The first and only one in America since 1836. The great difficulty in capturing this huge and savage creature together with the almost impossibility of keeping him alive in a climate so uncongenial to his habits and constitution, renders the exhibition of a living RHINOCEROS, the greatest Curiosity in the Animal Kingdom.
ALSO,
THE WHITE POLAR BEAR,
The only one in America; which is considered the most rare of all animals kept in a temperate climate for exhibition, they being only inhabitants of the most FRIGID ZONE.
In this great collection of Animals, will be seen
Fourteen Lions,
Of the Finest Specimens from different Countries some of which presented to the renowned VAN AMBURGH, by HER MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA, in his recent tour through Europe. The MONSTER ELEPHANT COLUMBUS, the largest in America, Weighing 10,730 Pounds. MR. VAN AMBURGH,
THE MOST CELEBRATED OF ALL ANIMAL PERFORMERS, WILL GIVE AN EXHIBITION IN A
DEN OF WILD ANIMALS.
His Performances with the TERRIFIC GROUPE of LIONS, TIGERS, LEOPARDS, COUGARS, PANTHERS, &c. The same as performed by him in all the principal cities of EUROPE, with such great renown.
HIDERA[illegible]
THE LION TAMER, WILL GIVE A PERFORMANCE IN A
Den of Wild Animals,
Separate, and altogether different from Mr. VAN AMBURGH'S, making two Grand Animal Performances in the same Exhibition.
Many other performances will be given in the course of the Exhibition, such as PONIES, MONKEYS, &c.
A full description of the Animals, which the great experience, enterprise, and resources of the Proprietors have enabled to bring together in one LARGE and SPLENDID COLLECTION will be found in the Bills, at the principal Hotels, previous to the arrival of the Company.

(Reported for the Montreal Herald.)

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

Toronto, June 13.

The motion of Mr. Boulton for leave to bring in a bill to amend the laws of Banking, was negatived on division; the Administration stating that they had a similar bill, which they were about to bring in

Mr. DeWitt moved the first reading of a bill to regulate the wharfage dues of the Harbour of Montreal. The bill would equalize the rates of wharfage, in favor of small vessels.

Mr. Hincks desired the motion to be postponed as the Commissioners had lately suggested some alterations in the rates of wharfage, which Government had under consideration

Mr Wm. Boulton took an opportunity of asking the hon Inspector General, whether a Committee of Bankers had not waited on him and asked if the Government were about to introduce a free banking law, adding that if so they might sell out their stock at once; and whether he (Mr Inspector General) had not said that the Government would not introduce such a law.

Mr. Hincks said he had talked with some gentlemen connected with the Commercial Bank about this matter; but had not been waited on as a Banking Committee, and he had only spoken to them generally as he might to any other gentlemen. He had told them that he thought the Government would introduce no bill, and he would so have told any one else, for it was only determined on that day. There were reasons why the bill had not been introduced sooner, and one reason was the receipt of a despatch from the sister Provinces, which he had not had time to read at present. He complained of a casual conversation being mentioned in the House as if it were a distinct pledge from a member of the Administration.

In reply to Mr. Robinson, Mr. Baldwin stated that Government would pay the awards of the rebel losses commission without waiting to lay before the House the information moved for this session.

The bill for improving the practice of law in Upper Canada was read a first time.

The House went into committee and passed some resolutions on the motion of Mr. Notman intended to restrict magistrates from taking fees in C. W.

The Cullers amendment bill was rejected on a motion of Mr. Christie for its second reading that day six months, the division being Ayes 32, Nays 21.

Mr. Flint moved the second reading of the bill to relieve Wesleyan Ministers from the obligation to obtain licenses for the keeping of Registries of Baptism, &c.

After some conversation in a very low voice, Mr. Cameron (Kent) desired to have the present measure referred to a select committee, in order that all the disabilities under which Wesleyan Methodists labour should be inquired into at the same time.

Mr. Hincks was of the same opinion, and desired the inquiry also to extend to ministers of other denominations labouring under similar disabilities. The bill was read a second time and referred to a select committee.

Mr Prince moved the second reading of the bill to confirm certain decrees of the Court of Chancery. He stated that the Court, as at present constituted, having refused to recognize the decress and orders made by one of the Vice-Chancellors, innocent purchasers of estates, who had bought under those orders, might be deprived of their titles. He also mentioned that this action on the part of the Court had deprived a client of his, who had prosecuted his suit to the very last step, from obtaining his decree, and forced him to begin de novo. The bill was intended to rectify these evils, by forcing the Court to recognize the old decrees. He moved, however, at present for the postponement of the bill—Carried.

Mr H J Boulton moved the second reading of the act to abolish imprisonment for debt. He stated that his object was to establish this plain principle, that no person should hereafter be imprisoned for debt. If the debtor committed fraud he desired that he should be punished for his fraudulent conduct: but wished that to be done distinctly for fraud as a crime, and not for being in debt. What preceded had been said, looking at the question only with a view to the man himself; but when the man's family came to be regarded, the hardship of arrest was much greater, and if the question were again considered in a national point of view, it became still more evident that the imprisonment of debtors must deprive the country of workers—of producers, and must impose on it more persons depending on the charity of others. Besides there was little distance between the cell of the debtor and the cell of the culprit—the first came out of jail nearly as bad as the last. He read a letter, stating that there were eight debtors in the jail of Woodstock, all for very small sums. The practical result of the law, he went on to say, was, that the debtor was not compelled to pay his creditor, one time in twenty. It did nothing but generate an endless succession of law costs, and false swearing. He knew, during the short time the law of imprisonment for debt had been formerly abolished in Upper Canada, that individuals came back to this country, and found means to pay their debts. In proof of this, he mentioned such a case, narrated to him by Mr Benson of St. Catharines.

Mr. Sol. Gen. McDonald said that under the present law a debtor had the limits of the whole county to be at large in; but when he desired to leave these limits, he was liable to be subjected to a very searching series of interrogations respecting property he was known to possess. If he did not give satisfactory answers he was locked up. Now the remedy was done away with under this bill. Again, when a party was arrested on mesne process, he was released on swearing that he was not worth £5. In fact no one was arrested because he was in debt; but people were imprisoned because they would not pay while they were in visible possession of property. Creditors seldom arrested their debtors unless, they had good grounds for so doing, and there were not five such debtors incarcerated, eastward of Kingston. The former legislation of the hon. member on this subject was a failure, and had as such, been allowed to expire.

