Rail workers frustrated by controls

MONTREAL (CP) — Railway workers across the country have barely approved a new one-year contract, their last under federal anti-inflation controls and one that union leaders say may set the stage for particularly bitter negotiations the next time around.

Results of a national ratification vote released Thursday by officials of 17 rail unions had 53 per cent of the workers approving the contract negotiated in February with 13 railways, including Canadian National and CP Rail.

The agreement, signed here on Friday, is retroactive to Jan. 1 and provides for a six-per-cent wage increase.

Chief union negotiator Ray Peer said the strong opposition among the 95,000 rail workers to the pact mirrored widespread frustration with three years of federal anti-inflation controls.

Peer predicted the next round—which begins in October with the exchange of proposals—will be a lot tougher because the controls will be gone and the railways won't have them as an excuse for postponing much-needed changes.

The rail workers were the first major group hit by the controls when they were introduced in 1975 and one of the last affected as the program is being phased out.

Members who voted to reject the contract "weren't mad at the negotiating committee, they were mad at the government," said chief union negotiator Ray Peer.

"But they cast their votes in the wrong place. They should have waited for Trudeau to call the election."

Peer said it was his impression that many of the employees who voted for the contract didn't really like it, but felt—as did their union leaders—that it offered all the law allowed.

Officials of 17 unions in the Associated Railway Unions (ARU) pooled the results of ratification votes in their respective organizations. Of more than 57,000 who voted, 30,261 were for the contract and 26,816 against.

To win approval, the contract also had to be passed in at least nine unions which represent a majority of the workers in the industry among them. The final count was nine unions for, eight opposed.

Support for the agreement was strongest in the non-operating group where several unions approved the contract. These included the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers with 22,000 members in the industry, the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks with 16,000 and the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees with 14,000.

Strong opposition came from the shop-craft, or train maintenance group, with Peer's own 11,000-member Brotherhood of Railway Carmen among the unions favoring rejection.

This has led to renewed speculation that the eight shop-craft unions may quit the ARU—a loose coalition maintained for bargaining purposes—to go it alone in the next round.

MEMO

Instability lies ahead

BOSTON (CP) — A future dominated by economic instability lies ahead for both Canada and the United States unless there is greater emphasis on conservation and renewable forms of energy, the chairman of the Science Council of Canada predicted Thursday.

Dr. Josef Kates, speaking at an international conference on alternative energy sources, said the two countries should change their priorities on energy development—a change that would free large amounts of capital that otherwise will be spent on short-lived exploitation of non-renewable resources such as oil.

Oil industry revamp urged

TORONTO (CP) — John L. Stoik, president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., called Thursday for a revamping of the oil and gas industry in eastern Canada.

He said in a speech to the annual meeting of shareholders that prices continue to deteriorate in refined products, particularly in eastern Canada where there is excess capacity of about 30 per cent.

The result was price competition so severe that industrial fuel was almost always selling for less than the price of crude oil.

"The investment return on refining and marketing assets is becoming critically low," he said, adding there should be a move for a "badly needed rationalization of the industry in eastern Canada."

Ford drivers warned

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department Thursday warned owners of 1965-74 full-sized Ford cars to have their vehicles inspected for possible malfunction of the steering assembly which could result in an accident.

The department said in a release the inspection should look for possible separation of the idler arm from the frame of the car or unusual stiffness in the joint of the idler arm.

The Ford Motor Co. of Canada was found guilty April 4 of failing to notify owners of 1971-73 models of the defect in the steering assembly that could affect their safe operation. The charge covered only 1971-73 vehicles because the Motor Vehicle Safety Act, under which it was laid, did not take effect until 1971.

Foreign borrowing stepped up

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced further massive foreign borrowings Thursday night to guard against any renewed run on the Canadian dollar in currency exchange markets.

It was the third such borrowing in recent weeks. The finance department announced a borrowing in West Germany of 1.5 billion marks—roughly equivalent to $775 million Canadian—and "a large U.S. dollar revolving standby credit" of unspecified amount with U.S. and other foreign banks.

The government last month borrowed $750 million U.S. in New York. And it has arranged foreign credit through Canadian banks of a further $2.5 billion U.S.

Sharp to head pipeline agency

OTTAWA (CP) — Mitchell Sharp, former Liberal cabinet minister, will resign from the Commons Tuesday to become commissioner of the northern pipeline agency, Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday.

Sharp, who earlier announced he would not seek reelection as an MP, will head the government group that will oversee construction of a $10-billion pipeline from Alaska.

Trudeau also announced that Harold Millican, a former top aide to Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed and now executive director of the Canadian Petroleum Association, will be the administrator for the agency.

There was no mention in the prime minister's statement of what happens to Basil Robinson, a former undersecretary of state for external affairs who has been pipeline commissioner since April of last year.

Wintario winners...

CANNINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Five tickets worth $100,000 each were drawn Thursday in the Wintario lottery draw. The winning tickets were in 65084 series one; 91021 in series 59; 56644 in series 67; 96602 in series 62 and 32423 in series 34.

There was a total of 65,000 prizes for more than $2.5 million in prize money.

The next draw will be May 11 in Aurora.

Reed Paper checks slide

TORONTO (CP) — The financially-troubled Reed Paper Ltd. has managed to check a major slide in profits, although it recorded another loss in the first three months of this year.

In a report to shareholders Thursday, Reed reported a loss of $4.5 million or 27 cents a share for the first quarter, compared with a net loss of $1.5 million or 21 cents a share in the same 1977 quarter.

The loss in the last three months was less than half of the $9.2 million recorded in the last quarter of 1977.

India to buy uranium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless Congress overrules the sale within 60 days, India will begin purchasing 16,803 pounds of low-enriched uranium from the United States to power its Tarapur atomic power station.

President Carter approved the sale Thursday after the Nuclear Regulatory Commission reached a deadlock on the issue last week. Carter said he had been assured that the Indian government would use the fuel only at the Tarapur station, and not for weapons.

Jessica Tuchman Mathews of the National Security Council staff said that under federal law the shipment will be cut off after two years if India does not agree to full safeguards.

Steel Co. earnings up

TORONTO (CP) — Higher demand for steel enabled Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. to report increased earnings for the first quarter of $25,078,000 or 91 cents a share compared with restated profits of $22,075,000 or 89 cents a share for the same quarter in 1977.

The 1977 figures have been restated to reflect changes in corporate income tax in the March, 1977, federal budget and not enacted until last December.

In the report to shareholders Thursday, the company said earnings were affected by increased cost of ore and a further deterioration in the value of the Canadian dollar.

In the first quarter, the company approved capital expenditures of $9 million, of which $4 million was used for a new steel mill being built at Nanticoke, Ont.

The Quebec Beef Producers' Federation has submitted a brief to the provincial ministry of agriculture urging the creation of community pastures and extensive research into grasses, plants and farm buildings.

Beef producers urge policy change

The Quebec Beef Producers' Federation has asked the Quebec Ministry of Agriculture to officially state its intentions of developing beef production in the province.

In a brief recently submitted to Agriculture Minister Jean Garon, the federation put forth suggestions for developing a beef production and market policy in Quebec. The suggestions, they say, "are the opinions of Quebec's cattle producers."

Noting that much substantial Quebec farmland is either abandoned or left uncultivated, and that beef production is largely linked to the soil and grass, the federation suggests that a government body be set up to purchase all the land available and to rent or sell it under special conditions to those interested in beef production.

The same governmental body, the brief said, could group the best land and create community pastures, which in some regions could meet the needs of beef producers.

The brief also calls for further studies of various grass and plants, and research into types of buildings that meet climatic conditions but push construction costs lower than producers are now paying.

Competent research people should be available to beef producers at all times, the brief says. Moreover, beef producers should be able to participate in courses on production technology and beef marketing.

In order to encourage beef producers to improve the genetic potential of their herd, R.O.P. testing programs should be modified and made more readily accessible. In addition, premiums to encourage improvement of performance and quality should be given, the brief suggested.

Other suggestions presented by the federation include giving producers access to credit and special loans, and an adaptation of the present carcass grading system to the type of cattle raised in Quebec.

Given the decreasing number of regional slaughtering plants, the brief calls for the implementation of a policy for the construction of slaughtering houses, adapted to regional production and located near consumer markets.

In conclusion, the federation writes: "Quebec producers have experienced difficulties in the past and many of their hopes have turned out to be disasters."

"This justifies the federation's asking the Quebec Department of Agriculture to state officially its intentions of developing beef production in Quebec so as to establish an atmosphere of confidence and optimism among producers. It is essential in order to place beef production in a situation that would enable beef farmers to live off their operations."

Electric vehicles: Government policy blasted

TORONTO (CP) — A federal civil servant says that despite recent emphasis on Canada becoming a conservator society to reduce its dependence on foreign oil, the federal government has done little to encourage or assist an electric-vehicle industry.

F. G. Johnson of the department of industry, trade and commerce told a seminar on electric vehicles last week that while some government action has been taken on energy use and conservation, there is no policy to encourage the use of vehicles other than those powered by internal combustion engines.

Johnson is with the special-vehicle division of the transportation industries branch of his department.

Canada and the United States have put pressure on the motor vehicle industry to make smaller cars for the sake of better fuel efficiency but there is nothing to encourage the substitution of other primary energy sources for gasoline or diesel fuel, he said.

Johnson suggested government assistance be made available to encourage Canadian initiative in the field of electric vehicles, which he said could take over 20 per cent of automotive transportation requirements by 1990.

Canada lags behind other industrial countries in electric vehicle development. Britain, Japan, Sweden and the U.S. have major research programs under way to develop small electric-powered cars for urban use, he said.

