

CITY DEFICIT IS $156,632

Scales are tipped by unbudgeted $$$ for Metro payment

Westmount has a deficit for the fiscal year '65 of $156,632 — and one way of looking at it can put the blame (if you want to use the word) squarely on the gift to Metro.

The gift to Metro was, as residents doubtless remember, $300,000 — and without that payment, the fiscal figures would have shown a surplus of about the size of the current deficit.

Revenue and expenditure data follows:

Municipal Association fights tax increases; lodges school appeal

Westmount Municipal Association has joined other suburban citizens' associations in protesting the property assessment increase recently proposed by the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal.

In a letter to ratepayers, WMA President Colin M. Russel described the 19 per cent boost in the municipality as "excessive" and said those concerned "are justified in protesting without delay."

The increase means that taxpayers would find the valuation of their property increased by 19 per cent for school tax purposes over the valuation set by the City of Westmount for municipal tax assessment.

The WMA noted that while the school board has decided to increase valuations by 19 per cent, the Montreal Metropolitan Corporation has set an equalizing factor of 12 per cent.

The letter follows:
Dear Fellow Citizen:
"You have undoubtedly received a letter from Mayor Tucker concerning the 19% increase in valuation imposed on Protestant taxpayers by the Greater Montreal Protestant School Board and on Neutral panel taxpayers by the Board and by the Montreal Catholic School Commission. This compares with an increase of 12% for purposes of the Montreal Metropolitan Corporation.

The Westmount Municipal Association considers this 19% rate of increase to be excessive and

Time running out on Selby street

By JIMMIE SOUVIENS

Westmount may not be using the classified advertising departments of the newspapers to try and find one — but for the Selby street situation, they certainly need a miracle-worker, and a good one.

Granted all the good will in the world, and no delays whatsoever along the line, Westmount wouldn't be out of the red-tape by spring, on a proposal to build blight-reducing housing for ousted Selbyites, and the word of the officials on the Trans-Canada is that the demolition balls will be swinging at the end of the chains on Selby street by July 1, 1967.

That's how all looks from here.

If I was a resident of Selby street, I'd be out looking for a place to live, right now; and I'd keep right on looking until I found one.

RED TAPE

Let's take a look at the details:

Goldyn Sunderland, the city's relocation officer, has turned in a massive report on the situation — covering a 90-acre site, with a master plan.

This will be studied, let us say, by councillors for the balance of July.

And even this will be a quick study, for the document is thicker than your phone book, and more detailed.

After study the council would presumably wish to meet with the citizens' groups involved, and then discuss the situation and adopt a program.

Once such a program was adopted, the city would be faced with the proposal of visiting Quebec and getting the provincial government to agree that it was alright for Westmount to get together with the Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation.

And this is only the beginning.

STUDY

CHMC will have to take time out to study the proposal, to see what they are being asked to advance money on, and then if this hurdle is crossed, the proposal of CHMC will have to be adopted by council and an agreement signed.

Then, of course, there is something to work with and the architects will get down to business and come up with some

Mayor Tucker writes:

Tax hike confirmed; appeal ends Friday

Friday, July 8, is the last day for appeal to the school authorities concerned in any protest regarding the proposed increases in school taxes, Mayor M. L. Tucker notes in the final paragraph of a letter sent by the mayor's office to ratepayers in the mail over the past few days.

The letter was dated June 30, but with Saturday, Sunday and a holiday intervening, leaves little time for concerted action on the part of citizens.

The letter, which is self-explanatory, follows:
TO WESTMOUNT TAXPAYERS:-

The council has been served notice by independent authorities of their decision to increase valuations over and above the present Municipal Valuation Roll —

A Westmouter in Great Britain

'Mac' finds his right niche

by Stephen Schofield

"Mac," a friend of mine, stood at the corner of Greene avenue and Sherbrooke street one day, not knowing what to do. Bewildered and lost without direction or objective, he felt like a leaf in the breeze. The moment was crucial.

He had been at sea for some years with the Merchant Service; and he had been a bookkeeper for a firm of accountants. He was not going anywhere and would never, he knew, arrive anywhere with either. And he was 33 years of age.

During leisure at sea he read quite widely, solid books, and he knew that no man can be himself until he gets out of himself into work with which he identifies himself. But as to what kind of work he should undertake, he had no idea.

In this quest he sought and found, not in Westmount but in Montreal, some sort of vocation expert named — I think — Brown, who queried him with all kinds of questions, again and again, for several days, costing $100.

