Couple mixes music and activism

TOM PEACOCK

Ayer's Cliff folk singer David Francey and his wife environmental activist Beth Girdler

David Francey to play benefit Sunday

By Tom Peacock

Living in the country is not always a sleepy existence. Sometimes, no matter how hard you try to ignore it, the world just comes knocking at your door.

For Ayer's Cliff couple David Francey and Beth Girdler, things have started moving pretty fast over the last year or so. Francey is a folk musician whose truthful songwriting is quickly moving him up through the ranks of aspiring artists.

Now, the man known to his friends as a simple carpenter is going full-time with his music, and finding himself living a life he never thought would be his.

His wife Girdler is a biologist who recently found herself in the centre of a tough battle with developers who want to turn part of the wilderness outside the village of Ayer's Cliff into an industrial park. It's been hard going, and sometimes Girdler has felt it get personal, though she insists for her it's not. Girdler says she would have fought against anyone developing in the area in question.

While his wife was in the trenches battling it out over this development project, Francey says he preferred to lend his support to the cause from a safe distance.

Until now, that is.

This Sunday at the Piggery Theatre, Francey will be onstage, playing "to protect the right to a healthy environment."

Francey, an immigrant from Scotland, has been a carpenter in Ayer's Cliff for 10 years. When it comes to playing his music, local shows are the toughest for him because people know him wearing a different hat. The crowd matters more than ever, he says, because they are his friends.

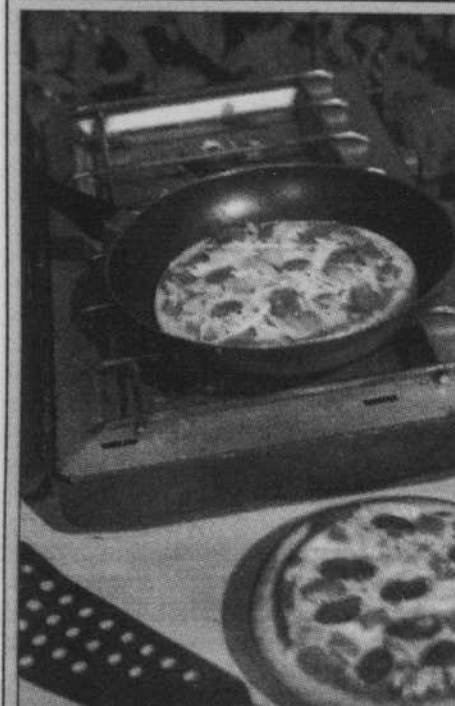

But Francey's music is working man's music that has a broad appeal. His songs are about ordinary life, and people tell him all the time they can relate to them.

"I'm always amazed at the response," Francey says. "I wrote them because I needed to write them, but never thought that I would play them for people."

It's only during the last few years that the soft-spoken Francey has begun to sing his songs in public, but already he is making his mark on the folk music scene. He has one CD already in circulation. Another one, The Far End of Summer, should be out today. People have begun making requests to record Francey's songs, and one was even arranged for a choir.

Cooking around the summertime campfire

By Eric Akis
SOUTHAM NEWS

When my son joined Oak Bay's 5th Gary Oak scout troop, I was thrilled.

He loves camping and their monthly outings would give him the opportunity to get his fill - particularly important since his father is not a happy camper unless the camping involves a full-service cottage by the lake.

According to my son and many others, that's not real camping. The purpose, I'm told, is to get in tune with nature and a two-bedroom log house with a dishwasher apparently does not quite cut it.

However, after watching the character of the scouts in his troop become positively richer after a weekend sleeping in a tent near the Sooke Potholes, on Mount Washington or in the woods of the Cowichan Valley, I'm beginning to understand the difference and, more importantly, witness the valuable lessons he's learning in the great outdoors.

Among them are teamwork, respect for nature and his fellow scouts, and something else that's been a very pleasant surprise: He's learning how to cook and become a junior home economist at the same time.

This was unexpected as I assumed cooking on their camping trips would primarily involve sizzling wieners on a stick or boiling boxed macaroni on a camp stove. But thanks in large part to a determined Troop Scouter Dennis Power, the adult who runs the show, it has been miles away from that.

