ORIENTAL TOOTH-WASH.

THIS elegant Preparation combines the most desirable, cleansing, and astringent properties, and effectually prevents and removes the common diseases of the mouth; and is particularly useful in cases where the gums are soft and irritable, and bleed frequently, rendering them hard and healthy.
It also arrests decay of the teeth, neutralizes the secretions of the mouth, and imparts to the breath a fragrance peculiarly aromatic and pleasant.
The Oriental Tooth-Wash is prepared only by JOSEPH BURNETT,
33 Tremont Row, Boston.

EXTRACTS FROM ENGLISH PAPERS.

Lord Howden on Cuba.

Mr. Corbin, a Virginian gentleman, and a private friend of Lord Howden, wrote to that nobleman, asking information as to the ridiculous rumours of an English design on Cuba. Lord Howden answered :—

"PARIS, NOV. 14.

"My dear Corbin,—I have this moment received your letter of yesterday, and I can assure you that it has not in the least embarrassed me. Our long friendship gives you a perfect right to ask me any questions that in a public situation I can answer with propriety, and your tact will have told you that in the present case I must be full as anxious to impart the truth as you can be to know it. I have read the strange statements you have sent me about England wishing to 'Africanise' Cuba, and about the arrangements which I have been making at Madrid to that effect. I give you, in the most solemn manner such laughable (though wicked) fabrications allow, my unqualified contradiction of the whole matter. I have not the slightest hesitation in telling you what have been, during the last three years, my negotiations with the Spanish government respecting Cuba, and you will see whether there is even the slightest foundation for rumours which seem to have been most sedulously spread abroad in the United States. Firstly, I have been making unceasing representations at the number of slaves annually imported into the Island, and complaints of the almost open manner in which the traffic was carried on under the very noses of the Captains-General, always excepting the excellent General Concha. Secondly, I have been making fruitless attempts to get the Spanish government to declare the abominable traffic in men piracy—that is to say, to follow the example of the United States in this particular. Thirdly, I passed my time in anxious solicitations to obtain the ultimate and compete freedom of those negroes called 'Emancipados,' which have been fraudulently detained in bondage since the year 1817 in disregard of treaties. I rejoice to say that the Spanish government has listened to the dictates of justice and humanity, and has granted me this boon. Fourthly, I have been endeavouring to procure an abrogation of that intolerant and immoral law, by which foreigners, wishing to settle in Cuba, are obliged to change their religion, on the somewhat startling principle (not understood elsewhere) that becoming bad men is a satisfactory preliminary to becoming good subjects. To these official negociations I have added, at various times, friendly and officious exhortations to improve the internal system of the island, by facilitating the administration of justice, and by liberalising the nominations to office and employment among the natives of the island. You will see what I really have done, or rather attempted to do, is very different from what I am said to have done in your papers. When the true state of the case is known, and ignorance or malevolence dispelled, I even reckon upon the good wishes of your countrymen in the success of the measures I ask, so consonant with your own laws and institutions. In all that I have here told you, with entire candour, the United States can only see the natural working of England's declared and unchanging policy in a cause which is dear to her, and Spain herself must feel that, in days like these, unless she exercises her engagements, and modifies her intolerance, she can never hope to enter again, and as she ought to do, into the hierarchy of nations.—Believe me, my dear Corbin, with great regard, yours sincerely.

"HOWDEN."

"F. Corbin, Esq., Paris."

Alleged Interference of England in Cuba.

