To Issue Special Stamp

Commemorating the 400th anniversary of the landing of Jacques Cartier on Canadian soil, the post office department will issue a special double sized pictorial stamp. The date of issue, which has not been decided, will coincide with the celebrations now being arranged. The stamp of the denomination of three cents, will be blue in color. The inscription will include the words "1534-Jacques Cartier-1934" and the vignette will depict the scene of Cartier's ship when he approached land. It will show Cartier and four of his men clustering around the tiller in a scene of action and anticipation.

Purse Presented to Departing Litchfield Couple

A delightful evening was spent on Wednesday, of last week, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown, Bryson, Que., when a number of friends and neighbours gathered to spend a few hours with them before they leave for their new home at Silver Centre, Ont.

Dancing was enjoyed by all until about midnight when Mrs. George Stewart read the following address, while Mrs. Gordon Wilson presented Mr. and Mrs. Brown with a purse of money as a token of good-will and best wishes.

Following is the address: Dear Mr. and Mrs. Brown and family: It is with deep regret that we learn of your departure from our midst. Since you have come to our community you have endeared yourselves to us and your departure leaves a vacancy which will be hard to fill.

Together we have shared each other's joys and sorrows and whether in enjoyment or at work, you have always taken part cheerfully and by doing so, proved yourselves good neighbours.

As we know that another community will soon claim you as citizens, we feel we cannot let you go away without expressing our regard for you. We therefore ask you to accept this purse as a token of our good will to you.

May health, long-life and prosperity be yours is the united wish of your friends in Litchfield.

Mrs. Brown, although taken by surprise, expressed her thanks in a few words and the guests responded by singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Immediately afterwards tea was served and dancing resumed until "the wee hours of the morning."

A letter was read by the Supply Secretary, Mrs. Gordon Elliott, asking that the Bala be sent to Chalmers Church not later than June 9th.

The speaker of the evening Mrs. Graham, gave a very interesting talk on Egypt, dealing with the habits and customs of the people of that land and relating some of her experiences while there.

A feature of the evening was a play, those taking part were Misses Lucil Styles, Blanch Lunam, Etta Loken, Marion Elliott, Irene Gamble and Eunice Whelen.

A solo rendered by Mrs. Lawrence Smith was much enjoyed.

We Sympathize

The editor of the Winchester Press explains the position of the weekly editor in the following pointed manner: "Yes, we know all about hard times, scarcity of money, taxes and all the rest. We have the same troubles as you, and it is because of these troubles we appeal to you to do your bit, and help us out by paying your subscription to this paper. You say you have to pay your taxes in cash, bank interest in cash, etc. We have to pay Cash for our paper, wages, rent, fuel, postage and many other things that are necessary to send this paper to you each week. All we ask is that you pay your subscription, due and overdue. We have a good many overdue, and the total would mean a big lift if we could get it bit by bit. That is why we make this appeal."

United Y. P. S. Social Evening

About 75 young people met for a social evening in the Sunday school room of the United Church, under the presidency of Wendell Wilson, on Monday evening, April 9. The recreation took the form of an automobile party, and all kinds of games, contests, and relays with a motor theme were enjoyed. At the close of the evening, dainty refreshments were served by the efficient committee led by Miss Muriel Chamberlain. In the business period, plans were completed and practices arranged for the presentation of the annual Y. P. S. musical comedy in the early part of May. This sprightly operetta will be replete with music, songs and drills, and will require about 50 characters in its presentation. Arrangements have also been made for the annual banquet the latter part of May with the Woman's Association acting as hostesses.

Tanning Rabbit Skin

The method of treating rabbit skins at home, so that they can be used for coat trimmings is as follows:

First remove fat and flesh from the skin, then cover the flesh side with salt and allow to stand three or four days in a fairly cool place to dry out. Make a tanning solution of 4 pounds of salt and 5 gallons of water in a wooden tub, adding carefully 2 fluid ounces of sulphuric acid. Allow the skin to remain in this for one to three weeks, then rinse and dry in a shady place. Work and stretch the skin to make it pliable and rub in a little neatfoot oil.

Ants Carry Earth to Trees

Spherical masses of earth from which various forms of vegetation grow are frequently found in the branches of tropical trees, and sometimes these reach remarkable size. They are the nests of certain species of ants that carry the earth up the trunks of the trees particle by particle. It is believed by some that the plants found growing in these nests are actually planted by the ants, but this is open to doubt. Suspended masses of earth in a humid tropical forest might easily become seeded without the aid of the ants.

Knew What She Wanted

A negro woman walked into an insurance office and asked whether they dealt in fire insurance.

"We do," a clerk replied. "What do you want insured?"

"Mah husband."

"Then you don't want fire insurance," smiled the clerk, as he reached for another application form. "What you want is a life insurance policy."

"No, Ah don't," exclaimed the woman. "Ah wants fire insurance. Mah husband's been fired fo' times in de las' two weeks."

Jill of the Fields

A ROMANCE
By Kennaway James

SYNOPSIS

Motherless Jill Merridew becomes the death of her father, owner of a farm. She counts on Mark Hanson, head man to assist her. Mark, who professes to be investigating the history of old county families, on returning to London he meets two foreigners. The reason for Phillip's interest proves to be a chemical fertilizer discovered by Jill's father, which he had not made known to Jill.

Phillip finds Jill upset over Mark who has declared his love for her.

A body of a man is found in one of the wheat fields. A lighter is found under the body which proves to belong to old George. Barbour rushes Jill into an engagement. She receives a letter from Mark giving notice. Jill is furious that her engagement is announced in the papers.

"You won't tell him I've been over Stone Town, will you," asked Simmons, a little nervously.

"Of course not," laughed Jill. "He can wait till he sees it in your own paper. And now I'll tell you something which I don't want you to tell him. It is this, that speaking of her engagement, Miss Merridew said the report was annoyingly premature."

Blessing upon blessing!

"Oh, thank you, Miss Merridew. You are—you are a sport!" Simmons could hardly restrain his gratitude, and not without reason, for he became the envy of his more sophisticated colleagues and was complimented personally by the baron who owned his newspaper. And if any journalist wanted more than that he was not likely to get it.

It did not take Simmons long to find Hissopp, who was already in the little barn to which the police had assigned the Press. Hissopp, thinking something else good had come his way, went over to the farm, with all his accustomed confidence.

Jill wasted no words when she met him.

"Who told you I was engaged to be married to Mr. Barbour?" she asked in a way which rather surprised Mr. Hissopp. He was accustomed to the sight of his paper ensuring respect, if not genuflection. With the secrecy which newspaper men cultivate, his first impulse was not to tell Jill.

"I'm afraid—er—Miss Merridew, that these are little things which come in the way of a reporter's work."

"Obviously," said Jill, "but that does not stop me asking where you got the information. I want it for no improper reason, and if I don't get it, I shall run up your newspaper and ask them for it."

Hissopp could scarcely refrain from laughing as he thought of the reception she would get from his hard-bitten news-editor. "Miss Merridew," he could hear the later saying, "either the report is true or it is not. If it is true, it stands. If it is untrue we will deny it. Thank you, good-day."

He thought rapidly for a few moments. Perhaps, after all, there was no particular reason for withholding the information. He had given no pledge of confidence, and secrecy had never been suggested. Barbour had blabbed it all without the least reticence. Further, to offend Jill was not the way of obtaining her help. Indeed, the fact that he was actually speaking to her was a stroke of luck, and his subconscious mind was busy at work wondering how best to make use of the opportunity.

"Well, as a matter of fact, Miss Merridew," he said, "it was Mr. Barbour himself who told me. I won't say he gave it out as for publication, but, on the other hand, he mentioned no restrictions."

"But how came he to tell you?"

"Well, I asked if I could see you, and was told you were with him. Then he came down and said I could not be allowed to speak to you. I asked him his authority. I thought I was entitled to do that—and he said because he had just become engaged to you."

"Just like that?"

"Yes, like that," said Hissopp, whereupon Jill showed a gleam of anger in her eyes. "I hope no harm has come of its being published?" added Hissopp.

"Oh, no, not at all," said Jill. "It was only that I did not want to blame the wrong person. I'm very grateful for what you've told me."

"Don't mention it, Miss Merridew," said Hissopp. "And now I wonder if you could do me a little favour?"

"I will if I can," said Jill, "but I've been asked so many strange favours lately that I can make no promise."

Hissopp's sub-conscious mind had done its work and had decided that now would be the time to ask Jill to show him round the old house. The conversation so far had taken place at the door.

"Well, I should be deeply grateful if you would let me have a look round the interior of your wonderful old farm. You see, people are all anxious to know of its beauties."

"And your paper to publish them?"

"No, I think that is all for today," said Hissopp. "When Barbour appeared Jill went directly to the point of the premature notice of their engagement."

"By the way it was you who went down to see the newspaper man yesterday afternoon. What did you say to him?"

"Oh, simply told him you couldn't see him. After all, Jill, at a time like this, you've got to be protected against things of that kind. Your poor nerves must be getting absolutely worn out."

"They are," said Jill, "but I'm thinking of looking after them myself for the next few days."

"What do you mean?" asked Barbour.

"Well, let's be frank," replied Jill. "Supposing I ask you a straight question, will you give me a straight answer."

"I always give straight answers to straight questions," said Barbour with a touch of superiority.

"Not always," said Jill, looking him very keenly in the eyes. "You have given me a very crooked one already. Tell me, when you spoke to that man—his name was Hissopp—did you tell him that the reason for your safeguarding me against intrusion was because you had just become engaged to me?"

"Well, I may have, of course," said Barbour, "but I certainly don't remember. Anyway, what makes you ask the question? You seem to have been spending time on the matter."

"I like to be sure of things," said Jill, "and I'm pretty certain in this case that you did tell him, and the sooner you admit it the better. And that, Phillip, you may take as an ultimatum."

"Very well, then," said Phillip. "I will say that I told him, but that I had forgotten that I had done so."

Jill gave a shrug of her shoulders and made a grimace.

"Tastes nasty," she said. "Anyway, I've had it all from Hissopp himself, so we won't say any more about it; but let this be understood, whether we continue our engagement or not, that I don't like men who tell lies, and that's what you've been doing."

Barbour did some quick thinking.

"Jill," he said, "I must have told him unwittingly, perhaps because I was so proud at being able to call you mine. Do forgive me, darling."

Barbour could see that he was in grave danger of losing Jill. This, he told himself, he could not doubt bear. He had lost girls before and survived, but losing that formula was a different matter. No, whatever happened, he must hang on.