It turns out that he views cooking as an important part of the life skills that he and the other parent mentors hope to teach the boys.

It's as important as learning to kayak or bicycle down a steep hill, and it involves a lot more than flipping pancakes.

"The week before we go to camp, each patrol (the troop is broken into patrols of six to eight youngsters) sits down to plan their own menu, which we (adults supervising the patrol) approve," says Power. "We don't let them bring any junky, prepared food. It has to be food they cook themselves with some challenge involved."

Power says the scouts have a $3 per meal budget to work with. So not only do they have to consider what they'll cook but how much it will cost. Also affecting the decision will be the type of trip they're taking.

For example, if they're backpacking into a campsite, limiting the weight of the food they bring will be a prime consideration. When the menus are written and approved shortly before the trip, some of the scouts head to the supermarket to make the purchases.

"One of the older scouts will usually take a couple of the newer scouts to the store. It helps them (the younger scouts) learn to budget better, look for better deals and items that offer good value, and look for foods that may offer a cheaper breakfast or lunch so they can put more money into supper," he says.

Canned and packaged foods are not necessary when camping. Traditional, home cooked meals can still be prepared when hitting the woods. Here, a Scout leader and two youths enjoy the finer dining when out in the wilderness.

At the campsite, some past dishes the scouts have prepared include breakfast burritos, real - not canned - spaghetti, and bratwurst cooked in sauerkraut. Sounds good, doesn't it?

But I can hear some parents out there saying: But my kid can't even butter toast, how is he suddenly going learn to make pasta on a camp stove? Power says this is a definite reality and handles it this way:

"Usually when they arrive (at their first scout camp), the average kid does not know anything about cooking or even how to light the stove. So we get them started by cooking easy things - grilled cheese sandwiches, hash browns, that kind of thing - to help build their confidence.

"We also have the older kids oversee what the younger ones are doing and, of course, the (adult) patrol leaders are always around," he says.

As for general camp cooking tips, beyond bringing the right equipment and safely packing your food, Power's primary advice falls closely in line with what he teaches the scouts:

"Just because you're going camping, it doesn't mean you have to downgrade the food to canned or packaged food. You can pretty well cook what you do at home and it makes for a much more enjoyable outing," he says, adding that this approach is very important for some scouts.

"Meals, especially with the younger kids on longer trips, are very important. It's a comfort thing. If we get a week of rain, it makes it easier for them not to miss home."

On that note, I've come up with some camp recipes for all ages to enjoy, which I created using a propane camp stove and one non-stick frying pan with a lid.

During the testing the stove was stationed in my backyard. Does that count as camping? I did fall asleep in my lawn chair. I didn't think so.

Pizza under the stars

Here's how you can do it from the comfort of your campsite. If you only have one skillet you'll have to make the pizzas one at a time. Not hardship, really, because as you devour one pizza the next one will soon be ready.

FRYING PAN PIZZA

For each pizza:

- 2 teaspoons vegetable oil
- 1 souvlaki or Greek-style pita bread
- 2 tablespoon (25 mL) pizza sauce
- 1/4-1/2 cup (50 mL - 125 mL) grated mozzarella cheese
- 1/4-1/2 cup (50 mL - 125 mL) of your favourite toppings (see below)

Heat oil over medium heat in a, preferably non-stick, skillet. Add pita bread and cook until lightly brown on the bottom, about 1 minute. Flip over, and remove pan from heat. Top with sauce, cheese and thinly sliced of finely chopped - they will heat faster if cut this way - toppings such a sliced pepperoni, chopped peppers and olives. Cover pan, place back on heat, and reduce heat to medium-low. Cook until cheese melts and toppings are heated through, about 3-4 minutes.

Lac Brome opens season with 'Anglophone'

Theatre Lac Brome opens its summer season with the premiere of George Rideout's 'An Anglophone is Coming to Dinner' on Friday, June 22.

The performance is the first offering of a four-play repertory season, featuring two comedies, a mystery and a musical.

Anglophone features the Gosselins, a French family that finds itself desperate for an Anglo dinner guest. As Mme Gosselin (Stephanie McNamara) agonizes, they are surely "the last family in Quebec to have an Anglo to dinner!"

