Lévesque determined to sue La Presse over Hydro story

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier René Lévesque says he will sue the Montreal daily newspaper La Presse following its refusal to print a front-page retraction of a story accusing Lévesque of having misled the national assembly.

"There will definitely be a lawsuit," Louise Otis, a partner of Lévesque's lawyer, Guy Bertrand, said Wednesday.

"We're in the process of preparing it now and it will be served on the people involved later this week."

Earlier this week, Bertrand delivered a legal notice to the newspaper saying Lévesque would sue if there was no retraction by Wednesday. Bertrand said he wanted it run on the front page under a six-column headline — the same prominence given the original story March 17.

Named in the notice were La Presse publisher Roger Landry, editor-in-chief Michel Roy and reporter Michel Girard, who wrote the story.

However, in Wednesday's edition, Landry replied that the paper stood by its story.

Otis would not say how much Lévesque intends to claim in damages, saying that will be revealed once official notice has been given to the defendants.

The March story — headlined "Lévesque Misled the National Assembly" — dealt with the involvement of the premier and his aides in a lawsuit pitting the government-owned James Bay Energy Corp. against unions affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor.

The corporation was suing the unions for $31 million for damages caused by workers who went on a rampage at the James Bay hydroelectric development construction site during a labor in 1974, but settled out of court — at the expense of Quebec taxpayers — in early 1979 for $200,000.

The implication of the La Presse story was that Lévesque's office imposed the settlement because the unions supported the Parti Québécois during the last election and in the May, 1980, sovereignty-association referendum — and that the premier lied to the national assembly about his involvement.

Walesa under guard as Poles await the Pope

WARSAW (AP) — Police patrolled the rain-soaked streets of Warsaw today and placed guards around Solidarity chief Lech Walesa hours before the start of a pilgrimage by Poland's most famous son, Pope John Paul.

The tight security underscored the difference between the Poland which John Paul visited in 1979 and the country still under the shadow of martial law today.

The visit comes at "an immensely difficult moment in the life of my country," John Paul said at his audience Wednesday in St. Peter's Square on the eve of his eight-day, six-city tour.

Walesa, described by authorities as the "former leader of a former union," vowed to meet the pontiff despite security police guarding his home in Gdansk, the Baltic seaport birthplace of the Solidarity movement that many say was inspired by the last papal visit.

"I consider myself under house arrest," Walesa told The Associated Press. "But I want to tell you one thing. I shall pack my things for Czeszochowa at 1600 hours (4 p.m. local time) Friday whatever the consequences. And that is that."

John Paul's itinerary includes meetings with Polish officials, visits to workers' strongholds and a series of religious events.

"If John Paul takes a stand in his statements that will further stabilization, then he will be making a positive contribution to the lifting of martial law," Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski told reporters Wednesday.

Martial law was suspended in December, 1982, a year after it was imposed, but many of its restrictions remain in force.

Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and his aides have made no secret of their hope that the trip will improve the government's image at home and abroad — and perhaps hasten the lifting of western economic sanctions imposed after martial law was declared.

In remarks on the eve of departure, John Paul said he hopes his trip will "serve the cause of truth and love, freedom and justice."

The Pope received Walesa at the Vatican in January, 1981, and praised the formation of the first independent labor union in the Soviet bloc.

Walesa's superiors at his workplace — the Gdansk shipyard where Solidarity took form — have denied him time off to travel to see the Pope during this visit.

Authorities have banned alcohol sales in stores and restaurants, closed off streets and limited access to papal sites.

Both the government and Poland's powerful Roman Catholic church have asked Poles not to demonstrate and mar the visit.

Pope John Paul was shot by a Turkish gunman in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981.

On a visit to Portugal a year after the assassination attempt, a renegade Spanish priest lunged at the Pope with a bayonet, but the pontiff escaped injury.

The Pope was scheduled to travel from Warsaw to Czeszochowa, to the industrial cities of Poznan, Wroclaw and Katowice — Solidarity strongholds — and Krakow, Poland's ancient royal capital and the Pope's former archbishopric.

Reaction mixed as MP MacKay resigns to give Mulroney his seat

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. (CP) — Local Tories reacted with a mixture of sadness and joy Wednesday to news that the party's new national leader, Brian Mulroney, will make his first bid for a House of Commons seat in the Central Nova riding.

The disappointment was that longtime MP Elmer MacKay had resigned his seat to allow his leader the opportunity.

"We're ready for an election today," riding president Elmer MacDonald said Wednesday. "We're proud to have our national leader as a candidate here."

No date for a byelection has been set but Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said after Mulroney's election as party leader Saturday he would call an election as soon as possible once an opening arose.

Trudeau, in Halifax to welcome Prince Charles and his wife Diana, the princess of Wales, to Canada, told reporters MacKay's resignation "is a great loss to the House of Commons."

However, the prime minister gave no hints as to when a byelection will be called and wondered jokingly why Mulroney had not chosen to run in the vacant British Columbia riding of Mission-Port Moody which was represented by the NDP until their MP resigned this spring.

"Doesn't he like British Columbia?" quipped Trudeau.

Although at least one prominent Liberal has suggested the party not contest the riding where Mulroney runs, Trudeau said "we always run a candidate in a byelection."

Mulroney, who attended St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S., in the neighboring Cape Breton Highlands-Canso riding represented by Deputy Prime Minister Allan Rock, is well known in Central Nova, having appeared several times at functions with MacKay, a former cabinet minister who has long supported the leadership aspirations of the Quebec businessman.

The riding, which encompasses all of Pictou County but also takes in sections of Halifax, Guysborough and Colchester counties, has sent Tories to Ottawa for the last 25 years.

As its MP, Mulroney would represent a largely rural riding with lots of timberland, several pockets of rich farmland and numerous fishing villages on both the Northumberland Strait and the Eastern Shore. The riding's industrial heart in the New Glasgow area has a Michelin radial-tire factory, a Hawker-Siddeley rail-car factory and the Scott Maritimes Ltd. pulp mill.

All six of Central Nova's delegates to the Tory leadership convention last weekend supported Mulroney.

It is not yet clear whether Mulroney will have opponents in the byelection. An NDP spokesman said Wednesday the party has not decided whether to field a candidate. The local Liberal association president was not available for comment but some local Liberals said unofficially they should run a candidate. However, a prominent national Liberal strategist, Senator Keith Davey, said in Ottawa after Mulroney's win Saturday Mulro-ney should not be opposed when he seeks a Commons seat.

MacDonald predicted that neither the Liberals nor the NDP should oppose Mulroney.

"For the good of the country, the leader of the opposition should have a seat in Commons," he said.

Mulroney said he accepted MacKay's offer to resign over similar offers from at least three other MPs because his was the first.

Henry Morgentaler faced a garden shears waving fanatic yesterday.

Morgentaler dogged by picketers

TORONTO (CP) — A man who lunged toward Henry Morgentaler with a pair of garden shears marred the otherwise quiet opening Wednesday of the controversial doctor's third abortion clinic.

The protesters and pickets who have dogged Morgentaler since the opening of his first clinic in Montreal 10 years ago and in Winnipeg earlier this month were absent, satisfied with a pledge from the Ontario government that charges will be laid if abortions are performed.

The clinic, on the second and third storeys of an old red brick building near the Ontario legislature, opened at 8:30 a.m. and began taking appointments for abortions.

When Morgentaler himself arrived early in the afternoon, an irate neighbor rushed forward with a pair of garden shears in front of television cameras and bystanders.

Morgentaler was protected by three women escorting him across the street and no one was injured.

One of the women, Judy Rebick, said the man was "yelling and yelling, but I couldn't make out what it was, except he kept saying, 'Bad people, bad people.'"

Augusto Da Silva Dantas, 55, who lives around the corner from the clinic, was charged with possessing a weapon dangerous to the public peace and assault.

By late afternoon a crowd of about 300 people paraded in front of the clinic carrying placards in support of Morgentaler's attempt to make abortions available to any women who want one.

After the opening, Ontario Solicitor General George Taylor said police would be keeping close tabs on activities at the clinic in an effort to collect the evidence needed to lay a criminal charge more specific than conspiracy to perform an abortion.

Control or nothing — Que.

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government will refuse to co-operate with Ottawa to develop a national park in the Mingan archipelago unless it gets complete control over development, Recreation Minister Guy Chevrette said Wednesday.

Chevrette said Quebec also wants a promise that the islands will be ceded back to the province.

Federal Environment Minister John Roberts announced Tuesday that the 40 tiny islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence had been purchased by the federal government for $5 million.

In making the deal with Dome Petroleum of Calgary, the federal government pre-empted Quebec, which had offered to buy the islands for $2.5 million.

The islands, unique for their wind and sand-sculptured rock formations, cover an area of about 8,000 hectares in the gulf just east of Sept-Isles and north of Anticosti Island.

Roberts said provincial assistance would be needed to develop infrastructures for the park, but the federal government is prepared to wait, if necessary, until a more sympathetic government is in place in Quebec.

Chevrette said the province is ready to proceed immediately to develop the area because studies and consultations with residents of the area have been going on since 1978.

But he said "we have no intention of being specialized marionettes in charge of sewers and roads."

Quebec rejects Agent Orange Gaspé spraying

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Department of Energy and Resources has abandoned plans for aerial spraying of forests in the Lower St. Lawrence and Gaspé regions with 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D — chemicals that make up Agent Orange.

Energy Minister Yves Duhaime told the national assembly Wednesday his department made the decision because of the "vast debate and confusion" the spraying program has aroused.

Duhaime's department had planned to spray 22,000 hectares of forest with the herbicides during the next two years to destroy underbrush that slows the growth of commercial pulpwood.

Agent Orange is the notorious defolliant used in massive doses by United States armed forces during the Vietnam War to destroy enemy cover. Exposure to Agent Orange — which contains the deadly chemical dioxin — has been blamed for rare cancers and birth defects suffered by thousands of Vietnam veterans and their offspring.

During several weeks of public hearings last month, dozens of groups of residents from the targeted Quebec areas pleaded with the government not to go ahead with the spraying.

Duhaime said Wednesday his department is now "developing another scenario that might be a solution."

Duhaime said a new plan may include application of the chemicals on the ground, rather than from the air, combined with mechanical destruction of underbrush.

"If we use an application on the ground and mechanical control of the vegetation, we will soon be able to announce a new program of job creation," Duhaime said.

The groups that had presented briefs during the public hearings had unanimously asked the government to use mechanical means to clear the underbrush to provide jobs in a region with unemployment close to 30 per cent.

The Energy Department withdrew its plan even before the official report from the public hearings was complete.

The department has been using the chemicals for four years, but this was the first year the public was allowed to contest the spraying under changes to the Environment Act.

"It's marvellous and we will celebrate, but the battle is not yet finished," said Madeleine Magnan who works at a community clinic in Rivière-du-Loup, one of the affected regions.

"It could be even more dangerous if they do ground application because there can be accidents and the chemicals are even more concentrated on the ground," she said. "They could end up in our wells."

Andropov wins spot as president

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist party leader Yuri Andropov, 69, was elected president of the Soviet Union today, consolidating his power by filling a post that had been vacant for seven months.

His unanimous election at the opening session of the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament, means Andropov, who is the party general secretary, has taken firm control of the Soviet Union which has a population of 280 million people.

Andropov was nominated for the position by Konstantin Chernenko, who in the last several months had been thought to be his chief rival for power.

"Allow me to express my wholehearted appreciation and gratitude for the high trust and honor given me in electing me chairman of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR," Andropov, a former head of the Soviet KGB intelligence agency, said in a brief acceptance speech.

"Your trust and consideration are a trust placed in the Communist party and a member of this party for over 40 years. I would like to assure you that I will use my experience to respond to your trust and confidence."

Andropov, who turned 69 Wednesday, became general secretary Nov. 12, 1982, two days after former leader Leonid Brezhnev died after 18 years at the helm of the Kremlin.

Trudeau and Prince agree — Maritimes is Canada's friendliest region

HALIFAX (CP) — Prince Charles and Prime Minister Trudeau traded good natured quips Wednesday night as they dined on poached sole and fruit soup at the end of a rainy second day of the Canadian tour by the prince and Diana, princess of Wales.

Afterwards, Charles and Diana slept on the royal yacht Britannia as it steamed overnight from Halifax to the United Empire Loyalist settled town of Shelburne on Nova Scotia's South Shore.

Trudeau was host of the highbrow state dinner at the Hotel Nova Scotian for the royal couple and more than 700 guests, including provincial and federal politicians and other prominent Atlantic Canadians.

In introducing the royal couple Trudeau said Prince Charles, because of his many official and military visits to small communities, wilderness areas and the Arctic, "probably knows Canada better than most Canadians."

He said he heard that after Charles arrived the first words he said were,

"It's good to be back, eh."

Ending sentences with that slang expression has long been regarded as a Canadian speaking trait and recently has become internationally known as one of the themes of a television comedy act, the MacKenzie Brothers.

Trudeau drew enthusiastic applause when he told Charles and Diana it was good that they came to "the most friendly part of Canada first, and I mean that with all my heart."

He said the couple's forthcoming visits to Edmonton and Ottawa "will be the working part of your trip."

Prince Charles agreed that Atlantic Canada is "one of the friendliest, if not the friendliest" part of Canada.

Recalling that Trudeau gave him a canoe as a wedding present, he said he entertained vague ideas about paddling across the Atlantic.

It was raining when the royal couple arrived at the hotel, as it had been all day, but that did not discourage hundreds of onlookers from lining up to watch their arrival. Trudeau gave the crowd an impromptu warmup when they spotted him standing behind the front door waiting to greet the royal couple. Greeted by cheers and a few boos, Trudeau shook hands briefly and then returned to his position barely a minute before the royal motorcade rolled in.