At the end of this interrogation the expert told Mac he should sell something, anything at all; what he sold did not matter.

Mac secured a job as a salesman for an old Montreal firm on St. Paul street which sent him to their most barren territory, the province of New Brunswick.

More Lines

Within two years he was exceeding his quota by more than 70 per cent and soon became their best salesman in eastern Canada, happily covering the province and taking on a few other lines, and exchanging his battered car for a new one.

In Montreal his boss was delighted and from time to time invited him to relax for a few days in a reserved suite at the Sheraton Hotel. This seemed to be a waste of time to Mac, who preferred to push on with his work.

Finally the boss offered Mac the managership of the firm's Ottawa branch, which he refused because his wife, Marion, did not want to live in Ottawa. And that, as some married men know, settled that.

But this is odd because Marion has many friends in Ottawa, where she was born and raised; and at her age of 32 it is against all normal instinct not to want to go home again to familiar haunts and faces.

"I have had quite enough of smart hats and cocktail parties and dressing up," Marion told me. "I would rather live in the country and let my children run around in dungarees."

So that is what she does. And she wears dungarees a good deal herself. She and Mac live quietly and remote from any city in a house on the St. John river, which laps gently along the edge of their acre.

Although Marion misses Mac a good deal during his long jaunts throughout the province, they both much prefer the tranquility of New Brunswick.

Bank letter lauds British Columbia

The rapid development in British Columbia of "a prosperous economy and a modern society" is reviewed and analyzed in the current issue of the Commercial Letter of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Canada's west coast was unknown to Europeans for more than two centuries after development began in the east, and growth was slow until the 1850's. The Commercial Letter reports that in 1855 the total population of European origin on Vancouver Island was 774, and the population on the mainland was similarly sparse.

Then the discovery of alluvial gold deposits on the Columbia and Fraser Rivers brought thousands of gold miners and triggered the sequence of events that transformed a fur-trading frontier into the prosperous and diversified economy of today.

This year British Columbia is celebrating the centennial of the union of the mainland and Vancouver Island in 1866. It became a province of Canada in 1871.

"As an important supplier of the industrial world's needs for forest and mine products, the province is on the threshold of a second century of illustrious growth," the Commercial Letter says.

DIVERSIFIED

The terrain and climate are as diversified as the economy. The climate varies from near-Mediterranean to tundra in different areas, with the warm Japanese Current and the series of mountain ranges exerting their influence on temperature and rainfall.

Forests cover 58 per cent of British Columbia and are "the most valuable directly exploitable resource of the province". Estimated value of forest production in 1965 was $980 million, and new capital investment reached a record high level with the erection of an estimated $250 million worth of new manufacturing facilities.

"The forest industries of British Columbia have an enormous growth potential," the Commercial Letter says. "With sustained-yield management, more complete utilization of the tree itself and the growing importance of the interior timber stands, the forest industries can be expected to continue their leading role."

The manufacturing sector ranks first in the province in terms of value of output, with a 1965 total of more than $2.9 billion. Wood and paper product industries continue to be dominant, but there have been expansions in recent years in the production of transportation equipment, iron and steel products, smelting, metal fabrication, machinery, printing and publishing and chemicals.

The substantial growth in tertiary industries — with concentration on trade, service, transportation and communications, and finance and related activities — "reflects clearly the increasing maturity and strength of British Columbia's economy."

The mining industry has shown continuous growth, and output in 1965 was $279 million. The metals with the greatest output were zinc, lead, copper and iron ore, and during the year the province became an important producer of molybdenum. Crude petroleum, natural gas and natural gas products, asbestos and coal were the leading non-metals.

While minister to France, Thomas Jefferson studied French cuisine and wrote a cook book for use in the kitchen at Monticello.

Local Resident adopts Hong Kong girl aged 9

Mrs. Marion Dickman, of 3621 Cedar Ave., Westmount, has financially "adopted" Chang Sai Ming, a nine-year-old Chinese girl living in Hong Kong, through the Foster Parents Plan.

This sweet and friendly little girl lives amidst the squalor and congestion of refugee Hong Kong. Sai Ming is a victim of bitter want and deprivation. She never went to kindergarten, which in Hong Kong is required for admission to the first grade. There is almost no free schooling in Hong Kong, and the monthly tuition fees are always a severe strain on an already limited budget. Sai Ming did attend a simple reading and writing class at a roof-top school.