Their guest turns out to be London

Mills (Ian Watson), a recent Toronto emigrant and professor of English Lit. As eager to experience their Frenchness as they are to experience his Englishness, Mills keenly accepts M. Gosselin's (Pierre Lenoir) dinner invitation. They then explore the myths and realities of their cultural differences, and politics and prejudice are fair game.

Nicholas Pynes, artistic director at Theatre Lac Brome, first heard of Anglophone through Stephanie McNamara who had done a recent reading of it.

"She suggested I might want to take a look at it," said Pynes.

"Since the Piggery was not going to be producing 'Anglophone' this summer (Rideout's usual venue), I took the opportunity to put it on, and I was able to get Greg Tuck to direct it," explained Pynes.

What makes Anglophone unusual is the twist that Rideout has thrown in — it is being put on by a troupe of Texas actors.

The Lubbock Little Theatre, a group of amateur actors, is in love with Quebec culture and adores Québécois plays. Drawn by the concept of a distinct society — an idea shared by the Texans about their own state — they feel an affinity for the Québécois people.

The group has carefully translated this play from the French, and present it to an unsuspecting audience. The result is a massacre of the French language when Texan meets French. And the Texan-accented English-accent of the French speakers also promises to be hilarious.

After leaving his position as artistic director at the Piggery, director Greg Tuck said he is pleased to be directing this, his sixth of seven Rideout plays.

"It is a pleasure to be a guest and have someone else worry about the house-keeping," Tuck mused, who first met Rideout in 1963 in a Thunder Bay high school.

"I feel like the guest and not the host here, so it is nice. I think this is George's most mature work, it is bold and exuberant. It is a really interesting piece, unlike anything he has written before. One can see how he has reformulated and worked his own experiences into this play."

Rideout is originally from Texas. He has drawn on his past as an Anglo moving to Quebec in Anglophone, as well as his experiences raising a family here.

The actors echoed this sentiment, as Watson described it as a satire, while Sasha Roiz (Junior Gosselin) sees it as a farce and Lenoir calls it a knee slapper. Pynes views it simply as a comedy.

McNamara acknowledged all these elements in the play. Diana Fajrajsl, who plays Francine, the next door neighbour who has been looking for love — for about 25 years believes it to be a "comedy of manners"

"The wacky element is the different types of genres in this play," added Fajrajsl.

"There is a bit of the European theatre of the Absurd, a Pirandello touch, then there are also these satirical and farcical elements. The Texas play within a play is actually one of the most normal elements."

The cast is very excited to be premiering the play. Fajrajsl pointed out that working on a new play is his favourite thing to do.

"It is really exciting, and you get to define the character," he added.

"After all, when you are acting parts that have been done by other actresses who are more experienced and better than you, it is no fun to be compared to anyone."

Added Tuck: "The playwright is making changes as he goes along. It is a very swift but exciting process. I certainly have not had time to miss working at the Piggery. And I do feel it is a real privilege to be directing a new piece."

Wellspring Project dances into opera house

Free preliminary program discusses roots of dance

By Catherine Dean

RECORD CORRESPONDENT

The popular Wellspring Project returns to the Haskell Opera House, Saturday, June 23, where the New York-based company will be accompanied by Fireworks, a new music ensemble led by Brian Coughlin of Wilton, Conn.

Dancers from Wellspring Project plan to present three new pieces entitled 'Soma', 'Caesura' and 'Hidden Snow'.

'Hidden Snow' was created last year when Wellspring was in residence in Vermont. Choreographer Lise Brenner was inspired by the poem of the same name by Galway Kinnel, who is pondering his thoughts at winter's end after his mother's death.

'Caesura', a collaboration between choreographer Ashley Smith and Raoul Rothblatt, debuted last fall in New York. 'Soma' was choreographed by Gloria McLean of Lifedance, in New York.

Creating new pieces has become the raison d'être of The Wellspring Project since forming four years ago.

"One of the reasons The Wellspring Project exists is to create new dances," said dancer Georgia Corner, explaining the genesis of the group.

"Most of us came from working in the Erick Hawkins Company, but due to a combination of things, the company became less active, yet we still wanted to work in new idioms."

