BRAZIL'S PRESIDENT ALL PREPARED FOR INSTANT FLIGHT

GOVERNOR URGES SAO PAULO PEOPLE TO DESERT CITY

Brazilian Officials Warn of Operations Against Rebels

GET FOREIGNERS OUT

Warning Says Attack Will Be Commenced At Once

BUENOS AIRES, July 26—(United Press)—President Benardes, of Brazil, is keeping a launch ready day and night, prepared to flee should the occasion warrant, according to reports brought by steamers from Rio de Janeiro.

Official Brazilian Government reports, however, show nothing to indicate such extreme gravity as this. They declare the figting around Sao Paulo is continuing virtually without change.

Border reports from rebel sources, say that disaffection is spreading to Government troops, who are restive and do not desire to be drafted to put down revolutionaries.

The rebels claim to have extended their lines northward. They have captured some unimportant villages.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(United News.)—An appeal calling upon the inhabitants at Sao Paulo, Brazil, to leave the city, in view of military operations planned by the Government forces against the rebels, has been broadcasted by airplanes and by radio by order of the Minister of War, Marshal Ztembryno De Carno, according to advices to the State Department.

There are many Americans at Sao Paulo, and this new turn of affairs may bring a protest from this Government but no indication as to whether the United States would take measures to protect its citizens there was given at the State Department when the message was made public. It came from Sheldon L. Crosby, Charge d'Affaires at Rio De Janeiro, and was dated Friday.

"The Government troops must act with freedom against the rebels who insists upon fighting under the moral protection of the civil population, the sacrifice of which we must avoid," the proclamation stated.

"I appeal to the noble and industrious people of Sao Paulo to abandon the city, leaving the rebels to their fate. This is a cruel necessity which must be accepted as imperious and is destined to put an end at once to the state of things created by this uprising which debases our credit as a cultured people.

"I hope that all will respond to this appeal so as to prevent suffering caused by the military operations which shall be carried on within a few days."

An earlier message to the State Department said that the departure of Americans wishing to leave Sao Paulo would be facilitated. It stated that American lives were in no greater danger than before and the revolutionary situation has not appreciably changed.

Calm prevailed throughout Thursday night on all fronts, according to a communique made public by the Brazilian Embassy here Friday.

"Our aviators have just completed reconnaisance of the new position of the rebels, who continue to yield ground under the action of the Government troops," it said.

A communique tonight, Thursday, stated that Government troops had local fights with the rebels which resulted in a great advance on our front, principally on our left wing where we captured numerous machine guns and made more than a hundred prisoners, most of them are foreigners: "The rebels" is said, "are constantly yielding more ground."

WATERWAYS PLAN TO GET START SOON

Joint Engineering Board to Consider Series of Questions

OTTAWA, Ont., July 26—(Star Special by Own Correspondent.)—The St. Lawrence-Great Lakes Navigation scheme will get off to a trial start in the next few weeks but it will not be a speedy one. Just before proroguing, Parliament made an appropriation of $100,000 to proceed with the Canadian end of the enterprise and at the present time, a section of the Joint Engineering Board are engaged in preparing what they think as a proper series of questions to be submitted to the board.

It will be necessary to submit these to the National advisory committees of the two countries which in turn will recommend them, amended or intact, to the respective Governments. Then the two Governments will commit the questions to the inquiry of the Joint Engineering Board.

The scope of the inquiry it is believed will be pretty well confined to the engineering rather than the economic phases of the situation. It will be necessary, for example to determine the question over which there has been much controversy and engineering differences namely whether there will be single or double stage development at the Long Sault. A general checking up of the plans heretofore projected will take place while the estimates will be brought up-to-date. A new phase of the inquiry will be the determination of the effect to be produced by the compensating works on the St. Lawrence in the harbor of Montreal and below.

It will be some time before the Ents inquiry considering thetwo sets of its inquiry considering thetwo sets of bodies, advisory committees and Government, which have to ratify its character and scope before it is begun.

This Woman Has An Unenviable Record Two Husbands Hang

MERIDIAN, Miss., July 26. — Frank Atkinson, and Clyde Greer yesterday paid with their lives for the murder last June of R. H. Bryant, whose body was found riddled with bullets near here after he had disappeared from home in company with Greer and Atkinson. It was the first time a white man had been legally hanged in Lauderdale County, and the only instance where two white men were ever hanged from the same scaffold in Mississippi The men, protesting their innocence to the last, walked calmly to the gallows.

The wives and children of the condemned men spent the morning with them. It was the second time Mrs. Atkinson had experienced the loss of a husband by hanging, her former husband, Allen Westbrook, having paid the death penalty nine years ago for the murder of her father and mother.

MAN. HOTEL OWNER GETS JAIL TERM

Winnipeg Court Decides To Stop Illicit Sale Of Liquor

APPEAL FILED

Provincial Govt's Ruling Strikes Consternation in "Trade" Circles

WINNIPEG, July 26.—(Star Special.)—Owners of Manitoba hotels may go to jail in future, if liquor is illegally sold on their property. This was the sensational turn of the Government's efforts to suppress widespread violation by Winnipeg hotels, yesterday when John B. Gray, prominent business man and owner of the Garrick Hotel, was committed to prison for three months by Provincial Magistrate Noble. Gray was taken so much by surprise that he was not in the court room when sentenced. His lawyers took it for granted that a fine would be imposed, as had been usual custom and commonly accepted practice. Gray was not taken to the cells, as notice of appeal was filed. His defence was that he could not be held responsible for the mere violation of the Temperance Act in a hotel he owned, but did not operate.

The Court said Gray was president of the controlling company, manager of company, and therefore responsible.

SOLVING PROBLEM.

If this decision is not overruled, police say it will solve the problem of dealing with the hotels that make little mystery of selling liquor. The action is wide-spread and when a conviction is obtained new owners of the bar appears and continues to sell even before the police have left the building.

A hurried conference of hotel owners was held last night. The sale of beer is quite general in most of the city hotels, and the police are simply unable to keep up with the switching of bar licenses, no matter how frequently raids are pulled off. Magistrate Noble says he proposes to make owners responsible for the lawful conduct of their property until overruled by a higher court.

CUBAN OFFICIALS REPLY TO CHARGES

Alleged Ill Treatment of Jamaicans is Case For Courts

HAVANA, Cuba, July 26 — (Associated Press) — Charges that British West Indian subjects have been ill-treated in Cuba have been investigated and found to be matters for action in civil courts and not for diplomatic intervention, says a statement to the press, issued by Secretary of State de Cespedes.

"The British version as published in London," the statement adds, "appeared to exaggerate the treatment given to the Jamaicans" and did not give the full details, including the Cuban viewpoint.

President Zayas, will send a message to congress on the subject and the department will issue a "gray book" giving all the correspondence.

ARCTIC SURVIVES IN BATTLE WITH SEA

OTTAWA, July 26.—(Canadian Press.) — The latest expedition of Captain J. W. Bernier on the SS. Arctic to the northern waters has encountered some difficulty but the report that the trip has had to be abandoned is untrue.

A radio message from the Arctic received by the Interior Department states that the ship was in a heavy storm and shipped so much water that the fires in the engine room were put out and progress stopped for a day. It was necessary to lighten the vessel by throwing over some of its coal supply, after which the voyage was proceeded with. There is sufficient fuel for the rest of the trip.

HON. J. S. MARTIN SAILS.

LONDON, July 26. — (Canadian Press.) — Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, sailed on the Montrose today.

COMING ELECTION MOST UNCERTAIN FOR MANY YEARS

Washington Already Violently Interested in Presidential Contest

LA FOLLETTE PUZZLE

Untested Strength of Third Candidate Greatly Adds To Complexity

WASHINGTON, July 26 — (Star Special)—Talk of a Canadian Minister and a real Canadian legation, which would carry on the increasingly important and numerous negotiations between the United States and Canada between Washington and Ottawa direct, instead of through London, has been revived by the announcement that Ireand was to have a Minister.

No formal move is expected, in the immediate future, certainly not in the absence in London of Secretary of State Hughes, though it is entirely within the realm of possibilities that Mr. Hughes is smoothing out some of the little perplexities involved in the situation by personal contact with Dowing street.

Interest in Washington, however as is quite customary at this season of every fourth year, is centered so violently in politics that it is difficult to get attention even for what is happening to the Dawes report. Everything is being weighed in terms of what it will mean at the forthcoming election in November, when a President of the United States, a vice president, thirty-three senators, and the entire House of Representatives will be chosen.

LAFOLLETTE PUZZLE.

The situation is more intense than usual, even in presidential years, because of the complication of an independent ticket—that of Lafollette and Wheeler—injected in the old familiar fight between the Republicans and the Democrats. Each of the old parties, through its leaders, is proclaiming that the third ticket will run very well, and that it will draw its strength almost entirely from the other old party. The truth, obviously is somewhere between these two claims. Viewed coldly, the Lafolette ticket will draw very heavily from the Republican party in those states where there is a really good chance of his carrying—such as Wisconsin, Minnesota, the two Dakotas, while in another state he is generally conceded, Montana. Lafollette will draw more heavily from the Democrats. This is chiefly because the Democratic party has almost disappeared in these states, while the element to which Lafollette has an especial appeal, operating in some states as the Farmer-party and as the non-partizan league has become the power which challenges the old Republican organization.

The Democrats are claiming on the other hand, that Lafollette will draw more heavily from the Republicans in such states as Illinois, which is terribly important because of its 29 electoral votes, New York, and New Jersey, which have 45 and 14 electoral votes respectively.

IT SAVED WILSON.

This country has not had a real three cornered fight since 1912, when Theodore Roosevelt headed a third party ticket which resulted in President Taft, running for re-election on the Republican ticket, winning only two states, Vermont and Utah, with a total of eight electoral votes between them. The third party in that election made it easy for Woodrow Wilson, for Roosevelt in a great many states normally Republican or doubtful so split the Republican vote that the Democratic party got the electoral votes. Wilson thus became President with really a minority of the popular vote, but with a perfectly tremendous majority of the lectoral votes, caused by his having the lead in so many states.

There are many differences apparent in a comparison of the fight this year with that of 1912, but the most important perhaps is that Lafollette is not heading a third party at all, but merely an independent ticket for the offices of President and Vice-President. Thus Lafollette avoids the possible embarrassments—and also the organization possibilities—of having running on the ticket with him in the various states candidates for members of the House of Representatives, for Governor, for the legislatures, for U.S. senators and all sorts of local offices.

As it is, however, he must have candidates for Presidential electors it being remembered that people of the various states vote for electors, one for each member of the House and Senator their state has in Washington, and that it is these electors who subsequently elect the President and Vice-President.

MAY GO TO SENATE.

So the question this year really is whether Lafollette can prevent either Coolidge or Davis from getting 266 electors, or electoral votes. Unless some candidate does get that many, the election will be thrown into the House of Representatives, and inter, if that body deadlocks—as most observers agree it would under such circumstances—into the Senate which would be limited in its choice to the two candidates for Vice-President getting the most electoral votes.

Another curious phase of the election this year is that the League has been practically abandoned as an issue by the Democrats. The Republicans accepted it as final that this country would not join the League, in framing their platform. The Democrats provided for a referendum. One of the leading advocates of the League, former Justice John H. Clarke, of the Supreme Court, commented on as follows in a letter just made public:

"The platform declaration of the Republican party against the League of Nations and the attaching of the impossible referendum provision to the Democratic declaration in favor of the League will result in placing our country permanently on the wrong side—I mean on the war side—of the greatest moral question of our time, unless the friends of peace shall promptly unite to prevent it. If, through the world co-operation campaign, the friends of peace would unite and act upon the declaration of the Methodist Episcopal quadrennial conference, that "the cause of peace is dearer to us than party allegiance," our country may yet be placed on the right side of this great question and contribute greatly to the organization of the world for peace.

PILGRIMS FLOCK IN THOUSANDS TO ST. ANNE'S SHRINE

SIX CURES REPORTED

Deaf Mute Said to Have Been Rid of Affliction

STE ANN DE BEAUPRE, July 26 —(Star Special) — More than 25,000 people are here today attending the Feast of Ste. Anne. The fact that the old Basilica has not yet been reconstructed is all that prevents the spectacle having all the splendor of former years.

During the week hundreds of people have been coming in from all parts of the country to attend the preparatory mission but since yesterday the flow has been so great that hotels are overcrowded.

Cripples of all descriptions with hope in their eyes have been seeking the intervention of the great Thaumaturgus, some of them spending part of the night in one of the numerous chapels, while others have been awaiting for hours their turn to go to Confession. The Redemptorist Fathers spent a busy evening and were engaged until an early hour this morning in answering calls from the pilgrims.

At five o'clock this morning, bishops, prelates and priests from all parts of Canada and the United States started to say mass at the numerous altars installed in the St. Anne temporary church. Some of the priests are accompanying pilgrimages and large parties from Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. As usual the New England States are well represented, Lewiston, Holyoke, Boston and Worcester, having sent their usual contingents. There are also numerous pilgrims from Chicago, Portland, Baltimore, St. Louis, Minneapolis and some sections of the Centre States.

In conversation with some of the Redemptorist Fathers, The Star was told that there were more cripples than usual at the Shrine, and they present a touching scene. As usual in the course of the services, cries of "Miracle, Miracle" have been heard but up to noon none of the alleged cures had been given the approbation of the Redemptorist Fathers. However, a report has it that there have been six cures. Among those reported cured is a young lady from the United States, who is claimed to have been deaf and dumb for years. The Redemptorist Fathers however, though they admit they have heard of that cure, have refused to make any official declaration.

Farmers living in the vicinity of St. Anne de Beaupre have been called upon to accommodate some of the pilgrims during the night, so crowded were the hotels. The Redemptorist Fathers, in addition to offering shelter in their monastery, have also left the temporary church open during the whole night, so that some people took refuge there from the rather cool weather.

The preliminary procession last evening and the services marking the close of the preparatory novena were very impressive yesterday. Four American pilgrims were given the honor of carrying the statue of the Saint during the procession. Among those in the cortege wore several bishops, including His Grace Mgr. Forbes, of Joliette, and some of the heads of religious orders in Canada and the United States.

After hundreds of masses had been chanted and thousands had received the Holy Communion at 10.30, His Grace Mgr. Forbes chanted a solemn high mass in the temporary chapel. Rev Fathers Dumas and Baril, of Montreal and El Paso Texas, attended as deacon and sub-deacon of honor, while His Eminence Cardinal Begin was present at the throne, draped in his vestments of Prince of the Catholic Church. Attending His Eminence were Rev. Fathers Barron and Pintal, heads of the Redemptorist Order in America. The sanctuary presented a scene of unique splendor.

Only a small portion of the pilgrims found place in the temporary church, thousands surrounding the church and taking part in the singing of the hymns to the Saint. The spectacle is always an impressive one, but in the simplicity of the new temporary church, as compared with the splendor of the former Basilica, the pilgrims found another attraction.

This afternoon at 3.30 o'clock vespers will be chanted, followed by the benediction of the Holy Sacrament.

Unless the weather changes these ceremonies wil be conducted in the open air. A temporary altar has been erected at the point where the old Basilia stood before its destruction and where the new $5,000,000 one will stand.

Of all the ceremonies, however, the most impressive one will be the procession with torches this evening through the immense parterres of the Redemptorist Fathers. It is estimated that the procession will be a longer one than for some years past, due to the fact that pilgrims are remaining over the week-end and have been able to come in larger numbers taking advantage of the half day holiday and Sunday.

There will be 25,000 people in the procession, it is estimated.

Contrary to custom, the celebration will last until tomorrow when impressive religious services will be held.

HIGH OFFICIAL OF CHURCH ARRIVES

QUEBEC, July 26. —(Star Special) —His Excellency Mgr. Pietro Di Maria, apostolic delegate, arrived in town yesterday afternoon, and is a guest at the Cardinal's Palace until Monday evening. Tomorrow His Grace will attend the celebration in Cap Sante on the occasion of the tercentenary of the foundation of that parish and on Monday he will be guest of honor at a State dinner at Spencerwood.

Under Guard

Lorenzo Latore, aged 33, of 225 Dalhousie street, lies, with a bullet in his thigh, guarded by police in the Montreal General Hospital. In a fracas last night it is alleged he knocked down Michael Delicatti, aged 55, who died from a fractured skull. Latore may be charged with murder.

MORGAN DEMANDS LOAN SECURITY

SAILS FOR EUROPE

Would Not Undertake the Flotation Unless Investors are Safeguarded

NEW YORK, July 26 — (United Press.) — Demanding adequate security for American investors in German bonds as the basis for the sale of the bonds in this country, J. P. Morgan, sails today for England on the Atlantic Transport Liner Minnewaska, where he expects to advise the allied statesmen at the London reparation conference.

The banker made it clear, in a formal statement that he was not going in an official capacity, that this was his annual vacation, but if he were asked, he would be glad to advise with the members of the conferees.

HIS STATEMENT FOLLOWS:

"I am sailing for my annual holiday, in accordance with plans made months ago. My trip has nothing to do with the London conference. Our position with reference to the matters now being discussed in that conference is very simple. We have been requested by the allied governments to advise as to what, in our opinion, are the necessary basis for the sale of Germany's bonds to American investors.

"In response to that request, we have given our advice. We have no desire, nor is it within our province, to make any political suggestions, much less to attempt to enforce any political views. We addressed ourselves solely to the question asked us and it is for the allied governments to determine whether what we believe to be the conditions of the American investment markets can be met.

"It goes without saying that, as bankers, we should not ask the American investor to buy German bonds unless and until the allies have, in their own time, in their own way, and for their own reasons, determined upon a policy which will, in our opinion, give security to the bondholders. If this very simple and obvious fact is borne in mind it will, I think, be found that most of the questions now under discussion answer themselves."

CANADA-CUBA MEET IN TENNIS FINALS

Canadians Must Break Even to Play Japan for Cup

OTTAWA, July 26. — (Canadian Press.) — The weather is clear and bright for the final day in the Davis lawn tennis cup tie between Canada and Cuba. Canada must win one of the two singles matches today to win the series and earn the right to play Japan in Montreal on August 7, 8, and 9.

The first match of the day will be between Willard Crocker, Canada, and R. Paris, the Cuban champion, who defeated Jack Wright on Thursday. Crocker has been playing such wonderful tennis that he the favorite for the match despite the Cuban's splendid showing on Thursday. Paris uses a very effective chop shot, but the court today will be hard and dry and he will not be able to keep the ball as low as he did on Thursday.

In the second match, Jack Wright, Canada, will play the veteran Cuban, I. Zayas. It is difficult match to figure as in practices Zayas has always beaten Paris and is likely to play much better today than on Thursday when he was defeated by Crocker in straight sets.

HELD BY POLICE

Accused of Obtaining $25,000 by False Pretences

Edward Long, an American citizen, and George Wallace, of 2376, Hutcheson street, were arrested yesterday on the charge of obtaining $25,000 from H. L. Christin, of Montreal, by false pretences.

They were arrested by Detectives Savard, O'Donnell, and Walsh and were arraigned this morning. It is understood that the offence with which they are charged took place exactly a year ago today.

PILOTLESS PLANES, WIRELESS DRIVEN, NEW WAR HORROR

100 MILE FLIGHTS

Practically Invulnerable Weapon Renders Long-Range Guns Obsolete

PARIS, July 26. — (Special Star-World Cable, Copyright) — Pilotless airplanes, propelled by wireless engines, controlled by invisible hands, and flying incredible heights, rendering them invulnerable, will decimate armies, wreck cities, rain death in the next war, and make long range guns as obsolete as the bows and arrows of the Middle Ages, if plans being worked out by the French military aviators are carried to logical achievement.

General Hirschauer, who commanded the French Air Service during the war and is reporter of the military air budget, believes a new type of machine, invented and perfected by French officers and specialists, will not only revolutionize aerial tactics, but will modify, in a radical fashion, the whole aspect of warfare.

French inventors, according to a statement made to the correspondent by General Hirschauer, have solved the problem of automatic action of airplanes. The pilot is replaced by mechanical apparatus manipulated by secreted wireless stations.

The new airplane also can be made to land at any given spot. Equilibrium is obtained with a gyroscope and the machine can be navigated from as far as 100 miles out of sight. French experts have nicknamed it the "ghost plane."

Apart from this terrifying weapon, the French military air service is not so strong as generally believed, according to General Hirschauer. He said most of its machines are of the pre-war type and claims they do not exceed 1,300 in number.

Important improvements, however, have been made in a favorite model, an all metal airplane, notably in its manufacture with especially light metals, increased simplicity of machinery, and the maximum of security as results of experiments concerning the difference in speeds in flight and landing.

Improvement in metallic construction now enables to be built making a non-stop flight of 100 hours, while airplanes, which, at the armistice, were propelled by engines not exceeding 160 horsepower, now are manufactured with engines reaching 1,000 horsepower.

These are tested by a new scientific process in tunnels where electric blowers produce artificial winds. At present they are used at night only because some require such huge amounts of electricity that in the daytime it would cause sudden stoppage of electric power in whole districts.

FISET REQUESTED TO RUN IN RIMOUSKI

General Tells Delegation He Did Not Favor Conscription

QUEBEC, July 26. — (Star Special) —That he had never approved conscription and that he had taken all possible means of obtaining exemption from service for theological students, were the features of declarations made by General Sir Eugene Fiset to a delegation which waited on him yesterday and asked him to run in the coming by-election in Rimouski.

More than one hundred leading residents of the Town of Rimouski called on the former Deputy Minister of Justice at his summer home and after expressing their desire to see him accept the candidature as Liberal standard-bearer, recalled the fact that the General had been one of the instruments of enforcement of the Military Service Act, which was held in more or less esteem by farmers of Rimouski. They thought that unless he defined what his attitude had been in regard to that law, his chances might be greatly affected. General Fiset then told of his efforts on behalf of the students.

It is understood that in addition to General Fiset there will be another Liberal in the field, unless some compromise is reached.

BRITISH FLYERS GET CAN. WELCOME

Stuart MacLaren Toasted In Wine By Dominion Trawler's Crew

NEW YORK, July 26—(From Petropavlovsk Kamchatka, Wireless via Tokio)—(Special to Montreal Star, Copyright, 1924, United States and Canada by North American Newspaper Alliance, World Copyright by London Times.) — The arrival of A. Stuart MacLaren and his compatiions of the British round the world airplane flight here was marked by an enthusiastic meeting with the Canadian trawler Thlepval, which has been laying stores for the flight through the Kurrile Islands region.

Sergeant Andrews, the 24-year-old war veteran, who is MacLaren's mechanician, was taken ill, his temperature reaching 104; later he recovered. The British aviators were evidently cheered by the sight of wine, for MacLaren, apropos of the meeting with the Thlepval, wirelessed the North American Newspaper Alliance: "Champagne flowing freely, everything lovely."

REAL DRIVE FOR SOLUTION OF DEADLOCK WITH MONEY KINGS TO COME MONDAY

Tired, Nervous Diplomats Wearied With Strain of Allied Conference, Welcome Week-end Relaxation — Marx Reiterates Germany Will Carry Out Provisions of Dawes Report

LONDON, July 26.—(United News.) —Tired and nervous diplomats, wearied with the strain of two long days of conferences in which they sought a compromise for the opposing views of France and the world's greatest banking houses relative to the inviolability of the Ruhr regions to further understand sanctions, will seek relaxation over the week-end. Informal discussion of the problem will continue during that period, but the real drive toward a solution will be postponed until Monday.

Around the luncheon table in the United States Embassy Ambassador Kellogg gathered the three continental representatives to the parleys for an informal luncheon discussion with Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes.

In the quiet of the embassy, Hughes had an opportunity to discuss the matter of the Ruhr with the man whose personal fortunes and perhaps those of his country—depend on the decision reached in regard to the sanction.

Strain Is Beginning To Wear Down Everyone Connected With Conference

That man was Premier Herriot of France, the jovial gentleman who is the unwilling provider of the snag that held up the conference when it seemed destined for rapid success. Seated with the two Americans and Herriot were Premier Theunis of Belgium and Finance Mins. De Stefani of Italy. Whether this meeting tempered the French demand for freedom of action with regard to the future sanctions against Germany in the event of a Germany default is not known.

Around the table the preponderance of opinion was against the claims of France. It is not likely that Hughes was able to offer Herriot any encouragement in hopes that bankers who object to French sanctions might relent.

