight this out man to man."

"So you think I haven't," Joe sneered. "I'll make you a sporting proposition. I'll leave every one of these men here in the courtyard and fight you with pistols, rapiers, fists or any other weapons you may choose in that clearing down by the lake front."

"And I'll take you up on that proposition so quick it will take your breath away," Peter said. "The weapons I choose are fists."

"You may be a dozen years younger than I am," Joe said, "but I think Jerry will tell you that I am still in pretty good condition."

"We've done enough talking," Peter said. "Tell your cut-throats to stay in the courtyard and come on . . . Jerry, you'll be referee and both seconds in this fight."

"And everything goes short of murder," Jerry said.

"That's the spirit, Jerry," Joe Middleton applauded, as they hurried across the velvet lawn toward the clearing near the pier and the boathouse. "We aren't planning a sparring match."

"I hate fights," Jerry said, panting as she tried to keep up to the men. "I think they are brutal and degrading and bestial. But you are a beast, Joe Middleton and there is only one way to teach you your lesson."

The ring was a circle of smooth surrounded on three sides and part of the fourth by a dense growth of trees. The fourth side was partly lake front where heavy willows screened the view, and the big stone boat-house and pier at which a large speedboat was tied.

There seemed no danger of interruption here as the men, stripped to the waist, squared away for the fight. Jerry found herself to be trembling uncontrollably from the excitement and anticipation. She prayed that Peter would be as strong as Hercules and would turn out to be a combination of Jack Sharkey, Jim London and a couple of judoists experts.

They were a husky pair, however, and Jerry, although she was with Peter to the last breath, could not be certain as they waded into the first engagement which would win. Peter was the younger and the more ruggedly proportioned, but he was a trifle lighter. Then, too, he had just through a battle with the jungle which would have killed a weaker man and had taken its toll from him. Joe, though older, and looking a bit dissipated, was still an agile giant with huge muscles that rippled as he feinted, sidestepped and lunged. He was brown but not so brown as Peter, who was the brown image of a young Greek god.

As Joe stepped in with the sharp snappy uppercuts Jerry had seen him use so effectively on Tony Anzetti, Peter crouched like a tackler on the Notre Dame first string waiting to leap.

He dug his toes into the sod and plunged forward like a steam locomotive in a hurry to go somewhere, struck Joe squarely in the solar plexus with his head, and caught the older man in a bear hug that was like a vise.

Joe went over backward, but managed to secure a strangle hold of the variety Strangler Lewis made famous. He tightened this torture hold upon Peter's neck until Peter broke out in a cold sweat, but a moment later Peter had thrown Joe backward over his shoulder. They were on their feet again, sparring and waiting for an opening.

Joe had seemed a professional boxer in comparison to Tony Anzetti, but in contrast to Anzetti, Peter was himself a boxer of no little ability. He was not so relaxed as Joe, not so trim and neat in the tapping and sparring and feinting, but he was tremendously powerful and one of his blows left red ruin along the side of Joe's jaw. The light was in Peter's eyes, almost blinding him at times it came down so fiercely like a red spotlight on this huge prize ring. And the light shone on the rippling back of Joe's sleek body like light along the gleaming hide of some great cat.

Sometimes Jerry shut her eyes the light was so ferocious. But then her courage would come back and her hatred for Joe would return and she would remember that he had threatened her children.

Jerry herself would have fought for the children. She felt, in fact, that she was fighting.

Her eyes gleamed with the light of battle, and her hair and dress were in disarray.

Every time Joe was his she exulted and every time Peter was struck by one of Joe's slashing right hooks or jabs or uppercuts Jerry felt that she herself had been hit. She found that she was crying fierce little cries, and once when Peter was down for a moment and the Tiger had leaped on top of him Jerry found it hard not to go in there herself.

There they were, up again! How could they fight like that and live? One moment they were down striving for a headlock or a scissors hold, the next they were on their feet slugging and sparring.

The Tiger could scarcely cut the tough brown hide of Peter's face, but Joe's skin was more tender. He was looking ghastly. And then, suddenly, Jerry was very sick of it all. She wanted the fight to stop and she wanted to get away. She was not a frightened girl. She found that she was crying. She looked away at the flaming autumn weeds and the blue lake and the clear sky and wondered why men are such brutes and why in a beautiful spot like this a man and a girl should have to fight an insatiable beast like Joe to save their very lives.

A ruby-throated hummingbird, which should have gone south weeks before, alighted not fifteen feet away from where Jerry was sitting and preened its feathers with his long bill made for extracting the honey from the deepest flowers. Squirrels were gathering nuts under the hickory trees, and while she followed their scampering movements up the trees she saw a wedge of wild geese far above. Then she turned back to the fight again. Peter was down. His eyes were terribly open and his face swollen. Joe was slowly tightening his strangle hold upon his throat.