"See, Jill," he said to her kindly, "you are overwrought today. Don't let's talk about it for a day or so. We shall see things in a better light then."

He stroked her hair, as was his wont, and Jill for a moment wondered if she were not being too hard on him. After all, he had been very gentle to her and sympathetic. She must allow him one or two failings, for there was no such thing as the perfect man.

"All right, then," she said, "don't let us see each other again until tomorrow. But I won't want you to consider you are engaged to me any more until then. We can talk it over again. Good-bye, Phillip. I like you an awful lot, really."

Phillip Barbour was a clever man. He did not attempt to take her in his arms. He raised her hand and kissed it, not once, but many times; then he left her.

He walked moodily across the fields in the direction of Morley village, conscious that every piece of turf upon which he trod belonged to Jill. He had had an unpleasant experience, and it was one which would need some thinking over. Anger was uppermost in his mind, for he could see that his trivial lapse of tact with Hissopp had come very near to losing him the formula, and Jill with it.

He was not the only man in those fields at that moment who was thinking of Jill, for across the next meadow came a figure which seemed somehow familiar to him. It was that of Mark Hanson.

It was not exactly the best time for the two men to meet, as they did, a few minutes later at Holly Bush Sile. Their thoughts before the actual meeting were not dissimilar. To Mark, here came the man who had caused all the trouble, for, as Mark worked it out, Barbour had not only stolen Jill from him, but had some mysterious finger in some mysterious pie which had led to the murder. Old George had said as much, and old George did not say empty things.

To Barbour, Mark was anathema, because he had shown so clearly his dislike of him. Further, Mark enjoyed Jill's confidence, called her by her Christian name and was the only other man about whom Jill seemed to trouble. Some intuition told him that Mark was behind Jill's attitude to him to-day. Perhaps, in a way, he was right, for Jill had not gone through her experience with Mark that morning without appreciating the strength of Mark's character, without failing to admire the manner in which he spoke to her for her own good. It was treatment she could understand.

Still, as Mark cogitated upon these things, he was not pleased to have his thoughts broken by the appearance of the man who, he considered, had done him more harm than any man living. He had his own views of the engagement between Jill and Barbour, but his sensitive nature made him visualise himself in the light, indirectly, of an employee of Barbour's. It was intolerable, and was made more so by Barbour's greeting.

"Good-day, Hanson."

"Ay," said Mark as, with native politeness, he stood aside to allow Phillip to cross the stile which the two men had reached almost simultaneously. Phillip, however, did not cross the stile, but leant upon it as though prepared for conversation. After all, he had thought, it might not pay him to quarrel with Mark at this juncture. He was too much in Jill's confidence. (To be Continued)

Brazil Buys Planes For Army Air Mail

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil—Brazil, which has used army aviators to fly air mail on interior lines since 1931, has purchased 25 new airplanes in the United States to expand the five army air-mail lines now in existence.

The lines serve regions which hitherto had relatively slow mail service; such remote states as Matto Grosso, Brazil's wild west, and the interior of Piahy, another great cattle country, are getting mail from Rio in two days. Inasmuch as the coast cities are well served by American, French and German companies, the army has concentrated on the interior.

The first line, established in 1931, ran only between Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, but shortly thereafter was extended to Goyaz, large hinterland plateau state which has only a short railway line. Other lines were established in quick succession, despite a setback occasioned by the 1932 Sao Paulo rebellion.

It is now definitely established that broken tulips are the result of a mosaic disease which constitutes a distinct menace to the culture of this popular spring flower. Tulip mosaic or breaking is the oldest known plant virus disease.

What Does Your Handwriting Show

By GEOFFREY ST. CLAIR

(Grapho-Analyst.)

All rights reserved.

(Editor's Note: These articles on Character from Handwriting have aroused enormous interest. Many readers are sending in specimens of their own handwriting for a personal analysis, and replies are being mailed as fast as possible. If you want your writing analysed, see the announcement at the foot of this article.)

A Grapho-Analyst's mailbox is very interesting. It is a reflection of people's hopes and fears, worries and problems—it is a very mirror of life itself. And for each question, the Grapho-Analyst can supply an answer.

Handwriting shows so plainly the character of the writer. Grapho-Analysis is an X-Ray that cuts through the verbiage, and gets right down to the very nature of the writer.

A girl writes in tormented fashion, pleading for advice on how to deal with her brother and father. They are making life miserable for herself and her mother, and threaten to do bodily harm if the latter do not pass over some money that they have made themselves. The writing of the father and brother show greed and selfishness, with a brutal will that sometimes rushes over into violence.

Another girl is having trouble with her boy friend. Is he to be trusted. There are many letters of this kind. And very often we can give a reassuring answer. Sometimes, our advice will hurt—but the truth is what people are asking for.

A mother is very anxious to know the characteristics of her young daughters. And what talents they possess. In this way, she can encourage them along the lines in which they can make most progress and in which they will be happy.

Another mother is perplexed about her boy. He is the only child she has, but she doesn't understand him. Grapho-Analysis reveals his hidden traits, and suggests a line for the mother to work along.

A young man from the West says his life has been miserable, and try as he will, he cannot do anything right. His writing reveals the tremendous colour in his nature, and the need for great control. He has a hard row to hoe before he can regain normalcy.

The letters show how many people are square pegs in round holes. Real talents wasted because the possessor is in a vocation totally unsuited to him.

Grapho-Analysis is a very helpful. It reveals not only the major characteristics, but also those hidden tendencies that are gradually looming up, and will, ere long, affect one's mode of life. If they are strong points, they can be developed. Often, they are potential weaknesses, and need curbing. Grapho-Analysis shows the way.

What does your handwriting show? Let a skilled Grapho-Analyst tell you the secrets that your writing reveals. You will be surprised at the revelations. And the analysis may open the door of opportunity for you. Send a letter in your normal writing, with 10c coin and a stamped (3c) addressed envelope to: Geoffrey St. Clair, Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. W., Toronto. If you send two specimens of writing, enclose coin for each.

Working of Hydro And What It Does

Five Items Listed Below Will Give Voter a Clear Outline

Hydro is publicly owned, and co-operative; the Commission acts as agent of the municipalities buying power from it, operating and administering the buyer's electrical plants. Hydro's generating plants and transmission lines are financed through the Commission by the Province of Ontario; the municipal plants by the issue of municipal bonds.

Hydro sells power to the purchasing municipalities at cost, this cost is made up as follows:

1. Interest on the Commission's capital investment.
 2. Sinking fund charges, on a 40-year basis.
 3. An annual charge for renewals, to maintain efficiency.
 4. Contingencies.
 5. Operation and administration.
- These charges total up to about 11 p.c. on the Commission's investment. Where power purchased (not generated) by the Commission is being sold, the cost to the Commission replaces part of the charge under each of the five headings listed above.

The rates charged in any municipality must cover these charges of the Commission plus similar charges on that municipality's plant.

The investment in the Hydro undertakings had reached on 31st October, 1933, a total of about $400,000,000, of which three-fourths represents the Commission's generating plants and transmission lines, and one-fourth the municipal plants.

And He Is Still "Tired of It All"

Philadelphia—Announcing he was "tired of it all," Charles Hamilton, 34, drove his landlady, her two daughters and her son out of the house. Then he barricaded the doors and nailed fast the windows.

The landlady ran to a police station and patrolmen sprinted back to the house to foil the suicide. Breaking in, they found the prostrate Hamilton—asleep.

So Hamilton repeated he was "tired of it all."

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get Aspirin Tablets. Aspirin is the trademark of The Bayer Company, Limited, and the name Bayer in the form of a cross, is on each tablet. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Aspirin Tablets dissolve so completely they leave no irritating particles. Get a box of 12 tablets or a bottle of 24 or 100 at any drug store.

Hans Christian Andersen

A telegram from Copenhagen announces the death of Hans Christian Andersen, the celebrated Danish writer in his seventy-first year. He was the son of humble parents, and his early years were passed in struggling poverty and obscurity. His abilities at length attracted attention, interest was exerted on his behalf, and he was sent to a Government school and educated free of expense. He then went to college and soon afterwards began to obtain a reputation by his writings. After travelling in Italy he visited the Danish court in 1844, and received a pension in the following year. His fairy tales, with which his reputation is associated, have been translated into very many languages, and are everywhere popular. In April last, his seventieth birthday was celebrated with much enthusiasm. Deputation from various parts presented their congratulations to him, the King of Denmark decorated him, and an edition of one of his works was published in fifteen languages to commemorate the event.

Visiting the Falls of Niagara

Under the above heading this item appears:

"The appearance of the Falls of Niagara is so well known that we do not propose giving any representation of their general aspect for the present. Their extent is so great that there are many features about them worthy of being made into pictures, and the groups of visitors constantly at the Falls and going to and from each noted point of view will afford fresh matter, and may give new ideas of the place, to those who have not been able to make a visit to it themselves.

Those who put on waterproof dresses which are supplied on the spot, to visit the lower part of the Falls, seem, when they catch the eye of the visitor, as if they were a new species of the genus homo. The dresses are of a yellow colour; and, as the costume beneath is entirely covered, and but a partial glimpse of the face may, perhaps, only be seen at first, there is nothing definite to tell what they are. The first idea is that they are Indians; or the notion may suggest itself that they are stuffed figures which have escaped from the museum. Still the costume is useful, for by its means, gentlemen and even ladies, can in perfect safety go in behind the water as it falls, and can even visit what is called the "Temple of the Winds" on the American side.

Country Doctor Regains Eminence

Patients Found They Could Be Treated Satisfactorily at Home

Chicago.—The country doctor and other general practitioners of medicine are returning to their former place of eminence as a result of the economic depression, Dr. Dean Lewis, Baltimore, told the Congress of Medical Education recently.

Dr. Lewis, president of the American Medical Association, urged educators to aid the movement toward restoration of the once high place of the general practitioner by the work in medical schools.

"While the medical profession has been studying over-specialization within its ranks, the economic depression has done much to restore the general practitioner," Dr. Lewis said in an advance of his address for the congress. "Persons have found that they could be treated satisfactorily in their own homes by their family physicians. This is a notable change from the preceding period, during which the public was educated to believe that the specialist was the last word."

Dr. Lewis said that conditions of life in small communities must be made more attractive to hold young physicians. He also asked that a plan be worked out to provide the general practitioner with education after he has finished medical school.