The strain of the last few days of morning to midnight conferences is beginning to wear down every one concerned in the parleys. The conferees and unofficial participants are nearly exhausted and Saturday and Sunday most of them will rest or at least change the scene of their activity.

Secretary Hughes along with half the city dwellers in England will go to the country. Colonel Logan, American observer with the reparations commission and Owen D. Young, General Charles G. Dawes' co-worker in devising the experts' report will go to Spithead Saturday morning to see the British fleet drawn up in the greatest naval review since the outbreak of the great war. Many of the allied delegates plan to see the spectacle.

Monday the conference will return to a vigorous life with meetings of the committee considering procedure in the event of a German default, and of the big five. Later Monday a plenary session will be convened.

During the meeting of the default committee it is hoped a formula will be agreed upon which will permit revision of the committee's previous report to which exception was taken by the bankers who must provide the money for a German loan. The status of the German representatives who will be summoned to the conference will be discussed during the plenary session.

NEARLY WRECKED TOWN WITH BLAST

Heavy Damage Done by Workmen Blasting in North Bay

NORTH BAY, July 26.—(Canadian Press.)—In blasting a rock cut in front of the town hall, Ferguson street, late yesterday afternoon, workmen nearly succeeded in blowing up a large part of the town. Rocks weighing hundreds of pounds were hurled through the air in all directions, adjacent plate glass windows were smashed, and pedestrians had narrow escapes from the gigantic missles. Men in charge of the dynamite blasts carefully explained that it was not their fault; a "faulty seam" in the cut was responsible for the "spread of the shot," they said.

The blast had been covered with heavy timbers, but the timbers themselves were blown away.

The loss will run into thousands of dollars. The G. W. V. A. Clubhouse, across from the town hall, was the principal target for the flying missiles, two large plate glass windows being demolished. Several panes of glass in the apartments upstairs were also broken and the inmates received a bad scare.

Three windows in the town hall basement were smashed, and Chief of Police Clark, who was standing nearby, had a close call. Some bricks in the Methodist Church were also dented and chipped, but the stained glass windows escaped injury.

Five young men had gathered at the entrance to the club rooms, watching operations, but these also escaped serious injury, although two of them were hit by small stones and received minor bruises.

One large stone, weighing about 200 pounds, went sailing through space and crashed through the cab of the hydro truck, which was parked on First avenue, a block away. The driver had just left his post and was standing a couple of yards distant. Had he been in the cab he would surely have met instant death.

LIQUOR PLEBISCITE IN ONTARIO FRAMED

Four Questions Will Be Submitted for Electors' Answer

TORONTO, July 26—(Star Special) —Questions to be put to the electors in Ontario by the Ferguson Government on the liquor plebiscite are understood to be as follows:

1—Are you in favor of the O.T.A.?

2—Are you in favor of Government control?

3—Are you in favor of the sale of beer and light wines in licensed premises?

4—Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous liquors in licensed premises?

DELEGATES GUESTS OF KING AT REVIEW

More Than 250 Warships Take Part in Royal Salute

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., July 26.—(United Press.) — Many delegates to the Inter-Allied Conference were guests of King George and the British Admiralty today at the Royal review of the Fleet.

It was the largest gathering of British war vessels, in point of numbers, since the war. More than 250 warships were drawn up in four long columns in the stretch of water between the Isle of Wight and the "Spithead" on the mainland.

The latest patterns of destroyers, commerce-chasing cruisers, submarines, airplane-carriers, mine-sweepers, mine-layers and coastal warfare motorboats, and the flagship Queen Elizabeth and the floating fortresses, Royal Sovereign, Royal Oak, Revenge, Centurion and Tiger, were in line.

The Royal Yacht steamed up and down the columns, each vessel "manning ship" and parading marines as the King's party passed. Distinguished visitors, M. P's., Cabinet Ministers and high officials followed in the Admiralty yacht Enchantress, and other vessels, while tourists and others viewed the fleet from the decks of innumerable excursion steamers. The mighty Queen Elizabeth led the royal salute as the King's yacht left Portsmouth Harbor, and guns were booming steadily for more than two hours as the stately review proceeded.

Tonight the whole fleet will be brilliantly illuminated and the chief vessels will be open to the inspection of visitors.

SIX BODIES FOUND IN MINE EXPLOSION

GATES, Pa., July 26—(Associated Press)—Rescue workers digging their way step by step through the debris that blocked the entrance to the Gates mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company where an explosion occurred last night had recovered the bodies of six men early this morning. Company officials said four other workmen are still missing. There were 120 men at work in the mine when the explosion occurred, but except for the six dead and four missing men all escaped without injury.

The exact cause of the explosion has not been determined. The efforts of company and State mine officials so far have been directed toward reaching the entombed men. Hope has practically been abandond that any of the four missing men are still alive.

The explosion occurred about 7.30 o'clock last night and was local in character, affective only in that part of the mine in which the 10 men were working. The mine is of the shaft type and the chamber in which the men were working is located about two miles from the mine entrance. The force of the explosion wrecked the supports and brought down a wall of coal and dirt between the 10 men and their only means of escape.

NUN CELEBRATES JUBILEE TODAY

The jubilarian was born in this city 78 years ago, and is the daughter of the late William Joseph Kiernan and his wife, the late Elizabeth Cooke. She was the sister of the late Rev. Father John P. Kiernan, who was the organizer and first pastor of St. Michael's parish of this city.

The happy jubilarian, in spite of her advancing years, still possesses all her faculties, and continues to perform various duties in connection with the community.

FELLED BY TAXI.

While attempting to cross the corner at Park avenue and Mount Royal avenue, Dr. I. N. Pesner, 25 years old, of 1975 Park avenue, was hit by a taxi and knocked down at 10 o'clock last evening. He was removed to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where it was found that he had received no injuries except a few cuts and bruises.

CHILD INJURED BY AUTO.

Knocked down by an automobile as he was running across the street, near Sherbrooke, on Dorion, at eight o'clock last night, Paul Emile Clairmont, aged 12, of 880 Dorion, received severe injuries to the head and abdomen. He was taken to the Notre Dame Hospital, where his condition is reported to be serious.

FEDERATION NOTES

A well-known western Canada social worker in the person of G. B. Clarke, formerly of Winnipeg, Man., has been appointed General Secretary of the Family Welfare Association, one of the biggest of the agencies in Federation.

Mr. Clarke, though an Englishman by birth, has been in Canada for 14 years, twelve of which have been spent in social service work in the west. He has had much valuable experience with Winnipeg social problems and brings to Montreal new systems and ideas.

Since the post of General Secretary of the Family Welfare Association became vacant some time ago, Mrs. Coghlin, District Secretary, has carried on the work of directing the big agency.

BACK FROM TORONTO.

Directors, secretaries and head workers of the agencies are beginning to settle down to routine work again following their return from the National Conference of Social Work which was held in Toronto recently.

The Conference, all admit, was a great success, but it is declared by some who attended that the Canadian Section might have figured more largely in the direction and activities of the conference, particularly as meetings on Canadian soil are held at such long intervals.

The time for the formation of a Conference solely and purely Canadian, and for the breaking away from the United States social workers, has not yet arrived, these same critics claim. They declare that after the delegates to the conference from the Dominion become an outstanding and clearly marked section of the body, the time for thinking of a Canadian Conference will have arrived.

MONK'S POINT CAMP.

A veritable town under canvas would be a fitting description for the University Settlement's summer camp which is in operation at Monk's Point on Ile Bizard this summer.

The camping ground, alongside the beautiful Back River, where shade trees and broad, grassy spaces give the boys an ideal playground, is the gift of Mr. Monk, and the boys, as well as the directors of Settlement, are showing their appreciation of the gift by the interest they are taking in the camp this year.

Already over one hundred boys associated with the Settlement have attended the camp this summer, in batches, it is announced by Miss Guiton, Head Worker, and it is planned to send many more children there to gain health and happiness before the camp closes.

Transportation to and from the camp is provided for by the University Settlement.

A health-giving program is mapped out for the boys each day, but the best period of the twenty-four hours for the children, is after supper when they squat in Indian circle around big bonfires and stories and songs go the round.

By the time the camp closes it is anticipated that nearly every University Settlement boy able to leave the city for two or three weeks will have enjoyed its benefits.

McGILL RECEIVES HISTORIC PHOTOS

Through the death of Dr. Robert W. Bell, of Toronto, graduate in medicine at McGill University in 1873, a complete set of photographs of the McGill Medical Faculty of 1870 has come into the possession of the University. The photographs, all of men widely distinguished in medicine in their day, were found among the papers of Dr. Bell, whose death took place last year, and have been sent for the archives of the University.

Prominent in the little gallery of portraits is an interesting and little known picture of Sir William Dawson, one of the most famous of the Principals of McGill University, or McGill College, as it was then called. He was Principal of the University from 1855 to 1893. Some of the photographs go back to the very earliest days of the medical school of McGill. The Medical Faculty was formed in 1832 while the first degree was conferred in 1833, and the photographs include pictures of Dr. William Fraser, M.D., first holder of the chair of Medical Jurisprudence, founded in 1845; and the Rev. Dr. William Wright, graduate in Theology and in Medicine, who was McGill's eighth medical graduate, graduating in 1836, three years after the formation of the Faculty. Dr. Wright became Professor of Materia Medica at his Alma Mater.

Familiar to Montrealers is the name of Dr. R. P. Howard, graduate in Medicine at McGill in 1848, honorary LL.D. in 1886, Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine at McGill in 1860, and father of Dr. Campbell Palmer Howard, of Montreal, who has just been appointed to the chair his father occupied at McGill. Other familiar names are those of Dr. D. C. MacCallum, M.D., M.R.C.S., who held the chair of Obstetrics in 1868, father of Dr. D. MacCallum.

Dr. Robert Craik, graduate in Medicine in 1854, professor of Chemistry, became Dean of the Faculty in 1889, and Dr. G. W. Campbell, Med. 1843, was Dean in 1860.

Other members of the Faculty whose portraits appear in the gallery are W. E. Scott, M.D., Professor of General and Descriptive Anatomy, 1856, graduate of McGill in 1844; J. M. Drake, Med. 1861; Professor of Clinical Medicine, 1872; and George E. Fenwicke, M.D., Professor of Medical Jurisprudence and Clinical Surgery, in 1867.

WHY THE WEATHER?

Dr. Charles F. Brooks.

THE RAIN TREE.

Interest and romance surrounds the story of the rain tree—a marvellous tree from Peru which is reputed to give forth a shower of rain from its leaves even in a drought. Trees purporting to be "rain trees" have even been sold by nurserymen. Early voyagers reported the finding of rain trees in the East Indies, Guinea, Brazil and the Canary Islands; now the name is given especially to the guango, a magnificent tree of tropical America.

All plants are known to exude moisture, usually in the form of vapor. If, however, the humidity of the surrounding air is sufficiently high, or its temperature sufficiently low, to check evaporation, the exuded water may collect on the surface of the plant in liquid form, and may ultimately trickle to the ground. A few plants are so active in this respect as, under favorable circumstances, to produce this trickling in considerable quantities. This process, "guttation," occurs chiefly at night, or in cloudy or rainy weather. In a very dry climate it does not occur at all, and, for this reason, even if the so-called rain tree could be successfully introduced in such a climate, it would not help solve the problem of irrigation.

BURNED PLAYING WITH MATCHES.

Playing with a box of matches on the steps of his home, at seven o'clock last evening, Sam Murdock, aged 7 years, was badly burned on both face and hands when the box went up in flames. Just as his clothes caught fire the boy's mother found him and wrapped him in a blanket. He was taken to the General Hospital.

453 GUY STREET

FROM THE STAR FILES

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

(From The Star Files, Thursday, July 26, 1894.)

Paris—M. Deschanel, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, has sent a challenge to M. Clemenceau, in consequence of an attack upon him in Clemenceau's newspaper, La Justice. It has been said of Clemenceau that the great Radical held all France in terror of his sword, his pistol and his pen, and M. Deschanel has his work cut out for him in facing Clemenceau in deadly conflict.

St. Petersburg—Private letters from Siberia announce the sudden death, at Barnaul, of the well-known Russian author and publicist, Nikolai M. Yadrintsef, who was for many years owner and editor of the Eastern Review, and who was regarded as one of the best informed men in the world with regard to the history, archaeology and anthropology of Asiatic Russia.

London—Edward Russell appeared in a jewelled costume at Albert Nettor's house last evening, and read Sir Edwin Arnold's "Light of Asia," before some society people. He was received appreciatively.

Montreal—There is considerable indignation among Irish Roman Catholic citizens at the fact that Mr. Frank Hart, as member of the old Board of Roman Catholic School Commissioners, and who was looked upon as the Irish representative, has not been re-appointed on the newly-constructed Board made up of nine members appointed as follows: Three by the Archbishop, three by the universities and three by the City Council, as provided for by the new law. Mr. Hart, not being a professor of a university, was replaced by Dr. Brennan, a professor of Laval.

Chicago — Simon Reskin, a Russian, made a malicous assault upon the residence of George M. Pullman. He hurled many stones at the massive building, breaking out ten or a dozen large plate glass windows. He was arrested, charged with malicious mischief. Reskin is said to be a well-known European Anarchist. The police are investigating his record, and his capture is thought to be an important one.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

(From The Star Files, Tuesdty, July 26, 1904.)

Vienna—Russia's sinking of a British ship in the Pacific strength is the view in certain official quarters that the Czar may be seeking for an extension of the war. Mr. Balfour's guarded language in the House of Commons creates the impression in Vienna that the Anglo-Russian crisis is still acute.

Rome — According to the Patria, an answer to the French Government with regard to the relations between it and the Vatican was formulated at a meeting of the Cardinals. This answer says that the Pope cannot agree to the demands of the French Government without surrendering the Papal rights.

Tien-Tsin — Lloyd's agent at New Chwang wires that fifty Japanese cavalrymen have entered New Chwang. The French flag is flying from all the Russian buildings. The town is quiet.

Montreal—Rev. Father Louis Lalonde, of the Society of Jesus, has returned to Montreal from a lecturing tour in the State of Maine. The reverend gentleman is considered an authority on the religious, social and political conditions of his fellow French-Canadians across the line. Speaking of the political conditions obtaining at present, Father Lalonde said: "When the United States of America are divided up into three republics, and I believe this will take place some day, the French-Canadians of the eastern and middle states will then exercise some influence in the American political world."

Ottawa — Last evening Hon. W. S. Fielding laid on the table of the House, the supplementary estimates for the year ending June 30th, 1905. They amount to $11,839,270, which with the main estimates of $62,935,338, makes a total of $74,774,608. Of this, $12,692,104 is chargeable to capital and $62,082,504 to consolidated fund. The estimates of last year, including main and supplementary, were $68,391,902, which shows for the present year an increase of $6,382,706.

Montreal—Mr. Edward Brbome has returned from St. Louis, where he had been acting as a judge in the choral contests. Speaking to a Star representative, Mr. Broome had much to say about the attractions of the great Fair as well as the convenience of travelling, and the good hotel accommodation to be obtained at or near the grounds.

AUSTRALIAN BOYS TO VISIT CANADA

Tour of Empire is Given as Prize to High School Students

"The inculcation of patriotism and education by travel are the cardinal objectives of the Young Australia League, which is sending a party of 50 school boys across Canada next month," stated John Tucker, foundation president of the League and advance manager of the tour, who arrived in Montreal yesterday from England, where the boys are now sightseeing.

Mr. Tucker, when interviewed at the general headquarters of the Canadian National Railways, over which the boys will make their trip across Canada, stated that since the inauguration of the League about 19 years ago, thousands of boys have been given educational trips through Australia and New Zealand, while two other large parties, exclusive of the present one, have been taken around the world. The last party visited Canada in 1914.

The boys in the present party, which arrives at Quebec on August 23, average about 17 years of age and they have been chosen from several thousand applicants. All of Australia is represented in the party, the homes of the boys being scattered over an area of more than 2,000 miles, from the north of Queensland to the south of Tasmania.

In a sense these annual trips act as scholarships. The expenses are borne partly by the parents, partly by the districts from which they come and partly by the League. When a boy is chosen, whose parents are unable to bear the expense of such a tour, representations on his behalf are made to his district by the League and the money is invariably raised. As a result the annual tour of the League is a prize that is striven for by thousands of high school boys in the Commonwealth.

The boys on the present trip have already made an extensive tour of the battlefields and of Great Britain. They sail from Southampton on the Antonia on August 15 and arrive at Quebec on Saturday, August 23. They will remain there until the following Monday and then commence their tour of Canada, finishing on the Pacific Coast.

The will sail from Vancouver on September 24 and will arrive in Australia about the end of October.

De Odera Ambrosius was the full name of the dog. He was a son of Champion De Odera Druid and grandson of Champion De Odera Dreadnought. He served during the world war as an entertainer for the soldiers at camps and hospitals.

SHOT IN FLIGHT FROM SCENE OF FATAL QUARREL

Detective Downed Suspect After Killing of Fellow-Countryman Last Night

DRAMATIC CAPTURE

One in Hospital and Four Witnesses Held for Lusignan Street Brawl

One man is dead, another is in the General Hospital with a bullet wound in the thigh and facing a charge of having killed him, and four others are in cells at Detective Headquarters pending the Coroner's inquest, as a result of a fist fight between Italians alleged to have arisen out of a discussion of the Fascisti movement, which occurred on Lusignan street a short distance below St. James street, at 7:10 o'clock last night.

The alleged killer was shot by Sergeant Detective Brooks, who states that, when he went to arrest the man at a St. Cecile street house, the latter attempted to escape by running through a cellar and climbing a fence in the rear.

The dead man is "Mike" Delegatti, 55 years old, a coal trimmer, living at 157 Lusignan street. The man alleged to have knocked him down so that he was instantly killed when his head struck the sidewalk, is Lorenzo Latore, 33 years old, living at 233 Dalhousie street, who is today in the General Hospital under police guard. Doctors say Latore's injuries are serious but are not likely to prove fatal. The detective's bullet cannot be probed for at present.

Coroner McMahon will hold an inquest today but will probably adjourn the case for fuller police investigation pending Latore's release from hospital and attendance at the inquiry.

POLITICAL QUARREL.

The only eye-witnesses of the quarrel, it is believed, are the four fellow countrymen of the principals, held at detective headquarters, but residents on Lusignan street and at the house at which the victim boarded declared the quarrel was over the Fascisti question.

Delegatti, it is claimed, was not a member of the famous "blackshirts," but the younger man is, or was, one of Mussolini's followers, and a staunch patriot.

It was shortly after 7 o'clock when Lieutenant Desmarteux, in charge of the Montfort street (No. 6) police station, received a telephone call informing him that a bad fight was in progress on Lusignan street. Three officers were rushed to the scene, and on arrival, found a group of excited Italians around Delegatti, who lay on the sidewalk. Believing the man to be only injured the police summoned an ambulance from the General Hospital, but it was found that he was dead.

Deskman Royal at Detective headquarters was notified of the case by telephone and Sergeant Detectives Brooks, Finel and E. Pelletier were assigned to investigate it. Sergeant Detectives Pusie, Bogli and Perksi were also assigned to the case when the police learned the name of Delegatti's alleged assailant, and then he could not be found. Receiving information that Latore was at his home on Dalhousie street the detectives searched there, but found no trace of him. Later they learned that he was at 22 St. Cecile street.

ASSAILANT CAPTURED.

Entering the St. Cecile street house, Detectives Brooks, Finel and Pelletier were told Latore was in the cellar. They were warned that he was armed and would probably resist arrest, so they drew their revolvers as they went down stone steps to get him.

At their approach it is reported that Latore attempted to escape by running up another flight of steps leading into the yard and climbing a fence at the rear. He was on top of the fence preparing to drop to the other side when Detective Sergeant Brooks, unable to halt the man by commands, fired one shot from his revolver and brought him tumbling to the ground.

The wounded man was taken to the General Hospital. Detectives posted a police watch over him and he may have to face a murder charge following the Coroner's inquest.

While three of the detectives were at the St. Cecile street house, Detectives Bogil and Perksi took into custody four witnesses, who are under guard in cells at headquarters pending the formal inquiry.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

At 8:40 an inconspicuous little man was escorted through the front door of the Montreal General Hospital, supported on each side by a detective. As he passed the wicket of the telephone operator, remarked to the front office clerk, "I guess he's had a little too much. Seems a bit lame, eh?" Little did she guess why the man was escorted by the police, and in a moment was back again at her work, forgetting all about the incident.

Rushed into Ward "M," the man was immediately examined by the doctors, and found to have a revolver wound in his right hip. The bullet was still in the wound and no attempt was made last night to remove it, the doctors considering it too serious an operation to be done immediately. His condition was declared to be serious, but not critical.

Lorenzo Latore, aged 33, said to live at 225 Dalhousie street, is a little wrinkled man, with brown eyes, and scars on his cheeks. About 5 feet 5 inches in height, of slight build, he does not appear to be strong. One scar running across his face, which contrasts with the deep black of his hair, starts at the upper side of his left cheek-bone and stretches to his upper lip, on which is a small black moustache. Another scar stretches across his left eyebrow, and is possibly the beginning of the larger scar, which it appears was caused by a deep knife gash. He was dressed last night in the dark clothes of a workingman, and had the appearance of a day laborer.

All through the night Constable Brisebois watched over the injured man in the Montreal General Hospital, where he lay in almost complete darkness with other sick and injured patients, all along the side of the large ward.

BODY AT MORGUE.

The chief of detectives issued an order to the morgue attendant, soon after the body of the dead man was taken into the building, that no one should enter the refrigerator cell where it was kept overnight. A complete description of the man was therefore not available, but Attendant B. Corbeil, who helped Paul Sanscartier, driver of the morgue waggon, to carry the body into the morgue, and remove the clothing, stated that there were no visible wounds and described the corpse as that of a man about 55 years of age, with gray hair and deep brown eyes, and of swarthy complexion, dressed in working clothes, buttoned boots, blue shirt and an old hat.

BUILD FIVE NEW HARBOR WHARVES

AT WINDMILL POINT

Will Handle Ocean Ships for Grain—Many Liners Due

The Atlas Construction Co., Ltd., have been awarded the contract for the reconstruction of 1,200 feet of wharfage at Windmill Point, it was announced by Dr. W. L. McDougald for the Montreal Harbor Commission yesterday. The work calls for the construction of 5 berths for the use of the Harbor Commissioners' grain elevator "B," where it will be possible to load ocean going vessels to depth-of-channel capacity. The contract involves a sum of $320,000.

Grain elevator No. 3, at Tarte Pier is now completed, the scales have been tested, and after tests of the machinery have been made it will be ready to handle the 1924 Canadian crop. The new elevator has a storage capacity of 2,000,000 bushels of grain and is 640 feet long, 80 feet wide and 200 feet high. It is equipped with four mechanical car unloaders, with a capacity of 28 cars per hour, and four marine legs, with capacity of 60,000 bushels per hour.

Elevator No. 3 has eight conveyors extending to five shipping berths at Tarte and Laurier piers, where five vessels can be loaded with grain at the same time at the rate of 120,000 bushels per hour.

The entire plant is designed according to recently recognized principles for minimizing the hazard of dust explosions.

Dr. McDougald stated that the location of the site had been chosen so as to allow for further developments in the future if necessary, and it is possible to add to the new elevator storage units adding up to a capacity of 14,000,000 bushels, thereby making it the largest grain storing structure in the world.

NEWFOUNDLAND IS DEVELOPING TRADE

High Commissioner Optimistic of Conditions in Island Colony

WAR RECOVERY

Fisheries, Pulp and Hydro-Power Bid Fair to Ensure Success

Newfoundland is fast recovering from the effects of the lean years of post-war depression and there is a better feeling amongst the business community all round, in the opinion of Victor Gordon, High Commissioner for the colony in London who is at present a guest at the Mount Royal Hotel, on his way back to England after a visit to his native country.

There is a marked improvement, both in the amount of the fish catch, and the conditions in the consuming countries which are markets for salt codfish, the main product of the country. In the years following the war the southern European countries which had been large purchasers of the salt fish, had been unable through depreciated currency to do business on anything like a normal scale, and this had adversely affected the Island's trade.

A new source of prosperity for the Crown colony is looked for in the development of the fresh fish industry. Seemingly endless quantities of fish are available for the taking, and the High Commissioner pointed out that there is no reason whatever why fresh fish could not be supplied from Newfoundland to western markets of Canada and the United States.