In the hotel lobby, people gasped when Diana took off her black velvet cape. She was wearing a heavy silk, cream-colored gown with full, bulky sleeves and plentiful lace trim. On her head was a pearl and diamond tiara.

Earlier Wednesday, the rainy weather fogged in the royal helicopter, forcing organizers to cancel a tour of North America's first tidal power project at Annapolis Royal. During his dinner speech, Prince Charles told the guests how disappointed he was to miss the visit.

The rain did not stop the royal couple from planting two trees in honor of their infant son, Prince William, during a ceremony on the Halifax Commons, a large, grassy recreation field near the Halifax Citadel.

Soviets to crack down on literature and culture

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet leadership has served notice of a major crackdown on literature and culture.

Communist party Secretary Konstantin Chernenko, in a speech Tuesday to the party's ruling Central Committee, indicated there would be tighter controls on books, films, plays and music and that cultural exchanges with the West would be reduced.

Chernenko's speech on ideology and propaganda said little new on other issues, but on the cultural front he indicated that the party line has changed since the last party congress in February, 1981.

At the congress, the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev praised what he called a "new tide" in Soviet art and encouraged writers to tackle controversial problems.

But in Tuesday's speech, Chernenko attacked film-makers and authors who created unhappy, "loose and whining" characters.

Instead Soviet man should be given an ideal to live up to "embodying noble goals in life, ideological convictions, industry and fortitude," he said.

Chernenko said literary magazines and publishing houses must "stamp out more resolutely" works that are ideologically short of requirements. "This goes for the repertoire of the theatre and cinema as well," he said.

Russians celebrate female flight as Ride prepares

MOSCOW (AP) — While U.S. attention focuses on Sally Ride's flight aboard the space shuttle Challenger this weekend, Valentina Tereshkova will be wrapping up some political chores and heading for a celebration of her space flight — launched 20 years ago today.

Tereshkova, now 46, became the first woman in space on June 16, 1963. For 70 hours and 40 minutes, she piloted her Vostok-6 through 48 orbits of Earth and came down to a heroine's welcome.

At the time of her flight, she was 26 years old, six years younger than Ride, who is scheduled Saturday to become the first U.S. woman in space.

Five months after Tereshkova's historic flight, she married Soviet cosmonaut Andrei Nikolaev in a ceremony attended by a host of Soviet dignitaries led by Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Today, their daughter Alyona is a 19-year-old medical student.

Tereshkova is one of the 300-plus members of the policy-setting Communist party Central Committee and a deputy of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament. Both are meeting this week.

The government announced this week that a one-rouble coin is being minted to commemorate the 20th anniversary of Tereshkova's flight. Otherwise, no major observances have been announced.

Quebec-N.B. dispute continues with threats

FREDERICTON (CP) — A conflict over the hiring of Quebecers in northern New Brunswick has reached a dangerous stage again and civil disobedience and acts of violence will not be tolerated, Justice Minister Fernand Dube said today.

Dube was answering questions in the legislature about the closure on Friday of the Oscar Belanger sawmill in St. Arthur, N.B. Officials said the mill was shut down because of threats and demands that four Quebecers, employed in key positions, be removed.

Mill operators said they believed the threats came from unemployed workers who lived outside St. Arthur and were not directly involved in the mill. About 80 employees have been laid off until tensions ease, they said.

Weather

Sunny this morning with a risk of thundershowers late in the day. High 32, low tonight 16. Friday, sunny in morning then cloudy with scattered showers or thundershowers late in the afternoon. High 28.

Earlier this year, unemployed woodworkers held sometimes violent demonstrations to protest against jobs going to Quebecers at the same time that New Brunswickers were prevented from working in Quebec.

Natural Resources Minister Gerald Merrithew told the house the government was aware of the potential for renewed violence and had been holding discussions with the RCMP and officials of large forestry companies. He said people who threatened violence were causing hardship for those with jobs.

Dube said the safety of those with jobs would be protected but he criticized the complacency of the public in Restigouche County, where the protests have occurred.

"This is a dangerous situation. . . I am concerned that responsible people are not taking a stand," said Dube, who represents the city of Campbellton, the entry point for the Quebec workers.

Premier Richard Hatfield said in an interview that officials of the New Brunswick and Quebec governments are continuing negotiations for a reciprocal agreement on the licensing of trucks that would make it easier for some New Brunswickers to work in Quebec. New Brunswick has no restrictions on the flow of workers into the province.

Grocery stores are endangered

MONTREAL (CP) — Granting provincial beer and wine licenses to Quebec's 300 corporate supermarkets would sound the death knell for 2,000 corner grocery stores and 8,800 jobs, says a study commissioned by a group of independent grocers.

The study, released at a news conference Wednesday, "proves and confirms our fears" that independent grocers will suffer if food chains are allowed into the lucrative beer and wine market, said Maurice Legault, president of the Association des détaillants en alimentation du Québec.

Under Quebec law, grocery stores are allowed to sell beer and Quebec-made apple cider. Wine that has been bottled or produced in Quebec is available in both licensed grocery stores and provincial liquor stores.

Top Canadian poet seriously ill

FREDERICTON (CP) — Alden Nowlen, one of Canada's leading poets and a frequent contributor to several Atlantic-region magazines and newspapers, is described in serious condition at the Dr. Everett Chalmers Hospital.

A hospital official said Wednesday the 50-year-old author and journalist suffered a seizure at his Fredericton home on Saturday and is "seriously ill."

The official said he is suffering from severe respiratory illness.

André Ouellet has no guts — PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs — saying Andre Ouellet, consumer and corporate affairs minister, has "no guts" — challenged him to charge them with selling gasoline by the gallon at their service station in nearby Carleton Place.

Bill Domm, the ringleader of the 37 MPs leasing the anti-metric station, reminded the minister in the Commons he had threatened last December to charge the Tories if they sold gasoline in the forbidden measure.

Ouellet has charged two Toronto businessmen for doing just that, but he has refrained from laying a glove on the Tory enterprise. The government is not expected to move against the MPs unless the Toronto prosecutions are successful in the courts.

Quebec, Ont. get more contracts

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Jacques Blais, supply and services minister, admitted Wednesday his department awards a disproportionate number of contracts to Ontario and Quebec companies.

The minister did not dispute figures given by Conservative MP Ray Hnatyshyn that 77 per cent of the contracts are awarded in Ontario and Quebec, while 15 per cent go to Western Canada and seven per cent to the Atlantic provinces.

Blais told the Commons the problem is "there is not the sort of concentration of manufacturing (in the West) as there is in Central Canada."

Hnatyshyn, member for Saskatoon West, accused Blais of "blatant discrimination."

Critics of Chile make demands

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should recall its ambassador to Chile and impose a trade embargo until the country's human rights record improves, critics of that government and exiled Chileans living in Canada demanded Wednesday.

"Canada has not responded to the changing situation in Chile: it is considered business as usual," Jaon Duerr of the Committee for Solidarity for Democratic Chile told reporters after meeting with officials of the External Affairs Department.

Duerr said they told her no Latin American country is considered so "morally repugnant" to provoke Canada to cut off trade, though External Affairs is studying the situation.

MP charged with tax evasion

TORONTO (CP) — Progressive Conservative MP Gordon Gilchrist has been charged with evading paying income tax of $8,403.19 and making false statements on income tax returns.

A total of 20 charges laid under the Income Tax Act against Gilchrist, his company, his wife Patricia and son James were put over in provincial court last week to Nov. 14.

The offences allegedly took place over four taxation years.

It is alleged the member for the Toronto area riding of Scarborough East evaded the $8,403.19 in taxes on $26,752.02 of undeclared income for the taxation years 1976 to 1979.

No nerve gas weapons for Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives on Wednesday turned aside the Pentagon's request for $114.6 million to build a new generation of nerve gas weapons which the military says it needs to keep up with the Soviet Union.

Working on the Defence Department's main authorization bill, members voted 256 to 161 in favor of an amendment by Representatives Ed Bethune (R-Ark.) and Clement Zablocki (D-Wis.) to deny the money to begin building artillery shells that would be packed with a deadly mix of chemicals.

U.S. population growing quickly

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are nearly 234 million Americans, the U.S. Census Bureau reported Wednesday. The bureau's latest official estimate of the population of the United States is 233,736,000, as of April 1. That's an increase of more than two million in the past year.

Anti-abortionists' strategy crushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court has crushed a right-to-life group's strategy for weakening its 1973 decision legalizing abortion by ruling against several local laws restricting the procedure.

The court's decisions, announced Wednesday, may leave right-to-life activists with only one direct avenue for changing the legal status of abortion: an amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Anti-abortion groups had been seeking adoption of state and local laws limiting the availability of abortion in various ways. But the court, ruling on cases from Ohio, Virginia and Missouri, wiped out most of the restrictions, saying they were unconstitutional and in conflict with a 1973 decision that legalized abortion.

'Interned Japanese lost $2 billion'

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Japanese-Americans and resident Japanese aliens confined in detention camps on the U.S. mainland during the Second World War lost as much as $2 billion in today's dollars as a consequence, says a congressional report released Wednesday.

The estimated 88,000 adults detained in the camps between 1942 and 1945, under an order signed by President Franklin Roosevelt, lost between $149 million and $370 million in 1945 dollars, the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians said in its report.

Coffee doubles heart disease risk?

BOSTON (Reuter) — Drinking large amounts of coffee doubles the risk of heart disease, says a Norwegian study published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study, which surveyed it so easywegians, found that heavy coffee drinkers tended to have the highest cholesterol levels, making them more likely to have a heart attack.

"The magnitude of the cholesterol-raising effect," the three researchers wrote, "suggests at least a two-fold increase in the risk of coronary heart disease."

Drop in U.S. gonorrhea rates

ATLANTA (AP) — Researchers at the national Centres for Disease Control report a six-per-cent drop in gonorrhea rates across the United States this year, but say it's too early to tell if fear of AIDS has contributed to the trend. Across the U.S. 367,497 cases of gonorrhea were reported by the centres for the first 22 weeks of 1983 — down almost 24,000 cases from the same period last year.

Men-of-war strike in Florida

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Thousands of Portuguese men-of-war, some as big as inflated footballs, washed onto county beaches, stinging up to 400 bathers and sending 21 to the hospital, beach officials said Wednesday. John Crisp, assistant chief of the Volusia County beach patrol, said the floating jellyfish with the wasp-like sting started being pushed Sunday.

Shuttle astronauts start countdown

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With the first space-faring woman Sally Ride and four male astronauts "ready to go," the countdown began today for the seventh U.S. space shuttle mission, set to blast off at 7:33 a.m. Saturday.

Much of the pre-launch media attention has focused on Ride, the 32-year-old astrophysicist who is the first woman named to a U.S. space flight. The Soviet Union has put two female cosmonauts in space previously.

She and her four colleagues, commander Robert Crippen, pilot Rick Hauck and mission specialists John Fabian and Dr. Norman Thagard, flew to the launch area Wednesday afternoon after training at the astronaut base in Houston.

Insecticide cloud on the loose

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — A cloud of insecticide leaked from a greenhouse at Stephen F. Austin State University on Wednesday night, forcing the evacuation of more than 1,000 people, authorities said.

At least 27 people, including the city's mayor, were brought to Medical Centre Hospital for treatment, said spokesman Nancy Martin. She said she did not know the extent of the injuries or how many would remain in hospital.

"They're still bringing them in," she said. The very dense, 100-metre-wide cloud caused many people to suffer eye and nose irritation, said C.E. Duffin, fire chief in this city of about 28,000 people about 280 kilometres southeast of Dallas.

Elections in 1985 in Nicaragua?

CARACAS (Reuter) — Nicaragua's Sandinist government has the "firm and sincere" intention of holding elections in 1985 and is preparing legislation to pave the way, a high-ranking Nicaraguan official told reporters in Venezuela on Wednesday.

Rafael Solis, secretary general of Nicaragua's Council of State, told a news conference his country is seeking technical assistance from Venezuela for the organization of the elections.

Chilean workers strike illegally

SANTIAGO (AP) — Leaders of 22,000 copper workers called an illegal strike against Chile's largest industry starting today to press for release of their union president, jailed for organizing countrywide protests against military rule.

A judge on ordered Rodolfo Seguel, 29, leader of the copper workers, held Wednesday until he decides if a trial is merited on the government's charge that Seguel jeopardized national security by organizing the demonstrations.

Most Britons favor death penalty

LONDON (AP) — Surveys show most of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative legislators — and most Britons — favor restoring the death penalty. A Gallup survey of 4,141 voters last week showed 90 per cent favored a new House of Commons vote on the death penalty. Thatcher has said she favors restoring the death penalty for some types of murder, including terrorist crimes and killing policemen.

Eden tried to tamper with TV

LONDON (AP) — An attempt by Prime Minister Anthony Eden to slant television coverage of the Suez crisis in 1956 was rejected by art historian Sir Kenneth Clark while he was Britain's commercial television chief, a new book said Wednesday.

In his book See It Happen, Sir Geoffrey Cox, who founded Independent Television News Ltd., says it was well documented that the state-owned British Broadcasting Corp. rebuffed attempts by Eden to influence its coverage of the crisis that culminated in the Suez war.

But Cox said he was disclosing for the first time that Eden also approached the Independent Television Authority, which the government had set up to oversee commercial TV.

Barbie's main defence resigns

LYONS, France (AP) — The principal defence lawyer for Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie said Wednesday he and another lawyer have resigned from the case.

Alain de la Servette gave no reason why he and fellow lawyer Robert Boyer, a Jesuit priest, had decided to leave the defence team. Jacques Vergès remains the only defence lawyer working on the case.

The departure of Servette and Boyer came two days after Archbishop Albert Decourtray of Lyons criticized the participation of a Roman Catholic priest in Barbie's defence.