CHAPTER XXVIII

And then as Jerry had once called to Joe in the battle on the yacht she now called to Peter. Peter was now afraid for himself, only for him, and she pleaded with him to hear her and be strong and pull himself free. Joe was merciless, she told him. He would not hesitate to kill Peter, Jerry cried. "For my sake, Peter, break away."

Somehow that last fearful plea got through to him, and, tired as he was, he made a final mighty effort, tore Joe's arm away from his throat and staggered to his feet.

Joe too stood up, but seemed almost as wasted and done in as Peter. Their arms were heavy and their bodies tired. They fought slowly as if beneath the sea. Their blows were clumsy and ineffectual.

But Peter seemed to be regaining his strength and Jerry urged him on. His youth and clean living were coming to his aid. He now threw in a barrage of blows which seemed to take strength instead of weaken. Joe's head was being knocked from side to side. He was breathing heavily.

Peter drove in a crushing blow which brought him to his knees. Joe was up. Then down again for an easy fourteen.

And now Jerry was holding Peter in her arms and kissing the places he had been hurt. They weren't even looking at Joe and they weren't thinking about him. They were only aware of each other, and that the day was very clear and bright, and that Peter had won. There seemed to be something that they wanted to say to each other. Something desperately important and very beautiful, but they could not quite determine what it was. And Jerry helped Peter down to the clear lake and bathed his face with her handkerchief, and Peter, despite his hurts was very gay.

"This was a splendid week-end after all," Peter laughed, and Jerry kissed his cut lips and told him not to try to talk too much.

"You are perfectly magnificent, Peter," she said. "You looked so young and clean, and he so cruel and villainously old and dissipated."

"It's a shame to have to beat up an old fellow like this," Peter said. "Let's take him a drink of water from the spring over there."

"Well, we could unbend that much, I guess," Jerry said.

But when they had started back to Joe with the drink they realized that he was gone. And although the house was not visible from the clearing, they realized he had undoubtedly gone for help.

Then they heard men running and they knew they had no reason at all to be sorry for Joe Middleton, and that they must think of some way to escape that moment or they would be cornered in the clearing or hunted out of the brush and shot like prairie chickens. The two which had perhaps been used to shoot turtles.

"Good girl, Jerry," Peter said approvingly as she showed him the two big Colts, but he laughed at the 22. "We can't do very much with that popgun, I'm afraid."

"Popgun or not, I'm taking it along," Jerry said.

How long it seemed to take them to cover that five miles! In reality it was scarcely more than a few minutes, but to Jerry's overwrought mind their terrific speed through the water was all too slow. But now they were pulling up to the big pier past lovely homes bordering the lake, and now they were leaping out and tying the boat to the wharf.

"Our kingdom for a fast car?" said Jerry, "where do you think we'll find one?"

"Let's try that garage up the street," Peter suggested, and the two set off at a run, much to the curiosity of the populace.

"Have you a car we can rent in a hurry?" Jerry said as they came up breathless.

"Well, now, let me see," drawled the easy-going garage man, filling his pipe slowly and conscientiously. "What do you want it for?"

"Oh, good heavens," said Peter, "do we have to stop to go into that?"

"It ain't that I mind letting you have the car," said the garage man, making himself more comfortable in his chair, "but I'd like to know if I'm ever going to get it back."

"You'll get it back," Peter snapped. "Can't you tell honest people when you see them?"

"I'm not so sure you two look honest," drawled the man.

And then it was that Peter and Jerry realized for the first time what a peculiar sight they presented. Jerry was only reasonably rumpled and disarrayed as any girl might be after a sixty-mile-an-hour speedboat ride. But Peter, who had hastily put on his shirt after the battle but had torn from head to toe.

"We can't stop to argue," Jerry said in her most winsome manner, "but I am sure that a fine-looking, intelligent man like yourself will understand that we are in difficulty and will help us out."

"Trying to elope?" asked the garage man.

"Well, perhaps," said Jerry. "At least that's as good an explanation as any. And now how about the car?"

"You'll have to sign up and leave a good-sized deposit," the man said. "Here, I'll give you $100," Peter said. "And now let's get going."

"One hundred dollars will do a great deal these days," said the man, leading them back into the garage, which smelled strongly of gas and oil.

The car he showed them was impossible. Both Peter and Jerry realized that if it would do thirty miles an hour downhill before a strong wind it would be a miracle.

"You must have something else," Jerry said frantically. "I tell you we are in a hurry."

"I'll make it $200," Peter said.

And so at last they were given an eight-cylinder car with plenty of speed and were ready to pull out of the garage when up to the gas pumps outside drew a long black sedan.