The cod liver oil industry was also one that possessed great possibilities and was likely to loom large in the future trade of the colony. It had been proved beyond doubt that the Newfoundland medicinal oil was superior in every respect to the Norwegian commodity, chiefly because it was taken from the fresh livers of the cod-fish exclusively; whereas the Scandinavian oil was extracted from a mixed catch, the livers of other fish being used as well as that of the cod. Exhaustive investigations into this subject had recently revealed the extremely high value of the Newfoundland oil, for its "Vitamin A" content and its value in the treatment of wasting diseases.

PULP AND PAPER.

Mr. Gordon said that in his two weeks stay he had visited the Pulp and Paper Mills at Grand Falls which were opened some years ago by the late Lord Northcliffe and that he was much impressed by the extent and capacity of that industry. He had also seen the new construction at Deer Lake and Humber Mouth, which work was being carried on under the supervision of an English Company.

In this area of the Island a great hydro-electric force was being created for the manufacture of pulp and paper and it was expected that within the next twelve or eighteen months, the mill would be capable of producing four hundred tons of newsprint a day. At Corner Brook, the headquarters of this new company, an excellent hotel had been built which was now open to the public, and in view of its proximity to some of the best sporting grounds and salmon rivers, it should prove an attraction to sportsmen and tourists. There were other development schemes in prospect and one was justified in hoping that the immediate future would bring increased prosperity to the Colony.

PRAISES WEMBLEY.

Mr. Gordon, has had something to do with the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley and he thought that the results would be certain to justify any expenditure incurred by the Dominions. The Canadian pavilion was a marvellous display. Newfoundland, too, had its exhibit but on a very modest scale; in fact every part of the British Empire was represented and one could never see a finer miniature of the British Empire family.

Asked as to his work as High Commissioner in London, Mr. Gordon said that he was kept busy all the time spreading the gospel of Newfoundland and making known to capitalists, sportsmen and others what the Island had to offer for their particular needs. All the Dominion High Commissioners were accustomed to meet at the Canadian office periodically under the chairmanship of Mr. Larkin. They were able in this way to discuss matters of Dominion interest as they arose, and to learn each other's point of view. He had always found that the Imperial authorities were not only willing but eager to meet the Dominions in any reasonable demands that they made.

PROUD OF AUTONOMY.

When questioned on the subject of Confederation, Mr. Gordon said that he never even heard it mentioned during his recent visit to the Island and he did consider that it was a subject that entered the minds of Newfoundlanders at the present time. The Island was isolated from the mainland, and it could not be to her advantage to cast off the garment of self-government and to become clothed in a robe of subserviency. "By joining Canada, Newfoundland might come to be regarded as the poor relation of the Dominion, we would lose our prestige, and the status we had won after four hundred years of history. As a matter of fact, it was in Newfoundland that the principle of self-government was first applied, and it is interesting here to recall that Newfoundland was an English colony for one hundred and twenty years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed in America. Notwithstanding all this, we are very proud of our great neighbour, Canada, and we love to see her expanding and developing, and bursting forth into nationhood," he concluded. "In Newfoundland we take great pride in our tradition, and in the fact that our people are all of British stock and all loyal to the Empire. We own no allegiance, and desire no other, than that involved in loyal and faithful service to the Crown."

NEW COMMISSION HAS BIG PROBLEM

Expected to Deal With All Educational Matters on Island

SCHUBERT'S VIEWS

Alderman Favors Uniform Taxation In All Municipalities

As soon as a meeting can be arranged, the newly formed school commission, appointed by Premier Taschereau yesterday to deal with school problems on the Island of Montreal, will get down to business. Several of the members are away and a meeting cannot be arranged therefore until some time late in August. E. W. Beatty, K.C., is in England, Walter Mitchell, K.C., is on a holiday in Maine, Sir Lomer Gouin is at his summer home and several others could not be located.

Aime Geoffrion, K.C. appointed as one of the three Roman Catholic members, stated today that he was unable to say what policy the new commission would pursue. He stated, however, that he understood the three Catholic members — Sir Lomer Gouin, Auguste Richard and himself would act as an arbitration board between the Jewish and Protestant members in respect to the Protestant-Jewish panel that is the subject of controversy in Montreal. The same condition exists in Outremont, and as the commission has the power to deal with all matters affecting education on the island it is likely that the problem confronting the ratepayers in Verdun will also be considered. The Protestant members, Sir Arthur Currie, Walter Mitchell, K.C., and E. W. Beatty, K.C., have all consented to act as well as the Jewish appointees Michael Hirsch, Samuel W. Cohen and Alderman Joseph Schubert.

Members of the Verdun School Board expect that the new commission will find a way out of their difficulties and arrange for some method of keeping the schools open in Verdun. As far as this is concerned Mr. Geoffrion was unable to state what action the commission would take, but was of the opinion that all problems affecting education on the island, would be considered by the commission.

He stated that he was unable to outline any definite policy until after the commission had met and outlined its plans.

BETTER TREATMENT WANTED.

"If the special commission created by the Provincial Government to investigate school problems on the Island of Montreal can find a solution that will put the Jewish population on an equal basis regarding educational privileges with the other sections of the population, we shall accomplish something worth while." So stated Alderman J. Schubert, member of the newly appointed commission when approached by his views regarding the Government's move and on what he hoped would be accomplished.

The problem was not an easy one, Mr. Schubert said, and the solution must be such that it would allow no room for further friction and misunderstanding.

In approaching their task the commission would have to consider the constitutional aspect of the problems involved and his first task as a member of the commission would be to find out what were its powers and the duties of the commission. Until he had ascertained that he could not express himself freely.

Mr. Schubert expressed himself firmly in favor of the principle of uniform taxation for educational purposes. If that principle were adopted many difficulties on the Island in the matter of education would be eliminated in his opinion. He referred to the different education rates paid by various sections of the population. These differences had much to do with the existence of the present difficult situation.

The question of separate schools would have to be investigated. Mr. Schubert said. If the Jews wanted separate schools, and a large number did, the desire would have to be considered in the light of the fact that the separatist principle was the authoritative rule in the Province of Quebec.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE.

Sir Arthur Currie preferred not to make any comment upon the appointment of the commission today.

Beyond the fact that he was aware of his inclusion on the commission, Sir Arthur said he could not make any statement on the course that body would likely pursue, neither could he give any indication of who would be appointed chairman.

MAN DROWNED IN CHATEAUGUAY RIVER

Antonio Pellerin, aged 53, of 10 Notre Dame de Lourdes street, Montreal, was drowned late yesterday afternoon in the Chateauguay River, opposite the town of Chateauguay. After an hour of searching in the water for his body after he suddenly sank not reappearing to the surface, residents and police located it not far from the shore. The Coroner of the district was notified, but referred the case to Montreal, notifying Coroner McMahon. Papers were issued by him permitting the body to be removed to the local morgue, and the wagon was dispatched at 10 o'clock last night, returning in about three hours with the body. An inquest will be held today.

VERDUN REQUIRES COMMISSION'S AID

School Trustees Want Central Board of Finance

H. J. Garrity, chairman of the Verdun School Board, today expressed great satisfaction at the appointment of the Provincial commission to deal with school problems on the Island of Montreal.

"Premier Taschereau could not have selected a better group of men for the purpose," declared Mr. Garrity. "All are eminently satisfactory to Verdun and we feel that we will get justice from them."

When asked in what respect the commission would help Verdun, Mr. Garrity stated that the Verdun School Board was hoping that the commission could arrange for a central board of finance for the schools of the Island and enable the city of Verdun to have the same school rate as the other municipalities. At the present time, he said, Protestant citizens were compelled to pay a school fee and 20 mills on their taxes for the education of their children and this was very burdensome. If the Island was taxed, as a whole, it would only mean a slight increase for other residents and would enable Verdun to meet all obligations and generally be of great assistance to Protestant education on the Island.

OBSERVATION CAR BURST INTO FLAME

SIX ARE HURT

Westmount Woman in Hospital—Car Burned Furiously

One woman was seriously hurt and six others were slightly injured when a Montreal Tramways observation car burst into flames at the corner of Cote St. Catherine Road and Rockland boulevard, shortly before 10 o'clock last night.

For some moments after the fire started a minor panic took place as the passengers struggled to safety. Miss Mabel Bevington, 480 Wood avenue, Westmount, lies in the Western Hospital suffering from a broken ankle, received when she was knocked down by the panic stricken crowd.

Miss May Voorhies, of Rahway, N.J., registered at the Alpine Hotel, McGill College avenue, received injuries to both knees. Fred Voorhies, same address, received injuries to one foot.

Other casualties were: George Simmoroth, Rahway, N.J., injured foot, Miss C. Grub, Rahway, N.J., injuries to both ankles, Miss Eva Grub, New York City, was slightly burned when her dress caught fire.

A short circuit caused by the car striking a hanging live wire set fire to the under part of the trucks. A sheet of flame suddenly shooting from the bottom of the car first warned the passengers they were in danger. Immediately every passenger on the well loaded car began to struggle towards the exits. Many were knocked down in the scramble.

The force of the shock when it first occurred, threw many passengers from the car into the street. As the passengers struggled to safety the car began to burn furiously. The flames were quelled soon after the arrival of the Outremont fire brigade. The injured passengers were carried to the Outremont City Hall, close by, where they received medical attention.

Motherwell and Murdock Only Ministers Guiding Ship of State

ELECTION TALK

Interest Awakening in St. Antoine Bye; Montreal Bridge Discussion

OTTAWA, July 26.—(Star Special by Our Own Correspondent.)—The statesmen and politicians have done no lingering around Ottawa this year after the close of Parliament. The sesssion ended last Saturday afternoon and by Monday nearly everybody had hopped out of town, apparently glad of the opportunity.

The only two Minister heer during the week holding the rudder of the ship of state were Mr. Motherwell and Mr. Murdock, although the Premier is at his summer estate in the Gatineau Heights overlooking the city.

Theer is to be no Cabinet council until August 5 and not a great deal to be done then, outside of routine. Cables are being exchanged daily between the British Government and the Government here, and between the latter and Senator Belcourt, regarding the Inter-Allies conference and Professor Skelton is acting as counsellor at this end. The Canadian representative is in on the British panel and has had his day at sitting in but it is not apparent that Canada is especially to the forefront in the conclave. However, the principle of representation has been conceded and this is regarded here as a sufficing consideration.

ELECTION TALK.

The talk of a general election has been on the outside more than in Ottawa and it seems to be dwindling away. Before they went home Liberal members had no idea of an election. Since they have gone home nothing in the local situation inspires the courage which is a desirable condition in taking any wild leap. The advice, on the contrary, is that such an enterprise would be attended by a peculiar hazard. The reasons are obvious. National conditions are none too hopeful in regard to the crops, although they are said to be better than some reports have indicated; there is a good deal of unemployment now and there will be more in the fall and winter, while federal revenues are on the decline, which, in turn, is an indication that business and industry are not brisk. Other considerations contribute to a situation where the public mind is unsettled and the Government would be a sure mark for this mobilized unrest. It is not clear that an election was thought of but if so the thought is perishing fast.

Of necessity by-elections will occur. Those in Yale, B.C., and West Hastings will, of course, go Conservative. Guss Porter resigning in protest against the Murdock decision is unlikely to be opposed. In Yale, the centre of the fruit belt in British Columbia, the district is hit hard by the Crow's Nest rates which permit of Ontario fruit going to the praries at rates cheaper than the British Columbia product. The Government is blamed for this. The Kelowna branch branch line was not among those killed by the Conservative Senate and so there is no Liberal come back on that score.

ST. ANTOINE.

The St. Antoine by-election causes interest and some worry but the Government appears to have left its end of the matter in the hands of the Quebec Ministers. No one here seems to know whether Hon. Walter Mitchell will run again or if he does what color will be attached to his lapel, protectionist Liberal or Independent. Many of the party want to support him not only on personal grounds but because his tariff ideas are held to typify the views of the great volume of the faithful in the metropolis but on the contrary it is argued that the Government having taken a certain course with the objective of enlisting Western favor can hardly fail to oppose one who openly attacks what is represented as its most vital policy.

It is said here that the handling of the situation is left to the local moguls of the party in Montreal. Conservatives also appear to be embarrassed over the fact that unanimity is lacking in St. Antoine as a result of the choice of the convention. A little over three weeks will intervene before the nominations, meanwhile the stew is starting to sizzle. Liberals expect an acclamation in the Rimouski by-election unless the party has a row in convention. There will be a good deal of picnicking this summer and while the election talk falls off activity on the outside will not be lacking.

MONTREAL'S BRIDGE.

Trouble is germinating over Montreal's six million dollar bridge. The engagement by the Harbor Board of an American engineer is distasteful in some official circles here and emphasis is being laid on the fact that while the Board is to have direction of the work all the plans and specifications must be approved at Ottawa and this gives considerable leverage as to who should prepare them and whether or not they should be accepted when they are prepared. Relations between the Marine Department and the Harbor Board have not been the most lovable and a lengthy statement of the plans by Dr. McDougald, chairman of the Board, has not been received here with any enthusiasm but quite the contrary.

Until Fall nothing in the line of Cabinet reconstruction is looked for. There are no vacancies now and no impressive signs of any. Everybody agrees that Mr. Fielding will have to give up, everybody but Mr. Fielding himself. He went away to Nova Scotia this week talking of his plans for the future and he had his say in the redistribution of his constituency. Resignation is aloof from his intent.

Hon. Charles Murphy is at his country home and has not come back to his department but has some work sent up to him. He would not be in a resigning mood if he thought any one desired him to quit and some do. Mr. Low, the other Minister who is off color, has gone abroad to convalesce and get well. It is believed that Hal McGiverin, M.P. for Ottawa, will come into the Cabinet with portfolio anyway and perhaps with one if anybody moves out to make room. There are few signs of moving and the tenants mentioned are of a sensitive class who need to be treated with extreme caution.

Although there is a good deal in the national situation calling for action of some kind or another prospects point to a quiet month or so. Nothing apparently is regarded as urgent enough to interfere with the recuperative calm of vacation days.

RAILWAYS REFUSE INCREASES IN PAY

Scale in United States Will Not Apply to Canada

TORONTO, July 25. — (Canadian Press). — After negotiations lasting about a year the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway notified the Brotherhood of Conductors and Trainmen that they had decided to refuse the rates of pay which have gone into force on lines of a similar standing in the United States, it was stated in labor circles. The increase given on the United States roads is about 5 per cent.

The Brotherhood originally asked to be reimbursed for the reduction made some time ago, amounting to more than 12 per cent, but the railways conceded 5 per cent. When this became known the Canadian conductors and trainmen revised their request to the companies and there have been extensive negotiations.

Only recently the companies expressed the opinion that if certain rules were altered they might be able to grant the advance, but yesterday the railways informed the men that even if the rules were altered they could not see their way clear to grant an increase in pay.

The negotiating committee of the Brotherhood will now officially bring the decision of the companies to the full committee of the Brotherhood.

SAPIRO'S MISSION PUZZLING REGINA

REGINA, July 26. — (Canadian Press).—Aaron Sapiro, wheat marketing expert, arrived in Regina today. His visit coincides with the first session of the permanent directors of the Saskatchewan wheat pool organization, but Sapiro declined to disclose the object of his visit.

Would he be in conference with the wheat pool directors? he was asked.

"That depends entirely on them," he answered. "If they send for me, yes."

Questioned further, he would not say that the reports of extreme crop damage reaching Chicago were overdrawn, but he declared there were very important political reasons why the market should be closely watched for the possibility of a price collapse. He will leave tonight for Winnipeg and then for the United States.

BRITISH UNEMPLOYMENT STEADILY DECREASES

According to British trades union figures, 7.8 per cent. of their members were unemployed on April 1 of this year. This is the fifth month showing a decrease in the percentage of unemployment. According to advices received by the Bankers' Trust Company of New York from its English Information Service, this compares with a maximum of 17.0 per cent of unemployment in May, 1922, and with a percentage of just over 2 per cent. for the year 1913.

The purchasing power of the working man's pound has steadily improved since 1920. In that year the working man's pound would buy only 40.21 per cent. of what it would buy in 1913. In 1921 it would buy 44.29 per cent., in 1922, 54.76 per cent. and in 1923, 57.60 per cent. In the first quarter of 1924 there was a slight falling off in this respect the pound in that quarter being worth only 56.59 per cent. to the working man.

Notwithstanding the business depression in Great Britain and the unusual number of working people unemployed, the savings of the people have steadily increased during the post-war period, as shown by the returns of the post office savings banks, the trustee savings banks, and the amounts of Government securities held by these agencies for the people, and the investments of the people in treasury savings certificates, these being the successors of the war savings certificates. The deposits in post office savings banks which amounted to £187,243,000 at the close of 1913 and totalled £266,348,000 at the close of 1919, at the end of 1923 amounted approximately to £273,000,000. On March 31, 1920, the people of Great Britain held £273,500,000 treasury savings certificates. These holdings have steadily increased, being £285,000,000 on March 31, 1921, £342,000,000 on March 31, 1922, £353,800,000 on March 31, 1923, and £360,000,000 on March 31, 1924. Upward of £200,000,000 Government securities are held in trust by the post office and trustee savings banks for depositors. These facts show that the working people employed, now composing about 92 per cent. of the total, at the close of 1922 about 86 per cent. and when conditions were at the worst in August, 1921, about 83 per cent., notwithstanding the hard times have been persistent and regular savers.

KIRKLAND LAKE, July 26. — (Star Special.)—Sinking operations are now proceeding at a good rate on the Lebel Township claims of the Kirk Gold Mines Co., Ltd. The shaft has reached a depth of 60 feet, the objective being 300 feet in depth. Considerable quartz is in evidence in the schist formation in which the shaft is being driven. The plan of operation is to undertake extensive cross-cutting and drifting at such time as a working station can be established at the 300-ft. level.

SILVER PRODUCTION IN 1923 MAINTAINED

The production of silver in Canada during 1923 amounted to 18,601,744 fine ounces which at the average New York price for the year of 64.573 cents per fine ounce was valued at $12,007,569 as against 18,626,439 fine ounces valued at $12,576,7538 in 1922. While there was a decrease of less than one per cent. in quantity and about four per cent. in value due to the lower price of silver in 1923, the production reported for the year 1922 included an adjustment of 1,222,450 fine ounces which was applied in order to take account of the silver bullion on hand at the end of 1921 that had not previously been included in the reports on the mineral production of Canada. On the basis, therefore, of actual yearly production, the records for the year 1923 showed a credible increase in silver output.

The production in 1923 included (a) silver contained in silver and gold bullion, 9,472,908 fine ounces or 50.9 per cent., (b) silver contained in blister copper and lead bullion, 3,892,837 fine ounces or 20.9 per cent. and (c) silver estimated to have been recovered from ores, etc., exported, 5,235,999 fine ounces or 28.2 per cent.

The corresponding figures for 1922, taking into account the adjustment mentioned above, were: (a) 10,032,909 fine ounces, or 54.0 per cent.; (b) 3,502,367 fine ounces, or 18.8 per cent., and (c) 5,046,163 fine ounces, or 27.2 per cent.

The yearly average of the New York quotations for silver was 64.873 cents per fine ounce. Prices ranged from 65.668 cents in January, to 64.313 cents in February, 67.359 cents in March then gradually decreased to 62.793 cents in August, and recovered to 64.705 cents in December.

COBALT, July 26.—(Star Special).—The O'Brien Mine at Cobalt has rounded out a total production of a little over 22,000,000 ounces of silver, and now occupies second position among the current producers in Cobalt. Apart from the work on the adjoining Colonial property, the O'Brien is the deepest silver mining operation in Northern Ontario. The property was privately owned by Senator M. J. O'Brien, of Renfrew, during its best days, and a few years ago was taken in as part of the holdings of the M. J. O'Brien, Ltd., a $12,000,000 closed corporation.

GERMANY'S WEALTH IS $55,000,000,000

According to a study just completed by the research department of the Bankers' Trust Company of New York, the wealth of Germany today is about $55,000,000,000. This figure is arrived at by making allowance for territorial losses imposed by the Versailles Treaty, the fact being kept in mind that, while some of this territory was agricultural and not highly productive, yet the loss of Alsace-Lorraine carried with it very large resources of iron ore and potash and industrial works of considerable magnitude, while the occupation of the Saar basin had deprived Germany of extensive coal deposits. The fact also was taken into consideration that in losing part of Silesia, Germany lost many industrial plants and large iron and zinc deposits, and 42½ per cent. of all the German coal lying within 500 yards of the surface. Allowance was made also for the depreciation in buildings and structures and the decreased productivity of agricultural lands.

The accepted pre-war German estimate, that of Dr. Karl Helfferich, was 310 billion gold marks ($73,780,000,000). Sir Josiah C. Stamp, the well-known English statistician and economist, in an estimate made in 1919, raised this figure to $80,500,000,000 to make allowance for several items which he felt Dr. Helfferich had overlooked.

Dr. Helfferich, just before his death, in a special series of articles on Germany's finances contributed to the London Statist, estimated the present day wealth of Germany somewhat lower. Taking as a basic figure 200 billion gold marks, or say, $47,600,000,000, he reduced this amount by making allowance for diminished productivity of the intrinsic value of Germany's wealth. On this account he made a reduction of 50 billion gold marks, or $11,900,000,000, concluding that the present value of the German national wealth would amount to 150 billion gold marks, or about $35,700,000,000.

In view of the facts regarding Germany's industrial plants and the excellent condition of her railroads as given in the Dawes report, the research department of the Bankers' Trust Company is of the opinion that this last deduction of Dr. Helfferich is not quite fair, and therefore that the actual wealth of Germany today lies somewhere between his basic figure of $47,600,000,000 and the estimate independently made by the Trust Company of $55,000,000,000.

GIRARD APPEARS BEFORE JUDGE ON MURDER CHARGE

JUST MET HER.

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

SHERBROOKE, Que., July 25. — (Canadian Press.) — The preliminary hearing in the case of Herman Girard, of Richmond, held on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Irene St. Germain, 20-year-old Richmond girl, which opened this morning before Judge Godbout, of Beauce, was still in progress this afternoon. Girard took the young girl out for an automobile ride on the night of July 4 and brought back her dead body, the Coroner's Jury having returned a verdict that the girl had died from heart failure brought about by shock.

A. Hebert stated that he met Girard on the night in question and was told by the accused that he had a girl in the back of the car. He said he looked into the car and saw a girl lying on her back. Hebert said he asked Girard what he had done to the girl, and if he had given her any liquor.

The witness said that he immediately got into the front seat of the car and drove that way for a distance. The girl's condition did not seem to improve and he became alarmed and told Girard to get into the back seat and look after the girl and he would drive the car. The witness said that at this time he did not think that the girl was dead. He stated he told Girard that the girl should be taken to a doctor. The witness said that he had to go to work and could not stay with Girard any longer. He claimed that he did not know the girl and did not want to get mixed up in anything.

The witness in concluding his testimony said Girard carried out his advice and took the girl to Dr. Johnson's office. When they arrived at the doctor's offices he was not in but was at his house. Miss Crack, the doctor's nurse, was the one who received Girard when he came to the doctor's office.

Mrs. St. Germain, the girl's mother, testified that she had never known her daughter to do anything wrong. She had been working away from home for over three months. "During that time you do not know what was going on?" was the question asked by counsel. Mrs. St. Germain answered that she was sure that her daughter had not been doing anything bad.

Dr. Derome, of Montreal, was the next witness. Dr. Derome said that he had been called to Richmond to hold a post-mortem on the body of Irene St. Germain. This examination showed no signs of violence.

GOES OPPOSITE WAY.

Mr. Vincent stated he and Miss Goyette, Mr. and Mrs. Durocher, the late Irene St. Germain and Girard had gone out in a car on the night in question. Girard was running the car. On their return, Girard asked Miss St. Germain where she was working, and who she was. Girard asked her to let him drive her home and to this she consented, but instead of going towards her home, Girard took her towards Janesville.

Dr. Johnston was the next witness. He said that on the night of July 4, the accused called him up about ten o'clock and asked him to come down to his offices, but before he had time to get down to his offices Girard was up at his house. Dr. Johnston said that he was not alarmed at first, as he thought that it was a case of drinking and that the girl would be better in a short time. He said he told Girard to bring the girl into the house, but Girard said that she couldn't wait. Then the doctor told him to take her down to his office presently. The girl was taken down to his office and when Dr. Johnston arrived at the office the girl was lying on his couch and had been there for about five minutes.

