Octuplets

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A young woman gave birth to eight babies Friday night but four died within five hours and doctors said it was nearly impossible that any would survive.

The birth of octuplets had been recorded twice before in this century, in Mexico in 1921 and in China in 1934.

The 21-year-old mother, Maria Teresa Lopez de Sepulveda, was reported in good condition early today but despondent over the deaths.

Newsman dies

MONTREAL (CP) — Dave Kerr, 65, a veteran newspaperman who worked for the Sherbrooke Record and the Montreal Herald a number of years ago, died Friday in hospital after a lengthy illness.

Born in Toronto, he came to Quebec in 1931, joined the Montreal Herald and later went to the Sherbrooke Record. He returned to the Montreal Herald in the 1940s.

Extra charges

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Three prisoners from Oakalla prison farm who were foiled in their bid for freedom will face several charges as a result of a gun battle with police and holding a woman and her two daughters hostage.

RCMP Staff Sgt. Bruce Northup said Friday a charge of attempted murder is included among those to be laid against Neil Theodore Turner, 23, who surrendered after holding Mrs. Verner Weber, 39, and her daughters at gunpoint for about three hours.

Cross examine

MONTREAL (CP) — The defence Friday continued its efforts to demolish the testimony of Crown witness Louis Scitte, who has said he was beaten by 15 men during a police interrogation Oct. 20, 1965.

Scitte, 41, maintained his composure during a barrage of questions on his 11th day in the witness box, but defence lawyers complained that he was being evasive.

"He is hemming and hawing and he only remembers when it is convenient to him," said lawyer Jean Bienvue, who represents four of the 15 accused of beating Scitte with intent to maim or mutilate.

Seek guarantee

DETROIT (AP) — A chief aide to Walter P. Reuther says the United Auto Workers union doesn't have "all the answers to the many, many thorny problems" a guaranteed annual wage would create, but it will strike if necessary to bring such a pay plan into effect.

Irving Bluestone, Reuther's administrative assistant, says the union is putting many varied models of such a plan through computers and expects to come up with several alternatives for switching auto production workers from hourly wages.

Reject plan

WINNIPEG (CP) — A thousand meetings didn't convince rural Manitoba voters to buy a school consolidation program which was promoted as the greatest forward move in history by the provincial government.

"They were apprehensive," suggested Education Minister George Johnson Friday night after the plan was rejected by 19 of 33 divisions in a province-wide referendum. He said many likely feared over-centralization.

May use French

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan legislature next week is expected to pass a bill permitting French to be used on a limited basis as a language of instruction in the province's schools.

First and second reading already have been given Bill 27 which would permit French to be used as a language of instruction in tax-supported elementary and secondary schools for the first time in 36 years.

WEATHER

Variable cloudiness with a little wet snow or rain showers later today and tonight. Sunday snowflurries but becoming sunny in the afternoon. High today and low tonight at Sherbrooke 38 and 20.

Pepin, new breed of unionist

Dedicated to workers

MONTREAL — (TNS) — Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, is one of a new breed of professional trade unionists who are fast rising to challenge the authority of Canada's union establishment.

Mr. Pepin, 42, whose leadership of the CNTU was confirmed at the October convention of the Quebec-based organization, is university trained and emotionally and intellectually dedicated to the cause of the working class in a way that many had thought long since cloistered in history with Jos Hill.

He took over the reins of the CNTU little more than a year ago when Jean Marchand, now Manpower Minister in the Liberal Cabinet, entered federal politics.

Mr. Marchand — who is of the same school as Mr. Pepin — left a large pair of shoes to fill. He was a militant leader whose most dramatic victory was probably the 1949 struggle of miners for a $1 minimum wage at Asbestos, Que.

At the head of a battered, bankrupt, independent union affiliated with the CNTU, Mr. Marchand brought the Canadian John — Manville Company and the government of Premier Maurice Duplessis to their knees in a bitter and bloody dispute that lasted four months and had begun to involve the entire Quebec population — including the clergy — in open revolt against authority.

And it was under Mr. Marchand that the CNTU saw its greatest growth — from about 80,000 members in 1950 to more than 225,000 in 1966.

Mr. Pepin is the father of six children and comes from a large working class family — four brothers and four sisters. His father, who died last August at 82, was a leather worker. His mother is still alive.

BAPTISM OF FIRE

He is the only one of his family who had the opportunity for a higher education and he recalls that he made up his mind before leaving high school that he would "do everything in my power to improve the living condition of my class."

In 1946, at the age of 22, Mr. Pepin graduated from the University of Montreal with a B.A. Then he went to Laval in Quebec City where he obtained a degree in industrial relations in 1949.

While at Laval, he worked part-time in the National Textile Workers Union (CNTU) and received his baptism of fire in prolonged negotiations that led to bitter strikes.

In January, 1949, he moved to the National Metal Trades Federation (also CNTU) and became a permanent organizer in May of that year after completing his course at Laval.

In the years that followed he worked for the union as technical adviser, director of technical services and general secretary. He was elected general secretary of the CNTU in 1961 and became president in 1965 when Mr. Marchand abdicated.

The CNTU has given the Quebec Federation of Labor — the Canadian Labor Congress arm in French Canada — a run for its life during the past six years. Tens of thousands of QEL members have gone over to the independent union amid bitter fights for jurisdiction.

THE CNTU MAGIC Until recently, the CNTU has been regarded by the CLC as restricted to French-speaking Canadians. But like sailors awash in lifejackets watching the fin of a shark lurking outside its traditional waters, the CLC leaders have been watching CNTU inroads to their strongholds outside Quebec.

The recent affiliation bid by a Toronto local of carpenters is a case in point, but even more ominous for the CLC leadership is the fact that Toronto's hospital workers are also negotiating affiliation with the CNTU. Other unions and union locals are talking the same theme right through to British Columbia.

The magic of the CNTU is beginning to catch on. Mr. Pepin, who works an 18-hour day, says that while he is pleased that bids for affiliation are coming from elsewhere in the country, the CNTU is wary of expansion at this point because it is still staggering from the weight of expansion during the past few years.

The October convention granted the leadership an expansion mandate so long as the parent body could provide adequate service to the older, as well as the new, affiliates. Mr. Pepin says this can be done at an annual increase in membership rate of about 10 per cent and it is

Premier Kosygin a big hit in the West, has more popularity than Krushchev did

By PETER WORTHINGTON

LONDON — (TNS) — When the ebullient but erratic Mr. Nikita Khrushchev was bounced 29 months ago who would have predicted his successor as premier would have made an even greater hit in the West than he?

Yet that is precisely what happened. Premier Alexei Nikitaich Kosygin, the Soviet with the grey-flannel mind, is proving to be a more effective advertisement for his country — and system of rule — than even Mr. K.

It's taken a long time, but finally Premier Kosygin, the number two man in Russia after Party Boss Leonid Brezhnev, is emerging from his Kremlin cocoon and beginning to travel and talk in the West.

So far the West likes what it has seen.

Kosygin is an impressive man. He is also unique for the Soviet system. He is the first technocrat — the first Communist to reach the top through technical skills and professional abilities than by machinery and comradeship back — stabbing.

Britain is still reeling and reeling from his almost "Royal" visit, during which he impressed nearly everyone with his shy, modest bearing, and lack of flamboyance and bluster.

Kosygin was the essence of composure, competence and simple dignity. He talked straight and didn't duck awkward questions — something his Western counterparts often seem congenitally incapable of doing.

What Kosygin said in Britain — friendship treaties, Vietnam peace hints, Germany and "The Bomb", are important. It's a Western failing to attach too much significance to this "new" ificance to Soviet pronouncements. It was not what Kosygin said that was impressive, but the way in which he said it.

The British visit was a repeat of Kosygin's earlier visit to France, where president Charles de Gaulle came as close to paying homage as de Gaulle is likely to come.

The whole French affair was more mindful of the court of Louis XIV than it was of the Fifth Republic. And Alexei Kosygin, the ex-textiles engineer and plant manager, won admiration and affection for his dignified bearing and manner.

Every Westerner who has ever met Kosygin, from Lord Thomson to Cockney teenagers, has been favorably impressed.

The results of this "new" style of Soviet leadership is causing ripples around the world.

In some ways Kosygin, while the most impressive of Soviet leaders, is also the most dangerous.

His sanity and obvious stability tend to lull the West into excessive and ill-justified optimism and complacency.

The West — or some Western factions — seems determined to close their eyes and minds to lessons from history and accept Kosygin and the Soviet Union, at face value.

There is a feeling a new era of Soviet-West relations may be dawning and the West — meaning the U.S. — must now go more than halfway to meet this new Russia adapt to changing times. The onus for showing good-will seems to be on America.

A symbol of this "new" diplomacy seems to be the much-debated U.S.-Soviet consular agreement on which the Russians are keen and Americans are nervous.

Criticism from American "liberal" elements for the U.S. Senate's reluctance to sign the agreement is reaching a crescendo. The pure heart and trusting of mind — seem determined to disregard the Soviet record and are urging immediate acceptance.

Those who have doubts about Soviet reliability and intentions along with the long-range values of the consular agreement, are branded as near-McCarthyites and potential John Birchers.

Where does the truth lie? Has the Soviet Union changed? Is the Cold War really over? Is the so-called "Red Threat" a thing of the past? Can the Soviets be trusted?

After two years in Moscow watching the Soviet Union and its leaders, and after being subjected to constant barages by its press and propaganda machines, I can think of no greater folly than to open hearts and arms to this "new" Russia, and to accept Soviet standards as being sincere.

It is true the Soviet Union is in the process of change (with the assistance of China). But there is more evidence it is the tactics of Communism, or Sovietism, which are changing, rather than the goals.