Dutch tour bus, truck collide

GENEVA (AP) — A Dutch tour bus and a truck crashed head-on in southern Switzerland, killing the bus driver and two Japanese tourists. The truck driver had both legs amputated. Police said the accident occurred Tuesday when the truck swerved into the middle of the road to avoid another truck stopped ahead of it and hit the oncoming bus.

U.S.S.R. 'on pyramid of missiles'

BONN (AP) — The Soviet Union has enthroned itself "on a pyramid of missiles" and aims to intimidate, divide and dominate Western Europe with them, the West German defence minister said Wednesday.

"The recognizable intent of the Soviet policy is to bring the West European states into dependence through superior military power," Defence Minister Manfred Woerner told the Bundestag, the lower house of parliament.

"Intimidation and threats are the main intent of the new and modern Soviet armament, that is supposed to divide the European continent and strip it militarily in order to politically dominate it," he said.

'Pacifism killed the Jews'

BONN (Reuter) — A conservative West German minister caused an uproar in parliament Wednesday by saying pacifism in the 1930s had made possible the mass extermination of Jews in Nazi concentration camps.

Heiner Geissler, youth, health and family minister and general secretary of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democrats, made the remark in a debate about plans to deploy new U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe this year.

He was drowned by jeers from the radical, anti-nuclear Greens and challenged by both opposition Social Democrats and deputies from his Free Democratic coalition partners.

Oldest skull piece found in Spain

MADRID (AP) — A skull fragment from what could be the oldest European hominoid ever discovered has been found in southeastern Spain, scientists from a Spanish paleontology institute say.

The discovery of what was described as a small portion of a parietal bone (one of a pair that forms part of the sides and top of the skull) occurred last summer in the Guadix-Baza depression east of Granada, but was not made public until this week.

The three paleontologists who made the discovery — Dr. Josep Gibert, Dr. Jordi Agustí and Salvador Moya — said they withheld the information until they had verified the antiquity of the piece of bone. They said tests indicated it was at least 1.4 million years old, considerably older than the remains of Neanderthal Man.

Walesa under house arrest

WARSAW (AP) — Lech Walesa, who headed of the now-outlawed Solidarity labor movement, told reporters Wednesday that police raided his Gdansk apartment and placed him under house arrest in an effort to keep him from meeting Pope John Paul during the papal visit to Poland.

But Walesa vowed to try to meet the Roman Catholic pontiff, despite orders from three agents in his apartment not to leave without them.

"I consider myself under house arrest," Walesa told The Associated Press by telephone from Gdansk, the Baltic seaport where his Solidarity was formed during strikes in August 1980.

Hydro Québec and Estrie Vie will meet head on at power line hearing

Hydro Québec will be installing these types of towers along the Centre East power line.

By Charles Bury

SHERBROOKE — With public hearings set to begin Friday, both sides in the fight over Hydro-Québec's controversial Des Cantons export project are putting the finishing touches on their arguments.

The public hearings are the first of two sets planned by le Bureau des Audiences Publiques sur l'Environnement du Québec (BAPE), a provincial agency which will make non-binding recommendations to the provincial cabinet on whether the state-owned utility should be allowed to go ahead with the $225-million-plus project.

Hydro-Québec wants to export 2000 megawatts of 'surplus' power from the massive James Bay hydroelectric project — the world's largest — to the New England states according to a longterm contract signed in Boston early this year. To do this Hydro says it must build a huge transmission line from near Nicolet to Brompton Township, where the power will be converted from alternating to direct current and be shipped to Vermont via another line to be built east of Sherbrooke.

The southern section (Centre East Corridor) of the line has been hotly contested by residents including farmers, woodlot owners and other country landowners, as well as the University of Sherbrooke land-use planning institute.

The protests will come to light again at the first of the BAPE hearings set to begin Friday night.

To co-ordinate the protests residents set up Estrie Vie, a group of several hundred concerned citizens. Estrie Vie spokesman Jackie Hyman of Sawyerville says the group has high hopes for the hearings and she expects a big turnout. "We are very impressed with the BAPE procedures," she says. "They are trying to make the whole process as accessible as possible to everyone interested. There will even be simultaneous translation."

"We urge all those who have feelings about the project to come to the hearings, especially the Friday evening session, which kicks off the process."

"Estrie Vie continues to oppose the Centre-East route and we have no doubts the project is not profitable for Québec and has many drawbacks," Hyman adds. "After a year of fancy footwork by the Hydro-Québec people, they still have failed to show us that the project is justifiable, in environmental, economic and health terms."

Hyman says Hydro's 'fancy footwork' will come to an end Friday night. "The most important thing about the hearings is that finally Hydro-Québec will be obliged to give us information that it has been very reluctant to give us up 'til now and in some cases where it has refused completely."

"This is the first and probably the only time this will happen."

Estrie Vie has no illusions about the possibility of stopping the export project altogether. "We're not naive," says Hyman. "We know Mr. Lévesque plans to go ahead anyway. But that doesn't mean the project can't go ahead in a way that is acceptable to the people it affects."

BAPE officials say the government accepts its recommendations in about nine cases out of ten. But the ten per cent where the government ignores the agency's findings are generally the most controversial cases, such as this one. A toxic-waste disposal site near Montreal and the spraying of large areas of Québec forest with insecticides against the spruce budworm are recent examples.

Hyman says the government is becoming less believable in its environmental policies because of the BAPE reversals. "We hope Québec will abide by the BAPE recommendations in this case," she says. "The government is becoming less and less credible in its concern for the environment because of the way it has rejected BAPE."

Sharing Estrie Vie's concerns are the Union des Producteurs Agricoles (UPA), whose Eastern Townships members are up in arms over the project, and the land-use planning institute of the University of Sherbrooke geography department. The UPA hopes to show the BAPE people why the project is bad for farming and will destroy huge amounts of farmland. The geographers, under professor André Poulin, will describe the impact of the Hydro project on the region's human element. "The three groups have co-ordinated their efforts," says Hyman. "There will be some overlap, but in general we hope to ask very interesting and different questions."

"We know Hydro is very nervous about these hearings and that is a good thing."

Hydro-Québec, for its part, is keeping a relatively low profile as it finishes off preparations for the hearings. A meeting between Hydro's experts and members of the press is set for Friday, before the hearings start. But Hydro spokesman Jean-Marie Pelletier says it will be strictly informal. "It's not really a news story," he said.

The first part of the BAPE hearings is intended to allow all concerned to ask all the questions they wish of experts brought in by both Hydro and BAPE itself. Public meetings are set for Friday at 7:30 p.m., Saturday starting at 9:30 a.m. and Monday at 7:30. If three days of hearings prove inadequate, more will be set for next week. All will be held at Ecole Montcalm, 2050 Portland Boulevard, Sherbrooke.

Once all questions have been answered, both sides will have until early August to formulate their positions. At that time a second set of BAPE hearings will be held to set out these positions before BAPE makes its recommendations in early autumn.

Townshippers File

One of the many problems faced by our dwindling community is the increasing difficulty of keeping up church buildings. Churches which once served a larger congregation now cannot support a clergyman and are used only in the summer, or a few times a year, or in some cases not at all.

Most of these old churches are built of wood and need increased upkeep each year. With no regular congregation, sources of funding for this upkeep are very limited.

One such institution is the Minton United Church, which is finding a way to finance much needed repairs. The white clapboard church is located on University Blvd. just after it leaves North Hatley and has been without regular service for many years. Once part of a four point charge with Suffield, Belvedere and Reed's Crossing, the Minton Church still holds one service annually and this year is celebrating its 89th anniversary.

Although the church now appears to be out in the country, it was once surrounded by the village of Minton with its schoolhouse, post office, general store and blacksmith shop. The village was also the site of a skimming station, where local farmers brought their milk daily for separation. Two main factors kept Minton from growth and eventually caused its decline: the village had no water power, and the railway was routed through neighboring North Hatley. Now only the church marks the site.

The church is fortunate, however, in that what remains of the community views the building as a landmark and has noted with concern its physical deterioration. This year they decided to take action. A restoration fund was set up, letters were sent to former members and adherents and a goal of $10,000 was set. The fund was well supported both by former members and by current residents of the area.

So far, reports Restoration Committee chairman Kenneth Dean, $6,000 has been raised and a contract has been signed for the new foundation. Other work to be done includes exterior painting and repairs to tower and entryway. If finances permit and all goes according to schedule, the work will be completed in time for the annual service in October.

Your support is, of course, welcome for this project. Donations may be sent to: Mrs. Myrna Connor, Minton Hill Road, R.R. 1, North Hatley, JOB 2C0. Cheques payable to Minton United Church Restoration Fund.

Townshippers' Association Health and Social Services Coordinator Ruth Atto has been organizing a series of information meetings in the western part of the Townships. These will bring together members of the public with representatives of local social service agencies. The representatives will explain, in English, the services which they offer and reply to questions from the audience.

Upcoming meetings in the series are: Sutton Town Hall, Wednesday, June 22, 7:30 p.m.; Cowansville United Church Hall, Thursday, June 23, 7:30 p.m.; Mansonville Town Hall, Tuesday, June 28, 7:30 p.m.

Asbestos line opponents hold public meet

COWANSVILLE

(MC) — The End Of The Line environmental action committee has called a public meeting for tonight to discuss means of combatting pollution from the CPR's asbestos railroad ballast.

The asbestos-ballasted tracks run alongside Lac Davignon, the Cowansville reservoir, and have contaminated drinking water since 1979.

Meeting time is 7 p.m. at 199 Davignon, in the gymnasium behind the St. Leon Catholic school. Guest speaker will be Dr. William Barakett, co-author of a recent appeal for action to federal health minister Monique Bégin. The appeal was signed by all members of the Brome-Missisquoi-Perkins Hospital Council of Doctors and Dentists, and copies were mailed to all Cowansville households by End Of The Line, two weeks ago.

A question period will follow Barakett's talk. Afterward, two films will be shown — the 1980 CBC documentary 'The Asbestos Line', which first made the health hazards of asbestos track ballast a national political issue, and a recent TVCW interview with trackside resident Paula Jarolim, who describes the impact the asbestos has had upon her family.

Copies of the numerous asbestos counts taken from Lac Davignon and Cowansville drinking water will be distributed.

SHERBROOKE (AV) — Searches continue today for two men believed drowned in separate incidents this week.

"He came to see us on June 3; he was in good shape, feeling good. It's my uncle's birthday," he said. "I'm going to bring him a big cake." I was far from thinking that it would be the last time I saw him alive."

Holding back the tears, Irene Perreault, the mother of missing swimmer Laurent Dubois, told the story of her last meeting with her son in Asbestos at the beginning of June.

It was early yesterday morning that Mme Perreault, with two friends from Asbestos, travelled into Sherbrooke having just learned that her son had probably drowned the day before. Perreault watched rescue operations hoping that the river would give up her son's body and put an end to the nightmare.

"When he was swimming he must have hit a cold water current and may have gotten cramps — after all he was a good swimmer. All my kids are very capable in the water. When they were little I always sent them to the pool."

Perreault said she had not seen her son looking as good as he looked on that June 3. "I thought he looked well and he seemed to be happy," she said.

Laurent Dubois, 30, had been living in a boarding house for three years. Tuesday, accompanied by fellow resident and friend Laurier Poirier, Dubois decided to go swimming at the Lac des Nations at Jacques Cartier park. They swam together for a while but Poirier, who is a less experienced swimmer, headed for land before Dubois. The last time Dubois was seen he was swimming towards the train bridge and nobody saw or heard anything from him since. Nobody saw him struggle, call for help or disappear under the water.

According to members of a nearby waterskiing school, the temperature of the water was between 65 and 70 degrees F.

Firemen coordinated surface searches of the water on Tuesday afternoon and continued until dark. The search resumed again Wednesday morning with firemen using radar in an attempt to locate the body. The searches have been futile. Dubois' body has not yet been found.

Dubois' landlady is critical of the search. "But why don't they ask for additional help? I'm sure that there are at least a dozen people living on the side of the river with boats who would help if asked. Imagine with a fishing tournament here on Saturday, all of a sudden there are 10,000 to 20,000 people along the side of the river and you haven't found his body yet! Put yourself in the family's position." Huguette Champoux is in charge of the boarding house where Dubois had been living for three years. She calls her boarders her 'little boys'. She hadn't slept the whole night.

"When you are in close contact with a person for three years, he becomes like a member of the family," Champoux is not blaming the police or firemen for what they have done but she wonders why they don't organize a volunteer search.

In charge of the official search is Eudore Provost, the director of the Sherbrooke fire department. He is quite clear on this point: "We are responsible for the search and we will continue until we find him. I can't make a public demand for help because all the volunteers would be my responsibility and it is too heavy a burden for me to carry."

"The river is there for everybody and those willing to help can do so at their own risk. I'm not going to stop them," said Provost. He added that if it was necessary to conduct underwater searches he would get aid from the municipal and provincial police. In the meantime the search continues.

Rock Forest short of water

ROCK FOREST (RP) — "The situation is stabilizing itself, but the fact remains that the taxpayers of Rock Forest have to watch their daily consumption of drinking water, otherwise the situation could become a little more alarming."

This is according to Rock Forest information agent Richard Gosselin, who analyzed the situation yesterday which has caused a shortage of drinking water these last few days in Rock Forest, particularly on Monday.

A consumption of some 1,300,000 gallons of water was recorded on that day. The capacity of the municipal reservoir is 1,600,000.

"We have not reached a critical situation; it is not necessary to institute drinking water measures. But the high consumption level registered can be explained by the warm weather. Even after all those weeks of rain many people have been incited to use a great deal of water," Gosselin said.

"It is filling swimming pools and watering lawns, needless to say, that increases the personal consumption of drinking water; all these factors play a role in the increased consumption," explained Gosselin.

For Tuesday and Wednesday, Rock Forest drinking water consumption levels were set around 1,008,000 gallons, inside of levels attained Monday.

If the situation had been worse yesterday, Gosselin feared it would be further aggravated by the continuing heat wave combined with Saturday and Sunday, normally days for working in the garden or the pool.