When he examined the girl he found that she had no pulse and that her hands were cold. "I told Girard that the girl was dead," and Girard answered: 'What killed her?' 'I told him I didn't know.' "

Dr. Johnston stated that Girard told him that he had not known the girl before that night, that he had met her on the street, and she was a perfect stranger to him.

Dr. Johnston stated he told the accused that it would be necessary to take the girl to Mr. Larose's house, the place where she worked. He then called up Dr. Vezina, the Coroner, and asked him to go down to Larose's.

Miss Crack, Dr. Johnston's nurse, was then called to the stand and was the final witness at this morning's session. Miss Crack testified that she had answered the door the night of July 4 when Girard came to the office looking for the doctor. She asked him what the trouble was, but said he would give her no information, apart from the fact that he wanted to see the doctor. She said she then went out to the car and looked at the girl. Immediately she called up the doctor and told him to hurry down as she thought that the girl was dead, although she had not examined her.

EIGHT HOUR LAW TO SUPREME COURT

Highest Bench to Pass on Power of Legislators to Limit Hours

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

OTTAWA, Ont., July 25.—(Canadian Press). — The reference to the Supreme Court of Canada of the question of the powers of the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial Legislatures to pass and administer legislation respecting the eight-hour day in industrial undertakings, is in the course of preparation by the Department of Justice. The reference will come before the Supreme Court for advisory judgment and can if appealed be carried to the judicial committee of the Privy Council.

At the conference held in Ottawa last September between representatives of the Federal and Provincial Government's doubt was expressed as to the jurisdiction of the Dominion under the British North America Act.

The purpose of the reference is to ascertain definitely the powers of the Dominion and the Provinces, and is the result of recommendation made to the House of Commons in the last days of the session by the committee on industrial and international relations. The committee made its recommendations after examination of the draft convention adopted by the international labor conference of the League of Nations in 1919, limiting the hours of work in industrial undertakings to eight in the day and forty-eight in the week.

Before the Supreme Court, the reference will be dealt with as an ordinary appeal case. It is uncertain yet as to what stand the Provincial Governments will take or what representations they will make before the Supreme Court.

While doubt was expressed as to the respective powers at the conference of last September, there was a general opinion that as the Federal Government had agreed to the draft convention, it should remain a Federal matter.

WITNESS TELLS OF LEOPOLD'S VIEWS

Leopold Held Being Caught Only Sin — Planned Suicide

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

CHICAGO, July 25. — (Associated Press).—Nathan Leopold, jr., had no code against murder, but only against being caught, according to testimony late today in the hearing which is to determine whether he and Richard Loeb are to hang for the killing of Robert Franks.

He also hoped, soon after his confession to "get off with life imprisonment" by pleading guilty "before a friendly judge," according to the same testimony.

These things were brought out when Sergeant James J. Gortland, secretary to Chicago's chief of detectives, was on thestand. Gortland detailed the remarks as part of conversations he had with the defendant shortly after his arrest and confession.

"Murder is not a crime in my code," Leopold was quoted as saying. "The crime, in my code, is in being caught."

CHICAGO, July 25. — (Associated Press.) — Nathan Leopold planned to take his own life in the event of his being caught in the police dragnet which was spread for the murderers of young Robert Franks, Detective Sergeant William Crot testified the defendant told him on May 31, a few hours after his confession to the crime.

Business Wants

The opportunities of the Want Columns of the Montreal Star are oftentimes worthy of careful consideration.

Many business men call upon the Wants in aiding them in the solution of business problems.

They are most effective in locating just the kind of workers that are most needed, and often they put business men in touch with investors who are glad of the opportunity of securing a part interest in an established business.

The Wants, too, are the medium through which businesses are bought and sold. They aid in the development of new territory, in the distribution of manufactured products and locate competent representatives in various localities.

TYPEWRITER FOUND IN NORTHERN WILDS

Sinclair Lewis Finds Modern Instrument on Lac La Rouge Shores

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

REGINA, Sask., July 25. —(Canadian Press.)—The wilds of northern Saskatchewan have not completely swallowed up Sinclair Lewis, United States author. Today a letter came to W. M. Graham, Indian commissioner, in which Mr. Lewis expressed the greatest delight with the trip.

The letter was written at Lac La Ronge, about 175 miles north of Prince Albert and was dated July 8. It was sent out by special courier to the nearest mailing point. Although it was written far beyond what are commonly accepted as the bounds of civilization the letter was typewritten. The writer secured the use of the machine from the Indian school at the lake. He figures he was using the "farthest north" typewriter in Canada. All members of the party are in good health.

The starch industry of the United States consumes more than 50,000,000 bushels of corn annually.

TRAGEDY ENACTED IN CHICAGO COURT DURING HEARING

HYPNOTIC EYE

Callous Pampered Murderers Falter Before Gaze of Broken Parent

CHICAGO, July 26.—(United News) —Atrocious inhumanity on the part of Richard Loeb and Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., the same perverse quality that led them to spur on the forces hunting down the slayers of 14-year-old Robert Franks, their own victim, again manifested itself yesterday when they became involved in a clash of wills with Jacob Franks, father of the murdered boy.

Witness after witness had described how Loeb had pretended to aid in the hunt for the murderers of Robert Franks; how he even suggested to young newspaper reporters that they conduct a search of stores to determine whether the kidnappers had telephoned Franks, how Loeb had expressed a wish in front of the Franks home that the boy's killers should hang.

In the midst of this testimony, Jacob Franks entered court. Pale and bent, he looked in vain for a seat and could find none. He had come late to determine whether there were mitigating circumstances attending the killing of his son, which had gone into its third day before Chief Justice John R. Caverly, and the court room was filled.

Just as he stepped inside the space reserved for newspaper people, court attaches and lawyers, Franks heard Alvin Goldstein and a reporter testify: "Leopold said, 'If I were to murder someone, Robert Franks is just the kind of a——I would pick out."

FULL OF HATE

The stricken father straightened up with a jerk. He directed a baleful glare in the direction of Loeb and Leopold, who were sitting sneering at the witness and frequently breaking into laughs.

A bailiff espied Franks, and inadvertently motioned him to a chair almost in front of the two slayers, and separated from them by only a narrow aisle. Franks, half stunned, intensely angered at the testimony he had heard on his court entry, gazed at Leopold and Loeb with a burning intensity.

Finally Loeb saw the father of the boy he had helped murder, and again his brazenness came to the front. He started to stare back at the bereaved parent, to look him squarely in the face with an effrontery that amazed spectators, who happened to witness the grim drama.

INTENSE MOMENT

Franks drew himself together and thrust his body forward from the hips. To those near him it seemed as if he were about to hurl himself at the defiant 19-year-old intellectual in an avalanche of resentment against them. Whether Franks intended to do at that moment, he did not carry out his intention.

Leopold returned Franks' gaze. But he could not bear to face the man whose son he had assisted in killing, and he turned away. But Loeb, brazen and insolent, the same youth who had tried to stare State's attorney Robert E. Crowe out of countenance at moments in the prosecutor's opening address, when he was facing the slayers, stared at Franks with an ever-increasing menace in his eyes.

An accomplished hypnotist Loeb had learned in seances with young Chicago University students, how to concentrate his gaze, and perhaps he was trying one of his strange accomplishments on the father of his victim. But righteous indignation at the amazing cruelty exhibited by Loeb had armed Franks in a way that not even the slayer's hypnotic eyes, now narrow almost to pin points, could overcome.

With increasing hatred, Franks and Loeb kept their eyes on each other as they continued their strange duel of wills.

The trial suddenly halted as District Attorney Crowe called over one of the defense counsel. A bailiff then produced another chair and Franks, trembling and incensed, was conducted to a new position, far back of the unnatural pair who abducted and murdered his son.

But before Franks had taken his new seat, he had forced Loeb to drop his eyes. The father, outraged by Loeb's attitude and gaze, had accomplished what none of the detectives or prosecutors who had questioned the young slayer were able to do. Loeb was downcast for a few minutes afterwards. He gazed speculatively at the floor. He was deeply thoughtful. Then he leaned over and whispered to Leopold. During most of the day thereafter, Leopold had rather a haggassed, worried expression. Perhaps in the eyes of the bereaved Franks he had fancied he read his own doom.

COURTS VIEW AUTO.

CHICAGO, July 26. — (Associated Press.) — That the possible consequences of his crime was upon Leopold's mind was further indicated late yesterday by the testimony of E. W. Puttkammer, a professor of criminal law at the University of Chicago, and by Max Wester, a graduate student and tutor.

Professor Puttkammer said Leopold, under the guise of seeking instructions, preliminary to an examination, used the Franks killing as a basis for an academic discussion of criminal intent. The professor said he was asked by Leopold what the status would be if a kidnapper accidentally killed his victim, did it with malice aforethought or abducted him, only for the purpose of "taking liberties" with the victim.

The professor answered these queries by pointing out that kidnapping, like murder, was a death penalty felony in Illinois.

Webster testified that Leopold had inquired whether kidnappers who killed their victim would be guilty of murder, and that he had assured him they would be so guilty.

These questions were asked, the testimony indicated, before the finger of suspicion had been pointed definitely at Leopold and Loeb.

The boys sat through this line of testimony with little outward manifestation of concern. Loeb glanced only occasionally at Leopold as the latter's remarks were put into the records. He sat for the most part in his familiar posture of class room interest, leaning slightly forward and with limp hands that now and then stroked his jaw.

BIG LIST FOR OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

It is expected that the entry list for the Canadian Open Golf Championship to be held at Mount Bruno Golf Club next Friday and Saturday, August 1 and 2—which will no doubt be one of the largest in years for this tourney—will attract one of the largest galleries to witness a golf championship in Montreal. This will be further augmented by such notable players as Walter Hagen, British Open and Belgium champion and winner of every major golf title in the world with the exception of the Canadian Open; Gene Sarazen, well known United States player whose entry was received this afternoon by telegraph; Tommy Armour, famous Scottish amateur, of New York; Joe Kirkwood, the well known trick shot player, who, with Hagen played exhibitions matches at the Country Club of Montreal, last year, and Clarence Hackney, of Atlantic City and a native of Carnoustie, Scotland, and present holder of the title, having won the championship last year with a remarkable aggregate score of 295 for the seventy-two holes.

Hackney won the title from a field which included such players as Gene Sarazen, Jock Hutchison, Johnny Farrell, Laurie Ayton, and several others. Tom Kerrigan, Siwanoy, New York, runner-up last year only five strokes behind the winner, has fyled his entry and will have another go at the title next week.

Other entries received are: Fred Canausa, of New York, who landed in tenth place last year; O. Brault, Ogdensburg; G. Cunningham, Toronto; M. Trichton, of Jamestown, N. Y.; A. J. Campbell, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.; L. F. Callaway, of Williamsville; M. Conway, of Detroit; W. Freeman, Toronto; R. Henry; W. C. Jack, Newark, N. Y.; J. Johnston, Galt; J. B. Kinnear, Hamilton; A. Lindfield, of Weston; W. Lamb, Toronto; G. S. Lyon, well known Toronto player; L. McLean, New York; C. Perkins, of Brantford, who was tied with Karl Keffer, Royal Ottawa, for thirteenth place last year; W. Reekie, Upper Mont Claire; W. Reid, a player highly rated in Detroit; A. Fine, Hamilton; C. W. Grier, Mount Bruno; A. Wilson, Mount Bruno; C. Adams, Toronto; W. McLuckie, C. C. Fraser, J. B. Patterson and W. G. Ross, all of Kanawaki; W. G. Magell; C. F. McKenna, Rochester; C. H. Bemish, Rochester; Lou Diegal, J. Talt, Montford, Conn.; F. Lewis, Walkerville, Ont.; W. C. Grant, and W. Little, unattached.

A large gallery is expected to witness the two days plays at Mount Bruno next week. Arrangements are being made for the occasion. Spectators will wear badges for which a charge of $1.00 will be made for each day. Tags in large quantities have been distributed to the various golf clubs in the district and are now obtainable through the club secretaries.

The draw will take place next Wednesday evening. Entries which are received after noon on Wednesday, July 30, will be accepted as post entries and placed at the foot of the list.

The total prizes for the championship at Mount Bruno amount to $750.00.

AUSTRALIAN TRADE ECLIPSES RECORD

OTTAWA, July 26. — Australian trade returns for the year ending June 1923 show that the total imports from all countries reached £131,757,835 in value and the exports £117,870,147, aggregating a total overseas trade of £249,627,982. Compared with the previous year, imports expanded by £28,691,389 and the exports declined by £9,976,388 it is stated in the Commercial Intelligence Journal for June 26.

Imports of Canadian produce and manufacture received during the year were valued at £5,064,253, an expansion of £1,899,803 over the previous year. It is the largest volume of trade yet recorded from the Dominion, the previous highest year being in 1920-21 when goods to the value of £4,425,262 were received from that source. The largest increase in any one line from Canada was in motor chassis and parts which expanded by £1,154,394. A very satisfactory volume of business was also done in rubber goods including boots and shoes.

Pronounced increases are also recorded in apparel and textiles, timber, electrical appliances and machinery, motive power machinery, lampware and certain classes of paper, but the imports of agricultural implements and machinery and newsprint show considerable reduction the former being due to the higher duties imposed in 1921 and adverse seasons, and the latter to favorable preferential customs rates accorded in the previous year to the British product. Large stock on hand and cool summer months caused a smaller demand for canned salmon.

The value of Australian exports to Canada in the year stated was £304,732 as against £373,570 in 1921-22. The exports to Canada were chiefly wool, hides and skins, foodstuffs and vegetable origin, and meats.

PRESCOTT LIQUOR CASES.

PRESCOTT, Ont., July 26.—(Star Special). — Robert Bailey, of the township Oxford appeared before Grenville County Magistrate Adams at Prescott and was fined $200 and costs for having liquor illegally. W. M. McLaughlin, of Ottawa, appeared for a similar offence and was fined $200 and costs.

MURDER CHARGE WAS REDUCED

Richmond Man Now Faces Manslaughter Indictment Before Higher Court

SHERBROOKE, July 26.—(Canadian Press.)—The charge of murder in the case of Norman Girard, of Richmond, in connection with the death of Irene St. Germain, with the consent of the Crown, was yesterday reduced to one of manslaughter, during the preliminary hearing before Judge Godbout, of Beauce.

Miss St. Germain went out for an auto ride with the accused on the night of July 4 and passed way, the Coroner's Jury returning a verdict that the girl had died from heart failure brought about by shock.

During the afternoon session only one witness was heard, J. A. Larose, in whose employ the young girl was at the time of her death. Following the hearing of his evidence the case was adjourned en delibere until next Wednesday, when judgment will be handed down as to whether or not Girard will be held for trial on a charge of manslaughter at the next session of the court of King's Bench.

Larose, on being questioned if Irene St. Germain was in the habit of going out regularly at nights, stated that it was customary for her to go out two nights a week. He said that he had no fault to find with her character.

BODY RECOVERED.

Paul McDuff, of 91 St. Elizabeth street, took a fatal dive into the river at the back of the Island yesterday. He had been attending a wedding reception and had decided to take a dip before returning to the city. He took the dive from a small boat and was not seen again alive. The body was recovered last evening and a coroner rendered a verdict of accidental death.

STAMPEDING BISONS TERRORIZE 'FRISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26—A Buffalo stampede and hunt in a residential district of San Francisco, ended today with the rounding up of 25 bulls and cows that broke from their paddock in Golden Gate Par. The bisons after breaking down the fence that kept them in their paddock, stampeded to nearby lawns and forced citizens to seek places of safety.

One old bull engaged a street car and was driven off by the motorman armed with his controller bar. Timid householders remained indoors while the maddened buffalo raced around their homes, wrecking gardens and fences. A part of the herd was rounded up late night and soon after dawn this morning park guards and mounted police drove the others back to the Zoo.

BODIES OF TWO BABIES FOUND

Laborer Makes Discovery in Montreal North This Morning

The bodies of two babies, a boy and a girl, were found at 6:45 o'clock this morning between Forest and Dufort streets, by two laborers. The bodies were wrapped in separate parcels, one in brown paper and the other in a newspaper.

They will later be taken to the Morgue. Both babies are practically new born, but the boy is larger and better developed than the girl, and the idea of their being twins is not entertained by the police. An inquiry is under foot.

GROCER DIES AFTER FEW HOURS ILLNESS

After attending the market all morning, apparently in the best of health, Edouard Sigouin, 212a St. Timothee street, returned to his home complaining of being "a bit off." Remaining in his room all afternoon the man, who was a grocer, aged 35, became worse and at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon he died. Miss Annette St. Laurant, sister-in-law, was present at the time of his death. The body was removed to the morgue yesterday afternoon, and an inquest will be held. Deceased is survived by his wife.

IN THE WORLD OF BOOKS

A Stirring Sea-Novel*

SOME considerable time ago I drew attention in this column to a remarkably powerful novel entitled "Sea Wrack," from the pen of Miss Vere Hutchinson, an unknown writer whose claim to public attention, in the eyes of most people, rested upon the fact that she is the sister of the author of "If Winter Comes." But "Sea Wrack" was an infinitely superior work to any Mr. Hutchinson has written, alike in literary flavor and in imaginative qualities. Now Miss Hutchison has given us a second novel, "Great Waters," which definitely establishes her right to inclusion in the little group of young Englishwomen who are doing solid work in fiction.

"Great Waters" is a story of the sea,—of a strange pirate ship and her mad-souled Captain; but more than this, it is a study of the lure of the deep and the healing power of a great love. Miss Hutchinson has a rare faculty for putting into terms the average reader can easily grasp the elusive fascination the sea holds for certain types of manhood. Moreover, she is an artist in the interpretation of sea-moods, and she can make you feel the surge of the ocean, the call of the wind, the thrill of the sea's freedom and the passions that lie within its depths.

I think this is the strangest pirate story I have ever read. It is one of the finest, too, for it goes far deeper than externals, than the mere lust for treasure or love of adventure. There are the great elemental forces of nature at work throughout this book, and the manner in which they lay hold of the hero and school him, shape him, bend him to their will, and finally purge him of evil and make him fit for a noble woman's love is described with a force, a virility, a penetrative quality that lend the record an unusual fascination. You may not care for the sea; you may in fact dislike it, but you will find it hard not to read this book through to the end. The writing grows with the development of the theme, and the theme grows in magnitude until you begin to realize something of the author's intent that you never imagined at the outset.

* * *

There is violence and there is brutality in the tale; but it is never deliberate or designed; it is the inevitable outcome of the clash of lawless natures; and Miss Hutchinson writes always with a fine restraint. Her style is astonishingly masculine; indeed, it is difficult to realize that this story is a woman's work at all, so sturdy is its construction, so vehement the suggestion of wild deeds, so vigorous the touch.

One feels with Peter Comfort the irresistible fascination of the Ship, The Five Wounds, and the irresistible lure the ocean holds for him. Miss Hutchinson can seize a moment of exaltation, of passion or of beauty, and make it unforgettable with the magic of her painting. But she is no less skilled in the delineation of character, in the analysis of violent emotions, and in the dissection of conflicting influences that tear at the heart. She plays with the emotional reflexes as a master upon a violin, and she has the unusual gift of vivid revelation in a single phrase.

* * *

Her description of the influence of the land upon the soul of man and woman alike is equally compelling, and her pictures of Exmoor will be numbered with those of Eden Phillpotts and Quiller Couch. The heroine, Sorrel, is as wild and as lovely as the landscape itself, and her indomitable spirit seems to live in the printed page.

Those who can enjoy a stirring story told with power and combining adventure with the flowering of a love that stands a terrible testing will find in this book something at once strange and rare. I commend it unhesitatingly to the discriminating reader of fiction. It ought to win a very wide and enthusiastic public. Such novels are all too few today.

"The Janitor's Boy" Delicious Verse From Pen of a Young Girl

"The Janitor's Boy & Other Poems," by Nathalia Crane; Thomas Seltzer, New York.

One is always disposed to regard the work of juvenile genius with suspicion and in a good many cases that suspicion is not devoid of some measure of justification. When the exception is presented, therefore, enjoyment is the more enhanced and the sensation of satisfaction accentuated. In the case of Miss Nathalia Crane, the New York child, who began writing humorous verse when she was nine years old and who has published a volume of poems at the age of ten, there is never any question of doubt or of disappointment. For these verses are so clearly the ebullient outpouring of a gifted girl with an astounding sense of humor and a wide range of knowledge. They are not the work of a child wonder, though they contain qualities of sophistication that mark their authoress as a girl of remarkable maturity, if not unnaturally mature. I hate the word "precocity" applied to work of this kind. "Inspiration" is by far the more accurate and expressive term to use, it seems to me.

* * *

Miss Crane has told the story of her childhood affection for Roger Jones, the janitor's boy, in verses that are simply lilting with rhythms that catch the ear. There is a good deal of repetition of imaginery and of situation, it is true, but that is a minor fault. The one picture that appeals to me in the child's work is the astonishing vividness, range, and beauty of her imagination. If ever a youngster was gifted with vision in her childhood, this girl has it. It is easy to trace influences of what she has read,—of the work of various poets and makers of verse, but while she has borrowed metrical forms wholesale, she has not borrowed her imagery, nor has she adopted ideas wholesale from others. What but a child's intensely clear grasp of immediate emotions could have produced this little gem?

"I sat down on a bumble bee.
But I arose again;
And now I know the tenseness of Humiliating pain."

The child must have read widely, omnivorously, and indiscriminately. She must possess an astounding memory and her capacity for assimilating images must be remarkable. But when all due extravagances have been met and all due allowance is made and discount taken for eccentricities and for unconscious imitation, there remains an amazingly substantial bedrock of originality, of melody, of pictorial vividness, of brilliant coloring, and of musical charm.

How far she will go, it would be futile to speculate. But it is to be devoutly hoped that no attempt will be made to spoil her either by indiscriminate praise, unjustified blame, or attempt to school her muse. S. Morgan-Powell.

"The Old Soak's History" Provides Unlimited Laughter

"The Old Soak's History of the World," by Don Marquis. Doubleday Page & Co., New York.

Don Marquis has given the reading world another delightfully humorous book in this last production of his pen, which equals, if it does not excell, his previous much appreciated works. The record of the history of the world is an extensive subject for any man to tackle, even as a comedy. A great deal of knowledge of the events and progress of civilization is necessary to keep on the right track, but it takes a genius like Don Marquis to make the exquisite blunders that he does and to develop the ludicrous conclusions arrived at by the Old Soak on his visit to the French capital.

The Old Soak takes us from the days of Samson down through the ages and never fails to provoke hearty laughter on every available occasion. The language is of a most original and refreshing type and the convulsed reader cannot hope to spell even the simplest words correctly for at least a week after reading the book. The Old Soak is without a doubt the most atractive and realistic character yet presented by Mr. Marquis, and some of his philosophy is not to be passed over lightly.

For a few hours of absolutely unlimited fun, few books are half so appealing, and all who read it will await with keen anticipation the next work from Mr. Marquis' pen in order to renew acquaintance with some of the writer's attractive characters and to revel in his exceptional wit. The comic illustrations by Mr. Stuart Hay are as convulsing to look at as the story itself is to read.

A New Poem From Bliss Carman For The Trail Riders

To the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies

WORD FROM THE MOCCASIN TRAIL

From the land of the Abenakis,—
The rivers and hills of the East,—
An Indian spirit sends greeting
To the great Trail Riders feast.

Afoot and alone with peril
We went with arrow and bow,
Mounted, unarmed and jostling,
In safety at ease you go.

Little enough was our learning.
Small was our craft and skill,
But we saw the feet of the morning
Go by,—and our hearts were still.

We shaped the canoe and the paddle,
We fashioned the snowshoe frame,
And the Great Spirit was with us,
As we kindled the council flame.

You have circled the earth with your knowledge,
Your magic is more and more,
Yet must you heed our wisdom,—
The truth of the wilderness lore.

You ride to make good our beginning,
Our trails to keep clear and extend,
Guarding the lodge and the campfire
In peace at sundown's end.

So, over all we are tribesmen,
By the law that does not swerve—
At home in the tent of the open,
On call through the Great Reserve.

We lift you the friendly signal,
We send you our sign on the air,
Look East for our smoke at evening,
And say, "Our brothers are there."