Mr. M. Cameron said the principles and feelings of the hon member for Norfolk became a statesman and a christian. The hon member who had just sat down spoke only like a man who considered the rights of the parties who employed him to collect their debts. No doubt that gentleman regretted the time when the debtor was sold to satisfy his debt; but that was not so inhuman as the present system. He would rather be sold to work in the fields, than be immured in the prisons of this Province. He knew a person, released by the Act of Lower Canada of last session, who had been incarcerated for seven years. Was that a system for a Christian country? But the hon member said there were very few persons imprisoned—only eight in the jail of Woodstock—that he thought was nothing at all—nothing worthy of notice. The hon gentleman complained that this bill swept away all the system of interrogatories; but the hon Solicitor General had several bills before the house providing for all sorts of interrogatories! A man incarcerated for months or years, could not come out of gaol without being a worse man than when he went in. Yet you took away a man from his family, and subjected him to this degradation only to gratify feelings of revenge. Imprisonment for debt was abolished in the United States; the debtors tools were exempted from seizure; and his homestead was also exempted in ten States of the Union. He believed that instead of creating a number of small Courts, the right way would be to abolish all legal means for the recovery of small debts, say under £25. This would put a stop to the system of giving credit for these small sums to unsafe persons, and of making honest people pay higher prices to cover the loss. Mr. Cameron went on to read several extracts to show the injustice and public abuse of the system of imprisonment for debt. The Solicitor General thought the limits allowed to debtors were very large; but how was it then that eight persons were imprisoned in Woodstock—was it not because they were hopelessly poor? Was it not because they had no property concealed to pay for being transported without the limits?

Mr Sherwood (Toronto), was in favour of abolishing imprisonment for debt; but would not vote for this bill. If a man got into debt, and transferred property to a friend, or concealed it—that man should not be treated as a debtor but as a criminal. But how many persons were there who contracted debts with the hope of improving their circumstances, who, from illness or other misfortune were unable to pay their debts. He would vote then for the second reading to sustain the principle; but would go no farther, unless the hon. mover would make provision to prevent fraud.

Mr Geo. Sherwood said that in his experience he found imprisonment for debt rather a disadvantage to the creditor than otherwise. At present, to escape imprisonment, it was necessary for the debtor to swear that he was not worth £5; but he had always found that the debtor who would make that affidavit, would stick at no subsequent perjury. He thought the sooner the law was got rid of the better, and though he would not oppose the addition of any provision to prevent fraud, he would vote for the bill as it was, rather than not at all. He believed that the creditor would be much better off, if he knew he could not arrest the debtor, because then he would not give such easy credit. He recommended the extension of the principle of attachment of property, which had been introduced by Mr. Smith of Durham, with regard to debts under ten pounds to all debts of whatever amount.

Mr. Camrron (Cornwall), remarked that the objections to the law of arrest in England had been removed by the reforms there, which admitted no arrest unless the debtor were about to leave the country for the purpose of defrauding his creditor. At present, that fact must be proved by competent testimony, and the effect of the law was that there were many jails where there was not one debtor confined, and the spunging houses had ceased to exist. However, all gentlemen who spoke against the existing law in this country admitted the necessity of imprisonment for fraud. But then it was said the debtor should not be imprisoned for debt; but punished for crime. He cared not what name was given to it; the thing was the same. Under the existing provisions of the law the dreadful stories of people rotting in jail and so forth, must be drawn from the imagination, for they could have no foundation in fact. He would be willing that the law as it now exists in England should be introduced here—the law which made it necessary to prove circumstances of fraud, before a person could be imprisoned. In the United States imprisonment for debt was not abolished as had been said by Mr. Cameron; for he knew a case in in which a person from Canada going to England was arrested in New York, as they said to keep him thirty days and search for his property. If the member for Kent could sweep away all protection for the creditor, did he believe that it would abolish the system of credit? He (Mr. Cameron) thought it would not.

Mr Wilson spoke against and Mr Merritt for the motion.

Mr Baldwin objected to the motion as an attempt to pull down the law of U C without building up any in its place.

Mr Drummond was in favour of the bill, which was also supported by Mr LaFontaine and Mr Cartier so far as the second was concerned; but they wished some alteration to adapt it to the law of Lower Canada inasmuch as imprisonment for debt was abolished there except in the case of defaulting tutors, curators, &c., and recommended its being referred to a select committee.

Mr Boulton having refused to refer the bill to a select committee, until he had taken a vote whether it should be referred to a committee of the whole.

Mr Sol. Gen McDonald moved that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

The vote was then taken on the second reading, Mr Boulton consenting to the reference to a select committee. Yeas 62; Nays 7.

A select committee was then appointed, and on the motion of Mr Drummond the committee was instructed to insert a provision making this act apply only to U C.

The House then adjourned.

Toronto, June 14.

After the usual routine business had been disposed of,

Mr. LaFontaine moved the House into Committee on the Seigniorial Tenure, and then proceeded to propose the resolutions of which he had given notice, and which have already been published in the Herald. He spoke in French, and in a voice which, at the commencement, was almost inaudible in the gallery. We understood him to say that he did not pretend to condemn the seigniorial tenure as one unfit for the early settlement of a new country. He thought, at least, that it was well fitted for that purpose; but it had been felt in the later periods of the country's history, that it was injurious to those classes upon whose success the progress of agriculture, commerce, &c., depended. Various attempts had, therefore, been made to establish a system of commutation, but so far these attempts had proved only failures except in so far as they had unjustly injured some holders of seigniories, while the constant agitation which was maintained against the tenure had the effect of still more sensibly diminishing the value of seigniorial property. In fact, at the present moment, the value of seigniories from this cause had become nearly a nullity. To do justice to both parties, then, it was time to abolish the evil so loudly complained of; and he had a profound conviction that what the seignior had most to fear was lest the remedy should be postponed too long; for delay gave fresh opportunity for the promulgation of principles which, if acted on, would overthrow society. As the seigniors formed the smallest number, they might, in that case, lose their property without any compensation at all. He was not ignorant that on this, as on other questions, a degree of popularity was to be acquired by pandering to public opinion; nor was he ignorant that many persons thought the tenure should be destroyed without giving any compensation to the seigniors. But the more prevalent this opinion was, the more firmly ought the House to show to interested parties that there could be no commutation without an indemnity to the seignior for the whole value of his property—giving the seignior the just value for his rights, at the same time that care was taken not to levy too heavy a burden on the censitaire. He thought this could not be effected without making the commutation obligatory; yet he believed it might be so managed as to consult alike the interests of both parties. Having moved his resolutions, the hon gentleman concluded by expressing his regret at the agitation which had taken place on this subject, which he condemned as most injurious in itself, and as being well calculated to retard the object by alarming the seigniors and making them unwilling to approach the subject at all.