Because the leaves of a tree change color, it doesn't mean the roots have also changed.

Federal Bureau of Investigation Director, J. Edgar Hoover, and others, feel if the USSR opens consulates in American cities, it would make the Soviet spy network even more effective.

Unfortunately such extremists as the Birchers also subscribe to this view, and otherwise balanced citizens tend to compensate rightwing extremism by supporting other extremists.

Space tragedy dims hopes of 1970 moon landing

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — In the wake of the Apollo 1 fire, U.S. space agency officials have become pessimistic about landing men on the moon before 1970.

"The possibility of making a manned lunar landing in this decade is more remote as a result of the Apollo accident," agency administrator James Webb told a congressional space committee.

"It is not necessarily out of the picture. We'll know more about it in about three months, after the Apollo board of review has completed its investigation of the accident and we determine what has to be done."

Dr. George Mueller, associate administrator for manned space flight, said: "The big problem to assess is the full impact of the spacecraft redesign. We have not eliminated man-to-the-moon in this decade, but we have reduced our chances."

Dr. Robert Seamans, deputy administrator, said: "We had planned to fly the first Apollo (earth orbit) flight early this year. Now we can't carry it out until the end of this calendar year at the earliest."

THREE TESTIFY All three top officials testified before congressional space committees and outlined changes being studied as a result of the Jan. 27 launchpad fire that killed the three astronauts who were to have flown the first mission — Virgil Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee.

"We suspect the fire started under the couch level on the left side," Seamans said. "The nylon netting probably was ignited at that time and spread to the fastening material. This served as a fuse to take it around the cabin. We believe it was an electrical short circuit on the lower left-hand side."

This was the side where Grissom was.

Mueller said a new hatch will be built, one that may be opened as rapidly as two seconds. The hatch on Apollo 1 required 90 seconds to open.

Stalin's daughter reported leaving Rome by US aircraft

ROME (AP) — An Italian newspaper reported Svetlana Stalina, daughter of the late Soviet dictator, who was said to have defected in fear for her safety in the Soviet Union, flew out of Rome late Friday on a U.S. government plane.

Informants in Washington expressed doubt she had left for the United States.

Giornale d'Italia said the much-married, 42-year-old daughter of Josef Stalin had been staying at the residence of the U.S. ambassador in Rome.

There was no official confirmation. Neither embassy or Italian officials were commenting. The informants in Washington said it was unlikely she would go to the U.S. so soon.

From sources in Washington, Moscow, New Delhi and Rome came this account of Miss Stalina's movements:

Last December or January, her husband or friend, Indian Communist Brijesh Singh, 59, died in Moscow. He was cremated and Miss Stalina was granted permission to take his ashes back to India and visit his family. She reached India about a month ago.

JFK said listening to Castro

NEW YORK (AP) — In the three months before his assassination, President Kennedy showed a cautious but favorable response to overtures by Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba for resumption of U.S.-Cuban diplomatic relations, a new book says.

Details of confidential diplomatic talks are given in the book, The Reds and the Blacks, to be published Thursday by Harper and Row.

The author of the book is William Attwood, who in 1963 served on the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. Attwood was also President Kennedy's ambassador to Guinea and appointed by President Johnson as ambassador to Kenya.

Attwood now is editor-in-chief of Look magazine.

An aide to Senator Robert F. Kennedy says the senator, a brother of the president, is acquainted with the book and considers it to be "essentially accurate."

The overtures by Castro are said to have begun in September, 1963.

CASTRO RESTIVE

Attwood says he had received hints that Castro was growing restive under Communist pressures and was prepared to make "substantial concessions" to achieve an accommodation with the United States.

Attwood says he suggested to Adlai E. Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, and to Averell Harriman of the state department that contact be made with the Cuban delegation to find out "if in fact Castro did want to talk on our terms."

Landreville's witness bid turned down

OTTAWA (CP)—A bid by Mr. Justice Landreville to call two cabinet ministers, a magistrate and his own counsel as witnesses was turned down Friday by the parliamentary committee reviewing his conduct.

David Humphrey, counsel for the Ontario Supreme Court judge, said he would like to question Justice Minister Cardin and his predecessor, Registrar-General Favreau, about their attitudes to the Landreville case.

He also sought permission to call Sudbury Magistrate Albert Marek, who dismissed a municipal corruption charge against Mr. Justice Landreville in 1964, and J. J. Robinette, the judge's chief counsel.

The Commons-Senate committee went into a 40-minute closed session and decided against calling the four men.

WANT NEW EVIDENCE

Senator Daniel Lang, committee co-chairman, said the four could only give personal opinions about the case and the members were looking for actual and new evidence. The committee then adjourned until 9:30 a.m. EST Tuesday, when the judge will begin his fifth day of sworn testimony, which so far has consisted mostly of reading from the record of previous hearings.

The judge, fighting to retain his $26,000-a-year position on the bench, said he will try to conclude his testimony Tuesday with a statement on ethics and morality.

The committee hopes to complete hearings next week and submit a report to the Commons and Senate, recommending for or against a motion by Mr. Cardin to remove the judge from the bench for improper conduct.

Mr. Justice Landreville said Friday he might ask the committee later to call other witnesses. He mentioned the registrar of the Ontario Supreme Court and unidentified persons in Sudbury who would testify whether they knew in 1958 that he held an option on gas stock.

Richard Bell (PC-Carleton) said the hearings will go on indefinitely if the committee starts calling opinion witnesses or hearing evidence that was adduced before a judicial inquiry last year.

Senator Lang said the committee does not want to give any impression that it wants to exclude relevant evidence, but it would be irrelevant to call character or opinion witnesses.

The report on the 1956 inquiry said Mr. Justice Landreville was unfit to remain a judge because his 1956-57 gas stock dealings gave rise to suspicion.

He was mayor of Sudbury in 1956 when Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. obtained the city gas franchise. The following year, the judge received 7,500 NONG shares free of charge and later sold them for $117,000.

Mr. Justice Landreville said Friday he might ask the committee later to call other witnesses. He mentioned the registrar of the Ontario Supreme Court and unidentified persons in Sudbury who would testify whether they knew in 1958 that he held an option on gas stock.

Richard Bell (PC-Carleton) said the hearings will go on indefinitely if the committee starts calling opinion witnesses or hearing evidence that was adduced before a judicial inquiry last year.

Tax collection ends ahead of schedule

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Sharp announced Friday "last year's very rapid rate of the government will end its collection of refundable taxes on corporate cash flows this time this year."

Consequently, he added, "we feel this refundable tax, the purpose of which was to apply a temporary restraint on business capital spending, is no longer appropriate."

Mr. Sharp did not say when the government will start refunding taxes already paid. He said he will make a more complete statement when he introduces a bill to make the change in existing tax law.

Mr. Sharp's announcement was received by the Commons without comment from Opposition spokesmen.

CORPORATE CONTROLLER

POSITION
As a result of expanding operations, we have a requirement for a well-qualified individual in the newly-created position of corporate controller. Initially, he will work as part of a group responsible for the conversion of the company's present unit-record installation to a computer installation. Subsequently, the Controller will assume responsibility for:

—Supervision of the company's accounting staff.
—Operating and improvement of financial and administrative control systems.

The Controller will report to the company's chief financial executive, and will continue to work closely with the data processing organization. The company will provide an excellent salary and fringe benefits, and will offer opportunities for broader responsibilities in an expanding organization. The location of our head office in Cowansville, Quebec, provides the advantage of permanent residence in the year-round resort area of the Eastern Townships.

APPLICATION
The company invites applications in writing from experienced industrial accountants between 25 and 40 years of age who have C.A., R.I.A., or equivalent qualifications. Applicants should also be capable of working with top management, and of directing and motivating the accounting staff. Applications should provide a summary of the individual's background and career history, and should state age and salary expected. They will be received in confidence if addressed to the company's Secretary-Treasurer.

Federal offshore rights supported

OTTAWA (CP) — Unsuccessful attempts by California, Louisiana and Texas to gain control of offshore oilfields were cited in the Supreme Court of Canada Friday in support of Ottawa's claim to jurisdiction over offshore mineral rights.

C. F. H. Carson of Toronto, special federal counsel, said the three American states were blocked by U.S. Supreme Court rulings that the seabed of the territorial sea and continental shelf is part of the federal domain.

A seven-member panel of the Supreme Court of Canada is hearing federal and provincial arguments on the offshore question. Mr. Carson's case for the federal government is expected to wind up Monday and be followed by legal arguments for British Columbia, Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

Manitoba and Prince Edward Island are holding working briefs in the case. Quebec, the only other province bordering on salt water has refused to take part, contending that the dispute is one for political settlement rather than a legal question.

The federal government said it first wants the court's opinion before entering any political discussions on the issue. At stake are potential millions of dollars worth of undersea oil and mineral strikes.

Mr. Carson said an "impossible state of affairs" has been created in recent years by the issuance of both federal and provincial permits for offshore oil and gas exploration.

SHOWS MAPS

He filed with the court maps of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts showing the location of areas leased for exploration. In some instances the federal government had given an area to one company and a provincial government had allotted the same area to another firm.

Mr. Carson, heading a five-member federal legal team in the case, spent most of the day tracing the development of offshore jurisdiction from the British colonial era to modern times.

He said there is not a single document of any kind to show that the British government ever transferred to British Columbia its sovereignty over the territorial sea.

The British Columbia situation is the subject of the current test case.

Mr. Carson said it is clear from a reading of the statutes that the territorial waters along Canada's coasts were considered as "British waters" from the time of Confederation until 1919 when Canada began acquiring status as a sovereign nation in its own right.