With PLAN aid she was able to transfer last year to an accredited, formal school where she is now enrolled in the second grade, paying a monthly school fee of $2.63. After school she always helps her mother with the household chores and caring for her younger siblings. In her spare time, Sai Ming likes to skip rope or play hide-and-seek. She expresses her desire to become a school teacher when she grows up. PLAN aid, helps to make her dreams more realistic.

Originally from the Mainland, Sai Ming's parents fled to Hong Kong in order to escape from a life subjected to Communist domination. They both received a few years of schooling, but they are still among the poorly educated of their country. Since arriving in Hong Kong, Sai Ming's father has worked for a printing company. Unfortunately, his employment was interrupted last year by a five month stay in the hospital and a two month rest period at home. It was thought that he suffered from lung cancer, but an operation indicated that he was afflicted with tuberculosis. Once recovered, he resumed his work and now earns about $52.63 per month. To supplement the family income, his wife engages in piece-work at home and earns approximately $7.02 a month. She is anemic and receives vitamin pills through PLAN's special medical care. Fortunately, all the children are in good health.

Besides Sai Ming, three other children in our family are able to go to school. They are her brother, Sai Ping (12), and two sisters, Sai Ching (10) and Pik Wah (6). Their combined monthly tuition fees are $3.86. The younger children are two brothers, Mung Shan (5) and Sai Hong (3), and a baby sister, Sai Fan.

When PLAN first learned of the desperate plight of Sai Ming and her family, aid was given immediately through the goodness of a Foster Parent now unable to continue his generous support. Mrs. Dickman's timely "adoption" assures the continuance of all PLAN benefits which include a monthly cash grant of $8.00, clothing, supplies, and special medical care.

We Say

Selby street residents not 'owed a living'

WIDESPREAD sympathy is felt for Westmount's Selby street area residents.

Their cause — termination of their tenures, many of long standing — is well known.

They are, in the first instance, victims of progress: specifically, the Trans-Canada Highway to be built where their homes lie.

Like the Dorchester-street-widening evictees before them, and others who lived in the paths of private projects on Elm, Wood and other avenues, they are faced with finding new homes.

IT is safe to say that those who owned their abodes have been or will be fairly compensated for their material losses. The record in this province in expropriations is generally good. The law and public authority are just.

Sentimental and other unmeasurable values, rarely compensated, are of course what evoke the sympathy, which cannot be traded for cash.

What lends piquancy to the Selbyites' situation is that many are not the compensated landlords; they are tenants whose grievance is directed, not only to the federal, provincial and municipal authorities who decided to put an expressway there, but that of most tenants for most landlords: "They've got re-couped for their real estate investment; but we're being turned out of our homes — we LIVE here!"

Selby street has offered these families, for many years, substantial residences of (superficially at least) good address, Westmount, at rents far more reasonable than paid by most families of similar circumstances in the Montreal district. There are detractions — an aging area, proximity to industrial activity, railroad tracks, etc. — but many advantages such as access to Westmount's parks, library, schools and other amenities, closeness to downtown for jobs, shopping, amusements.

We simply cannot go along with the plaint that provision should have been made for equivalent accommodation for these people before Selby street became no more.

We simply cannot go along with the idea, from any class or segment of society, that public authority must continue to maintain individual citizens in the circumstances in which public authority may, for public, legitimate and in this case pressing purposes, find and uproots them.

GOVERNMENT in this country has no tradition of general public housing for private citizens and we hope it never shall. It is one aspect of our lives — our private preserves — from which most of us should hope the socializers in government at all levels will keep their cotton-picking hands.

To our many friends in Selby street we feel bound to say: You're not alone, but our best advice is self-help comes before all special pleading. If you haven't already done so, get out like your fellow citizens and buy or rent the best possible new homes anywhere to suit your tastes and pocketbooks.

Biography of Streets Gladstone avenue

Gladstone avenue extends from 4112 Dorchester boulevard north to 4124 St. Catherine street west.

This is a very short narrow street, but extracts from the Council Minutes show that there was a good deal of controversy about it.

Nov. 1890 — "That as Gladstone avenue has not been made in accordance with the by-laws, respecting the width of the street — the council can not undertake to do any work thereon."

May 1891 — "the necessity of something being done with Gladstone avenue as it is in very bad sanitary condition."