Dr Laterriere said there was no doubt this question had, for a long course of years, been agitated by parties who wished to make political capital of it. It had increased with the union of the Provinces, and had at last seriously compromised the value of seigniorial property. Every scheme for changing it, however, failed, except the plan for voluntary commutation. He then went over inquiries which had been made into the nature of this tenure, and alleged that, down to the commission of 1843, all these investigations had resulted in the expression of an opinion in favor of the system. Now, however, the country had got to the system of convention, like the "Convention Davignon," (laughter) the results of which, if not known already, soon would be known—they tended to the overthrow of all property in this Province. Besides these inquiries, however, there had been some legislation by the Special Council—the beginning of that course of legislation which had led to that iniquitous Union of the Provinces, to the other changes in Government, to the expenses on these everlasting canals, and probably shortly to the making of a railroad from the Sea to Lake Superior. Now, the hon Attorney General had at last laid the axe to destroy the foundation of the entire edifice of French Canadian nationality—the seigniorial tenure; and his measure would be followed by the exploitation of the entire country by lawyers and jobbers. At present, he proposed, it was true, to take nothing without paying for it, and the House would soon know the indemnity which was to be paid for the redemption of the slaves, as they were called, in Lower Canada, in the same way as England paid an indemnity to abolish slavery in the West Indies, while she kept up white slavery at home. He then expressed himself, as we understood, in favor of the proposal to fix the rate of rentes; but complained of the agitation by the "Conventionists," as the act of "Le Peuple Dictateur"—the people judging its own cause. He then compared the Seigniorial with the free and common soccage tenure, and drew the conclusion that the abuses under the latter were worse than under the former, while the seigniors never got so rich as the absolute proprietors, who built the Tomvilles, Jackvilles, Henryvilles, or the villes Viger and Berthelot, formed out of City lots. It was not, he said, of the Seigniorial Tenure that people complained, but of the abuses of the Seigniors perpetrated alike against the Seignior Sazerain and the provisions of the Coutume de Paris. He concluded by asking in what country property was so equally divided or where there was more real liberty than in Canada. He desired, notwithstanding, to reform all abuses especially those which existed in that House, and hoped that if there were to be a change in the tenure, it would be made with full indemnity to those deprived of their dues, so as to avoid the destruction of the most sacred rights of property.

Dr. Davignon complained that his motives had not been well understood, or had been misinterpreted by the hon Attorney General, who had alluded to him indirectly, and by the hon member for Saguenay, who had mentioned him by name. If he now rose to ask something more than the resolutions of the hon Attorney General, it was because he had a duty to perform, having been charged last session to present the petition of 4,500 electors of the three counties of Rouville, Chambly and Huntingion. He would, therefore, be unworthy of the confidence of his friends, if he did not employ all his efforts to obtain the attention, at least, of the house, to the request of those petitioners. Hon gentlemen had spoken of the convention Davignon: he would rather call it the convention of the whole country, for the whole country was of one mind; as proof of this he would mention that last session petitions had been presented signed in all by thirty thousand persons. The conventions might be laughed at; but he called them the expressions of public opinion, and was not at all ashamed of the position he held in them. That one lately held at Montreal was attended by one hundred and fifty delegates, every parish in the district having sent representatives. What did they propose to do? First, to put an immediate end to existing abuses, with a view to a subsequent commutation. He did not believe in the present poverty of the country that the Censitaires would be able to bear the immediate burden of commutation; but in order to facilitate this at some future time, it was necessary now to determine what the rights of the Seigniors really were, since it would be impossible to fix their value till their extent was ascertained. Let the commutation be managed upon what principle it might, at present the rich only would profit by it. It was therefore the first duty of the House to relieve the poor from the exorbitant rents under which they suffered, and this was the more necessary, inasmuch as it was especially the poor who suffered. The high rates of rente did not affect the established farmers on old lands; but the poor men and the young men, who were just going forward to clear the forest. He then went over the reports made at different times by Attorney General Sewell and Mr. O'Sullivan, by the Committees presided over by Mr. Buchanan, &c., all going to show that the Seigniors had no just right to exact a higher rente than two sous par arpent, though the law was not sufficient to enable a poor man to enforce his right against them. He then denied that it was the agitation against the tenure, which had reduced the value of the Seigniories. It was rather the injustice of the Seigniors who had imposed such rentes, as had driven their Censitaires from their holdings. He concluded by declaring that it was absurd to reproach the poor Censitaires for coming to that House to ask if there were no means of being relieved from what they felt to be an injustice; and then moved the amendment of which he had given notice.

Mr H J Boulton desired justice to be done to both parties; but wished for information. If the French king granted the seigniories on condition that they should be conceded at a penny an arpent, and they were now charged sixpence, there was clearly an injustice done. But then, why did not the Courts interfere? That they did not do so, showed there was something wrong in the argument of the censitaires, or else that the expense of insisting on their rights deterred poor people from doing so.

Mr Christie said that the hon member who spoke last wished to know the facts; but if the house waited till he had read the facts already amassed they might wait till doomsday. Half a million of her Majesty's loyal subjects, however, felt the facts. He took credit for his exertions against the tenure; but he found that 30,000 persons had petitioned against it. Before the union, he believed not less than 200,000 had done so. The hon member for Saguenay had compared the abuses of the free and common soccage tenure, with those of the feudal tenure. He admitted that the feudal tenure, in its purity, was the best for a new country; but its purity had not been preserved, except by the ecclesiastical corporations. The rates had been raised in some cases 100 per cent.

Here Col Gugy pronounced a very long, loud, and decisive "hear! hear!"

Mr Christie continued:—The hon gentleman was a seignior, and doubtless did not like to hear these things. He then went on to show that the abuses, which were imputed to the free and common soccage tenure consisted not in the tenure, but in the exorbitant grants of lands to individuals not for actual settlements. He then went on to show the character of the burdens of lods et ventes—of the obligation to pay a fine of one twelfth of the purchase money to the seignior, on all sales, and the fact that the purchaser, having got a good bargain, the seignior had the right to take it out of his hands—for example, if it was for £500, by paying that sum and taking the property. Presently another man would come and offer a £1000 for what the seignior had thus retraited. The seignior would sell it; but in selling it, he would probably enforce a much higher rate of annual rente, &c. Then the censitaire could build no mill on his own stream; and the seignior could cut what wood he required on his censitaires, farm without paying for it. Again, the seignior could at certain intervals, compel each man within his censive to come before him personally and renew his titles. It was by the last right that the seignior contrived to make his encroachment, for while renewing the titles he took the opportunity to insert conditions more onerous than they were before. He asked cui bono, a special committee, Everything necessary to be known was already on the journals of the House.

Mr. Mongenais here explained that if a party disposed of his farm for an annuity, lods et vente became due for every five years that the annuity was paid, as if for so many different sales.