May no foot want for a stirrup,
No prayer nor adventure fail,
And the Master Guide go with you:
Is the word from the Moccasin Trail.

Bliss Carman.

"Mariflor" Presents Moving Study of a Spanish Community

Those who have some knowledge of the Spanish highlands will find in this remarkable picture of the life of the Maragatos, one of the oldest of the tribes that first inhabited Spain, a book of austere beauty and stern dignity, rare qualities of color, and notable literary flavor. It is a story of quintessential simplicity—the story of a girl's return to her native village, after she has tasted city life, to marry the man of her father's choice. On her way back she meets and falls in love with a poet, a man of impulsive emotions, whose fidelity is as variable as his imagination. Her courageous attitude towards her dreary existence, the struggle between love and duty and the eventual triumph of a renunciation as passionless as it is inevitable—that is the picture Concha Espina paints with a brush that never fails, never blurs the canvas.

The characters are few, but they are drawn with such mastery, such economy of color, such sharp clearness of outline, that they remain in the memory after the book has been finished and laid aside. The authoress has succeeded in creating and sustaining the true atmosphere of these ancient highlands with their strange, time-honored customs and their stern, relentless standard of duty and of living. One is impressed throughout with the overwhelming sense of truth, the fine exercise of restraint, and the sheer beauty of the portraiture and the analysis of emotional conflict. Frances Douglas has done her work with rare judgment and unfailing good taste. "Mariflor" won the highest prize in the gift of the Spanish Academy—a signal honor in a country where authors pour out fiction like water all the year round. It is a novel of signal import, and in its literary charm, unforgettable.

"The Man Lenin," by Isaac Don Levine; Thomas Seltzer, New York.

What will the future say to Nikolai Lenin, high priest of Bolshevism and personification of the Russian Revolution—in his own day; on the one hand, the idol of the rebellious and the iconoclastic in many lands, and, on the other, the bete-noire of all people who believe in the established order of society and in a progress slowly broadening down from precedent to precedent. Up to recently, the exact origin of Lenin has been a matter of dispute. His father, Ulia Ulianov, was born in Astrakhan, of poor middle-class parents. Astrakhan is on the Caspian Sea, and Lenin's somewhat Mongol features were probably due to a strain of Asiatic blood in the family. Vladimir Ilyitch Ulianov—the real name of the man who subsequently became world notorious as Lenin,—was born on April 10, 1870, at Simbirsk, a city on the banks of "Mother" Volga and the cradle of savage peasant rebellions in the 17th and 18th centuries. He distinguished himself as a young student at the University of Kazan, but was expelled for taking part in a revolutionary conspiracy. His brother, Alexander Ulianov, was hanged, together with several accomplices, for plotting the assassination of the Czar. That was in 1887, and thereafter Lenin was a revolutionary agitator. He embraced the Socialistic faith of Karl Marx when he was twenty-three. Subsequently he never had any doubts about it and was indeed incapable of having them. All his abilities were devoted to extending the influence of his faith and planning the overthrow of the established order.

In 1894 Lenin wrote a pamphlet entitled "Who Are the Real Friends of the People?" It reveals that the agitator, at the age of twenty-four, had already perfectly crystallized the faith which he professed a quarter of a century later and in the name of which he led the Bolshevist Revolution in Russia. Lenin's mind was closed on the subject of Marxism. Having once adopted the Marxian theory of the class struggle as the form of the transition of a capitalist society into a socialist one, he dedicated all his keen controversial powers and exhaustive knowledge of Marx to refute his critics by means of innumerable quotations from the works of his master stretching over a period of forty years—and which Marx himself, were he alive, would probably find somewhat contradictory!

The extraordinary phenomenon about Lenin as he stands revealed in Mr. Levine's book is that he combined this unshakable, almost fanatic, faith with a total absence of personal ambition, arrogance or pride. Unselfish and irreproachable in his personal character, of a retiring disposition, almost ascetic in his habits, extremely modest and gentle in his direct contact with people, although peremptory and derisive in his treatment of political enemies, he could be daring and provocative in his policies, inflexible in the execution of his principles, unscrupulous in his methods of government and crafty and bestially brutal in his handling of those who opposed him. A philosopher who despised philosophy, an intellectual who scorned intellectuals, a thinker who defied action, he was a rebel against force by means of force, a general who utilized the most abhorrent forces of cruelty to further his own ends. Possessed of a keen sense of mass psychology, Lenin as the champion of the dark, toiling masses of Russia had no delusions as to their ignorance and submissiveness, however.

* * *

As Mr. Levine shows in his book, Marxism is a failure, not only in Russia because that country is economically backward, but also in the rest of the world because its theory of the class struggle has been exploded by the development of human society along different lines. Marx was right in his analysis of the evolution of feudalism into capitalism, but he was wrong in assuming that capitalism would be followed by socialism. This assumption is the cancer of Leninism," says Mr. Levine. Lenin was Bolshevism personified, and Bolshevism in its pure form is Leninism. But Lenin invented nothing. He only followed Karl Marx. He demonstrated once more the fallacy and emptiness of political democracy in a world of economic serfdom. He did not discard the instruments of domination exercised by the capitalist state, but sharpened them. He did not introduce a new idea into the character of our social structure, he did not give us a new conception of the state, he did not show us how to build modern human society on new bases. Had Lenin produced an idea of a civilization other than that of physical force, he might have deserved the name of genius. But his weapons were as ancient as human society,—namely, violence and despotism.

Rupert Hughes in "The Golden Ladder" Borrows from History

"The Golden Ladder," by Rupert Hughes; Harper Brothers, New York. Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, Toronto.

Mr. Hughes' novels are generally acclaimed with enthusiasm, and his numerous admirers will not be disappointed in his latest tale, "The Golden Ladder," the story of Betty Bowen, a genuine American Becky Sharpe. The author has seized upon a subject as fascinating as it is instructive, for the story is founded on fact and the adventurous Betty actually lived in Providence in the eighteenth century. The story of a beautiful, heartless and adventurous girl is usually fascinating, and just as Becky is the original lovable but wicked adventuress of English fiction, so is Betty Bowen of American fiction. Betty's gradual and plucky ascent of the golden ladder of fame is the main theme of the novel and the steppingstones she used in her climb are not always unattractive. From a poor, remote village in Providence to the court of Kings in France was a long and perilous journey, but not one that daunted the fearless Betty, and although there were times when things went wrong and respectability was a minus quantity, the chivalrous reader will generally admire a pretty woman, no matter how great her faults. A glimpse of the French revolution and of American politics in those far distant days are features that lend added attraction to the story, and the general impression created is of a novel full of life, joys, adventures and not a few sorrows.

Mr. Hughes' reputation as a popular novelist can only be enhanced by this book. The average reader will be attracted by the free and expressive style as much as by the charming and often malicious qualities of its dauntless heroine.

Powerful Picture Of Russian Revolt Is "Wine of Fury"

This first novel by Mr. Rogers gives us a vivid picture of Russian life during the recent revolution, and with a power that only a talented writer with vision could employ reveals the dire state of affairs in that unhappy country through the medium of an intriguing story of politics, love, finance and the days of terror. This young American author is evidentally well acquainted with Russian political history and not only gives his readers the benefit of his knowledge but entertains them as well in a very attractive handling of a somewhat sordid subject.

The story is that of a young American, David Rand by name, who comes to Russia representing a great American financial institution. Just before the outbreak of the revolution and who remains throughout some of its most horrible and ruthless periods. His relations with Natalie, a young Russian aristocrat, and with Naritsa the dancer, although of a widely different nature, prove engrossing, and although the story deals mostly with topics none too pleasant there are passages that serve to indicate clearly the author's skill in dealing with simple subjects in an unaffected and candid manner. Mr. Rogers can hold attention not only by the relation of harrowing experiences or blood-curdling events, but by the sincerity of his narritive and the complete absence of pretense to any superiority in dealing with his more humble characters and their equally humble affairs. The plot is carefully and logically developed, and at no moment is there a strain on the credulity or patience of the reader. This in itself is a quality that marks the book apart from the ordinary and its author as a perspicuous and sympathetic writer.

* * *

For a first novel this story comes as a pleasant surprise. The pen-pictures of Russia are notable,—the work of a literary artist of keen perception and vivid descriptive powers. Even the sordidness of the theme,—on account of any of the phases of the Russian revolution without sordidness is impossible,—is materially mitigated by the masterly descriptive work. Though painted in phrases of a polished quality and devoid of offensive characteristics, the full horror and brutality of the scenes described are in no way lost, and the reader has not the least difficulty in realizing the mental pictures suggested by the author. "Wine of Fury" is aptly named. Those who are interested in Russia and her affairs will derive much information from its perusal and at the same time become acquainted with a writer whose imaginative qualities are balanced by a rare talent for delicate and graceful expression.

Lake Superior Region Furnishes the Setting For New Curwood Novel

The north shore of Lake Superior has been chosen by Mr. Curwood for the setting by his new novel. Probably there are few in real life who, passing through that wilderness region forty years ago, would have said with the Pierre Gourdon of the story: "This will be a good place to live in, it is what we have been looking for." But as described by the pen of a lover of wild nature, the attraction it had for Pierre and his companions extends to the imagination of the reader.

* * *

Two log cabins, one for Pierre Gourdon, his wife Josette, and their small son Joe, the other for Dominique Beauvais and his wife Marie, form the nucleus of the new settlement. The reader watches the little colony grow as the seasons follow each other and a few more settlers arrive from Ontario and Quebec. In the great autumn storm of 1900, Pierre Gourdon rescues little Mona Guyon, the only survivor from a wreck. A few years later a lad arrives at the settlement with a letter from his father to Simon McQuarrie, a Scotchman who has started a saw-mill on the shore. This boy is Peter McRae, whose father is a fugitive in the wilderness from the law, having killed a man—in circumstances that should have given him a good chance with a jury, if he had stood his trial instead of hiding himself in the forest, which would have saved him a lot of trouble, but, of course, spoiled the story.

The love story of Mona and Peter McRea, who throughout proves himself a gentleman of courage," forms the pivot of the plot, in which there are thrilling adventures, mostly connected with Peter's father and the extraordinarily long and relentless arm of the law.

The graphic description of the wildly picturesque region seen in nature's varying moods, and the portrayal of the simple, industrious life of the little settlement and the changes which time brings to it, have a certain appeal to many readers, whose lines are cast in more sophisticated places, and this romance will no doubt prove as popular as former novels from the same pen.

A Notable Scottish Novel Now Receiving A Tardy Recognition

"Justice of the Peace," by Frederick Niven, with introductions by Hugh Walpole and Christopher Morley; Boni and Liveright, New York; The Macmillan Company of Canada, Ltd., Toronto.

Almost ten years ago, "Justice of the Peace" made its first apearance in England and was recognized as a real and genuine contribution to the small and exclusive list of Scottish novels. Christopher Morley, whose preface is attached to the book, expresses his surprise that it was never published before in America. In his opinion it is a remarkable achievement, deserving of recognition and a place among the great novels of today.

Perhaps the best quality of "Justice of the Peace" is the honesty and ruggedness of the narrative, which is so characteristically Scotch. It is impossible to find anywhere in the book a single example of prettiness or extravagant phrasing. Like that great race who have become so thrifty and tough in their honest struggle to secure a living from a rugged and unsympathetic land, Mr. Niven's style possesses an individual strength, hardiness and purity. One remarkable thing is that in reading the book we are almost utterly unconscious that the author is employing a medium of expression in relating the story. His language is as clear as a sheet of glass or a limpid pool of water; it does not form a barrier between the reader and the characters. It is as if we knew them, as if they were sheer human beings like ourselves.

* * *

Mr. Niven is a keen observer. Any painter would appreciate his sharp little mental canvasses that remain in the mind as clearly as the familiar places of our own town. He has that gift which is one of the greatest an artist in prose can possess, namely, a sense of place. In a phrase or two he catches the very atmosphere of a place whether it is a close, smoky street in Glasgow, or a great brine-scented shore, on the following there seems to be something eerie about the clammy cliffs:

"Feeling something like a horror stirring within him, Martin looked over the boat's side, and far below were forests of seaweed, brown, red, green and yellowly green, stretching up toward the surface as trees stretch to the sky. Melancholy and lonely-sounding plipplops were going on all along cliff sounding and echoing, as they had sounded and echoed, thought Martin, for ages."

* * *

The theme is a great and tragic one. Christopher Morley calls it a murder story. It is, he says, the murder of a man's spirit by wanton, jealous selfishness, a dull, peevish selfishness that rots the soul.

The theme of the struggle between an artistic son and narrowly religious parents is an old one, but Mr. Niven makes something new of it, something artistic and real. The conflict is between those who understand and those who don't,—a particularly dreadful opposition in one household!

The characterizations are admirable. Mrs. Moir, thin-lipped, austere, is the morbid conventional mother, whom Mr. Niven has endowed with a somewhat unexpected sympathy. The portrait of Moir, the young artist, is splendid, and we believe in him, although his tragic end seems a trifle contrived.

Portrait of Young Modern Woman Given In Well Written Tale

"Patricia's Awakening," by Harold James Barrett; Thomas Y. Crowell, New York.

"Patricia's Awakening" is a book that should appeal to all interested in the study of the modern young girl, but it is futile to delude one's self that Pat is a flapper. Whoever heard of a flapper of twenty-five who has been adorning society for five years? This suggests that Pat did not come out until she was twenty; but what flapper ever possessed enough patience to wait until she was twenty to launch herself upon the world! Pat Keller is a charming girl rather advanced for her twenty-five years. Her experience has been sufficient but she has been by no means indiscriminately amourous. This much is made quite clear throughout the whole story.

Phyllis Winslow, an old-fashioned girl, is introduced with the intention of showing Pat sharply by contrast, but though the author's idea is good enough, Pat is not reckless enough to appear in strikingly bold relief. The story is an interesting one, however, and we follow our heroine through many phases of a colourful existence. She believes hereself to be in love with several different men, but only after a great deal of trouble and many sobering experiences does she find the real man and settle down to a life that seems drab for a young girl of her upbringing. The man in the book are not very convincing.

Mr. Barrett has attempted a task which is neither easy nor satisfactory, for people have come to compare all flappers and all young girls of new fiction for that matter, with one outstanding example, and in this case the author has got little further than resemblance.

VIVISECTION

SIR HENRY IRVING:

"Well, I've a dog, too, and my feeling about vivisection is this, that if I came into a room and found a man, scientist or not, sticking a knife into my dog, he would very quickly find that knife sticking in him."

Your First Duty

A MAN'S first duty is to provide for his dependents. That is his part in the Creator's plan of life.

To provide for them while he lives, to make provision for them should he die—he has no more serious earthly charge than this.

Mutual Life Insurance is a further step towards an ideal of brotherhood by which men co-operate to provide for the widowed and the fatherless and the aged on a permanent, scientific basis. It is not an organization for profit, although it is operated at a liberal margin of profit. It is an organization for mutual protection. Profits go back to the policyholders and serve to reduce the cost of insurance.

Let our agent discuss your insurance problem and recommend the type of policy you need.

There is some hope that either a syndicate of independent banking groups or of German banking houses in the United States and elsewhere would endeavor to float the vital loan.

Charles Evans Hughes, the American Secretary of State, recently told Europe in a speech here that failure of the Dawes plan meant chaos in Europe. The majority of the conferees, as well as the unofficial American representatives here agree with him.

Hence, when the conference resumes Monday a strenuous day is in prospect. If a formula is devised by that time, the afternoon's plenary session will send an invitation to Berlin for the German representatives to come to London, and meanwhile draw up the protocol. If no formula is found, the invitation probably will be delayed while the conferees determine finally whether both the French and the financiers are hopelessly deadlocked in their attempts to reach an agreement mutually satisfactory. But it is now declared impossible merely to break up the conference. The consequence would be disastrous.

The necessary loan, it is pointed out, totals only $200,000,000 and this is a sum which the peoples of the world would not be likely to regard as too large an amount to risk when the alternative probably would mean a collapse of Germany and perhaps of France as well as depression throughout the world.

A final agreement by the conference which did not satisfy the banking interests—who are not interested in politics but merely do not want to lend capital to what they would consider an unfavorable investment—probably would work in halting fashion, but there is talk among the statesmen of appealing to "persons outside the ordinary investment market." It is suggested that beside the appeal to the independent German bankers, overtures might also be made to individuals, particularly Germans in the United States, the Argentine Republic and other centres of German population.

DETERMINED ON SETTLEMENT.

LONDON, July 26. — (United News.)—It shall not fail. This is the slowly, hardening determination of Allied and American statesmen toward the Allied Reparations Conference which is meeting here to make a final attempt to solve the post-war problems of Europe by putting into effect the Dawes experts' plan for the solution of the reparations problem and the rehabilitation of Germany.

If an agreement between the International bankers and the French representatives on the question of future sanctions in case of German default is found impossible, the conferees intend to launch the Dawes plan without a guarantee from the financiers that the $200,000,000 German loan, the sine qua non of the experts program, can be raised.

From both British and American sources, it is learned definitely that if the impasse caused by the adamant attitude of the Morgan and Bank of England interests continues the conference will adopt the report of its committee on sanctions and draw up the protocol of the conference, listen to the views and arguments of the Germans and then sound out the loan market as to the possibilities of raising the credit elsewhere.

GERMANY FOR REPORT.

BERLIN, July 26.—(United Press.)—Despite the sabotage efforts of the Nationalists the German Government will stand by the Dawes plan and try to fulfill its provisions for a reparations solution.

"The Government attitude has not altered since the statement I made upon assuming office," Marx declared.

When he first took office the chancellor promised that Germany would abide by the terms of the experts' report, provided arrangements was made for the French evacuation of the Ruhr.

In confirming that promise before the Reichstag after recent threats by the Nationalists to wreck application of the Dawes report, Marx cautiously added that he did not consider it advisable to elaborate on his views. The time is not opportune to enter a long discussion of the German position, he pointed out.

Marx said the original government statement still covered the situation. In his first announcement Marx declared for open acceptance of the Dawes returns but regarded it as proper that the Allies should restore Germany's economic sovereignty.

In other words, it is the belief of the chancellor and his government that all the conditions stipulated in the Dawes plan should be carried out. They provided for gradual Allied withdrawal from the Ruhr and the return to Germany of control of her economic life.

The chancellor referred to the repeated Allied charges regarding Germany's guilt for the war—the "guilty lie" as the Germans call it. The Nationalists have planned to capitalize the German resentment on this score. Marx referred to an earlier statement in which he held that Germany was not solely guilty for the war and emphasized that time was required to present the German case and that "history alone could be final judge."

Speaking jointly for the Centrists, the Democrats and the Folks party, Herr Fehrenbach declared on the floor of the Reichstag that all three of those parties approved of the government's foreign policy and of regulation "on reparations through the Dawes' plan." But the terms provided by the experts report itself must be fulfilled Fehrenbach said and the parties he spoke for insisting on an economic and military evacuation of all territory now occupied in excess of that mentioned in the Treaty of Versailles as well as the restoration of German sovereignty.

Philip Scheidemann then declared that the Socialists were ready and even yearning to take the whole question of the experts plan and other pressing international problems to the people in case the Reichstag adopted a policy of sabotage.

SMALL'S SISTERS SCORE HANDLING OF DEATH PROBE

WRITE TO MAYOR

"Need Less Law, More Justice in Ontario," They State

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

TORONTO, July 25.—(Star Special)—Florence Small and Gertrude M. Small, sisters of A. J. Small, the missing theatrical magnate, have written the following letter to Mayor Hiltz under today's date:

It is headed: "Re murder of our brother, Ambrose J. Small," and is as follows:

"Sir,—In our letter of the 5th inst., addressed to you, we asked the following questions:

"1—Did the City intend digging that particular part of the Rosedale Ravine Dump, where many believe our brother's body is lying? Or, failing to do so, would the city give us permission to dig at our own expense?

"2—The name of the city detective who had been detailed to continue the investigation of our brother's disappearance, after Detective Mitchell was sent in policeman's uniform? We wish to respectfully point out to you, Mr. Mayor, that you have not, up to the present, answered our questions, 1 and 2, as above."

"In the Province of Quebec a Roman Catholic Priest was suspected of murdering his brother. Did the Taschereau Government of Quebec do their duty in this case? Yes. Did Detective Lajoie and the Montreal police do their duty in this case? Yes. And no man or woman can say that the Quebec authorities have not done their utmost to convict the priest in question."

"On the other hand, did the U. F. O. Government and the Ontario police do their duty in connection with the murder of our brother? Did they make any attempt to round up the suspected criminals? The results of the investigation or non-investigation of our brother's murder, by the Ontario authorities, speaks louder than tongue or pen.

"The Captain Houston Mystery' is another legacy left by the U. F. O., and we believe that almost seventy per cent. of the crimes committed in Ontario during the last five years are still undetected. The bootlegging business seems to have got them all by the ears in this Province. So it is up to us to sweep our doorsteps before we criticize the law enforcement of Quebec, the United States or any other country, or before we say 'Ontario's' police forces are the finest in the world.

"What we need in Ontario is less law and more justice.

"The avaricious propensities of the U. F. O. when in office evidently got the upper hand of their Divine Creature, called Conscience, and they had no time to trouble about the murder of our citizens. Their war-whoop then was 'gold and more gold,' but now it seems to be 'two and a half per cent. beer.'

"If the authorities of this Province believe we will forget our brother's disappearance, then we can only say they are laboring under a false and artificial delusion. We will use and continue to use every legal means in our power to put the hangman's rope around the neck of the ghoulish, cowardly persons who murdered our brother, some of whom, we believe, are still walking around Toronto free and unafraid in this vast assembly of organized society."

Drenching Rains Dampen Actors, But Not Enthusiasm At Wembley Empire Pageant

LONDON, July 26. — (Canadian Press.) — Rain partially marred the opening of the pageant of Empire at the Wembley Stadium last night. Nevertheless, the wonderful spectacle was carried out with the most commendable enthusiasm, though the majority of the performers were drenched to the skin.

The program consisted of part two, presenting early periods in the history of England, South Africa and India. The performance was continually cheered by the huge body of spectators, which included Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, Premier Ramsay MacDonald and the majority of the Cabinet ministers.

The lighting scheme in the Stadium is most effective, while pageant master Lascelles controlled vast numbers of people by means of a system of telephones and electric signs.

Part one, including Canadian episodes, and part three will be performed today. A program of appropriate musical numbers will be played at each performance.

LE BOURGET, July 26.— (United Press.)—Major Petro Zanni, Argentine aviator, who entered the world flight competition today, starting from Amsterdam for Paris and descending at Rotterdam, left Rotterdam again for Paris at 9:45 a.m., according to word received here, where members of the Argentine colony awaited his arrival.

The weather was most unfavorable for flying, with low scudding clouds and winds of hurricane velocity. Pilots who fly the Amsterdam air route regularly said it was impossible to make the trip in such weather and refused themselves to ascend.

SPANISH CONSUL IS OUT ON BAIL

Gets Temporary Release for $5,000 on Charge of Smuggling

From Last Night's Night Edition

The case of Miguel Maluquer, Spanish Consul, and Raymon Tey de Torrents, charged with conspiracy to smuggle alcohol and narcotic drugs, was continued yesterday afternoon in the Court of Sessions before Chief Judge Decarie, when Zenon Dufresne, who was employed by the R.C.M.P., was again on the witness box, undergoing cross-examination by Philippe Monette, counsel for Maluquer. The case will come up again next Monday afternoon.

It was announced that the Spanish Consul was now out on bail, the sum of $5,000 having been deposited in Court for his temporary release.

In reply to Mr. Monette's questions, Dufresne recited what passed at several meetngs between himself, Brown (Robino) and the accused prior to the departure of Robino for Spain. He acknowledged that while he and Robino never wished to import drugs into Canada, they represented themselves to both Maluquer and de Torrents that they were drug importers, and it was also their wish to import drugs so as to break a system of smuggling which, they had been told, had existed for quite a while.

Dufresne said that at the beginning of September, 1923, Malquer and de Torrents had a quarrel over the question of money.

He said they were jealous of each other and grudged each other the money they were to make through Robino. He said the difficulties between the two accused lasted until January, 1924, when it appeared they began to see each other again. He said that he used to see both Maluquer and de Torrents, and had tried all the time to reconcile the two men, representing to them that things would go on better if they became friends again.

