Local songstresses for injection-free future

COURTESY

This one-time, all-acoustic all-female blend of four talents — Kate Morrison, Patsy Sanders, Nancy Allaire and Josée Boutin, Townshippers all, perform tonight at The Granada.

Fundraiser for Diabetic Children's Foundation

By Jen Young
SHERBROOKE

For more and more children around the world, living with diabetes is a fact of life. Four local songstresses will take to the Granada stage tonight to help make their futures brighter.

The charm and charisma of Kate Morrison, the folk/rock warmth of Patsy Sanders, the thrilling 12-string guitar of Nancy Allaire, and the accompaniment of Josée Boutin, Townshippers all, will collide to create an acoustic event of fundraising proportions.

"My friend (Sanders) was diagnosed with childhood diabetes when she was 25," Morrison told The Record. "She likes music, she sings, she plays and she thought it would be neat to do a concert."

Neat. It was unanimously agreed to when Sanders pitched the idea to her three fellow songwriters/performers, and the planning began a year ago.

Childhood diabetes, or Type-1, usually affects children under the age of 16, but can strike (if rarely, as in Sanders' case) at a later age.

The acoustic spectacle, Complices sur scène, is the first fundraising concert organized to benefit The Diabetic Children's Foundation and all profits will be allotted to families with insulin-dependent children.

"Your contribution will permit the parents' committee of the Eastern Townships to follow their mission, which is to organize activities with an educational objective and encourage the interaction of families who have children with diabetes. All money collected stays here for our children in the Townships," Morrison said.

While the all-female performance, helped out with bass player accompaniment, promises to prove entertaining, its creation did come with a cost, something Morrison says is "water under the bridge".

"All the costs of the show have been absorbed by sponsors," she said. "The whole thing has just snowballed. All of us together will bring out a combination of repertoires. This has been an enriching process and it will be an interesting evening that's not been seen very often, if ever, for a great cause. It (the show) will undoubtedly make your evening unforgettable and touching."

For information on the disease, visit The Diabetic Children's Foundation at diabetes-children.ca/. Warning signs can include tummy pains, headaches and behaviour problems.

The Granada Theatre event in downtown Sherbrooke tonight, which costs $23 for adults and $12 for children, begins at 8:30 p.m. To reserve tickets or for more information, contact 819-565-5656, or visit www.theatregranada.com.

Farfan's latest heritage book

Matthew Farfan, well-known Eastern Townships historian and photographer, released his latest book, The Eastern Townships: On Lake and River, last week at a heritage event in Stanstead.

Published by Les Éditions GID of Quebec City, this follow-up to, The Eastern Townships: In Town and Village, contains nearly 200 photographs.

Chronicling the history of Quebec's Eastern Townships through text and archival photography, the book is a visual journey back in time through a fascinating corner of Quebec. In it, Farfan provides a rare glimpse of life on and around the lakes, ponds, rivers, brooks and waterfalls of the Eastern Townships from about 1860 to 1960.

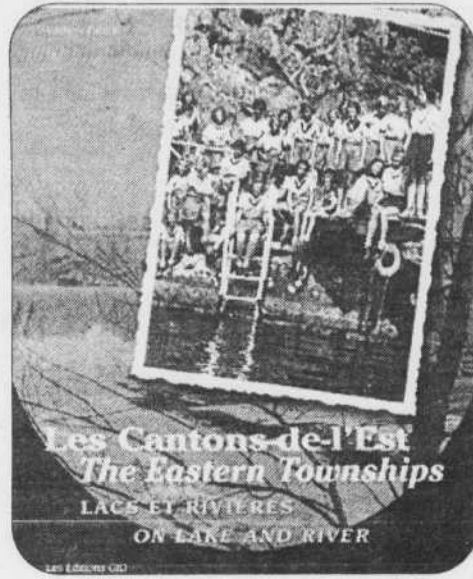

The images presented have been carefully researched, and were selected in large part from the author's extensive personal collection.