May 1893 — "A petition from proprietors and tenants requesting the Council to put Gladstone avenue in the same state as regards to roadway and lighting as other streets. Motion to do so was lost."

July 1894 — "The Gladstone avenue be macadamized."

Dec. 1902 — "Petition from the proprietors praying that the street be finally taken into the possession of the town."

April, 1903 — "The Committee recommends that the petitioners (Dec. 1902) be informed that Council is not prepared to accede to their request."

March, 1906 — "Committee recommends that the avenue be recorded in Street Record Book."

March, 1911 — "The paving of Gladstone avenue from St. Catherine street to Dorchester street in asphalt."

June, 1920 — "Committee authorizes the paving of streets and lanes, one of which is Gladstone avenue."

March, 1932 — "That Council approves the cost for sewers and paving roads and lanes. The cost of paving Gladstone avenue was $670.70."

June, 1933 — "That Gladstone avenue be a one-way street in a southern direction."

JUNE, 1935 — "That Gladstone be restored as a two-way traffic street."

June 1938 — "That no vehicle be parked on the whole east side of the avenue."

William Ewart Gladstone

Gladstone (1809-98) was born in Liverpool. The 'Gladstones' were of ancient Border stock. John Gladstone became a Merchant Prince of Liverpool, Member of Parliament and Scottish landlord. His second wife was of Highland birth. Their famous son, William, recalls his mother as a beautiful and admirable woman, and his father as a strong-natured man, with a deep sense of duty.

William went to Eton, and spoke later of his slow development there. Under Hawtrey and Keats he learned to work well. Arthur Hallam remarked his good looks, his glowing scholarship, his remarkable contributions to debate, and above all the fine influence of his character. He went to Christ Church, Oxford, where he founded a debating society called W.E.G.

The Duke of Newcastle asked him to stand for Newark, and in 1833 he took a seat in the Assembly, which he charmed and dominated for 60 years. His own choice would have been the church, but his father made him a statesman, and he soon justified his choice.

It was in defence of slave labor as administered on his father's estate in Demarara, that he made his maiden speech: He was Lord of Treasury in Peel's government and Under Secretary for the Colonies. When Peel's government fell, Gladstone devoted himself to reading and the preparation of his famous book, "The State in its Relation with the Church."

He married Catherine Glynn of Hawarden, and enjoyed many years of happiness and a delightful and historic home. He returned to office with Peel in 1841 as Vice-President of the Board of Trade, and drew up a revised tariff. — a long step towards free trade. At thirty-six he was one of the most striking figures in the House of Commons. His superb health, his extraordinary power of work and rich imagination impressed all. His fine manners, his intellectual face, his deep-set flashing eyes, his erect and dignified bearing, and his voice of incomparable flexibility, gave him a natural equipment such as few orators have possessed.

Prime Minister

When a coalition government under Lord Aberdeen came to power, Gladstone became Chancellor of the Exchequer, which he was to make one of the greatest offices of the State. When Palmerston succeeded Lord Aberdeen, Gladstone caused great surprise by joining him. This act meant his enlistment with the Liberal Party. He worked with Russell, who succeeded Palmerston. When Russell retired, Gladstone was head of the Liberal Party and in 1868 he became Prime Minister. He resigned in 1874, but in 1880 he took up the burden for the second time.

He resigned again in 1885, and after the general election he declared Home Rule for Ireland. He became Prime Minister for the third time, but when his proposal for Home Rule was defeated he resigned, and for six years led the Liberal Party in Opposition. In 1892, he once more became Prime Minister, his fourth term of office.

This grand old man spent his closing years happily at Hawarden, devoting himself to literature and writing.

YOU SAY Resident writes about traffic

Dear Sir:

The article on page 1 "Arrows-arrow everywhere but ne'er an arrow for me" leaves me quite cold.

I thank your sympathy with both drivers is quite misplaced. If there is a spot in the city where the signals are well marked it is at Victoria and Sherbrooke. Arrows on the streets well before the driver reaches the corner show which lane he should be in and if he gets in the wrong one, he certainly isn't paying much attention to signs, or signals — a fault evidenced by a good number of drivers both in Westmount and in Montreal.

May I say that that particular corner, as far as I am concerned, is a treat for pedestrians — if drivers pay attention to the signals — as a pedestrian does have a chance to cross without being cut off from all sides.