Hawkins was a revolutionary figure in modern dance, being the first male dancer in Martha Graham's company, explained Corner. He danced with her for many years, creating several main roles in her most famous pieces.

Eventually, however, Hawkins began to feel that audiences left his performances feeling frustrated because they didn't understand. As a response, he became interested in a more free-flowing technique that would create a more harmonious feeling in the body. He used the sensation in the body as feedback to learn about movement, and jointly, wanted dancers to move more efficiently so that they would get more in touch with an organic sensation.

"In the late 40s and 50s, Hawkins was influenced by his friends in painting," Corner explained.

"He was good friends with Robert Motherwell. He worked with exciting composers. Hawkins' wife was a modern composer. He made a big move towards more abstract movement."

This influence continues to dominate the Wellspring Project, Corner admits.

"For all of us dancing with Wellspring, there is a real beauty and purity to the abstract approach," said Corner.

"Movement is just beautiful to watch for itself, regardless of what other meanings you're putting on top of it. In Hawkins' work, you can share kinesthetic feelings with someone else. Gloria is interested in creating a similar connection. Seeing these movements can help people get in touch with their bodies in a deeper way."

FRANCEY:

Francey has gone from playing in-between spots at folk festivals to playing on the main stage at nine of the largest festivals in the country this summer. In a couple of weeks, Francey, Girdler, their eight-year-old son Colin, and Dave Clarke will all pile into a mini-van for a cross-country tour.

"The musician's life is tough to get used to," Francey says. "Sure there's a community just like in anything, but it's still a little odd."

A steep rock face descends down directly behind the couple's house just on the edge of the town's centre. Above the house, up among the trees, it is cool and shaded. Pointing to a place at the top of the wooded hillside where a gazebo once stood, Girdler jokes, "Half the population of Ayer's Cliff was conceived there."

A local developer has cleared the other side of the hill of trees. Richard Goulet bought the entire 98 acre wedge of farm land (zoned industrial) stretching back from the hillside in 1999, with the intention of building an industrial park.

Work has already started in earnest. The lumber was all trucked away months ago. In the valley below, huge piles of earth scraped from the rocky hill loom above parked diggers, waiting to be transported to other construction sites. Goulet has plans to dynamite sections of the steep hills within the wedge, but it's not certain yet if he will be able to go ahead.

Last February, a small group of citizens — calling themselves the Concerned Citizens of Ayer's Cliff — filed for a permanent injunction against Goulet's development project in the Quebec Superior Court. Four days of hearings were held, but a judgment has yet to be handed down. Girdler says the deadline for a judgment is August.

Everyone is waiting anxiously including Goulet, who has already invested a lot of money clearing the trees from the area.

The small group of concerned citizens hasn't received anything like unanimous support from the citizens of Ayer's Cliff. The town is divided over the issue of the development. Town officials have argued that since 1990, Ayer's Cliff has been going ahead with plans to become an industrial town.

Private donations have helped support the legal efforts of the Concerned Citizens, but they still have quite a lot owing in legal bills.

This Sunday night at the Piggery Theatre, the group will hold their first public fund raiser, the folk concert by Francey and Dave Clarke, with special guests Don Bray, and duo Terry Tufts and Kathryn Briggs. Francey is the only local on the bill; his partner Dave Clarke is from Montreal and the rest of the musicians are from Ontario. For info call 842-2432 or 838-4366.

Now, Francey is finding himself in a position with a little bit of sway. When he stands up to sing on Sunday night, in support of the effort to protect the land in Ayer's Cliff, people will be listening. Whether he likes it or not, Francey is becoming a public figure, and even more importantly, a political one.

The musician's life is tough to get used to. Sure there's a community... but it's still a little odd'

Uplands exhibit reflects Townships' diversity

PERRY BEATON/SPECIAL

Luce Gilbert is one among nine other Townshippers whose works will be featured at 'Bonheur d'été 2001' on display at the Uplands Cultural and Heritage Centre until Sept. 2.

LENNOXVILLE

From Muffy Tippet's loose water-colour and pen sketches to Virginia Cope's light-infused local landscapes, diversity is the word of choice at

'Bonheur d'été 2001', a recent exhibit of 10 local artists at the Uplands Cultural and Heritage Centre.