Col. Gugy began his remarks by reading his evidence in favor of commutation before the tenure Committee of 1843, to show that he was not influenced by his position as a seignior in favour of the tenure. He therefore agreed substantially with the hon Attorney General (East.) But while there were six seigniors in the House—

Cries of twenty indirectly.

Well, the rest were tenants, whose prejudices were against the seignior. He complained of the hon member for Berthier not as a ferocious; but as a most energetic and dangerous agitator on account (as we understood) of some unjust spoliation of the Seigniors, which he had a great interest as an extensive purchaser of land in carrying out. It was refreshing, however, to hear from the hon member from Rouville the statement he wanted to take nothing but what he paid for. Col. Gugy then described the tenure—Seigniorie were frequently sold,—there could not therefore be any reason why the Government should despoil the man to-morrow of what he had bought for £15,000 or £20,000 to-day. In every case of concession there was the solemnity of a contract; no one had land forced upon him by the landlord.

Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Christie rose together and exclaimed that the Seignior was not a landlord.

Mr. Christie continued to say that it was from this error that the whole mischief arose. The Seignior was not a proprietor; but a trustee, bound to concede his lands at a certain rate.

Col Gugy was proceeding to say that Mr Christie knew nothing of the subject; he was not to be put down, while speaking on an important topic, and as the representative of thousands of persons.

Mr Christie said the gentleman represented fifty freeholders.

Col Gugy said he could show that he represented many more.

Mr Christie said, he heard that the hon member's constituents had asked him to resign.

Col Gugy replied:—When the demand reached him, he should treat it as he had treated everything else of that nature. It would meet with his contempt, and the execration of all honest men. He would not resign but would go back and be re-elected in spite of them—if not there, somewhere else. However, concession by the seignior was a contract between the two parties, voluntarily entered into. During the French despotic domination, it was true, they made little of these contracts and often made ex post facto laws to set them aside. He presumed, however, that no one would at the present day stand up and defend such laws; yet the hon member for Rouville cited these ex post facto laws—laws made not by a Legislature; but by a Court of Justice—made for the whole community, on a suit merely between two private parties in support of the measure which he urged. According to this decision, in the opinion of the hon member for Rouville, the seignior was not to be allowed to take more than two sous per arpent. That was not law But assuming that it was law, look at the condition in which the country then was—suppose 2d had been determined on or any other sum—was the decision in that one case to govern parties not before the Court. He then read the arret of 1713, and contended that it only went to show this—that the seignior was bound to concede gratuitously, that is for a rente and not for any present price—they were not to sell; but no maximum rente was fixed at which they were to concede.

On the interference of Dr. Davignon, Colonel Gugy acknowledged that the seignior was bound to conceed at the "accustomed rente". The seignior in the case cited having failed to grant land, was brought before the Court, and the Court annexed the land to the domain of the Crown, and then re-granted it to the applicant. The seigniorial tenure was admitted to be the best for a new country; the man took an axe, cut down a tree, and got the property at a trifling rent; but now those who had done so paid their rent by petitions for the destruction of the property of the seignior. He contended that the seigniorial tenure was especially adapted for a new country, and much easier for the emigrant to obtain land under than the tenures in Upper Canada. He went on to argue that it was an absurdity to say that persons should pay the same amount of rent for bad lands as for good. The value of money, too, was much less now than 140 years ago, and therefore the seignior ought not to be compelled to concede at the low price which they then conceded at. Judge Pyke's dictum, which had been quoted, was an opinion given on a question not before him. It was no consequence whether the petitioners spoken of by the hon member for Rouville were 30,000 or 60,000: they had all got something to take from the seignior, and like all multitudes it was their lot to be humbugged—and not to get more butter for their bread, as they were led to expect they would.

Mr. Armstrong remarked that Colonel Gugy had said he feared him (Mr. Armstrong), and he had some reason; for he obtained the report of the Committee of 1841, containing facts which would endure after the hon. gentleman's representations were forgotten. The hon. member said he would resign his rights; but how resign them—for an indemnity on the unjust rentes he was now charging. The arrets referred to stated that the concessions were to be made at the accustomed price: then there must be some means to ascertain what that price was. The hon. member acknowledged, however, that the seignior was bound to concede. If so, he was certainly bound to concede at some price, and could not fix any price he pleased. He knew, too, that throughout the seigniories in the District of Montreal, lands were not always conceded gratuitously, but were frequently sold, and then a title of concession was granted to cover the transaction.

Col Gugy defied the hon member to prove it.

Mr Armstrong was willing to stake £25 on it.

Mr Drummond said that what Mr Armstrong mentioned had been done, but was certainly illegal.