The Customs Act of 1867 and the fisheries legislation of 1868 both referred to British waters. Unless B.C. could show it had jurisdiction of its offshore area before joining Confederation, its argument for jurisdiction now was completely unsound.

BRITAIN HAD CONTROL

He said the Anglo-American treaty negotiations of 1871, completed just before B.C. entered Confederation, gave clear proof that Britain had maintained control over B.C. territorial waters.

Although the treaty issues affected B.C., the only Canadian representative at the negotiations was Sir John A. Macdonald, then prime minister.

Following 1919, when Canada was a separate signatory to the Treaty of Versailles ending the First World War, Canada developed quickly into a sovereign state responsible for her own foreign affairs.

New rector honored at supper

A parish supper was held in the Parish Hall of the Church of the Advent, Sherbrooke, in honor of the new rector, Rev. Donald Eustace.

The Rector's Warden, I. Nutbrown, introduced and welcomed Rev. Eustace.

Following a hearty meal upon the Ladies' Auxiliaries, the annual vestry meeting got underway.

The meeting was opened with a prayer by Rev. Eustace. The financial reports of the Church and the Guild were read by the People's Warden, H. Plow.

It was decided that a canvass would be held to raise $1200. Rev. Eustace took the chair for the election of officers as follows: I. Nutbrown, Rector's Warden; H. Plow, People's Warden; auditor, J. MacLeod; envelope secretary, R. Loughheed; vestry clerk, S. Bell; lay delegate, J. Wark.

Mr. Plow made a presentation to Mr. Wark and H. Tilbury for giving of themselves to beautify and maintain the church building.

Rev. Eustace closed the meeting with a prayer.

SCRUBBING THE ARCHER DOWN—City Hall cleaners staged a dawn raid on The Archer in Toronto and gave the sculpture its first cleaning since it was put in place last October. Henry Moore's

The imperishability of spiritual things will be contrasted with the transience of materiality at the services in the Christian Science churches this Sunday, in the reading of the week's Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Substance." Relevant Scripture will include this verse from Psalms: "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever." Pertinent selections from the denominational textbook will include: "As material knowledge diminishes and spiritual understanding increases, real objects will be apprehended mentally instead of materially." ("Science" and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy).

Little knowledge of antiques is no disgrace says dealer

By KARIN MOSER
MONTREAL (CP) — Max Klein's pet peeve is the woman who refuses to admit she doesn't know all there is to know about an antique.
He meets a lot of them in Petit Musee—Little Museum—the antique shop he and his son Dan operate on Sherbrooke Street in Montreal's fashionable uptown shopping area.
"It is no shame to lack a knowledge of antiques," he says. "Nothing gives me greater pleasure than to share my experiences and findings with an interested person."
"That is my highest reward: To see another human being appreciate the beauty, form and art of a people, their habits—their entire way of life so often depicted in a single article."
He doesn't even mind having children in the shop, in fact encourages them to look around.
"It is wonderful to watch their faces and to see how well behaved they are in my shop. I spend a great deal of time with a child I see is truly interested and may even make him a small gift of an antique to arouse his interest even further."
Adults who have the courage to admit their ignorance are in for a treat when they call on Max Klein's knowledge. He's no ordinary antique dealer. He's an authority on biblical archeology and a historian of the arts.
He is formerly on the board of directors of Bezaled National Museum in Jerusalem and the Palestine Oriental Society and has dug in archeological sites in the Middle East. He was also instrumental in organizing the traditional industry of folk art in Jerusalem.
At present he is on the board of New York's huge Metropolitan Museum and Montreal's Museum of Fine Arts.
At Petit Musee he's surrounded by trappings of the past—Turkish rugs, Chinese chess sets, early French—Canadian lamps—but as a child he hated this sort of thing.

★ Today's recipe ★

Spinach is no joke. It is rich in vitamins C and A, a good source of iron and other minerals and is very low in calories. Besides all that, it is a delicious vegetable.
When buying fresh spinach, judge by the quality of the leaves and stems. They should be clean, tender-looking, crisp and a bright dark green. Spinach with yellow discolored, wilted or bruised leaves is undesirable, as is that with any sign of translucent or moist soft spots. Do not, however, be concerned over small heart leaves of yellowish-green color; these have been shadowed by other leaves during growth and are tender and especially nice in tossed green salads.
Although much fresh spinach now comes to market washed in film bags, give it one more quick rinsing to crisp the leaves. Unwashed spinach should be lifted in and out of several changes of water to free it of any sand.
FRESH SPINACH WITH SOUR CREAM
1½ pounds fresh spinach
½ cup diced fresh green pepper
½ cup chopped fresh onion
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
Wash and drain spinach. Set aside. Sauté green pepper and onion in butter or margarine. Add spinach, cover and cook without water until it is wilted. Add salt and pepper. Drain, if necessary and turn cooked spinach into shallow 1-quart casserole. Spread sour cream over spinach. Combine bread crumbs with melted butter. Sprinkle over sour cream. Place under broiler 5 minutes to brown. Six servings.
RAW SPINACH SALAD
½ pound raw spinach
¼ cup chopped fresh green pepper
¼ cup fresh onion rings
1½ tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon salad oil
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
Hard-cooked eggs
Anchovies
Thoroughly wash spinach, drain and wrap in clean towel to absorb excess water. Tear leaves into bite-size pieces and place in salad bowl. Add green pepper, onion rings, lemon juice, salad oil, salt and black pepper. Toss lightly. Garnish with hard-cooked eggs and anchovies. Six servings.
Powder Keeps Feet Cool
If you're among the swimmers following the sockless fad, here's a comforting tip: dust baby powder on your naked feet and inside your shoes. Its high absorbency will keep your feet made-for-walking feet, cool and comfortable no matter how far you roam.

For young singles

Replacing traditional meeting places, corner store, church social, assorted enterprises spring up

By SALLY RYAN
NEW YORK (AP) — If you're married, forget it.
If you're not, there's the Boston Tea Party in an old synagogue in Boston, the Never On Friday club in Los Angeles and the Sheri Plaza in Hollywood—an apartment house that advertises "we rent only to playgirls and playboys."
Bachelors — male and female — in their 20s and early 30s have moved to the big cities, leaving behind the corner drug stores and church socials. To replace these traditional meeting places, girl-meet-boy apartment houses, bars, resorts and other enterprises are springing up for young singles across the United States from Manhattan's upper east side to southern California's beaches.
Capital Securities in Kansas City has built three apartment houses in the fashionable country club play area, hires combs to play by the pool Saturday and Sunday afternoons and has filled one building with stewardesses from Trans World Airlines, which has its headquarters in Kansas City.
"We've never had a vacancy," says the manager. "We have our new building half reserved and the roof isn't even on."
In the last year, there have been a half dozen marriages among tenants.
That is one of the big attractions of the new developments—the chance to meet other singles.
"I didn't date for two years," cooed a blonde nurse at the posh South Bay Club apartment in Torrance, a about 30 minutes from downtown Los Angeles. "Since I moved in, I've been in love once and in 'like' twice."
"Our tenants don't want too much interference," says Sheldon Ring, partner in Ring Bros., a Los Angeles developer that operates five apartment projects catering to singles.
The crowds spill over into the First Avenue from 33rd to 66th street night along Manhattan's First Avenue from 63rd to 66th—a stretch with four chic pubs packed to the bar with young executives and advertising men, models, stewardesses and research assistants, many of them newcomers to New York.
In Chicago, the single set is too deep at Gene Sages' at Madison and LaSalle, in the heart of Chicago's financial district, from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday nights. The lines form about 5 p.m. Friday night at the 99 Club in Boston. In Dallas the Music Box offers a free buffet dinner every Tuesday and Thursday for single women and guests, on the theory that if the girls go, the men won't be far behind.

Collecting

in the Townships

THE PLANS FOR the Coin and Stamp Show are now very nearly completed and the event will take place early in June at the New Sherbrooke Hotel. The show will mark the 10th anniversary of the Sherbrooke Coin Club and so will be a major milestone for this progressive group of collectors. The addition of stamps to the show will mean added attendance and a better effort. The trend in recent years has been to combine shows throughout the U.S. and Canada. Stamp collectors who would like to display stamps, especially the members of the St. Francis Club, are urged to contact one of the officers as soon as possible as space will be limited.

MR. FRED SMITH, president of the St. Francis Club, gave a talk on counterfeit stamps at the last meeting of the club and read some of the data on the recent acquisition of the forged stamps and equipment of a Mexican counterfeit by a major U.S. stamp club. The counterfeiting of stamps has been a problem in past years and in these days of high prices for rare items it is one that should be watched. There are several organizations that offer their services in the expertizing of stamps. The next club meeting will be on Thursday the 16th at St. George's Parish Hall in Lennoxville.

DESIGN OF THE CANADA Centennial commemorative postage stamp was made public today by Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien in a ceremony at the State Department in which Canada's Postmaster General Jean-Pierre Cote also participated. The 5-cent stamp will be first placed on sale May 25 at the United States pavilion of Expo 67, in Montreal. This date has been designated United States National Day at the exposition. First day covers will be canceled in Canada. This marks the first time that a United States first day cover has carried the cancellation from another nation. The stamps will be affixed to the envelopes at Rouses Point, New York, and transported to the U. S. Pavilion for cancellation.

THIS STAMP COMMEMORATES the 100th anniversary of Canada's achievement of federation. It was designed by Ivan Chermayeff. He is President of the American Institute of Graphic Arts and an instructor in advertising design at the School of Visual Arts, New York City. His design is a symbolic depiction of the scenic grandeur of Canada. Against a light blue sky is a range of snow-covered mountains, beneath which is a green plain, bisected by blue water. Upper left of the horizontal stamp, in black sans serif capitals is "Canada 1867-1967." Bottom right in black and the same type-style is "U. S. Postage 5c."