Chapters include: A Landscape of Water; A Good Place for a Town; Harnessing the River; Bridges; At Work; Enjoying the Water; Camps and Cottages; Hotels, Inns and Boarding Houses; Pleasure Boating; and All Aboard!

Farfan writes, in the introduction, "A country can be shaped as much by its land as by its water. The Eastern Townships are no exception. Each wave of settlement that has influenced the history of the region ... depended upon - and reaped the rewards of - the region's waterways.

"Over the last century, the Townships have been the focus of a different kind of invasion: vacationers drawn to the region's lakes, and cottagers willing to pay an ever increasing premium for lakefront property. At a time when rising demand for lakeside property and environmental threats such as blue algae have brought the region's waterways to the forefront of our consciousness as never before, it is hoped that this volume will convey something of the part that these diverse bodies of water have played, and continue to play, in the evolution of the Eastern Townships."

Published by Les Éditions GID of Quebec City, this long-awaited follow-up to, The Eastern Townships: In Town and Village, contains nearly 200 photographs. A must for anyone interested in the history of the Eastern Townships, the bilingual book (208 pages, soft-cover) is available directly from the author for $36.70, tax included (please add $10 for shipping within Quebec and Ontario; $14 to Western and Atlantic Canada; or $5 to anywhere in the U.S.). Payment should be addressed to: Matthew Farfan, 531 Dufferin, Stanstead, JOB 3E0. For more information, contact him at 819-876-5047 or mf@qahn.org.

sound, collaboration and spiritual engagement. The quality of their music is evident as they are celebrating this year as well, 25 years of making beautiful music."

Founded by renowned cellist and conductor Yuli Turovsky, the I Musici de Montreal orchestra has 15 musicians, who present a vast music repertoire extending from baroque to contemporary.

The upcoming concert features special guest performer Mathilde-Ariane Pagé-Bouchard, a young but talented pianist, who studied under Marc Durand from Lake Mégantic, has been highly recognized throughout the province.

"Mathilde (-Ariane Pagé-Bouchard) has won many awards and competitions in Quebec. We are privileged to have such a collaboration, and the old church is really the only venue in this municipality that has the acoustics to compliment such talent," said DesBiens. "It's over 100 years old, so the sound quality is truly incredible. You won't be disappointed."

Legendary chocolate-maker Laura Secord will be sponsoring the traditional chocolate intermission.

"It is an initiative where treats will be distributed to energize the audience while sharing a few moments with friends," DesBiens said.

The festival, launched in 1998 after DesBiens moved to the municipality and noticed that music celebrations were lacking in the area.

"I had been involved in music festivals in other places, and when I moved here, I felt it important to have something like this to give residents a way to commemorate music and its importance in our lives," DesBiens said.

Over the past decade, the Piopolis Festival has been home to more than 80 concerts and 750 musicians such as jazz pianist Oliver Jones and the Canadian Brass Choir.

The festival has several other concerts lined up during the year - Alain Lefebvre on June 28, Bob Walsh Blues on July 19, and the Gospel Ensemble of Quebec on September 6.

I Musici de Montreal performs this Saturday, May 31, at 8 p.m., at the St-Zénon-de-Piopolis Church. Tickets are $25 for adults, children under 12 free, and can be purchased at the Papeterie Mégantic, Lake Mégantic Jean-Coutu, and Piopolis General Store.

For more information, call 819-583-1946 or visit www.piopolis.ca/ and click on the festival link.

A true indie band

Le Roi Poisson

By Zachary-Cy Vanesse
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD

With the rise in popularity in recent years of synth-fueled rock with a dance/new wave flavour — in the style of Metric or Bloc Party — it was just a matter of time before a Quebec band with some real talent emerged on the scene. Enter Le Roi Poisson.

Their songs echo those of their Scottish peers, Franz Ferdinand, in both style and beat. This is the kind of rock music you're supposed to dance to.