BRITISH INDUSTRY REPORTED BETTER

Secretary of Federation Arrives to Arrange Exhibits in Canada

QUEBEC, July 25.—(Star Special)—B. M. Bellasis, Secretary of the Federation of British Industries, in an interview on board the Canadian Pacific Steamer Montcalm, which arrived early this morning from Liverpool, stated that there was still some unemployment in England but on the whole industry in Great Britain had picked up to a remarkable extent during the past year.

Mr. Bellasis is on his way to Toronto to arrange for the requirements of more than thirty British manufacturers during the exhibition which will open in the Queen City August 23. He said the 2,000 members of the Federation were very much interested in the industrial development of Canada and were so satisfied with the results obtained through last year's exhibition in Toronto that they would be well represented again this year.

With the exception of twelve, the 461 third class passengers of the Montcalm who were landed here were immigrants from different parts of the United Kingdom, the Western Provinces being destined to receive slightly more than Ontario for farm work. Frank Coates, nine years old, came over on the ship alone and will join his brother in Montreal. Two special Canadian Pacific trains left with the third class passengers at 10 and 10:15 o'clock this morning.

Acts or Words

THOSE who firmly believe that the church-going habit and all that it implies is good for the community and the individual, but who do not themselves always act according to their convictions, should imagine conditions if everybody else suddenly adopted the same principles. Most citizens would feel thoroughly dismayed if all the churches of their city remained empty. Such a catastrophe should not be necessary to remind them to do their share by regular attendance at the church of their choice.

PROPHECY VI
AMOS 3:7.
TIME popularly is viewed as "a pandemonium ending with a conflagration." But even on a misgoverned earth it is ordained that for all the forbidding character of its ages they shall proceed upon an ordered basis. The arrival of ARMAGEDDON, therefore, is, by the foreknown overruled force of its sin-propelled MOMENTUM, at its Divinely assigned HOUR and PLACE. And this is, at the CLOSE of the Gospel Age, and the COMMENCEMENT of the Millenial.
The present age, the Sixth in course, is Scripturally called "GRACE AND TRUTH." It is so termed in John 1:17, where it is presented in contrast with the previous one of LAW. The ensuing Seventh, the MILLENIAL, is known both as "the times of the restitution of all things," (Acts 3:21) and "the dispensation of the fulness of times." (Ephes. 1:10. See Scofield Bible). This is the promised KINGDOM AGE, when the heavens rule the earth, and right its wrongs in RIGHTEOUSNESS.
Meanwhile, as "the TIMES of the Gentiles" pass into "the FULNESS of the Gentiles." (Lk. 21:24 and Rom. 11:25) so is the wrath of man harnessed to GOD'S ends, and MADE TO DELIVER instead of subjugate or annihilate. Thus in the late war Gallipoli was MADE IMPOSSIBLE; the forces there being Divinely diverted to take JERUSALEM instead, whose time had come, and which is now no longer "down-trodden" by an "abomination of desolation." With the same prophetic sureness, the coming greater war will be overruled to free the PEOPLE of the CITY. Their Gentile servitude in judgment will be expiated. Their "blindness" and "casting off" be over. To the NATIONS, the coming welter of trouble is known as Armageddon. To the JEW it will be the GREAT TRIBULATION. And except for "the Lord from heaven" covenantly true to the help of His Own, Jew and Gentile both must assuredly perish in a cataclysm of hate and horror. Salvation truly then "is of the Jews." A world, wrecked by its worst war does not GO DOWN, because, Christ, as promised, COMES DOWN. 2 Thess. 1:7-10.

About 3,000 Local Men Affected by Temporary Lay-off

MEN VOTING

Men Will Also Be Unemployed on Other Parts of System

From Last Night's Night Edition

Canadian National Railway shops at Point St. Charles are closing down tonight and will not reopen until Monday, August 4. This means a temporary lay-off of nearly 3,000 men. The closure is general over the Canadian National Railway, Central Region. Shops closing in addition to Point St. Charles shops are Stratford, Ont., Leeside, Toronto, St. Malo, Quebec, and Limoilou, eight in all. Men affected, number over 6,000, including those at Point St. Charles.

Voting in shops in Central Region, C.N.R. on the question of whether the men will accept periodical close-downs, instead of a reduction of staff took place this week and results are now coming in.

Men in Point St. Charles shops have gone on record in favor of a close-down for one week per month for the present in preference to reduction of staff by about 550 men. This would mean a loss in wages of $30 a month for each man.

At the same time the men are instructing their officers to do all in their power by conference with the management of the C.N.R. to minimise their periodical layoffs.

Voting in other shops is not yet completed in all cases. Stratford, Ont., has voted on the same lines as Montreal, the men voting overwhelmingly in favor of periodical close-downs rather than reduction of staff. Other shops heard from have voted in favor of reduction of staff stating that the men cannot live and support their families on three weeks' work per month, with the working week consisting only of 40 hours, the minimum week decided upon by railshopmen throughout the Dominion.

Some shops have still to be heard from.

Balloting on the policy to be followed took place in all the seven shops of the Central Region.

MURDERED CONSUL'S WIFE ASSAULTED

Mrs. Imbrie Attacked In Persia—Revolt Feared Against Foreigners

LONDON, July 26—(United News)—Mrs. Robert Imbrie, wife of the American vice-consul who was beaten to death by a Persian mob, has also been attacked and insulted in Persia, according to a despatch from Teheran to the London Times.

While Persian police stood by, and made no attempt to interfere, Mrs. Imbrie is declared to have been attacked by a young man, who then spat upon her, and tore the veil of mourning from her face as she rode in an automobile with a physician attached to the American mission.

This incident, within a week of Major Imbrie's murder on the eve of the religious festival of Moharram has roused the foreign colony, who fear a general outbreak of violence against all foreigners.

The population of New York equals that of Belgium and exceeds that of the whole of Australia by more than 2,000,000.

CAPTAIN BERNIER MEETS HEAVY GALE

Canadian Explorer Has Stormy Time in Northern Waters

OTTAWA, July 26. — (Star Special by Own Correspondent.) — Captain Bernier who started out some weeks ago on another cruise to the Arctic water for the Interior Department has encountered a gale and found it necessary to jettison a part of his coal supply.

The Department has received a radio message from the SS. Arctic stating that the ship, in a heavy storm, took on so much water that her fires were put out for a day. It was found necessary to throw over several tons of coal after which the vessel came to, the fires were started up and the voyage is continuing. The different mounted police posts will be visited and some other work carried on.

POLITICAL OUTBREAK FEARED IN BALKANS

VIENNA, July 26—(United News)—The greater part of Rumania is reported to be under martial law, according to unconfirmed advices reaching Vienna. The Government is said to have prohibited all public meetings, called in protest against present state institutions.

The reason for the reported decree is not known, but it is understood to be designed against the communistic propaganda, which is becoming more intense throughout the Balkans.

Coinciding with rumors of the critical Rumanian situation, Bulgaria is reported to be on the eve of dangerous political troubles.

ACQUIT PAOLO AMANTI.

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

At the preliminary hearing Thursday in the case of Paolo Amanti, charged with Paul French and others with holding up the paymaster of the British Empire Steel Company at Hochelaga on May 31 last, Judge Cusson ordered Amanti acquitted on the ground of lack of proof to hold him for voluntary statement. French was committed yesterday for voluntary statement on July 31. Leo Mahoney alias "Red" Green Mahoney, who is also charged with the same offence, is still at large.

B.C. LUMBER TRADE GROWS.

VICTORIA, July 26. — (Canadian Press)—Expansion of British Columbia's great lumber industry during the first half of this year is indicated by log scale figures issued at the forest branch of the lands department. These figures show that up to the end of June 1, 231,316,952 feet of timber had been cut in the province, against 1,104,573,052 for the corresponding period last year.

PARIS, July 25.—(United Press.) — In the Olympic yachting contests, (semi-finals), for eight metre boats today, Norway won in 3 hours, 33 minutes, 7 seconds, with Britain second, over a minute behind, and France last. The Belgians withdrew because of rough weather.

ATTORNEY WOULD SEIZE C.N.R. CARS

Order Sought at Buffalo Following Confiscation of Ale

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 25—(Star Special.)—A court order authorizing the sale of three freight cars, property of the Canadian National Railway System will be sought by Deputy United States Attorney Thomas J. Penny, Jr. The order will be sought of United States Judge John R. Hazel at a special hearing next Tuesday morning. The value of the three freight cars is appraised at $2,000 a piece. Attorney John W. Ryan, representing the Grand Trunk Lines and the Canadian National Railway System will oppose any move to have the seized cars sold at auction. The three freight cars were seized by United States customs inspectors in Niagara Falls last June. A close inspection of the cars revealed nearly 2,000 bottles of Canadian ale shipped from Montreal. The shipment was billed as "hay and straw." The manner in which the ale was packed caused suspicion among the inspectors who began a search. Five hundred bottles of ale were neatly packed in three large bags covered with heavy paper and straw. Customs inspectors failed to ascertain to whom the ale was consigned as nobody claimed it upon its arrival.

A short time ago United States Judge Hazel signed an order upon application of Deputy States Attorney Strebel to have the ale destroyed. The marshal will destroy the ale by dropping the bottles in the whirlpools of Niagara Falls. The ale was valued at nearly $5,000, according to bootleg prices. The United States Government contends that the prohibition and tariff laws have been violated.

Col. William J. Donovan, United States Attorney after assigning Deputy Penny to handle the case expressed belief that no international complications would arise with the seizure of the Canadian Government property. It was learned that scores of letters on the matter have been exchanged with Ottawa. Attorney Ryan on behalf of the Canadian Government has prepared an unusually important brief in the matter with claim that unless the United States Government produces evidence that the ale was shipped to Niagara Falls with the knowledge of railway officials, the cars cannot be seized. That three freight cars are in the custody of the United States customs inspectors. Whether application will be made to have the freight cars released in bond is a matter neither side would care to discuss today. The case is being watched with great interest as similar matters are hingeing on Judge Hazel's ruling in the first case.

W. E. O'CONNOR ACQUITTED.

(From Last Night's Night Edition.)

In the case of W. E. O'Connor, 98 City Councillors street, charged with theft with violence of the sum of $8.50 from Thomas Hancock, Judge Cusson Thursday ordered the case dismissed and the acquittal of O'Connor, on the ground that identification of the accused had not been made. Charles Giles, who was also charged with the same offence, was committed for voluntary statement fixed for July 31.

MUSIC

MUSIC WITH A PUNCH

Boxing has now got into opera. In "Hugh the Drover," a new opera by Dr. Vaughan Williams, which had its first performance in London last week, one of the chief episodes is a fight of two rounds. The scene is a village fair and the butcher, who is the local champion, challenges all comers. The drover takes up the challenge and they fight for twenty pounds and, much more important, the heroine, whom they both love. Of course the drover wins,—with a knock-out in the second round;—he could have had the fight on a foul at the beginning of the round, when the butcher tried kicking, but, quite properly for the hero of an opera, preferred to fight on. All of which is illustrated by the music and must make as good a scene as is to be found in opera.

* * *

This seems to be the right kind of material for a really English opera, and much more suited to musical treatment than might first appear. Music has much more relation to movement of any kind than to most of the ideas that are expressed or would be expressed in opera, yet operas usually have very little movement, except now and then a very sham fight. Even ballets have had not much to do with sport. The Diaghilev Russian company had some years ago a, so-called, sports ballet, but sports were only suggested by girls carrying rackets, with which they made motions which were good dancing but very poor tennis.

* * *

If boxing, and perhaps later on other sports, can help opera, music might do more to help sport. It is being used already to help work, and not only the sort of work which is made up of motions in rhythm. The right kind of music is said to help every sort of work. There is a story of a ship's officer who could not make out why his men were so slow with a job of painting till he noticed that the ship's band was always playing slow music. He talked to the band-master and got faster and more cheerful music and the work was finished, according to the story, twice as fast as before.

It appears to be the constant complaint of people who go to boxing matches that it is hard to get boxers who fight fast enough. Why not try the effect of a little music of a suitable kind? Perhaps the music from Dr. Williams' opera might be calculated to secure a knock-out in two rounds, though it would, of course, be necessary to cut out the music which describes the foul. Since the fighters in the opera are not only a drover and a butcher but are, in any case, opera singers, it is fairly safe to assume that they are heavyweights, and Dr. Williams can, at times, write music which is well suited to heavy-weights. The music and its performance should properly be varied to meet the conditions. The Dempseys and the Firpos would need all the brass and drums that could be got, but the fly-weights might be able to punish each other quite well to the sounds of a string quartette or even a cornet solo.

Those under 16 years. 3. Open. In the first two classes competitors must use single hole, 20 reed instruments, in the third class, any style of instrument may be used. In all classes competitors will play their own selections.

MUSICAL COMPETITIONS AT THE TORONTO EXHIBITION.

Attention is drawn to the fact that entries for the musical competitions at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, excepting the Mouth Organ Competition, must be received not later than August 1. It is stated that nearly every year a number of entries are received after the lists have closed, which naturally leads to considerable disappointment to would-be competitors and to the directors of the competitions.

Here and There

(From the London Daily Telegraph).

"Said the reporter of a great daily newspaper recently to the churchwarden of a London church, which justifiably prides itself on its musical performances, "Can you tell me the name of the lady in the mauve hat—that other in black, etc." No," said the churchwarden, adding that he was more concerned with the music; "Can you not refer in your report to the beauty of the music of the Mass, by Rachmaninoff, which we have just heard?" "Certainly," quoth the reporter—"And the words are by——?" This is literally a true piece of London history!

Music in New York;

The Making of an Orchestra Leader.

There is an attraction about leading an orchestra that it not quite indicated by the numbers who attempt such a calling. If the romantic ambition of many a young musical person went satisfied, the country would be abundant with budding conductors. There is something fascinating about making music, and the orchestra is the largest instrument upon which it can be made.

We asked Willem Van Hoogstraten, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, America's oldest symphony society, for an explanation of the dearth of home-bred leaders.

"In Europe"—and Mr. Van Hoogstraten, incidentally, is from Holland, a nation not too small to build up one of the world's greatest orchestras in Amsterdam,—"a city of 30,000 population will have an orchestra. But here there are less than ten on the entire continent. How can you be expected to develop conductors?

"A leader develops. He is not taught to lead. In my own case I started as a violin player, choosing the violin not because I thought it might some day lead to the baton, but because I liked it. In Europe we have our conservatory orchestras, which give a wealth of training. Then as a violin player, I was greatly interested in quartette music and chamber music in general. It is surely the highest form of music, and the string quartette is a small orchestra.

"Playing under leaders, such great leaders as Nikisch and Mahler, brought my longing to conduct. I then studied to be a concert-master, and after a time started leading my own small group. Quite a small thing it was. Then came a larger orchestra of 35 or 40 pieces, and so things went along.

"There must be a natural inclination to be a leader. And there is no better training for the position than to play in an orchestra, any instrument at all. It makes little difference which one, for the experience will come if only one watches for it."

NO OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN.

We pointed out to Mr. Van Hoogstraten that although there are few orchestras, even for those few we seek foreign leaders. Not a single one, excepting Henry Hadley, who does occasional work with the Philharmonic, is American or English.

"But where can most musicians here get the training they need for that position? There should be hundreds of orchestras where there are merely a handful. Suppose a talented young man in the South or some other part of the country where orchestras are so scarce has a desire to learn more about the symphony or the symphonic orchestra. Where can he hear them?

"It is absolutely necessary to become completely familiar with the orchestra before leading or playing in it. In Europe there is opportunity almost everywhere to hear music at prices which anyone can afford. Not so here. The talented young man sees a very limited market, and consequently he does not go after it. Practically all the first desk men in the Philharmonic are foreign-born, but they have achieved their competence through training."

Mr. Van Hoogstraten is at present engaged in conducting the summer series of the Philharmonic. They are given out of doors to audiences larger, more demonstrative, and more cosmopolitan than those of the regular season concerts. The conductor sees outdoor music as an important musical activity, though the less professional concert-goer is more in attendance than in the winter.

"The Stadium concerts"—that is the name given them—"are the best answer to the question what are the possibilities of outdoor music. The audiences are highly serious and receptive. Perhaps there is more of a mixture than in the winter. All classes attend. But they all demand the best music.

"The popularity of the programs can almost be figured out in dollars.

"You ask what the summer audience likes. I can tell you that when I play Brahms, when I put Tschaikowsky on the program, it brings a full house. And I find that the programs supposed to be for the summer audience, the so-called popular programs, do not attract nearly the same crowd.

A GROWING TRADITION.

"Perhaps there is not the same tradition concerning music here that Europe has. The smaller cities do not seem to be used to it yet. But surely things are developing at a rapid pace. One cannot hope for the background that an Italy or a Russia has, but the spirit and the desire is here just the same."

The conductor of the Philharmonic has been cited many times as an ultra-conservative. His programs have been described as safe and sane, classical, careful, anything but daring. His ventures into the modern have been cautious and casual. We reminded him of this and asked a statement of his attitude toward modern music.

"I dislike that distinction between modern and classic music. It really ought not exist. Let us speak of good and bad. Good music is done in a serious and sincere way; bad music is not.

"Certainly current works should be heard. Music is the expression of the time in which it is composed. Some works may be difficult to listen to; composers are always ahead of their time. If a work is sincere, a work of the brain, we should try to understand it.

"Yet the well known master works ought not to be neglected. I do not believe they are overplayed. I believe there are many which are still much underplayed. Audiences want the classic composers, and there is still much education to be done in them.

"You ask what my favorites are, but I have too much respect for the masters to compare them. Beethoven is to me the greatest, but how can we rate and classify such works as a Mozart or Schubert symphony, a Strauss tone poem, a Brahms symphony? The master composers have given so much and in such extremely different ways that they cannot be compared."

ROME, July 7.—(Star-World Special.)—Italy now includes within her north-eastern frontier the famous stalactite caverns of the little town of Adelsberg, who has been rechristened Posthumia. The largest and most magnificent formations of the kind in Europe, they extend in the heart of the earth for a distance of over 12 miles, of which only about half has yet been explored.

The Italian Government is making the grottoes more accessible to the public by the installation of a small railway line, which runs from the entrance to the so-called "Mount of Calvary," passing through all the variegated beauty of the glittering stalactites. Boats will soon ply on certain parts of the mysterious underground river, the Pluca, which flows through the caverns at a great depth.

Every year, at Whitsuntide, a great popular festival and ball is held in the largest cavern, which measures 665 feet by 640 feet, and is 100 feet high. It is thronged by the inhabitants of all the neighboring districts, in their national costumes, and it would be difficult to imagine a more fantastic and fairy-like scene than this brilliantly illuminated, vast scintillating ballroom. This year there is to be a novelty.

A great choral concert was held in a circular cavern with dome-shaped roof, known as the "Elysian Fields," which has been discovered to possess considerable acoustic properties. Only quite recently, a small grotto has been found, of which the walls seem made of jewels in rainbow hues.

When Carmen Silva, the Queen of Roumania, visited the Grottoes of Posthumia she wrote in the visitors' underground."

Kish, the oldest capital of Babylonia, is believed to have been founded after the flood.

THE WATER ROUTE TO THE WEST

For those who propose travelling to the West this summer, the rail and lake route via Sarnia and the Great Lakes is a very attractive one. On the luxurious steamers of the Northern Navigation Company the traveller loses very little time, and is amply repaid by the change of scene, cool lake breezes and social life aboard. There is dancing every evening, concerts, sing-songs and promenading, not to mention the quiet hours reclining in a comfortable deck chair with a book or magazine. The cuisine is excellent, and the state-rooms rival the comfort of the great ocean liners.

Walter P. Chrysler says Maxwell Now Sets a New Pace-

The good Maxwell is displaying the possibilities of the four-cylinder car, in the very things people want in motor cars, in a way they have never been demonstrated before.

With the active participation of the Chrysler Six engineering staff, the process of betterment begun three years ago was tremendously accelerated.

The difference in the way the Maxwell rides and drives and steers will impress you instantly.

You will be expecting the vibration you've always felt behind a four-cylinder engine.

But you will be delightfully disappointed—and surprised. For we have taken that vibration away from Maxwell. It's gone.

Main bearings rarely if ever replaced; a longer-lived, smoother-running car because vibration is practically eliminated.

That's the way we are building the good Maxwell today—with a far greater proportion of costly alloy steels than is usual at its price.

The most I ask is that you compare Maxwell riding and driving and performance and then decide for yourself whether any other four you know of can match up to a Maxwell.

EMPIRE WIRELESS.

AFTER long and irritating delays a definite step in the establishment of a comprehensive system of wireless transmission throughout the British Empire is officially announced.

How long and vexatious the many postponements have been is known only to those who have worked indefatigably and without faltering for the consummation of what has become the lodestar of their course. As far back as 1899 the Imperial Press Conference, composed as it is of men vitally interested in the quick transmission of news and the linking up of the Empire for that purpose, passed a strong resolution impressing the various Governments at home and overseas with the desirability of "establishing a chain of wireless telegraph stations between the British countries "because they are necessary both for the cheapening of electrical inter-communication and for the safety of the mercantile marine."

It is not without significance that the foremost champions of such an Empire system at this and at the subsequent conference in Canada in 1920 were the delegates of the Asia and Near East section which drew its members from Malta to Hong Kong. They declared their grave concern in this matter, emphasizing the enormous commercial possibilities of Central and Southern India, which radiate from India, a country itself which increasingly focusses the calamities or the benefits resulting from those great intellectual movements which are today disturbing men's minds there. They realize, too, that much even of the safety of India is wrapped up with the perfection and rapid utilization of the most efficient means of supercommunication.

In 1920 the Marconi Company outlined certain fundamentals which in their opinion should govern any Empire scheme. Chief of these was the axiom that the necessary trunk and branch lines to be established would enable Britain to communicate with any other part of the Empire and the Dominions to correspond cheaply and instantly with one another. The minimum speed at that time was set at one hundred words a minute, sending and receiving automatically. It was proposed that five great trunk stations should be provided in England, three each in India and Egypt, two each in Montreal, Vancouver, East Africa and Cape Town, two at Singapore, with an auxiliary at Hong Kong, two in Australia, one in New Zealand and one in the West Indies. Local feeder stations were also to be erected, the whole system being designed for the ideal that when the scheme was in full working order it would be possible to hand in a message in any town in the British Empire for transmission to any other point with the assurance that it would be forwarded by an all British route.

There has been much bungling with regard to the establishment of this Empire system. In Britain this has been a relic of the dust-covered and obsolete regulations that have hampered the progress of telephone and telegraph development. It is still remembered that it was illegal in 1880 in Britain to read from a piece of paper while speaking on the telephone, so jealously did the Government guard its monopoly. The history of the Marconi Company's negotiations with the Government is a long catalogue of litigation and commissions of enquiry.

These seem now to be ended. Perhaps the delays against which the press and others have so long protested will work for the good of the system, for it is announced that transmission from the new stations is to be effected by means of the short wave or "beam" system, which is a development of the last few months. Transmission stations erected a decade ago by the Marconi Company are now obsolete.

The majority of newspapers will rejoice that the operation of the system is to be by a privately controlled company, operating under Government license and control. There would be a feeling of diffidence and suspicion about news sent through the air which might be colored or tainted at its source. Subsidized news has never found favor in Canada. The amount of patronage which is given to the new Empire scheme will depend on the degree of secrecy which the new service can maintain.

MOVEMENT TO HAVE LANES PAVED.

IT is interesting to note that reports from the City Hall show there is a decided movement on the part of realty owners to have the lanes paved. The Star has long urged such paving, tending as it will to the distinct beautifying of the city and the betterment of health conditions generally. Steps have been taken by the Corporation whereby it will not be irksome for proprietors to pay for the paving. Briefly explained, the city advances the money for this work and allows a generous term of years for the refunding of the sums. The custom is quite a common one in many cities of compelling property owners to advance the money for such improvement. It is also enacted that, so far as tenants are concerned, if they allow paved lanes to become littered, they are promptly hauled before the courts. Experience has demonstrated that neatly asphalted lanes enhances property values.

It is unfortunate for Montreal that its lanes have always been an eyesore. The sight is a common one, when the winter's snow has gone, to see scavenging carts, in distant wards, ploughing through lanes that are hub-deep in mud, ashes and garbage.

THE CARELESS BRIDESMAIDS.