At the council of the American Hospital Association, meeting in conjunction with the congress, an annual report on group hospitalization was presented.

"Group hospitalization, which enables the average man to insure himself against the costs of hospital care, has been introduced into more than 30 cities in 21 different states," the report said.

"Group hospitalization is a plan by which employed persons or members of other groups of the public each pay regular and equal subscriptions into a common fund, which is used when necessary to pay the costs of hospital services to subscribers," the report explained. The group hospitalization plans involve a cost of from $5 to $12 per year per subscriber.

Mrs. Roosevelt Greatest Woman Personality

Storrs, Conn.—Men and women of Connecticut State College were almost unanimous in choosing Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, wife of the United States President, as the greatest personality in a poll conducted by the college paper.

They also agreed a course preparing for marriage should be given.

Business Increases More Employed

17 Per Cent. Jump is Shown in Department Store Sales

Washington.—The N.R.A. pointed recently to a new sign of better business, increased department store sales. Also it enjoyed the first-fruit of its hour-reducing campaign.

The announcement that department store sales increased 17 per cent. for the first two months of 1934 as compared with last year, came from the Federal Reserve Board.

Announcement of a proposed 10 per cent. hour slash, without a reduction in pay, was made by the refractories industry. The employment of about 2,000 more men was indicated.

Hurry and Bustle of Modern Life May Cause Encephalitis

Victims of Sleeping Sickness, Once Recovered, Are Often Subject to Recurrent Attacks

Encephalitis, the disease which has locked Patricia Maguire in more than two years of slumber and which claimed many victims in the St. Louis area last summer, is a disease of the 20th century, according to Dr. Lloyd Arnold, of Chicago.

The doctor believes something in our noisy, speed-mad modern living permits sleeping sickness to gain hold. While science wrestles with this new antagonist in its laboratories, a little family continues to hope and pray in suburban Oak Park for the recovery of the young woman of 28 years. What chance has she? Dr. Arnold and other scientists who have studied this strange malady offer no definite answer.

Encephalitis sufferers, he said, after they once return to apparently normal health, are frequently subject to recurrent attacks.

Authorities on the disease agree, Dr. Arnold said, that the Oak Park girl's case is one of the most unusual in medical annals. Since she lost consciousness she has never said a word and it is only recently that she has given any sign—very simple ones, indeed,—that could be interpreted as steps towards consciousness. They consist of an occasional half-smile or mastication of her food.

Be Punctual

Be punctual. It is a good habit to cultivate. The Bowmanville Statesman in a recent issue says:

"One of the many resolutions many men and women should make, and live up to, is to be punctual. There are persons who habitually disregard this very important courtesy. Meetings are delayed, not infrequently the time of governing bodies is wasted while waiting for one of the delinquents. In some communities it has long been accepted that meetings will not be opened at the hour named. Even some churches have fallen into this annoying practice. There is nothing much more trying to the patience than the conduct of men, and women, too, who cause and show no concern for having wasted other people's time or for having disturbed a service or public gathering by their disregard and indifference. This is a habit that should be 'sworn off.'"

Gets License

Enrico Caruso, 29, Obtains Wedding Permit in Arizona City

Phoenix, Ariz.—A couple giving the names of Enrico Caruso, 29, and Helen A. Packhiser, 28, of Middletown, N.Y., obtained a marriage license here recently.

Whether the man is the son of the famous tenor has not been learned, but a Hollywood address which he gave was found to be that of Enrico Caruso, Jr.

Walter S. Wilson, clerk of the Superior Court, who issued the license, said he asked Caruso if he was related to the Italian tenor.

The prospective bridegroom laughed, Wilson said, saying, "We're not from Hollywood, and we're not notable."

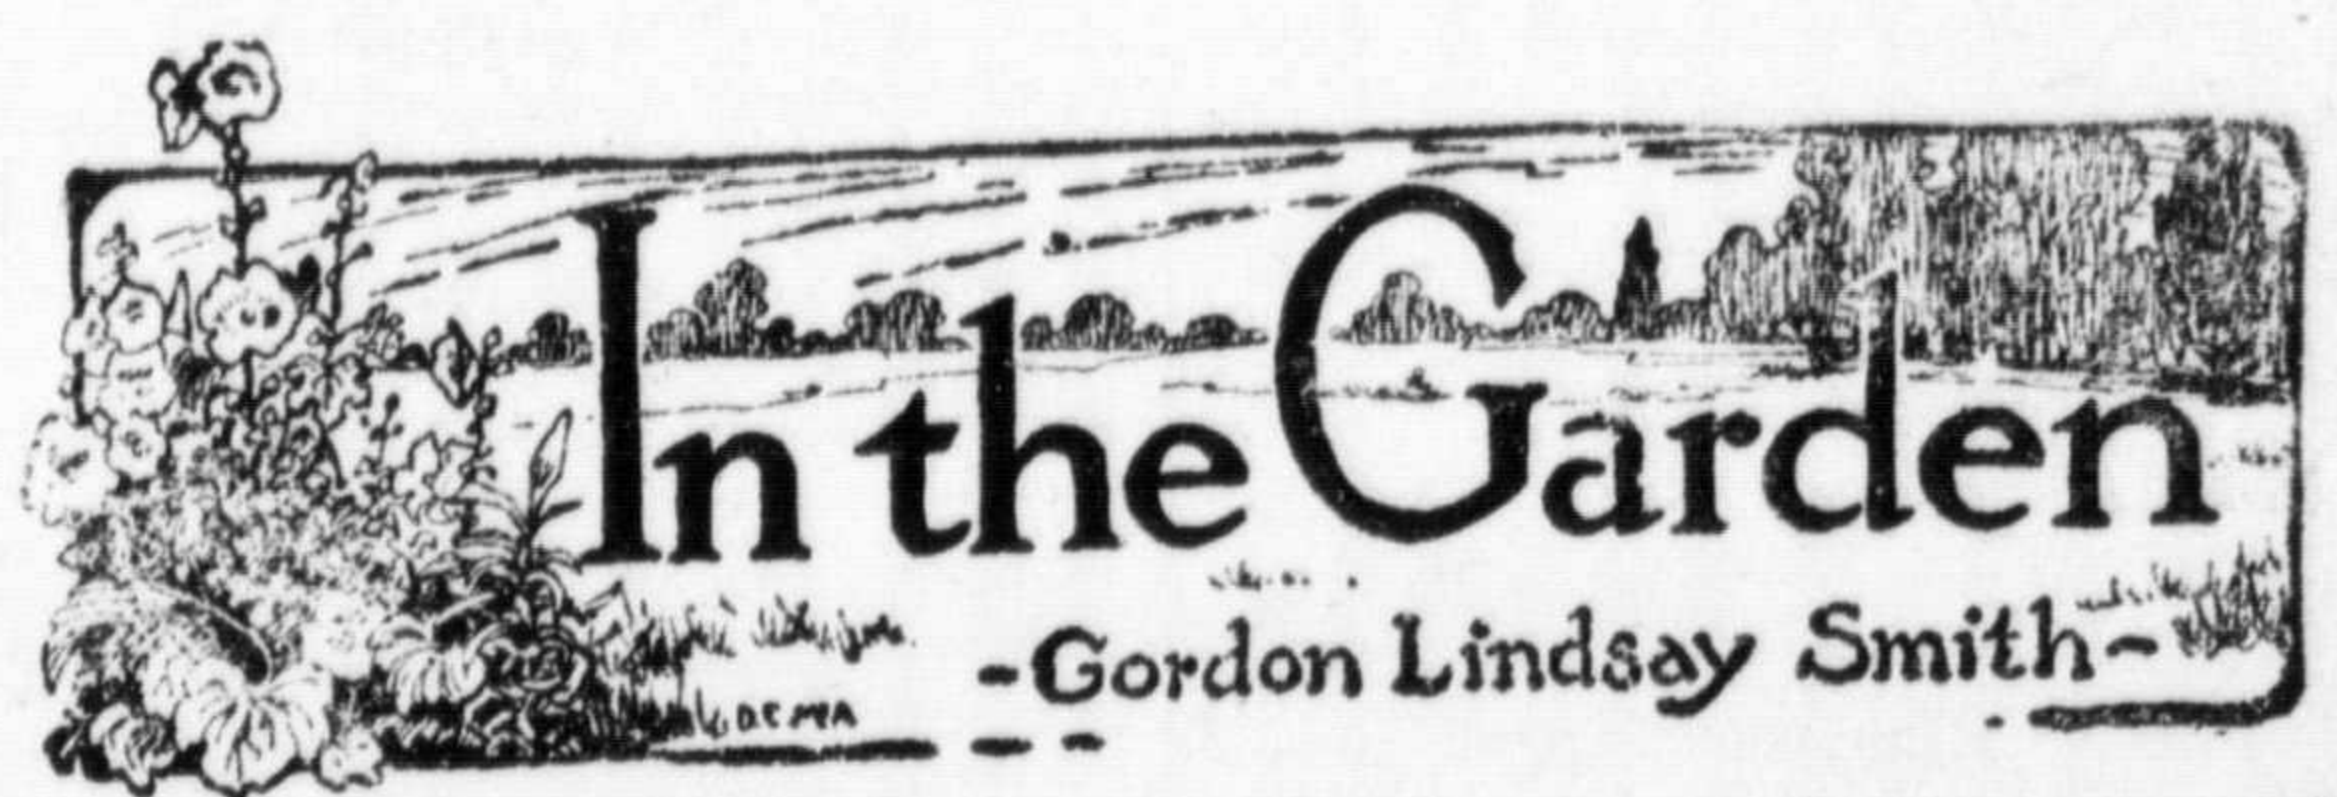

The couple could not be located after leaving Wilson's office.

Hypocrisy is no cheap vice; nor can our natural temper be masked for many years together.—Burke.

Golfing or Hunting?

Teddy Turner, Massachusetts open golf champion, started out over the course at Pinehurst, N.C., to bag a few birdies and eagles, but came back instead with a wild Canadian blue goose.

PLANTING SHRUBBERY

With a few exceptions, and these are mentioned in any good catalogue, shrubbery, trees and ornamental vines are planted in the spring just as soon as possible. The sooner their roots are covered with soil the better even if this means simply planting them temporarily in a shallow trench. Especially when near a new house where the earth is largely barren stuff thrown out of the cellar excavation, some good soil and a little fertilizer should be added and it is also important to water thoroughly for a week or two. With the larger shrubs and trees prune severely before planting. The soil must be dressed thoroughly about the roots, and trees should be tied to a stout stake to prevent the wind working them loose.