MADE IN MONTREAL

Meanwhile, David Salter, chairman of Marathon Electric Car Ltd. of Montreal, told the seminar his company expects to sell about 1,500 of its electric cars annually for industrial use in three years.

Salter said Marathon now is the only company in North America building a complete electric vehicle.

He said Marathon has not yet considered selling the vehicle for urban passenger use.

The company's C-300 car has a range of 80 kilometres between charges, can be recharged overnight from a standard electrical outlet, has a top speed of 56 kilometres an hour and a retail price of $6,800, Salter said.

He said Marathon is considering the development of a hybrid car for 1980, which will use a small gasoline-powered motor to supplement the batteries and become the prime source of power at speeds above 56 km an hour, thus improving the car's range.

AEROCAR DESIGNER LOOKS TO FUTURE

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Twenty-eight years ago, Moulton B. Taylor thought his flying car would revolutionize transportation.

Today, the Aerocar sits in his workshop here, still waiting for its time to come.

"It would be one thing if this were a dream, but it's not," says Taylor, 65. "My flying auto is way ahead of its time."

Taylor designed and built his first Aerocar in 1950. The Federal Aviation Administration certified the vehicle in 1956, but financial problems have blocked production.

He estimates it would cost at least $200 million to begin producing the Aerocar, which would sell for about $10,000. Most of the initial investment would be spent satisfying government safety and anti-pollution regulations, he says.

Timing has to be right. People have to be right and the interest has to be right," says Jim Pope, chief of the industry and government liaison division of the office of general aviation in Washington, D.C. "We haven't been able to put together those variables so far. Maybe sometime in the future."

Inquiries still trickle into Taylor's office and workshop. He says he gets about six a week, down from the 30 a day when his invention was announced.

Four of the seven Aerocars built now are in museums around the U.S., says Taylor. One was wrecked in a South Dakota wind storm and two are parked in his workshop.

With a 500 mile range in flight, the Aerocar cruises at about 125 miles an hour with two adults and 100 pounds of baggage, he says. It burns eight gallons of fuel an hour in a 143 horsepower Lycoming engine. On the highway, the car travels up to 100 kilometres and hour at 24 km per gallon.

The vehicle tucks its wings, tail and propeller around on a self-contained trailer system and Taylor says the car can be converted to an airplane in about five minutes. The wings fold forward and the tail section with a pusher propeller attach to the rear of the car.

Taylor says he hasn't flown the Aerocar in over a year because the vehicle is not currently licensed. He said the car takes eight licences to operate legally, including federal and state airplane licences, state auto licence, state trailer licence, federal radio licence, federal radiotelephone operator's licence, state pilot's licence and federal pilot's licence.

Panel predicts economic gloom

HALIFAX (CP) — Continued gloom with only a few days of sunshine was forecast for the visual and performing arts by a panel of economists Thursday at the annual meeting of the Canadian Conference of the Arts.

Eric Kierans, former president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges and Liberal cabinet minister in the federal and Quebec provincial governments, said that only artists and philosophers can rise above the constraints of the market economy system.

Now a professor of economics, Kierans ended the session with the direst comment of all, demolishing the arts community's favorite economic thesis.

It has long been argued that money spent by governments and business donors on the arts has a multiplier effect, creating more spinoff business and tax revenue than the dollars actually invested.

This is nonsense, Kierans said. Not only is the relative economic position of the arts almost negligible, but the multiplier effect is a myth.

The country is in for a long period of little growth, Kierans said, and growth can't be achieved by pressing harder on the accelerator.

BIG GOVERNMENT HERE

After a period of burgeoning growth, the country now has entered the era of big government, and the only countries that need big government are the U.S. and the USSR, he said.

What it means in Canada is that big government talks only to big institutions and big business. The individual gets lost, and a fragmented arts community falls by the wayside.

Marie-Josée Drouin, an economist and head of the Hudson Institute in Canada, said the so-called cultural explosion in the last decade has been greatly exaggerated. The growth of activity and audiences in the arts only about parallels the growth of the economy generally in this period.

There is danger in oversubsidizing the arts, she added, because it becomes counterproductive.

John Godfrey, a historian and president of King's College in Halifax—at 34 the youngest university president in Canada—agreed that oversubsidization can lead to massive bureaucracy that leads to more subsidy and more bureaucracy.

"If there's money to be spent, there will be an administrator to spend it," he said.

A NEW DEAL

by Pauline

Hockenstein-Hansen

Response and reaction..

Two men have recently expressed their views regarding the contents of my column. I am encouraged by Chris Turner's insights above and feel somewhere between incredulous and embarrassed about Mr. Donat's grumblings in his letter of April 6.

To Mr. Donat: First and foremost I take exception to your devious route of communication. The primary purpose of my column has been to establish a forum for discussion, disagreement, rebuttal and gradual understanding. You have been circuitous in directing your criticism of a New Deal to the editor instead of to me. I shall be more direct.

You, Mr. Donat, have succeeded in misperceiving the raison d'être of a New Deal, of further misunderstanding the specific problems and issues I have raised and, finally, in aggravating me through your accusation that I may be part of a larger conspiracy intent on malicious machinations and plottings against our helplessly neglected noble sex — the male of the species. It does sound absurd.

Perhaps, as some have said, your letter may have been written "tongue in cheek." Even if this were the case, the suspicious and bitter edge toward women is apparent and that, Mr. Donat, I take seriously.

You use history to illustrate how women are the real holders of power. You cite how Eve, Helen and Cleopatra all manipulated and led men to their unfortunate downfall. Evil, malicious, conniving and ambitious were some adjectives you used to describe the true nature of women. Mr. Donat, you are an unfortunate victim of your own sex's self-serving interpretation of historical development. Women, when they were mentioned, which was rarely, were described through the biased filter of a man's eyes. What role they played and in what light they were depicted, depended on how badly a particular time in history needed a prize to be won (the damsel in distress, the woman on the pedestal, the object of chivalry) or a scapegoat to be blamed for the ills of society (during the plague women were branded as witches who caused this dreaded disease).

A reliable history of women has yet to be written. All we really know about women is how ambivalent men feel toward them. Women are depicted as mysterious, strange and desirable creatures. They are simultaneously idealized and demeaned. They are the virgin and the whore. All these images have been created by men because they have needed to understand and continue that which is unknown. What resemblance these images bear to the true nature of women is a matter of conjecture.

The power of women of which Mr. Donat speaks has been only apparent power. For instance, when women have been idealized placed on a pedestal, their position of power existed through the grace of the men who put them there and who kept them there. Women have had no more say in their persona than other slaves.

It is this lack of essential freedom of choice for women that Chris Turner has recognized. And it is the illusion that women are free that I have attempted to shatter in the various columns I have written.

Mr. Turner has transcended his own prejudices toward women, and has learned about the real purpose of this illusion of freedom — to protect the vested self-interest of men in maintaining the status quo. It is Mr. Turner's heart-felt acknowledgement of his part in the enslavement of women that sustains my hope in the future accord and sharing between equals.

It would not be possible as long as men like Mr. Donat insist on using already biased material to "prove" how well women have fared at the expense of men. Upon examination, these historical and biblical references only confirm how well men have used women to absolve themselves of responsibility, self reflection, guilt and complicity in the ills of the times.

Dear Pauline:

While washing windows I came across a letter printed on, I think, April 6th: objecting to the disturbing issues in your "New Deal" column.

May I say something in your column?

This Donat fellow would have been a man after my own heart in my collegial days: assuming he meant what he said. It is the old misogynist line, of course, that Mr. Donat speaks. Whether it is the temptress that manipulates or the matriarch that over-toilet trains; any woman presents a threat to every man. I think he mentioned school marm, Cleopatra and Eve. It is a perfect working concept for us misogynists but it misses the point of the feminist movement. The pubescent boy does indeed have a hard time of it establishing a sexual identity. He might go to great lengths on the rink or gridiron to accomplish this or he may succumb, as this fellow from "Richbourne" (sic) did, to the woman's world. I have learned, however, from the articulate, unsensationalized feminists that their issue is not oriented around "IDENTITY" at all but around a more basic "FREEDOM" or, lack of it, in North American society. While reading "Ms. magazine" an article dealing with sexual harassment at work would upset me because I realize we live in a slave culture. One concerning treatment of rape victims would make me painfully aware that "Justice" is a very malleable element in our society: manipulated by the powerful few.

Nobody likes to receive bad tidings especially if we all contribute to the badness of it. I suggest we not slay the bearers of these tidings but see the truth of them and work from there.

The Federal Advisory Council on the Status of Women held an open meeting in Montreal at the Chateau Champlain on April 12 to release the Council's three most recent publications.

Indian Women and the Law in Canada: Citizens Minus, by Kathleen Jamieson, looks at events during the 109 years that Indian women in Canada have been subject to a law which discriminates against them on the grounds of race, sex, and marital status. Section 12 (1) (b) of the Indian Act states that an Indian woman who married a non-Indian man ceases to be an Indian under any statute or law in Canada. The same is not true for an Indian man who marries a non-Indian woman. Efforts to change this inequitable legislation have met with opposition from the Indian Brotherhood and inaction on the part of the government. This book provides all Canadians with an opportunity to become familiar with these injustices.

Sharing the Power is a kit intended for use by women's groups to teach women how to influence the decision makers and become involved in the political process. It includes information on how to lobby, write a brief, run an election campaign, and be a candidate. This kit is free to groups which request it from the Advisory Council.

Women and Aging: a Report on the Rest of Our Lives by Louise Dulude is a background paper for study by the Council. It is the first Canadian study on the specific problems of aging women. It looks at myths and realities and examines income, pensions, housing, health, and social conditions.