My one pleasure in the article is that a police car was around at the time and cautioned him, and I don't think the officer can be blamed for not noticing the other offender; in today's traffic conditions he would almost need eyes in the back of his head. So instead of sympathy for the poor driver who had to turn right when he didn't really want to and possibly delay him all of five minutes, have a little praise for the police officer who saw what happened and instead of ignoring it, did something about it. At least one more driver on Victoria Avenue will watch out for the signals.

Yours very truly,
L. M. Rowe,

Sir:

Of course we pay taxes federal and provincial and water tax too and from our rent our landlords pay the municipal tax. If you sir, have an old age pension, our taxes help this along too. We are not a separate species, just good citizens looking for something that is so hard to find, and concerned as to the future of our children when our accommodation is due to be taken away.

It's not the investments you store up in this world that counts, it's the good you do and anyone that denies children a home will have to account to someone some day. This whole thing reminds me of the story of Scrooge (Dickens).

Westmount Firemen will hold their third annual Blood Donor Clinic, Wednesday, July 13th, at Victoria Hall.

The Red Cross Clinic will be held in the Banquet Hall, from 3:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and from 7:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

This year's committee chairman Fireman Jean Forget, assisted by Fireman Patrick Geraghty, of the International Association of Fire Fighters, Local 981, have informed us that this year's clinic is expected to collect better than 300 pints of blood.

TWO MINUTES

WITH THE BIBLE
BY CORNELIUS R. STAM, PRES.
BEREAN BIBLE SOCIETY
CHICAGO 35, ILLINOIS

"And when it was day. He called unto Him His disciples; and of them He chose twelve, whom also He named apostles" (Luke 6:13).

Many people fail to distinguish between our Lord's disciples and His apostles. They suppose they are the same. This is incorrect, however, for our Lord had a multitude of disciples while He had only a few apostles. His apostles were chosen from among His disciples, as we learn from the above passage from Luke's gospel.

A disciple is a follower; an apostle is a "sent one". A disciple is a learner; an apostle is a teacher. There is a great lesson here for us all to learn.

We must come before we can go. We must follow before we can be sent. We must learn before we can teach. We must listen to the Lord before we can speak for the Lord.

"Thus saith the Lord," was the familiar phrase with which the Old Testament prophets began their messages. But at the head of the long list of Old Testament prophets we find Samuel, a young lad, saying: "Speak Lord, for Thy servant heareth" (1 Sam. 3:9).

Before we can do or say anything for God, then, we must listen to God. This explains why the reading and study of the Word of God is so important.

First, salvation itself comes by hearing and believing God's Word, especially about Christ, and His death for our sins. Rom. 10:17 says: "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God," and 1 Pet. 1:23: "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Then, having been saved, we can serve God acceptably only by diligent study of His Word. Perhaps the most important passage in the Bible on this subject is II TIM. 2:15:

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

Christian Science

Christian Science Churches Holy Communion Services July 10. Communion Services will be held in Christian Science churches throughout the world. This is a semi-annual occasion at which, in many of the branches of The Mother Church, new members are formally received. Among the special observances followed by all the churches are when the First Reader reads the Church Tenets in their entirety, and when the congregation kneels in silent communion — the only occasion on which kneeling forms a part of a Christian Science church service.

In the reading of the week's Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Sacrament," emphasis will be laid upon the inability of ritual and ceremony to take the place of obedience, humility, and spiritual understanding.

Unity Boys' Club gets into summer with a flourish

By CHARLIE HOWES

Like an opening of a Shakespearian production the Unity Boys Club summer program entered on cue and when the curtain opened the actors were on stage and the audience in its place. A rousing opening production number (the Unity Boys' Club song) immediately had the complete gathering well involved and from there on in the opening day was a great success. These morning assemblies are ideal for putting the show on the road each and every day and will continue for the next five weeks of activities.

BRAZIL THEME

Brazil Day: Thursday, July the 14th will of course be the highlight of the week. This festival will take place in the gym and will feature exciting games, colorful booths and fun for all based on a Brazilian theme. Other program activities for the week will include trips to St. Helen's Island and to the Verdun Natatorium for cool refreshing swims. The Craft Shop, which by the way is the coolest spot in the club, in the basement, will keep fingers and minds hopping to keep up to the projects which have been planned. Peanut necklaces, place mats, wooden jewelry and miniature animals will be created by the Craft ones. The gym will be active with deck tennis, skateboard

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

As our canoe gently rounded the point we all had a glimpse of the tall bird standing motionless in the shallow water, its graceful figure and plumed head reflected in the glassy surface. Then it was off and away, the big, blue-grey wings carrying it slowly up and over the tree-tops before we had a chance to see the long legs sticking out behind and the long neck neatly folded up. However, we had already recognized the bird as a Great Blue Heron and not that other long-legged big bird, a Crane, which would have held its neck stretched out to its fullest capacity.