Their dance beats find a home comfortably woven among Jérô Macro's vocals, with the rest of the band providing piano tracks, bass lines, synth lines and guitar riffs. Even on some of their slower songs, the simple, sunny-afternoon melodies still find themselves driven by a drum beat that makes them as danceful as a happy tune by the Lovin' Spoonful.

'La Nouvell Instu', off their first EP (titled EP #1) begins with a synth melody. The instrumental track finds its lift into the rock spectrum thanks to the guitar sounds of J-V Truite. The tune 'J'En Veux' sees the group pouring on the haunting sounds of a mariachi band to open up the tune before the beat and keyboard kick in on the EP's most danceable track.

If you're looking for a good tune to kick off your party, then picking something up from these Montreal rockers is a great bet.

Anyone can be called indie these days, as the term has come much less to mean where the money behind your album comes from, and more to mean what you sound like. Le Roi Poisson are truly an independent band. They have yet to sign to a major label and they admit they aren't sure if they will, as going it alone does indeed have its benefits.

Like all true indie bands, Le Roi Poisson are forced to make their cash by touring constantly, and as a Quebec band singing in French, that can often limit the ability to find gigs outside of Quebec, so the boys generally hone their stage skills within the province. But all those shows around Quebec are paying off for the group, whose live shows meet the tight standards one would expect from a band whose main purpose is to get you moving to their music.

The fun atmosphere surrounding the group's shows makes the band well worth catching live on one of their whirls around the provincial concert circuit. In a world where every new act claims to be indie no matter how big the record label the find themselves attached to, Le Roi Poisson are refreshingly the real thing and earning praise through their

Make a style statement
By Nathalie Atkinson
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

When I heard about Vancouver entrepreneurs Carrie McCarthy and Danielle LaPorte's Style Statement system last year, I admit I dismissed it out of hand as a harmless diversion, like crosswords or Sudoku, for lifestyle fanatics. That it originated in the heart of flaky Lululemonland didn't help.

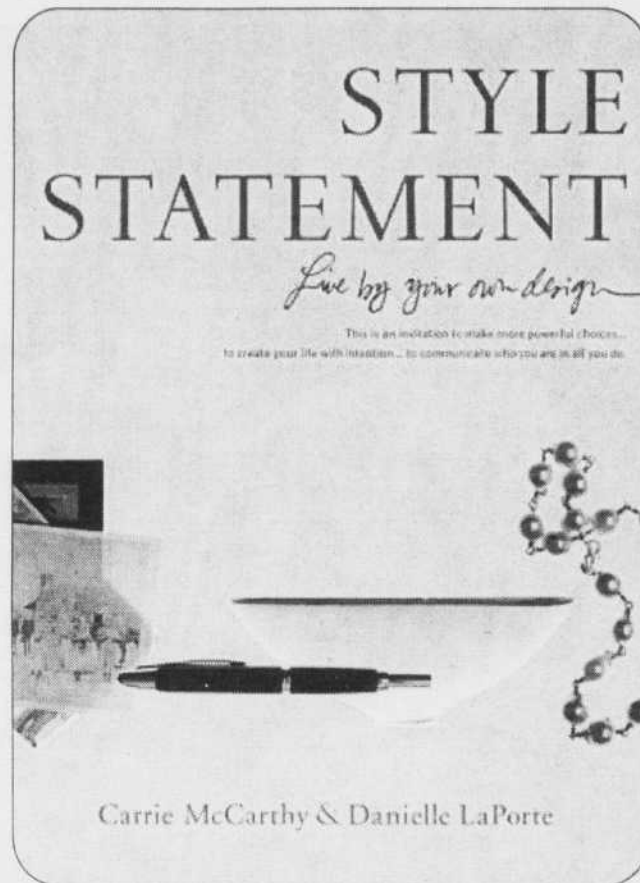

Here's how Style Statement works: By appointment, McCarthy and LaPorte assign two words that define a client, which can then be applied to the choices they make in the future on everything from drapes to friendship to career. The first is the core "Foundation" word; the second is the "Creative Edge" word. Foundation gets a weight of 80, Creative Edge a weight of 20. Some examples: Genteel Vitality. Feminine Dramatic. Natural Cosmopolitan. They sound a bit like Dr. Phil by way of Dr. Seuss. But what's the Oprah Era without a little taxonomy of self?