VEGETABLES

A good garden will save money, improve the health of the family and provide more real pleasure than any other acre on the farm. For those who are planning to devote considerable ground to this enterprise authorities advise selecting a piece of warm, rather light soil, handy to the buildings and laying it out in 100 foot rows for horse cultivation. This is about the right length for many kinds of vegetables for the average family, but much more than is required for lettuce, radish or parsley. On the other hand those things which are to be grown for winter storage, like carrots, beets, potatoes, white beans, cabbage and onions, will require several rows.

LAYOUTS

Even the most unpretentious dwelling, if clothed in trees and shrubbery, fulfills the real requirements of a home. There are, too, practical advantages of such planting, especially in more open places, where trees are used to break the force of storms, prevent erosion, and provide some protection against sweltering heat in summer. Again flowers, shrubbery and trees, grouped about a building add distinct value to that property when the time comes to dispose of it. Rules for arranging value are simple. The main object is to tie the dwelling to the ground, to make it appear as a natural development. Well around the outside, with possibly more emphasis at the rear, will be the larger and taller trees. These may be native sorts, like the Elm, Maple or Pine or some of the beautiful imported species such as Swedish Maple, with its bronze-purple foliage, the Japanese Walnut, the Kentucky Coffee Tree or the striking Lombardy Poplar. Against stone, stucco, or gleaming white frame, some of the smaller evergreens like Colorado Spruce, White Cedar and the pyramidal Arborvitae are very effective. While the trees are used to break the general straight lines of the building, detail in this respect is worked out with shrubs. Groups of two or three of the same specimens are planted within a dozen feet of the house with taller sorts at the corners. Shrubs range in height from 18 inches in the case of some of the Spiraea to Honey-suckle and Lilac which reach up 12 feet or more. They are used to screen basement windows, and break the straight lines about steps, corners, and walks. They gradually lift up the vision from the wide expanse of level lawn to the higher trees in the background. Just as the shrubs are used to lead up to the trees, perennial flowers and spring bulbs are grouped in and around the clumps of shrubbery.

To Put Leisure Time to Best Uses

Canadians are interested in putting their leisure time to its best uses, according to the Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare, Ottawa, which has completed distribution of a series of bulletins on "The Challenge of Leisure." Officials of the council said the "hunger for worth-while recreation" indicated by applications for additional bulletins, was not confined to cities and towns but was evidenced as well in rural districts.

The council, of which Miss Charlotte Whitton is director, urges communities and individuals to "organize the work of recreation, including occupational and educational interests."

Detroit Is Getting Out of the "Red"

Deficit of City Has Been More Than Cut in Half

Detroit.—There were plenty of smiles at City Hall recently. Some of the more optimistic bookkeepers looked forward to the day when they can discard their bottles of red ink and announce that Detroit is "out of the hole."

The optimism resulted from the announcement of Deputy City Treasurer Albert E. Cobo that Detroit's deficit has been cut in half. Instead of the estimated $18,000,000 deficit, the amount on the wrong side of the ledger will be nearer $9,000,000, he said. An unexpected influx of tax payments is the cause.

Still Hoping

Authorities Working On Lindbergh Kidnapping, Two Years After

New York.—Two years ago March 2nd, sometime between 8.30 and 10 o'clock, the infant son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh was "snatched" from his nursery crib at Hopewell, N.J., and there is ample evidence that the trail of his murderers is as hot now as it was two days after the abduction.

For two years the abductors of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., have eluded the most unflinching man hunt in the nation's history. But the federal men who now have charge persist in the declaration that a solution is inevitable, that a break might come at any time. New clues, of a sensational character, are in the hands of the authorities.

Spring Hat

I may wear a hat
To the meeting-house Sunday,
But spring is coming on Monday
With sky
Of Angelic blue, over-scruffed
In places
With laces
Of Florentine gold—
And who'd wear a hat
On a morning like that?
Not I! Not I!
—Helene Seaman, in the Christian Science Monitor.

WATCH YOUR DIET

By Bon Santo.

It is the custom with many people in the Spring to take a spring tonic. They seem to need it to overcome that heavy feeling the result of too many proteins during the winter.

The best tonic one can take is fruits and vegetables. Eat them lavishly and in quantity. They will zip up the system better than any medicine ever conceived.

Also add fruit juices to your Spring diet. Several glasses a day are not too much—morning, noon and night. If fruit juices are not available take tomato juice, it is just as beneficial.

In fact, the need for a spring tonic should never present itself if one will only follow the rule of taking ample fruits and vegetables throughout the year. The noon-day meal should always be a salad, made from fresh fruits and vegetables, or both. Meat is a great mistake at noon—also heavy pastries.

We cannot emphasize too strongly this fact—that the basis of a balanced diet the year round should be whole meal products (no white flour), fruits and vegetables. Eat anything else you like, but always in moderation, and stick to meat only once a day. One heavy meal a day is plenty. Make the other meals very light.

Urges Whipping For Doukhobors

Victoria, B.C.—Hornets and black-snake whips are C. S. Leary's solution for what he regards as the Doukhobor menace. Leary, Liberal member of the Provincial Legislature, denounced the Doukhobors, a religious sect which has embarrassed authorities by parading naked.

"They neither vote, fight, nor obey the law," he says. "The time has come when a showdown should be called for."

New Paris Quotas Affect Canada, U.S.

The typewriters and harvesters are largely imported from the United States.

Three Canadians Get $25,000 Each

Share In Annuity Estate — One's Husband Jobless For Four Years

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"Stunned" is how three local women described their feelings when told that they will share in the $6,850,000 intestate estate of late James Amm, of New York City. Each woman will receive $25,000 as her share. Grand-nieces of the deceased they are Mrs. Mildred Mancuso, this city; Mrs. Margaret Hutcheon and Mrs. Dorothy Ives, Chippawa. Mrs. Mancuso, interviewed, expressed her amazement at the news. Her husband, Peter, has been out of work for four years and the family, in which there are four children, has been on relief for some time.

"Now we are to get a fortune," she said. "It seems almost too good to be true." Mrs. Mancuso remembers Mr. Amm, who formerly conducted a grocery store in Chippawa, where he was born, and left for New York, as he said to make a fortune. They had never heard from him since.

Amy Mollison May Run for Parliament

North Hammersmith Seat Made Vacant by Death of Hon. Mary Pickford

London.—Amy Mollison, who, with her husband, James Mollison, flew the Atlantic to the United States, was understood to be a volunteer for membership in the House of Commons and to be willing—if invited—to contest the North Hammersmith seat made vacant by the death of the Honorable Mary Ada Pickford. She would run as a Conservative.

Can't Get Job

Hollywood.—Hollywood's alleged practice of casting Mexicans, Hawaiians, Arabs, colored people and Chinese as American Indians in motion pictures has put on the warpath Chief Many Treaties, six-foot Blackfoot from Montana, and Jim Thorpe, famous athlete, whose ancestors were from the Sac and Fox tribes of Oklahoma.

Says Chief Many Treaties: "It's getting so the 500 real Indians of the film city can't get a job in Hollywood any more. The Mexicans and Hawaiians are better organized and they get the jobs. The real Indians are getting shoved out of the pictures."

Walking Family Will Tour Asia

John Love, Mrs. Love and their 13-month-old baby are passing through British Columbia, bound for Asia on a "spiritually directed" walking trip. Love is 47 and his wife 33.

The pair left Ottawa in the summer of 1932. The baby was born near Quill Lake, Sask., where the Loves stopped two months. Picked up on the Cariboo highway, near here, they were given a "lift" for 20 miles. They said, however, they do not ride unless asked to do so.

The two wanderers travel only between sunrise and sunset, covering about 10 miles a day. Love carries a pack while his wife carries the baby.

To Use Steel

Britain Fits New Flying Boats With Hulls of Metal

London, Eng.—Air plans for Britain for the coming year, revealed in the air force estimates to-day, include more stainless steel for flying boats and for aircraft operating over the water.

All flying boats are now fitted with metal hulls. The last wooden hull went out of service last year.

New aircraft to be purchased for the R.A.F. include two types of the auto-giro.

A wind-tunnel is to be constructed, large enough to accommodate the actual fuselages of aircraft complete with engine and centre section.

SHAWVILLE, APRIL 12, 1934.

Hull Member's Amendment Passes in Quebec House

Women's Minimum Wage Act of Quebec was amended in the Legislative Assembly on Tuesday, April 3, to read that when a male worker replaces a female worker the wage for the male shall not be less than that fixed by the Minimum Wage Commission for the female. The amendment was introduced by Aime Guertin (Cons., Hull) who stated it was to get rid of an abuse arising from the discharging of women by certain employers who engaged boys and unemployed men at smaller wages than legally could be paid women.

$550,000,000 Response to U. S. Loan in Four Days Reported

Washington, April 8.—A $550,000,000 response in four days to the United States Government's new $1,250,000,000 bond issue was announced today by the Treasury. Secretary Henry Morgenthau termed subscriptions "gratifying" in giving notice to holders of maturing securities that their opportunity to make an exchange with the Government would terminate "within the next few days."

A Winter of New Records

Phenomenal weather records for the Ottawa district created during the past winter are reviewed in a report compiled by the field husbandry division at the Central Experimental Farm. The lowest temperature ever registered since records were taken at the farm was on December 29, when the mercury dropped to 38 degrees below zero. In addition, the coldest November, December, February and March in 44 years were also established, February 17 claiming the second lowest temperature on record, 37 degrees below zero.

The total snowfall during the past winter from October 24 to the end of March has been 107.5 inches, which is 17.5 inches over average.

Economic Conditions Decidedly Improved

Reflecting the substantial betterment in economic conditions in Canada during the last 12 months, the weekly index maintained by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, was 31 percent higher in the week ended March 31, than in the same week of last year. Each of the six factors used in the computation of the index participated in the advance.

Movement of railway freight in the first 12 weeks of the present year at 491,000 cars compared with 396,000 in the same period of 1933, recorded a gain of 24 percent.

The gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the first quarter were $27,487,000 compared with $23,573,090, a gain of 16.6 percent. The gain in the gross revenues of the Canadian National Railways on all lines was from $30,578,000 to $37,366,000 or 22.2 percent.

The new business obtained by the construction industry in the first quarter of 1934 was $19,856,000 compared with $9,703,000.

The average prices of speculative commodities showed moderate gain in the week ended March 31, over the preceding week.