Further, Gosselin said, there is no way to deal with the taxpayers' overly high consumption of drinking water. A tax system discouraging water waste exists in Ascot Township, and consists of imposing a supplemental tax on taxpayers who abuse this important commodity but Rock Forest does not have one.

Fun to watch

Conservative leader Brian Mulroney's decision to seek a seat in the House of Commons at the earliest possible moment is a wise one. Mulroney, who faced his harshest criticism in the recent campaign for the party's leadership over his lack of parliamentary experience, will now be able — should he win — to demonstrate to the sceptical his ability in the Ottawa circus.

The Liberals, of course, claim to be anxious to meet Mulroney on their own turf, but they must be a little worried nonetheless. If Mulroney can hone his skills in the House before a general election, his chances of dethroning the atrophied Trudeau government will increase from the very good to the absolute.

There is no reason to doubt that Mulroney can handle the House of Commons. A labor lawyer whose record is extremely impressive, who gained the support of all the major union leaders he has negotiated with over the years, should find the kindergarten tactics of most of the Trudeau hangers-on no more troublesome than a pesky fly.

Parliamentarians often make a big issue trying to pretend that what goes on in the House requires some sort of special skill, but an afternoon's observation of the country's most expensive day-care centre demonstrates that all that is really required is the ability to hurl insults, a thick skin, and a complete indifference to looking foolish in front of the entire nation. It is only the latter qualification which Mulroney may find difficult to acquire.

With Mulroney in the House, he will develop the skills he will need to deal with the complacent Liberal Party and should be able to solidify the already-strong support he has gathered in his own party.

Unless the unexpected occurs, Prime Minister Trudeau will have to take some time off from admiring his greatness and deal with some real issues. Mulroney is a tough Irish street fighter and a match-up with the arrogant Trudeau should be fun to watch.

Mulroney tabs 'old pals' team

OTTAWA (CP) — Brian Mulroney has tabbed old pals and leadership campaign strategists to form a transition team to decide what must be done during his first few months as Progressive Conservative leader.

But the new leader told reporters Wednesday there will not be wholesale changes in the party apparatus. He praised some Joe Clark appointees and said he has asked some to stay on.

Roger Nantel, a campaign communications adviser who is acting as an interim spokesman for Mulroney, said the transition team will assess possible changes in key party jobs and decide on Mulroney's personal staff needs.

It will probably make recommendations by Sept. 1, although there could be some changes before then, especially if Clark loyalists resign. But it will move carefully, said Nantel.

"A lot of people said there would be a bloodbath, a purge — they really don't know Brian," he said, arguing that a purge would neither be intelligent nor would it mesh with Mulroney's Irish generosity.

Mulroney said he has asked Senator Arthur Tremblay to reconsider his resignation and remain as head of a party policy commission. And he has not yet officially accepted the resignation of Senator Lowell Murray as party election campaign chairman.

Both senators were appointed by Clark and Murray is one of the former leader's closest friends and top strategists. Mulroney said he viewed Murray's letter of resignation as "a courtesy to the new leader as a pro-forma gesture."

Murray said his job and those of the provincial campaign chairmen under him expire when the leader changes. He said he doesn't expect to be offered a new mandate by Mulroney.

WILL BE REWARDED

Mulroney said during his campaign that faithful Tories would get their chance at the patronage trough if they win the next election. But he promised to offer top party jobs to key aides of his opponents as well as his own loyalists.

Asked if there would be wholesale changes at party headquarters and in the party apparatus across the country, Mulroney simply said no.

For example, he said he had met national director Pierre Fortier, research director Geoff Norquay and Peter Harder, executive assistant to interim Opposition Leader Iqbal Singh.

"I've indicated they've done a fine job and that I will be meeting them on a regular basis and how we can improve the situation."

For the moment, Mulroney and his advisers are grappling with the most immediate problems, trying to get a few days to rest after the gruelling campaign and convention, and looking ahead to his byelection campaign in Central Nova.

Nantel said the new leader will take the weekend off in Montreal, then return Monday to the capital where the transition team will hold its first meeting.

As well as Nantel, the team includes two old pals from law school at Laval University — Jean Bazin and Michel Cogger, a diminutive Montreal lawyer who ran Mulroney's leadership bids in 1976 and 1983.

Paul Weed, the 1983 campaign chairman, will handle links with Ontario Tories while Roderigue Pageau will be the chief Quebec link.

Others include: York University professor Charles McMillan, who will handle policy; Ottawa alderman Michael McSweeney, a campaign travelling aide; and Pat MacAdam, who will act as caucus liaison.

Nantel said the group will probably grow during the summer. For a start, the group is merely trying to find out "who did what."

"Essentially it's a human relations situation."

The bilingual U.S. has no official language

By Paul Koring

NEW YORK (CP) — Bilingualism is alive and well south of the border.

Conventional wisdom has it that Canada is a mosaic where different cultures can maintain their integrity while the United States is a melting pot where ethnic groups quickly trade in their backgrounds for some amorphous American identity.

Yet while the bilingualism battle rages in Canada — the latest rounds being fought in the context of a newly patriated Constitution — some tangible successes in inter-cultural respect are being achieved in the U.S.

Some seem minor — like subway billboards in Spanish. But it is just that kind of simple gesture that defuses much linguistic bitterness.

The U.S. has no official language. While a group called U.S. English was formed in January to lobby against bilingual instruction in U.S. schools and proposes a constitutional amendment to make English the official language, there seems little likelihood of its passage, and perhaps even less need.

No doubt English is the operative language in the U.S. Still other languages, notably Spanish, but also French, Italian and even Vietnamese, appear in the marketplace in certain regions.

HAS OFFICIAL SANCTION

Businessmen don't need to be forced to advertise in languages other than English when they know the majority of riders on the Lexington Avenue subway line in New York City speak Spanish.

And bilingualism has official sanction in the U.S. as well. The Supreme Court ruled in the mid-1970s that schools have to provide instruction in students' native language.

In some parts of the Southwest the ruling has been bitterly opposed, primarily in areas where illegal Mexican immigrants send their children to U.S. schools which then are forced to teach them in Spanish.

Nevertheless, the U.S. Education Department estimates 3.6 million students in the U.S. have only a limited knowledge of English. In 1983, Washington will spend $138 million for bilingual programs in 140 languages.

For instance: in southern Florida all students take classes taught in English and Spanish and often a third language as well. In New York City, 85,000 students are enrolled in bilingual classes. In California, even pre-schoolers can attend state-funded bilingual programs.

SEEN AS BRIDGE

Some see the classes as a bridge for non-English-speaking students to cross into the American mainstream. Others, like Oscar Careenas, director of the Texas Division of Bilingual Education, argue that two languages help those who will eventually be "doing business with the rest of the world."

For many Hispanic groups, like French-speaking Canadians north of the border, linguistic rights have become a rallying cry. Those opposed to bilingualism are often accused by Hispanic leaders of racial bias.

One of the most telling impacts of providing children with education in their native languages has been the effect on truancy rates. Attendance in New York City's Spanish programs is just more than 90 per cent, about 15 per cent higher than the city average.

"Before bilingual education the dropout rates were staggering," says Awilda Orta, head of New York's program. "In a sink-or-swim situation, only the extraordinary talented students made it."

Multilingual services in the U.S. extend far beyond schools. Special phone lines offered by airlines take reservations in Spanish. Most big cities with large non-English-speaking populations have courts in other languages. Even state and local governments often have officers hired specifically to deal with the non-English segments of the population.

Fujitsu Fanuc clause

Heh-heh!

Want to drive the boss nuts when next the old contract comes up for negotiation?

It's simple. Insist upon the inclusion of a Fujitsu Fanuc clause.

Fujitsu Fanuc is a Japanese manufacturing company, it seems. The firm uses robots to build robots to make more robots.

A problem surfaced, however, when the local union noticed that the increasing substitution of robots for humans was playing merry old hob with the union finances.

I mean to say — how do you go about collecting dues from a robot?

Easy, said the company. We'll be glad to pony up the dues for the non-human employees.

Not so fast, said the ministry of labor. Robots cannot join a union like human workers.

Union leader Takatoku Suzuki blew the minister a polite raspberry and uttered the Japanese equivalent of "the hell they can't!"

Takatoku Suzuki has pointed the way for the rest of us, but it won't be easy. We must begin organizing now.

At the next guild meeting, I propose to nominate for membership one Hendrix, EDS-5200.

Oh, I know — Hendrix isn't exactly a robot. He's a word-processor. EDITS THE COPY

However, without him we'd still be writing our stories on paper rolled into old-fashioned typewriters. The stories would then be handed to an editor with an eyeshade who would, naturally, edit them. Old Eyeshade would pass the golden prose along to an operator to send out.

With the excellent Hendrix on the job, however, we write the stories directly into the word-processor, push a button marked "execute" (appropriate, somehow) and voila — the copy turns up magically in publications from Bonavista to Vancouver Island. And that sounds pretty robotic to me.

Once we have smuggled Hendrix and his chums onto the guild rolls, of course, we'll see about signing up the big retrieval unit in the back room.

I'm not sure what it does, but I understand you can't speak Digital PDP-8 unless you go through the retrieval unit. Sort of an agent, I guess. Digital, etc., is the copy-router. Nothing moves unless he okays it.)

Just think of it — the size of the guild unit doubles overnight, with the company paying the dues for all the non-human brothers and sisters.

It must have been an ancestor of Brother Takatoku who first said:

"If you can't lick 'em — join 'em!"

Liberals: If John runs, what will Jean do? And if..

By Roger Smith

OTTAWA (CP) — After focusing for four months on the Progressive Conservatives, the political spotlight will soon shift back to an old guessing game — will Prime Minister Trudeau retire and if so, when?

Brian Mulroney at the Tory helm worries many Liberals who see the bilingual Quebecer as a threat to their key to electoral success — a near-monopoly on the provinces' 75 seats.

But Liberals and observers could only guess Monday about how his victory will affect Trudeau's deliberations on retirement.

"Only he knows his timetable," said Veterans Affairs Minister Bennett Campbell who, like several of his cabinet colleagues, was uncertain about the implications of the Quebecer's victory.

"It's strictly his own choice on when to go," said Energy Minister Jean Chretien. Jean Lapierre, MP for Shefford, predicted the Liberals would hold a leadership convention about January but wouldn't guess how much before then Trudeau would step down.

Trudeau, who has said he will retire before the election but loves to drop confusing hints when reporters ask for a date, congratulated Mulroney in the Commons Monday as the new Tory chief watched from the gallery.

The prime minister said he hopes the Tories open up a seat for Mulroney to shoot for in a byelection "so we can enjoy his presence in the House of Commons."

With Parliament due to adjourn at the end of the month, a Trudeau-Mulroney confrontation when the Commons resumes Sept. 12 depends on whether Mulroney gets a seat before then and whether Trudeau is still around.

Mulroney's win produced speculation that John Turner, the Liberal crown prince, might be more reluctant to run for fear of giving up his Toronto law practice just to become Opposition leader.

SOME CONCERNED

It also had Liberals wondering about the threat in Quebec. While Tom Axworthy, Trudeau's principal secretary, has called Mulroney a "plastic man," such bravado is belied by top Liberals who felt he was the most-feared contender and thought Clark would be the easiest prey.

But Quebec MPs refuse to wave a white flag. Pierre Deniger, MP for La Prairie, said Mulroney is a "disciple of (industrialist) Conrad Black and not Quebecers."

"The Conservatives have chosen charm over substance," he said.

The MP with the most at stake may be Andre Maltais, representative for Manicouagan which includes Baie Comeau, Mulroney's home town. He has said he would like to run there in the next election.

Maltais said that might be dangerous because his constituents remember that Mulroney closed down the Iron Ore. Co. mine at Schefferville and view him as a rich Montrealeur.

"He's from Baie Comeau but he's living in Westmount," he said.

Chretien, who has leadership ambitions, was asked whether Mulroney's win might make it easier for the party to counter with a Quebecer and reject its tradition of alternating between francophone and anglophone leaders. He smiled and said: "I will note that."

He said Mulroney will be judged not just on his roots but on his policies. And he may endanger the party's electoral appeal by moving to the right to pay off Peter Pocklington and right-wing MPs who supported him, said Chretien.

Party president Iona Campagnolo agreed a shift to the right would open the political centre for the Liberals.

She said Mulroney's tough approach to Quebec separatists was much less conciliatory than Clark's and "exactly the same philosophically as Pierre Trudeau's." She noted Mulroney said during the campaign Trudeau is not always right but was correct in his attitude towards separatists.

Campagnolo predicted Mulroney will have a "much longer honeymoon than Mr. Clark would have" so the Liberals will probably lay back awhile before going after him.

"We yield 1983 to the Conservatives but 1984, 1985 and 1986 we reserve for ourselves."

But a top Clark adviser suggested that at the start of the fall session, the Liberals will try to open up rifts in the Tory caucus by splitting Mulroney and his supporters, for example by bringing up official bilingualism.

While Mulroney promotes bilingualism, some of his caucus backers are less enthusiastic.

"There will be lots of booby traps for the unwary," said the Clark adviser.

Frigon is rising star behind Steinberg

MONTREAL (CP) — Gaetan Frigon seems to be the rising star behind the strategy by financially troubled Steinberg Inc. to cut a slice into Quebec's convenience store market.

At a time when the food chain giant is having trouble with sagging sales in its key Quebec supermarket division, the 43-year-old president of Steinberg's fledgling Franchise Plus operation is taking credit for opening 38 convenience stores in 18 months.

In hopes that Frigon will work similar magic for its Quebec food stores, Steinberg last week handed the marketing specialist two highly expanded roles within the company. Besides running Franchise Plus, Frigon now will handle Steinberg's Quebec marketing division and oversee the operation of the firm's 196-unit restaurant subsidiary.

