Meat Varieties

Roast Kidney Lamb
 1 pound beef, veal, pork or lamb kidney
 1 cup milk
 2 slices bread
 1/4 cup bacon drippings or butter
 3 eggs
 1 green pepper minced
 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 3/4 tablespoons grated onion
 3/4 teaspoon powdered sage
 Wash kidney in cold water. Drain well and grind, including the internal fat. Pour milk over bread and soak. Combine all ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pack firmly in a loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 3 1/2 hours.
 Serves 6.
 One of the most difficult tasks that faces the housewife is that of getting variety into the meat dish. Meat, in itself, is delicious, but if served in the same way, with the same vegetables or without condiments, occasionally it smacks of sameness.

There are many who will always bake ham without varying the glaze to add interesting flavor to the meat. There are others who don't realize that a bit of natural home-grown herbs will pep up the good, old-fashioned pot roast.

As simple to sew as it is fun to sun in, Pattern 4799 makes a dashing playsuit. You'll want the trim jacket and button-front skirt, too. Pattern 4799 comes in misses' sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 takes 1 1/2 yds. 35-in material for the brief top of playsuit and shorts. Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this pattern to Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto. Write plainly size, name, address, style number.

Some always serve luncheon meats cold on a slab of bread or with potato salad, and so on. For once let's try things new and interesting:

Liver Leluxe.

6 tablespoons bacon drippings
 1 large onion, thinly sliced
 6 cups shredded cabbage
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 1 pound cubed liver
 1/2 cup water
 1 tablespoon soy sauce
 Brown onion in 4 tablespoons drippings. Add cabbage and seasonings. Cover and cook over low heat for 15 minutes. Remove from pan. Roll liver in seasoned flour and brown in remaining drippings. Add water and simmer 8 minutes. Add soy sauce and cabbage.
 Serves 6.

MOTHERCRAFT HEALTH NOTES

Natural Feeding

Natural feeding, that is, breast feeding, is best for the mother and best for the baby. Breast feeding is a natural proceeding, and any departure from it should be regarded as an abnormality. The failure of so many mothers nowadays to nurse their babies often arises through lack of knowledge and wrong advice.

Why Baby Should Be Breast Fed

1. The breast milk is created for the baby, therefore it is the baby's perfect food and his birthright.
2. It is a food quite free from germs. Cow's milk has to go through many stages before it reaches the baby.
3. Breast milk is more easily digested than any other baby food. Also it may be called the digestive of cow's milk. Baby will digest cow's milk better if given even a small quantity of breast milk previously.
4. A baby has better nutrition if he has been correctly fed.
5. Baby tends to have better teeth as he gets natural exercise for his mouth and jaws.
6. There is a low mortality rate in breast-fed babies, compared with those who are bottle-fed.
7. The mother has better health, and then too there is economy in time and money.
8. We see that the natural food produces a well nourished and developed child, who should be a joy and comfort in the home not a fretful, weak, sickly baby, who is a constant worry to his parents.

Dodo as Food

The flightless dodo bird of Mauritius Island, near Madagascar, became extinct before 1700 A. D., less than a century after its discovery, because three or four of the birds furnished a meal for a whole ship's crew, says Science Digest.

SERIAL STORY Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

Last Week: As questioning proceeds, it is revealed that Mrs. Talbert was Yardley's silent partner. Christine's identity is also made known. Then the inspector hands her a letter written by her cousin. She has been cut out of Cousin Emma's will.

CHAPTER IX

Since Christine had first caught sight of that pitiful body on the concrete bench, she had known horror and remorse. Now she knew terror.

"I see for you a very real danger," a voice echoed in her memory.

"But," she faltered, "Cousin Emma knew that I am not extravagant—she never suggested that she thought so. . . . And she has never mentioned her will to me. . . . I can't imagine that she wrote this letter. But—who did?"

"Miss Thorenson," the inspector asked softly, "could you identify your cousin's writing?"

"I—I don't know. This certainly looks like hers."

"Isn't there anything you can tell me," the inspector went on almost gently, "that might throw some light on this business?"

Christine thought, I ought to tell him everything—about Jasper, for instance—about that telephone girl, and about the awami's wearing that dagger.

But all that—with its inevitable questions—would take time. And if the clairvoyant had had any part in this, why should he have tried to warn her? Now she wanted only to get to her room and satisfy herself that there was, among her belongings, nothing sinister—like this letter—to complicate the incredible position in which she found herself.

"Nothing," she said, "that I can think of."

The inspector's face hardened; and he swung upon the disreputable figure in wading boots who, with Bill had just returned from the next room and had resumed his seat in the corner by the door.