In all its originality that only the Townships could offer, the exhibit, which will continue through to Sept. 2, is also highlighted by Maya Lightbody's clay sculptures featuring saints and unicorns and Luce Gilbert's jewelry to name a few.

Cope, who has summered in the Eastern Townships for many years, settled here five years ago. Since then, her oil paintings reflect the pastoral beauty of the area that she has quickly come to love.

"It's wonderful here for painting," said Cope. "I love painting flowers and landscapes, and there are plenty of gardens and nice water scenes and different seasons."

Cope added that she prefers to work in oil for its complexity, and that the light found in the Townships plays an important role in her work.

"I like the richness of oil paintings — the luminosity you don't get with other media," said Cope.

"I also like the different lighting conditions. When I go for a drive, I drool over certain lighting conditions. I always think of a painting when I look at something and this area is full of subject matter."

Sometimes it's just an unusual colour combination or lighting that inspires me. It's funny, when I look at something, I look at it in terms of my painting colours. Purple mountains juxtaposed against a yellow sky — things like that turn me on.

"The lighting keeps changing, the colours keep changing, the seasons keep changing. It's always different. You could paint the same subject again and again."

Lightbody, a clay sculptor, also presents her sculptures at the Uplands exhibit. Examples of her works include Saint Francis of Assisi communing with birds, St. Fiacre, patron saint of gardeners, shrouded in leaves with his arms full of vegetables, and various representations of the mythological unicorn.

Stained glass artists' Oscar Bajofer and Francine Mercier, two other Townshippers featured, work out of 'Fros Vitraux', a studio located in their home in La Patrie. Visitors may make an appointment to view their work.

Bajofer's geometric works make use of bright colours while Mercier creates pastoral scenes in greens, yellows and browns.

Rounding out the group of artists is Susan Brainerd Alain, who uses pastels to chart the evolution of a pear over two weeks, and Luce Gilbert Miller, a landscape architect and a jewelry. Miller's delicate jewelry is inspired by the renaissance period, and makes use of sterling silver and semi-precious stones such as amethyst and iolite.

DR. DOLITTLE 2
Original Soundtrack
(J Records)

Following in the footsteps of summer blockbuster soundtracks, producers at J Records have gone the distance this year in ensuring that fans are not disappointed with the newly-released Dr. Dolittle 2 compilation. By combining today's big names in R&B (Snoop Dogg, Lil' Kim), hip-hop (Wyclef, Busta Rhymes), adult contemporary (Luther Vandross) and pop (O-Town, Next), the soundtrack is an awesome array of slamming yet soothing singles and rockin' yet relaxing rhythms. Included in this stunning album is breakout sensation Alicia Keys with 'Rear View Mirror' and another summer hit for LFO in 'Life is Good' (with M.O.P.). Stacked with talent, backed by experience and highlighted by today's superstars, this soundtrack makes good on the hype surrounding the movie's upcoming summer release.

SNOOZE GOINGMO

SNOOZE
Goingmobile
(SSR/Crammed Discs)

Snooze's new album Goingmobile can be both awakener and a yawner at the same time, it all depends on which song you're listening to. At times, Snooze sounds like an acid blend of classical Prokofiev and repetitive electronic pop. Yet, in other moments the tunes are strictly contemporary. None of the songs, however, make great dancing material, including 'Brazilian Hat Trick'. Snooze and teens share common elements — they seem to be discovering their potential and identities, but they still need more room to mature and reach fulfillment.

OLD BLIND DOGS
Fit?

(Green Linnet Records)

If diversity is the key to success, then please, someone through a bone to Old Blind Dogs, a group of five Scots who perform a dozen Celtic songs that makes you wanna say 'what in Dublin's name is this?' I am not an expert, connoisseur or even slightly close to being a fan of this kind of music — and I'm a Maritimer, from Nova Scotia at that. Overall, I have no patience for these slow moving tunes, and it wouldn't even matter if the single 'The Rejected Sailor' was a Grammy winner — it simply doesn't turn my crank. But I am still entitled to a review, so this much I can say: if you enjoy Celtic music, the album may be worth a try. If not, don't put yourself through almost an hour of Scottish tunes. Fit? Not for me. Pass the Snoop Dogg and the Wycleff, please.