Steinberg's recently reported third-quarter loss of $2.1 million and subsequent management shakeup is largely blamed on the company's unsuccessful price-cutting war in the province. Steinberg's is Quebec's third-largest supermarket chain behind Provigo Inc. and Groupe des Epiciers Metro-Richelieu Inc.

Frigon put together his franchising organization and opened his first La Maisonnee convenience store within four months. After a year, he had 10 stores to his credit, and another 28 openings in the following six months.

"As I'm talking to you this morning, we're opening three," he said in a recent interview. "So, let's see, that's 38."

The ambitious executive says he plans to open a store a week from now on, until the chain saturates its market with perhaps 200 Quebec stores.

The marketing odds aren't exactly against the venture but present an interesting challenge since Steinberg has entered an already crowded market behind Provigo and Metro-Richelieu.

But Frigon says he has solved the market-entry problem by designing a store that doesn't compete directly with other depanneurs — an estimated 700 Quebec convenience stores that belong to the rival chains as well as 6,000 independents.

Frigon says La Maisonnee gets about 50 per cent of its sales from items most depanneurs don't carry, such as bread freshly baked on the premises, fresh-ground coffee, delicatessen specialties and fresh produce. A typical depanneur depends heavily on sales of such items as cigarettes, beer, soft drinks, candy and canned goods.

Analysts generally give Frigon good marks for the job he has done in building Steinberg's convenience store operation from scratch in such a short period, but caution it's too early to say if the new subsidiary will pass the acid test of producing profits.

Some note that while the strategy is good, it is also more costly because of the extra space and equipment the stores require. Although each has an independent owner, the store and equipment are financed by Franchise Plus and supplied under a lease. That may not leave enough room for a healthy return on investment.

But Frigon says in his planning, both the average markup on the La Maisonnee assortment of products and the sales for each store should be so much higher than the convenience store average that the cost of setting up the stores will be justified. Results have so far lived up to these projections, he said.

Olympic rider gives instruction at two-day Magog workshop

MAGOG — Olympic rider Robin Hahn will be holding a two-day workshop Saturday and Sunday at the Wilvaken stables near here.

Hahn, a leading member of the Canadian 'combined events' team in the 1968, '72 and '76 Olympics, will be giving individual and group instruction at the workshop, says organizer Kenra Willis.

"Fifteen or 20" riders will be attending, from Foster, Georgeville, Knowlton, Stanstead, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville and Montreal, she says.

A native of Bell Plain, Saskatchewan, Hahn will start with a session on dressage at 8:30 Saturday morning. Dressage is basically the matter of "horse discipline", says Willis. "Riders and horses have to learn the various gaits," she says. "It's like the compulsory figures in figure skating."

Another session will cover 'cross-country' riding. Willis says this is "like a car rally, where a certain course has to be covered in a fixed period of time, with as few mistakes as possible."

A third session will deal with stadium jumping — the event most tv-watchers know — where riders put their mounts through a complicated series of jumps in a small ring, with penalty points given for errors.

Saturday evening Hahn will also give a class on basic riding theory; the public is invited. The $5 lecture will be followed by a question-and-answer session.

Kenra Willis is one of the Eastern Townships' few full-time riding instructors. A couple of years ago she gave up her career as an inhalation therapist (at the Montreal General and Lakeshore General hospitals) to devote her energy to equestrian activities at Wilvaken, the Willis family year-round outdoor activity centre.

Participants in the Hahn sessions have to pay a fee, of course. But riders and would-be riders interested in watching the two-day event are welcome free of charge.

Wilvaken is located on the Fitch Bay road, east of Route 141, north of Ayer's Cliff and south of Magog.

INGERSOLL-RAND ANNOUNCEMENT

Laurent Beaudoin

W.L. Mallory, President and Chief Executive Officer, Ingersoll-Rand Canada Inc., is pleased to announce, on behalf of the Board of Directors, that at the recent annual shareholders' meeting held in Calgary, Alberta, Mr. Laurent Beaudoin, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Bombardier Inc. was elected a Director of the Company.

Mr. Beaudoin is President of Bombardier - Rotax GmbH and Les Entreprises de J. Armand Bombardier Limitée. He is also on the Board of Directors of a number of other Canadian and American companies including La Banque Nationale du Canada, British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., the Canada Development Corporation, Celanese Canada, the Conference Board in Canada and Kidd Creek Mines Ltd.

Despite recession Core-Mark makes profit

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — Tucked away in a converted warehouse in this Vancouver suburb is the biggest distributing company of its kind in North America.

It moved there from Los Angeles last year and, despite the recession, 1982 was its best year: $805 million in sales and a $9.47 million net profit.

The company is Core-Mark International Inc. Chances are, you've never heard of it.

But if, in the past year, you have bought MJB coffee, Player's cigarettes, Neilson or Lowney chocolate bars, Crest toothpaste, Seiko watches or any of dozens of other products, there's a good chance you have done business, indirectly, with Core-Mark.

The company owns Glaser Bros., a major U.S. tobacco and confectionery company, E.A. Morris, the oldest Canadian tobacco company, McColl's Fine Foods, Cornwall lighters, and Royal Ascot and Royal Windsor tobacco and pipes.

"It's a brand new 96-year-old company," says firm president Gerald Pickman. Brand new, because Core-Mark International was incorporated under the B.C. Company Act on March 18, 1983. And 96 years old because Glaser Bros. and E.A. Morris were founded well before the turn of the century.

Pickman, company chairman David Gillespie, and Bruce Lockwood, company secretary and director, are the controlling shareholders of the company. They were the only shareholders until last month, when Core-Mark went public.

Pickman says the firm should be listed on the Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver exchanges by mid-July.

But why a Vancouver head office for a wholesale company that does 95 per cent of its business in the U.S.?

"Probably two-thirds of the reason why we came to Canada is David Gillespie's desire to return to what he calls home," Pickman says.

The remaining third, he says, is what Core-Mark sees as a Canadian market ripe for the picking.

"If we went public in the U.S., we were looking at problems in Canada."

For "problems," read "Foreign Investment Review Agency." But FIRA has OK'd Core-Mark, mainly due to the Canadian head office and the Canadian content of its leaders.

Pickman is an American who has applied for landed immigrant status. Lockwood is a Canadian citizen. And Gillespie, whose school and work life has been spent almost equally on either side of the 49th parallel, has been a landed immigrant for more than 20 years.

Gillespie says another advantage of locating Core-Mark in Canada is the absence of tariffs or regulatory barriers on southbound computerized data processing. An American company running Canadian branches from the U.S. would face a barrage of dataflow restrictions.

Core-Mark has 93,000 square metres of storage space in warehouses in the U.S. and employs 155 people in Richmond, 145 of them Canadian.

"It's one of the best work forces we've had anywhere," Pickman says.

"We manufacture nothing and we sell nothing to the public," he says. "Our inventory is almost 100-per-cent liquid: We won't buy anything the manufacturer won't take back, and we don't sell anything we won't take back."

Ocean ranger tragedy inspires Empra

VANCOUVER (CP) — Apparatus described as the missing link in rescue operations now is being marketed by a fledgling Vancouver company.

Nick Fenn, operations manager for Empra Systems Corp., says the apparatus was inspired by the sinking of the oil rig Ocean Ranger off Canada's East Coast, in which 84 people died, and the crash of a Boeing 737 into the Potomac River near Washington, D.C.

Traditional methods such as helicopter winching can be a slow and frustrating attempt at rescue when time is critical to survive," says an Empra news release.

Fenn says the new emergency multiple person rescue apparatus is an open-top ring net with a flotation collar and rigid base which can rescue up to 20 people at one time.

He said the company, which employs four people and operates out of Richmond, B.C., has received six orders for the Empra from oil rigs in Tuktoyaktuk, N.W.T., off Prince Edward Island and in the Hibernia oil fields, and the U.S. Coast Guard is considering it.

The Empra, which has a base price of $7,500, was designed by a team of Canadian engineers in consultation with helicopter pilots, experts in safety and rescue and other professionals.

"We dubbed it the missing link," Fenn said. "It can be used for high-rise fire evacuations, inland flooding, forest fire evacuations."

"The applications for it are very, very large. The offshore oil industry is huge with the number of rigs there are all over the world."

Major Peter Holmes of Canadian Forces base Shearwater said in a telephone interview a demonstration in Halifax harbor appeared to be successful, although conditions were ideal the day the Empra was tested.

Holmes said he is not saying the device would not work in rough weather, only that it would have to be tested under various conditions before the forces would consider using it.

Fenn said the Empra, which has also been demonstrated in Vancouver, acts like a sea anchor and can be hooked to a helicopter or used from a ship's boom mast.

"It has excellent flight characteristics for helicopters," Fenn said. "It has been tested up to 100 knots air speed and indications are it will go faster than that without undue hazard to aircraft."

"It's cheap and it works," Fenn added an important advantage is the device's stationary properties in water.

Much time is used by helicopter pilots trying to pick up inflatable life rafts because the helicopter's down wash blows the raft all over the place, he said.

Running won't harm pregnancy, says nutritionist

CALGARY (CP) — Women do not have to hang up their running shoes during pregnancy, but they should quit smoking, says a leading American nutritionist.

Bonnie Worthington-Roberts told the annual meeting of the Canadian Dietetic Association on Tuesday that studies are dispelling some beliefs about childbirth while confirming others.

Hard workouts — even long-distance running within days of delivery — do not seem to hurt pregnant women or their babies, she said.

"There is no data that I'm aware of that (shows) reasonable exercise, even when it is relatively rigorous, has any obvious impact."

An American study of 24 women who ran during pregnancy showed that while a few experienced some discomfort, all reported enjoying running without any resulting problems.

Three of the 24 ran right up to the day of delivery, Worthington-Roberts said.

The women, all marathon runners, had to trim their weekly mileage significantly as they gained weight, but they said they still found the exercise "an experience they enjoyed as part of their pregnancy."

One woman resumed running four days after delivery.

In another study, women said running during pregnancy was a "positive" part of their experience, contributing to emotional stability and improved self-image.

Babies born to running mothers are every bit as healthy as those born to non-running mothers, thus dispelling the belief a baby's blood supply may be reduced by heavy exercise, Worthington-Roberts said.

"Their babies were an average seven pounds, six ounces, which is about the average for the normal American population."

But as with everything, there are limits, she said.

Expectant mothers should not participate in sports that result in short-term oxygen deprivation, such as high-altitude mountain climbing or competitive track and field, nor should they join in at contact sports that could injure the baby, Worthington-Roberts said.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers:

I read with horror that letter from "Right on in Homosexual Heaven!" Maybe that's how it is on the West Coast, but it is quite different on the East Coast and in the Middle West. To make the flat-out statement that the "gay uniform" consists of a plaid shirt, tight jeans, a leather bomber jacket (which costs about $175) and Army boots is absurd.

If, indeed, that is the norm, about half the population of teen males here in Connecticut will be dumping their wardrobes into the Connecticut river. Moreover, their moms will be forming a posse to hang you, Ann, and rightfully so.

I have five teenage sons, so I think I know a little something about the subject. I have observed young men's dress in various areas in an effort to make wise purchases for my own boys. I have noticed the trend towards the outfit described in that letter, but does that mean all these fellows are gay? I hope not!

I am impressed with the choices young high school males are making — they look like men for the first time in 20 years, especially now that they are getting rid of the long hair. That letter may have set us back a whole generation.

Finally, a word to young people everywhere: you are setting a trend of neatness in your generation, the first in 20 years, and we couldn't be happier.

This Is The East Speaking To The West

I was bombarded with letters not only from the East, but the North and South — and yes, even the West — all resenting the suggestion of the "gay clone outfit".

Thanks for setting the record straight — if you will pardon the pun.

Dear Ann Landers:

Please tell me what you would say and do if your 24-year-old daughter came to you and announced that she is marrying a man 20 years older than herself. (He has been married four times and has a reputation that would make your hair stand on end.)

We love our daughter very much. She's a fabulous person. We are just plain sick at heart. Any suggestions?

Never Thought It Would Happen To Us

Dear Never:

She's 24? Old enough to know what she's doing. Tell her you love her and always will — even if she insists on lousing up her life.

Don't try to talk her out of it. (It never works.) Just say, "We'll be around to help you pick up the pieces if things don't work out."

Dear Ann Landers:

I do not like the way you and other journalists use the terms "Grandma" and "Grandpa" if the person happens to be over 60. In a recent letter you replied, "Hurray for you, Grandma!" She said in her letter she was 74, but nothing was mentioned about grandchildren.

It is extremely bad manners to use those terms unless you happen to be that person's grandchild. Please don't help perpetuate bad manners in a country where they are already pretty awful.

Westchester Woman

Dear Woman:

Sorry if I offended you, but as the mother of three grandchildren I can tell you I wouldn't mind in the least.

Local Red Cross holds meeting and dinner

SAWYERVILLE — The Red Cross met on June 1st, with a good attendance. Members came early and tied five quilts, three large and two single size. A delicious dinner was served at noon by the hostesses Helen Taylor, Elsie Harbinson and Anna French.

The business meeting was presided over by the President Donna McConnell and all repeated The Lord's Prayer. Minutes read, roll call and treasurer's report given.

Some material and tying thread bought and ordered paid. Prices were set on the work done on some quilts for others. Thanks received for the donation for the Sherbrooke Hospital.

It was decided to put some quilts in the Festival to be held at Birchton.

Mrs. Vancourt of Cookshire was a guest and was given the money collected for the Red Cross Campaign by some of the members which amounted to $418.00. She gave the ones who collected lovely notes which she had decorated herself.

It was decided to have a work meeting some time soon, each member to bring her own lunch.

Sexologists claim Canadians are all talk, no action

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Canadians are good at talking about love but not at making love, two University of Quebec sexologists said Monday night.