Mr Papineau held that the property of the rich must be preserved if the poor man's property was to be respected. He contended that the seignior was not the trustee, but, in the greater part of seigniories, the absolute proprietor. When the country was settled first, personal servitudes had ceased in the greater part of France, and no such servitudes were introduced into Canada; therefore, there was no just objection to the tenure on that side. The custom of Paris had been recently reformed when Canada was settled, and that was introduced because more favorable than all the other coutumes to the poor man. Everything was, therefore, to be considered in reference to the spirit of that law. Now, the first thing desired by the Court was to induce men of property to leave all the attractions of home and to go to inhospitable shores where they were exposed to the inconveniencies of the forest and the incursions of savages. Was it likely that the inducement held out to such persons would be the mere permission to acquire land which could never increase in value, and which would put them at the mercy of the first comer? In sixty years after the first settlement of the country, 200 seigniories were granted, though there were but 15,000 persons in the colony at the end of that time, on land which now supported 800,000 souls. The two largest seigniories were occupied by the families Couillard and La Ferté Duchesnay, in reward for their services in the supply of capital, and in the wars: they still subsisted and should be looked on with love for their services, instead of being despoiled of their property. He did not wonder that there were thirty thousand signers of these petitions: he wondered the whole mass of the population was not corrupted by the acts of vile agitators; but with honest men the multitude was to be resisted as well as the tyrant. The right of property was above all law—it was the rule of the decalogue—the rule engraved on the heart of every honest man—thou shalt not steal. He condemned the men who left their ploughs and lancets to condemn judges and overturn the jurisprudence of the country. Every holder of property must be held to have the absolute title unless his right was limited by some condition; but as he had previously said, three-fourths of the seigniories settled during the first sixty years of settlement, were granted unshackled by any condition. The policy of the French Court was this—they said, we give you these large tracts of land to be settled for your benefit. You must expend capital and obtain settlers; if you do not have settlers—a house—a mill—in three years, you will lose your land and your advances. That was the only condition—the competition of two hundred men, who depended on settlement for the increase of their property. But, supposing the rente to have been fixed, was the deux sous of the year 1713 not much more than the value of the same sum in 1850. At that time the bushel of wheat was worth 30 sous, and the day's labour 15 sous, so that the fortunate ancestor of the hon member for Rouville paid more in fact at two sous than he now paid at eight or ten. Four years after the publication of the arret of 1713, the Seigniory of Two Mountains was granted to the Seminary of Montreal, and the Intendant took the same narrow view of that arret, as he had heard affixed to it that night; and he declared that the Seminary should concede at two sous per arpent. But the king of France, in ratifying the concession, erased that condition and inserted the words "at the customary rate," and gives express permission by another clause to take any rent they could get for cleared land. The Bouchard Seigniory was granted subsequently with leave to take as rente, a higher sum than that fixed by the hon member for Rouville; and in addition, three days corvée or personal service. The case of Mr. Lavaltrie was an important one as proof of the law on this subject. He had conceded at a low rate and received the rent at that rate, for nineteen years. After that time he found there was a mistake in the notarial contract, upon which he came to his tenant and demanded a higher rente, like that paid by the other persons who had settled after him in the same concession. Now the defendant in that case did not pretend that the Seignior had no right to take more than a certain rent; but he only argued that his contract should be adhered to, notwithstanding its error. It was plain therefore that there was no maximum. The proof that there was no great evil felt from this tenure, except amongst those who had been excited by agitation, was to be found in the fact, that on the Island of Montreal, where the commutation was exceedingly easy, not thirty Censitaires had commuted out of four thousand rich farmers, who lived out of the town. There were formerly more complaints against the Seignior of Beauharnois than against any other person, because he took 6d per arpent. Yet, supposing the facts to be true, as deposed by his agents, that Seignior had expended money in roads, schools, &c., to the amount of £——, and at the same time lands in the neighbouring Seigniories were to be had for 2d per arpent; but were not preferred by settlers at the cheaper rate. Why? Because of the improvements which justified the increased rate in Beauharnois. He was an ardent reformer, eager for every reform; but he was conservative of all that concerned the sacred rights of property and family. He then went over the opinions imputed to Messrs. Bedard and O'Sullivan, and ridiculed the idea that they were to be acted on by the Legislature. The cause of complaint was daily growing comparatively smaller and smaller. There were at present only 8,000,000 of acres held in censive, while there was already as much land sold in the Townships. Again, the Island of Montreal was already under the law of commutation, and the Seminary on which stood the City of Quebec belonged to the government; so that in these localities—almost the only ones where there was any colourable grievance—the commutation was easy. Again, out of the 8,000,000 acres in Seigniory, 2,000,000 of acres belonged to the Jesuits estates. Now if it were considered that the lods et ventes were very objectionable they might be done away with there. The principle of lods et ventes was no more than that which prevailed in Insurance Companies and elsewhere, where a smaller sum was paid on a great risk. On the whole he deprecated the agitation; but should vote for the resolution as a reasonable measure, considering the present state of public opinion.

After a few words from Mr DeWitt, which we did not distinctly hear,

Col. Prince said that he had no idea of interfering with vested rights. The persons who petitioned for the abolition of these seigniories were those who felt themselves aggrieved as the tenants. He found the same thing prevailed elsewhere, that in the State of New York, the Patroon of Albany had been turned out of his estate by a recent decision of a court because his tenant had been long allowed to remain without paying rent. This was, he thought, against all law; but he mentioned it in order to take the opportunity of begging his friends from Lower Canada not to destroy the only provision made for the clergy of Upper Canada. Now this seigniorial tenure was just the same as the copyhold tenure in England; and he would like to know what would be thought in England if any member, still less any member of the administration, should bring in such a bill as this. He would vote against the resolution.

Mr Drummond considered that at the times in which we lived the temper of the times must be regarded, and there were popular prejudices to which men might and should yield. He differed from some hon gentlemen as to the rights of the Seigniors to increase their rentes; but he did believe it necessary to sweep away the tenure and to substitute another, less obnoxious in name, though not in reality. He, however, believed there was much mistake on this subject—it was not true that the rentes had never been fixed except in the case of one grant to the Seminary of Montreal. For many years these grants were made unconditionally; subsequently conditions were impose—the holder was to pay fealty and homage and deliver an account of his possessions. But looking through all these deeds of concession he could not find any condition up to 1633. There was however a maxim that there was no land without a seignior, and the land was regulated by the coutume of Paris, by which law the seignior was bound to concede for a certain rente, the amount of which rente was not fixed by law. He considered the seignorial tenure the best for a new country, and an agricultural country; but when the population became mercantile and manufacturing, he acknowledged that this tenure burdened by the lods et ventes, was opposed to the spirit of the age, and the natural desire for progress. He, therefore, was willing, though a seignior, to make his share of the sacrifice; but he called on the house to decide the question, without injustice to the seigniors or censitaires. He therefore differed from the views of those gentlemen, who thought the house should declare that the seigniors had taken too large a rate of rente. He admitted that some seigniors had done much wrong and thus enabled a few persons to make a certain amount of popularity; for the seignior had not the fee simple of the land, but was burdened by a kind of trusteeship. Some seigniories had formerly sold their lands, and the arret of 1713 was directed against these people—people, like some seignors who sold their lands at the present day, as he had known one do with many square miles of the finest lands in Canada. But this arret did not fix any rate of rente: it merely decided that the seigniors should not sell. He contended that there were only three things which actually belonged to the seignior in Canada, the cens et rentes, lods et ventes, and the droit de banalite—the last was a matter of very little consequence. The seigniors, indeed, were the persons, of all others, who had the most reason to desire the commutation of this tenure, in order to avoid the contumely to which they were now exposed. But these seigniors were not the only parties to be consulted—there were also those who had mortgages on seigniories. These persons must be protected. He concluded by proposing a plan of abolition, which, he thought, would avoid the present troubles, by the commutation of the existing dues into a constitut, with a bureau de consignation, for the reception of the annual rents, to be preserved for mortgaged creditors.

The Committee then rose, reported progress, and asked leave to sit again.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Thursday, June 13.

The Speaker laid some Returns before the House.

The bill to enable the Trinity House of Quebec to lay down buoys to mark the shoals on the north shore of the River St. Lawrence, passed the third reading.

A message was received from the House of Assembly, stating that that House had passed the following bills, intituled, "An Act to incorporate the Hamilton Gas Light Company"—"An Act to enable Municipal Corporations to subscribe for stock in the Great Western and other Railways"—and "An Act to authorize the inhabitants of Saguenay to establish a Municipal Council" Each of these bills was read for the first time, and ordered to be read a second time to-morrow.