"Thank you," the inspector barked, "suppose you tell me just when and where you have known this young lady."

Some one—Christine thought it was Bill—cried out, "Watch him!" Then all the lights went out, and a chair fell with a crash. . . . After that there was in the room nothing but the sound of scuffling feet and heavy breathing until the door opened—and slammed shut. . . . Later, sounds of shouts and running came from the darkened corridor outside.

When the lights flashed on again, there were left in the room only the inspector, who stood with his hand on the light switch, Mr. Wilmet, covering behind a chair, and Christine. . . . Almost at once Bill Yardley opened the door and came in.

"Well, Inspector," said Bill, "Puss-in-Boots pulled a fast one, didn't he? I think your men have lost him in the dark. I've been wondering just how long it would take you to notice that the switch was right beside his chair."

"And I'm wondering"—the inspector's eyes were far from friendly—"just how much you helped him, Yardley."

The telephone rang. Inspector Parsons picked up the instrument and listened. Then, as if the call had been a signal he was waiting for, he suggested almost pleasantly, "You might as well all go and get some sleep."

Hardly daring to believe that they were free, Christine found herself, with Bill and Mr. Wilmet, going downstairs and into the street. As she and Bill were turning away toward Christine's lodging, Mr. Wilmet coughed apologetically.

"Miss Thorenson," he said, "of course you wouldn't care to go on sketching in that booth now—but suppose I find a quieter place? Could you meet me tomorrow morning—say at that drugstore in the Crestview—and talk things over? . . . Working with you has been such a—pleasure."

"Why?"—Christine hesitated—"frankly I shall have to earn some money somehow, Mr. Wilmet."

"Until 10.30 tomorrow then?" the little man beamed. "Good night."

"Listen, Christine," Bill said as Mr. Wilmet pattered off into the darkness, "I wish you wouldn't. Didn't you see those flashlights going off all around you down on the Boardwalk? After tonight you're a marked woman."

Christine stopped short. "Was that what those men were doing?" she demanded. "It hadn't occurred to me that they were sniping at me."

"Well, it had to be. Tomorrow your pictures will be all over the front page. . . . If you're really hard up, why not let me help instead of a complete outsider? Anyhow, I don't trust your funny little boss."

"Not trust him? . . . That helpless old babe-in-the-wood?"

"Old? He's probably not got much on me. Lots of men are bald at 30. And he may be helpless, but he doesn't handle the truth any too carefully."

"What do you mean?"

"He didn't go to any moving picture tonight—or if he did it was nearer 10 than nine as he said."

"How do you know?"

"I saw him down on the beach after 9.30. You see, after Labor Day, I'm permitted to take my horses to the beach. The hitching posts are right behind that studio. Tonight I went down to see what condition they were in—and there was your little babe-in-the-wood, poking around behind that booth."

"Poking around?"

"He seemed to be examining the foundations of his booth. Just before I came along, he went off up to the Boardwalk. I don't think he even saw me."

They were strolling along the promenade toward Christine's street.

"Bill!" Christine said suddenly. "You don't suppose any one could—hear us, do you?"

"Not unless the inspector managed to wire us for sound while the lights were out," Bill said with a short laugh. "But it's a sure bet they're giving us pretty short rope. We'll stick to the wide open spaces in the middle of the walk, to discourage eavesdroppers, anyhow."

"Bill," Christine hurried on, "I've got to know—why were you beating up Jas—that man down on the beach tonight?"

Bill was silent for a long moment before he replied, "I am going to tell you because—well, you have got to know—for your own safety, Christine, he was following you."

"He was—what?"

"He was skulking in a shadow," Bill said, "when you came out of that clairvoyant's joint; and he slunk along the Boardwalk behind you, evidently waiting for a chance to stop you when there was no one else near."

Christine's spine crawled at the picture his words conjured.

"Of course," Bill went on, "the reason I know is that I was trailing you, too. While I was down on the beach, I saw you standing under a light on the Boardwalk, reading something. I was trying to catch up with you when you went into that Temple of Truth place, and—well, I waited in a parked car just off the Boardwalk. . . . And now I've got something to ask you, Christine. Just now you started to call Puss-in-Boots by name, didn't you?"

"Bill," Christine said, hardly believing it yet herself, "he's Jasper—Cousin Emma's butler. . . . At least he was her butler the last I knew. . . . It's incredible, but suppose he did kill her?"

"I am supposing it," Bill said shortly. "But what's a lot more vital to me is that he wasn't following you for any good."