For more information about these publications, write to the Advisory Council at Box 1541, Station B, Ottawa, K1P 5R5.

Sherbrooke-Boston air service July 1

SHERBROOKE (JD) — Seven-day-a-week air service between Boston and Sherbrooke will begin July 1 at the latest, Bar Harbor Airlines President Thomas J. Caruso said Friday.

The airline was granted a permit by the Canadian Transport Commission last Monday for two round-trip flights on weekdays between Quebec and Logan International Airport in Boston.

with a stop each way at Sherbrooke's Municipal Airport.

On weekends, Bar Harbor will have one southbound trip Saturdays and a single round trip between Boston and Quebec on Sundays.

The exact fare structure has yet to be finalized, Mr. Caruso told The Record.

"We applied on the basis of a $35 one-way fare between Sherbrooke and Boston, but our application is almost a year old," the Bar Harbor president said, but agreed it would be "around there."

The aircraft used for the Quebec-Boston run will be 15-passenger Beechcraft 99 turboprops, which will make the run in under two hours. Reservations can be made by a yet-to-be-installed toll-free number to the airline's reservation service in Boston, and the company's flights will connect with those of Delta Airlines, a major U.S. carrier.

A Canadian Transport Commission spokesperson said the approval of Bar Harbor's application had been given despite interventions by Quebecair and Mober Aviation, a provincial carrier and a regional air service with aims of operating a similar feeder system out of Sherbrooke Airport.

"It's going to take about 90 days to get things set up," Mr. Caruso said Friday. "We had counted on approval by April 15, and as it is, we're looking at a June 15 start at the very earliest."

The 35-year-old airline has been flying two flights a day between Quebec and Boston for the last five years, routing them directly over Sherbrooke.

"We argued that it was too bad we couldn't drop our planes down into Sherbrooke to supply direct feeder service, but when I came to Sherbrooke a year ago, I told the city fathers we'd drop our application if Mober could assure them of reliable service," Mr. Caruso said.

Backed by the city, Bar Harbor's application was approved at the beginning of last week, giving Eastern Townshippers daily service between Sherbrooke and Portland, Bangor, Bar Harbor and Harford.

...as Mober plans five-city flights

SHERBROOKE (JD) — Mober Aviation — unsuccessful bidders for the daily Quebec-Sherbrooke-Boston run — proposes to establish thrice-weekly service between Sherbrooke, Quebec, La Tuque and Roberval.

Mober spokesman Ronald Noel said last week the permit had been granted and the company is looking to start the service this Wednesday.

Under the terms of the firm's permit, the Sherbrooke-Quebec-La Tuque-Roberval flight would leave Sherbrooke

Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning's and would return via the same route in the evenings.

In addition, Mr. Noel said, Mober has been granted a permit for Monday-Wednesday-Friday service from Sherbrooke to Boston, where Mober is negotiating with Eastern Airlines for use of certain facilities and connecting-schedule rights. Mober is also seeking a permit to pick up passengers in Boston for the return trip to Sherbrooke.

St. Jean Baptiste funds available

Anyone wishing to organize a festivity or project in celebration of St. Jean Baptiste Day, can apply for financial aid from the Eastern Townships Organizing Committee for the national holiday.

The committee will be spending close to $50,000 in the area this year. All requests must be submitted before May 15.

For further information or financial aid, write or phone: Robert Nault, Regional Co-ordinator, 636 Quebec St., Sherbrooke, 566-2424.

Cowansville Council set for 7 p.m.

COWANSVILLE (JM) — Mayor Rosaire Raymond announced that the regular monthly council meeting will begin at 7 p.m. tonight. He said he decided to hold the meeting an hour earlier than usual so council can discuss the possibility of reopening Main Street prior to conducting regular business.

Festival activities...

Members of the Waterloo Champignon-Val Optimiste organizing committee have added several new activities for this year's festival to be held June 30 to July 3.

A folk music contest will be held in the Sports Center July 2, with fiddle, accordion and mouth-organ competitions. For further information call Lionel Filion and 539-0291.

Other new activities include a canoe race on Lake Waterloo (call Claude Manseau at 532-2382 or 535-6739) a sailboat race (call Francois Beaulieu at 539-1890) and a long distance foot race (call Benoit Savard at 539-0900).

Gordon Ladd Gallery

LAST BRANCH... a painting by Gordon Ladd.

KNOWLTON (KT) — The Gordon Ladd Gallery, is now open to the public, following last Friday's official opening. A number of invited guests attended the wine and cheese party which previewed the present showing which runs from Saturday until Thursday, May 4. Hours are from 2 to 9 p.m. daily.

The draped walls of neutral coloured burlap provide pleasing background for the 20 to 25 paintings that have been hung and more than half of these represent Mr. Ladd's 1978 work.

In addition to the pictures in the gallery itself, visitors found others on view throughout the first floor. Floral arrangements decorated the rooms and the buffet table.

Attracting particular interest were works entitled "Reaching Out", "The Last Branch" and "Early Moon" as well as the nature still-lives in which Mr. Ladd specializes, plus landscapes and seascapes. The lone, sometimes barren tree appearing in a number of the nature stills comes to be regarded almost as a signature by those who enjoy his work and admire his original style.

A matter of note is that all paintings are guaranteed during the lifetime of the artist. Also being considered is an arrangement which would allow an owner who wishes, to replace a painting with another, possibly larger or more expensive.

A rental service provided by Mr. Ladd is proving to be a success, allowing those who do not wish to purchase at this time to enjoy oil paintings in their homes for

Sherbrooke cleans up

For Sherbrooke residents taking advantage of this week's good weather to attack the spring cleaning, the Sherbrooke Fire Department's Fire Prevention Division, in co-operation with the city's garbage collectors, again this year are running a trash clean-up campaign throughout Sherbrooke from May 1-6.

Emphasis will be on ridding households of fire-prone rubbish accumulations in attics, basements and closets.

Lake level issue studied

The Lake Champlain Committee is deferring taking a position on the lake level regulation issue until after the series of public information meetings being held by the International Champlain Richelieu Board the second week of May.

The committee has been thoroughly studying all aspects of the ICRB report to the International Joint Commission, recommending a structure to control high water levels in Lake Champlain and the Richelieu River. Four workshops have already been held by the committee with professional and technical advisors and more are scheduled.

The committee expects to reach a decision on this issue at the end of May in order to be ready for the IJC public hearings the first week of June.

Gosselin polls constituents

Sherbrooke MNA, Gerard Gosselin, wants to hear from his constituents on matters that he says affect each of them.

In a recently circulated newsletter, Gosselin asks for response on such matters as the nationalization of Hydro-Quebec, the regionalization of health services, unemployment and community projects.

Any comments may be forwarded to: Gerard Gosselin, Sherbrooke MNA, Bureau 376-A, Quebec National Assembly, Quebec, G1A 1A4.

Blood clinic scheduled

In celebration of Red Cross World Day, the society's Sherbrooke branch will be holding a three-day blood donor clinic on May 9, 10 and 11.

An objective of 2,000 donors has been set for the clinic to be held in the Belvedere Street armory. On World Day, May 9, a flower will be given to each donor. On May 10 and 11, participants will receive a coupon for a free sundae at Mr. Pingouin.

The clinic will be in operation from 1:30 to 9 p.m. on May 9 and 10 and from 1:30 to 8 p.m. on May 11.

Local musicians perform

A large group of local singers and musicians presented an evening of Gospel Music at the Lennoxville United Church on April 16.

The evening included selections by the Country Kids, Fuzzy Patrol, Huntingville Girls, and several solo and duet performances.

Mr. Ian Haggerty acted as master of ceremonies while Mrs. Pat Morgan accompanied on both the piano and organ.

Hatchery produces record crop

The Baldwin's Mill Fish Hatchery produced a provincial record crop during 1977. A net weight of 45,300 pounds was produced last year, compared to an average 36,000 pounds in the previous five years.

The substantial increase in production was contributed to ideal temperature conditions last spring and the modern technical equipment in operation at the plant.

Mayday

Monday, May the First, and a cold day for Canadian labor to celebrate international solidarity with their brothers and sisters in other lands...

The strangest part about this year's Mayday celebrations are their very lack of solidarity. This May the First sees the Confederation of National Trade Unions feuding with the Quebec Federation of Labor. Each accuses the other of getting involved in petty partisanship and the chances of a monster solidarity rally such as those of the late 60's and early 70's are slim indeed.

Part of the problem is the weather. As has been proven many times in the past, it doesn't take much to get Quebecers out into the streets and parks when the weather's fine. Almost any excuse will do. But an inch or two of snow on the ground this late in the spring seems to trigger the hibernation instincts in all of us.

The QFL is holding an anti-unemployment rally at the Wellington Hotel tonight at 7:30, and no doubt a number of hard-core laborites will turn up. The Sherbrooke rally is only one of 12 set for different cities across the province, and all are part of QFL president Louis Laberge's outspoken anti-Trudeau campaign, during which the labor leader has blasted the federal Liberals for aggravating the problems of labor by its confrontation policies. He urges QFL members to vote conservative.

The CEQ and CNTU, meanwhile, are having their own rallies and solidarity suppers in 23 cities and towns across Quebec, including Sherbrooke, Granby, and Thetford. The CEQ, which groups about 70,000 teachers under its aegis, has fallen back on the same dusty thirties-style rhetoric as always, despite the fact that Quebec's teachers, are facing one of the toughest periods in their history amid dropping enrollments and wholesale school closings.

... which all goes to prove the essential futility of the May 1 tradition in Quebec. Before 1969, there was no such animal — the Labor Day weekend was generally recognized as the time to celebrate the unity of the work force, even if it meant everyone was home with the family.