Hon. Mr MacKay said, when he was in Montreal, the President of the City Bank showed him a transaction between the Bank and the Clerk of that House, which was in no way creditable to the latter. It was explained to him, that on the year before last the Clerk had opened an account and deposited £37 in that Bank. Shortly after he drew £277, and requested his account to be transferred to the Branch at Quebec. The Bank, instead of debiting him with the latter amount placed it to his (the Clerk's) credit; and the clerk drew it. The Bank subsequently discovered the error which had thus been made, and requested him to set it right, but he declined to do so. He thought it was the duty of the House to clear up the transaction.

The Hon. Speaker said, there was a good principle in the English law, which was applicable to the present case, and that was, that every one should be deemed to be innocent until the contrary was proved. He would state what he knew of the case. While he was at Quebec he received a Communication from the City Bank, stating that the Clerk of the House had overdrawn his account and that he owed to that Institution £500. That communication was accompanied with a statement of the transactions. He then called upon the Clerk, and told him that if the statement of the Bank was correct he ought to rectify it. The Clerk replied that he had received several communications from the Bank on the subject. That he, together with some friends, had examined the matter. He (the Clerk) added, that there were several errors in the Bank's account. That it had omitted to give him credit for £300; that it refused to enter into all the transactions (as he desired,) until he had acknowledged the error in entering the £277 to his credit; which last condition, he consequently refused. The Clerk also told him that, under these circumstances, he preferred that the Bank should bring an action against him, as it had threatened, because, in that case, he would be enabled to clear up the whole transaction. If that statement was true, and he (Mr. Caron) had no reason to doubt it, it would be better that it should be settled in the courts of law. He thought that the interference of the House would be improper.

Hon. Mr. McKay had no desire to censure the Clerk, but he believed it was the bounden duty of the House to see that he acted honestly, or the whole blame of the transaction would be thrown upon them.

Hon. Mr. Fergusson said there was a degree of mystification about the matter which he did not like. He, however, concurred with what had fallen from the Speaker. As a member of the Finance Committee, he would observe, that he was surprised that the members of the Committee had not yet been called together upon the question.

Hon. Mr. Irving observed, that although he was an original member of the Committee, he had found great difficulty to obtain any facts connected with the question. He did not think, it was necessary that it should be brought into the Courts of Justice. It was a question of fact, and not of law. It was merely a question as to whether the Clerk was, or was not indebted to the Bank.

Hon. Mr. Godhue was of opinion, that the House ought not to interfere, because it was a question between the Clerk and the Bank only.

Hon. Mr. Fergusson suggested that it would be better to allow the matter to lie over for a day or two, until more hon. members were present.

Hon. Mr. Gordon contended that it was not the duty of the House to investigate the transaction. He thought that, perhaps, both the Bank and Clerk were equally to blame.

No further discussion took place upon the subject.

The House then adjourned.

THE MONTREAL HERALD

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 18, 1850.

Retrenchment Committee.—It will be seen by our last night's Telegraph despatch from Toronto, that the Retrenchment Committee have adopted a resolution recommending that the Governor General's salary shall be reduced from £7,777 to £3,500, a-year.—The following was the division:—

Majority—Badgley, Boulton, Cameron, Cartier, Christie, Holmes, Hopkins, Papineau, Sherwood—9.

Minority—Boutillier, Cauchon, Hincks, McDonald, McLean, Morrison, Viger, Cayley—8.

Banks and Currency.—It will be seen, by our reports of proceedings, in Parliament, that the Ministry intend, during the present session, to introduce a Bill, upon which a general Banking and Currency Law may be based; and we suppose, there can be no doubt of their carrying whatever measures, in relation to these very important matters, they may consider conducive to the public interest. We cannot, of course, pledge ourselves for the correctness of our information on the subject, but the source from which it is derived induces us to place every confidence in it, and, we believe, the Ministerial scheme, when made public, will be found to exhibit the following features. The provincial currency will—like every other reform in the institutions of the country—be an exact adaptation of the United States system: that is, the coins will be decimally divided, or, in other words, we shall have all the conveniences of dollars and cents; and our coins will be of the same proportionate value as those circulating in the United States; which latter, with our own, will be the only legal current coin of the Province—all other coins being put on the footing of bullion, and, consequently only current at their intrinsic value. But, (risum teneatis amici!) while borrowing the thing from our republican neighbours, our sensitive loyalists are determined to call it by a name that "smells sweeter" to them than "Dollars and cents;" and the "Almighty Dollar" on crossing north of line 45°, is to become the "Almighty Crown"! Should the Lords of the Treasury not be satisfied with this "dignified neutrality," between the republican thing and the Monarchical name, and refuse to supply us from the Royal Mint with so revolutionary a standard of value, why, we shall be forced to put up with Brother Jonathan's coinage, inasmuch as it will then be the only legal coin current in Canada. With regard to Banks, we understand, the Bank of Issue crotchet has been altogether abandoned; and that our law will be, in all its main features, an exact "transcript" of that of the State of New York: all parties being at liberty to issue paper money, payable on demand, but all who do so, being, under heavy penalties, obliged to afford the public security for their issues, by investing a certain amount in the public securities and lodging them in the Provincial Treasury. The minor details of the proposed laws, we are not, of course, informed of, but, we believe, the above will be found to embrace their general features.

The 7th Royal Fusiliers embarked at Halifax, on the 4th instant, on board the Transport ship "Bombay," for conveyance to England.