"The Hidden Chateau"

A Dramatic Story of Vancouver Island

By Frank Giolma

Hayden Cartwright, the son of an Eastern Canadian millionaire, is ambitious to be a detective. Having read all the famous detective stories he has joined the Vancouver branch of the unique Interprovincial Police Force of Canada with the idea of combining his theoretical knowledge with practical experience.

He and his friend, Jack Hilton, are detailed to attend the winter festivities of an exclusive country club taking place in their forest clubhouse, "The Hidden Chateau," situated upon a mountain plateau in the heart of Vancouver Island.

Although ostensibly sent to take part in a play they are also to discover what they can about one of the club members who is suspected by the police of being a blackmailer.

While struggling through a snow-storm along the snow-covered trail to "The Hidden Chateau" they find the suspected blackmailer's body in the trail cabin. He has been shot. On arriving at "The Hidden Chateau" they discover that the murderer must be in the chateau, which is now entirely cut off from the outside world by heavy snow. From this point the scene of the story is confined to the chateau, the whole action taking place within three days in this unique setting. Dramatic developments follow one another quickly, the action gaining in speed and intensity as the story moves swiftly and directly to its final thrilling climax.

Patriotism

By MISS MARGARET MCKELL

We, who have studied the history of different races of peoples and their countries, do not fail to read and re-read about the lives of different ambitious and energetic persons, whose work and actions have helped in their own country, in some way or other, whether spiritually, intellectually, physically or socially.

Every country develop in its people all four sides of their lives in order that they be fully educated. This is a most difficult undertaking. For example, a boy may be a champion at boxing or perhaps hockey, but has failed to think seriously of his intellectual, spiritual or social life. It is fine to be a champion, but if he has neglected the other sides of his life, then the country is losing by his life.

The Greeks developed themselves physically. Both boys and girls spent most of their childhood making their bodies strong and beautiful.

The land of Palestine with its Biblical scenes and stories help us to think of the life of Christ, the standard of our thoughts and lives.

Many people have thought of education. England, Germany, France, and other countries have their colleges and universities where the youth of our land can be educated, where professional may be learned, and where active part may be taken in social life as well.

Canada also realizes that youth is the time to prepare leaders for this great dominion, nor is she behind other countries in giving to help the world's problems, men with great intellect.

Canada is practically a young country promising wealth from her mines, farms and forests. But no matter how many natural resources it has, if it has not to look after these resources, men and women who can stand four-square to any problem that confronts, falls far below what it should be.

Children will some day be taking the place of the men and women who are working now. So just as an employer looks for an all round good employee, then Canada must have capable persons to keep her the country she is, and help make her a better country to live in.

Not more than a couple of hundred miles from here, a meeting was held for men. Three leading men spoke on "Thinks I Wish I Had Known Before I Was Twenty-one." One of the gentlemen had written twenty-two young men, asking them the question, to name the things I wish I had known before I was twenty-one. Here are the answers he received and in these answers we get ideas of how to educate the youth of Canada, so as to better themselves and raise the standard of better living in this beautiful Dominion of ours.

I wish I had known:

1. What I was going to do for a living—what my life work would be.

2. That my health after 30 depended in a large degree on what I ate before I was 21.

3. How to take care of my money.

4. The commercial asset of being neatly and sensibly dressed.

5. That a man's habits are mighty hard to change after he is 21.

6. That a harvest depends upon the seed sown—wheat produces wheat, thistles bring forth thistles, ragweeds will spoil a good pasture, and wild oats once sown will surely produce all kinds of misery and unhappiness.

7. That things worth while require time, patience and work.

8. That you can't get something for nothing.

9. That the world would give me just what I deserved.

10. That by the sweat of my brow would I earn my bread.

11. That a thorough education not only pays better wages than hard labour, but it brings the best of everything else, namely, more enjoyable work, better food, more of the whole luxuries and pleasures of life, better folks to live and deal with, and best of all, the genuine satisfaction that you are somebody worthy of respect, confidence and the priceless gift of friendship.

12. That honesty is the best policy, not only in dealing with my neighbours, but also in dealing with myself and my God.

13. The value of absolute truthfulness in everything.

14. The folly of not taking other people's advice.

15. That everything which my mother wanted me to do was right.

16. That father wasn't such an old fogey after all, if I had done as he wished, I would be very much better off physically, mentally and morally.

17. What it really meant to father and mother to rear their son.

18. What hardships and disappointments would be entailed by my leaving home against my parents' wishes.

19. More of the helpful and inspiring parts of the Bible, particularly the four books dealing with the life of Christ.

20. The greatness of the opportunity and joy of serving a fellow man.

21. That Jesus Christ is with me as an elder Brother and Friend in every activity and relationship of life.

22. That God's relationship to me is just as helpful and delightful as that of a good shepherd toward his sheep or a father towards his son.

This following tribute to the men of an earlier day who welded two races into one nation is particularly appropriate for Dominion Day anniversary.