It should seem as if President Peirce, finding the American Republic to be going on remarkably well without troubling him and his Cabinet for much government, had sat down with his Ministers one afternoon to devise the most outrageous hoax with which they might entertain themselves, and bamboozle the nation. With a Yankee eye to business in the midst of their fun, the joint statesmen, well aware that they do not stand well with their party, or with their compatriots in general, would make it a condition of their game that the humbug should be good while it might last for some political capital, and to that end that we would leave a savour of patriotism behind it when it should be snuffed out by the facts. So, as a matter of course, they bethought themselves that Brother Jonathan is all things, jealous of British interference, and more especially still upon two points, slavery and the island of Cuba. To mix them up would make a good strong dose for the national gullibility and prejudice. Only get the Queen's name in the non-intervention affairs of the New World, and the "unnatr'l old parent" into a paragraph, and there would be far too much indignation raised in the readers or hearers for them to care a button about the probability of the thing. Upon this safe principle, the more impossible the statement the better, because it could excite nothing but laughter in England, and the echo of the merriment would drown all serious clamour across the Atlantic. We are bound to say that the Pierce Cabinet are a set of right merry fellows, such as we would like to meet over a magnum of good old port, when it might be desirable to mystify any very egregious donkey of our acquaintance. They have succeeded in inventing a story about British intentions, which it would take the daring humour of Sheridan to transcend, when he insisted to the watchman who picked him up drunk that he was Mr. Wilberforce. We congratulate them upon the splendid, if recent, cultivation of practical jokes, in their sole dollarous territory. An article is published in the President's organ, the Washington Union,in which it is said a deep-laid scheme of the late Sir Robert Peel's is on the very point of consummation in Cuba. That lamented statesman, it seems (we say "seems," for this too may be a Yankee delusion,) observed that 20 millions would be well spent towards the abolition of slavery, in emancipating the negroes of Cuba. How the rogue must have laughed in his sleeve, that laid this basis for the hoax, if he pictured to himself Sir Robert Peel proposing such a grant in the House of Commons! But without troubling the House of Commons or the people of England, the plan, "it seems," is on the point of realization. Great Britain is to abolish the Cuban slave trade, by providing that Africans shall be imported under the protection of the British flag, to be worked as slaves for 10 years, and we are to take the word of Spain, the very type of bankruptcy and dishonour, upon our Exchange—the something, if possible, below Mississippi and Illinois credit—as sufficient guarantee that when we have poured this affluence of slave labor into the island for 50 years, slavery shall be altogether abolished there. Now, just imagine such a proposal to be made to the Bishop of Oxford, with the earnest recommendation of Lord Palmerston, that it would be the most feasible and effectual thing in the world! Conceive the faces of the astute proposer and the equally clear-sighted listener! We wonder how President Pierce and his friends could get any further for roaring at the idea. The grave assertion of the journal from its "private advices from the Havannah," that "the wealthy Spaniards in Cuba are now negotiating for the Africans at fixed prices," must be a daring backing up of the official communication. Joking can hardly go so far as that. But we can imagine the Cabinet emptying another bottle or two before they were inspired with the tremendous peroration of the article about the virtual "transfer of Cuba from Spain to Great Britain," about our "interference with the affairs of this continent," a plain evidence that the wine had effaced all distinct notions of water, and joined Cuba to the main land in the vision of the political bacchanals; and to what a towering height must the genial frenzy have waxed, to dictate the assertion about the "firmness and courage" of the President and his advisers in those impossible circumstances, about General Pierce's "determination to follow the dictates of humanity, to guard the constitutional rights of all the States," and much more than we have patience to transcribe, ending, of course, as all such eloquence must end, with "leaving the consequences to an overruling Providence." With which climax we might naturally suppose the jury-lady reader to the table. Now, some of our contemporaries, under the influence of their utter amasement, have even attempted a reply to this wonderful farrago. We hope we know better. We take things as they are meant. The Government organ is "poking fun at us," and it is a want of sense and manners to answer with any thing but a jest. Perhaps the general and his friends got outrageously jolly, or conclude their sitting in the topsy-turvey position we have described; but it is quite as certain that they did so as that Great Britain has any intention of permitting, for any purpose whatever, the Spaniards to bombard African in Cuba, and even far more probable than that the semblance of any such transaction could ever occur beneath the shadow of the British flag.—London Dispatch.

Sir Edward Parry on the Probable Fate of Sir John Franklin.