Great Fire on Saturday Last.—We yesterday gave such facts connected with the disastrous conflagration on Saturday afternoon, as we were enabled to collect before going to press; and beyond the following appalling list of the sufferers, which, with the assistance of the Corporation assessment book, we have been enabled to compile, and the amounts we understand to have been insured in the different Assurance Companies, we have little to add to what we then stated as to the origin, extent and result of the fire. It is ever a disagreeable task to find fault, especially when error arises not from a want of zeal, but from the absence of that knowledge which can alone render zeal valuable. We have already mentioned the praiseworthy exertions of the military in aiding to check the progress of the flames, and we ought to have mentioned that the firemen were equally zealous and active in the performance of their duties; but, having been early on the ground, we are constrained to state our conviction that, with better management, a greater concentration of the force, and more promptitude and decision, nearly one-half of the area destroyed might have been saved. It is true the fire spread with such dreadful rapidity, and in such various directions, that we speak with a full sense of the uncertainty of any exertions being effectual to arrest its progress, in the first instance; but, it appeared to us on the spot, and with a diagram of the burned area before us we are still of the same opinion, that had the large stone and brick buildings, on the West side of Wellington Street, been blown up with gunpowder, the vast amount of property on the East side of that street and in George, Nazareth and Dalhousie streets-east, might have been saved. It is fruitless, however, excepting as a lesson for the future, to speculate upon what might have been the results of other measures than those which were adopted. The most palpable lessons to be derived from what we witnessed on Saturday, and which we would urge upon the attention of our municipal authorities, are first the means which should be adopted to prevent the recurrence of a similar conflagration; and secondly, the means of promptly checking its extension should it occur. On the first point, it must we think have been evident to every one who was present on Saturday, that to the use of shingle roofs may be mainly attributed the fatal rapidity with which the fire was spread from point to point—a wooden building with a metal roof being, evidently, far more safe from fire than a stone or brick building when covered with shingles. And on the second point, no one, we think, could fail to remark the deficiency in the number of the Fire Engines possessed by the city. In correction of the first error—the covering of houses in a densely peopled town with so inflammable a material as shingles—we think the Corporation should at once pass a law, stringently prohibiting the use of shingles as a roofing to any buildings whatever within the city and more densely inhabited portions of the suburbs. With regard to the second error—the insufficiency in numbers of the Fire Companies and engines, for a city so exposed to fire as Montreal—we would venture to suggest the immediate organization of one, two, or three reserve companies, who should only be expected to turn out and act in the event of extensive fires occurring, and the placing engines for their exclusive use in certain central parts of the city and suburbs. These reserve companies would not entail any great additional expense to the city and would, we are satisfied, be found a most effectual aid to the regulars, in the event of such occurrences as that on Saturday afternoon. We need say nothing regarding the adoption of more efficient means of obtaining supplies of water, the want of which is too often now to be deplored; but we shall not conclude these somewhat hurried remarks without also suggesting to the Corporation the wisdom of obtaining a supply of small hand-engines, which, from the ease and rapidity with which they can be moved and worked, are very useful in preventing the fire from spreading.

We cannot conclude without again directing the attention of the public to the destitute condition of the numerous sufferers by this sad event. The amount of furniture and other property destroyed was immense; and, we regret to learn, mostly lost by the respectable artizan class whose means of replacing it are so limited. Only one life was, so far as we know, lost. An inquest was yesterday held upon the remains, when the jury returned the following verdict:—

"That Isabella Flood Livingston has been absent and is missing since the 15th June, instant—that certain bones and other parts of an adult human being have been found in a cellar under a house occupied by the said Isabella Flood Livingston, situate in Wellington Street, St. Anne's Suburbs, Montreal—that the said house was destroyed by fire, on the said 15th day of June—that the said fire originated on the premises owned and occupied by Daniel McNevin; but how and by what manner and means the said fire originated, does not appear to the said Jurors known."

The following is an abstract of the statement given below of the property destroyed:—

Legislative "Recreation."—The Editor of the Kingston Whig concludes his account of the dreadful sufferings on board the "Britannia," on the night of the 7th instant, in the following affecting terms—with the exception of Holwell's narrative of the night spent in the Black Hole at Calcutta, we know of nothing in history equal to the scene on board the Po'lywag:—

Never shall I forget to my dying day the rueful countenance of his Worship of Toronto, and that of his Reverence the Vicar Gen. Macdonell. As for Cabinet Ministers and honorable members of the Legislative Council, I don't believe there was one on board that night, who would not have exchanged position of life with a petted baboon, so woe-begone did they look. There was no distinction of persons—the humble reporter for the press was on a par with the head of a department, and being a younger man he fared the better. Such a night—such a scene—such filth—such noise—and such a tout ensemble I never before beheld, and I hope never may again. I feel morally sure that next day I was by five years an older man!

The Germania Society.—On Saturday night, this talented company gave their last concert, during their present visit, at the Theatre Royal. In consequence of the disastrous calamity of the evening, in Griffintown, we—and, no doubt, many others—were unable to be present, but we hear the house was well filled and the performances went off with the greatest eclat. At the termination of the concert, the Manager, Mr. Helmsmuller, having been loudly called for, came before the curtain and thanked the audience, in the following well-chosen terms:—

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In appearing before you, on the occasion of our last Concert in Montreal, I feel it to be both my pleasure and duty, to express to you, in behalf of the Germania Musical Society, as fully as words can, our deep sense of obligation for the many favors you have extended to us, and the kind hospitality, with which you have greeted us during our stay in your city.

We came amongst you an association of unknown strangers and with no other recommendation, than our humble merits, and we have received at your hands, unmistakeable marks of favor and approbation

To the Ladies, especially, whose bright eyes and lovely faces have graced our entertainments, we would render our most sincere and heartfelt thanks for the lively interest they have taken in our welfare, and the unsolicited efforts they have used to promote it; in fact, to their all powerful influence must we attribute our success.

In taking our leave of you upon this occasion, we do so with the confident and pleasurable expectation of meeting you again at no distant day; but be assured wherever our lot may be cast, the fair ladies and gallant gentlemen of Montreal will be held in grateful rememberance by each and every member of the Germania Musical Society.

Grand Panarama.—Brewer's moving Panorama, has arrived in town and will open in the Masonic Hall, Notre Dame Street, on Wednesday evening, the 17th instant. We notice by the Upper Canada papers, that this wonderful exhibition has been attended by a great number of persons who have been astonished at the magnificence of the spectacle. We extract the following from the Toronto Colonist of the 7th instant:—

Mamoth Cave Exhibition.—On Wednesday evening this Exhibition was visited by the Governor General and Lady Emma Bruce, the Honourable Colonel and Mrs. Bruce, Col. Antrobus and family, Col. Sir Hew Dalrymple and the Officers of the 71st Highlanders, Hon Hamilton Merritt and family, Hon W. Robinson and family, Mr. Widder and family, Mr. Sheriff Jarvis and family, and several other parties of distinction now residing in or connected with the city. The Company was enlivened by the strains of the Band of the 71st, kindly permitted by their Colonel, and the distinguished company all expressed themselves highly gratified with the Exibition. The wonders of this extraordinary freak of nature seeming to strike every one with the greatest astonishment

Fete Champetre at Monklands.—Mr Compain's first attempt to turn Monklands into a kind of Ranelagh or Vauxhall, came off very satisfactorily on Friday last, despite of a high wind which prevailed and destroyed some of the scenery of the theatre erected in front of the house, and also the non-arrival from New York of the ropes on which the Martinetti family were to ascend to the top of the building. However, every one came to be pleased, and, if we may believe their testimonials of approbation, were so. The performers alluded to did sundry most wonderful things, equally distinguished for grace and agility—the Ravels, we opine, will find it difficult to outshine them. Compain's refreshments, as might be expected, were first rate, and the consumption thereof must have yielded a plentiful harvest to our Canadian "Ude." The 20th band added very greatly to the entertainment, which, we observe, will be repeated to-day, or rather a similar one will be given, and, upon this occasion, we are informed, the great ascent upon the tight rope to the roof of the house, will positively come off. We sincerely wish our enterprising townsman every success in his undertaking.—See Adv.