THERE is a very picturesque story told of ten bridesmaids who were to be sharers in a bridal ceremony. Five of them brought oil in their vessels with their lamps, and five brought their lamps, but brought no extra oil. As the bridegroom was slow in coming, they grew drowsy and fell asleep. But in the middle of the night there was a shout, "Here is the bridegroom! Come out and meet him!" Then all the bridesmaids arose and trimmed their lamps. And the five careless ones said to the others, "Give us some of your oil, for our lamps are going out." But the others answered, "There may not be enough for us and you. You had better go to the dealers and buy yourselves some." While they were gone to buy it, the bridegroom came, and those who were ready went in with him to the wedding banquet, and the door was closed. Afterwards the other bridesmaids came and said, "Sir! Sir! Open the door for us!" But he answered, "I tell you, I do not know you!"

The story leaves us with the heavy sense of the failure that is so unnecessary but so irrevocable that comes to the careless. Why do some people always miss the best things in life? In order to get in to the great festival the lamps must be ready. Every girl knew that. Why did some of them fail to provide the necessary oil? Much of human failure is from lack of care, from sheer slackness. The Master was most anxious to secure the disciples against losing the great spiritual opportunities of life through idleness, dullness, want of appreciation of the need of alertness which alone can save from failure.

It is striking to note with what direct and powerful language, and with what a variety of impressive pictures Jesus drives home this lesson. It appears as though vice were a form of deficiency; virtue an assertion of eager care and energy. He praises the eager man who found the treasure in the field and made sure of it. He bought the field. He left nothing to chance. He commends the man at midnight who hammered and hammered, till he got the loaves. He finds the same spirit in the "violent" who take the kingdom by force; the widow who will have justice by her importunity. Even the bad steward He commends because he had definitely made up his mind and acted quickly in the situation. He will have the disciples count the cost, reckon the forces, calculate the risks—right up to the cross. Carelessness is apparently the thing that keeps a man out of the kingdom and makes him unfit for it. He is in a rut, eating and drinking and making merry, drifting and dreaming forever, heedless of fact, heedless of God—and then ruin, life gone, the son of Man come, and "you yourselves thrust out."

It is apparently this quality of earnestness and care that the Master discovers in the tax-collector, Zaccheus. Jesus comes and sees him up a tree. He invites himself as a guest at his home. The man slides down the tree, stands up before the whole town, "Half of my goods," he says, "I give to the poor. If I have taken anything from any man by false accusation he shall have it back fourfold." The publican becomes a pioneer of Christian generosity. Mr. Lowell reminds us, in the "Biglow Papers," that "Chance wun't stop to listen to debatin'!" Fortune knocks once at every man's door; if he is out or not listening, she passes on. Misfortune then comes in without knocking.

It would be a mistake to regard the parable as teaching that alert activity is alone necessary. If that were so the gate of life would be less narrow than it really is. There is nothing very admirable in the spectacle of a human being rushing, grasping, straining from year's end to year's end, merely to do more and more or grasp more and more. There are men who, not sufficiently watchful, subject themselves to strain and stress, to a ceaseless grind for gold or glory, and find the door shut. They are mere slaves to dissipation. The wise as well as the careless bridesmaids grew drowsy and fell asleep, while the bridegroom tarried. The race is not to the swift, but to the judicious. The wise were content and at ease, but not shiftless. They retained their grip upon the permanent track of life. Contentment cannot exist where work has been distorted by ambition, greed or avarice into a devouring dissipation.

Those careless girls missed the bridal feast because, like so many today, they were satisfied with the dry and lifeless lamps of a barren formalism; content with the mere parody of religion, in worship and in doctrine and in service. They lulled their consciences to sleep as with some spiritual anodyne. They missed the living force, the power which touches the inmost springs of the affection and the will and transforms the dull, dead clay of a carnal nature into the quick and eager activities of a spiritual life.

In books lies the soul of the whole Past Time; the articulate, audible voice of the Past, when the body and material substance of it has altogether vanished like a dream. — Thomas Carlyle.

THE WORLD'S PRESS

Liberals and the Navy.

Victoria Colonist: The inaction of the present Government is not a Canadian policy. It is a Liberal policy, or what might be more correctly described as a Liberal-Progressive policy, for if Mr. Mackenzie King is the leader of the Government there is little doubt that Mr. Forke is the leader of Mr. King. The truth is that under existing political conditions, with a group Government in power, there is no prospect of anything worth while being done in a naval sense. The subject, however, must be kept alive so that there may always be a realization of Canada's responsibility which she has yet to assume.

The Small Investor.

London Daily Chronicle: Since the start in February, 1916, the prodigious number of 686,000,000 Savings Certificates—each of £1 at maturity—have been bought. They are distributed among a vast number of people, most of them working men and women and their children; and the effect in various ways is profound. There is first a stimulus to further thrift, and the growth of self-respect and independence that this induces. The political influence also is not small. It has helped greatly to a better understanding of national finance and to a consequent check of wild talk about State obligations to loan holders. One hears little in these days about Repudiation.

Chains of the Past.

London Daily Herald: America is a country where almost everyone expresses contempt for traditions. Yet it is a country where conduct is more governed by tradition and custom than it is anywhere in "effete" Europe. Why do the members of conventions met together to choose candidates for the Presidency behave like lunatics? Why do they cheer mechanically for an hour and forty minutes, when the name of a popular man is proposed? Why do they use every kind of noise-producing instrument? Simply because all this is in accordance with tradition. The ritual of a Convention is as carefully ordered as was that of the late Imperial German Court. It is all based upon usage and precedent. It must not be departed from or even changed. While we are shaking ourselves loose from the chains of the past, the Americans are putting them on. So the unending up-and-down goes on.

From Whence Cometh Their Help?

Brooklyn Eagle: The old method of secret dickering between heads of States is in general disrepute among all civilized peoples. It has led mankind to nothing but one war after another. Granting that many things which must be said cannot on grounds of public policy, be spoken where all can hear, nevertheless it is true that a public which must do the fighting and pay the bills insists nowadays in knowing the ultimate result of all such conferences. Moreover, public confidence is greater where matters are threshed out in the open. M. Herriot has made a startling departure from the methods of Clemenceau and Poincare, but so far as the United States and Great Britain are concerned, his shift has met with general satisfaction. And it is to these two countries that France must appeal, if a declining credit is to be bolstered up and trade matters salvaged from chaos. If his critics cannot see the truth of this, then it is France's greater fortune that he is there to lead.

Justice and Emotion.

Chicago Tribune (on the execution of Walter Muir): Canadian justice is a branch of the British root. To us it may seem inconsiderate of the individual. Seemingly it never had a moment here when it hesitated in its course. Muir was found guilty of having taken a human life. The extenuating circumstances did not deflect the unemotional process of the law which said that if he did do this there was a fixed and unescapable penalty. Possibly this unemotional review of facts and fixing of consequences might be tempered with merciful considerations, but we in the United States are not the ones to say so. The loopholes in our law let bullet holes into other victims. We shall never be unemotional or untouched by considerations which appeal to mercy. We'll never have a judicial procedure above the considerations of clemency. We'll never turn out a remorseless mechanism in the application of criminal law and need not fear that we might. Our murder record shows that we need some of the Canadian and British respect for the people who are to be protected from the bullets of a killer. We need not worry that we'll ever be cruel to the man or woman who shot. We are cruel to the people who might have been saved by preventive justice.

The Parrot.

The day was all yellow and blue,
With little pink tippets of pearl,
As soft as the hyacinth hue
In the eyes of a babykin girl.

Dawn-red, through the lace of a tree,
A parrot was shining his wing;
Against the blue sky I could see
All the colors the bird couldn't sing.

The green and the blue that he wore,
The pink and the rose and the grey—
These all he might fling me and more
Could he sing me a song for the day.

He could not. He passed out of reach
In emerald flight, jerky yet strong.

CANADA'S STORY DAY BY DAY
By Blodwen Davies

(Copyright.)

July 26.

On this day in 1758, Louisburg, a magnificent fortress, and the pride of the French, fell into British hands, after a prolonged campaign, in which it was nobly defended and nobly won. Admiral Boscawen was in command of the huge fleet, comprising over 150 vessels, which had conveyed the army of twelve thousand men from England to the new world. General Amherst was in command of the military operations and James Wolfe was assisting him. In the landing operations Wolfe was nearly drowned, but Fate preserved him to become the hero of Quebec. The great fleet was met by a terrific storm which kept them hovering off Louisburg for six days before they could attempt to open the siege. Within the walls of the fortress the French worked feverishly at their defences, awed by the display of force represented by the ships of war tossing about in the angry sea. Operations commenced on June 2 and on this day the coveted post passed forever from French hands to British hands. With Louisburg, Cape Breton and Prince Edward Island (or Isle St. Jean, as it was then called), passed over to Britain, and French influence was removed completely from the seaboard of North America. The removal of this menace to British operations in Canada made possible the successful operations in the St. Lawrence the following summer, the conquest of Canada. Louisburg was dismantled, after the 6,500 French prisoners were removed, and it fell into ruins. A few grass-grown mounds today are the only reminders of the mighty stone fortifications that were known as Louisburg.

THE PASSING HOUR

SWALLOWED.

It was the "Object" drawing lesson, when the boys were supposed to bring some article—a hammer, a top, a box, or what not—with them to school to serve as model.

One boy presented himself at the masters' desk with the tearful announcement: "Please sir, I've swallowed my object."

"Swallowed it!" cried the master in alarm. "Whatever was it?"

QUITE SAFE.

The train drew up at a station, and there was a long wait during which many of the passengers got up and craned their necks to see what was happening. At last a man carrying a heavy box climbed wearily into one crowded third-class carriage and deposited the box on the rack.

"I say, do you think that that box is safe?" he demanded.

"Ah, yes," replied the man cheerfully, "it's locked!"

Evelyn—"You've been courting me now for a number of years, George, and I want to make a proposal."

George—"I—I—I am not in apostion to m-marry yet, but——"

Evelyn (interrupting)—"Who said anything about marriage? I was going to propose that you stay away from here and give somebody else a chance."

"But I'm not married."

"Ah, no; then, of course, your wife's still single!"

NEVER HAD A CHANCE.

"Here is a man who pleads for a return to the old-fashioned chivalry. Now, that's just what I advocate," Brown announced laying aside the evening paper. "This equal rights business has got to a point where a man no longer knows how to treat a woman as she should be treated."

"Well, I try to be courteous, at least," protested Brown in self-defence.

"Courteous!" Jones scoffed. "Do you ever give a woman your seat in the Tube train?"

"Of course not," Brown replied. "I never have one."

The event was a christening, and the clergyman thought he would offer the parents an appropriate homily.

"Dear parents," he said, "before I baptize this child let me give you a few well-meant words of advice on the responsibilities of parenthood. Do you realize what hope should dawn in your hearts today? Think of the future that may lie before this dear child; he may one day become a clergyman like myself, or, maybe, a brave sea captain or a noble soldier. He may even rise to the glorious height of an illustrious statesman. What pleasure will be yours in guarding and watching his career—what name did you say?"

In timid whisper came the mother's reply—

"Jemima Ann, sir."

Father—Where is that young man of yours tonight? Isn't he coming? Daughter—No; he telephoned that it was raining so hard he would not be over. "Not much of a rain beau is he?"

A woman stood patiently before the receiving-clerk's window in a bank, but no one took any notice of her till she attracted the attention of the money-taker by tapping with her parasol on the glass.

"Why don't you pay attention to me?" she asked petulantly.

"I'm sorry, ma'am, but we don't pay anything here. Next window, please," was the polite response.

"How's your husband getting along, Mrs. Fogger?" asked a neighbor of a woman whose husband was a permanent invalid.

"Well, sometimes he's better and sometimes he's worse," replied Mrs. Fogger. "But from the way he growl's and takes on when he's better, I think he's better when he's worse."

CHANGED HIS MIND.

The old countryman was paying a visit to London. It was a business trip, but he resolved, that after he had settled the things he must do, he would take a good look round and see the sights.

After a time he came up to the Labor Exchange. He stood for a while gazing at a door marked, "Woman's Department." Then he entered and inquired:

"Yes."

"And be 'ee the woman?"

Once more the clerk replied in the affirmative.

"Then I think I'll stick to 'Liza," said the old farmer in firm tones.

POOR FELLOW.

A very bad actor once ventured to appear in the part of Hamlet, but even the village audience he tried it on would not tolerate it, and he was pelted with rotten eggs.

The next day two colleagues were discussing the performance.

"Well," said one, "I never laughed so much in my life as when Jones came on as Hamlet."

"Oh," retorted the other, "I laughed much more when he went off as Omelette!"

"Here comes Mrs. Gabbins. I think I'll have Nora tell her I'm out." "Won't the still, small voice of conscience reproach you?" "Yes, but I'd rather listen to the still, small voice than to hers."

WHOLESALE.

A Clydeside stevedore, who was "fou," tumbled into a dock and was with difficulty saved from drowning. He thanked his rescuer warmly and presented him with half a crown.

The "long arm of coincidence" got to work, and the same thing occurred again two months later. The same man pulled him out, and he received the same heartfelt compliments.

Then the sobered-up stevedore said —"There will be nae siller coming t' ye this time, laddie. I paid ye a retail price last time, and it should hae been wholesale."

"It's no good your gazing at those hats," remarked the husband, "for I've only got about five shillings on me."

"Oh, you might have known I'd want to buy a few things," said his wife, reproachfully.

"I did," said he.

WHAT IRKED HIM.

"How are you getting on?" asked a man meeting in the street an acquaintance who had just gone on the stage.

"Oh, I have played with a measure of success," replied the other somewhat loftily. "I played Hamlet for the first time last week."

"Oh, everything went splendidly except that I happened to stumble and then fell in Ophelia's grave."

"That must have been embarrassing."

"It was; but I wouldn't have minded so much if the audience hadn't seemed so disappointed when I got out."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

UTILIZE OUR OWN RESOURCES.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—The bill authorizing a new South Shore Bridge, having been passed by Parliament and approved by the Governor-General, no doubt the Harbor Commissioners will now confer with the different bodies interested and arrange to commence the work as soon as possible. Some people maintain that the new bridge should be built nearer the centre of the city of Montreal, while many are in favor of the location decided upon by the bridge architects. A bridge terminating at Delorimier Avenue will relieve the present congestion of traffic on the Victoria Bridge to a greater extent than one nearer the centre of the city, and will be the means of developing the eastern section of Montreal and a wide section in the vicinity of Montreal South. We have the men, the material and the money for the work right here in Canada, and no outside experts, laborers or money should be called for unless absolutely necessary.

NOISE AT BAND CONCERTS.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—Being a great lover of good music, I thoroughly appreciate the excellent band concerts we are being given this season in the various city parks; but I must say that at times it is almost impossible to distinguish any sound at all proceeding from the band pavilion owing to the noise caused by children of all ages running about,—also playing ball. I regret to say that the "grown-up" children cause almost as much noise with their incessant loud talking and laughing. We are given the privilege of hearing this music to refresh our minds after the rush of the business day, and it is hard lines if a band concert is considered by the majority of those present as an opportunity to disport themselves with as much noise as possible, without regard for those who wish to enjoy the music. Is it not time that something was done to remedy this disgrace? Could there not be an enclosure containing chairs sufficient to seat several hundred people arranged around each bandstand, as is arranged in every park in the Old Country? I am sure that great numbers of people would even be willing to pay a small fee in order to gain what they take the trouble (sometimes with great effort) to go out to hear,—good music rendered by competent musicians. As things are it seems to me that the effort is wasted.

MUSIC LOVER.

IMPORTANCE OF EAST END.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—I wish to take exception to the views expressed by some of your contributors concerning the location of the new bridge to the South Shore. Some gentlemen seem to entertain the idea that any part of the city further east than "Main Street," Montreal, is just a small hamlet,—a negligible quantity. It is true that in the east end we have most of the factories, manufacturers, tenements, etc., but one must not forget that a large proportion of the population of the metropolis lives there and tolls there. The Victoria Bridge is very useful to commuters from St. Lambert and thereabouts. But what about the population of Longueuil, Boucherville, etc., whose aggregate is much bigger than the whole population of St. Lambert and places adjacent? These people must cross, as a rule, by the ferry-boats, when their business takes them to Montreal. All of them have to travel more than the ten "proverbial miles,"—those ten miles complained of in the letters of your correspondents,—when they use the Victoria Bridge. And is it not a well-known fact that the agricultural district at the back of Longueuil, which extends as far down the river as Sorel and comprises St. Hubert, Chambly, etc., is one of the most fertile regions of the Province of Quebec? These farmers when they reached the city by the Delorimier Bridge would not be far distant from the heart of the metropolis; they would find it easier to reach Bonsecours Market and all the other markets from there than they would if the bridge were at the foot of McGill Street. And, furthermore, what about the innumerable tourists who came from the United States, and intermediate points, by the Chambly Road. The bridge—if built at the foot of Delorimier Avenue—will be far less expensive than the one suggested for McGill Street. It will cost about five million dollars less, as the estimates from the Harbor Commission show. The Delorimier Bridge would give immediate access to Sherbrooke Street East (which would become one of the most commodious thoroughfares of the city) and would diminish the congestion of the business district while forming an outlet for the surplus traffic of that other artery spanning the St. Lawrence, namely the Victoria Bridge.

FREE TRADE AND PROTECTION.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—Mr. J. T. McCall's excellent article on protection has not suffered at the hands of Dr. R. Stanley Weir, in his recent letter to The Star, for, by ignoring the world-controlling factor of nationalism, Dr. Weir has begged the whole question. He contends that, if a protection tariff is beneficial to the Dominion, it should be equally beneficial to any portion of the Dominion, such as a province. In the first place, a customs tariff is the chief form of national defence, used to a greater or less extent by every country in the world, including Great Britain, to protect its people against the commercial attacks of other countries. It might be advantageous for some of our provinces to protect themselves against the producers of other provinces, but, as Dr. Weir says, such a course would spell disunion, and so the Fathers of our Confederation in their wisdom placed the exclusive rights of tariff-making in the hands of the Federal Parliament. In other words, they taught us to be Nationalists and not Provincialists. Free Traders are, by their own argument, compelled to be internationalists. They think only of the advantages that would accrue to the world as a whole, if all the nations could be persuaded to break down every form of trade barrier. They fail to realize that nations, like individuals, are actuated by selfish motives, and follow whatever course they believe to be in the interests of their own particular countries. Dr. Weir admits that a protective policy has proved successful in Germany and the United States, and gives as the reason the great size and population of these countries. Surely Canada, which according to Mr. Lloyd George can support three hundred million people, is large enough, and the only reason why our population is not greater is that we have never given proper support to our city vocations, the industries. The population of the United States was but little if any greater than ours is today when the Americans first introduced a protective tariff. It is most illogical to compare conditions in Canada with those in Britain, and to say that we "should follow British rather than American or German examples." Britain knowingly sacrifices her industrial workers in order to foster her shipbuilding, world trading and international finance. Her national resources are of secondary importance. On the other hand, she is blessed with many ports that are open the year round, and so it pays Britain to act as the trading and financial centre of the world, rather than as a producing country—all of which is the very reverse of what Canada must do to grow and to prosper. The result of inadequate protection that our present Government and its predecessors have given us is to be seen in the disastrous closing down of big steel works, in the many empty factories and stores in Montreal and elsewhere, in the growing unemployment in all walks of life, in the steady exodus to the United States, and in the diminished revenue of the Government; and yet we are told to go still further in our national madness. In the name of common sense, let us be practical and honest with ourselves, and loyal to our country; and stop this talk of one-sided free trade.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

FARMER BROWN'S BOY FINDS THE ANSWER

By Thornton W. Burgess

The watchful and the heedful wise
Are seldom victims of surprise.
—Mrs. Happy Jack.

All day Farmer Brown's Boy puzzled over the question of what could have caused Mrs. Happy Jack to move her four babies from their snug home in the big maple tree by the house over to a new home in the Green Forest. He didn't like to be puzzled by such things.

"There must have been some good reason. Yes, sir, there must have been some good reason," he kept saying over and over to himself. "She wouldn't have run the risk of moving those helpless babies unless she had felt that she must do it. I wish I could talk the Squirrel language. I would ask Happy Jack. He seems to have gone over to the Green Forest, too, but he'll be back here every day for something to eat or I miss my guess."

When he fell asleep that night he was still puzzling over the cause of the moving of the Squirrel family. One in the night he awoke and heard the wind blowing. Then he fell asleep again, and dreamed of baby Squirrels.

In the morning when he went out in the yard the first thing he did was to look up in the big maple tree. He did it out of force of habit. Then his lower jaw dropped, and he stood with his mouth wide open staring up in that big maple tree with the funniest expression on his freckled face. That big hollow branch was not there! There was only a broken stub of a branch left there. He looked down on the ground beneath the tree. There lay that branch split open for the full length of the hollow it had contained. It had split when it had struck the ground. Beside it lay the nest of Mrs. Happy Jack Squirrel. Farmer Brown's Boy felt in it. Of course it was empty.

Farmer Brown's Boy gave a long low whistle. "My goodness!" he exclaimed. "It is a lucky thing that those Squirrels were not in that nest when the branch broke. I guess it would have been the end of the babies. It must be that that branch broke off in the wind last night. Mrs. Happy moved her family just in time. She ought to be very, very thankful. Whatever it was that caused her to move did it just in time."

A new thought popped into Farmer Brown's Boy's head. He stared at the broken branch on the ground. He stared up at the place from which it had broken off. He rubbed the tip of his nose. "I wonder," said he slowly, "if Mrs. Happy Jack could have suspected that this branch was going to break. I wonder if it was that instead of an enemy that made her move. I don't see how it possibly could have been. That branch has been there for years and years and years. How could she have known that it was going to break?"

And then an idea came to him. "It may be that the branch had been weakening and that she had heard little, faint, cracking noises from time to time so that she knew that it was getting weak. I guess that must be the explanation."

And so it was. Mrs. Happy Jack had realized that her home was no longer safe and so she had moved her family just in time. This is a true story.

The Mermaid's Dance

The sun was setting as the mermaid raised her head above the waves. The clouds were tinted with crimson and gold. A large ship, with three white sails, lay becalmed on the water. When darkness approached a hundred different lanterns were lighted, as if the flags of all nations waved in the air. Below the ship, that was on the waves, music could be heard.

After a while Coralynn, the mermaid, went down to the ball under the sea. When she arrived at the ballroom she saw a ceiling of sapphire and a pavement of pearl, while rows of colossal shells were arranged around the room. Some were of grass green and some of deep red with blue fire in them. These lights shone through, so that the sea was illuminated, too. A clear stream flowed through the ballroom. All the mermen and mermaids were dancing in it to the music.

Next morning the ship that had lain becalmed on the water sailed into the harbor. It was glittering with stones of all kinds, because the Princess of all Mermaids was on it. She was waving out of her beautiful window. Her pink satin gown was glimmering and rippling like the waves. A beautiful string of pearls hung from her neck. When she stepped off her luxurious ship everyone adored her. That night she stopped in a beautiful room.

As Coralynn lifted the curtain to look out of her window, the moon broke out from behind the clouds. It shone on her like a bright benignant face, which seemed to whisper. "Be comforted, dear soul, there is always light behind the clouds."

Playing Circus

For this game you must choose a leader from the players, who have to sit in a circle. The leader then starts the game, and says: "I went to a circus and I saw an elephant." The next player continues, "I went to a circus and I saw an elephant and a tiger." Then the third must repeat what the second said, adding the name of a third animal that was seen at the circus. And so the game goes on.

The leader must see to it that all the players in their turn say exactly what the player before said, just adding their own animal. When a player cannot think of an animal he falls out, and so you see that the player who thinks quickest of the animals is in the game right to the last, and thus wins the game.

A Rhyme

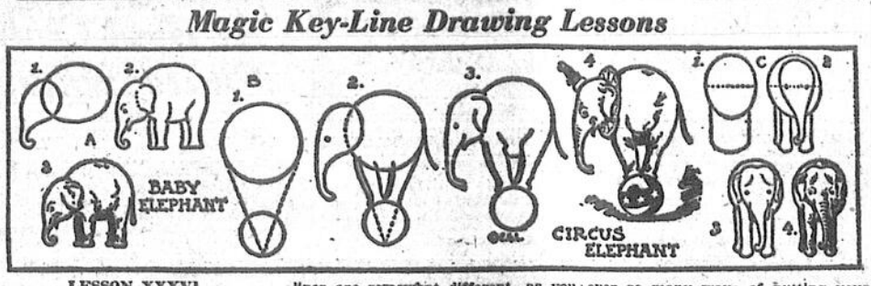

For every ill beneath the sun
There is some remedy or none;

A negro mammy came into the office where she worked to receive her regular monthly wages. As she could not write, she always made her mark on the receipt—the usual X. But on this occasion she made a circle.