Long legs have been given to birds that find their food in shallow water. The Great Blue Heron wades in until the water about its long toes is several inches deep, then stands silently watching for prey to pass that way. A long neck is necessary, and a long, slim bill too, in order to reach down into the water and snatch up a small fish, a frog, or possibly a water snake.

Sandpipers Too

Other long-legged birds that we Canadians may see on our inland waters as well as on our coasts are the Sandpipers. These are comparatively small — some very small indeed. Maybe you have come across the well known Spotted Sandpiper, because every little Canadian lake or stream seems to have at least one pair. Where as the Great Blue Heron stands four feet tall, "Spotty" is only 7½ inches long. The nickname is very suitable for the underside is literally covered with large, black spots. Overtake the little long-legged bird and it will flutter off, just above the sur-

And just who doesn't like to see a photo of themselves. Uncle Tom Stephens has been kept busy by those requesting their photos taken for the Unity passport for special events and special prizes. The passports will enable those to have a special rate on all away trips from the club and will also make owners of these attractive items eligible for special prizes for lucky number passport holders.

F. W. Bradshaw retires from paper company

Frederick W. Bradshaw, 19 de Casson road, president of Consolidated since the spring of 1964, has decided to retire at the end of this month after 42 years of service to the pulp and paper industry in Canada, of which 32 years were with our Corporation. Although he will be gone from the presidency, he will still be with us in a consulting capacity.

His services to the Corporation over the years have been invaluable. He has led the way for younger members of the staff, setting an example to all by his own rise within Consolidated. He has given his talents and energies to the Corporation for nearly half his life; and, even though he reached the regular retirement age last year, he decided to stay on until this time.

He began his career in the pulp and paper industry when he joined Price Bros. in Kenogami in May 1921, after his second year at McGill, returning in the fall to take his third year. He went back to Kenogami in May 1922 and continued to work there until September 1924 in order to save the necessary funds to put himself through his last year at McGill. During this period, he worked as a pulp tester, as fifth hand on one of the news machines and then joined their Engineering Department. He returned to McGill in the fall of 1924, graduating in May 1925 with a degree of Bachelor of Science with Honors in Chemical Engineering. He then returned to Price Bros. at Riverbend at the start of construction working in the Engineering and Mechanical Department until 1930 when he was transferred to their Jonquiere mill in charge of engineering and control.

In 1934, he came to Consolidated as a research engineer. He moved on to become chief engineer, manager of the Laurentide division, then manager of manufacturing before his appointment in 1957 as executive assistant to the president. He became executive vice-president in November 1958 and president in April 1964.

We are sorry to see him leave but happy that he will be with us from time to time to lend us the benefit of his knowledge. His retirement is effective July 1st. We wish Mr.

Bradshaw full enjoyment of his retirement and good health and happiness for many years ahead, says Consolidated.

Dr. Mary Winspear of Weston school

With so many changes taking place in Weston School on Severn Avenue, we decided to ask Dr. Mary Winspear, who has been Weston's head since 1946, just what was happening.

"We are not leaving Westmount," Dr. Winspear assured us looking about her at the historic mansion built in 1820 which has housed the school since its foundation in 1917. "We have simply out-grown this beautiful building. We will build a new school as soon as the education picture in Quebec is a little clearer." Dr. Winspear, who is sure that the government recognizes the value of the independent school, feels that a school like Weston can offer parents a choice of education for their children which cannot be duplicated by another school system. "Our staff is large," she told us, "and it allows our girls to proceed at their own pace. Each pupil is intimately known to us, and we take the time to discover the potential of each one of them." No one is ever held back to meet an average, and all of the students receive a very basic education enriched by a strong language emphasis as well as the opportunity to develop extra skills which allow them to express individual feelings in self chosen forms as they mature.

Three years ago when it was apparent that the high ceilinged old mansion would no longer hold the enrolment, space was rented in Notre Dame de Grace to accommodate the grades from five to matriculation. Last year Mrs. Crosby Lewis was appointed by the board to head the senior school as Dr. Winspear, who lives in a charming coach house across from the old stone school, felt that she would like to concentrate on her first love, the children from nursery school to grade four. These years she feels are the most important in a child's educational life and her first teaching post, exactly fifty years ago, was one with small children in the village school she herself had attended in Alberta.