"But, Bill even if he stabbed Cousin Emma—why should he want to harm me?"

"God knows—unless he's a maniac. . . . And only God knows where he's skulking now. . . . Christine, you recognized him at once, didn't you? I was sure that you had."

Christine's blood chilled. If even Bill had been so sure, Inspector Parsons had not, as she hoped, been just guessing. . . . He knew.

Rabbie Would Ha'e Been More Sensible

"Ye think a fine lot of Shakespeare?" I do, sir. "An' ye think he was mair clever than Robbie Burns?" "Why, there's no comparison between them." "Maybe no; but ye tell us it was Shakespeare who wrote, 'Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.' Now, Robbie would never ha'e written sic nonsense as that." "Nonsense, sir?" "Aye, just nonsense. Robbie would ha'e kent fine that a king or queen either disna gang to bed wi' a croon on their head. He'd ha'e kent they hang it over the back o' a chair."

Has No Chance For Promotion—Poor 'Ike'

As General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of the Allied Invasion Forces, was passing by an Army hospital in his big limousine, with its four stars and attractive girl driver, one of two soldier patients watching the car go by pointed to it.

"Gosh," he said to the other, "I sure would like that guy's job. Just look at that buggy and all the trimmings." The other soldier disagreed. "I wouldn't take that job on a bet," he said.

They argued, and finally the dissembler was asked why he would not take the general's job. "Well, you see, there's no chance for promotion," was the reply.

General Eisenhower told the troops this story on himself when he visited the Canadians shortly before "D-Day."

Hatching Eggs Stand Test Of Long Flight

People in occupied countries will want poultry during reconstruction, and if hatching eggs can be flown to them instead of birds, there will be many economies. To determine whether eggs will hatch after the variations of temperature and barometric pressure incident to flight, the University of Maryland and American Airlines recently flew 35 dozen eggs from Washington to Los Angeles and back, and then put them into incubation, with an equal number that had not been flown, as check. Results—157 chicks from the 180 eggs that flew, and 162 from those used as a check. Conclusion: Hatching eggs can be flown to Europe.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, BOSTON, MASS., JUNE 5, 1944

Headquarters of The Christian Science Publishing Society

While holding military might essential to the victory of allied nations over the anti-Christ claims of injustice and intolerance, The Christian Science Board of Directors told the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, that freedom is essentially a spiritual gift "to be realized only through spiritual understanding and attainment."

Directors cited the universal determination to win the peace as advance evidence of a world-wide realization that "righteous victory under arms will not suffice to guarantee freedom to mankind."

Freedom from want and fear, freedom in worship and speech, the Directors stated, constitute much more than a political slogan or governmental ideology, "for our great Way-shower, Christ Jesus, proclaimed centuries ago that freedom accords with God's will and law; furthermore he gave simple, clear direction for the attainment of full freedom for the individual, and through the individual, to humanity."

CANADIAN TANK ADVANCES ON ST. ANGELO, ITALY

This Canadian manned tank racing along an Italian road was one of the armoured units which took part in the attack on St. Angelo in Italy as Allied armies moved to smash away the German defences guarding Rome. The driver is Tpr. C. W. Stewart of Beaton, Ont.; the co-driver is Tpr. B. P. Johnson of Calgary, Alta.; and the Crew Commander is Cpl. W. Duffield, of Oshawa, Ont. Canadian armoured units played a magnificent part in the advance on this and other German-held Italian towns.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

July 2
ENTERING THE PROMISED LAND

Joshua 1-6, 23, 24
PRINTED TEXT, Joshua 1:1-9; 23:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for Jehovah thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest Joshua 1:9.

Memory Verse: Be ye kind. Ephesians 4:32.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—The chronology of this period of Israel's history has always been exceedingly difficult, but it is now almost unanimously believed that the fall of Jericho took place approximately 1400 B.C. Therefore, the events of this book may be roughly dated as from 1400 to 1375 B.C., with a variation in either way of perhaps ten or twelve years.

Place.—The first events of the book are located on the east side of the Jordan, opposite Jericho. The rest of the events took place on the west side of the Jordan, Joshua himself dying at Shechem.

Joshua's Commission. "Now it came to pass after the death of Moses the servant of Jehovah, that Jehovah spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying, Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel."

When they crossed the Jordan and entered the promised land, it was as though they were going out of an antagonistic world where they did not belong into a land flowing with milk and honey, which was promised to them of God.

God's Gift To Israel. "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, to you have I given it, as I spake unto Moses." Hundreds of times in the Word of God Palestine is designated as the land "that I have given unto you." It is the only land that God ever gave any particular people and that gift has never been withdrawn.