Speaking to about 500 nurses, social workers and teachers at the opening session of a human sexuality conference at University of Guelph, Jean-Yves Desjardins, co-founder of the department of sexology at University of Quebec, said there is a great need for adult sex education.

"In our own society, there is a great problem," he said. "We are specialists at talking of love, but not at making love."

Michel Lemieux, with whom Desjardins hosts an open-line radio program, told the audience the popularity of their program — heard by about 350,000 Quebecers a day — further proves the need adults have for information on human sexuality.

Lemieux said public lectures the two have been giving around the province of Quebec since January, 1980, have been attended by more than 35,000 people.

Desjardins, described by conference organizer Ed Herold as the leading sex educationist in Quebec, said people need to learn how to communicate their erotic needs. He said although touching is a common act, often not enough thought is put into it when making love.

Desjardins drew a laugh from the audience when he likened one technique to washing a table as opposed to touching with tenderness.

Most people have a "limited range" in love-making and must be taught how to expand on that, he said.

Desjardins, a former Roman Catholic priest, said in an interview later that in many parts of Canada people confuse eroticism with pornography. He said pornography has three main characteristics: It bears no relation to love but only to the genitalia, it lacks romance and the focus is only on certain parts of the body. Hardcore pornography has an element of violence as well.

He said he left the priesthood because he felt the moral teaching of the Roman Catholic church "is sometimes in opposition to the sexual development of people."

The Quebec clergy does not react negatively toward him — they merely ignore him, Desjardins said.

Baptism

The baptism of Sandra Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cook of Greenfield Park took place on Sunday, June 5 at Christ Church, East Angus, with Canon Jervis-Read officiating. The godparents were Mr. and Mrs. T. Campbell of Thetford Mines. The church was attractively decorated with spring flowers.

A delicious buffet was served following the service at the home of the baby's great-grandmother, Mrs. John Cruickshank and Mr. Cruickshank. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rowland and son James of Montreal. Mrs. Ruth Cook and Mr. B. DeLaurier of Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. F. Daignault and Mr. Ayton Cruickshank of Lennoxville, also Mr. and Mrs. W. Thorneloe of East Angus.

The baby received many gifts and good wishes including a gift from her great-aunt, Mrs. Joan Thorneycroft of Colorado Springs who is at the present time a patient in hospital there, having had heart surgery.

St. Paul's Guild and ACW meet

BURY (NR) — The June meeting of St. Paul's Guild and A.C.W. was held in the parish hall on the regular date with 18 members, including one new member present.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Irene Fisher. Mrs. Alma Quinn led the devotional period with a scripture reading, the meditation was read by Mrs. Alice Mayhew, a prayer by Mrs. Mabel Thompson, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Mrs. Fisher thanked everyone who had helped to make the supper such a success.

Correspondence included thank-you notes from Mrs. Winnifred Dougherty, the Fisher family, Mrs. Winnifred Buchanan, Mrs. Gladys Quinn, Mrs. Alma Quinn and Mrs. Hildred Goodin for remembrances when ill or bereaved.

Mrs. Helen Groom

and Mrs. Faye Coleman reported visiting St. Paul's Home and taking treats to the residents. Mrs. Alice Mayhew and Mrs. Alma Quinn will visit the four smaller homes in June.

The hostesses for July will be Mrs. Mabel Thompson and Mrs. Elaine Enair. Several members promised doughnuts for the July 2nd canteen.

The Rev. L. Westman read Parables of the Talents, Math 25; 14-30, which was followed by a discussion on stewardship relating to our own area.

Several members paid into the Birthday box and turned in Sunshine money.

The monthly drawing was won by Mrs. Irene Fisher.

The meeting closed with prayer by the Rev. Westman, followed by a delicious lunch served by the hostesses, Mrs. Alma Quinn and Mrs. Alice Mayhew.

Mets most active as baseball's interleague trading deadline passes

Baseball's interleague trading deadline arrived Wednesday night with a blockbuster deal — St. Louis Cardinals dealt first baseman Keith Hernandez, a perennial all-star and a one-time Most Valuable Player, to New York Mets.

As the deadline arrived at 8 p.m. EDT the Mets were by far the most active team.

They acquired Hernandez about half an hour before the deadline for troubled relief ace Neil Allen and promising right-hander Rick Ownbey. Earlier they sent reserve first baseman Mike Jorgensen to the Atlanta Braves for cash or a player to be named later and on Tuesday picked up catcher Junior Ortiz from the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Chicago White Sox and Seattle Mariners, meanwhile, swapped second basemen. The Mariners sent Julio Cruz, the top base-stealer in the majors this year, to Chicago for Tony Bernazard, who had played in all of the White Sox' games this year.

And New York Yankees acquired pitcher Matt Keough from Oakland A's to add some right-handed balance to their left-handed starting corps. To get Keough, who was 2-3 with a 5.52 ERA, the Yankees gave up two minor leaguers — pitcher Ben Callahan and first baseman-designated hitter Marshall Brant.

NEEDS PITCHING

Cardinals manager White Herzog said he made the Hernandez deal because the team needed pitching. He said he would use Allen, who has both started and relieved this season, next Tuesday night against the Mets.

"It's not often that you get have the opportunity to acquire a player of the caliber of Keith Hernandez," said

Frank Cashen, Mets' general manager. "When we had the chance to make the trade, we had to seize it."

"I wasn't shocked that I traded," said Hernandez. "I was shocked that it was to the Mets."

Cruz, a fixture at second base for Seattle since the Mariners came into the American League in 1977, leads the majors with 33 stolen bases and has stolen 290 bases in 349 attempts lifetime for an .831 percentage, the second-best mark in baseball history. He has a .243 lifetime batting mark and is hitting .254 with two homers and 12 RBI this season.

Bernazard, 26, was hitting .262 with two home runs and 62 RBI for the White Sox. He leads the White Sox with 61 hits, 16 doubles and five sacrifice flies and has a career batting mark of .259 with Chicago and Montreal Expos.

Duran attempts to redeem himself tonight in bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Duran, fighting in the twilight of what has been a legendary boxing career, reaches back for one more dawn tonight, challenging unbeaten Davey Moore for the World Boxing Association junior middleweight championship.

The two-time champion comes into the fight at Madison Square Garden on his 32nd birthday in what many Duran-watchers say is the best condition of his life, eager for a chance to redeem himself after the loss of his welterweight title to Sugar Ray Leonard 2½ years ago.

A roller-coaster adventure with the scales apparently led to Duran's downfall against Leonard in New Orleans on Nov. 25, 1980. Frustrated by his opponent's dancing and smirking, Duran threw up his hands and walked away in the eighth round of their bout, saying, "No mas, no mas," and surrendering the welterweight crown he had taken the previous June in Montreal.

That defeat and subsequent losses against Wilfred Benitez in a bid for the World Boxing Council super welterweight title and unheralded Kirkland Laing, left Duran apparently ready for boxing's scrap heap.

But he has bounced back under promoter Bob Arum, outpointing Jimmy Batten and then knocking out Pipino Cuevas to gain a shot at Moore's crown.

"I am the best," Duran said, "I will demonstrate that Thursday night."

MOORE DISAGREES

"The best, huh," said champion Moore. "That's why he's the challenger."

"He earned this chance by beating Cuevas," said Luis Spada, Duran's manager.

Moore laughed derisively at that. "There's an attack of lunacy going around," said the champion, who celebrated his 24th birthday last week.

Duran appears rock-hard at 154 pounds and people who have watched his training sessions say he has never been in better condition.

Moore was just seven years old when Duran had his first pro fight, March 8, 1967, and was only 13 when the Panamanian won his first championship by knocking out Kenny Buchanan to capture the world lightweight crown in the Garden on June 26, 1972.

This will be Duran's 80th pro bout. He has won 75, 56 by knockouts, and lost four.

Moore is 12-0 with a string of nine knockouts. He won the title Feb. 2, 1982, knocking out Tadashi Mihara of Japan in six rounds. Since then, he has defended his crown with knockouts of Charlie Weir, Ayub Kallule and Gary Guiden last Jan. 29, the same day that Duran disposed of Cuevas.

Tour players agree that Oakmont will be tough

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Seve Ballesteros agree on one thing — for the most part, the driver stays in the bag during the 83rd United States Open golf championship which began today.

The rough is so deep, so severe, if a player challenges it with the driver "he's out of his tree," Nicklaus said.

Ballesteros of Spain, who became a solid favorite here when he won the Westchester tournament last Sunday, said he used a one-iron off the tee 11 times and the driver only on the three par-five holes on treacherous Oakmont during his final practice round Wednesday.

"You don't hit the driver very often," said Nicklaus, who will be seeking the record fifth American national championship that was denied him by Tom Watson's dramatic chip-in a year ago at Pebble Beach.

By eliminating the driver "they've taken an awful lot of the gamble out of the golf course," Nicklaus said. "They've forced you to play safe. As a result, the scores are going to be lower."

But Ballesteros, 26, the winner of two Masters and a British Open crown, predicted scores will be high enough. "The fairways are very narrow. There is too much rough. The greens are very fast. You cannot chip. Maybe two over (par) will win."

STEVE GOOD ENOUGH?

"Steve is a very good player," said Nicklaus, 43, seeking to add to his record 19 major titles. "But he hasn't yet proved he can win on an Open course."

Most leading players agreed not many in the field of 146 pros and 10 amateurs have a shot at the title. The number, generally estimated at 20, is limited by the severity of the course, which Watson said is the toughest he has seen.

Expos ride Dawson's booming bat

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ray Burris, who lost 35 pounds with an off-season fitness program, posted his first victory as a starter since October, 1981, as Montreal Expos defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 7-4 in a National League baseball contest Wednesday night.

Andre Dawson, raising his average to .335, drove in four runs with a pair of hits, including his second home run in as many nights, while Tim Lincecum scored three times as the Expos remained a game behind division-leading St. Louis Cardinals.

"I was pleased that I was able to go out and win with mediocre stuff," said Burris, 2-2, who surrendered 11 hits in lasting 71-3 innings before Jeff Reardon came on for his ninth save.

Burris was 0-11 as a starter while winning four of 18 decisions last year, then decided it was time to shape up. "Doing my job is not an effort now," said the former Chicago Cubs' pitcher.

"I was carrying too much excess baggage. I didn't feel good about myself. My self-esteem was poor."

"I went from doing 25 sit-ups a day to 1,200, four sets of 300 each. The biggest thing was getting through the pain. It really disciplined me as an individual. I learned that no matter how the body feels, the mind can override that. That helps me when I'm pitching."

RAINES IS THE KEY

The Expos won the final two games of the three-game series against the Pirates as Raines scored six runs, three each night.

"Raines is the key to our offense," said Gary Carter, who contributed a run-scoring single. "When he gets on, it's up to the other guys to drive him in, and Andre Dawson had another big night."

Dawson went 2-for-3 and hit a two-run single as the Expos scored four runs in the fifth inning against loser Jim Bibby, 2-7, to take a 6-3 lead. Al Oliver added a run-scoring double and Warren Cromartie drove in the other fifth inning run with a ground out.

Dawson hit his 11th homer of the season in the seventh inning.

The Pirates managed 13 hits, but stranded 11 runners and failed to score in the second inning after loading the bases with one out while holding a 3-1 lead.

Québec regions get a new map to grow by

"The accent is on 'regional'... the CRDs, CLSCs — the whole alphabet soup."

Québec Planning and Development Minister François Gendron has been charged with the task of making order out of the province's chaotic 'alphabet soup' of regional planning, development and promotional agencies, and at the same time with aiming the province gently in the direction of regional government.

The minister is currently touring the province explaining his study, Le Choix des Régions, which outlines his suggestions, including a remake of the Québec map. Wednesday Gendron was in Sherbrooke.

By Michael McDevitt

SHERBROOKE — The Québec government has stepped up its plans for the decentralization of government activities with the announcement of a plan to increase local participation in regional development and planning.

François Gendron, Minister of State Responsible for Planning and Regional Development, has recommended in a just-released policy paper that a new government body, the Conseil Régional de Concertation et d'Intervention (CRCI), be formed in each region designated by the government. The CRCI will be responsible for co-ordinating all parties involved in regional development and will act as a link between the government and these parties to encourage regional economic development. The plan calls for a redrawing of regional maps more along the lines of Regional County Municipalities (MRCs) and will require the active participation of MRC governments in shaping development policy.

The CRCI will consist of representatives from local municipal government, private enterprise, labor and agriculture and educational institutions. According to Gendron, it will be responsible for laying out priorities and schedules, and will be mandated to shape development policy reflective of regional characteristics, resources and requirements. It will also be responsible for supervising funded projects and making sure they conform to their mandates.

Gendron says the CRCI will be responsible for some funds of its own but will largely be concerned with making recommendations to provincial Ministries responsible for giving financial aid for certain projects. "In the first year," he says, "each CRCI will have a budget of up to $250,000. This will largely be used for research and feasibility studies. The CRCI will not usually be the decision-making body, but will serve a very important consultative function."

Gendron chaired an interministerial committee which spent over a year studying the problems of regional development. He says the plan is in ideal accord with the government's stated decentralization policy, which calls for more local participation in provincial government activities. He says it will enable local people to have a greater impact on activities in their region, and help make these activities more relevant to regional needs. "The kind of people who will get involved in this sort of thing will have a much clearer idea of what is needed regionally and will be able to come up with a more subjective view of what kind of project is worth while," he says.

"This enables projects which are particularly adapted to certain regions more likely to happen, and will tend to ensure that the government gets its money's worth."

Gendron says the CRCI will perform many of the duties presently carried out by the Conseil Régional de Développement, and expects the latter institutions to gradually absorb themselves into the larger, more comprehensive CRCI. In some regions, he says, the CRCI will merely be an expansion of the CRD. He also says the government will expect other public and para-public social services to adapt their operations to conform with the territory and goals of the

Gendron says he expects a great deal of participation from MRC leadership and says the CRCI should not become merely an executor of government policy. "On the contrary," he says, "as far as regional development is concerned, we expect it (the CRCI) to help shape policy. Their influence will be very important."