OURS
Suffer
(SKG Music)

Ours' latest album Suffer has a definite Tea Party sound, down to the singers' voice that gives listeners an excellent assortment of new and old.

The standout single 'Drowning' is outstanding as lead singer Jimmy Gnecco's hits all the high notes he ever needed to. Although this album is slightly depressing to the unsuspecting listener, the market has shown a definite interest in bands similar to Ours. Not to be understated, Ours future shines bright as several single on this album will likely hit the charts in across Canada and the U.S.

FAITHLESS
Outrospective
(Cheeky Records)

To music fans, Faithless can, at times, leave you breathless. Even for a guy looking for a fault after listening to a very good album, I could find few. Outrospective makes you introspective. It makes you think, it allows you to remember, it permits you to compare. A great listen, we get a little Kerncraft, a little rap, a little soft music, drums, a memory of The Greatest one — Muhammad Ali — and even some Dido, the popular and talented female recording artist who hit the charts with Thank You. Outrospective seems more like a soundtrack, because it has a variety of tunes, and also because of its musical mix. Worthy of a purchase, this CD will take you through a journey that is definitely worthwhile.

COPYRIGHT
The Hidden World
(Vik Recordings)

Departing from the almost constant mellow sounds of their previous album Love Story, Vancouver old-school punkers turned rockers, Copyright, return with a display of musical dexterity in The Hidden World. Roll the Cult, the Cure, Depeche Mode and INXS into one, throw in alternative/modern rock mellow bits, and you've a general notion of Copyright. The band will lyrically submerge you into the seamier side of society singing of rock, desires of the flesh, drugs and other not so naughty things. Their first release, 'Rock Machine' is a reasonable representation of what one can expect on the disc, although it leans more to the mellow side. The smooth, radio friendly, 'Make Up Your Mind' says: "You're going to fall behind if you don't make up your mind." You won't fall too far behind if you don't go out and fetch this album, but you'll miss out on a nifty aural experience.

Sixth Sense star featured in summer blockbuster

Haley Joel Osment plays robot in Spielberg's latest

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

In the fall of 1999, Haley Joel Osment received word that Steven Spielberg wanted to meet him.

At the time, Haley was this 11-year-old kid who had catapulted to stardom with his haunting performance in The Sixth Sense as the terrified youngster who keeps seeing "dead people." That performance, which was soon to win Haley an Oscar nomination, made an impression on Spielberg.

"I was very excited and a little bit nervous," Osment says now. He felt less the rising young actor who had costarred in one of the biggest hits of the past decade and more an eager young fan being given the chance to meet the guy who had directed those cool Indiana Jones movies.

When they did get together for the first time, Spielberg gave no indication that he had Haley in mind for the incredibly taxing role of a robot child in his new movie, A.I.

"I didn't know I was going to be working with him. It was just a casual meeting. We didn't talk about the film. We talked a lot about travel and things that had been happening in the world lately. We talked for a couple of hours about stuff like that. There was no mention of this film."

But the two discovered they liked each other. More importantly, Spielberg sensed that in Haley Joel Osment he had found the young actor capable of taking on the lead role in this ambitious science fiction drama about the turmoil of a robotic boy who has been programmed to love and who then finds love denied him.

When Haley returned from Europe he and his father met Spielberg again, and this time they were presented with a copy of the filmmaker's top-secret screenplay. Only then did Haley discover what Spielberg had in mind for him.

Now, with A.I. (Artificial Intelligence) opening June 29, Haley says he appreciates more than ever before the importance of this project to Spielberg. A.I. is intended by Spielberg as an act of homage to legendary filmmaker Stanley Kubrick who had been obsessed with the story for decades but died before he could bring it to the screen.

Talking to this youngster with the neatly combed hair and the old-fashioned grey pullover sweater, you have to keep reminding yourself that he has only just turned 13. And it's quickly obvious that he fully appreciated the challenge of portraying a robot boy who embarks on an often terrifying journey to discover who he really is and where he really belongs.

SOUTHAM

Haley Joel Osment stars as David, a robot boy programmed to experience feelings, in Steven Spielberg's latest blockbuster 'A.I.', opening in theatres on June 29.