Supervising the junior school also gives her an opportunity to implement the work she is doing to facilitate the teaching of languages, to very young children. The school has always concentrated on the teaching of French, and the program is started with three year olds in nursery school. As reading and writing skills are gained, a phonetic alphabet is added, increasing the speed of learning and allowing a language development free of extraneous accent.

To help children of all schools to attain the same end she has worked hard on a three book program, the first 'La boîte à surprises' has already been published, and will be followed by 'Philippe et ses amis' and 'Andre, jeune Quebecois.' All of which stress the application of structural linguistics.

Although it is difficult for most of us to think of Dr. Winspear without also thinking of Weston, her life and career have had many interesting facets.

From industrial Birmingham, England, where she was born, she came with her parents to Canada when she was a very small girl. The family settled in Namaha, a village of seventy-five inhabitants on the edge of a Blackfoot reservation forty miles from Calgary, Alberta.

Her parents kept the village store and post office, and Mary Winspear and her two brothers and her sister attended the village school. It is quite obvious that Mr. and Mrs. Winspear were exceptional parents, for all of their children were to make valuable contributions to the life of their new country.

After her first teaching post in Namaha, Mary and her sister continued their education in St. Hilda's College, Toronto. Here Dr. Winspear attained her B.A. and M.A. degrees by 1931, and received her Doctorate at the University of Toronto in 1942. In the interest of the thesis for her doctorate, (The development of the 18th century novel in England, France and Germany), she visited all three countries, between 1931 and 1937, and was at the University of Munich during the years of the Nazi uprising. She also toured Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia.

In 1942 she lectured in the English department of the University of Edmonton, and was also advisor to women students. In 1945 she moved to Queen's University where she lectured to the new war veterans on Virginia Wolfe.

In 1946 she found her early dream coming true when she discovered the invulnerable grey stone mansion which already housed Weston school and arranged to buy it.

Weston has been a labor of love, and a great deal of hard work inside and outside of the school has gone into it since that first year of her tenure as head mistress. Dr. Winspear has not spared herself in improving the scholastic and physical side of the school. The fine building has been kept in solid condition its beauties unimpaired, and the reputation of sound scholastic achievement has increased with the years.

To find money for staff and improvements Weston's head taught summer school at Queen's for the first three years, spoke on radio and on the first closed circuit television, taught at McGill in the evenings, and helped Professor Vinay with his program 'Speaking French' among many other interesting chores.

A great traveller, Dr. Winspear spent last summer in South East Asia and in Australia attending the Brisbane conference of the International Federation of University Women for which she was a Canadian delegate. At Easter she was in Oxford, England, for the fellowship committee meetings of the same federation, and this summer she plans to tour the Aegean Sea in the yacht 'Lysistrata', a project of her brother, Professor A. D. Winspear.

Dr. Winspear has a centennial project, (she told us with a smile to remind us of the amusing C.B.C. cartoons on this subject,) she would like to get in touch with all the pupils she has taught during the past half century and find out what they have done since she last saw them.

She has a start already with an excerpt from Margaret Robbins' autobiography in reply to a standard authors' questionnaire, sent out by MacMillan Publishing Company.

"The only education that had any meaning for me was that I was lucky enough to be at St. Clements' School during the time that Mary Winspear taught there. Most of the things in my life which have proved to be satisfactory, I learned to appreciate under the brilliant teaching of Mary Winspear."

chrysanthemums, and shasta daisies decorated the church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was in a gown of Swiss Guipure lace, fashioned on empire lines, the skirt falling into a long train appliqued with lace. Her veil of tulle illusion was held by a circular headdress of similar lace, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white phalanopsis orchids, lily of the valley, and stephanotis.

Mrs. Ian Robinson, as matron of honor, and Miss Kathy Bernath, Miss Vicki Todd, and Miss Joan Wiele, as bridesmaids, were in frocks of white Swiss eyelet embroidery over pink taffeta, having pink velvet bows with streamers. They wore wreaths of pink Sweetheart rosebuds and stephanotis in their hair, and carried nosegays of similar flowers with white pique streamers.