THE STAMP WAS MODELED by Robert J. Jones and engraved by Edward R. Felver (vignette) and Robert G. Culin (lettering) of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. It will require two passes through the Giori press, the first being two shades of green and light blue; the second dark blue and black lettering. Collectors desiring first day cancellations may send addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Rouses Point, New York 12979. A close-fitting enclosure of postal card thickness should be placed in each envelope and the flap either turned in or sealed. The envelope to the Postmaster should be endorsed "First Day Covers 5c Canada Centennial Stamp." Orders must not include requests for uncanceled stamps. Requests must be postmarked no later than May 25.

Complete entertainment

ALL ABOUT ENTERTAINING; 410 pp; By Kay Corin and many Sargent; David MacKay.

A book of information regarding the need to be a perfect hostess and the etiquette necessary in all circumstances and occasions. To be able to plan menus, cooking, table arrangements, serving, guest lists, adequate for various functions.

It discusses the art of remaining relaxed and poised, capable of entertaining business associates, or of transferring one's home to other locations and economic levels. It includes a knowledge of procedures for entertaining in clubs, hotels and restaurants. It tells how to give original and enjoyable teenage and children's parties. And particularly stresses at times the ability of making guests feel so at home that they anticipate future invitations.

These are only a few of the many original and clever suggestions found in this complete book on entertaining.

Lawyer Nizer returns with THE JURY RETURNS

THE JURY RETURNS, by Louis Nizer, 438 pgs., Double-day, $7.95.

With an almost clinical detachment, the author of My Life in Court and five other books including an analysis and commentary on the Warren report of the assassination of the late President Kennedy, presents four new and highly detailed court cases in THE JURY RETURNS. His lucid, objective manner of presentation is particularly effective for two reasons: it allows Mr. Nizer to point out very clearly flaws in any penal system in which men and not machines make and administer laws and it makes more vivid those moments of oddly impassioned human portrayal that highlight the book.

Mr. Nizer and his zealous humanitarianism are the common denominator in the four cases he describes. The first one concerns Paul Crump, a convicted murderer whose execution has been postponed again and again as his lawyer tries one means after another to get Crump's sentence reduced to life imprisonment. When his final effort has been made and there is nothing left, Attorney Donald Moore called in Mr. Nizer. There was something

Mr. Nizer interviewed the condemned man, became convinced that he had been "miraculously rehabilitated" and put his undoubted abilities to saving the man's life. In the 137 pages devoted to Paul Crump — the crime, the trial, the conviction, the appeals and the final attempt to save a life that has become worth saving the reader gets a very complete picture of the intricacies of the law and how it can be manipulated for good or for evil.

This theme, the manipulation of the law, is also evident in Divorce. Canadians talk endlessly about their cruel and senseless divorce laws as though only they had not moved out of the dark ages in this field. Mr. Nizer certainly proves this is not so. Divorce may be the lesser of two evils but the New York divorce laws can create unnecessary immoralities — far removed from the sexual immorality that is grounds for divorce — that leave husband and wife bereft of dignity and integrity in their search for domestic freedom. It is to present the public with these facts that the author writes of a particularly unsavoury divorce case in which he represents the betrayed wife.

The third and fourth stories are about men in business whose honesty and integrity, whose livelihood, social and family existences have been threatened by, in the case of Roy Fruehauf, an accusation of bribery and, in the case of John Henry Faulk, by a vicious black-listing campaign carried on by a virulent, anti-communist pressure group.

Facts are the basis of Mr. Nizer's writings; facts that can be misrepresented; facts that can put a man to death; facts that can ruin lives; facts as they should be used are his moral.

Bluebell Phillips

The heroism of our early mapmakers

MEN AND MERIDIANS by Don W. Thomson, 345 pp., Queen's printer, $8.

Cabot, Cartier and other early explorers and mappers of Canadian shores didn't know where they were. They could determine with limited accuracy their latitude but they had no means of fixing longitude. It wasn't until the 18th century that the British drew the Greenwich mean line and devised a way to determine longitude.

As instruments and techniques improved, explorers had not only to find new land but to take appropriate readings to fix their whereabouts — a task much more onerous for land travellers like Alexander Mackenzie and Samuel Hearne than for seamen like James Cook.

Hearne turned back during his second trek to the Coppermine River on the Arctic Ocean after breaking his quadrant; and Mackenzie was able to take to the Pacific Ocean only rudimentary surveying instruments. His sightings were remarkably accurate, comparing favourably with Cook's taken in the same region with the best equipment Britain could provide for one of its floating laboratories.

At Dean Channel, Cook and Mackenzie had missed meeting by a few weeks. But historical coincidence had earlier brought together three of Canada's foremost pioneer mappers and surveyors at the reduction of Louisburg in 1758.

Samuel Holland and Joseph F. W. DesBarres, already skilled in the arts of surveying, attracted the attention and interest of young James Cook, as they worked at their trade in the vicinity of Louisburg. They gave Cook his first lessons in mapping and surveying, some of them on the H.M.S. Pembroke, captained by the father of John Graves Simcoe.

Cook used his new gained knowledge well, mapping the whole of Newfoundland and parts of the St. Lawrence coast; the reputation thus gained earned him the chance to head the expeditions which made him the foremost discoverer of his time, took him to Vancouver Island and the Dean Channel, and carried him to his death on a Pacific Island.

DesBarres surveyed the Maritime provinces and eastern seaboard, producing a splendid atlas entitled "The Atlantic Neptune", which combined his own work with the best of his contemporaries and predecessors.

Holland's role was to run survey lines one step ahead of the settlers. He began in Prince Edward Island when it was virtually deserted and surveyed the complete island to accommodate the influx of loyalists and later Scottish settlers.

He returned to Quebec and supervised as Surveyor General the drawing of the base lines and concession boundaries in both the Canadas, so that loyalists and disbanded soldiers could settle without fear of being dispossessed. "Men and Meridians" is Volume 1, covering the period prior to 1867, is the first comprehensive non-technical history of mapping and surveying in Canada.

There are many more heroic figures from Samuel Champlain, the father of Canadian surveying, to Sir William Logan, who completed the first geological survey of Canada. Mr. Thomson's theme is the integrity, daring and toughness of the surveying pioneers who braved sub-zero weather in winter and hordes of flies and mosquitoes in summer so that sailors, settlers, miners and road- and rail builders might find their way with certainty and hold their land with security. The text of Volume 1 is complemented with 45 illustrations and 35 fascinating historical maps.

How to make Blueberry Grunt or Stampede White Hatter Stew

THE LAURA SECORD COOK BOOK; McClelland and Stewart; 192 pages; $3.95.

THE LAURA SECORD CANADIAN COOK BOOK is a beautifully prepared, all-Canadian book, featuring recipes gathered from every province and region of the country.

The book is, first of all, a delight to behold. This is very important in a book devoted to food and its preparation. The hard cover is a glossy patchwork of miniature reproductions of the colored plates you will find preceding each new chapter in the book. Much imagination and originality has gone into the preparation of such a volume. The beautiful and eye-catching prints that introduce each new section, show the featured food, temptingly arrayed in the foreground, while in the background are the historical figures and events that characterize a particular section of Canada. For instance, behind a display of potatoes, corn sticks and fish chowder sit the Fathers of Confederation, flag, paper, inkwell and quill to one side. Roast beef, rare and inviting, is against a backdrop of covered wagons, saddle bags, etc. While on illustrations, I would like to call attention to the excellent chart on beef. The animal is drawn out in the customary manner but the unusual feature is that, in X-ray fashion, the amount of bone in each section is clearly marked. This is invaluable information for the inexperienced.

The recipes are authentically Canadian. They range from yeast and tea breads, through fish, game, meat and poultry; pastries, cakes, cookies and candies, right down to soups, snacks and specialties. There are lists of Canadian menus, a glossary of cooking terms and a complete index included in the one hundred and ninety-two pages.

The book has been produced jointly by the Laura Secord Company and The Canadian Home Economics Association through the medium of McClelland and Stewart.

There is a brief explanation and a little history about the origin of each recipe. Blueberry grunt and corn fritters may be fairly common fare but do not name like Gibelotte-Sorelaire and Peasant's Coulbiac stir the imagination and curiosity just a bit? We learn that, during Stampede Week in Calgary, the official dish is White Hatter Stew. In Charlevoix County, Quebec, pork chops are cooked with apples, and naturally, a little brown sugar. Flipper Pie is a delicacy in Newfoundland and an intriguing thing called Buffalo Sukiyaki comes from the Northwest Territories.

If you are interested in good cooking (or perhaps just in good eating!) you will find that this book is a treasure. It is informative, exciting and truly Canadian. It demonstrates that we have indeed a national cuisine springing from the rich and multi-splendored heritage that is ours.

The cook book is a joy to own, a delightful gift at any time of year.

By GLADYS TAYLOR

This week we mourned the death of one of our most distinguished Canadians.

Because General Georges P. Vanier was our Governor General for a number of years and because he made it a point (in spite of increasing ill-health and undoubted weariness) to meet personally as many Canadians as he could during his term of office, there will be literally countless numbers of people in Canada who will have mourned him not just as a figure of history but as a man who, in some way, actually touched their lives.

I had the privilege of being presented to Governor General Vanier and Mrs. Vanier on three occasions. Each occasion was the presentation of the Governor General's Literary Awards and, because we were a small group each time, they were more intimate affairs than many receptions of Rideau Hall.