In 1969, the Big Three — the CEQ, the QFL and the CNTU — adopted May 1 as the 'real workers' celebration' and rejoiced in their new-found power with some busy little riots and marches which served to pit the roughnecks and brick-tossers against the riot squads.

May 1 never had any meaning in Quebec before 1969, and the squabbles over this year's manifestation seem to point to the tradition dying out as fast as it began.

JAMES DUFF

Congratulations

The Town of Brome Lake police department are to be highly commended for their efficient work in solving the tragedy which took the lives of three young Montreal area residents who perished in a fire on Easter Sunday morning.

It was a bit of a revelation to discover the men in the force in this community have the expertise to conduct such a thorough investigation they did not require the services of the technicians attached to the Medical - Legal Institute.

Constable Gilles Laporte of the municipal force, conducted the entire investigation with some minor assistance from technical members of the QPF who took photographs and prepared a schematic diagram of the dwelling. His photographs were backed up by those taken by Const. Richard Burcombe of the TBL force.

It must be admitted the Medical-Legal Institute played a part in the investigation, notably determining the cause of death. Autopsies are required by law in all cases of violent death.

We can only presume the Brome Lake force's expertise was obtained by the chief insisting his men take as much training as they possibly can at the Quebec Police Institute.

Their prompt solving of the case speaks for itself on the viability of proper police training. Chief Gregor Lambourne should not only be congratulated for the fine work of his men but feel highly gratified the results paid off with credit to his department.

It is indeed tragic to witness the snuffing out of three young persons. We can only pray the results of this tragedy will serve as an ample warning for those to come, to never use volatile substances to ignite or accelerate any fire — either indoors or out!

Bank surcharges hit $100 M

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Because of lax enforcement of the Truth-in-Lending Act, the nation's banks have overcharged their borrowers perhaps as much as $100 million. Now the bankers are trying to wriggle off the hook.

The 10-year-old law, described by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson as "truly a triumph for truth," requires banks to spell out for loan applicants accurate information on their transactions.

The bottom line is the Annual Percentage Rate, which has become known in banking circles simply as the APR. "The APR is like the scale in a butcher shop," one regulator told us. "It's the only way to shop for credit."

But unfortunately, LBJ's "triumph for truth" has turned out to be a nightmare of negligence. A combination of inadequate inspection, incomprehensible government regulations and bureaucratic snafus has encouraged most banks to violate the law.

After a large-scale investigation, Comptroller of the Currency John Heimann recently notified Federal Reserve Board Governor Philip Jackson Jr., in a confidential letter: "Our examination indicates that 88 per cent of all national banks are probably in some degree of non-compliance. Although most of the violations are technical in nature, substantive non-compliance is not rare."

"We found that approximately one million customers were overcharged $9.5 million," Heimann reported in the preliminary results of the ongoing investigation. "We anticipate that the total monetary impact to customers of national banks in the first cycle of examination will substantially exceed the $32 million indicated by statistics currently available."

In fact, government examiners predict the total overcharge could soar as high as $100 million. As a sample, the examiners inspected the books of 27 New England banks. They found "substantial non-compliance" with a total of 337 violations amounting to more than $1 million in overcharges. "This was typical of what would have been found had there been vigorous enforcement from the start," an investigator told us.

Between 1969 and 1975, the number of loans under the comptroller's jurisdiction jumped from $37 million to $67 million. Yet his examiners spent a paltry $200,000 annually to check on bank compliance with the Truth-in-Lending Act.

A sister regulatory body, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, spends an average $2 million annually for enforcement. The loans under its jurisdiction have risen from $14 million to $30 million since it became unlawful to conceal loan charges.

Congress, meanwhile, is attempting to overhaul the original Truth-in-Lending law to make it simpler to understand and administer. But the new legislation contains some mumbo jumbo, which would enable the banks to cop out on repaying overcharges if the violations occurred prior to Oct. 28, 1974. This would virtually forgive their costly sins for the first five years after the law took effect.

The government regulators, for their part, are considering an even better arrangement for the bankers. Without fanfare, the reluctant regulators have in mind a rules change, which would exempt banks from paying overcharges except for those made one year prior to the discovery of a violation.

A spokesman for the American Bankers Association argues that the two-year statute of limitations for a consumer to sue for damages in overcharge cases "seems sufficient." He also told our reporter Tony Capaccio that the banks aren't wholly to blame for the overcharge mess.

"The regulations are complex," the spokesman said. "While the original bill was 12 pages long, the first regulation was 96 pages and that has since been supplemented by 1,200 interpretations."

Oil Loopholes: The great oil combines sometimes seem more eager to drill tax loopholes than oil wells. This is understandable, since the loopholes often bring greater returns than the gushers.

Tax loopholes, like oil wells, are also often located in unexpected places. An obscure tax treaty with Britain, for example, contains loopholes large enough to drive an oil tanker through.

The treaty would give U.S. multinational corporations at least $350 million in tax rebates for past years, plus a guaranteed $85 million a year hereafter. This would appear on the books as British benevolence.

But the American taxpayers would pay for it indirectly. For in return for the tax rebates to U.S. firms British companies would get a tax break in key states in this country.

Among the biggest beneficiaries, of course, would be the oil consortiums. They have pulled out all the stops, therefore, to push the treaty through the Senate. Gulf Oil, for example, warned Oklahoma officials not to oppose the treaty. "Express opposition to the treaty on the part of Oklahoma officials would be damaging to Oklahoma's business climate," the oil executives informed Oklahoma's Gov. David Boren.

The British have hired an ex-Treasury Department insider, John Nolan, to push the tax treaty through the Senate. He outlined his strategy in a confidential letter to Charles Walker, another ex-Treasury honcho.

The British rebates, wrote Nolan, "means hundreds of millions of dollars in tax relief for U.S. companies" with British operations. What's more, this treaty could set a "key precedent" for negotiating similar tax breaks from other countries.

Nolan urged Walker, himself a corporate lobbyist, to help bring pressure on the Senate to approve the treaty. "The U.S. business community is making a serious mistake," wrote Nolan. "In not providing more aggressive lobbying support for the proposed treaty, and I urge you to tell them so. The Treasury Department went out on a limb in this treaty to achieve a major tax break-through for U.S. business."

Disarmament barriers 'enormous' — Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The United Nations will soon begin special talks on how to prevent the annual $350-billion military monster from swallowing mankind, but Canadian officials say obstacles to agreement are enormous.

A federal disarmament expert said last week that the West, the Soviet bloc and non-aligned countries are all going to the UN special disarmament session in May with different "shopping lists" and it will be tough to reach consensus on a single set of guides for world disarmament.

These differences are already on the table in working documents submitted by the various groups.

The UN session in New York running from May 23 to June 28 is not intended to replace existing disarmament talks in Europe. But some observers say it may help budge these slow-moving discussions.

LIMIT EXPECTATIONS

While the UN session will not yield firm treaties for specific arms reductions, federal officials say they hope the conference will agree on a final declaration outlining disarmament principles and a program of action.

The Western document suggests that regional groups can then agree on specific methods for disarmament.

The Canadian delegation to the UN conference will be led by either Prime Minister Trudeau or External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson.

The UN conference is broader than the existing strategic arms limitation (SALT) and mutual and balanced force reduction talks in Europe. SALT is aimed at controlling U.S. and Soviet arms while the balanced force discussions are designed to reduce NATO and Warsaw pact forces.

MANY TO PARTICIPATE

More than 150 countries will be at the UN session, many of them developing nations that have only been on the fringe of world disarmament discussions before.

An external affairs official said the developing countries now spend 16 per cent of the world arms budget annually, up from six per cent 10 years ago.

About 20 per cent of Canadian arms exports go to countries outside the NATO alliance. Government officials say Canadian exports are mainly defensive equipment such as air navigational aids. Canada is the world's eighth largest arms exporter.

Canada and other Western countries are suggesting controls on conventional weapons in draft documents for the conference but some non-aligned nations want to concentrate solely on nuclear disarmament, external affairs officials say.

There is bound to be a dispute between the Soviet bloc and the West on the Soviet proposal that UN members renounce the right to use nuclear weapons in a first strike. External affairs sources say the Soviets must know the West can't accept that as NATO forces are heavily outgunned. Giving up the right to use nuclear weapons first would eliminate a deterrent to war in Europe.

The Soviet bloc is opposed to Western proposals for on-site inspection of nuclear facilities.

Soviets, West set to clash in Namibia

JOHANNESBURG (AP)

—South Africa's acceptance of a Western settlement plan for South-West Africa has set the scene for a head-on diplomatic clash between the Soviet Union and the West over Africa.

External Affairs Minister Donald Jamieson of Canada, speaking for all five Western authors of the South-West Africa settlement plan, made clear last week that the Western blueprint for a democratic transition to an independent Namibia, as the territory also is known, was on a "take-it-or-leave-it" basis. South-West Africa is administered by South Africa and a settlement might mean independence by Dec. 31.

"We are not speaking of concessions one way or another," Jamieson said at the United Nations in New York, where South-West Africa is currently the subject of debate in a special General Assembly session.

The speculation here is that the militant South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) will impose conditions on the plan, prompting the organization's Soviet backers to veto it when it comes before the UN Security Council.

In a statement at the United Nations last week, Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky said: "We support the transfer of all power in Namibia to the political forces headed by SWAPO."

A Russian veto would be in effect a gauntlet cast by the Russians before the United States, Britain, Canada, France and West Germany, since by officially sponsoring the plan and by winning South Africa's acceptance the five have taken direct responsibility for its success or failure.