Pencil in hand, I set out to find out. The expertise for which McCarthy and LaPorte can command the sum of $2,000 per session is now available to the masses for a mere $27.99 in their new book, Style Statement: Live By Your Own Design (Little, Brown). It's a DIY workbook drawn from the knowledge gleaned during their client consultations. The goal, as they express it, is "to empower people and support them in being true to themselves."

The book requires me to answer a series of seemingly unrelated questions — some playful, some profound — about what I like and why, in order to discover my authentic self. Sounds simple, but it's not. There are no right or wrong answers, no columns A, B, C or D to tally up and score. Each person must interpret her own responses.

"We are not spoon-feeding people," McCarthy says, when I meet the duo during a recent promotional tour in Toronto. "We believe there's just so much consumerism and dictating in the world already."

McCarthy (RefinedTreasure) and LaPorte (Sacred Dramatic) are quick to point out that Style Statement isn't just about esthetics and taste. "It's about congruity," LaPorte says, "looking at the eight simple squares and this is your life. It's important to communicate who you are in all you do because that creates momentum and simplicity. Had we called it Life Statement it would have been too woo-woo," she continues, "and ironically, it wouldn't have been holistic enough!"

"We don't like the term self-help, but it is a self-inspiration, self-discovery book that crosses many genres in that theme," McCarthy says. "It's great for fashion, it's great for your home, for your self-discovery and also creativity."

When I was a child, my mother had Carole Jackson's Color Me Beautiful. (I'm a winter.) I did the Myers-Briggs psychological typology test in Grade 10 drama class. (I was an INFP.) But I'm a grown-up now, with strong opinions and honed taste. I am not adrift, seeking enlightenment or rudderless in my own life. Or am I?

A week before meeting McCarthy and LaPorte, after I've spent several hours plodding through Style Statement's workbook sections and doing my homework, I'm not so sure.

Before you even get to the introspective questionnaires, there are portraits of several of the 800 people whose Style Statement the duo has pronounced upon. Genuine Legacy is a guy in a kilt smoking a cigar. Contemporary Flourish's objects are aromatherapy, the New Testament, an African doll and tickets to Lord of the Rings. Genuine Elegance is a grinning woman with an Hermes scarf around her neck who's holding a Kelly bag. My life is in no way art-directed like this. I feel out of my league. ("We decided to profile people in the book," LaPorte says, "to inspire readers to see other ways of being authentic and answering questions. The inquiry goes deep enough that those examples should really serve to expand your perspective, instead of pull you away from your own core.")

I zip through the "Things I Like" columns containing dozens of either/or word-association type questions. Rustic, stationery, copper, heritage ... My current "personal sanctuary" is _____. (I don't have one. Can I put down bathtub?) ... "My money role models are: _____, because _____." (Money role model? I leave it blank.)

Next comes things I love, and why. This is easy. One of the first pieces of art I ever bought is a whimsical painting of a red bear placidly paddling along in an isolated lake. It is among my most treasured possessions but I'd never really thought explicitly about why before. The artist, John Huggins, is an old friend from high school, the location reminds me of growing up in Northern Ontario and the bear, well, he's an eccentric. On to the stuff I collect: costume jewellery, vintage teacups, pottery and Canadian designer fashion. When I'm prompted to think about it, I see clearly it's because I'm interested in connecting my life to the narrative of each piece and, consequently, to the person who created it. I'm on a roll: I crave roots and community!