Sale of Real Property.—Valuable Investment.—The Sale of the Seigniory of La Salle which is to take place at noon, on Tuesday the 25th of the present month, at noon, at the auction rooms of Mr. Leeming, in this city, presents an opportunity for investing but seldom met with. Within twelve miles of this city, of great extent, this property, from its large and daily increasing revenues, offers to capitalists a return for investment but rarely obtainable.

FIRST TRIP OF THE NIAGARA FROM GLASGOW.

'Tis rather a novel feature in the history of sociality to see or hear of a soiree occurring on board a ship; yet many a scheme is had recourse to, to break the dreary monotony which prevails during a voyage across the Atlantic. The mind is daily brought to task to contrive some new source of amusement, and while change is essential to preserve its healthy tone, it also exhilirates the depressed and languishing spirits: hence originated the idea of holding a soiree on board the "Niagara" while sailing up the broad bosom of the St. Lawrence on the evening of the 6th June. The passengers of both sexes, young and old, appeared on deck in clean and decent apparel, all bent on spending one happy evening together ere they would separate to pursue their various fortunes in the New World.

After partaking of tea, and the children having, through the kindness of Capt. Munro, been served with sweetmeats and fruit, some interesting addresses were delivered, a propos to the occasion, numerous songs, comic, sentimental and patriotic, were sung, and the intervals filled up by the cheering strains of the violin. The evening was calm and serene,— and to the listening ear, the music floating along the calm surface of the waters transmitted the keenest sensations of pleasure, &c. At a certain stage of the proceedings the following address was presented by the passengers:—

"No breath of air to break the wave,"

To Captain Munro, the Officers and Crew of the "Niagara",

The passengers on board the "Niagara" thinking that the termination of their voyage is likely soon to occur, feel in duty bound, 'ere they leave the vessel, to tender their heartfelt thanks to the Captain, Officers and Crew of the vessel, for the various acts of kindness and attention shewn towards them, and for the uniform urbanity displayed towards them during the passage. They cannot omit this opportunity of expressing their warmest feelings towards Captain Munro, for his peculiar attention to the sick, and while congratulating themselves on their safe and speedy voyage thus far, and the general harmony which has all along existed on board, beg to express their best wishes for the welfare of Captain Munro, the Officers and crew of the ship, and to say in conclusion, that there kindness shall be remembered with feelings of deep and enduring gratitude.

To this address Captain Munro, in a brief and polite manner, returned thanks.

The following lines, hurriedly composed for the occasion, were recited:—

O, may we not, while thus assembled here,
Just breathe one other sigh for Scotland dear.
Far from her shores tho' we her sons may roam,
And seek in foreign climes another home,
Yet, Scotia, yet our hearts will turn to thee
While there remains one shred of memory.
Can the sweet scenes of youth be e'er forgot,
The home of childhood—that sweet hallow'd spot.
Thy vales, sweet Caledonia, and blue hills,
The murmuring music of thy lonely rills?
Ah! no; tho' pilgrims on a foreign shore,
Those heart-imprintings will erase no more:
To those we left behind, the lov'd, the true,
We yet would waft one long, one fond adieu,
And to thee, Scotia; but who, alas, can tell,
Our feelings while we breathe this last farewell.

To this, succeeded "Auld Lang Syne," the chorus of which was lustily and loudly sung by the whole assemblage. The company was cheered by the presence of the ladies and gentlemen of the cabin, who, from the first, took a deep interest in the proceedings, and mingled freely in the merry Scotch reels which wound up the convivialities of the evening—an evening spent in sweet and social happiness on the blue waters of the St. Lawrence, and which will be long remembered by the passengers on board the "Niagara."

The passengers on board the "Niagara," of Glasgow, while on their passage to Montreal were highly gratified by the several opportunities they had of attending at public worship, conducted by Mr. John McDougall, late pastor of the Congregational Church, at Newarthill, Lanarkshire. It was extremely pleasing to observe how they all mustered on deck, and with what earnestness they listened to the able ministrations of this kind and unassuming individual.

Fatal Accident at Beauport.—We regret to learn that two young Canadian lads named Gagnon and Andry, from St. Roch suburb, and in the employ of Mr. Henderson at the Rope Walk, Beauport, lost their lives yesterday morning through carelessness or ignorance, in descending into a well containing foul air. It would appear that they went down for amusement knowing that there was very little water, but they were both suffocated. An Irish labourer passing by immediately volunteered to go down to their assistance, and unfortunately met the same fate. The three, bodies were recovered and brought to town yesterday afternoon.

We understand since that one boy first descended alone, and not returning, the other followed to see what detained him. The well had only lately been cleaned out.

We have been told that this makes not less than fourteen lives that have been lost in this well, on various different occasion within some ten years past, from the same cause. It this be the case we would advise the parties concerned to fill it up as it is very dangerous when open and can be of no service if it contains so little water.—Quebec Mercury.

MONKLAND HOTEL.

TEA GARDENS & PLEASURE GROUND.

MR. COMPAIN has the honor to announce to the Public, that he has LEASED, for a term of years MONKLAND FARM containing about 200 acres of Land, beautifully wooded, the late Residence of the Governor General, which he has fitted up as a PUBLIC HOTEL and RESTAURANT.
Gentlemen desirous of giving Dinner and Pic-Nic Parties, may be accommodated by giving notice the day before.
Ice Creams, and other refreshments, of various kinds, always ready.
The Healthy Situation of MONKLAND, (which contains upwards of SIXTY ROOMS, on the rising ground to the West end of the Montreal Mountain and commanding a Splendid View of the River St. Lawrence, the Lachine Rapids, the Ottawa River, and the adjacent country,) is too well known to require any remark: and the Extensive Grounds attached, afford a large and perfectly safe PLEASURE GROUND, in which children may roam at pleasure. All this will, he feels confident, justify the support of those whose desire it is to retire to the country during the heat of Summer, and be still within a few minutes walk of the City.
It is his intention to establish a LINE of OMNIBUSES from his house in Place D'Armes to Monkland.

PLANTAGENET WATER.

MONTREAL, March 30, 1850.
I have recommended the "Plantagenet Water" to a great number of my patients, and have found it to act as a gentle aperient—a small quantity producing that effect in many constitutions, and this I consider a very great advantage.

MONTREAL, April 10, 1850.
Sir,—I have now prescribed this Plantagenet Water for upwards of a year, and I am very happy in being able to state to you, that the opinion which I formed of their probable usefulness, based on Mr. Hunt's Analysis, at the time of my commencing to use them, has been fully and satisfactorily verified by subsequent experience. I now recommend them extensively, and I have frequent opportunities of hearing from my patients that their employment has been attended with all the beneficial results for which they were prescribed.