In Rhodesia, Britain and the U.S. have limited themselves to a set of negotiable proposals and to promoting a meeting of "all parties concerned." Prime Minister Ian Smith, black moderates Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, and guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Success in Namibia, however, might embolden Britain and the U.S. to assume a tougher stance and to promote their own Rhodesian plan with greater force.

Women joining terrorist groups

ROME (AP) — More women are taking up the gun in the guerrilla organizations of Western Europe.

—A former co-ed is led into court in chains as a member of Italy's Red Brigades, the terrorist organization that kidnapped former premier Aldo Moro.

—A 22-year-old dental assistant among the South Moluccans who commandeered a train in the Netherlands last year was described as the most ruthless of the gang.

—In West Germany, 10 of the 16 terrorists sought for the kidnapping of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer are women. So are two of the three killers of banker Jurgen Ponto.

—In Italy of 1978 we have arrived at armed feminism," said an interior ministry official. "They act in cold blood."

"They are violent because society has been so violent against them for so long," said Tina Baffi, an Italian female lawyer.

Although no woman has reached the pinnacle of power in the Irish Republican Army, women have been in the forefront of the Italian and West German terrorist movements.

HELPED FOUND GANG Western Europe's best-known female terrorist in recent years was Ulrike Meinhof, a Hamburg journalist and housewife who with anarchist Andreas Baader organized and led West Germany's Baader-Meinhof Gang in the early 1970s in a campaign of arson, bank robbery, shooting and bombing.

Another leader in that group was Baader's mistress, Gudrun Ensslin, who aided him in his first terrorist attack, setting fire to a department store in Frankfurt in 1968 as a strike against the "pig-Fascist state." When Baader was arrested for the arson, Mrs. Meinhof led the prison raid that rescued him.

TV violence goes on trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television violence will be standing trial soon in an unprecedented court case that may restrict the kinds of TV programs people in the United States will be able to view in the future.

NBC and station KRON-TV are the only named defendants, but all television might be affected when a state court jury in San Francisco decides whether televised violence causes imitations in real life.

The U.S. Supreme Court has set the stage for the trial by refusing appeals by NBC and KRON, thus clearing the way for the jury's eventual consideration of an $11-million lawsuit against the two defendants.

The civil suit was filed for a nine-year-old girl who was sexually brutalized four days after a nationally televised NBC movie dramatically portrayed a similar crime.

If the jury decides against the network and station, Hollywood may sharply limit the violent content of future television programs.

Lawyers for the girl charge that the defendants were negligent and reckless in allowing the movie Born Innocent to be broadcast in the early evening when young people were sure to be in the viewing audience.

The two-hour movie, televised on Sept. 10, 1974, depicted the life of an unwanted teen-aged girl. In one scene, the girl is sexually assaulted with a wooden handle by older girls at a reformatory.

Four days after the broadcast, a nine-year-old San Francisco girl was the victim of a similar attack by four older girls on a local beach.

In seeking to block the trial, now scheduled to begin June 26, NBC and KRON argued in their Supreme Court appeal that constitutional free-speech and free-press guarantees should bar such claims.

The mere possibility of the trial "poses substantial risks of inhibition across the entire spectrum of artistic and journalistic endeavor," their lawyers contended.

Fashion goes Canadian

MONTREAL (CP) — The message to Quebec's ready-to-wear fashion industry was simple: Do your homework and sell the Canadian image to break into new United States markets.

The message was delivered last week by half a dozen fashion experts flown in from New York to about 135 trade representatives at a seminar organized by the Quebec department of industry and commerce.

Among the experts were department store executives, specialty boutique owners, sales agents, bankers and customs brokers.

Murray Raphael, an Atlantic City executive who owns a mall of 30 specialty shops, advised the audience to "tell the Canadian story. You have a Canadian identity in the States that you may not know you have."

A Canadian producer has to decide where to position himself in the market, and then emphasize the particular Canadian flavor of his apparel, Raphael said. Sales agent Irving Weinstein, who successfully introduced Montreal's Bagatelle International fashion line to the United States seven years ago, said he did it by "zeroing in on what Canada represented" to American fashion tastes.

"YOU HAVE IT"

"They are looking for goods that are different, and you have it," he said.

Other speakers explained the intricacies of clearing apparel through United States customs and ways to reduce credit risks and help collect payments from sometimes-unstable retail businesses.

"In 15 years of talk about export drives, this was the first solid, logical program I have seen," one participant commented.

But he complained that popular-priced wearing apparel was ignored by government officials in favor of promoting "the same six designers."

But Raphael Bobot, an industry and commerce department official, told him that every Quebec promotion activity is publicized with at least 500 manufacturers.

"We don't select lines," he said. "What we say is, if you don't have a good line you won't be able to make it in the U.S."

Jenne-Smith wed

A very pretty afternoon wedding took place in Ste. Croix Church, Dunham, Sat., April 15, 1978, when the marriage of Susan Ann Jenne, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hartland Jenne and Gordon Alan Smith, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of St. Hubert was solemnized, with Father G. Despins officiating. The church was decorated with Spring flowers and yellow bows marked the guest pews.

The bride entered on her father's arm, looking lovely in a white eyelet embroidered ruffled floor-length dress, with long sleeves and a high neckline. She carried a cascade of yellow roses, yellow daisies and baby's breath. Her short veil was held in place with a cluster of white daisies. Her only jewellery, a small gold heart necklace and earrings, was a gift of the groom.

Miss Stephanie Shore of Montreal and Selby Lake, a close friend of the bride was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length tiered blue printed gown of polyester. Her bouquet was made up of small blue carnations, white roses and baby's breath and tied with narrow blue ribbon.

The bridesmaids, Jan Wilkinson and Dale Strange wore similarly designed gowns and carried bouquets of white and yellow daisies. They all wore their hair tied with tiny blue forget-me-nots and white carnations and blue and white narrow ribbons.

Hughie Miller of Granby was best man and the ushers were David Jenne, brother of the bride, and Cam Miller, brother of the groom. They were all dressed in light blue tuxedos, navy slacks and ruffled shirts edged in navy.

The bride's mother chose a floor-length self-pleated blue polyester jersey dress with a corsage of blue carnations and white roses. The groom's mother was attired in a deep pink printed floor-length gown and her corsage was pink roses and white carnations.

Mrs. F. Laflamme, maternal grandmother, wore a street-length two-piece dress and the paternal grandmother, Mrs. R. Jenne, was in a navy print two piece street-length dress.

A reception was held following the ceremony, at the Pinnacle Lodge for upwards of sixty guests. The tables looked lovely, centered with vases of yellow and white daisies and laurel. A beautiful wedding cake made and decorated by Mrs. Wilkinson (friend of the family) centered the had table. It was decorated with yellow roses and small white and yellow bows, topped with two large white doves and white satin bows, flanked with arrangements of spring flowers.

A toast was proposed by the best man, and was responded to by the groom. Guests were present from Calgary, California, Montreal, Granby, Cookshire, Lennoxville, Brome, Cowansville and Dunham.

The bride's going away outfit was a three-piece grey suit, a coral blouse and black accessories. The happy couple left for Calgary, their new home.

After the rehearsal, the wedding party were entertained by the groom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith, Brome Terrace. Gifts were presented to the wedding attendants by the bride and groom, at this time.

IODE meeting

SHERBROOKE — The regular monthly meeting of the Aldershot Chapter, IODE, was held at the home of Mrs. George Foreman on Tuesday, April 11.

The meeting was opened with the Prayer of the Order, after which the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Letters of thanks were read from the Sher-Lenn Club for our offer of transportation help, and from Mrs. Joyce Booth for our contribution towards her attendance at a Children's Learning Disability Conference.

It was decided that the chapter will join the Douglas Hospital Auxiliary for 1978, and that we pay all our Provincial and National commitments.

Final plans were discussed for the April 25th card party. Tags and boxes are to be made ready for the tag days in May.

Members of the Chapter contributed more than 17 hours of work and collected, more than $80.00 for the Daffodil Cancer Drive.

The tea prize was won by Nadine Coombs. The next meeting will be held at the home of Marguerite Cotton on May 23.

After adjournment, refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. George Foreman.

Ann Landers says...

Poem's worth running again

Dear Ann Landers: These days when so many young people are "doing their own thing," I was touched by a poem that appeared in our bulletin.

Please print it and tell me where it came from.
N.Y. Reader

YOUR NAME

It came from your father, It was all he had to give, So it's yours to use and cherish As long as you may live. If you lose the watch he gave you It can always be replaced, But a black mark on your name, son, Can never be erased. It was clean the day you took it And a worthy name to bear, When I got it from my father There was no dishonor there.

So make sure you guard it wisely — After all is said and done, You'll be glad the name is spotless When you give it to your son. Dear N.Y.: That poem appeared in my column in 1959. Some readers have long memories or good scrapbooks. Thanks for sending it. It was worth running again.

Dear Ann: Your telling the nursing mother to go to the restroom blew my mind. Not a day goes by that we aren't exposed to rape, incest, prostitution, and commercials for women's personal products blabbed right out of the TV into our living rooms. Dozens of magazines (and newspapers) print pictures of big-busted women falling out of their brassieres — if they are wearing brassieres, and most of them aren't. How can society condone this sort of thing and make a young mother feel ill at ease because she nurses her infant on a bench in a bus station? The world is going crazy and you are already there. — Palm Beach, Fla. Dear Beach: Thanks for your letter. Here's another one from a member of your club:

Kay's Kitchen Korner

By Kay Taylor

There is always a great measure of satisfaction on producing a nice "batch" of home made bread. Sometimes it seems quite a chore, but really it more than repays you for any extra effort. On impulse, I "set" some bread recently after a long lapse from the habit — it is a habit! The results were most pleasing and here is my recipe, requested by several friends. It was given to me some years back by Mrs. Emily Gilmore, to whom I once more say, "thank-you."