When Ship Little Belt

Was Made to Understand

British cruisers hovering about our coast had captured many American vessels bound for France and had made a number of impressments. In May, 1811, Commodore John Rodgers, commanding the American frigate President, was ordered to put to sea from Chesapeake bay and protect our commerce. When 30 miles off Cape Charles, May 16, Rodgers descried a vessel which he supposed to be the British man-of-war Guerriere. He approached her and made inquiries regarding impressment. This vessel was the Little Belt, a small British frigate. She showed no colors and sailed away. The President pursuing. Overhauling her about eight o'clock, Rodgers declared she ran up colors which could not be recognized for the darkness, and fired upon the President. The fire was immediately returned, and the Little Belt was disabled in about eighteen minutes. The dispute as to which was in fault was never settled.

Elements in Human Body

It has been estimated that if all the chemical elements composing an average human body were isolated and sold at commercial prices they would be worth between 75 cents and a dollar. The actual percentages of elements in the body are given as follows: Oxygen, 65; carbon, 18; hydrogen, 10; nitrogen, 3; calcium, 1.5; phosphorus, 1; potassium, 0.25; sulphur, 0.25; sodium, 0.15; chlorine, 0.15; magnesium, 0.05; iron, 0.004; iodine 0.0004. There are also minute quantities of fluorine, silicon, manganese, zinc, copper, aluminum and possibly also arsenic. Another estimate bases the value of the average adult on the following composition: one-quarter ounce of iron, one-fifth ounce of sugar, 24 pounds of coal (carbon), 10 gallons of water, one drop tincture of iron, 1.8 pounds of phosphorus, 7 pounds lime.

Some Noted Men Who Were Below Average in Height

Biographies show that on the whole there have been more prominent men above middle height than below. On the other hand, a great many short men have made the world sit up and take notice.

There was Napoleon Bonaparte, whose short stature gave him the nickname of "the little corporal." He was 5 feet 2 inches in height. Stephen A. Douglas, who was scarcely more than five feet tall, was affectionately nicknamed "the little giant." And President Martin Van Buren was "the little magician" in allusion to his shortness of stature and his mastery of political wizardry.

Gen. George B. McClellan, the Democratic candidate against Abraham Lincoln in 1864, was "Little Mac," and sometimes—paradoxically—"Little Napoleon," a title which he shared with General Beauregard. Admiral Farragut was 5 feet 6½ inches tall.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Paul Jones and Gen. Phil Sheridan were each 5 feet; Beethoven was scarcely more than 5 feet 4 inches; John Keats a little more than 5 feet, and Swinburne and Whistler are given as 5 feet or so in stature.

Other men who are described as being short, or under medium height were Chaucer, Michelangelo, Chopin, John Milton, Robespierre, Alexander Pope, Savonarola, Thomas B. Macaulay, Charles Lamb, Ibsen, Thoreau, Thomas Moore, William H. Seward, John Quincy Adams, William Ellery Channing, Andrew Carnegie, Alexander Hamilton and the late Dwight W. Morrow.

Some Fellows Have Style That Keeps You Guessing

Among the people you meet, you now and then run across one that puzzles you. He doesn't seem to fit into the average run of human beings, and you are at your wit's end about this newcomer. This is a critical moment in the ordinary run of human affairs, a critical moment for you.

Did you ever think of this? Those who turn out to be puzzles are, after all, worth puzzling with. The individual who has so many sides to his nature that you cannot see them all at once is likely to be a somebody. In other words, he has personality plus. To say the least, he is interesting. He keeps you guessing.

The next time you meet a fellow who is continually displaying unexpected traits, don't be discouraged. Stick by him. You may learn something. And the thing that you are likely to learn is that you are not only the puzzled, but also the puzzler.

It is something of a puzzle how and why the majority of human beings get into a rut and finally have no sides to them at all. The man with only a few sides is totally unable to get the most out of his human surroundings. If you can't recognize and account for the many-sidedness of human nature, you have simply lost your own personality.—Washington Star.

Harrison Died One Month
After His Inauguration

In the long list of governors of Indiana no name has left a greater imprint on the country than that of William Henry Harrison, the first territorial governor.

An active career as soldier, statesman and pioneer ended in the White House, where he died April 4, 1841, one month after his inauguration. Born in Berkeley, Va., February 9, 1773, he chose the army for a career after receiving a medical education.

In 1798 he was appointed secretary of the Northwest territory under Gen. St. Clair, and then went to congress as territorial representative. On July 4, 1800, when Indian territory was organized, Harrison became the first territorial governor. At one period, when the Louisiana purchase was appended to Indiana, Harrison ruled a vast domain.

First as a major-general of Kentucky volunteers, then as a major-general of the regular army, Harrison participated in the war of 1812. As protector of the Northwest he invaded Canada and won the battle of the Thames October 5, 1813.

Retiring to his farm at North Bend at the close of the war, he was elected to congress from Ohio, then he served two years as state senator and in 1820 was defeated for the governorship. Four years later, however, he was sent to the United States senate, and resigned in 1825 to become minister to Colombia.

In 1835 he won the Presidential nomination but was defeated. Four years later, however, he was nominated by the Whigs and with the stirring slogan, "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too" was swept into the White House.

Voice of the Press

Canada, The Empire and The World at Large

Canada

Tribute to Toronto

—The people of the Province of Ontario will rejoice with unfeigned satisfaction at the observance of the hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of Toronto as a city. The tremendous growth of Toronto in one hundred years is a tribute to the energy, enterprise and enthusiasm of those who have conducted the affairs of the city in years gone by. Canadians are proud of the Queen City and its achievements. It has been a leader in every good work for the advancement of the country.—The Brantford Expositor.

A Good Reason Too

—In Great Britain every other home has a radio set. And the folks do not have to listen to announcers asking, as in our fair land: "Are your corns bothering you tonight?" That's one reason why Britain has so many listeners.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Engine Without Steam

—There is only one recipe for curing the depression — more employment and higher wages. Those who have not learned that in the last four years can learn nothing. It is not in our modern world simply "his own affair" if a man cannot find work or has to work at starvation pay. This is also the "affair" of every one who produces things to sell or offers things for sale. The business system without public buying power is like a locomotive without steam. The machine is all right; but it won't move. Buying power, in the hands of people who need or want to buy things, is the prime mover of production and trade.—Edmonton Journal.

Anglo-Canadian Treaty

The whole Canadian press should mobilize its forces in support of the Anglo-Canadian trade treaty. The preference given to Canada in the British market constitutes the finest opportunity ever presented to Canadian exporters over there. It remains for our producers and exporters to profit by this opportunity on an ever-growing scale. It is surely up to every newspaper in the Dominion to preach this gospel continuously.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Alberta's Solution

The Province has about reached the end of its borrowing possibilities for the present. The one promising solution of the problem is that some thing may be done in the way of reducing interest charges on the public debt, but if alleviation is to be secured only at the expense of those who have invested in Alberta bonds, public sentiment will demand that the Government in turn should grapple more effectively and sincerely with the problem of reducing general governmental costs. Sacrifice should not be entirely laid on the shoulders of investors.—Calgary Herald.

Newspaper Style

Many of the editorial articles in The Ottawa Journal, the Globe, the Mail and Empire, the Montreal Gazette, just to name a few of the dailies at random, have a notable literary style and need no apologies on this score. There are weekly newspapers that despite the pressure of time and circumstances are still of distinctive literary flavor. There seems to be a tradition, however, that newspapers should not pretend to any literary style or carefulness, though if this were actually the case Canadian newspapers would not be as good as they are today.—Timmins Advance.

Sounds Better In Feet

—Somehow the news that Glacier, B.C., has had 369 inches of snow this season leaves us very cold.—Vancouver Province.

Man the Real Danger

"If I ever come out again, I will have another story for you," recited a radio talker last night, dilating on the alleged dangers of the great Canadian woods.

What is it makes men pose as brave souls, who blithely defy cold, snow, wolves and wild animals in their talks?

The truth is that a man is safer from harm in our forests than on the streets of a village. He won't be robbed or attacked there. He can find free food and shelter and warmth in the forest. The records of a big city store show that its delivery men were bitten by dogs over 300 times in one year. Hardly a week goes by in the summer that doesn't record the attack of a bad tempered rural bull, often with fatal results to man, woman or child.

Of course the real danger everywhere is man himself. Compared to him the beasts of the field and forest are as cooling doves. If you want to lead a perfectly safe existence, get away from your fellow man.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

Gun or Camera?

There can be no doubt that this steady annual slaughter of moose cannot continue indefinitely without in the end leading to serious depletion of the herds. For our own part, we would much rather see the camera taking the place of the rifle to a much greater extent in Nova Scotia.—Halifax Mail.

An Illustration

Those who have experienced this so-called good old-fashioned winter in Canada will have a clearer understanding of what is meant by a mean temperature.—Montreal Gazette.

A Pioneer

London Township has lost a faithful servant in the death of Miss Mary Grant, clerk of the township for nearly 35 years. It was in 1900, in the days before women had entered business life to-day, that Miss Grant became clerk of the township, the first woman in the Dominion to hold such a position, succeeding her father, the late James Grant, clerk from 1873 until 1900. She became an authority on rural municipal questions and her advice was widely sought. Miss Grant was one of the pioneers in the movement to introduce Hydro in rural districts of Ontario.—London Free Press.

It's In the Air

There is something in the atmosphere that makes people think things are improving.

The Empire

A Liberal Education

To induce the sense of being a shareholder in the treasure house of civilization is the essence of a liberal education.—George E. G. Catlin, in the Fortnightly Review (London).

Roosevelt's Trial

Roosevelt keeps in reserve his unequalled power of persuasion over the air, having wisely come to the conclusion that a President, while feeling free to talk on ceremonial occasions, should be careful in his use of the radio for statements of policy and appeals for public support. Franklin Roosevelt has yet to be tried in the fire, and tried beyond all question he will be. At present we can hail him as by far the most attractive man occupying high office in any part of the world. On January 30th, 1934 the American people accorded him an anniversary celebration which, in spontaneity and universality, must be described as unparalleled. This was his 52nd birthday. If it should be given to him, in 1935, to enjoy his 53rd amid circumstances in any way comparable, Franklin Roosevelt will indeed be a world's wonder.—S. K. Ratcliffe, in The Contemporary Review (London).