"From the wilderness, and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your border." The boundaries here designated for Israel's land were never reached even in the most glorious period of Israel's history under Solomon.

Promise of Victory

"There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of my life: as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee." Here is a glorious promise of the presence, of God, and because of His presence, of continual victory. God promised victory, but the victory must be preceded by obedience and faith. As it was in a physical realm, so must it be in our spiritual conflict now.

Secret of Strength

"Be strong and of good courage; . . . that thou mayest have good success whithersoever thou goest." The secret of strength and the guarantee of courage will be found in "observing to do according to all the law," turning not from it to the right hand or to the left.

"This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth . . . for Jehovah thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." Meditation, the familiarizing ourselves with the ethics of Scripture, so that when crises or dangers come, perhaps unexpectedly, we shall be able to decide our conduct — that is essential to all successful Christian life.

Joshua's Last Words

"And it came to pass after many days, when Jehovah had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, . . . and ye shall possess their land, as Jehovah your God spake unto you."

Joshua in his last words undertakes a dual task, first to encourage the Israelites to go on with the work which had been so mightily begun under his own leadership, and then to warn them not to depart from the law of God, for if they did, God would surely bring defeat and disaster upon them, as He had told Moses long before.

He was ready to go; he had done his work. He had rightly encouraged the Israelites to obedience to the divine law, and he had set before them a perfect example in his own life.

Photographs Taken Via Sub Periscope

The Navy permitted May 23 disclosure of a hitherto secret camera by which steady and accurate "fish-eye" pictures may be taken through the periscope of a submerged submarine.

The camera, manufactured for the Navy by Eastman Kodak Company, provides a complete picture record of hits and sinking of enemy shipping by submarines. Both still and motion pictures are possible.

There is no focusing, or setting of the diaphragm. Variance in light is compensated by changing the shutter speed.

Results of still-camera shots are immediately available to the submarine commander by means of a portable darkroom outfit and special photographic paper, developed by the company.

Red Cross Storing Parcels In Geneva

An extra 30,000 tons of parcels for British prisoners of war in Germany is to be stored in Geneva under arrangements just concluded by the International Red Cross Committee.

The committee feared that, with the gradual breakdown of communications throughout Europe and the possibility of a general upheaval when the Second Front opens, feeding arrangements for British captives might be seriously affected.

Consequently the Red Cross are accumulating huge stocks of parcels at places where they can be rushed to Germany.

OTTAWA REPORTS

That New Farm Loan Improvement Bill Would Provide Credit Up To $3,000

After its second reading, the new Farm Loan Improvement bill, aimed at providing credit facilities at reasonable interest rates for making permanent improvements, went to the Banking and Commerce Committee at the end of the week.

The proposed legislation would provide for credit up to $3,000, obtainable from chartered banks at not more than 5% simple interest, and repayable up to a maximum of 10 years, in the case of larger loans. It would bridge the gap between loans made under the Farm Loan Board and short term loans for seed, feed, etc., and is designed for the purpose of making improvements such as purchase of agricultural implements or livestock; purchase or installation of agricultural equipment or a farm electric system, or alteration or improvement of a system already installed; and for fencing, drainage or building.

For these loans, it is proposed to require the chartered banks to take the kind of security available to them under the Bank Act, the Minister of Finance explained, except in the case of larger loans for which special provision will be made in the bill. Thus a loan for the purchase of a binder will be secured by a charge on the binder itself, and a loan for the installation of a farm electric system by a charge of both the movable and fixed parts of the system.

The Government would guarantee each bank loss up to 10% of the aggregate amount of loans made by it under the prescribed conditions, such guarantee to be effective for a maximum of $2,500,000 of loans made within a period of three years.

Conditions for the requeening of bee colonies are ideal during the main honey flow, especially toward the latter part of it when the bees are busy in the field and will accept new queens more readily than at any other time, according to C. B. Gooderham, Dominion apiarist. He says that July and early August is also a good time to requeen, because young, vigorous queens introduced then will be in their prime for building up the colony for winter and will still be prolific for the build-up period of the following spring.

Speaking of summer green feed for poultry, H. S. Gutteridge Central Experimental Farm, emphasizes that the important point in connection with pasture in sparing high-priced protein and vitamin feeds is that the chicken, a grazing and foraging animal, will come out in a superior condition, with the saving of feed an important secondary consideration. Ladino clover, he says, is the most satisfactory forage on all scores. Other plants that rate as good all-round forage include Kentucky blue grass, bronze grass and white clover. Nearby experimental stations will advise on crops most suitable for the soils in the districts in which they are located.