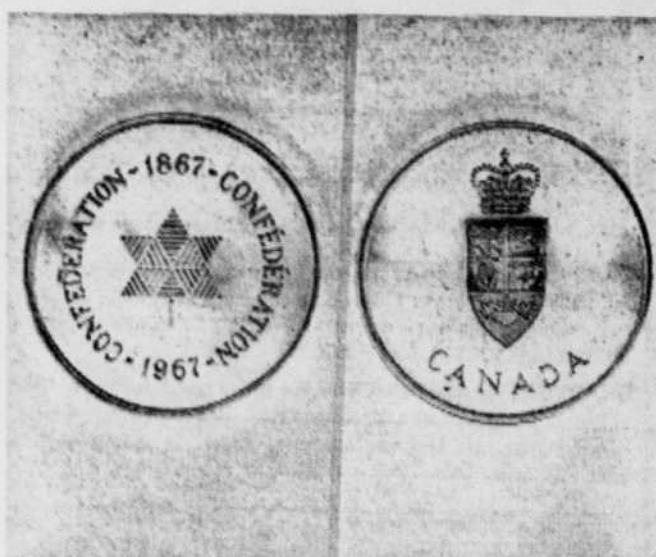

Since standing for long periods of time must have been very painful to him, the Governor General presented the awards while seated. Later he would stand long enough to greet each of the guests before they passed into the Blue Room for light refreshments. Then he would sit down on a little settee on the right side of the room and, in a casual, informal way, the guests would take turns sitting beside him and talking for a moment or two.

I remember best the first conversation I had with him. When he discovered where I was from (we were living in Thetford Mines then) he immediately asked, "Do you know Alfred Penhale?" As soon as I said I did, a bond had been forged between us. I suspect it was this ability to build "instant bridges" to the people he met which made General Vanier such a success as a human being and as a Governor General.

The last time I saw Governor General Vanier was in 1962. In my "Jottings" column after that visit to Ottawa I quoted a few words from the short speech the Governor General had made to that year's Award winners. I think they bear repeating.

"Writers," the Governor General said, "have a gift for words which permits them to escape into posterity." But, he also pointed out "this gift gave the writer a greater responsibility toward his fellow human beings than had those without the gift."

If all of us, no matter what our job or talent, had as great a sense of responsibility toward our fellow human beings as had Governor General Georges P. Vanier, this Canada, this world, would be a much better place in which to live.

Royal Mint Confederation coins

by j. e. charlton, f.r.n.s.

box

I have had many enquiries regarding the deliveries of the 1967 Canadian coins, medals and special sets, and obtained the following information from an official of the Royal Canadian Mint.

Operations are on a two-shift basis and despite the fact that there was a stockpile of the 1967 regular coinage at the first of the year this was soon exhausted and present demand exceeds the supply. It is hoped that once the huge initial orders are filled there will be a better balance between supply and demand. In the meantime, many of the banks are experiencing difficulty in obtaining sufficient quantities of the new coins to supply their customers.

Only a few hundred of the mint issue $4.00 coin sets were released in the first two months but large scale shipments commenced in March. Reason for the delay was that 5½ million centennial medals for school children were being packaged in pillow pouches and the same machine was required to package the coin sets. It is anticipated that orders for these sets will take about two months to fill from date of receipt.

Production of the presentation gold set is a slow operation due to each coin being struck twice and special handling and packaging that is required. Output has been increased from the initial 1,000 sets per week but acknowledgements of orders give a delivery date of eight months hence.

Somewhat better service can be expected on orders for the silver medallion presentation set and the silver centennial medal.

It was pointed out to the writer that only one plant is available for the four projects and that early orders indicate a very big year for the Mint.

It is quite likely that sales of the Numismatic Department this year will exceed the record of 1965 when the total was nearly 12 million dollars.

The export of Israel's coins and medals has grown in three years from a few tens of thousands to over one million dollars in the fiscal year 1965-1966. This million dollar branch of exports is one of the highest of all of Israel's hard currency earners.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By JOSEPH and SUSAN WEARING

BEETHOVEN — Violin Concerto; Yehudi Menuhin, violin; New Philharmonia Orchestra, Otto Klemperer, cond. (ANGEL Stereo 36369) — With two patrician aristocrats like Menuhin and Klemperer, one can savour the full glories of Beethoven at leisure. This is wonderful relaxed Beethoven playing, which nevertheless retains a tension of movement even when, as in the third movement, allegro, the tempo is very easy and effortless. In the second movement, Menuhin has a perfect singing line — so simple and like a discourse on the sweetness of human frailty.

MOZART — String Quartets in D minor, K. 421 and in C major, K. 465; Amadeus Quartet. (DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON Mono 29 190) — These works are beautifully recorded and, with a string quartet, a recording can achieve a feeling of immediacy which, in this case, is complete. The D minor quartet is a great work with a remarkable, tragic allegretto cast in the form of sombre, palpitating variations. The Amadeus Quartet, always thoroughly accomplished and civilized, play with beautifully turned phrases. There were times, however, when I wanted them to wait for the music to bloom and the last movement of the C major quartet was, in fact, rushed.

MOZART — Divertimento for violin, viola, and cello in E flat major, K. 563; Trio Italiano d'Archi. (DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON Stereo 139 150) — This late work is quite beyond the earlier somewhat unsubstantial divertimenti. It is not at all background music for a special gathering, but a serious piece of chamber music — a trio really. The playing is vital, but the Trio Italiano d'Archi tend to plunge headlong into the music and to rush the ends of phrases. The record, however, certainly merits consideration. The Trio are successful in catching the spirit of this great work, which for some strange reason is rather neglected.

Slave of Indians

THE ORDEAL OF JOHN GYLES: As a Slave of the Malisets by Stuart True-man; McClelland and Stewart; $5.95; 155 pp.

In 1689 John Gyles a nine-year-old Puritan boy, was captured by the Malisett Indians when they invaded the territory that is now Maine. He spent six years in the St. John River area of New Brunswick as a slave to these Indians then was traded to a French seigneur's family with whom he spent the next few years.

This semi-fictional book is based on John Gyles' adventures during this period. The factual background is taken from a journal written by Gyles himself and added to by the imaginative writing of the author. How this young boy, separated from the rest of his family, survived the years of slavery under the Indians then later under the French, is incredible.

Having lived with the Indians, French and English he was able to see any situation from all three angles. Through his eyes we gain a rare insight into the vastly different viewpoints of these struggling peoples. If only school text books could make history come alive as this book does and show more than one side of a story!

It is a gripping and fascinating story of adventure and heroism.

Canada mourns Vanier's death early in Centennial year

Governor-General Dies
Gaullists Take Lead
Chou En-lai in Charge

Governor-General Georges Vanier, 78, died at Rideau Hall in Ottawa Sunday morning, plunging Canada into mourning early in its Confederation Centennial year.

Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal, celebrated requiem mass at the state funeral Wednesday in Ottawa's Notre Dame Basilica. Ten bishops, representing each of the provinces, and the governor-general's son Georges, a Trappist monk from Oka, Que., were concelebrants.

At the request of the Vanier family, Cardinal Leger and the other celebrants wore white vestments instead of the usual black of funeral masses — a change approved by the Second Vatican Council. The white expresses joy in the immortality of the soul.

The vice-regal train took Gen. Vanier's body to Quebec City where, on Thursday, Maurice Cardinal Roy celebrated mass in the Basilica of Notre Dame de Quebec, oldest parish church in Canada. The body was then placed in the crypt of the basilica, where lie the remains of four cardinals and four governors of New France, including Frontenac.

The soldier-diplomat, Queen's representative since 1959, was the second governor-general to die in office and he was the second native Canadian to hold the office. Mentioned prominently in speculation about his successor are Roland Michener, 66, former Commons Speaker and now high commissioner to India, and Dr. Wilder Penfield, 76, famed Montreal neurosurgeon.

LEFT UNITES

In an attempt to wrest control of the French National Assembly from President de Gaulle's supporters, the parties of the left agreed Tuesday on a single slate of candidates for Sunday's voting in the parliamentary elections.

The Gaullists were well in front, with about 37 per cent of the popular vote, in the first round of balloting last Sunday for the 486-seat assembly. Eighty-one candidates, 68 of them Gaullists, polled a majority in the first round, leaving 406 seats to be decided in the second round.

MAO WORRIED

Reports from China this week indicated that Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and his supporters were worried about the emotional and material wreckage resulting from his power struggle with President Liu Shao-chi.

It appeared that Premier Chou En-lai was the man with the job of toning down the cultural revolution's excesses and trying to get the national administration, the party and the armed forces functioning smoothly again.

There was no sign that the principals were abandoning the struggle. Wednesday, the party leadership urged the country's 25,000,000 militia soldiers to play a more active role on Mao's side.

National health week observed throughout the country

This week Canada's 23rd National Health Week will be observed throughout the country.

"Why a National Health Week?" Health is not only the business of the doctor and the health department, it is everybody's business.

The whole future of this country's preventive medicine depends on education and this education must be universal.

Education means years added to the life of the average human — empty hospital beds. Progress in the medical and public health fields in the first half of the 20th Century probably surpassed the achievements in those spheres in the other 19 centuries combined.

As a result expectancy of life at birth has greatly increased. In Canada in 1901, the life expectancy of the average male at birth was 48 years and the female 51 years.

Today male babies can expect to live to 65 while girls can hope to reach the age of 69.

Compare this with estimated figures that the prehistoric inhabitants averaged lives of only 18 years and citizens of the Roman Empire, 2,000 years ago could hope for an average life of only 22 years. People in the middle ages had to be content with a 35 year-life span.