EM'S WHITE BREAD
4 cups lukewarm water
1/2 cake (1 oz. yeast)
(Note — I use 1 good tablespoon dry yeast.)
1/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons salt
(I use a little less)
1/4 cup melted shortening
Dissolve yeast according to directions.... I add 1/4 teaspoon ginger — a hint from Madame Jehane Benoit which she learned from her grandmother and which improves the "working" of the yeast and gives flavour. Deduct the amounts of ingredients used in preparing the yeast (sugar and water) from the above amounts.

Add sugar, salt and shortening to the (boiling) water and let cool to lukewarm while the yeast is dissolving (about 15 minutes).

Stir yeast and add, being sure that the bottom of the pan containing water, sugar, salt and shortening is only lukewarm to the touch. Too much heat will do as much harm to the "rising" or more, than too much cold. Then add about 4 cups flour and beat till nice and smooth. Work in about 6 more cups till dough leaves sides of pan. Turn out and knead till smooth and elastic. I like to do this for about 10-15 minutes — it is really a soothing, pleasant activity.

When no longer sticky, put in lightly greased bowl (roll around) and cover with a damp cloth and rise till double in bulk (about 1 1/2 hours) in a warm place free from drafts. Then punch down and let rise again.

Then divide in four parts and shape into loaves, but first roll with rolling pin to force out air bubbles — then slap hard on the counter once or twice and fold in sides and edges. Pinch down well into greased tins, cover (damp cloth) and let rise to top of pans and (till corners are filled (1 1/2 hours). Bake at 400 degrees F. for about 30 minutes or till bottoms sound "hollow" when tapped. Good luck!

We will soon see the rhubarb in our gardens. Here is another good recipe from Lake St. John.

HURRY-UP RHUBARB PUDDING
1 cup sifted all purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons white sugar
One-third teaspoon salt
Two-thirds cup milk

2 cups rhubarb cut in 1-inch pieces
Two-thirds cup brown sugar
3/4 cup boiling water
Mix and sift flour, baking powder, white sugar and salt — add milk and combine. Place rhubarb in a greased baking dish and spread batter over it.
Dissolve brown sugar in boiling water and pour over the batter. Bake in a hot oven 375 degree F. for 30 minutes.

Help for wine glasses

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — Three of my beautiful wine glasses have broken off from the stems. Is there any way I can repair them? If not, can you suggest some other use for them? They have lovely carving on them, and I hate to throw them out. — DEBORAH

DEAR DEBORAH — If you wish to keep them in a cabinet for display only I am sure you could repair your glasses with one of those new glues that "grab" instantly. They do have to be handled with great care. I suggest wearing gloves when using such glue. I repaired a ceramic topiary tree that I was very fond of with such a glue and every tiny flower and leaf gripped instantly. But your fingers can stick together as well if you do not exercise great care in its use. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My son who is in the Army Medical Corps suggested that I use dental floss when sewing on buttons and patches as it is so much stronger than thread and is waterproof, too. — BETTY

DEAR POLLY — To remove wrinkles from a flannel-backed tablecloth I iron it with a warm iron on the wrong side using a wet pressing cloth. Every time I move the cloth over to continue pressing I re-wet the cloth but wring it out very thoroughly each time. All the wrinkles smooth out and the vinyl top is not damaged. — ERON

OES Golden Star Chapter

STANSTEAD (CT) - The Golden Star Chapter No. 48 O.E.S. held their stated meeting on April 19 in the Masonic Temple, Stanstead. The meeting opened in regular form and our flag was presented.

Sister Mildred Wheelock, P.G.M. and Brother Howard Walsh, P.G.P. were presented, welcomed, escorted to the East and given Grand Honors.

Sister Doris Morrison, Grand Ruth and Sister Gladys Hill, Grand Committee Member, were welcomed by the Worthy Matron, also the Past Matrons and Past Patrons. Correspondence and accounts were read and acted upon.

The Worthy Grand Matron will make her official visit at the stated meeting in May. The Grand Chapter of Quebec O.E.S. will hold their annual meeting in the Le Baron Hotel, Sherbrooke, on October 11, 12 and 13.

The meeting closed in regular form and delicious refreshments were served in the dining room by Lora and Ken Barlow, assisted by Myrtle Walsh, Violet Badger and Sandra Eldridge.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
Alan: "How about showing some standard expert plays, if there are standards for experts?"

Oswald: "Here's one that might qualify. The defense starts out with three rounds of diamonds. South wins the third diamond with the jack and is ready to go after trumps."

Alan: "The expert will lead the ten spot. This play is more than standard. It is an automatic play for him."

Oswald: "He plans to finesse, but West plays the king. Now we see why our expert led the ten not the queen."

Alan: "West's play of the king on the ten indicates that West held the singleton king. He would not have played it from king and one or more low cards since he might well be jeopardizing a queen or jack that East might be holding."

Oswald: "So our expert proceeds to play East for the rest of the trumps. He leads dummy's six and lets it ride if East fails to cover. Or if East does cover, South wins, gets back to dummy with a club and picks up the rest of East's trumps."

A Florida reader wants to know if we open one notrump.

Yes, we do. We only have 15 high-card points, but the tens and nines of diamonds and clubs are likely to be worth at least one extra point.

Nixon whodunit ever cloudy

NEW YORK (AP) — Who's telling it straight? Richard Nixon? Charles W. Colson? H.R. Haldeman?

Reading their Watergate books, it is often hard to tell. Nixon says he was flying back from Florida when he first learned that one of the Watergate burglars was on the payroll of his re-election committee.

But Colson recalled that Nixon phoned him from Key Biscayne, Fla., "furious that anyone connected with the campaign would be involved in anything so idiotic."

The news, said Colson, "plunged Nixon into such a fit of temper that he hurled an ashtray across his Key Biscayne living room."

And Haldeman: "My suspicion of an involvement of Chuck Colson and, therefore, Nixon in Watergate was dissolved completely when I spoke to Nixon. The president wasn't concerned at all by the break-in."

Such inconsistencies run through R.N.: The Memoirs of Richard Nixon, Haldeman's The Ends of Power and Colson's Born Again.

Nixon: On June 20, (three days after the break-in) Colson suggested that the four Cuban-Americans arrested inside Watergate might have planned it "on their own."

RAISE MONEY
Haldeman: Nixon suggested "raising money for the defendants and using a Cuban cover for the money."

Nixon writes that for nine months he assumed his major Watergate problem was determining who authorized the break-in, but that on March 21, 1973, he learned from John Dean that the cover-up was the real problem.

Haldeman: "The president was involved in the cover-up from Day One, although neither he nor we considered it a cover-up at that time. By June 20, 1972, he knew about (E. Howard) Hunt and (G. Gordon) Liddy—but never ordered me or anyone to inform the FBI."

Colson: "I never suspected for a moment that anyone in the White House, least of all the man I was talking to (Nixon) would for a moment tolerate or cover-up such bungling incompetence."

'SYMBOL OF HATE'
Haldeman: "Richard Nixon, himself, caused those burglars to break into (Larry) O'Brien's office." Haldeman reasoned that O'Brien, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, "became a symbol of hate" for both Colson and Nixon.

Nixon mentions two meetings on June 20 with Haldeman—but there is no word in the published excerpts about a telephone conversation during which, Haldeman asserts, the cover-up started.

Haldeman: "In this telephone conversation, on our very first evening back in Washington, Nixon, himself, initiated the idea of raising funds for the Watergate burglars in an indirect manner."

Nixon writes that on June 20 he felt confident about Watergate because both Haldeman and Colson assured him no one at the White House had been involved.

Haldeman: "Even more surprising, he indirectly suggested the idea involving the CIA in the Watergate problem three days before the famous 'smoking gun' conversation in which the same idea was consummated."

SOVIET SPY TRADE LEAVES CONFUSION

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaving a trail of cryptic clues, spy Robert Thompson left the United States on Sunday as part of a three-way international exchange of prisoners. "I was a spy for the U.S.S.R.," declared Thompson, 43, moments before he boarded a Pan American flight for the first leg of his journey to asylum in East Germany. He refused to confirm reports that he is a major in the Soviet secret police.

Thompson was released from Lewisburg federal penitentiary in Pennsylvania after serving 13 years of a 30-year sentence for espionage.

He was accompanied on the trip by East German attorney Wolfgang Vogel, who was instrumental in arranging the prisoner exchange. Vogel helped arrange the trade of U.S. pilot Francis Gary Powers for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel in 1962.

Thompson said the key to his release was the release by Mozambique of Israeli flier Miron Marcus, 24, imprisoned 19 months. He was jailed after his light airplane made an emergency landing on a flight from Rhodesia to South Africa.

The third man in the trade, Alan Van Norman, 23, of Windom, Minn., was to be freed from an East Berlin prison on Thompson's arrival.

Van Norman was sentenced to 2½ years by the East Germans for trying to smuggle a doctor, his wife and his son to the West. He has been in jail since February, 1977.

Thompson was an Air Force clerk in 1965 when he was convicted of passing secrets to the Russians. At that time, he protested his innocence, but later changed his story.

He says he was born in Leipzig, in what now is East Germany, of a Russian father and a German mother.

News Briefs

Wintario winners

TORONTO (CP) — Three tickets worth $1 million each were drawn Sunday in the Provincial lottery draw. The winning tickets were 2896707, 1345931 and 5716946. Two tickets worth $100,000 each also were drawn; the numbers were 1049909 and 5341722. There were 21,000 prizes worth at total of almost $5 million.