Mr. Brian Sanderson acted as best man for Mr. Cotton, and the ushers were Mr. Evan Black, Mr. Doug Hirsch, Mr. Ian Motherwell, and Mr. Terrence Stafford, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Stafford, the bride's mother, was in a gown of pink embroidered ribbon lace, under a matching coat. She wore a hat of pink mohair and satin, and a corsage bouquet of white catelya orchids.

Mrs. Cotton mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of white lace over champagne silk, a matching tulle hat, and had a yellow cymbidium orchid pinned to her bandbag.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Gold and Grey Rooms of the Ritz-Carlton, where arrangements of pink gladioli and carnations, shasta chrysanthemums, and shasta daisies were used to decorate.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Cotton left for Jamaica, the bride travelling in an ensemble of pink cotton brocade and wearing a

HIRE NON-TEACHERS?

The time is overdue when those who are responsible for the training, employment and development of teachers should examine the classroom situation to ascertain whether highly qualified and highly paid teachers are performing duties which could be performed with equal efficiency by competent persons without professional training and at a considerable saving in cost to taxpayers.—Humboldt (Sask.) Journal.

face of the water, plainly showing a white stripe through and along the edge of the wing — another identification mark. Then back comes the bird to the same rock or sandy beach from which it started, where it will teeter along, the tiny tail going up and down, while it loudly calls "peet-weet".

Besides several kinds of Sandpipers there are a number of other long-legged shore birds that may be found breeding in Canada: Godwits, Willets, two sizes of Yellowlegs, Knots, and those extremely long-legged birds, the Avocets, close to our southern border in Manitoba and Alberta.

If we should go over the border, we could find other long-legged birds, such as Egrets, Flamingos, and Ibises, not to mention one whose legs are so extraordinarily long that it has been given the name Stilt.

plans, within the framework of the amount of money involved.

Then, if the architects work is approved by all parties concerned, specifications are worked out.

Then tenders are called, and the tenders are opened, and the lowest tender usually is selected, and the contract is awarded.

All this, of course, presupposes that land has been obtained somewhere, either by friendly dealing, or expropriation, and the latter method would start by going to Quebec with a special bill before the private bills committee.

The relocations office has been set up to find out what the real demands are, to assist residents to find suitable alternate accommodation, and to supply information on relocation to families concerned.

Westmount is eager, even anxious, to do the best it can for any of its citizens, but it hasn't the power to spend money to go into the housing field, and the long way through CMHC from here looks filled with pitfalls, very few of which can be dealt with before July 1, 1967.

believes that all ratepayers concerned are justified in protesting without delay.

Please note that appeals must be entered by individual ratepayers. Should you decide to appeal, and we strongly urge you to do so, a form letter and envelope are enclosed for your convenience.

Protestant taxpayers must appeal to the Greater Montreal Protestant School Board. Taxpayers on the Neutral panel must appeal both to that Board and the Secretary of the Montreal Catholic School Commission, 3737 Sherbrooke Street East, Montreal 36. Appeals must reach the Board or Boards no later than July 8th.

The Westmount Municipal Association is awaiting further information which it believes may be useful to you in making representation when the Board or Boards agree to consider your appeal. Will you therefore please communicate in writing with the Westmount Municipal Association, P.O. Box 157, Westmount 6, as soon as you receive notice of the date on which your appeal will be heard.

As no assessment policy has yet been announced with respect to the Catholic panel, this letter is being sent to Catholic taxpayers for information only, with the suggestion that it be retained for reference when their position has been clarified.

Re: Valuation Roll Increase For School Tax Purposes

Dear Sir:
"Please be advised that I am hereby lodging an appeal against the 19% increase in the valuation, for school tax purposes, of my property located at the address in the City of Westmount as listed below.

It is my contention that this increase is not warranted as the valuation on my property is already established at a level consistent with standard valuation practices."

Playground program underway

The Summer Playground Program for resident boys and girls, ages 6 to 16, is now under way.

The program offers many activities to the youngsters who will be staying in the city for part of the summer. Picnics, tours of interest, handicrafts, and sports are on the program. Miss Judy Dryburgh will supervise at Prince Albert Park, Mr. Terry Chuprun at Westmount Park, and Mr. Larry Dallas at Staylor Park. Miss Sanda Stefanescu is the handicraft teacher at the rink.

Children may register at the playground most convenient to their residence by contacting the supervisors at the comfort stations of the respective parks. Further information may be had by contacting John Garland at 932-4293.