Listed among the factors in this 50 year march of progress have been improved knowledge of personal and public sanitation, advances in improved methods of storing and handling foodstuffs, and a greater understanding of health and medical matters by the general public.

Then there are the achievements of medical science including the discovery of insulin for diabetes, toxoid for diphtheria prevention, vaccine for whooping cough prevention and the antibiotics which have made germ life hazardous. Almost all virus research has been done since 1900.

Much has been accomplished in the field of health education since the beginning of this century, however many more lives could be increased if there were means of telling every Canadian what he should do to conserve personal and community health.

National Health Week is probably the oldest and the most published event in Canada and the first widely supported health week in the world.

Its object — to permeate the entire country with educational material from all legitimate sources in order that during one week in the year all may have the opportunity of getting the facts — not only as to the seriousness of disease but as to the means which should be taken to combat it.

National Health Week is sponsored by the Health League of Canada which was founded in 1919 for the purpose of fighting venereal disease.

Classified as "the great destroyer" VD brings blindness, insanity and dreadful nervous diseases along with sudden heart failures to its victims. At that time one Montreal hospital had 26 percent of its patients afflicted with VD and another hospital in Canada's second largest metropolitan center, Toronto, had 12 percent of its patients so afflicted.

Today less than a small percent of hospital patients are afflicted and they are promptly cured. That was one of the league's accomplishments.

Although health departments, public health nurses, doctors, and technically trained persons carry on their daily work in health education, there are vast areas in Canada where the importance of preventive measures is unknown because there is not the machinery to disseminate the information universally, says the Health League of Canada.

The league co-operates with doctors, health officers and dentists as well as all other voluntary health associations.

"All media of communication are used in this attempt to get some information in the minds of Canadians everywhere, even into the consciousness of those who live in the most distant villages and hamlets," says the league.

During the past 20 years, Canada has helped promote international health work through its consistent and enlightened support that it has given to the World Health Organization and through the active part it has taken in shaping policies and programs so that it may most effectively carry out the tasks entrusted to it by the nations of the world.

Rapid pooling of information and experience makes it easier to contend with diseases like influenza and poliomyelitis and to meet the threat to mental health that grows from modern conditions of life and to adapt medical education to changing needs.

While our scientifically advanced country is celebrating its 100 birthday — 100 years of public health services. These progress in nearly every field underdeveloped nations may imagine — there are still benefit further from the practical help given by all countries — old through World Health Organization and to build modernization.

Eye condition indicates health

The Federal Department of National Health and Welfare have several suggestions to keep you in top health conditions:

Periodic medical checkups should include examination of the eyes, ears, nose, throat and teeth. Eye health depends upon good physical health as well as good vision. An abscessed tooth, infected tonsils, diabetes, high blood pressure or kidney disease may cause eye trouble.

When staying in the country, make sure that the milk you use is pasteurized. If only raw milk is obtainable, make it safe by heating it to simmering point. Keep it at that heat for one half minute then cool quickly.

Every child should be taught to swim as soon as he is able to accept the lessons. Many youngsters can learn at an early age and if he is given no reason to fear water, will soon learn to take care of himself if he falls in. He should never be forced to go into the water but should be allowed to make his first dip at his own time when there is someone to supervise him.

There are five groups of food which are recommended by nutritionists as necessary to health. They are milk, fruit, vegetables, cereals and bread, meat and fish. Three meals a day are recommended for the average person.

Water skiing today can prove a menace to swimmers and canoeists if the skier and his two man crew are not careful. The driver of the boat and the person watching the skier, should take care to avoid areas where there are swimmers and operators of small craft.

When using public washrooms, do not place your own toilet articles on the tables or shelves without spreading a clean paper towel so that germs deposited by the previous users may not be picked up in your comb, towel or cosmetics.

An infected wound no matter how small may become serious. Even a scratch should be cleaned and covered. A wound which has gathered dirt can be cleaned by soaking in a mild solution of epsom salts.

Fatigue is not always brought by hard work. It can be and proper treatment before the due to fear, discomfort, faulty diet or worry over business or domestic problems. Lack of sleep is a contributing factor.

Any recurrent pain or discomfort should be discussed with the doctor, so that any ailment may receive prompt trouble becomes serious.

When travelling by car, it may be necessary to stop at wayside eating places. These should be carefully chosen with regard to cleanliness. Chipped or cracked china should not be accepted, or vessels or cutlery that have not been thoroughly washed.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

The Sherbrooke City Council, fully realizing the importance of health for the individual, for the community and for the nation, officially gives its support to National Health Week, March 12th to 18th. In an effort to draw the attention of the Canadian people to the important questions of health, it has recommended that the Mayor declare the week of March 12th - 18th, as National Health Week, in this city.

The necessity of instructing our fellow-citizens in preventative measures against disease to prolong life and improve health is also realized. We wish to draw the attention of citizens to the national campaign during which ministries of health and the Health League of Canada co-operate to bring the merits of preventative medicine before the public

ARMAND NADEAU,
Mayor of Sherbrooke.

This is National Health Week but...

THERE ARE 51 WEEKS STILL TO COME

Once each year national attention is focused on health week. But health is not a matter of a week . . . or a month

If you enjoy good health you will forget, all too soon, what little interest this message has evoked. But there is a group who will not forget . . . tomorrow, or the day after. These are the workers of the Health League of Canada. Mainly voluntary, they comprise a group endorsed by the Governor-General, Ministers of Health, Doctors and Lay Citizens.

They can, and do, represent public opinion on matters affecting your health . . . pasteurization of milk, artificial respiration, fluoridation, immunization, and many other preventive measures. In the industrial field alone, it is estimated that last year Canadians lost 154,881 years of working days through illness which might well have been prevented.

You can support this work in two ways. Look after your own health and that of your employees. And, encourage the work of the Health League of Canada by becoming a member of the league. Government approved, it offers literature on specific problems, and a bi-monthly magazine that is quoted throughout the civilized world. At a very small cost . . . you can do a very great service, to yourself, and to those you love.

By NORM NICHOLL

A QUESTIONABLE and controversial bulletin has come from the office of Clement Vincent, Minister of Colonization and Agriculture pertaining to paying of bounties for certain species of predators. The bulletin reports that this department will pay a bounty of $35 for wolves (timber, brush), coyotes and $10 for lynx. This bounty will be paid to control the predators preying on domestic animals as well as deer, moose and other game animals. To be eligible for the bounty the hunter must present the whole pelt to either a colonization officer or a game warden with information as to where and how the animal was taken. Labelle county residents seem to have pushed for this type of law since last winter. In fact at that time some of the local game clubs offered such bounties on their own and caused some hard feelings between themselves and members of the predator control unit which was working on the wolf situation in that area.

SINCE THE COMMUNIQUE has been issued there have been numerous inquiries at the warden's office for further information. The one question that is on my mind is that while there are many who hunt predators for the sport of doing so and who from their records know how to go about it, with the incentive of cash being offered, how many others will go into the woods just for the sake of carrying a rifle? It is a well known fact that at this time of year especially deer if disturbed in their yards tire easily. With food supply insufficient for recovery before the spring thaw plus the deer carrying their young and with the deer population what it is, the deer herds shouldn't be disturbed. So if we get a lot of nimrods running through with snow sleds etc, what will happen to the deer in the meantime. This year there has been an extensive program being carried out under the guidance of the predator control unit, local wardens and individuals in taking bobcats, lynx etc. I hope that this bounty will not be detrimental to these efforts for the sake of a few bucks (dollars).

THE LAKE MASSAWIPPI Conservation Club held a directors meeting this past week discussing plans for the coming season. While most of the items discussed were mostly in the preliminary stages they will be further discussed at the next meeting slated for mid April. The planning committee at this time will try to project the Club uses of the Conservation Park over the next five years. Chairmen of the Park, Pond, Forestry (Trees) committees were added to the planning committee. The appreciation of the Club was extended to Stan Cooper for his work on the ponds last fall and to Clinton Knapp for keeping the parking area clear of snow this winter. Many members have used the area for parking while tramping about the park according to resident superintendent Cliff Woodward. President Akhurst presented a brief which will be dealt with more fully which stated that the Club should take a strong stand in the field of water pollution and that all members should be alert to any increase in this area and work for the reduction where possible to eliminate present sources.

THE MONTREAL SPORTSMAN'S Show will be taking place starting next Friday, March 17th to Sunday, March 26th, in the Show Mart, Montreal. The theme for this year's event will be "Pure Water for Outdoor Life". Any profits from this venture are passed along to the Quebec Federation and Montreal Anglers and Hunters for use in conservation work. Also the show is expecting to receive its 2,000,000 visitor this year. There will be displays of camping equipment and fishing tackle plus numerous other displays to whet the outdoors appetite.

STANSTEAD COUNTY F&G Club will be holding their annual meeting this coming Tuesday evening at the County Building in Ayer's Cliff commencing at 7:30 P.M.

Beavers after win
Tangle with Eagles tomorrow and out to knot series 2-2
Coach Roy ready for action

Can the Beavers make it five goals. Sherbrooke bombarded Cyr from all angles right from the opening faceoff but despite this big advantage they didn't pierce his armour until near the end of the second frame when they potted two goals. In the third frame they took over once again and managed to come through with three goals to emerge the winners.

The Eagles rode over the Beavers in the first two games posting 4-1 and 5-1 victories but the Beavers came to life Thursday evening and registered their initial win 5-3 in a hard fought battle. Tomorrow's game is an all-important one for both clubs.