Gendron says in setting up the new body the government will not be abdication its own responsibilities, but will rather be making itself more responsive and effective in encouraging economic development. He says the CRCI's make-up — chosen entirely by local representatives — will help guarantee that government energy and resources will be spent in a way that will be meaningful and productive, and in response to regional needs. "The accent is on the 'regional'," says Gendron. "We expect the CRCI to be able to co-ordinate the activities of the CRD, the CLSCs the CRC — that whole alphabet soup. It will become an integrated alphabet."

Gendron says that by co-ordinating the activities of different government departments and agencies, the CRCI will allow them to become not only more meaningful but less expensive as well. "People will be getting what they need, and there will be little waste and duplication."

Gendron's plans are outlined in a working paper entitled The Choice of Regions, which will be presented to the Québec Cabinet for study. While he says there will be certain changes and clarifications, he expects his suggestions to be listened to very carefully. "There were eight ministers involved in our committee and we have given the matter very serious thought. We think it's a good plan and one that fits the needs of the people and the policy of the government. It will be up to the people to get involved and make it work. The government can't dictate that."

François Gendron: Not trying to avoid our responsibilities. The people who live and work in the regions have a better idea of what is needed than some guy in Québec City.

How will the MRCs function in the new, decentralized Québec?

SHERBROOKE — In announcing the government's plans for regional development and indicating that the County Regional Municipalities (MRCs) will be expected to play a major role in his new scheme, Planning and Regional Development Minister François Gendron has once again focussed attention on the MRCs and has raised the question of how these institutions are supposed to function in a new 'decentralized' Québec.

Gendron says the MRC involvement in his Conseil Régional de Concertation et d'Intervention (CRCI) will ensure that decisions made by government agencies will be relevant to the particular region. He says the MRC as a 'regional government' is best qualified to understand the needs of its region and can act as a link between the government and the people.

Opponents of increased MRC responsibilities, on the other hand, argue that unless certain guarantees are made, local elected officials could become mere extensions of government agencies and unofficial enforcers of government policy.

MRC council members (mayors of the municipalities that make up the MRC) have indicated that unless these guarantees are forthcoming the MRCs are reluctant to accept new responsibilities. They fear that unless proper resources are provided, the MRCs might end up doing government work, and bearing the responsibility while being inadequately funded.

Jacques O'Bready, ex-mayor of Sherbrooke and a former prefect of the Sherbrooke MRC, says that the MRC concept is a good one, but adds that 'decentralization' is a word that means different things to different people. "If the government decides that it means the MRC is responsible for carrying out all these projects then it will have to make sure the resources are there. The MRCs can't afford to take on all kinds of new things without being properly funded."

Gendron says the government is not trying to force local officials into doing its job, but rather trying to set up a system whereby the government can be more responsive to regional needs. The development minister says that by involving the MRCs, the government feels it can take advantage of their knowledge of the region and put its resources to the best possible use. "Every region is different," he says, "and the people who live and work there have a much better idea of what is needed than some guy in Québec City."

Gendron says the government will make sure the MRCs have enough money to do their job properly. "They'll be getting up to a quarter of a million dollars the first year," he says. "That will enable them to run a good show. Their administrative needs will be taken care of." Gendron says CRCI projects will be funded by the relevant ministries and will not be paid for by the CRCI or the MRCs. "We're not trying to avoid our responsibilities," he says, "we are trying to carry them out more efficiently."

Despite assurances from Gendron and other ministers, however many MRC councils remain concerned. "It just means more work for people who are already trying to do too much," says O'Bready. "But if they (the government) can make sure the MRCs are properly funded, they can do a lot of good."

Women's Institute members hold regular meetings

FORDYCE — The regular meeting of the Fordyce Women's Institute met in the United Church on June 1, with 28 members present. Mrs. Verna Patterson, 2nd Vice-President, welcomed all members and especially Mrs. Stowe who had spent the winter in Florida.

Motto: Life is most froth and bubble, but two things stand like stone. Kindness is another's trouble, courage is your own.

ASTROGRAPH HAS BEEN DELAYED IN THE MAIL

The new library hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday to Friday. Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Here are some titles picked at random from the new books on the library shelves: Vanishing Point by Victor Canning — English thriller by this master story-teller whose last book was "Black Flamingo". A brilliant French artist and skillful forger learns some surprising things about himself when his mother dies. The mafia, adventure, romance.

State's Evidence by Stephen Greenleaf — The third mystery set in California in the Tanner series, after "Grave Error" and "Death Bed". A gorgeous model had disappeared. Street gang violence.

The Final Throw by Michael Gilbert — By one of the masters of the classic English murder mystery. Author of "Death of a Favorite Girl" and "Crime in London".

Bergerac by Michael Harwick — Set on the English Channel island of Jersey this novel is the basis for a BBC T.V. series which is now playing on the American Entertainment Channel. Love and crime.

The Scorched Wood People by Rudy Wiebe — Novel. This is the story of Louis Riel and Gabriel Dumont and the Northwest rebellions. The author's latest book, "Temptations of Big Bear", was the winner of the Governor General's Award for Fiction.

Tribal Justice by Clark Blaise — Short stories by an American transplanted to Montreal.

Where I Used To Play On The Green — Lynn Hughes — By an

English poet, a first novel, set in Yorkshire at the time of the Industrial Revolution.

IN THE NON-FICTION SECTION

Vedi by Ved Mehta — The author was born in India in 1934. At the age of four he became blind. This is the story of a courageous boy and man who now lives in the U.S.A. and has been publishing articles and books since 1957.

Computers on the Job by Heather Menzies — An explanation in non-technical terms of how the micro-computer, or chip, makes it possible to automate many routine jobs. Areas discussed are: office work, the "Information Society" and Career Paths. The author is Canadian and has already had published "Women and Chips".

Scribble, Scribble, Notes on the Media by Norah Ephron — the author, who lives in New York, speaks her mind very frankly in this, her second collection of thoughts on the media.

The Miracle of Dunkirk by Walter Lord — In May, 1940, some 400,000 allied troops lay pinned against the coast of Flanders. Hitler's advancing tanks were only 10 miles away. Walter Lord, Princeton scholar, tells the story.

Pain Control, The Bethesda Program by Bruce Smoller, M.D., Brian Schulman, M.D. — In this self-help guide, Drs. Smoller and Schulman describe specific techniques that have helped patients conquer chronic pain.

Mrs. Cyril E. Rolfe 884-5458

The Christmas Club met on Tuesday evening at Mrs. Laura Fleury's with nine members present. The evening was spent playing 500 and Uno with Mrs. Reta Downes winning at 500 and Mrs. Vera Willard the winner at Uno. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Ona Gilbert.

The community was shocked to learn of the sudden death of Mr. Shirley Gilbert on May 10. Sympathy is extended to his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nicholson of Napanee, Ont., were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McConnell. The McConnells spent several days with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Millar in Melbourne and visited other friends there and in South Durham. Frank was given a surprise birthday party by his niece Miss Audrey Millar, which was much enjoyed.

DUNHAM

In last month's Dunham W.I. report, a very descriptive report was made of a European Agricultural Trip of which Thelma Doherty showed slides, and gave a talk on.

Due to this, she has been receiving numerous calls to show these to other groups.

She presented these to the Dunham group as a member of this organization and as a favour to the Agriculture convenor of this group. She would, however, like it known that it is not, nor was it her intentions to take these to other groups, and feels she will have to decline the offer, if other groups approach her.

Thank you, Barbara E. Harvey

On Sunday, June 5, the infant daughter of Luigi and Alison Popiel was received into the Dunham United Church.

She received the names Meghan Anne Marja Popiel, and was beautifully attired in a lovely hand-crocheted white outfit, made by a friend of the infant's mother.

Meghan, however, was unconcerned about what she was wearing, or what was going on, as she slept through the beautiful ceremony and the ringing of the church bell as she was being blessed.

SOUTH STUKELY

Myrtle Hilliker 297-2535

Mrs. Irene Jackson and the Misses Grace and Alice Ashton of Waterloo were calling on Frances, Molly, Joyce and Errol George.

Mrs. O. Gamache of Waterloo and Mrs. Myrtle McLellan and son Stewart were Mother's Day dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Martin at Pigeon Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Blampin of Maniwaki were Mother's Day guests of Mrs. Lucy Wright.

Mrs. Hattie Smith of Granby recently spent a day with her cousin, Mrs. Mildred Bowring.

Mrs. Gladys Hayes of the Nesbitt Anglican Residence, Cowansville, was a weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Savage and Jo Ann, also called on Mrs. Mildred Bowring and Mrs. Myrtle Hilliker.

EASTMAN

Mrs. Eric Hallam 297-2616

Sincere sympathy is extended to Mrs. Quilliams and family in the sudden death of their husband and father Donald Quilliams.

David Ewens of Ottawa was a recent weekend guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Ewens. Other recent guests were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bracey of Kingston, Ont.

Mrs. Margaret Baranek accompanied her daughter, Miss Dorothy Baranek to Sherbrooke to visit her nephew and nieces Arthur, Margaret and Alice Green for an afternoon. While Miss Baranek of Montreal was spending a week's vacation with her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. James Quilliams and family have returned to their home in Michigan, U.S.A. after being called here by the death of his father, Don Quilliams.

Guy Booth was in Waterloo to visit the funeral home and attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, the late Norman Williams on May 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers of Granby have returned to their cottage at Silver Lake for the summer.

Billy Armstrong of Pointe Claire spent the weekend at his parents' cottage at Long Pond.

Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson spent a recent weekend in Greenfield Park with his daughter and family.

BISHOPTON

Mrs. Cyril Rolfe

Mrs. G. Smith has returned home after visiting her daughter Mrs. Iona Clare and niece Mrs. Cindy Dupuis in St. Hubert. She also attended the graduation of her granddaughter Brenda and grandson David Clare at Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. She also attended a birthday gathering for her sister, Victoria Keating at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Keating in St. Bruno and the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Y. Dupuis in St. Hubert.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Lesard have been Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Veilleux and children of St. Catharines, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Poulin and Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Poulin and children of Valcourt, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Veilleux and Gaston Biron of Sherbrooke and Mrs. Ivy Cairns.

Father's Day gift ideas boil down to "tick-talk"

When it comes to getting a very special gift for the man of the house, a watch can be the perfect answer, suggests the Jewelry Industry Council.

Even if Dad does have a watch, chances are he'll more than welcome another—either a sports watch or a dress watch, or a watch for special uses.

Remember, styles in watches have changed greatly in the past few years and, if he still is wearing one of the older models, he'll love one of the new dime-thin, beautifully designed and excellently crafted quartz watches of today.

Visit your jeweler

The Council suggests a visit to your favorite jeweler, who will be happy to show you a range of new watches in analog and digital models, and some with day-date readouts, in all price ranges.

New watches are meant to complement a man's attire, and the watch bracelet is designed to be part of the watch itself, giving the appearance of a piece of jewelry as well as functioning as a practical accessory.

Popular styles

Current favorites are gold-faced analog watches with sleek gold metal bands that have either a mesh or fabric-like appearance. In leathers, reptile and fine calf in black are most popular.

Of course, if Dad's a golfer, there are many fine rugged sports watches and, if he's a fisherman or scuba diver, he'll welcome a waterproof watch. Dad Scoutmasters can always use a watch with a sweep hand for timing races, etc.

Give Dad the time of his life this Father's Day with the gift of a handsome watch. Engrave it "To Dad with Love" to let him know he's the man of the hour every hour, the Council suggests.

WHEN YOUR HEART BELONGS TO DADDY—There's no nicer way to say "I love you" on Father's Day than with the gift of a new watch, suggests the Jewelry Industry Council. New dime-thin quartz watches not only keep accurate time, but serve as an important fashion accessory, with smart metallic bracelets or handsome reptile bands.

SHARPENING, SANDING AND SHAPING jobs now can be easily accomplished by Dad with the Sharp 'N Sand. The addition of an electric drill turns the Sharp 'N Sand into a work center for sharpening knives, scissors, tools and lawnmower blades. Black & Decker reports that the product also is handy for repointing screwdrivers and sanding rough-edged boards and moldings.

Sensible gifts for Dad, the handyman

Nowadays, doing more with less has become a daily test of American ingenuity. People need and want the most for their money, even when buying gifts for the family.

Father's Day especially is a time for no-frills gift giving, because Dad often leads the way in home conservation measures, usually by doing more home maintenance and repair projects himself.

Power tools make the perfect Father's Day gift for a Dad who doubles as home handyman.

Chances are Dad already has an electric drill in his home workshop. If so, he surely would appreciate a versatile new tool from Black & Decker that converts most drills into work centers for sharpening knives, scissors, lawnmower blades, chisels, axes and splitting wedges. It's called the Sharp 'N Sand.

Dad can also use Sharp 'N Sand for repointing screwdrivers, sanding rough-edged boards and moldings, shaping miters and squaring the ends of wood, pipe, tubing or plastic. Sharp 'N Sand is designed with a drill bracket that allows the unit to be mounted on a board for portability or bolted to a workbench.

Using standard 3" x 24" sanding belts, the sander features a unique tracking device that prevents belt slippage and maintains correct belt alignment. A sharpening guide will assist Dad in obtaining correct sharpening angles.

The calibrated work table of the Sharp 'N Sand can be adjusted from near zero to a full 90 degrees. Dust is removed by inserting a shop or household vacuum cleaner hose into a special connection in the sander guard.

Gift-giving habits are changing to reflect a more conservative time in America. A power tool for Father's Day will help Dad keep pace with the times and the spiraling costs of running a home.