I wade into chapters such as "Service & Wealth," "Home Stuff" and still more keywords and long questions to fill in with essay answers. (I haven't written this much in longhand since final exams.) In the chapter "What Does Not Work For Me," I find that my worst date would be a baseball game. Why? Nothing happens and it takes forever. After a few of these, my guy Peter (who's been helping me with the exercises) interrupts and suggests we move on. "Otherwise I think we could talk a lot about the things that don't work for you." That's a Style Statement understatement.

At the back of the book, there are definitions for each Foundation word, followed by a lexicon of suggested Style-Statement vocabulary for the Creative Edge word, to help mix and match. But after a while, the process of whitening myself down to two words starts to remind me of the cardboard flip books of my childhood: a clown head with ballerina torso, an astronaut head with a scuba-diver body.

When we meet, I tell this to McCarthy and LaPorte, as I reveal my hard-won Foundation word: Classical. After an hour of talking to me, they agree it fits. "Classicals are about timelessness, quality, a standard of excellence and authenticity." Classicals favour fewer but better: from friends, from carefully considered purchases, from the enduring objects around them.

Yes, yes and yes.

The "shadow" side of a Classical is a tendency to be overly controlling and restrained. (Also correct.) But, though it fits, I don't like it. It feels ... underwhelming. Weak and uninteresting. It rankles, frankly, and I want to shrug it off. Why can't I be something more esoteric, like Refined or Organic, Cultivated or Timeless?

Meanwhile, I am totally blocked on my Creative Edge word. Bold? Genuine? Artistic? Crazy? Maybe I should just be Chaotic Tactless and get on with it.

When our interview is over, I am still no closer to a finished Style Statement. "For some people it's four hours, or it's a weekend, and it'll take some women a year!" McCarthy says. Or maybe I'm more complex than a pithy two-word mantra and my creative edge will always be a moving target. So until I have a few more hours to devote to the process, just call me Classical Blank.

Best running films

By Katherine Monk
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

They may be purest metaphor for human accomplishment, but movies about running and the art of the pushing one's body to the extreme can be downright dreary — if not ridiculous.

The problem isn't the marathon idea, but the lack of externalized drama until the race itself. The real dynamics are internal, as the runner is inevitably forced to face internal demons of commitment, strength, desire and will.

Finding the face of that drama is difficult to accomplish without resorting to cheesy dialogue that may involve a line like this one from Without Limits, Robert Towne's 1998 film about Olympic hopeful Steve Prefontaine: "the real purpose of running isn't to win a race. It's to test to the limits of the human heart."

Films that have been most successful at conveying the personal magnitude of a marathon generally weave that struggle onto a larger, epic frame that allows the theme of personal sacrifice to be meaningful to the audience.

Perhaps that's why a movie such as Gallipoli, Peter Weir's 1981 war movie that focuses on two sprinters trying to survive a slaughter, is one of the most memorable films involving runners: The final sacrifice is literal — not to mention cinematically compelling — as the heroes are mowed down in battle during the final scene.

Metaphor isn't always a sure ticket to success. There have been true disasters in the running genre, such as Run For Your Life — in which a battered woman decides to get even with the man who killed her baby by running in a marathon. Sometimes, the "you can do anything" idea is pushed a little too hard.

That said, there's a handful of movies that actually deal specifically with running, but for the most part, they follow the runner cliché without reinvention: The Long Run, Running Brave, Prefontaine, On the Edge, Four Minutes, Without Limits, and Robert Towne's landmark piece of earnest athletic kitsch: Personal Best.

In the big picture, there's no shortage of truly worthy movies that feature running as a central theme. So in the hopes of helping all you runners jog your mind, as well as body, here's a look at 10 films where the characters go the distance.

1. Atanarjuat: The Fast Runner (2001)
Zacharias Kunuk's movie about a young Innu warrior trying to assert his family's place in the social circle is a cinematic milestone for several reasons: Not only is it the first feature film to feature Inuktitut dialogue, it was produced, written and directed by the people of Igloodik, Nunavut.