The Beavers, who were outplayed in the first two games, struck back in the third duel and turned in their best performance so far in the series. In Thursday's game they looked like the club which rode to the league championship and it was only the outstanding play of Claude Cyr, Eagles' agile netminder, who held them to one goal. He returned to action but after one shift gave up his place to Denis Duchesne on defense. His eye was covered with plaster to try and stop the bleeding. Yesterday morning he had an X-ray taken and no damage was reported regarding the eye. He will be back at his post tomorrow and ready to give battle to the Eagles.

Gordie Haworth, who left the ice suddenly Thursday when the wind was knocked out of him, was reported fine. He had ran into Bill Dupre when he turned suddenly in the middle of the ice on a rush. He left the game holding his side but returned later and yesterday Manager Boldue reported he will be ready for action.

It is expected that both coaches will go with the same lineup as Thursday. Rene Pepin, Beavers' captain, won't dress and will help on the bench in making changes. This system worked out well Thursday and it relieves some pressure off Coach Roy's shoulders.

Rangers and Habs come up with new moves in bid for playoff spots, Habs meet Hawks tonight

With three weeks to go in the schedule and the scramble for playoff positions in high gear, the time has come for strategy in the National Hockey League.

And coaches Emile Francis of New York Rangers and Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens plan moves that should raise eyebrows around the circuit. Francis, trying desperately to shake his team out of a five-game winless streak, plans to bench Rod Gilbert, Reg Fleming and Earl Ingarfield this weekend.

Blake, meanwhile, has a problem with goaltenders and hopes to solve by finishing the season with three netminders on the roster.

The Rangers, losing their grip on second place in the standings, have Francis completely baffled. The team isn't suffering any injuries but it's still losing.

So he has decided to drop Gilbert, a 24-goal man, along with Fleming and Ingarfield.

One of the three won't even dress for tonight's game in Toronto against the Maple Leafs. "I know one thing," said Francis. "We won't stand pat with what we have if the fellows don't start producing."

Francis has until Sunday midnight to bring up minor leaguers and earlier this week he saw a few players with Omaha of the Central Professional League who impressed him.

Blake said Friday the Habs plan moves that should raise eyebrows around the circuit. Francis, trying desperately to shake his team out of a five-game winless streak, plans to bench Rod Gilbert, Reg Fleming and Earl Ingarfield this weekend.

Ontario wins curling crown

HULL, Que. (CP)—Skip Alf Phillips Jr. of Toronto and his Ontario sharpshooters won the 1967 Canadian men's curling championship 11-8 after winning their last stone of the 12-end game.

Ontario came from a 6-0 deficit after three ends to defeat Prince Edward Island 11-8 when Phillips cleared the house with his first shot of the final end. Kent MacDonald of Montague could not have tied the match with his final two stones.

The victory was the ninth straight for Phillips after losing his opening game to Manitoba and was the first time an Ontario rink had won the Macdonald's Brier Tankard since 1939.

It was also the third title in 32 years for Ontario and the first for an eastern rink since H. D. Oxyler took it to Kentville, N.S., in 1951.

Ontario's victory coupled with Manitoba's 7-4 win over Saskatchewan in the final round, gave both western rinks 8-2 records and a tie for second place in the 11-rink, round-robin bonspiel.

A victory by Saskatchewan, skipped by Doug Wankel of Elbow, would have forced a sudden-death playoff.

Nova Scotia defeated the defending world champion Alberta rink, skipped by Ron Northcott of Calgary, 9-8 to drop the West of Canadian rink to a fourth-place finish with a 7-3 record.

British Columbia, skipped by Buzz McGibney of Trail, finished at 5-3 after sitting out the final round. Quebec lost 11-9 to Newfoundland to finish with a 4-6 record, the same as Nova Scotia skipped Ron Franklin of Halifax.

Swedes edge
Canada 2-1

STOCKHOLM (CP - AP) — Sweden whipped Canada 2-1 here Friday in a tuneup exhibition match for the world hockey championship tournament beginning March 18 in Vienna.

It was the second straight win over Canada for the Swedish national team, which took a 4-2 decision Thursday.

The results surprised and pleased Swedish fans. The Swedish team was not generally regarded as a top contender for the world title this year while the Canadian national team, victorious over world champion Russia and Czechoslovakia in a tournament in Winnipeg in January, appears to be stronger than last year.

The industrious Swedes had to go at full speed the whole 60 minutes Friday to come out on top over the Canadians, who played a tenacious game and were obviously eager to avenge Thursday's defeat.

Both Swedish goals were scored by 30-year-old veteran Nils Nilsson, one in the first period and one in the second. Gary Dingen scored for Canada in the second after Sweden had gone ahead 2-0.

Coulter lashes Loyola
in defending the OSLAA

By RICHARD WILSON

Bruce Coulter, head of the athletics department at Bishop's University in Lennoxville, verbally lashed out at Loyola College yesterday for their tactics used in attempts to join the Ontario-Quebec Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Coulter, vice-president of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Association, of which both Bishop's and Loyola are members, also criticised Loyola's attitude to the OSLAA, and their concept of the OQAA.

It was learned by The Record Tuesday that both Loyola College and Ottawa University had sought membership in the Ontario-Quebec association, and thereby dropping out of the OSLAA.

In his attack on Loyola, Coulter stated that further reports carried on the subject later this week were somewhat misleading. Two such reports in Montreal dailies carried the Loyola viewpoint.

Loyola is begging to get into the biggest football group in Eastern Canada, the OQAA, and they are willing to sacrifice all other intercollegiate sports for this achievement, says the Bishop's athletics director.

Coulter disapproved of the attitude taken by Loyola in attempts to join the OQAA, as they regard their present association, the Ottawa-St. Lawrence, as a smaller conference.

Canadian Football League opens
Aug. 9, 20 games

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Football League today announced its schedule for the 20 interlocking contests, begins Tuesday, Aug. 1 with Calgary Stampede's playing British Columbia Lions in a Western Conference game at Calgary.

The Eastern Conference schedule opens Wednesday, Aug. 9, when Edmonton Eskimos of the WFC play Ottawa Rough Riders at Ottawa in an interlocking game.

Saskatchewan Roughriders, defending Grey Cup champions, open their season at Vancouver's Empire Stadium against British Columbia Lions Aug. 7. Saskatchewan faces a rugged test right off in playing three games in nine nights. After their opener, they play a return game against the Lions in Regina Aug. 11 and then travel to Calgary Aug. 15 for a game with the Stampede.

Saskatchewan doesn't meet an Eastern Conference club until Sept. 10 when Ottawa is in Regina for a rematch of last year's Grey Cup rivalry.

championships

HULL, Que. (CP)—The Dominion Curling Association announced Friday that the 1968 Canadian schoolboy curling championship will be held in North Battleford, Sask. No date has been set.

The 1968 championship is scheduled for Port Arthur, Ont.

ence. This is a misconception on Loyola's part, continued Coulter, for the Eastern Division is a far cry from the calibre of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence, and rates a weaker standing.

"Loyola's thoughts on entering the 'Big Four' of the conference in question had reached a saturation point.

The Eastern Division of the Ontario-Quebec includes University of Montreal, Laval, Queen's and McGill for sports other than football, and therefore would be willing to bring in more teams.

And what will Loyola achieve in basketball or hockey?

"Nothing," Coulter maintains, for the OSLAA has a stronger section in both major intercollegiate sports for the winter. He expressed his viewpoint that they are taking a giant step downward if they do budge from the OSLAA, as there is not as much competition in the O-Q.

Here we have a ten-member conference with both basketball and hockey offering the best, and Loyola can't complain that the rest of the universities are too weak for them, as their basketball record is really nothing to boast about, although they have been strong hockey contenders, with Sir George Williams. Then again, points out the Bishop's representative, they even had some trouble as evidenced by Bishop's 5-2 defeat in the season over Loyola.

The inference is that Loyola would like to move into the big-time, and that, for them, is the OQAA, starting with the Eastern Division.

"But," says Coulter, in defense of the OSLAA, "our all-around athletics competition proves we are not, in the least way, small-time."

O'Keefe Mixed opens Mon.

QUEBEC — For Earl Carson, skip of the Quebec entry in next week's 4th annual O'Keefe National Mixed Curling Championship, the big moment will come when the draw brings his borspiel favorite, 1966 champion Ernie Boushy, of Winnipeg Heather.

Boushy is in his fourth consecutive year as the Manitoba representative in the national mixed contest, when the competition gets under way Monday at the Quebec Winter Club here, Carson's Bagotville four some will be making their first appearance in the national mixed.

The Quebec entry finished third with six wins in 1934. In 1935, they slipped to final place in the standings, hitting the comeback trail last year at Fort in Quebec now and it won't be long before we'll be able to stand up against the best anyone can throw," he says.

Even though he admits that the western candidates for the title can be expected to use all their experience and talent next week, he feels that their domination may be coming to an end. "Curling is developing at an unprecedented pace here in Quebec now and it won't be long before we'll be able to stand up against the best anyone can throw," he says.

Classical and pop songs at Bishop's choir concert

A public concert by the Deep Purples and the Elizabethan Singers, the two student choirs of Bishop's University, will be presented in the Centennial Theatre Tuesday evening.

The program, which is to begin at 8:30, features a well-balanced variety of classical and popular songs.

The Deep Purples, under David Cruikshank, have prepared popular music ranging from spirituals to folk songs to Broadway; while the Elizabethan Singers, directed by Joseph Wearing, have prepared madrigals, a motet, and songs by Schumann and Britten.

The same program will be presented at schools in Montreal later in the week, and the Deep Purples will take their part of it to Quebec City schools at the end of the month.

The two directors, Mr. Cruikshank and Dr. Wearing, agree that Tuesday's program should be varied and engaging.

"It's quite a full program, and balanced enough to please everyone," said Mr. Cruikshank.