Pioneers

It is too much forgotten that our forefathers in similar times of crises, as, for example, in the early years of the Seventeenth and of the Nineteenth Centuries, organized great settlements in the New World. They did not, as some imagine, leave the populating of those newly discovered lands to a vagabond chance; but sent out well-equipped communities, and supported them in their early weakness with capital and necessities from home. It was thus that New England and Virginia and New Brunswick and New Zealand were planted, to mention few notable examples, and there are still empty and ample spaces for similar development if our nation today would show the same enterprise. But in this matter enthusiasm and expert knowledge must go together, and they must be backed by the energetic support of the Government.—London Morning Post.

Dominions and Immigration

The colonization scheme proposed by the Empire Development and Settlement Research Committee seems to us worthy of very serious consideration. The proposed Chartered Company, supported financially by the British Government, would go some way to meet the difficulties in the way of the emigrant that have revealed themselves in recent years. But the assent and cooperation of the Dominion Governments would, of course, be essential. And the difficulty here is that the change in world economy, which is throwing out of business the great food-producing provinces of the Dominions, is bringing the Dominion Governments face to face with the necessity of providing for the future of great sections of their own people. Until they see their way to settling that problem they are hardly likely to add a new one to it. But there seems no reason why the new settlers should not be self-supporting, and surely for such there must be ample room in the still very lightly populated Dominions.—London News Chronicle.

News Cheers Britain

There is always good news to make you forget bad news, British imports have risen. Canada's exports now rank her fifth among all nations. Australia will have a large export surplus. In Britain all railways carry more traffic, showing internal trade improvement. The chairman of the Westminster Bank comes out advocating slum clearance as a national investment. The banker suggests it should be done on the lines of public utility. Rejoice! The light is spreading.—London Daily Express.

Protecting Scottish Oats

The Government has at last made a definite move in the interests of the Scottish farmer in placing a genuine restriction on the import of oats and oat products. The new duty, which represents about 70 per cent on the value of imported supplies, is practically prohibitive, and should give the farmer every encouragement to maintain the acreage under this crop without leading to any evidence of scarcity to the consumer. Britain at present can meet all her requirements.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Australia's Problems

Australia suddenly finds herself caught up in the complicated design of Pacific events. That she must co-operate wholeheartedly in the plan of Imperial defence is too obvious to be disputed. But there is another responsibility. The peoples who dwell on the margin of the wide Pacific are uniquely different from one another in racial characteristics, in ways of living, in ambitions, and in colour. Yet the advance of science has narrowed the span of the ocean, and the problems of one people become more and more international. Among nations which share a common language and common customs it is often difficult to promote amity; it is infinitely harder to do so where there is no such common ground for meeting.—The Australasian.

New Zealand's Air Force

In ordering eight new reconnaissance airplanes for the New Zealand Air Force, the Government is carrying out its avowed intention of increasing the effective strength of the Dominion's air defence. It is ultimately proposed to station four flights of four airplanes each at vantage aerodromes in both islands, thus establishing useful home defence units capable of operating over large areas of country. The significance of the Government's action will be fully appreciated by those who realize the practical value of aviation as applied to the protection of closely populated districts as well as to the patrolling of stretches of vulnerable coast-line. It has also been decided that torpedoes will not be carried at present, on account of the cost involved.—Auckland News.

Expects Large Business Gain

Magazine Forecasts Big 1934 Improvement in the Dominion

Montreal.—"Canadian business activity started on the up-grade exactly a year ago, and during the next twelve months the rate of progress should be accelerated," says Canadian Business, the magazine of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, in a survey of business conditions. The survey continues:

"This is not a casual observation. It is based on authentic reviews of the present situation, backed by precedence, and confirmed by the security markets. 'The advance in common stock prices has represented substantially more than a return of speculative fever. While the recent uprush in quotations may be traced in part to the scramble to secure equities in time to share in the prospective business betterment, all the buying did not reflect unreasoning speculation.

"The increasing confidence and the concrete improvement in underlying conditions, have revealed themselves in the trend of the bond market. More than a handful of issues, which could be bought for less than 15 cents on the dollar, are now commanding prices which are materially closer to par. Higher grade industrialists have risen as much as 50 per cent, in value, while governments and municipals have been experiencing a keen demand with sellers at a distinct advantage.

Boys' Needs Are Outlined

Character, Courage and Ability Given as Fundamentals

Windsor.—Character, courage and ability were outlined as the three qualities to be stressed in the moulding of the boys of to-day by Louis M. McNight, associate director of education of the Detroit Institute of Technology in an address at a recent father and son banquet in Lincoln Road United Church.

ADVICE TO FATHERS.

Mr. McNight's address may well have been labeled "Advice to a Father," for it was given almost entirely over to them, but his ability to illustrate points with humorous stories made his talk equally interesting to the boys in his audience.

"We look forward to the day when our boys will grow up and be ready to take their places as good citizens in the country," he said, "but too often we look too far ahead and forget about the little journeys they must make and expect them to make them by themselves. Modern engineers are not only improving the motor car so that long rides may be made fast and in comfort, but are also concentrating on the shorter runs. They realize that it is the shorter journeys, from stop light to stop light, that are important.

AGE OF SPEED.

"We sometimes worry about the outcome of the younger generation because of the changes in living conditions in the world. Time doesn't mean anything and distance isn't here any more. In the old days of the stage coach if we missed one and had to wait two or three days for the next one it was O.K., but now we get sore if we miss one section of a revolving door.

"It is true that to-day things are moving faster, but we must still take the long beaten highways in the building up of our boys," said Mr. McNight. "One's life to his neighbor used to be an open book, but now it is too easy to evade the responsibilities of good living. If one fails to make good in a community it is easy enough to move to another one."

Mr. McNight stated that in the United States they are doing great things by rearranging the alphabet with the AAA, CWA, and RFC, but by far the most important is the CCA. CCA, he went on to explain, stands for character, courage and ability.

MUST COME FIRST.

"You can strip young manhood of every other vestige and leave with or give him CCA and he will rehabilitate himself and go on living. Character, courage and ability by all means must come first without it a young man cannot be successful. They are the old landmarks we can't desert, for in trials and tribulations we can't do without them."

The home, school and church were given by Mr. McNight as the three centres around which the life of any boy must be built.

"Although many domestic duties," he said, "are now done in a shop and we travel miles to work, leaving the youngsters on a narrow lot to make their journeys alone, the home is still the place for association, but it must have something else to support the work, such as the schools and churches.

CHURCHES ENDURE.

"When one visits the British Isles and is pointed out ruins of many Roman buildings he gets to wondering just where is Imperial Rome. True it has left its imprint on our laws and customs but where is it? Some 1,900 years ago a Man was walking around teaching character, but Rome appeared to overthrow him. To-day we look down on the ruins of Rome but the church bells still ring."

The speaker told a story of how one of three friends on a train together fell asleep and his companions decided to hide his ticket as a joke. Rather than face the conductor the victim, although positive that he had purchased a ticket, hid under the seat while his friends covered him with their rain coats. When the conductor came to collect their tickets the two friends handed him the three, and when he asked where the other man was they told him he was under the seat, but preferred to ride that way.

"When the time comes for our boys to take journeys we must train them to stand up and face the conductor rather than get under the seat," he said.

Use of Sodium Illumination to Do Away With Glare of Lamps, Says Engineer

Toronto.—Illuminated highways that are sufficiently well lighted by the use of sodium light to permit of the driving of automobiles without headlights was seen as a possibility of the future by Mr. W. P. Dobson, chief testing engineer of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, who discussed new inventions and discoveries in the electric lighting field at the convention of Municipal Electrical Utilities Association here recently.

Illumination to an intensity of 30-foot candles could be produced by sodium light with an expenditure of two kilowatts a mile. The replacement of incandescent lamps with facilities to give cold light was foreseen, as well as great strides in the electro-chemical field.

Short Week At Ottawa

Debates Ahead — Committees Sit.

Ottawa, March 25.—A short week looms ahead for parliament, which is scheduled to adjourn Wednesday or Thursday for the Easter holidays. In the meantime it will discuss unemployment relief and a national marketing board and concentrate on committee work.

The bill to create a Dominion marketing board is scheduled to be brought down to-morrow. With the exception of the budget itself, this will be the most important legislation still to be brought before parliament. It is credited with containing provisions which may place the marketing of a considerable number of farm products under the direct control of machinery built up by the Dominion and provincial governments.

The Stevens committee will swing back into action Tuesday when representatives of the Quebec Retail Merchants' Association will be witnesses. The banking committee also will sit Tuesday, continuing its inquiry into Canadian banks and bankers.

The most important legislation of the session, the budgets will be presented after Easter by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes, but the date has not been set. Officials of the finance and national revenue departments have been working on the budget for weeks but it was not expected to be presented to the House for a week or 10 days after the Easter adjournment. The length of the budget debate will be determined largely by the Finance Minister's disclosures but it is not expected to be shorter than a month.

Yesterday council was in session throughout the morning and afternoon, but no official information was disclosed. Some indication of the nature of the Minister's deliberations is expected to be given at to-morrow's session of the House.

It is anticipated that Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, will announce the government decision with respect to the 10 per cent deduction from the salaries of civil servants. The general belief is that for the year commencing April 1 the lower paid civil servants will have their salaries restored to the levels existing at the time the cut was put into effect two years ago.

Just where the dividing line will be is not known, but it is believed those getting salaries in excess of $1,500 or possibly $2,000 will continue to suffer the 10 per cent deduction for another year.

Jackson Dodds, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, who appeared before the Stevens Committee with Mr. Bennett and Mr. Beatty, will be questioned again Tuesday, with S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, with further reference to the government's guarantees to the banks for wheat operations.

Canada to Buy Six War Planes

Ottawa.—Six new airplanes are to be purchased by the Department of National Defence at an estimated cost of $80,000. As the House of Commons in Committee of Supply approved Hon. Donald Sutherland's estimate of $1,805,000 for the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Minister told of plans to purchase the new planes from England. The grant of $1,805,000 represented an increase of $400,000 over last year's.

Col. Sutherland declares that since it was agreed the Dominion should have an air force, it was considered it should be given as much assistance as possible. The force had suffered severe retrenchment in the last few years. Two years ago many men had been let out so as to maintain the force within the reduced grant. Last year the vote had been further reduced, but now it was decided the force could not be fittingly maintained on the low figure and consequently an increase was being sought from Parliament.

The Minister could not give details of the class of machine to be purchased from England, but declared they would be of the most modern construction and capable of filling the many needs of the force in carrying on advanced training.