"This film is sort of provocative," Haley explains to journalists.

"It makes you think a little bit more about what is possible in the future."

Spielberg's screenplay envisages the possibility of a prototype robotic creation who has been programmed to experience "feelings" - including the fundamental emotion of love - and gradually begins to ponder his own reality.

Haley admits that tracing the evolution of his character was a challenge.

"He never makes a complete jump to acting completely human, but he does progress, and that progression is very gradual. There are a couple of scenes that we particularly concentrated on because they show what are probably the biggest individual leaps in his character.

"It's good that we shot it in some sort of semi-continuity... sort of inhibiting your emotions at the beginning... then being allowed to open up towards more human emotions and actions. Yet David still had to have this non-human physicality."

Haley shrugs off the suggestion that he essentially must carry the film.

"Every character in every film is important to the story," he says firmly.

But producers Bonnie Curtis and Kathleen Kennedy take a different view.

"The reason we could all take this bizarre journey rested on the shoulders of Haley Joel Osment," Curtis commented shortly after filming was completed.

"His performance made it all possible. His transformation within the film is so complete."

Nevertheless, this youngster considers himself completely ordinary off the set. "Everything's really normal when I go home. There's nothing really different from what the situation would be if I didn't do movies."

He pursues what he considers to be a normal kid's hobbies.

"I like being outdoors. I do lots of sports - golf and basketball would probably top the list. A few video games interest me."

And, oh yes - he likes to collect lizards.

"Mom and dad are great at keeping my feet on the ground, so at home everything is normal. At school, I'm a normal kid."

"It gives you something to go back to after a movie is done."

But the fact remains that A.I. is not a normal acting assignment. In the movie, set vaguely in the future, David is the product of a company called Cybertronics Manufacturing. Sam Robards is the company employee who persuades wife Frances O'Connor that they should adopt David as a test case in the hopes that his arrival will console them for the pending loss of their own terminally ill child.

William Hurt is the scientist responsible for David's creation. Jude Law portrays a Gigolo Joe, a "love mecha" robot programmed to service the needs of lonely women. He becomes David's unexpected friend and travelling companion when the boy is parted from his adopted family and thrust into a terrifying journey of emotional self-discovery.

Osment believes youngsters of a certain age will be enthralled by A.I.

"A lot of kids are allowed to watch stuff that is a lot more graphic than this, and there are films which are much more violent. But my sister isn't old enough to see it, and she's nine years old."

Independent women

TVDATA

Diane Lane (left) and Gena Rowlands portray two women from different backgrounds who develop a bond in Grace & Glorie, a 1998 made-for-TV drama airing Sunday, June 24, on CBS. Grace (Rowlands) is a fiercely independent woman who's recovering from a broken hip. Glorie (Lane) is a hospice volunteer who has given up a hectic life in the city for rural tranquility. Both women have difficulty accepting help — Grace for her injury and Glorie for the loss of her son — but together they learn to accept love and caring.

Shaping modern dance

TVDATA

Blair Underwood narrates Free to Dance, a special edition of Great Performances celebrating the role of black Americans in shaping modern dance. It airs Sunday, June 24, on PBS (check local listings). The three-hour program includes archival footage and re-creations of dances by such pioneering choreographers as Katherine Dunham and Alvin Ailey, and extensive interviews with dancers who worked with them. A new work by the Dayton Contemporary Dance Company closes the show.

EXHIBITS

This summer, the Colby-Curtis Museum in Stanstead will act as a port of entry to Lake Memphremagog with its exhibition: ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF NAVIGATION ON LAKE MEMPHREMOGOG. Altogether, nine historical, heritage societies or museums around the lake, including two in Vermont, during the summer of 2001, will present different aspects of the international body of water under the general title of Lake Memphremagog, Crossroads of History and Legends. The exhibition now open at Colby-Curtis focuses on navigation on the lake, with a special highlight on a very important dugout canoe, found in the lake in 1967 and now part of the Museum's Collection, as well as on the passenger steamships that plied the "great waters" in the second half of the 19th century. The exhibition presents several important artefacts, including the anchor and two navigation wheels from The Lady of the Lake the most important steamer, built in the Clyde Shipyards in Scotland and launched in 1867.