He is in his first year as director of the Deep Purples, the university glee club. A teacher at Bishop's College School, he also conducts the school choir and glee club there.

He said he began choral singing himself in a cathedral choir in Kingston some years ago. He was a member of the Deep Purples for three years while at Bishop's and then spent three years in the Westminster Abbey Choir School and the Bach Choir of London.

He is pleased with the progress the Deep Purples have made since their first meetings with him last fall. "It's going quite well now."

The majority of the thirty members of his group sing only for pleasure, he said. "Most of my people can't read a note of music, and it was a bit of a problem to put together a reasonably hefty program by the end of the year."

So he is especially pleased that Dr. Wearing's singers will help.

"They're doing a different type of music than we are, more serious. It means that we don't have to prepare as much variety. We can stick to lighter music, which is what my group does best."

"Our part of the program should prove quite pleasing. It combines things like spirituals and show tunes."

It is to include songs like Deep River in the former category, and a medley from the Sound of Music in the latter.

Others (there are about twenty in all) are such numbers as The Water Is Wide, Guantanamera, and The Way You Look Tonight," he said. There is one considerably less recent piece, a song called The Silver Swan.

"It's sixteenth century, I suppose by rights it belongs to the Elizabethan Singers," he laughed, "but we're doing it."

Dr. Wearing said that the Elizabethans, for their part, will indeed be doing a motet and a madrigal from the sixteenth century. But they'll dip into other centuries as well.

He founded the group himself four years ago, when he first came to the Bishop's faculty.

"I'd always had a desire to have a choir," he said. "One of my friends says nine out of every ten men have a secret desire to be conductors. If this is true, I guess I'm one of the nine."

Be that as it may, Dr. Wearing was also inspired by experience in choirs at Western Ontario, Toronto, and Oxford.

"After a while, you want to put your own musical ideas into practice."

Dr. Wearing has a degree in piano performance.

"I'm primarily a pianist, really. But it's nice to have another instrument to play. A choir is another instrument."

He started his Bishop's choir on Elizabethan madrigals.

"We didn't do anything else the first year. But it's since been broadened. We've done music from each of the past five centuries."

The Elizabethans' program for next Tuesday consists of nine unaccompanied songs, quite varied in style.

"It's an ambitious program," said Dr. Wearing. "The only century we haven't got this time is the eighteenth."

His offerings include one that is quite probably a North American premiere, a sixteenth century motet by an anonymous English composer. A friend dug it up for him in the British Museum.

A short but complex piece called Peccantem Me Quotidie, it is likely being performed for the first time since the 1500's.

The program includes three near-contemporary madrigals: Though My Carriage Be But Careless, by Thomas Weelkes (1608); Though Philomela Lost Her Love, by Thomas Morley (1606); and Change Then, For Lo She Changeth, by William Holborne (1597).

"The lyrics are rather odd in these," admitted Dr. Wearing, "but nobody sings madrigals for the lyrics anyway."

The group will also perform three songs by Robert Schumann (Der Schmetterling, Sommerlied, and Gute Nacht), and two by Benjamin Britten, The Shepherd's Carol (lyrics by W. H. Auden) and The Succession of Four Sweet Months (lyrics from Robert Herrick).

The group is about half the size of the Deep Purples. "There are seven sopranos, four altos, two tenors, and three basses," said Dr. Wearing.

Like Mr. Cruikshank with the Deep Purples, Dr. Wearing thinks his singers have progressed admirably.

"I think it's a little bit better each year. I'm on the whole very pleased with it now."

Dr. Wearing is leaving Bishop's this spring. But his group may survive.

"The university has advertised for someone to teach fine arts next year. If he's a musician, I'd be very pleased if he took over my choir."

Muscovites like their winters frigid, feel that warmth causes lassitude and flu

MOSCOW (CP) — The frail, friendly little woman with the twinkling eyes always seems to have a word of welcome for visitors to the apartment block where she works.

But this afternoon she was particularly animated. Somebody had asked her what she thought of the weather.

"Ah," she said, squaring her slender shoulders and straightening up briskly, "very good. Very, very good. Stimulating, invigorating."

It was then something like 10 below zero fahrenheit.

The woman, who is in her 70s at least, went on rapturously: "No sickness in weather like this. But when it's warm, or when the weather changes from day to day—much sickness. People have no life."

She let her shoulders sag and walked a few paces listlessly, seemingly dispirited, to illustrate the treachery of unseasonable winter weather.

The woman's attitude is a fair representation of the Muscovite approach to winter. People here like the season cold—the way winters were meant to be, they say. They distrust on-and-off winters because they bring on lassitude and also cause flu epidemics.

Two years ago saw such a winter, and the disease broke out over a wide area, bringing an unannounced death toll.

Earlier this winter, also, there was a break in the generally cold pattern and flu once again broke out. However, it appeared to peter out when the weather stabilized. To any Muscovite the cause-and-effect relationship was obvious.

"How do you like the weather?" a man was asked as he jounced along the sidewalk one evening in a semi-blizzard, his ear flaps flapping in the tempest.

"Good weather," he replied heartily.

That may be a throwback to the time—not so long gone—when Russia was predominantly agrarian, with most of its people vulnerable to the vicissitudes of climate. Even today, the country is only 53 per cent urbanized.

Russians who work out of doors have a simple way of coping with the cold. The colder it gets, the more layers of clothes they add. This makes for some exceptionally huge men and women, especially since Russians are inclined to obesity anyway.

Mothers follow the same rule in dressing their children, to the point where you wonder how the children can possibly move.

Fined, licence revoked Raps Canadian disinterest in the arts

NEW YORK (CP) — "I think that's shocking," said Jon Vickers.

Vickers was wiping makeup off his face after seven straight exhausting hours rehearsing his title role in Peter Grimes at the Metropolitan Opera.

"It's shocking that less than a tenth of one per cent . . . of the gross national product in Canada is used for cultural development and artistic endeavor."

It had been a long day. He wanted to get the makeup off, get dressed and get out on the street.

"Canadians are so busy running around searching for identity — such an inferiority complex!"

"Oh, look at Bobby Goulet. Look at Jon Vickers."

"It doesn't matter a bit about Bobby Goulet, about me."

It's high time, said the 40-year-old tenor, that Canadians took a look in their own back yard and began cultivating what was growing there — more Goulets, more Vickers.

Vickers becomes a serious, impatient man when he talks about Canada and culture, as he did recently at a seminar at Bishop's University, Lennoxville, where he received an honorary doctorate of laws.

The production of Benjamin Britten's Peter Grimes — the first at the Met in 20 years — in which the five-foot-nine, barrel-chested Canadian sang to the usual critical acclaim, was directed by Sir Tyrone Guthrie and co-starred Tanya Moiseewitch. Both are well known to Canadians for their accomplishments at the Stratford Shakespearean Festival.

More recently at the Met, Vickers sang with Teresa Stratas, the Toronto native who also has established a strong reputation in the opera houses of Europe and the United States, in Tchaikovsky's Queen of Spades.

This is a busy year for Vickers, for whom opera is "the most complete of all the performing arts."

As usual, his schedule calls for about 65 performances, half of them in Europe and half in the United States.

"I don't have any desire to go around the world singing four or five roles. I sing in five languages, 15 or 16 roles, I guess. I never counted them up."

Vickers is this generation's most promising candidate for hollywood — heroic tenor — in Richard Wagner operas but he thinks "it is an enormous mistake for an artist to limit himself to any one composer or style or language."

The Prince Albert, Sask., native, who in 1955 planned to quit opera if he didn't become a star within a year, is much in demand, from London to San Francisco, Vienna to Chicago.

His next stop is Salzburg, Austria, where he will sing in Die Walkure in the new Easter festival. Then follow four performances of Britten's War Requiem with the New York Philharmonic, the lead in Otello with the Met and a Carnegie Hall recital April 30 in conjunction with Canada Week here.

Yes, NOW is the time to have those repair and renovation jobs done around your home and office. Why NOW? Because service is faster, skilled labour is usually more readily available, materials are plentiful and winter discounts are often provided. Remember too that NHA and other home improvement loans will go a long way.

Think of what you can have done NOW: interior and exterior painting, add new rooms, wallpaper old rooms, fix up the attic, finish the basement. How about a garage or carport, powder room, fireplace, steps, floors, roofing, cupboards, plumbing and fixtures? Or have your outboard and lawnmower overhauled, furniture reupholstered, rugs and drapes cleaned. Why wait for spring?

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

SLAM BID IS BIG PROBLEM

What would you do with the North hand after the bidding has gone one spade by East, two hearts by your partner and three spades by West?

You are pretty sure that your partner can make six hearts. In fact you expect that he will make seven if a spade is opened. Your problem is to figure out how you can persuade the opponents to let play the heart slam.

If you have a well-established reputation as a deceptive bidder you might jump right to six hearts. East will say to himself, "Good old North has jumped right to six hearts. If he thought his partner could make that contract, he would never make such an obvious bid."

Therefore North is just bidding to get me up to six spades. I will double and show him he can't fool me."

If you haven't such a reputation this is a good hand to use to establish one. You simply bid four hearts. You might even pass but the trouble with that bid is that your opponents may not be playing forcing jump raises and the bidding might die at three spades.

What do you do with the East hand after North's four heart bid? You may decide to slow play the hand and just bid four spades or you may decide to try for a slam by the Blackwood route. When this hand was played at the Regency Whist Club in New York the East player used Blackwood. When West showed no aces, East signed off at five spades.

Needless to say, North went to six hearts and East doubled, never suspecting that he had fallen into a trap. Of course, he learned about the trap when he saw dummy, but it was too late then.