R.A.F. Statement

"Mines were laid in enemy waters" is a frequent line in R.A.F. statements. A dangerous operation, but the results are excellent. The other day, for example, a big German freighter loaded with Swedish iron ore struck a mine outside Narvik and sank in a few minutes.

CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

Sometimes we think we have too much work to do — and no doubt most of us have these days — but if there was ever a time when we should be thankful for work — and the ability to work — it is now. Can you imagine anything worse than to have time on your hands — time to listen to the radio; time to sit and think; to let your imagination run riot, conjuring up all the possible and impossible things that may be happening on the beaches of Normandy and the battlefields of Italy? Of course we all like to listen to the news some time during the day — in fact I must confess that when D-Day finally arrived I arranged my work so that I could work and listen too. I had the choice of several jobs that day. I could work in the garden, wash or paint the pantry. I chose to paint the pantry and in that way I was able to listen to the radio most of the day without wasting any time. There were very few bulletins that I missed and I was always ready and eager to relay the latest news to Partner any time he came near the house. Incidentally, the band music which interspersed the news I found to be a splendid accompaniment to painting. Try it sometime — you will be surprised how well your paint brush slips along to the time of marching music.

That same night I went down to the special D-Day service. It was good to see how many people responded to the call for special prayers. I think, too, it filled a need for self-expression for many persons — it was something THEY could do — a definite link between the battle and the home front.

And now time marches on. We have more or less got over the initial excitement of the invasion with most of us making some attempt to carry on as normally as possible — hoping and praying for maximum results with a minimum loss of life.

Well, as I was saying I started to paint the pantry on D-Day — took the rest of the week to finish it. You know how it is — you can't paint the woodwork until the walls are dry; you can't do the "trim" until the woodwork is dry; you can't enamel the shelves until the trim is dry; and you can't get things back on the shelves until the enamel is dry — four hour enamel which took longer than overnight to harden: I tried to create some sort of a colour scheme and yet use what paint I had in the house. So, to do the walls I put a very little shutter paint into a quart of white and that gave me a pretty green tint.

I suppose all you good people are busy in your Victory gardens? Ours is coming along fine — what there is of it. We nearly always have more garden stuff than we can use or give away, so, with future hoeing in mind — we put in less this year than usual. After all, there are only two of us most of the time, and we are neither of us rabbits. Which reminds me — I saw two rabbits in the field quite close to the garden. If they find it . . . well, there will probably be even less hoeing than we bargained for.

Tea From Tablets Made By Russians

If Moscow University investigators' views prevail, tea as the Russes will be brewed from tablets that when dissolved produce a "ruby red beverage like aged wine with a slight flavor."

Red tea was produced by biochemists working on coarse leaf and bush prunings who have discovered a catalyst that transforms the extract from these waste products into a liquid comprising perfect tea.

Pilgrimage to Mecca Goal Of 250 Million Moslems

War prosperity and safer sea routes may result this year in a larger pilgrimage to Mecca, Holy City to a quarter of a billion followers of Mohammed. Mohammed was born at Mecca and there his vision of the unity of God took shape. Mecca, situated in Saudi Arabia, is a city of 80,000 permanent population about 45 miles inland from the Red sea port of Jidda.

Pilgrims from Africa and southern Asia usually come by the Red sea route, arriving at Jidda's harbor in fleets of lateen-rigged sambuks or small Arab dhows, but the manner of pilgrimage is not prescribed by the Koran.

From India's 60 million followers large delegations come by sea. Pilgrims from the Union of South Africa, from Africa's east-central countries where there are 23 million Mohammedan Negroes, and from Madagascar, sailed around the eastern shoulder of Africa.

Asia Minor's pilgrims usually traveled overland, part way by rail-road or bus, and the rest of the way by camel caravan. In some years the caravan from Cairo has included 5,000 people, 30,000 camels.

For the first time since 1939, delegations from the 15 million Moslems in Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco will be able to make the pilgrimage. In 1939 the French government provided a ship for its colonials. It sailed through the Mediterranean sea under British naval escort.

Clover Catches Nitrogen; Restores Worn Crop Land

Clover always has symbolized soil fertility, good luck and good farming. According to Robert R. Lancaster of the Texas A. and M. college extension service, clover's magic is its actual soil value. Nodules of bacteria, borne on clover roots, have the mysterious power of obtaining nitrogen from the air. Continuity of human life is dependent upon clover and other legumes, inoculated with bacteria, restoring nitrogen to depleted soil. Inoculation makes vigorous plants which add more nitrogen to the soil than they use.