"Grey head, behind grey walls, so deep in thought,

As through the night of wearisome debate,

They laboured until morn, all else forgot;

Except the weighing of a country's fate

With gratitude will people ever pay.

In homage to the wisdom that achieved

The founding of a nation in a way.

That threads of varying patriotism weaved

Into a tie, then bound from east to west

All races into happy unity.

By heritage is Canada twice blest,

With nature's wealth and opportunity.

Content in peace, in war attained renown.

No brighter star yet shines in Britain's crown."

—Charles M. Nixon

Then—

"So long as there are homes to which men turn at close of day,

So long as there are homes where children are, where women stay;

If love and faith and loyalty be found across those hills,

A stricken nation can recover from its gravest ills.

So long as there are homes where fires burn, and there is bread;

So long as there are homes where lamps are lit and prayers are said;

Although a people falter through the dark and nations grope—

With God Himself back of these little homes, we have our hope."

HEALTH

by

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

WALKING TOWARDS HEALTH

Popularly, seeing is believing and for that reason, development of muscles is regarded as being the most important if not the sole result of exercise. Much more important, however, is the effect of exercise on the body as a whole. There is no health advantage in large muscles, but strong muscles are needed to promote the better functioning of the vital organs of the body.

The way to strengthen muscles is to use them. The best way to use them is to do the things which we enjoy doing, thereby gaining the strength required to perform those tasks better and with greater ease and pleasure. There is a mistaken idea, which is commonly held, to the effect that exercise must be felt if it is to do good. In reality, soreness after exercise is due either to small tears in the muscle fibres or to the accumulation of waste materials—the product of muscular activity. Both conditions are painful and harmful. The former can and should be avoided by going slowly; the latter, by exercising in moderation.

The muscles of the back and abdomen are used or exercised, and so are kept strong and healthy, by movements which bend or twist the trunk. This is true whether the movement be lifting weights, or in gardening or walking. The arm and shoulder muscles are used in movements which might be called swinging, striking, grasping or throwing.

The arm and shoulder muscles are valuable in that their development promotes skill in those acts in which the arms are used. Leg muscles are needed as a means of locomotion, for despite the motor-car, we are still largely dependent on our legs to get us to our destinations.

Walking is the best exercise for keeping the muscles of the legs and abdomen in good condition. It has the great advantage that nearly everyone, at any time and in any place, has the opportunity to walk. Walking should be somewhat faster than a stroll; the arms should swing freely. Another great advantage of walking is that it can be done regularly each day, which is the best way to exercise. To have a destination makes the walk more pleasant, and gives a sense of satisfaction in the accomplishment.

Exercise should be adjusted to age and sex. One hour's walk daily, or its equivalent, may be considered the minimum amount of exercise required to keep the body healthy.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Shopkeeper: "No, sir. I'm sorry I haven't one; but I could let you have a very nice lawn mower."

The Dundee Presbyterian Church planned to hold a social on the beautiful lawn of Mr. W. J. Fraser on July 7th, but owing to the showery weather it was held in the Community Hall. Supper was served in the dining-room to a large gathering. Guessing the weight of the four-storied fruit cake, donated by Mrs. W. J. Fraser proved interesting, as many tried their luck but only two were successful. Mrs. T. B. Pringle, Huntingdon, and Miss Lizzie Ferguson, Montreal, each receiving half of the delicious cake. Dr. Morley, in a few humorous remarks, called the gathering to order and the following delightful programme was received with hearty applause and encores: Violin solo, Mr. Thos. McFarlane, Elgin; Address, Mayor H. B. Gardiner, Dundee; Comic Song, Mr. Fred Donnelly, Glenelg; Address, Rev. Mr. Houghton, Dundee; Violin solo, Mr. John McPhie, Dundee; Address, Mr. Smith, Dundee; Song, Mr. Fred Donnelly, Violin solo, Mr. Thos. A Difference of Opinion About Canadian Women

THE President of the Red Rose Tea Company believes that women are not interested in the number of cups a pound of tea can make. Despite his forty years experience in supplying Red Rose Tea to Canadian homes, I, his Advertising Man, differ with Mr. President.

Most Canadian women are experiencing reduced incomes. They are keener today than ever before on obtaining the most for their money. And so I figured that you and every other woman would want to know about the economy of Red Rose Tea as well as about its excellence of flavor and strength.

The result of an experiment enables me to tell you that Red Rose Tea gives you 18 to 47 more cups per pound than inferior tea selling at only a few cents less.

Here is true economy you'll appreciate — an economy based not on price but on value — on the satisfaction and enjoyment derived from good tea that at the same time gives you most for your money.

At last the grocer, losing patience, called sarcastically to his assistant: "John, unchain number seven and let it walk in."