Sprint of Fat Officer is Costly

MILWAUKEE.—Rushing up to a portly policeman, Edward A. Wieland, 27, pointed and breathlessly panted:

"See that truck two blocks down the street? There's a murder being committed in it."

Gun in hand, the officer ran top speed to the truck, kicked open the door and found nothing but a load of merchandise.

"Why," asked the policeman, "did you tell me there was a murder there?"

Wieland replied:

"I just wanted to see a fat cop run."

He paid $5 for the privilege in district court.

THREE ILLS ROUTED

Health Tip from Woman of 67

"For headache — constipation — rheumatism — I use Kruschen. And since I have used it, I am in very much better health. In fact, I hardly ever wake with those bad headaches and that general feeling of lassitude. Kruschen has helped me beyond words. I am 67 and feel young." — thus writes Mrs. M.G.

It is reasonable to ask why it is that headaches, constipation, and rheumatism all yield so completely to Kruschen? What is the secret of Kruschen's effectiveness against these different complaints? The secret is an open one. It is revealed in the analysis on the bottle—for physicians and everyone else to see. Six vital, mineral salts. That is the secret. Each of these six salts has an action of its own. Where one cannot penetrate another can — and does. Stomach, liver, kidneys and digestive tract are all benefited and toned up to a top-notch condition of efficiency.

Glinty Evening Frocks And Accessories

New York, Sept. 18. — Sliding-to-the-right togues and round brimmed felt hats, velvet and satin evening gloves, pieced together crepe evening slippers, Alice-in-Wonderland combs, and coral-colored fingernails are among the materialized ideas in the field of "accessories."

Bags for evening, if not of bejewelled velvets are either of glossy metal or a trick satin with a sparkle in it.

The dresses they go with are likewise glinty, but this does not mean an ensemble is in order. On the contrary, contrast is much in the vogue. White gloves and sparkling white bags may go with any evening dress of gold metal, deep rich-colored velvet, or pale shaded crepe with narrow silver stripes.

Evening shoe, mostly crepe, likewise have a dash of brilliancy, sometimes combining the qualities of both dress and bag. Hence the pieced-together appearance.

Hats for the theatre are necessarily small. For cocktail parties they are as large as desired, and may sit on the back of the head.

Hydro Credit Continues High

Long-Sighted Policy Explains Recent Purchases Criticized by Many as Excessive

The Commission, like any other public utility, must look ahead and anticipate future needs. These must include a reserve, to cover temporary failure of water supply, or failure of equipment. From the nature of electrical development, future needs must be estimated over a considerable period. It is often several years, after a contract is made, before power is delivered, for a big power project takes a long time to construct and put into operation. Moreover, such projects cannot be undertaken at all if sales of power are not foreseen.

There are three main sources of water-power available for electrical development: the Niagara, Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers. The Niagara is international, the United States Senate failed to ratify the treaty for using more of its water for power. The Ottawa is interprovincial, and its development involves long negotiations. The St. Lawrence is partly international (this section is not yet available) and partly in the Province of Quebec. In view of these international and interprovincial complications, it was possible for the Commission to provide for future needs only by purchase of power developed in the Province of Quebec. Agreements were therefore entered into with the Gatineau, Beauharnois and MacLaren interests. At Chats Falls the Commission bought the Quebec share of the power rights before the development was made.

The power contracted for was the very minimum which could be expected to be needed, on the basis of the Commission's experience. Purchases were on the basis of under 8 per cent. yearly increase, as against actual 11 per cent. up to the time the contracts were made. The Commission's estimates of the demand proved to be conservative. The peak was in 1930, since then Hydro has suffered, like all other undertakings, from the world-wide depression. It should be noted, however, that the domestic load continues to increase and that other loads, such as street lighting, remain as they were: Hydro has not suffered from the depression as might have been expected, and its credit continues high.

Prince of Wales Cloth Favorite for Spring

You might as well make up your mind to get your angora. You can have it in almost any form that pleases you—dress, coat, hat or accessories, but angora is as important for summer as it has been, mixed with wool and tweed, for winter.

Of course, it has lightened in weight as well as color, and made into some of the early Spring blouses it looks like that old fashioned sup-sugar candy. In pale pastels with a dusty cast, the blues, inks, mauves, greens and yellows are lovely.

Next to angora comes the Prince of Wales Guard cloth, which is a smooth, lightweight wool in a very nice gray-blue color. This is an English fabric in high favor in Paris. A two-piece town or country suit of this fabric should be designed on very tailored lines with small revers, a hip-length jacket, straight skirt and cuff of plain or striped pique. Double or single-breasted and with buttons of gold or silver-knots or nuggets serve as fastenings.

Hats run to sailors—the ancient kinds with wide brims—but the brims are turned up slightly at the base of the crowns.

As the sensation of hunger presupposes food to satisfy it, so the sense of dependence on God presupposes His existence and character.—O. B. Frothingham.

TRAVEL IMPRESSIONS

BY CAPT. F. H. REID

IN THE ALPINE COUNTRY
Switzerland—Another small country—has an area of only 15,737 square miles and, for this area, it is probably the most mountainous country in the world. But the Swiss people know how to capitalize on this glorious scenery, consequently the tourist industry is the greatest business of the country. We have wonderful mountain scenery too but, on the other hand, Canada is so vast that these features have been almost entirely exploited by the railways—not so in Switzerland, there everyone is interested and rightly so. House and church architecture blend into the landscape; wood-carvers use natural objects as models for their wonderful productions; Swiss hotels and hotel managers are known and are to be found the world over. In this connection, one of the finest schools for hotel keeping is at Lausanne and its graduates are much sought after.

A LITTLE GEOGRAPHY AND HISTORY

Switzerland is a federal republic and is made up of 24 Cantons, the last three of which joined the federation in 1815. It is about the oldest of the present day republics and has been pointed out as a striking example of democratic government. These Cantons are independent, except in matters affecting the whole country, in which they are subject to the Federal Constitution. The languages of the country are four in number; the greater part of the population speak German, after which comes French, Italian and a dialect, allied to Latin, called Romansch. Roughly speaking, French is the language of the south-west; Italian that of the southern slope of the Alps; Romansch of certain districts in the Grisons and German the remainder of the country. English is spoken as an auxiliary language, particularly in the larger places. Climatically Switzerland has no standard; altitude has much to do with climate and conditions and there is a great diversity of vegetation. Because of its central position and neutral attitude, throughout many generations, Switzerland has been chosen as the meeting place for many important gatherings of an international nature—this adds greatly to its importance in world affairs.

TWO WEDDINGS

Always of interest to the ladies—sometimes to the men also—is a bridal procession. We saw an interesting one at Lucerne and another a few miles away, as we were travelling along the road. The first one was going into the Cathedral at Lucerne; that interesting building, with its four-sided twin spires pointing heavenward. At night, flood-lights illuminate this typical Swiss structure and the glory of the sight, as one comes upon it suddenly, causes a gasp of astonishment. The wedding procession differed from ours. First of all, because it was on foot; secondly, the bride and groom headed the procession, followed by the diminutive flower girl and the friends in pairs behind. The bride was demure and sweet—all brides are—and as the party came up the wide steps, leading from the street, passers-by stopped to smile and, I hope, to wish them joy.

Girl Millionaire Has Allowance Cut

Chicago—Vivacious Nancy Leiter, poor little rich girl whose monthly allowance has been cut to $5,000, is struggling with a new budget and wondering whether she will have to give up any of her ponies.

Nancy's only extravagance is her riding horses.

Judge John F. O'Connell in probate court decided that Nancy would have to get along the next few months on $5,000 a month instead of the $7,500 she has been accustomed to. Her mother agreed when she learned that only $50,000 is available until next November 14 when Nancy has her eighteenth birthday and becomes a very rich young woman.

On her birthday she will receive $500,000 in cash from the estate of her famous grandfather, Levi Z. Leiter, the capitalist, and $800,000 held for her by her mother.

She also will receive a handsome legacy from the estate of her father, Joseph Leiter, millionaire sportsman and capitalist, and later there will be another million or more from the Levi Leiter estate.

"If Nancy has to get along on $5,000 a month she'll be able to salt away only about $4,500," commented a young debutante at the Casino when she heard of the little rich girl's "plight."

For all the skin troubles of childhood, Wise mothers should always keep it on hand.

"Travel Impressions" have been coming to us each week. These articles are a feature of this paper and are taken from the experiences of one who has seen what he writes about. We have been asked to bring to your attention a unique trip which Captain Reid is organizing and which he will personally direct this coming Summer. If you have no definite plans and desire to take advantage of a real opportunity to see the Old Land under ideal auspices, this selected motor party should appeal to you.

Here are but a few of the features: Lakeland — Lake Windermere, Loch Lomond and the Lakes of Killarney; the Welsh Mountains and the Highlands of Scotland; Cathedral Cities—Salisbury, York, Chester, Durham, Wells, Ely, Hereford, Lincoln, Peterborough, Winchester, etc.; Castles — Warwick, Blarney, Carnarvon, Edinburgh, etc.; Shakespeare, Scott, Wordsworth, Moore and Hardy Country; The Fens; The Dukeries; Glorious Devon; Cornish Riviera; The Trossachs and the Garden of Ireland; Giants' Causeway. Lovely roads, beautiful scenery. London, Edinburgh, Belfast, Dublin, Douglas — all in one glorious holiday.

For further information regarding this or any other holiday you contemplate, address Capt. F. H. Reid, C.P.R. Building, Toronto.

and happiness. Some of the guests were dressed in national costumes, while the principals wore the conventional garb.

The second wedding party was less pretentious. It was seen on a road leading into Austria. Only one open carriage, drawn by a team of bay horses with nodding white plumes on their heads. In the carriage, facing the front, sat the bride in her finery, accompanied by her bridesmaid. On the other seat, facing them, was the groom and his best man. Around the hood of the carriage roses were entwined, the whole making a very beautiful sight, the only incongruous note was the driver in his shirt sleeves. At my motion, the carriage drew up for me to take a picture. It was just a group of working folk, but for the four participants, it was a big day.

A BOY AND A PIG

Another homely incident. Just outside of Lucerne one morning, as our car turned the corner of the road, we came across a boy taking a large hog to market. The porker was squealing and creating a terrific din but the lad was patiently trying to guide him in the way he was to go by means of a cord tied to the pig's hindleg. Of course I wanted a picture of this and the boy was most obliging. With some effort, he braced his feet firmly on the roadway and managed to hold a position long enough for me to accomplish my purpose.