Sod with clover is the best known means to restore organic matter and thereby revitalize worn-out crop land. Lancaster says that in certain experiments grass and clover yielded three times as much forage and four times as much protein as grass alone. Also, the clover reduced weed infestation from 33 per cent to only 5.

Every grassland needs a clover and every clover a grass, but clover seems to abhor any combination of poor, wet, or sour land of any kind, Lancaster explains. On practically all other post oak soils within 30 inches rainfall, one or more of the clovers will respond to phosphate and lime.

Iodine Helps to Build Healthier Hog Litters

In some cases, pigs born dead or too weak to nurse might have been saved if the sow had been fed a ration containing iodine.

Other symptoms of iodine deficiency include hairless bodies or poorly developed hoods. Fall and summer litters are affected to a lesser degree than spring pigs born in February, March and April.

These losses may be easily prevented by feeding small amounts of iodine in the form of potassium iodide to the sows during the last two months of pregnancy. Veterinarians frequently prescribe one level teaspoon of potassium iodide for 50 sows once a week. One gram, or approximately one-fifth teaspoonful weekly, is sufficient for 10 sows. Mixing potassium iodide in the water or feed each week saves labor and insures intake of this goiter-preventive agent. In emergency, this amount can be given every other day until three doses have been given. Weekly treatment is then recommended.

Correspondence

To the Editor:—

Some one has said that a community can be judged by the way in which it cares for the burial place of its dead. If that be so, then Shawville can rejoice, for the cemeteries within its borders are places of neatness and beauty.

As visitors to our town go West on Main Street and look up the gentle slope to the North, opposite St. Paul's Church, many exclaim in admiration at this well cared for "God's Acre". It is a credit to our community and our village, and while it costs something to keep it in condition, it is worth every cent we put into it.

Now this beauty of scene did not come by chance; but only by faithful effort. Interested parties have formed a Cemetery Improvement Committee and arranged for suitable care.

A man is at work steadily from May to October, cutting grass with lawn mowers; the fences and around the graves are trimmed with shears. All this with machinery needed costs money—about $300. per year—not a large sum for a big job.

To carry on this work we need about that amount this year. We have no government grants, or special large donations, only the individual offerings of those who have friends buried there, and want the resting place of their departed loved kept beautiful. So we ask for your help. Do it now as our funds are getting low. Send two dollars, three, five or even more to the treasurer, Dr. D. J. Campbell, Shawville, who will acknowledge gratefully your donation by receipt and in The Equity. We need your help.

Yours sincerely,

Electronics Guard Plants Against War Saboteurs

Electronic devices which have been used to catch ordinary criminals or prevent their operations now protect the secrets of America's war plants and machinery layouts against spies and saboteurs.

The most artfully concealed midjet cameras, disguised as lapel emblems or fountain pens, are useless when the spy passes a hidden machine which sprays the camera's film with destructive X-rays, ruinous to all photographic negatives which come within its reach.

Another electronic device as described is capable of reporting the presence of intruders in an area as large as a good-sized farm. An invisible alarm beam continuously scans the desired area.

Another instrument, called a "psychointegroammeter," the newest version of the familiar "lie detector," has been found correct in spotting lies over 90 per cent of the time. Developed by Dr. Reginald D. MacNitt, head of the department of social science at Wilmington college, it makes use of the principle that during certain emotions the electrical resistance of the human skin changes, becoming lower when the subject is lying and increasing during moments of emotional relief. The mind cannot control the reaction. In addition, the detector records minute changes in the heart action.

Careless Handling Reason For Worn Bed Linens

There are many reasons why bed linens wear out, says Dorothy J. Iwig, home furnishing specialist, University of Illinois college of agriculture, and one of the chief reasons is careless or ignorant handling during use. Instead of yanking sheets off the bed when you are in a hurry, take time to loosen the edges all around and prevent strain—even rips and tears.

Check all beds for unprotected springs and spring ends and for broken or splintered parts that may catch and snag the sheets. Angled corners of springs can be covered with gummed paper or adhesive tape, and bare springs with heavy cloth or sheeting. A good mattress pad will protect the sheet from the abrasive action of the rough ticking.

Bed linens, like people, need a rest. They wear longer and give more satisfactory service if you let them rest between working times. Put the fresh-from-the-laundry ones at the bottom of the pile each time so that they are used in rotation and the wear is evenly distributed.