A gorgeous piece of filmmaking that makes the most of the arctic's wonder, the movie puts you in a cinematic trance — which is an excellent approximation of the runner's mind state.

The film also features one of the most memorable running scenes ever put to film: Atanarjuat running completely naked on ice floes in order to escape his nemesis.

The sequence lasts so long, and gets so bloody, it gives Mel Gibson's Passion of the Christ a run for the martyr tape.

2. Marathon Man (1976)
Sure, it's about the hunt for Nazi war criminals and a fortune in diamonds stolen from Holocaust victims, but John Schlesinger's 1976 classic is remembered mostly for Dustin Hoffman's perpetually puffing performance as he runs through the streets of Manhattan with a bleeding mouth.

Hoffman was a running enthusiast in real life, so he could handle the long, repeated takes of him sprinting through New York.

3. Chariots of Fire (1981)
Though more people probably remember the Vangelis score better than the actual film — with the exception of the running scene on the beach — Hugh Hudson's period film about two athletes training for the 1924 Olympic Games is probably the most elegant and artistically successful films to deal with running as a central theme thanks to its artful blend of the epic and the personal.

4. Run Lola Run (1998)
Tom Tykwer's compelling morality tale deals with one woman running through the streets of Berlin in an effort to change the fate of her boyfriend before it's too late.

Though we hear very little about the act of running, the movie is in constant motion as we run alongside Franka Potente for the duration.

5. Gallipoli (1981)
Mel Gibson and Mark Lee look so good in this Peter Weir opus, their bodies alone may have helped spark the early '80s running fad.

Again, this film isn't about running per se, it's about one of the bloodiest massacres in history, but the material fuses into one memorable metaphor about lost potential and personal sacrifice.

It also features the memorable coach's line: "Your legs are steel springs..."

6. The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner (1962)
Tony Richardson directs Michael Redgrave in this somewhat predictable inspiration story about a reformatory rebel who finds his stride as a distance runner.

Redgrave plays the reform school governor who watches the young Tom Courtenay transform himself through sport.

7. Personal Best (1982)
This Robert Towne movie caused quite the commotion when it "came out," but not for the incredible sports content. The movie featured ingenue of the moment Mariel Hemingway as a young athlete who finds love in the arms of her female teammate.

The movie may have one too many melodramatic scenes between the women, but the running content is well handled — even if Hemingway doesn't have a natural gait.

8. Without Limits (1998) Prefontaine (1997)

These two films about Olympic hopeful Steve Prefontaine came out a year apart, and contained a not-so-surprisingly similar narrative. The former, Without Limits, is another film from running fan Towne, and feels a little more relaxed with Billy Crudup in the lead.

But Prefontaine has its merits too, and director Steve James and actor Jared Leto do a good job getting inside the head of the man who "turned running into a bloodsport."

9. On the Edge (1985)
If you know about running, you know all about the Dipsea Race in Marin County — a grueling cross-country race that attracts the true fanatics. Bruce Dern — another real-life runner — stars alongside Pam Grier in this moody movie that features incredible footage of the California landscape, and lots of running sequences shot at magic hour.

10. Rocky (1976)
Though it's really a boxing movie, John Avildsen's Oscar-winning reel features a classic montage that's now become a template for self-improvement as we watch Sly Stallone running through the streets of Philadelphia until he finally climbs the steps of the museum and throws his arms in the air — proving kitsch can be inspiring and moving if it's handled with the right touch.

Other running movies you may want to check out: The Long Run; Running Brave; Four Minutes; Running on the Sun; Running Man; Run Fat Boy Run; The Swimmer; Forest Gump; The Terry Fox Story; The Athlete; Courage; Distance Runners; The Games; Saint Ralph; Sahara Marathon; Run for Your Life.