Speaking about pigs, suppose we take you to Killarney in Ireland for the monthly market day. Watch for this next week.

Food Industry Gets New Scale of Wages

Montreal—A new wage scale for the food industry in Montreal and district was set recently by the Quebec Women's Minimum Wage Board, sitting under the chairmanship of Gustave Franco. Rates were set to range from a minimum of $7 for the lower class operators to $10 for higher grades for biscuits, jams, meat packers and "sundries" divisions.

Refuses to Play Opposite Mae West

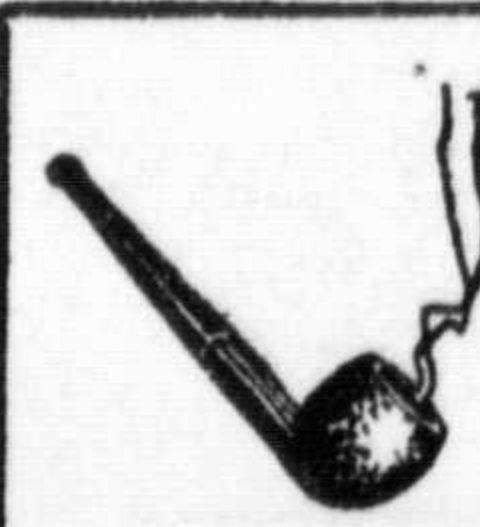

HOLLYWOOD, — George Raft, screen actor, has notified his producers he will not play opposite Mae West in a forthcoming screen production. Studio officials said another actor would be chosen. Sequences in the picture call for a number of close-ups of Miss West with the back of the leading man to the camera. It was this fact to which Raft was reported to have objected.

Canadian Chances In the Argentine

Discussing market possibilities for fish products in the Argentine Republic a recent report from the office of the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner at Buenos Aires suggests that Dominion exporters should "be able to obtain a share of the codfish and herring trade." The report indicates, too, that there is also a limited outlet in Argentina for canned fish and canned lobsters as well as for frozen salmon. Canadian exporters who may be interested in further information in this regard can obtain the report from the Commercial Intelligence Service of the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa.

Hog Outlook Favourable

While it is likely there will be some temporary price declines during the present year, the trend of hog prices appears upward. Market supply prospects are for a moderate volume during the first half of the year, followed by a fairly substantial increase. Prospects for export appear to be satisfactory, and the restrictions existing on exports from foreign countries selling to the British market are working quite favourably toward stabilization of prices. Despite the present favourable export outlook improvement in breeding, feeding, selection and processing so as to secure a large percentage, top grade bacon is much more desirable than a marked increase in general production.

Drive Carefully

Of all persons killed by automobiles, eighteen percent are children under fifteen years of age, motorist members of the Province of Quebec Safety League are told in the fourth lesson on the Art of Safe Driving this week.

It is pointed out that the street, despite all its dangers always remains the playground of children and automobilists should ever be on the alert for the unexpected. It is not possible to tell by looking at a child what he or she will do and so it is essential that the motorist have his vehicle under complete control. Special precautions should be taken when children are seen roller skating on the street, on bicycles, on ice wagons, playing marbles, baseball or other games either on the street or on the sidewalk.

Both the driver and the pedestrian have rights and the drivers even when they see pedestrians using the streets carelessly should take every precaution to avoid injuring them. Although it is against the law for pedestrians to cross the street between blocks, automobile drivers must be careful not to hit them. Particular danger exists when two or more persons cross the street together. A driver cannot tell what they will do and they may not all do the same thing. The driver must be ready to stop immediately in case of need. Automobilists are reminded that it is necessary to be sounding the horn all the time and that they must stop ten feet behind a street car which has stopped to load or unload passengers.

Goethe's Lineage

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe was a direct descendant of Charlemagne. This is the claim of Professor Dr. Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, noted German historian, of the University of Tuebingen, who has carefully studied the list of ancestors of the famous German poet, the hundredth anniversary of whose death was marked by memorial festivities throughout entire Europe. According to Professor Schroeder, the wife of an ancestor of Goethe in the eleventh generation, Frau Kuntzel Dietz, was the illegitimate daughter of Duke Henry III of Hesse. Following this line, Professor Schroeder came to the astounding discovery that Charlemagne was one of the early ancestors of the famous German poet.

The Stamp Collector

A missionary had delivered a lecture relating his experiences in various parts of the world. He concluded with an earnest appeal for funds to keep up the good work, and added that even the children would be welcome to give their mite.

When the meeting was over, he was pleased to see a boy pressing forward to meet him. He held out his hand to the boy and said: "I'm glad to see you, my little man. I always take a great interest in children. I suppose you would like to contribute to the cause."

"Well," replied the little boy, "what I wanted to ask was whether you have any foreign stamps to give away?"—Patfinder.

Getting It Over With

"Junior," mother said sternly to the small culprit, "I hate to do it, but I'm going to whip you—not because you broke the windshield, but because you didn't mind me when I told you to go somewhere else to play."

"Please, mother," begged the boy tearfully, "can't you whip me for breaking the windshield, too, while you're about it? Dad'll be so mad when he comes in that he'll want to give somebody a licking for that."

Patent Office Is Ahead of All Others on Income

The patent office is self-supporting, there being a surplus of receipts over expenditures in practically every year of operation. A report of the institute for government research states that the charges made by the patent office for its services and most of its publications usually aggregate more than the entire expense of operation, so that this bureau has become one of the revenue-producing organizations of the government. The accumulated surplus earnings of the patent office up to June 30, 1923, amounted to over $8,400,000. A recent act of congress states that the money required for that office shall be appropriated by law out of its revenues, except as otherwise provided by law. The commissioner of patents is appointed by the President, with the consent of the senate. The annual report of the patent office for the year ended June 30, 1932, showed that a record number of patents, 52,572, had been granted; it showed also that all of the 65 examining divisions were less than six months behind, a great advance over former conditions. The demand for economy makes it unlikely that the force of about 700 examiners will be increased in the near future. Statistics for 1930 showed 96,227 applications, 52,571 patents granted, 119,597 pending, 16,230 trademarks.

Airedale Is One of Most Popular of All Terriers

From mongrel to the most popular of all large terriers, at least in this country, in approximately half a century is the record that has been made by the airedale. This breed had its origin in Yorkshire, England, where its mongrel ancestors resulted from the interbreeding of the black-and-tan wire haired terrier and the otter hound about sixty years ago. From a clever and dependable mongrel it has since been developed, by careful breeding, into the airedale terrier of today which generally meets the most exacting of requirements and is considered an all around dog hard to beat.

The airedale terrier has been used successfully for all kinds of purposes, from hunting lions in Africa to guarding and playing with children; and from herding sheep and cattle to drawing a sled in the Arctic. Lively, watchful, impetuous and unusually intelligent, this dog has all the qualities that go into the making of a lovable and useful dog companion.

Strong Language

Captain—What's the report?
Executive—This man is reported, sir, for roundly and loudly using profanity and abusive language against another person in the naval service.

Captain—What have you to say?
Sailor—I was standing on the port side o' the main deck, sir, near the gangway in my new liberty "blues," waitin' to go ashore, when the cox'n o' the spud locker kicked over a pot o' paint often the top o' the galley deck-house and it emptied down my neck and all over the back o' my new blues.

Captain—And what did you say?
Sailor—I said, "Harry, you really ought to be more careful."
Captain—Excused. Next.—West Virginia Mountaineer.

Women Jurors Don't Sleep

"Then, too, I have never seen a woman juror asleep in the jury box," commented Judge Carl Weygandt of Cleveland in an article in the "Ohio Woman Voter," commenting on the desirability of women jurors. "The average woman is sound in her viewpoint and regards her responsibilities as a juror more seriously than does the average man; they are keen in judging the credibility of witnesses and quick to detect fraud; and mixed juries are more likely to return verdicts consistent with the law and the evidence in the case," said Judge Weygandt. "I have never heard a lawyer or a judge express himself as opposed to having women serve on our juries," he concluded.

Fish Resembles Pelican

A rare deep-sea fish with a long eel-like body has its jaws, throat and stomach so distended as to resemble the pouch of a pelican. This characteristic which gives it the name "pelican fish" is sometimes responsible for its death for it enables it to swallow fishes too large for it to handle. Individuals of one species of this remarkable family of fishes have been known to swallow fishes larger than themselves.

Soldering an Ancient Art

Telephone practices carried on hundreds of times daily in metropolitan cities were used during the Eleventh century—800 years before the invention of the telephone. Soldering wire joints to insure good contact was one of the first practices of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, and his assistant, Thomas A. Watson, in the manufacture of the first telephone instrument in 1876.

When One Is Near Drowning

When Shakespeare has the duke of Clarence in "Richard III" relate a dream of how he thought he was drowned and past events came to his mind, he and other writers started the fanciful error that drowning persons always recall their past sins. Modern physicians and the testimony of those who have narrowly escaped drowning apparently disprove it.

"Remember the Maine"

When the wreck of the battleship Maine was raised it was found that a bottom plate was incurred, proving that the vessel had been blown up by an outside explosion, probably by a charge of low explosive coming in contact with the outside of the hull. Immediately above this plate was the 6-inch magazine containing black powder used for saluting purposes. The heat of the intruding gases ignited this powder which, in turn, set off practically the whole of the forward magazines. Survivors had stated that two explosions occurred within a fraction of a second of each other.

Imagining More Trouble

"I understand that the Eskimos are purchasing radio sets," said the conversation maker.

"I have heard so," answered the eminent explorer.

"It should make those long nights cheerful, although I hope the music won't make them frivolous."

"Not much danger."

"You don't know how you relieve my mind. It would be distressing to think of their opening clubs to run a night six months long."

Wood Used by Indians for Bows

The wood used by American Indians for making bows was ash, birch, cedar, cottonwood, elm, hickory, oak, walnut, willow, witch-hazel and yew, depending on the wood available and the custom in various tribes. The Indians in sections of the country preferred second growth hickory. The wood must be seasoned at least three years before it is suitable for this purpose. Yew imported from Spain or Italy now is favored for bows.

Flowers Accommodate Insects

Many flowers that have their pollen carried from one plant to another by special insects that work only in the daytime, keep their blossoms open only during the hours when the insects are at work. Others, such as the honey-suckle, that make use of the night-flying moths as well as of bees and butterflies for their pollenization, remain open day and night.