THE WAR - WEEK — Commentary on Current Events

Combined Operation or Task Force Wins Battle of The Beachheads

The ground soldier may say, with some justice, that all the bombs dropped on Germany in the last four years have not shaken the Nazi tyranny as deeply as have the last eight days of hand-to-hand fighting on the soil of France, comments the New York Times. The airman can reply that without the long preliminary "softening up," without the massive air cover of D-Day, without the quick tactical support from the air and the intense strategic bombing which has hampered every German effort to bring up reserves, the beaches could never have been taken, much less held. And even the seaman can add that without the blasting fire of naval artillery the infantry divisions might never have fought their way beyond the coastal wall. But each — if he had himself participated in the giant operation — would probably make his point with a sober humility and an understanding of the other's contribution not always encountered among the theorists.

Pre-Invasion Pounding
The Normandy landing represents the "combined operation" or the "task force" idea in its most massive and most convincing form. While the reports have tended to throw the desperate heroism of the infantry and air-borne divisions into the highest relief, it is impossible to read the story without seeing the role of air power in its true proportions. The task was hard enough as it was; without air power, both on the scene and through the long preparatory months and years, it would clearly have been impossible. German aviation was remarkable by its absence; here at last was the concrete reward won by the men who had died long before in the Lancasters over Berlin or the Fortresses over Schweinfurt or Brunswick or in a hundred other air battles. There has been no one crushing counter-attack; the German reserves have been so slow in arriving that it has been necessary to throw them more or less piecemeal into the action. Here is the result of the prolonged strategic pounding of all communications in western France both before D-Day and since.

Unity Of Services
It would be easy to continue the demonstration. Air power has brilliantly justified itself; but so has naval gun power and so has the ground army — each, however, only in conjunction with the others. Some air officers still believe that the war might have been won by the total concentration of all energies upon the air alone. The argument can never be disproved, since the experiment has not been made; but the whole weight of experience in the present war lies heavily against it. The great successes have all been won, not by independent arms, not on the ground or on the sea or in the air alone, but by the judicious combination of every available element upon whatever specific task presented itself. The greatest, most intricate combination of all has been adopted for the greatest single task of the Western Allies have attempted.

permitted oil, which has many important medicinal properties. The development of this crop is another indication of the almost unlimited field for agricultural development in this country.

Peppermint Grown For Commercial Use

Most people will learn with surprise that peppermint has become an important commercial crop in this area, says the Windsor Star. The plant is usually looked on as a weed that grows wild, and has only a few minor uses as a flavoring material. Actually, it is badly needed for the manufacture of pep-

Modern Etiquette
By Roberta Lee

1. What are the rules that govern introductions?
2. What is the proper time to acknowledge a wedding gift?
3. What dishes are already laid on the dinner table before the guests are seated?
4. When is it all right to smoke at the dinner table?
5. Isn't it correct for a divorced woman to continue wearing her rings?
6. Is it proper to have one's telephone number engraved on visiting cards?

ANSWERS

1. A man is always presented to a woman, a young person is presented to one who is considering older, a less distinguished guest is presented to a more distinguished person.
2. On the day it is received if possible. If the bride will do this from day to day, she will not be swamped with obligations when the wedding day arrives.
3. A cold side dish, or relish (hors d'oeuvre).
4. It would be better to wait for the signal for general smoking. Often, the cigarettes are already on the table, or the hostess will see that they are passed at the proper time.
5. Yes as this is entirely optional. She has a right to wear the rings if she wishes to do so.
6. No; telephone numbers are reserved for business cards.

Canadian Flag Carried Into Battle

The "Canadian Flag" — went into battle last week with Canadian Forces for the first time in this war. Up to now, the Union Jack has been flown.

A few days before D-day, Lt. Gen. H. C. Crerar personally presented Canadian ensigns to the commander of the Canadian assault force with instructions that they be flown at headquarters of divisions and brigades in the battle areas.

The ensign has the Union Jack in the top left corner and the Dominion's coat-of-arms in the lower right-hand corner, all on a red background.

We All Want To Be Our 'Own Boss'

Most of us still believe that private enterprise, initiative and competition will make for greater progress, greater wealth production and greater contentment for the mass of the people who greatly object to being pushed around by an army of bureaucrats, says the Lethbridge Herald. We still hanker to be our "own boss", with the right to do as we like within the law and within reason and custom.

THINGS ARE LOOKING UP

Even the well-known statue "Physical Energy" in London's Hyde Park seems to be looking up as Allied bombers roar over the city on their way to bomb German targets in Europe. Other up-lookers are, left to right, Sgt. Wm. Hewitt, Bridgetown, N. J.; Storekeeper Jessie Watkins, USN, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Muriel Caneps, and her friend, RCAF Flight Sgt. J. Ainsworth, of Montreal.