On the 2nd November a public demonstration took place at Lyna, Scotland, in honour of Lieut. S. Gurney Cresswell, the bearer of the despatches from Captain McClure, relating to the expedition in search of Sir John Franklin. In reply to the toast of his health, Sir Edward Parry said—

"While we are rejoicing over the return of our friend, and the probable return of all his shipmates, we cannot but turn to that which is not a matter of rejoicing, but rather a matter of sorrow and regret, that there has not been found a single token of our long-lost friends, Sir John Franklin and his companions. Not only has this been the case with the expedition, in which our young friend has been engaged, but also with Sir Edward Belcher, who has gone up Wellington Inlet, where I certainly thought traces of him must be found, because at Beechey Island we knew he passed the first winter. There we found three graves of his men. That is, up to the present moment, the only token we have received of him. I think it is a most mysterious thing. I have thought about it as much as anybody, and I can only form one idea as to the probable fate of Sir John Franklin. I dont agree with Mr. Cresswell about the probability of both ships having gone down, though nothing has been seen of them. Though it is true that nothing might be seen of the ships, I don't think that the same men would have all gone. I think that there is that stuff and stamina in 120 Englishmen, that somehow or other, they would have maintained themselves as the Esquimaux, and we should have found at least some trace of them. The only thing which I can suggest is this—Wellington Strait was discovered by myself. It is a large opening out of Lancaster Sound. When I was going up westward, from Melville's Island, we saw a strait free from ice, and so I marked it in my charts. It was not my business to go north as long as we could go west, and therefore we ran past, and did not examine it; but it was always a favorite idea of those who thought a North-west Passage was to be easily made by going north.

That, I know, was a favorite idea of Franklin's; and he did intend, if he could not go west, to go up the Wellington Channel. My belief is, that, after he passed the first winter, he did go up that channel, and that having steam-power, which I had not in my time, it is possible he may have gone up in a favorable season. You cannot imagine anything more different than a favourable and unfavorable season, and you cannot imagine the sudden changes that take place in the ice there. I have been for two or three days together beset by ice, and, from the masthead, you could not see water enough to float a bottle, and, in twenty-four hours there was not a bit of ice to be seen. Nobody could tell why. I cannot tell why. In a favorable season he may have gone up that inlet, and he might, by steam-power and favorable circumstances, have got so far to the north-west that he could not get back in any ordinary season. And those who know Franklin know that he would push forward year after year, so long as his provisions lasted—for he was not a man to look back if he believed that he could accomplish his object. He may have got beyond the reach of our searching parties, for Sir Edward Belcher has not been able to get far up.

Gentlemen, while speaking of Sir John Franklin, everybody will feel sorry for his probable fate. My dear friend Franklin was 60 years old when he left the country, and I shall never forget the zeal, the almost youthful enthusiasm, with which that man entered upon his expedition. Lord Haddington, who was then First Lord of the Admiralty, sent for me, and said, 'I see by the navy list that Franklin is 60 years old —do you think we ought to let him go?' I said, 'He is a fitter man to go than many I know; and if you don't let him go he will die of disappointment.' He did go, and he has been gone for years, and therefore, I will leave it to yourselves to consider what is the probability of the life of that valuable man. In the whole course of my experience I have never known a man like Franklin. I don't say this of him on the principle de mortuis nil nisi bonum, for he really was a man of remarkable capacity, with all the tenderness of heart of a simple child, and the magnanimity of a hero. It is recorded of him that he would not kill a mosquito, but, whether or not, that is a true type of the tenderness of that man's heart."

The Portugese Constitution.