JANNA'S GRAND OPENING EVENT - janna! opens her summer solo-exhibition, titled "Dream Weaver" Thursday June 21, 5-7 p.m. at the Beaulne Museum of Coaticook. Free entrance everyone welcome! www.jannart.qc.ca

Uplands is open everyday except Mondays throughout the summer (as of June 24th) from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Tea is served from 2 to 4 p.m. Call to reserve. Uplands: 9 Speid St., Lennoxville.

EVENTS

On Saturday, June 23rd at 7:30 p.m. at the UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST CHURCH of North Hatley, long time amateur photographer and traveler Kate Reed will be giving a talk and slide show on Bhutan. This small Himalayan kingdom wedged between Tibet, India and Nepal is a country of magnificent scenery, strong imposing architecture and happy, welcoming people dressed in the traditional handwoven ghos and kiras. Devoutly Buddhist, the Bhutanese have managed to hold onto their valued traditions and religious values - it is called the last Shangri-La. There will be a number of Bhutanese students there to answer your questions after the slides are shown. A voluntary admission fee will be used to directly sponsor a young Bhutanese boy afflicted with polio. Refreshments will be served afterwards. Everyone is welcome.

On Sunday, June 24, at 10:30 a.m. at the Unitarian Universalist Church in North Hatley, the Rev. Doug Peary will be our guest speaker. His sermon is entitled "HUMANIST HERO," a study of R.G. Ingersoll. A discussion period follows the service, then everyone is invited to stay for coffee and refreshments. Childcare is provided. All are welcome.

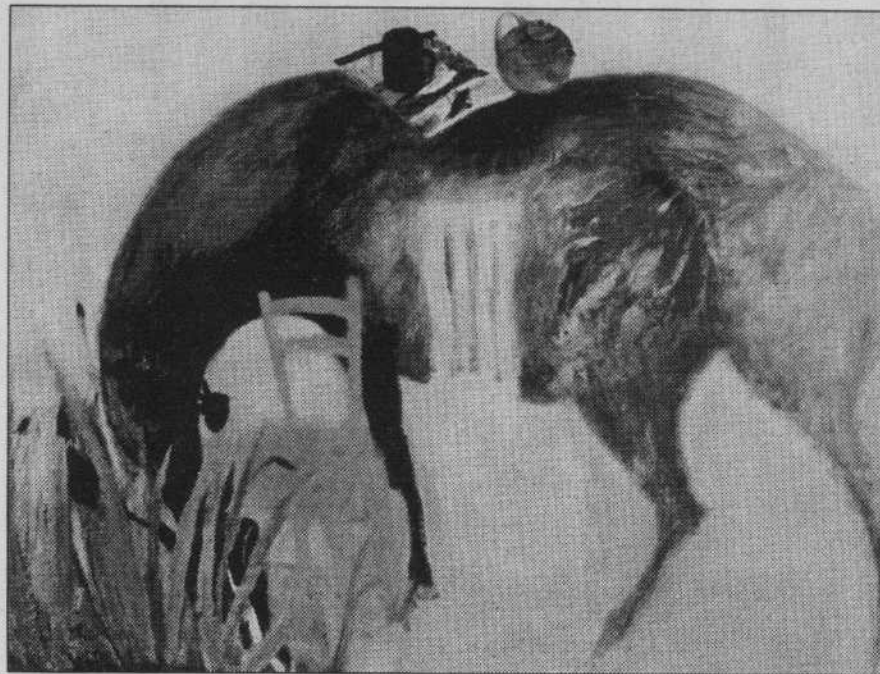

STRAWBERRY SOCIAL at St. Mary's Chapel, 31 Hamel Road, St. Elie d'Orford, on Sunday, June 24, 3 p.m. Rain or shine, in case of rain: Town Hall, 163 St-Roch Road, St-Elie d'Orford. Adults: $5. each, children: $3.50 each.

CAR WASH, at Ayer's Cliff Fire Station, Saturday, June 23, from 9 a.m. - 2:30 p.m. $4. per vehicle. Mr. Freezes, bottled water and baked goods for sale. Come and support the Hatley 4-H Youth Exchange trip to Alberta.