Something for everyone in greatest hits

Young yet successful Dierks Bentley

Dierks Bentley's latest album titled Greatest Hits: Every Mile A Memory is definitely clear about its contents. What makes it such a particular greatest hits collection is the singer's novel approach of leaving the album's title and cover up to the fans to vote on. He then listed those fans as co-producers, and included their names in the album's liner notes.

After five years and three great albums into a still very young career, it comes as a surprise that the record company would want to release a greatest hits. But Every Mile a Memory proves that Dierks Bentley has a quality that few other country music singers possess - constancy. The 10 singles included are all excellent and well represent Bentley's love for the outlaw music of Haggard and Jennings.

You can feel how strongly he was influenced by the two icons and at the same time you realize his ability to apply this influence to his music in a very modern way. Musically, you will find all of Dierks Bentley's biggest hits, including live concert recordings, as well as two new songs. The live songs give you an idea of what he is like in concert. The new songs are good: 'Sweet and Wild' is one of his two new tracks and features country singer Sarah Buxton, and there's 'With the Band'. This collection should leave Bentley's fans anxious for his next studio album.

Obviously, the music in it is solid: it is Bentley's own material. 'What Was I Thinkin'' is one of his best examples. This is a fun song about a guy losing all common sense over a fling with a girl.

There's also what I think might be his best known song 'Free and Easy (Down the Road I Go)' about someone who's not tied by rules, but still makes his own during his journey through life. 'Trying to Stop Your Leaving' is one of the slower numbers about the difficulty of saying goodbye when we don't really want to.

'How Am I Doin'' takes the opposite approach. A man gets a call from a girl who cheated on him, which gives him a chance to say how great it is not to have her around anymore. It is a little reminder of Toby Keith singing 'How Do You Like Me Now?'

'Long Trip Alone' is a unique song about a person who wants a companion to go through life with, and lets her know about it.

Overall, this album has something for everyone. There are slow numbers for those who love romantic songs and faster tunes that will appeal to fans who love toe tapping. As a special bonus, five songs are included from a live concert. Two songs are familiar to Bentley's fans, while the other three are there simply for the pleasure of listening to his voice.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

The collection will appeal to those who are looking for the radio hits, which are certainly among his best, but the alternate mixing and new material will make it worthwhile. Dierks Bentley is one of the most accomplished newer country stars of today and a favourite to many fans.

DWIGHT SINGS BUCK

Dwight Sings Buck, is Dwight Yoakam latest release and a tremendous tribute to Buck Owen's music, but with Yoakam's honkytonk twist to classic songs. I am always a little worried when I hear about any tribute albums and with good reason, as we have seen in the past.

Sometimes the artists try to sound too much like the original singer or they try to put too much of their own style on the songs and just ruin the original. Dwight Yoakam obviously did an excellent job on this recording, pouring a lot of emotion into this tribute to his friend and mentor, Buck Owens.

Respect for the man and his music shows through the entire collection. Eddie Perez and the rest of the musicians who contributed to this album also outdid themselves. These 15 fantastic songs are faithful to the classic Bakersfield sound, yet they take on new life as Yoakam makes them his own.

This is an amazing tribute album and the singer does all of Owens' songs justice. Hopefully country radios will pick up that music and let the fans hear it.

There are all kinds of interesting instrumentation added here from bongos on 'Close Up The Honky Tonks' to the inspired bass on 'Under Your Spell Again'.

Eddie Perez is doing great filling Pete Anderson's shoes. His solos in the Buck Owens/Don Rich style on this record are fabulous, and just like the singer he makes them his own.

Anyone who knows Dwight Yoakam knows of his deep love and respect for Buck Owens over the past 15 years or so. When Buck Owens passed away in 2007, traditional country music fans were all left with broken hearts.

What resulted from years of friendship between the two artists is Yoakam's passion for the amazing songs that Buck Owens wrote and performed.

This is an album that I highly recommend to country music fans.