The Paris Debats has the following remarks on this subject :—"The charter of 1826 which was a voluntary and spontaneous concession of the Emperor Dom Pedro, father of Queen Donna Maria, has regulated many things, and particularly the mode to be followed in order to reform the Constitution itself, in case it should be found necessary. The formalities prescribed are numerous and solemn; the reforms cannot be definitively settled except by the Cortes elected expressly, and the members of which would have received special powers from their electors; but these measures of precaution are only applicable to cases in which it is contemplated to reform really constitutional provisions. If the reforms have for their object to change other provisions, which are not consecrated by the fundamental principles of the established government, the ordinary legislative means may be resorted to. Is the choice of the Regent and his future designation an affair of principles? Certainly not. Such a question is without influence on the limits and the attributions of the political powers, as it is set on the political and individual rights of citizens. This is so true that in many countries the regency, in the event of the minority of the Sovereign or of his impossibility to govern, is regulated by the laws, or even by simple acts of the legislative power. In France, for instance, after the death of the Duke of Orleans, the possible and foreseen regency was regulated by a special law which was presented by the Government and adopted by the two Chambers like any other law. It is wished it is said, to substitute the regency of Dom Miguel for that of the King Dom Ferdinand, the father of the minor; but it is believed that the world has forgotten the deplorable history of Dom Miguel? Dom Miguel is the brother of Dom Pedro, the son, like Dom Pedro, of John VI., who died at Lisbon in 1826. At the moment of the death of John VI., Dom Pedro was already Emperor of Brazil; by the death of his father, he united on his head the two crowns of Portugal and Brazil. It was then that he promulgated his Charter of 1826, and at the same time he abdicated the throne of Portugal in favor of his daughter Donna Maria, reserving to himself to abdicate at a future period the Imperial Crown of Brazil, which he did in favour of his son, the present Emperor. The abdication of the infante Dom Miguel had recognized his brother, Dom Pedro as King of Portugal, and he showed himself disposed to recognize the acts of the King his brother—that is to say, his constitution, his Constitutional Charter, and the accession of Queen Donna Maria. Dom Pedro, full of confidence in the good faith of his brother, made him Regent of the kingdom during the minority of the young; he did more—he prepared the marriage of his brother Dom Miguel with his daughter, and by his arrangements the contract of their betrothal was drawn out at Vienna on the 29th of October, 1826. Every one knows what followed. Dom Miguel, as Regent, made use of his authority and power to take possession of the crown of Portugal. He proclaimed himself king, and raised in the kingdom a long and sanguinary civil war, which only ceased by the exile of the Queen. Dom Pedro, who, after having been Emperor and King, was then only Duke of Braganza—Dom Pedro, Regent of the kingdom by the free choice of things, conquered Dom Miguel at Asseiceira, and compelled him to sign the capitulation of Evora, which he violated as soon as he thought himself in safety in a foreign country. All this took place in 1834. In the course of that [illegible] the Queen, although she had not attained the age fixed by the constitution. Soon after she married a foreign prince, the Duke de Leuchtenberg, and a decree of the Cortes, founded on legitimate motives, pronounced the perpetual exclusion of Dom Miguel. It is possible, therefore independently of all right in the Regency, which has become necessary by the death of Queen Donna Maria, should be placed in hands. It may, however, happen that the Infante Dom Miguel and his numerous partisans find a favorable moment to make a fresh usurpation. What would be the effect of such a rash enterprise? They might, perhaps, succeed in throwing Portugal into fresh disorders; they might, perhaps, at the outset obtain some ephemeral successes, which would promptly vanish before the intervention of the Powers who are bound to the cause of Donna Maria and her descendants by the treaty of the Quadruple Alliance of the 22nd of April, 1834."

To HER MAIST GRACIOUS MAJESTY VICTORIA, by descent frae the STUARTS o' North Britain, England, and Ireland, QUEEN, Defender o' the Presbyterian Faith, &c.

The Humble Petition o' the Undersigned, Inhabitants o' the Principal Part o' HER MAJESTY'S Dominions ca'd Scotland,

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

That your Petitioners, leal subjecks o' Your Majesty, are muckle and sairly fasht and vexed wi' unco grievances, o' whilk the maist considerable an' intolerable is the degradation, an' disrecognition, an' deposition o' the Scottish Lion.

That, forbye the wrang, an' wealth, an' indignity dune to the Scottish Lion, an' the ither indignities, an' scaiths, an' wrangs whilk Your Majesty's Petitioners has set forth, an' enumerated, and also to take into consideration the ill-repute who appear in the streets of the city after 8 o'clock in the evening.