Wear a rose on Father's Day

A long, long time ago, Mrs. John Bruce Dodd picked out the Red Rose as the flower of Father's Day. So, for nearly three generations, the Red Rose has been a kind of official floral symbol. Perhaps, unchanged, because the rose is America's favorite flower, according to a study done by Roses, Inc., a couple of years ago.

So, come Father's Day on June 21, sport a Red Rose in your lapel or on your dress when you go to see Dad. He'll get the significance.

Giving him a bunch of red roses might not be the best gift idea for him, but lots of Dads putter around the garden these days, and more and more like a little greenery around the office, or wherever they work.

A novel thought and, of course, a gift that keeps bringing pleasure all year long, and keeps reminding him you really thought of him on Father's Day.

According to James C. Krone, Executive Director of the Rose Organization, "The United States is one of the few nations in the world that does not have an official flower." But, he hopes that Congress will some day follow the "people's choice" by making the rose the National Flower of the country.

(If your father is deceased, the wearing of a White Rose is the official symbol of remembrance.)

Wilton presents nine beautifully designed Armetale Mugs at a savings worth celebrating! Each mug is hand-crafted with quality characteristics found only in "Armetale" metal. For instance, place the mug in a bed of ice in your freezer compartment. Wait a minute. Take it out. It'll be icy cold and will stay that way as long as you add cold liquids. They're tough! They won't break, crack, chip or dent. And they're non-toxic and safe to use. Give 'em a try—start a collection! The time is right—and so are the prices.

There's no time like the present to show Dad your appreciation

Remember the time when the ideal father was considered the breadwinner, the handyman, the "king of the house?"

Over the years, Dad's role has changed. Today, he shares household chores, cares for the children—and makes Mom's life a whole lot easier.

Come Father's Day and the opportunity to show your appreciation, what nicer way is there to say thanks than with a good-looking watch? Especially one he can count on to keep up with his busy routine.

Low-cost selection

Timex has done its part to make Dad's life easier with an array of cost-conscious timepieces.

There's a wide selection to choose from—for work, for play, for a night on the town. Styled with a distinctive jewelry look, Timex's quartz collection features slim cases, easy-to-read dials, and leather or metal bands.

Many come with sweep-second hands and calendar or day/date windows. Precise timing is a must for the man on the move, and these watches can boast of superb accuracy.

Dad's delight

Dad will be delighted with a gift that regulates his active lifestyle: with an electronic quartz watch he won't waste a moment winding it.

TREAT DAD EXTRA-SPECIAL this Father's Day. Styled with an almost-square white dial, hour markers and a stainless steel band, this elegant Timex watch offers superb accuracy with no-wind convenience.

Dad deserves a gift that's different and entertaining

This Father's Day, there is something different you can give that will entertain for hours. With television viewing mysteriously on the decline, new forms of home entertainment have been gaining in popularity.

One of the fastest growing entries into the home entertainment market is scanning. Specifically, a scanner is a public service monitor radio designed to receive police, fire, weather and emergency calls as they happen.

Scanner product development has been keeping pace with more familiar electronic products, such as highly sophisticated stereo equipment.

The major difference is that scanners have achieved a high level of technological excellence while diminishing in price.

Computerized scanner

One such scanner is the Regency R1040, a fully computerized, programmable scanner capable of monitoring over 15,000 frequencies on the user's choice of 10 channels.

The R1040 features a touch sensitive keyboard located under the flip-top case so that any desired frequency may be programmed.

An important feature included with the R1040 is a special EARMON memory which permits frequencies to be stored indefinitely, even if power should be turned off or disconnected. The memory requires no batteries and is virtually permanent.

An advancing industry

In keeping with industry wide development, the Regency R1040 has been priced at the same level as 10 channel crystal-controlled units were 10 years ago.

GIVE YOUR DAD SOMETHING DIFFERENT this Father's Day, a scanner... A public service monitor radio designed to receive police, weather and emergency calls.

Grooming aids and fragrance make great Father's Day gifts

A well-turned-out Dad is a man who pays close attention to his personal grooming, notes the Men's Fashion Association, suggesting that grooming aids make dandy Father's Day gifts.

Today the old standard bay rum and witch hazel smell is just as out of date as spats and walking canes.

Currently, the shelves of men's stores are laden with preparations that not only stem from toiletry specialists, but also swank preparations bearing the names of famous designers whose sophisticated scents are keyed to the styling of their sleek wearables.

Masculine fragrance

There are almost as many men's fragrances as there are those for women but, of course, the men's are more masculine in character, to appeal to those fellows who are just as careful about the choices of their toiletries and grooming aids as they are about the selection of their clothes.

There are very light scents that knowing men select for businesswear, and there are more assertive types that meet the needs of social occasions. And, there are also musky scents that are said to be catnip for Moms.

One indication of the present importance of grooming aids is the fact that many well-known stores have their own collections bearing the logos of the establishment. And, that goes for citadels of conservatism as well as the swinging stores.

A great many men have collections of grooming aids, using them for variety or to suit the mood they may be in.

The basic men's grooming aids consist of shaving creams, after-shave lotions and hair grooming preparations.

The shaving creams include both lather and non-lather types and, of course, for those fellows who use electric shavers, there are pre-shave liquids that condition the whiskers to make the shave closer and easier.

Endless choices

The hair preparations serve a dual purpose; they condition the hair and hold it in place neatly through the day.

The after-shave lotions not only remove the sting that most men experience after shaving, but also provide them with a clean, fresh scent.

There are also skin conditioners of several kinds. Some are for men with dry skin, others are for fellows with oily skin, and there are still others that are right for normal skin. All of these, too, are pleasantly scented.

Scented bath soaps are also very popular and some of these are attached to ropes that make them ideal for use in the shower.

Range of scents

The variety of scents in men's grooming aids is wide enough to meet every taste. There are outdoorsy pine and leather scents, spicy scents, scents with a suggestion of the Orient, and many that are simply treats to the nose.

As an aid to giving Dad grooming gifts, many are packaged in comprehensive assortments, some of which are specially packaged for Father's Day.

Dunham Women's Institute members hold June meeting

DUNHAM — The meeting opened with the Salute to the Flag and the Mary Stewart Collect. Our hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Clarence Martin and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Stanley Martin.

Motto: We can all learn something from the parrot which is content to repeat what it hears, without trying to make a good story of it. Roll call: Which clause in the W.I. Creed do you find hardest to keep? Some of the members created a lot of humor with their candid observations.

Mrs. Ivan McLaughlin gave the secretarial minutes. The report of the treasurer was given by Mrs. L. Yates.

In lieu of our July 6th meeting, Darcy Vaughan will be showing slides, the trip to England by Massey Vanier students in March, at All Saints Church at 8 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend. All members will contribute food for the evening.

Mrs. E. Sherrer, one of the attending members at the Convention at Macdonald College, gave a report on Vegetable Gardening, one of the workshops during Thursday's session. Mrs. E. Staton gave an account of the food workshop she attended at the Convention. Mrs. I. Paterson reported on an article concerning Quebec government's investment involvement in foreign countries.

Mr. J. Harvey read an article from the Winnipeg Free Press. Mrs. Harvey presented a brochure on the current status of Dixville Home. Mrs. Yates read a letter from the W.I. group in Newfoundland. In future Dunham will be twinned with Saskatchewan and Saskatchewan with Newfoundland.

DWI has been invited to attend the Cleveland branch on August 6.

Mrs. D. Clark is selling the history of BMP Hospital which also contains many recipes, and knowledgeable information on various symptoms and illnesses.

The Dunham WI will be having a food sale on June 30 at the Domaine du Parc Shopping Centre, Cowansville, at 10 a.m. All members are asked to price their own wares, or whether a cake is white or chocolate, etc.

The August 3rd meeting will be held at the home of Myrtle Selby with the whole group acting as hostesses.

The Publications convenor was in charge of the program, and gave a report of her first experience attending the WI Convention.

We are happy to announce that the prize winners were Pearl Yates, once for a doily, Barbara Harvey, twice for her baby bunting and doily and Ruby Sherrer for a tea cloth. The handicrafts were outstanding, to me the velvet, silk and taffeta quilt and the beige dress had particular appeal.

There are very high standards set for competition. Be sure the toes of your sock and the size of the legs are not too tight. Judge criticized this point. If an article is supposed to measure 22 x 30, make sure your work is that, or she admits that she won't even study it. If a person crochets, to the radio, t.v. or telephone, etc., apparently it does, on occasion, show in the tension of the work. In embroidery, no threads must show, but I suppose every reader knows that.

Dunham's group presented a short skit, St. Peter At The Gate. Lou Staton was the saint, Barbara Harvey, Gabriel, Edna Johnson, the drunk who went to heaven, Myrtle Selby, the rich man who went to hell, Judy Montaigne, the imp who drove the rich man downstairs, Alice Farnam, the poor henpecked husband, and Pearl Yates, the overbearing wife, Mrs. Havelock, the motorcycle driver. The Heavenly Choir comprised Elda Martin, Esther Martin, Ruby Sherrer and Marion Robertson. They opened the scenes with renditions of Sweet Hour of Prayer, When the Saints Go Marching In, and When the Roll is Called Up Yonder. Marion Robertson sang Amazing Grace unaccompanied. There was a big applause from the audience, and the group created a lot of merriment with their performance. Lou Staton, garbed in all white and white beard was quite imposing. The imp in red with horns on his head and his long fork. The rich man was quite naty, the overbearing wife had a smashed bakstraw hat, a little too big for her head, and the henpecked husband had a big nose, black moustache and he was ushered into heaven with cloak placed on his shoulders, while his wife, much to her chagrin, was ushered downstairs. Pearl Yates' imaginative touch was very evident, she created two fine posts, representing the heavenly gates, and the imp's costume in red, while the heavenly choir and Gabriel wore white surprises and multicolored long skirts. St. Peter had a beautiful gold scroll, from which he read his pronouncements, and a very imposing large brass bell with which he ended his statements, and he reposed at a table with gold cover, surrounded by four baskets of multicolored flowers.

At the convention we were addressed by Senator Martha Bielish, who urged all women to stand up for their rights, and to make a list of all they, as women can do. She said each of us would have a new understanding of our capabilities. The computer can't replace women. She said volunteering for activities is one way to keep one's sanity in this world. We were also addressed by Dean Lloyd, who gave us a gracious welcome. Our accommodation was excellent, and the meals very tasty and simple. One had the opportunity to get acquainted with other ladies from other areas. There were musical interludes at different points in the session, to relieve tension or whatever. There was an aerobics workshop. Exercise is good for the heart and the cardiovascular system, but it also helps to maintain one's agility as one grows older. Exercising regularly helps one to feel good.

The hardanger embroidery workshop was very interesting, and of special interest to ladies who already can do embroidery. There was a computer workshop and an edible plant (weeds) group. Differing views presented, but each well presented.

Approximately 210 ladies attended the convention, in spite of a torrential storm, which made driving worrisome for a while, but the weather improved.

SAWYERVILLE Alice Wilson 889-2932

Mrs. Dorcas French of Sherbrooke was an overnight guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Spaulding and family and with them and Mrs. Judy Brooks visited the Craft Show here in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Danny Dingman of Burlington, Ont., spent ten days with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Shaughnessy. Mr. and Mrs. Barry Shaughnessy and son Kenneth of Milton, Ont., were guests at the same home and visited other relatives.

Guests of Mrs. Merina Cross and boys were Earl Laroche and son Earl Jr. and Miss Joanne O'Brien, all of Somerville, Mass. They also visited Mr. and Mrs. Burton Laroche and other relatives.

Stanley Bellam and Russell St. John of Shelburne, Vt., were weekend guests of Mrs. Edith Bellam.

Word has been received that Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Goode of Cambridge have a son Matthew, born June 9. A grandson for Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Goode and Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Spaulding.

Bury residents celebrate birthdays

BURY (NR) — Mrs. Mabel Sylvester was delightfully surprised on Friday evening, May 27, when she arrived at the Bury Legion Hall to find approximately 70 relatives and friends gathered to celebrate her 87th birthday a few days early. Her birthday was actually May 31st.

The evening was spent visiting and dancing to recorded music. Many family pictures were taken, made up of several groups of four generations.

Mrs. Sylvester received many lovely gifts, a generous amount of money, and good wishes for many more birthdays to come.

A delicious lunch was served by the family, highlighted by a birthday cake, iced in white and trimmed with pink flowers and green leaves, inscribed with "Happy 87th Birthday". The cake was made and decorated by Rosemary Lowe.

Out of town guests included her granddaughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Roy and family and her cousin, Allan Ross, all of Montreal

Miss Dorothy Montgomery of St. Paul's home celebrated her birthday early in May. Callers that day to extend their good wishes to her included Miss Janet Stevenson, Leslie and Gladys Wilkin, and Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, all of East Angus. Mrs. Margaret Little, Charlie Allan and Cathie Lank of Lennoxville.

A lovely birthday cake was served at suppertime, and Miss Montgomery received birthday wishes from all present.

Exceptional value in a high-style, 5-passenger Pontiac. Pontiac 2000 is spacious, comfortable, well-equipped. Standard features include reclining front bucket full-foam seats, centre console, deluxe steering wheel, side window defoggers, rear window defroster, bumper rub strips, bodyside mouldings, rally wheels, cut pile carpeting, heavy duty battery and much more. Besides the lowest-priced 2-door Coupe (shown), there are aerodynamically fine-tuned 4-door Sedans, 3-door Hatchbacks, 5-door Station Wagons and an upcoming 2-door Convertible. No wonder 1983 Pontiac 2000 enjoys a head start in a year other new subcompacts are finding tough going.

Economy, Pontiac's got it. Not only is Pontiac 2000 stylish and quality built, it is built to offer today's kind of efficient fuel consumption:

Combined Rating
7.4 L/100 km 38 MPG
with standard equipment.

These figures are estimates based on Transport Canada approved laboratory test methods. Your actual fuel consumption may vary.