Next draw is May 28.

Vandals hit PQ convention

QUEBEC (CP) — Sunday's session of the Parti Quebecois national council meeting at Laval University got off to a bad start when it was discovered vandals had destroyed $1,300 worth of party documents during the night.

Jackpot!

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for a Reno, Nev., casino said Saturday that Katharina H. Ward, 73, of West Vancouver, has won $183,512 on a slot machine. Terry Smith, public relations director for Harold's, said in a telephone interview from Reno that Mrs. Ward won Saturday on a $1 slot machine after investing $12. Smith said club officials claim it is the largest jackpot ever paid for $1 and the second-largest ever paid by a slot machine.

One-man demolition derby...

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Police arrested a driver they said collided with at least 30 vehicles in a one-man demolition derby before his own car became too damaged to drive.

Police alleged that Eugene Swearingin, a 37-year-old crane operator, went on a 30-minute hit-and-run binge, sideswiping other cars with his pickup truck.

They said when his truck finally broke up he stole the station wagon of one of his smashup victims. He was arrested after running into a road repair vehicle.

Mayday demos planned

MONTREAL (CP) — Thousands of trade unionists and leftists are expected to take to city streets tonight to celebrate May Day, the international workers holiday.

Two major demonstrations—one organized by the 285,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) and the other co-sponsored by the 165,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU) and the 80,000-member Quebec Teachers Federation—are scheduled for working-class districts of the east end.

Weekend toll hits 46

Six middle-aged persons died Sunday in a house fire which destroyed the interior of a wood-frame building in St. John's, Newfoundland. The five men and one woman were among at least 46 persons who died accidentally in Canada during the weekend.

Fabien book spared PQ

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Sunday that a recently-published book alleging irregularities over the resignation of a judge was not defamatory to three Parti Quebecois caucus members.

La Presse, Matin strikes settled

MONTREAL (CP) — Reporters at La Presse and Montreal-Matin voted Sunday night overwhelmingly in favor of ending a strike that has kept the two daily newspapers off the streets for nearly seven months.

Spanish socialists merge

MADRID (AP) — Spain's two leading Socialist parties, the Socialist Worker Party and the Popular Socialist Party, merged Sunday to become, the leaders claim, the strongest challengers for power here.

Bryant appearance protested

WINNIPEG (CP) — A crowd of about 300 people staged a march to the Winnipeg Convention Centre on Sunday to protest an appearance by entertainer Anita Bryant at a religious revival meeting.

The group, which called itself the Coalition to Answer Anita Bryant, held a rally at the legislative building, then marched to the convention centre nearby under police escort.

Deaf suffer most, group told

OTTAWA (CP) — The deaf are among the most disadvantaged groups in Canada, a weekend conference was told.

And Rita Cadieux, deputy head of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, said Sunday she would use all the power of the commission to help the deaf "break out of the trap they have been placed in by society."

fire, chief Cabana said a blaze had broken out in a food store around the same hour but firemen managed to contain it and damage was minimal. He is convinced, the fire was the work of a pyromaniac.

In 1975, the town of Waterloo had a rash of fires over a three-day period of June 29-July 1 which destroyed the Star Theatre and later a row of commercial buildings on a Foster St. block.

A year later a blaze brought the town's Catholic church to the ground.

Residents of Waterloo are understandably wary over the latest developments which have gripped the town.

"There goes another," said one bystander at Friday's blaze. "It's only a matter of time before there'll be nothing left."

The man said he once lived in Waterloo but has since moved to a nearby town.

"No, it wasn't because there were so many fires. I still own two apartment houses here and I can bet that insurance is going to become damn high because of all these fires."

An elderly woman who did not wish to be identified admitted that she was going to have trouble sleeping at night knowing that she might wake up at any moment to a fire in her room.

Investigations into both major fires—the Friday blaze and the one at the carpet store—are continuing in an effort to discover clues to the identity of the suspected arsonist.

Armand Belanger, of South Sukely, owner of the carpet store, said he is prepared to offer a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest of those responsible for destroying his store.

Mr. Rod MacIver of Quebec spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. Angus A. MacIver.

ISLAND BROOK

Mrs. Garfield Spaulding
875-3671

The Island Brook and Lawrence Youth Association met on the usual night at the usual time with five present.

The meeting was called to order by the reading of the minutes and the treasurer's report.

It was moved that a "thank-you" note with a gift be sent to Mr. French in appreciation of his time spent in showing the film. Also the papers concerning the loom were to be filled out by a committee.

There have been trophies offered for the Ping-Pong Day. With each activity taking place each month, a coordinator is to be picked to see that committees perform their duties.

It was moved a card party be held, a committee of two was to look after the lunch and another one for the prizes.

Mrs. Fred Burns wanted the use of the school which was granted.

A lady from Cookshire made a donation of books to the library.

Being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

A card party was held at the Youth Center with three tables, cards were played until the final round, then everyone added their score.

The prize winners were: Ladies' first, Mrs. Charley Dion, second, Mrs. Ilona Burns; Genis first went to Mr. Mailin Westgate of Kingston, Ont., and second to Mr. Roland Warburton; the floating prize, Mr. Maple Westgate Tickets were sold on a quilt. Everyone gathered in the dining room where delicious refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Burns were weekend visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Burns and also visited the Robert Burns and Mr. Howard Seale.

Everyone seems to be taking their turn in the Sherbrooke Hospital, as Mr. Walter Chamberlain entered the Hospital as well as Mr. James MacPherson who spent two weeks in the same one; his condition seems to be improved since coming home. Mrs. Fred Gagne is at home after spending two weeks at the same hospital. Mr. Fred Burns was taken in suddenly and spent a week at the same one. Mr. Tony Boutin is also a patient in one of the French hospitals.

Mr. Michael MacPherson of Ontario spent the Easter weekend with his parents and son. Upon returning to his work his mother accompanied him to visit members of the family, her daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vargo in Bramalea, Ont., also her brother and many other relatives. Her visit was cut short by a call home finding that Mr. MacPherson was not so well.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Maple Westgate receiving word of the birth of a third great-grandson. Visitors for the weekend were Mr. and Mrs. Mailin Westgate of Kingston, Ont., as Mrs. Westgate is spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Blanchette, husband and new son of Lennoxville. It is of interest that before Mr. and Mrs. Westgate came at Easter they had returned from a trip to Mexico which they found interesting and enjoyable.

Mrs. Ilona Burns, Mrs. A.H. Banks and Mrs. Evelyn Lister attended the annual meeting of the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbyterian United Church Women held in Stanstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Morrow spent most of the week in East Angus, helping out at the Clark home, where Mr. Clark was very ill. He was not able to stay at home and was moved to the Wales Home in Richmond. During the weekend members of the MacAulay family of Montréal were visiting them. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ellis of Verdun spent a few days at their summer home here, cleaning up.

Miss Laura Banks of Sherbrooke spent a few days of the long school weekend with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A.H. Banks.

The countryside is yours to enjoy, take care of it!

The lakes, the forests and all the creatures that live there, depend on your common sense. Please don't disappoint them.

Since most of the countryside has been made accessible, the people of Quebec will have some of the Province's best fishing and hunting grounds to enjoy. However, with this new freedom comes responsibility.

Please exercise restraint.

Although we have an abundance of most species of fish and game, we must practise conservation by following a few simple rules.

We no longer need a fishing licence, except for salmon; but we must still obey all fishing regulations, including those governing the limit of our catch. Please keep in mind, it is not necessary to take your full limit. Catch only as much as you will eat.

Even in the country, you must show respect for private property.

Much more of the countryside has been made available for fishing and hunting, but if land is fenced in or if signs are posted, you must seek the owner's permission to enter, fish or hunt.

Remember basic safety rules.

Last year there were more fishing accidents in Quebec than ever before. Whether you are fishing from a boat or from shore, remember that it only takes a few seconds to drown in a cold lake or river. So wear your safety jacket, don't stand up in a canoe or small boat, and above all use common sense.

You can help protect the environment.

You can help at least in two ways. First, by ensuring that you yourself are observing the basic rules of good sportsmanship. And secondly, please show common courtesy by leaving a clean site. If you were able to bring all your provisions in with you, then you are able to take your garbage back with you.

The countryside of Quebec is ours to enjoy. It is also ours to protect.

Sherbrooke volleyballers win bronze

REGINA — The Sherbrooke Senior 'AA' women's volleyball team came up with a terrible semi-final performance but rebounded to win the bronze medals in the national championship here Saturday.

The Sherbrooke squad, favourites in the tournament, lost three straight games (15-7, 15-13, 15-9) to the University of British Columbia to drop them from the title game.

Against Kindersley, Sask., for the bronze, Sherbrooke took the first game 15-8 but then fell behind with two successive losses 15-8 and 15-6. They came back in strong form to clinch third spot with 15-10 and 15-13 scores in the fourth and fifth games of their match.

Torontonians win Frederick run

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — Bruce Dewsberry of Toronto covered 26 miles in slightly more than 2½ hours Sunday to win a marathon race sponsored by Life and Health magazine.

Dewsberry's time of 2:31:05 was four seconds better than that of Scott Whitney of the U.S. Naval Academy.

An estimated 500 runners entered the marathon, one of four such races sponsored around the country by the magazine, which is published by the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

East German captures diving meet

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — East Germany's Karin Gubke withstood the pressure from Olympic gold medalist Jenni Chandler of Birmingham, Ala., to win the three-metre springboard title at the Hall of Fame international diving meet which concluded Sunday.

Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo, Calif., won the men's 10-metre tower competition after fighting off challenges by East Germany's Falk Hoffman and Mexico's Carlos Giron, who won the three-metre springboard event Saturday.