A large vessel full of labourers for the works on the Panama Railway has just left Cork for the Isthmus. The steamship here too numerous to be accommodated by the captain.

We understand that Mr. Burridge, the agent of the North Lancashire Steam Navigation Company, has been in Coleraine and Ballymoney, with a view to making arrangements for a regular Steam communication from Portrush to Liverpool and Fleetwood.

EXPORTATION OF POTATOES.—The Clonmel Chronicle complains that large quantities of potatoes are leaving that port for England, the consequence is that prices are rapidly advancing, the rate being at present 6d. per stone.

A conditional order has been obtained in the Court of Queens Bench against Mr. O'Callaghan, the magistrate, to compel him to make a return of the order made by him in the case of Smith, the distributor of religious hand-bills, and of any informations taken by him in the matter.

THE CONVICT KIRWAN.—The property of the convict Kirwan, consisting of a rent charge on lands in the county of Longford and houses in the city of Dublin, was sold by auction on Tuesday. The whole realised the sum of £4,505.

The Rev. P. Quin, the Roman Catholic Clergyman of Moneymore, has addressed a letter to the Livery of the Dressers' Company of London, on the subject of freedom of election on their estates, in which he complains of the withdrawal of a customary gratuity of ten guineas a year. The Rev. gentleman conceives that this is a punishment for his political conduct.

The Duke of Bedford has become an Irish landlord. He has purchased part of Mr. Kirwan's property in Galway for £40,000. The total sum realized by the estate was £88,850, equal to 17½ years purchase. It is said that a few days before the sale took place, a sum of £107,000 was offered for this estate on the part of the Duke of Bedford.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES' COMMISSION.—There were three sales of estates on Tuesday, the gross produce of which amounted to £31,400. The rates of purchase were variable, property in the model county of Wexford realising but 13 years' on the net rental, while the residue of the Galway estate of Mr. Christopher St. George went at the rate of 22½ years.

BREAD IN IRELAND.—The Irish have become a bread-eating people at length. The consumption of breadstuffs is now enormous, notwithstanding the abundance and comparative cheapness of potatoes excellent in quality. Large quantities of foreign grain are ground in extensive mills near Cork and other towns, and forwarded to Dublin; and it appears that the railway company, for want of an adequate supply of goods trucks to meet their emergency, are sometimes unable to take all the produce offered for transmission.

EMIGRATION FROM IRELAND.—Although emigration is still decreasing, the average rate of increase being more than equalled by the hosts of emigrants who, even at the present severe season of the year, continue to leave the shores of the other lands. These, however, are fast adding to the population of the United States and British colonies, taking with them those habits and tastes, the requirements of which must in the end benefit the manufactures of the case to establish this, but from Cork for the ten months ending 31st ult, amounted to 32,268, against 22,687 in the same period last year.—Belfast Mercury.

ENLISTMENT AMONG THE IRISH.—It is stated that a circular letter, signed by the Inspector-General of Constabulary, has been recently promulgated, the object of which is to check emigration in the police force. It sets forth that retired policemen, virtues for having thriftless agricultural laborers, and thereby obtaining passages to Australia, will subject themselves to a penalty of £20. The alarming large number of Irish constables recently received from policemen who have emigrated, or intend immediately to set out, has induced the Inspector-General to adopt the present measure, for the purpose of preventing, as much as possible, further emigration.

ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE.—A private letter from Longford states that on Saturday evening, about six o'clock, Mr. George Hearn, of Drumlee-park, in that county, was fired at while driving in a gig, by a man who walked up close behind him. The assassin discharged the contents of a large pistol at Mr. Hearn's left side, but the shot passed him, and does not appear to have entered the body. The family conditions of the arrangement are sufficiently apparent. The Duke de Bordeaux is childless, and the Comte de Paris is, according to the laws of hereditary succession, his natural heir. It will be seen that neither family has any power to make a Regent, but the assent of the Duke of Bordeaux, and the charter of the July monarchy, or the Comte de Paris is to be educated to the paternal absolutism of Charles X., does not appear