'Zittermokka' Good For Nazi 'Jitters'

The Germans, with an assist from Allied bombs, have coined another word to join blitzkrieg and ersatz in the international vocabulary. It's "zittermokka" (jitter coffee). Zittermokka is the German word for the extra ration of coffee given to inhabitants of heavily-bombed cities. Literally "zitter" means "tremble" and "mokka" is a common term for strong black coffee.

If Only I Had A Garden

If only I had a garden, Aglow with fragrant flowers, A cosy nook, a friendly book, Wherein to while the hours, I'd sit there in the garden, While petal snowflakes fall, And hollyhocks grow stately, Against an ancient wall.

I'd paint there in my garden, A patchwork quilt of bloom, Resplendent with the loveliness, Held in each seed-locked tomb, I'd rest there in my garden, Beside a wishing well, And wish such joy for everyone, When evening shadows fell.

I'd dream there in the garden, Of things long passed away, And watch the dawn proclaiming, A brighter, lovelier day; I'd pray there in the garden, A prayer that would not cease, That each man had his garden, In a grand world, at peace.

ONSLOW WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The June meeting of the Onslow Corners Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Armitage.

The president, Mrs. J. McCauley, presided, assisted by the treasurer, Mrs. H. Armitage, who read the minutes of the previous meeting. Roll call was answered by, "What can I do to help my shut-in neighbour?"

A donation was suggested to help a neighbour who recently lost home and buildings by fire.

Mrs. Nelson Schwartz reported a number of quilt blocks had been donated by friends.

Dainty refreshments were served after the meeting adjourned by the hostess, assisted by Miss Geraldine Ireland.

A social evening is to be held at the home of Mrs. Carmen Ireland in July.

Colored Smokes Identify

American Ground Troops

Rainbow-colored smokes which puff out from tiny canisters in red, orange, yellow, green, and violet hues now enable American tanks and other ground vehicles in the battle zones to operate with greater freedom in areas of intense air activity without danger from attack by their own planes.

The need for simple yet reliable identification of ground forces was recognized as early as World War I, when military movements were relatively slow and aerial warfare was in its infancy. With the swift-moving tanks of World War II, supported by squadrons of planes, this need became imperative, as evinced by the savage attack on a German tank division in North Africa a few months ago by Nazi dive bombers. The Germans, from their high altitude, thought they were attacking British tanks.

Even before our entrance into the war, U. S. military authorities gave attention to the problem of identifying ground units from the air. One proposed solution was to paint a distinctive design in white or yellow on the top or side of the tank or other vehicle, but tests demonstrated such designs made perfect targets for enemy bombing planes. According to Brig. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, writing in the Infantry Journal, "It was obvious that there would be more danger in using this system of identification than there would be in leaving the tank unpainted and taking a chance that it would be bombed by its own airplanes as well as the enemy's."

WYMAN WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

A pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Hutchison when the members and friends of the Wyman Women's Institute met for the June meeting, with the president, Miss Abbie Pritchard, presiding, assisted by the secretary, Miss Edey.

The meeting opened in the usual manner followed with a few moments of silent prayer for our country and those in the services.

The Roll Call had a good response by telling, "What I like about your garden," followed by the discussion of several matters of business.

Conveners' items included: a poem "A Dollar Bill"; "Quebec Education Bill"; "Iceland severs ties with Denmark," and "How thousands of garments were made by volunteer seamstresses, thus saving thousands of yards of new material."

A brightening up "Soap Contest" brought the programme to a close after which tea was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. MacKechnie.

Serving School Children

Good Breakfast a Problem

"Off to school with breakfast or without," is the topic for discussion in many homes. While the majority of serious thinking parents realize that adequate food is a prerequisite to good work as well as to good health, the younger generation isn't always easily convinced of its importance. Good home organization is one of the first steps in making young people "breakfast conscious" and getting them to eat the food that will keep them working efficiently until time for lunch, says Miss Annette Young, nutritionist, University of Illinois college of agriculture. It is a good plan to establish a smooth-running orderly breakfast routine right at the start of the school year and maintain it week after week. Set the breakfast hour early enough to allow ample time for eating, and be sure the food is ready on schedule. Then, instead of coaxing, make the food so attractive in appearance and aroma that even the most indifferent will be tempted.

While this first meal should supply approximately one-third of the total food for the day, don't attempt a hearty breakfast right at the start, especially if those concerned haven't been eating breakfast, or if their school schedule makes an earlier breakfast necessary. It is far wiser to let them decide on the amount of food and then try to increase it gradually as their breakfast appetite develops.