Bostock refuses April pay

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Lyman Bostock has apparently decided to hold true to his vow of earlier this month and not accept an April pay cheque because of his poor start in the current American League baseball season.

Bostock, who signed with California Angels as a free agent during the off-season after hitting .336 last year with Minnesota Twins, picked up only two hits in his first 39 at-bats this season. He said at that time he wouldn't accept his salary for the month of April if his performance didn't improve.

Player luck runs out

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Just as he'd predicted, the string ran out for Gary Player of South Africa.

"With everybody and his grandmother asking Gary if he thought he could win four in a row, it put tremendous pressure on him," said Lon Hinkle, who parlayed power and precision into a final-round 66 to win the New Orleans open golf tournament Sunday and snap Player's victory string at three. "I don't know how he played as well as he did."

B.C. volleyballers grab title

REGINA (CP) — British Columbia Olympics outclassed Winnipeg Roadrunners to win the Canadian senior men's volleyball championships Sunday at the University of Regina.

The Olympics, who finished second in the national final last year, won the best of five championship series against the Roadrunners in four games with scores of 15-9, 15-8, 6-15 and 17-15.

Guelph takes Centennial lead

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Guelph Platers took a 3-2 lead over the Charlottetown Eagles in their best-of-seven Eastern Canada Centennial Cup hockey final with an 8-4 victory Sunday.

It was the third consecutive victory at home for Platers, which could eliminate the Eagles when the series resumes here Tuesday.

Snead captures Legends tourney

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sam Snead's side-saddle birdie putts on the final three holes carried him and partner Gardner Dickinson to a legendary finish Sunday, as they captured the $400,000 Legends of Golf tournament by a single shot.

Snead admitted "it looked as if we were in the bag" after Australian Peter Thomson had holed a 12-foot birdie putt on the 360-yard 16th hole of the par-70 Onion Creek golf course.

Leafs think defence in series with Habs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Toronto Maple Leafs know they haven't the scoring power to match Montreal Canadiens so they plan to stick with the hardhitting defensive style that helped them beat New York Islanders.

"If we got into a shootout, I don't think we would win out because they've got too many shooters," said Leafs' defenceman Ian Turnbull. "It's up to our checkers to stop their shooters with the body or any way they can."

But goalie Glenn (Chico) Resch, victim of Lanny McDonald's winning goal in overtime that gave Toronto a 2-1 win in Saturday's deciding game of the best-of-seven quarter-final, said he doesn't think the hitting game will work against Montreal.

"I don't care what anybody says, they can play it any way you want to play it," said Resch. He said a checking team can nullify good hockey unless the opponent is as powerful as Montreal. "And maybe that's why I respect Montreal so much because they can overcome that and you see good hockey."

Resch was upset that the Leafs' rough brand of hockey, termed violent by some critics, had prevailed over the Islanders' style of skating and scoring.

Islanders general manager Bill Torrey declined to call the series violent. "I don't like the word violence," said Torrey. "Violence belongs in the streets."

Toronto coach Roger Neilson also shrugged off the violence label. To hold the Islanders to a goal a game for the last four games meant that every player "had to be checking, to give everything he had, and that's the way it worked out," said Neilson.

Turnbull's defensive play and his sudden forays deep into Islander territory were a major part of Toronto's success in winning the series four games to three. Turnbull now is the leading scorer in the playoffs with 12 points.

Then there was Mike Palmateer, cocky as ever, who had a red-hot streak in the Leafs' goal, allowing less than two goals a game.

Turnbull got the tying goal Saturday night and set up Lanny McDonald with the winner at 4:13 of overtime. "We're a well-disciplined team and with a couple of days off we'll be ready to go into Montreal," Turnbull said.

Tardif powers Nordiques reply in Whalers series

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — "Marc Tardif is even better than I thought he was," New England Whalers coach Harry Neale admitted Sunday night. "He's the best in the league."

The Whalers used forward Danny Bolduc to shadow the World Hockey Association regular-season scoring leader, but Tardif scored anyway and helped Quebec Nordiques to a 3-2 victory that evened the WHA semi-final series at one victory apiece.

The third and fourth games of the best-of-seven series will be in Quebec Wednesday and Friday.

Tardif was used on two lines but managed to break away from Bolduc's grasp long enough in the first period to tie the score at 1-1. "Bolduc did another superlative job and we couldn't have gotten any more from him," said Neale. "Tardif got a goal but so did Bolduc."

The two teams exchanged goals in the first period.

Mike Rogers, who figured in both Whalers' goals, put New England out in front at 10:23. Goaltender Louis Levasseur directed a shot by Bob Fitchner to Rogers who barreled down the left side and beat Quebec's Richard Brodeur with a low slap shot to his left.

Tardif evened the score less than two minutes later. Quebec scored the only goal of the second period when right winger Real Cloutier snapped in a rebound of a Tardif shot from the point while the Whalers were killing off a penalty.

New England tied the game midway through the final period when Bolduc tipped in a Larry Pleau pass from just outside the crease.

Expos' bullpen the key to 'impossible dream'

HOUSTON (AP) — Montreal manager Dick Williams has already begun construction on his second "impossible dream."

Williams, who managed Boston Red Sox when they won the American League pennant in 1967, says the Expos pitching staff may hold the key.

"We've got better pitching on this staff than I had at Boston the year we went to the World Series," said Williams following the Expos' 2-1 victory over Houston Astros Sunday.

"We've got four good starters in this club. Rudy May, Ross Grimsley, Wayne Twitchell and Steve Rogers are all starters of major league quality."

May and Stan Bahnsen combined on a five-hitter to keep Montreal tied for first with Philadelphia in the National League East.

"In Boston, we had two good starters, Jim Lonborg and Jose Santiago," Williams said. "But we have a much better situation here."

HAD GOOD MONTH

The Expos, who ended in fifth place last year, finished the most successful month of April in the club's 10-year history with an 11-8 record.

Andre Dawson put the Expos in front 1-0, with his third home run of the year, a fourth inning blast off losing pitcher Mark Lemongello, 2-3.

Montreal added its other run in the seventh on a one-out single by Ellis Valentine, a wild pitch by Lemongello and a two-out single by Chris Speier.

Cesar Cedeno accounted for the Astro's only run with a lead-off home run in the bottom of the ninth off May, 2-1.

Bob Watson followed with a walk and pinch runner

Dave Bergman was sacrificed into scoring position by Jesus Alou, but Bahnsen came in to secure the game's final two outs and post his fourth save of the season.

Fitchner picked up a loose puck to the left of the Whalers' net and centred a pass to Steve Sutherland who lifted in the winning goal at 3:37 of the final period.

...and Canadiens want revenge for '67

MONTREAL (CP) — No one really expected Toronto Maple Leafs to be here Tuesday night when Montreal Canadiens begin their National Hockey League semi-final series.

But the Leafs and Canadiens will meet each other for the 12th time in post-season play with Montreal looking for revenge for what happened 11 years ago.

Back in 1967, the last time the Leafs made it into the semi-finals, they went all the way, beating the Canadiens in a six-game final series, thanks to the brilliant netminding of Terry Sawchuk and Johnny Bower.

At that time, the Canadiens had a pair of diminutive netminders performing for them—Rogation Vachon and Lorne (Gump) Worsley. Now, of course, lanky Ken Dryden is looking after the Montreal goaltending chores while cocky little Mike Palmateer is a main reason Toronto got by New York Islanders in their seven-game quarter-final.

Back in 1967, both coaches were rather colorful and always ready to express their opinions.

The Leafs were under the watchful eye of Punch Imlach, who stirred up the Montreal camp by calling Vachon a Junior B goaltender.

Toe Blake was winding down his long and successful career as the Canadiens' coach and now still is seen around the Forum while Scotty Bowman, considered one of hockey's master tacticians, directs the Montreal club.

Roger Neilson, a soft-spoken former school teacher, will be trying to match Bowman's moves and while the Leafs may not get by Montreal, there is no doubt the rookie coach has done a job making the Leafs a Stanley Cup contender instead of a pretender.

TEAM CANADA'S HOPES SPARKED BY 7-2 WIN

PRAGUE (CP) — The high hopes Team Canada generated by exhibition victories over Sweden and Czechoslovakia have been revived by the club's tidy, efficient play in a 7-2 win over the United States at the world hockey championship Sunday night.

Plagued by giveaways in their first game loss to Finland and even in their relatively easy win over East Germany, the Canadians came up with a solid effort against the Americans, a mixture of professionals and amateurs.

With Cleveland Barons centre Dennis Maruk scoring three goals, Colorado Rockies right winger Wilf Paiement two and Los Angeles centre Marcel Dionne and Pittsburgh right winger Jean Pronovost one each, the Canadians had a 7-0 lead before the Americans managed to beat goalkeeper Dan Bouchard of Atlanta Flames late in the third period.

Mike Fidler of Cleveland and Bill Gilligan of Cincinnati Singers scored goals at 16:42 and 17:12, just 30 seconds apart, to spoil Bouchard's bid for a shutout.

"This was a little more like the exhibition games we played against Sweden and Czechoslovakia," said head coach Harry Howell. "The defensive game was much stronger than in the first two games and until the last five minutes we played a strong, aggressive hockey game."

Howell said he thought the Canadians had learned their lesson and will be ready to play disciplined hockey when they get into the thick of the round-robin competition against defending champion Czechoslovakia on Thursday night. But first they must deal with the winless West Germans tonight.

"Tonight, with a seven-goal lead and five minutes to go, I can understand a little bit of a letdown and I'm not upset about that at all," Howell said of Sunday's game.