"What's the matter, Linda?" the man in charge asked. "Why don't you make a cross in the usual way?"

Magic Key-Line Drawing Lessons

THE ELEPHANT PERFORMING.

IN last week's lesson, we learned to draw the elephant standing still. Now we are going to learn to draw the elephant performing. The key-lines are somewhat different, as you see, but they are simple enough, if you just follow the illustrations carefully and do each step as it is shown. You ought to know how to draw a good many circus and zoo animals now. Don't you think they are fun? Especially if you are good with your pencil and paint brushes, there are ever so many ways of putting your knowledge to good use. Note prize drawing contest rules given elsewhere on this page and send in your drawings. Use a soft pencil and Art gum rubber. Don't trace in ink until you are sure your pencil drawing is the best you can do; then rub out the original lines.

A Little Heroine

(A True Story)

ISABEL BURNS lives in Christ church, New Zealand. She is thirteen years old, and has four little brothers and sisters.

All five were playing in a boat in Lyttelton Harbor, and did not realize that a storm was brewing. Suddenly they found themselves adrift and swept into a heavy sea. It was all Isabel could do to keep the boat head-on to the angry waves rolling in.

Soon she could see that a gale was coming up, and there was no help at hand. The plight of the children had not yet been seen. Isabel knew that somehow she must get the boat into shelter. The little ones, pale with fright, clung to the thwarts, the two-year-old baby huddled among them.

* * *

Isabel took one oar and gave the eldest boy the other, and the two began the stupendous task of getting the boat into the shelter of Adderley Head, whose huge cliffs hold off the wind from the water below. They had to row in the teeth of the gale. Inch by inch the little boat made headway across the hungry water with its precious freight.

After half an hour's hard rowing the boat was in the comparative shelter of the head. Isabel dropped the anchor. It was bitterly cold; hail lashed in the wind; and, though they were sheltered from the full blast, there was a heavy sea running, and the anchor dragged. Isabel and her brother worked hard with their oars to keep the boat in.

By this time the boy's hands were so benumbed that he could scarcely hold the oar; and when a huge wave snatched at it he could not keep it. With only one oar now, Isabel considered what should be done.

* * *

There was a good length of rope in the boat, and she decided to make it fast to the rocks. That meant swimming through a hundred feet of icy water, with battling waves and masses of seaweed to encounter, let alone the danger of being dashed on to the rocks.

Undaunted, Isabel took off her shoes and stockings, tied the line round her waist, and plunged in. She swam heroically for a time, and then, realizing that she had attempted an impossibility, she turned back to the boat. But fatigue and bitter cold benumbed her whole body, and she clung to the gunwale, unable to clamber in; had not a heavy sea rolled her into the boat, the brave girl must have gone under.

By this time a tug was racing to their rescue. Isabel saw it coming and, trying to quieten the terrified children, so that she could hear orders from the tug, she began, with one oar, to work the boat out from the shore. A heavy hailstorm was now driving down the wind.

As soon as the tug was near enough a rope was thrown to the boat. The boy took it and fastened it, Isabel never ceasing to work the little craft to keep it head-on to the waves. Quickly the tug swung round, and the boat was heaving and dipping alongside. One of the deck hands was jumping in when a heavy sea swept the boat astern. The man went overboard. Just in time, as he was being washed toward the propellers, the skipper stopped the engines, and the man was saved.

Isabel was still working to keep her boat in position. Soon she was alongside the tug again, and facing the terrible danger of being swamped. But one by one, the baby first, the children were hauled up into safety by the sailors, who bent low to seize the frozen little arms. Last of all came Isabel. Her teeth were chattering and the icy wind was in her sodden clothes, and the hail beat her face, but she managed to smile. She had saved "the children."

Old Ring Found

Charles Burns, a fireman, was digging up worms for bait recently on the sands of Thimble Island, when he unearthed a curious gold ring. He took it to a jeweller, who told him that it was pure gold and constructed entirely by hand. It is thought that it may be the "King's Ring" which disappeared mysteriously from the Crown jewels in 1610. How it came to Thimble Island is explained by the theory that probably, in course of time, it fell into the hands of Captain Kidd, the notorious pirate, who is said to have buried part of his treasure loot there.

African Courtesy

A courtesy peculiar to the African native is his manner of receiving a gift. No matter how small or insignificant the object, he receives it in both hands cupped together like a bowl. It is most expressive.

An Animal Puzzle

GENE'S GOSSIP

In the House Beautiful.

MY DEAR FRIENDS:

It happened like this: We were sitting on the upper deck of the Dream-ship one night, discussing where we should go next. After the usual diverse opinions, Romance said, quietly: "What about Wembley?" The Irish Terrier jumped up "Well, what about Wembley?" he asked. "That's a dandy idea. We'll be able to see samples of different countries and then decide which one we like best." So off we set for England, to see the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. Before we docked, Romance gave us each a magic cloak which make us invisible and gave us the power of flying, like the fairies do. We flew over the tops of the London buildings, and in a second — for fairies fly very fast—we found ourselves sailing over beautiful Wembley. We alighted on the ground and as we were invisible, except to each other, we mingled freely with the crowd and where we could not squeeze through, why we simply lifted up our arms and flew over their heads. As fortune would have it, we made out way to the Palace of Art first, and there saw The House Beautiful. We didn't have to pay to see it, as the man who took the tickets didn't even see us as we brushed past him. People were crowded row after row looking at this wonderful miniature palace which had been built as a gift to Queen Mary. It was Romance who whispered to us: "Would you like to live in it for a few days?" We gasped in admiration and pleasure. How lovely! So, with a wave of her hand, Romance said a few magic words and we all found ourselves growing smaller and smaller. Then Romance led the way up the beautiful driveway. The door was open and we walked in. It was gorgeous! From one room to another we went, examining things, gazing in wonder at the lovely miniature paintings, the exquisite furniture, all made to scale.

At the same time the people were also gazing into the rooms, for the palace is so built that the crowd can see right inside it, but of course they couldn't see us, so we simply made ourselves at home.

Of course we did not upset or break anything, and were very careful to wash the dishes after we had used them and to leave everything as spotless as we found it. We are going to stay here for a few more days, and then, I think, we are going to Persia, for Zazari has confided in me that she has a wonderful reason for going there, but will not disclose it to The Secret Council until later.

Now, good-bye,

Gene

Tattooing

The custom of tattooing is practiced by the savage dwellers in many tropical countries. Unlike those of northern climates, they have no clothing to speak of, to ornament, so they decorate their bodies instead. This is a painful process, but savages as well as others are willing to suffer pain to be in style.

The people of New Guinea use thorns dipped into the desired color and when they prick these into the skin they can make any desired pattern. The Burmese, also fond of tattooing, use a piece of steel split in four sharp points, which enable them to tattoo that much faster. Of course it takes a long time to make a boy's suit in this way, and it hurts, but when it is finished he is very proud of the animals and other things pictured over him in red and blue.

PUZZLES

By SAM LOYD

Answer to A Charade: The word "muskmelon."

Answer to Riddles to Guess: 1. When he presents arms (alms). 2. Because it's a see-Nile thing to do. 3. Because they are men of sighs (size). 4. Because she found sufficient ground for staying away.

Answer to Puzzling Ages: Jimmy's younger brothers were, respectively—13, and 1 and 1-12 years of age.

A Charade:

My first a substance hard and bright,
Is useful morning, noon and night;
My second, find it where you will,
Is of the same dimension still;
My whole is used to investigate
The fairness of a merchant's weight.
What is the word?

Riddles to Guess: 1. Why is a good story like the church bell? 2. What looks worse than a darned stocking? 3. Of what trade is the July sun? 4. What do many people like to hear a clergyman preach about?

King of the Swan: Take a molded lump of something edible, add a bazaar, subtract any kind of business, add a fowl, add a broad smile and the resulting letters will spell LOHENGRIN.

The Puzzlers' Home: I am contracting for the erection of a new Puzzlers' Home, and find that much better terms can be made by dealing with the workmen in pairs. For instance: The Paperhanger and Painter will together paper and paint for $1,100, or the Painter and Plumber for $1,700, or the Plumber and Electrician for $1,100, or the Electrician and Carpenter for $3,300, or the Carpenter and Mason for $5,300, or the Mason and Paperhanger for $2,500. In going over the estimates I noted that the Paperhanger's charge would amount to two-thirds as much as the Electrician's. Now let us see who can analyze those figures so as to show the cost for each kind of work.

Taking a Curious Bath

A traveller, returning from a visit to Norway, relates how he took a very curious bath. In a house, constructed specially for the purpose, three or four persons are admitted. The room contains a stove or furnace made of large stones. When these become very hot, water is thrown on them and the room is filled with steam. Around the room are shelves and the bather climbs from one to the other, getting hotter and hotter the higher he goes. The attendant scours him with vegetable sponges and pounds him with bundles of switches. When this is over the bather leaves the steam room and water is thrown over him, each bucket colder than the last, till he is drenched with an ice-cold shower.

Disappointed!

Sally Goose and Jimmy Gander
Took a little stroll together;
When they started out he said:
"I'm afraid we will get wet."
So she took her parasol,
But it didn't rain at all!

MAKING AN AQUARIUM

A small aquarium is the means of much amusement and education. The outlay is not great, a small globe begin with. Well being excellent to washed sand, grit and small stones must be obtained, and a layer of sand placed at the bottom of the globe, the grit laid on top, and the stones formed into small caves.

Water plants are necessary to keep the water clear. Tiny sprays can be picked and tied to little stones, and these planted in the sand and grit at the bottom of the globe. The aquarium should now be filled three-parts full of spring water and left clear.

As soon as the water looks clear and sparkling—this may be a few days—drop in a water snail to keep everything clean.

The inhabitants can be bought quite cheaply, but it is much more interesting if you are able to catch your own fish. Get your big brother or sister to help out and also get full instructions of how to feed the fish. If a small quantity of meat is given the fish, it is well to remember to take care that is just sufficient and no more. It is a good plan to tie a tiny strip of fresh meat on a thin string and lower this into the water at feeding time. When the fish has done eating, the meat can be removed.

Don't try to keep too many inhabitants in one globe, and replace any water that evaporates.

A Game For Scouts

Boys who are at Boy Scout camps, or even at any other camps, will find the game of "Tossing the Tenderfoot" interesting. In this game the scouts form two ranks facing each other. One small boy should be selected as the victim, and he should take his shoes off unless a mouthful of boot is desired.

The scouts grip hand, and the two of each pair should be of the same height. The victim is then placed lying on the joined hands of the first pair of scouts with his arms outstretched, as if he were diving, and his heels pressed together. He should keep his body as rigid as possible. His outstretched arms protect his face.

On the word "heave," those who are supporting the body of the victim heave altogether, passing the body of the victim along the line betwen the files until he reaches the end.

The game is quite safe provided the vicitm keeps rigid and the scouts heave evenly. Belt and contents of the victim's pockets should be first removed.

A Pierrot Pincushion

A small bag of ribbon or silk, tied just below the top, may be transformed into a quaint pincushion if a doll is inserted. Make two little holes for its arms, tie the bag round its neck, leaving a tiny frill to form a ruffle. A wee pierrot's hat is easily manufactured out of a scrap of cardboard covered with silk, and little black bobbles can either be sewn or painted on the hat and dress. If you wish the pincushion perfumed, then mix some lavender with the bran before filling it, and this gives a delightful scent.

Surely Would Be.

A man and a girl of eight years were travelling on an express train and he was trying to while away the tedium of the journey by asking her all kinds of funny and ridiculous questions. Finally he suggested this one: "If the clock strikes thirteen, what time is it?"

The little girl hesitated, though a moment and then replied in an amusing positive manner: "Time to fix the clock."

An Unusual Friendship

Elizabeth Frederick in "Our Dumb Animals" writes: "A very interesting and rather unusual incident showing how neighborly birds may be, happened last spring. A friend of mine has a cottage, and there is a certain vine growing close to a window, which is a favorite nesting-place with birds. This year two different families, a pair of wrens and a pair of catbirds, decided to nest here, and so they set about building their homes. Strange to say, there was no quarrelling over this, but each pair minded its own business, and when their homes were finished, lo and behold! there, perched upon the edge of the good-sized nest of the catbird, was the dainty little nest of the wren.

Never were two families more sociable. Together the mothers sat on their eggs, and perhaps they chatted about different things to make the long hours of waiting less lonesome. Together the wrens and the catbirds fought the cat and bravely defended their homes, when the babies were hatched, and side by side they raised their families and taught them how to fly. Now there is nothing left but the two nests to show this unusual friendship between two bird families."

THEY'RE OFF AGAIN TODAY AT MOUNT ROYAL RACE TRACK

After a lapse of a week, local racing will be resumed today when the second meeting of the season opens at Mount Royal course. The track will be slow, but it will in no way detract from the quality of the sport, as the majority of the horses named in the seven events can run as well in the heavy going as on fast footing.

There are a number of newcomers to local racing carded, they being recent arrivals from the tracks of the United States. The overnight handicap failed to fill, and is replaced by a claiming race, which has attracted a smart entry. The events have all filled well, in some of the races there being also eligibles to start.

One or two new riders will do saddle work at Mount Royal at this meeting. The plant has been renovated and never looked better than for this meeting. The track will dry out fast, if given fine weather.

The card will be opened with an event for Canadian bred horses. The race of next importance will be the sixth, which is over a distance of one mile and one-sixteenth.

The starting will be done by George Palmer, who reached Montreal yesterday. Horses will be schooled each day during the meeting, which will give owners of fractious horses an opportunity of fitting them for the start.

Something About the Corinthians, Who Play Here Next Saturday

(By CRAIG CAMPBELL.)

The Dominion of Canada Football Association is to be congratulated upon their enterprise and also upon their success in securing a visit from such a famous English football team as the Corinthians. Their name stands for all that is best in the game, and the fact that last season they defeated such a renowned professional team as Blackburn Rovers in the English Cup Competition, is evidence of their prowess.

Of course this is not their first visit to the Dominion, as they toured Canada from Montreal to the coast in 1906 and 1911. Perhaps the present combination is not quite so great as that of the pre-war days, it is the complaint against English football generally, but it is gradually getting back and they are a fine collection of players whom the Corinthians are bringing with them. They can play the game and play it well; they are not mere amateur footballers in a popular pastime. There is probably not a member who would not be welcomed by any at the great league clubs.

The Corinthians have a wonderful history, and they will always be associated with the name of N. L. C "Pa" Jackson who founded the club in 1881-2, when the best amateur football was confined to the South of England. Strong support was given by the two universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The public schools, hospitals and military academies, with whom most of the matches were played, and all away from home. They have adopted a different style of play to the professionals and their policy has rules of the Club was not to compete for any challenge cup or prizes of any description, but that was altered some time ago, and in the last two seasons they have entered and distinguished themselves in the greatest competition of all, the English Cup. In 1922-23 they played three fine games with Brighton and Hove Albion, before they were beaten by the only goal, and last season, as already stated, they conquered Blackburn Rovers by one goal to nil, only to capitulate to West Bromwich Albion by 0-5, in the second round at West Bromwich.

J. S. F. Morrison, J. G. Knight, H. G. Lewis, J. R. Reid, F. N. Barnard, S. H. Chader, R. W. De Koven, H. R. Robinson, G. B. Partridge, M. C.; N. E. E. Ashton, V. E. Morgan, L. B. Blackland, F. N. S. Creek, C. B. G. Hunter, C. Hymel Davis, C. E. Plenister, C. Wreford-Brown and G. C. Bambridge. The two latter gentlemen are in charge of the team. Of the party the best known men are:—

J. F. S. Morrison, right full back. He is a very capable defender who plays with judgment, especially in his kicking. He does not thunder at the ball with all the power he can, but places it to advantage, and is the essence of good back play.

R. W. De Koven is the secretary of Cambridge University team, whom he had the honor of representing against the Amateur Football Association, and he played in the inter-varsity match against Oxford last season at full back.

N. C. E. Ashton is an Oxford man, and played left full-back against the F. S. last season.

L. Blackland, left, is another 'varsity man to whose merit tribute was paid by his selection for the amateur trial match last season. He assists Derbyshire.

F. N. S. Creek is a sprightly youth with plenty of dash and a much better player than he was when the F. A. played him in a trial game two seasons ago. He has thickened out, and is less impetuous. Creek assisted England in the amateur international match against Wales, and scored two goals.

G. B. D. Hunter is the nearest approach amongst amateurs to a first class professional half-back. He is a strong hefty player equally good in attack as defence.

F. H. Barnard is the captain of the Oxford University team and an accomplished inside-right. He is also a very good cricketer.

C. Wreford-Brown, manager, needs no introduction, being known the world over wherever soccer is played. This famous old Oxford player is now making his third trip to Canada.

Altogether it is a combination of very capable footballers the Corinthians are bringing out, and Canadian enthusiasts may depend upon it that they will see football as it should be played. The team had a very good 1923-24 season, as will be seen from the following:

				Goals
25	16	6	3	58	37

During the season they have met and defeated such teams as, Scottish Amateur League, 5-2; Queen's Park (Glasgow), 4-0 and 4-1; Blackburn Rovers, 1-0; Preston North End, 2-1. They also drew with Hearts of Midlothian, 1-1, and Bolton Wanderers, 0-0, and have just completed a very successful tour of the Continent.

We await their appearance with particular pleasure.

CANADIANS DEFEAT CUBANS IN DAVIS CUP

OTTAWA, July 26.—(Star Special by Innes Taylor)—The victory of the young Canadian doubles team, Willard Crocker and Jack Wright, over the Cuban team of Villalbo and Banet puts Canada in the lead for the Davis Cup matches, and we have only now to win one of the two singles today for our team to have the right to play Japan in Montreal on August 7th, 8th and 9th.

Although our team won in straight sets, the score being 7-5, 7-5, 6-2, the match was extremely close right up to the fifth game of the third set, and to Crocker must go the major portion of the praise for Canada's win. He played magnificently throughout the match, and his tennis was of such calibre in the first two sets that the production of it would give him a chance against any of the first-class players, excepting perhaps the top two or three.

I have never seen him hit the ball quite so hard off the ground and hold his accuracy as he did yesterday for such a long time. When our team was in a tight spot in the first set, it was Crocker that came to the rescue by making telling placements, and by showing a splendid knowledge of court tactics. My opinion of his play has risen considerably by the showing he has made in his last two matches, and he has only to reproduce it today to score against the Cuban champion Parin, good as I acknowledge the latter to be.

Jack Wright served well throughout the match, only losing one of his services. In the first set, he was rather erratic, and made quite a few errors on easy shots. He tightened up in the second and third sets, in which he gave a brilliant display. He handled the Cuban's lobs far better than he did Paris' the day before. In the last set, which the Canadians won somewhat easily, Wright was the best man on the court and scored 12 placements to Crocker's three.

A word of praise must be given to the Cubans, who fought valiantly throughout the match. Most of the time they were being led, but they played exhilarating tennis throughout. Their lobbing was quite first-class. It was by far, the fastest tennis that has been seen in this tie. During the match, Crocker won six of his services and lost two. Wright had the best score on service, winning seven and losing one. Villalbo served throughout with sound judgment and won six of his services and lost two. Bhanet, of Cuba, was the weak one on service, as he lost six and only won two of them. Banet has a very few of them went in yesterday and very few of them want in yesterday, and his second service was not hard for the Canadian pair to handle. Jack Wright on his showing looks to have come back to the form he showed in the Canadian championships, and unless I am very much mistaken, think he should win his match from the veteran Cuban, Zayas. A comparison of points is interesting. The Canadians scored 39 placements to the Cubans' 8. Of these placements, Jack Wright made 24, 12 of which he made in the last set, where he showed his most brilliant form. Crocker made 15 placements, seven in the first and five in the second sets, in which he played his best tennis. Banet made five and Villalbo three. Crocker did not make any service aces. Wright, Banet and Villalbo each made two. In errors, which means out and nets, Wright had 36, six more than his partner, Crocker, who had only 30. Banet had 27 and Villalbo 33. There was quite a few double faults served. The worst offender in this department, who made six, being Villalbo, Crocker came next with four and Wright and Banet each had two.

ST. ZOTIQUE-ST. REGIS IN LACROSSE GAME

Te Indians from St. Regis who did so well against Carsteel last week will be here again on July 27 and will try to duplicate their victory by beating St. Zotique. The latter team has reinforced their squad and are now ready for action. Lacrosse followers who did not see the last game are assured of witnessing a feat game. It will be interesting to see the Le. White, Abe Jacobs and T. Fott stick handling.

The game will start at 3:15 at St. Henry grounds, Cor. Rose de Lima and Workman.

Bout de L'Isle Motor Boat Races Today

Given good weather a very large crowd will attend the motor boat regatta at Bout de L'Isle this afternoon.

Bout de L'Isle may be reached by automobile by driving east on Notre Dame Street, to the end of the Island (Bout de L'Isle), or by the street car which will leave Lasalle Street, Maisonneuve every fifteen minutes.

The course is from Charlemagne Bridge 2½ miles down the St. Lawrence River, or five miles around. Starting will be made against the current, and all turns will be left hand.

The racing committee are very anxious that enough entries be made so that all races will be well contested. There is no entry charge, and races are provided for almost every kind of motor boats including those equipped with Evinrude motors. Entries will be received up to fifteen minutes before the races start.

SPORT CORRESPONDENCE

SWIMMING OFFICIALS' SIDE.

112 Sherbrooke St. W.,
Montreal, 19th July, 1924.

Dear Sir,—As secretary of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, I consider it my duty and privilege to answer the article from the Toronto Star, which was reproduced in the Montreal Star issue of the 16th inst., reading as follows:

"What the Canadian sporting public wants to know is why perfectly eligible Canadian swimmers, endorsed by their own swimming association in Ontario, and the Canadian Olympic Committee, should be turned down by the International Olympic Committee and refused permission to compete at Paris. The protest came from Montreal, and was an inside affair in which so-called Canadians protested their own countrymen without rhyme or reason."—Toronto Star.

The person responsible for the article is either very ignorant of the actual facts or grossly malicious, because the article is misleading and unjust. The protest did not come from Montreal but from the executive of the C.A.S.A., nor was it an inside affair, as the decision to send over only two swimmers had the approval of all the C.A.S.A. Provincial sections from Halifax to Vancouver, with the exception of the newly formed Ontario section of Toronto. When the writer of the above article means by the term "so-called Canadians" I am at a loss to know.

In an article appearing in the Montreal Star, dated Toronto, April 9th, Mr. Mulqueen, chairman of the Olympic Committee of Canada, openly stated that the C.A.S.A. will have no say in the choice of swimmers to represent Canada at the Olympic games. Members of the Olympic Committee did everything they could to discredit the Dominion Olympic trials arranged by the C.A.S.A. to be held at Winnipeg, but swimmers and general public were warned by the C.A.S.A. officials on many occasions that only those taking part at the trials at Winnipeg would be eligible for choice to represent Canada at Paris. The C.A.S.A., in arranging to hold the trials at Winnipeg, was only following out the same procedure that was carried out for previous Olympics. Our authority had never before been questioned, either by former Olympic committees or the A.A.U. of Canada, but it does seem strange that this year, because the A.A.U. of Canada, through the instigations of some of its clever members, cancelled our articles of alliance. The strangeness that the Olympic Committee attempted to ignore our authority can be explained away perhaps by the admission of Mr. Mulqueen, that the Canadian Olympic Committee this year was the creation of the A.A.U. of Canada; hence the combination of the A. A. U. of C. and the Olympic Committee started out on a campaign to discredit our authority with the swimmers and the public in general. It is a well known fact that officials of the A.A.U. of C. and important members of the Olympic Committee endeavored to dissuade George Vernot and Clayton Bourne from going to Winnipeg for the final Olympic trials. Being unsuccessful in that respect, it was endeavored to get these two men to compete at the meet at Brantford, Ont., which was engineered by the Olympic Committee, though it was held under the sanction of our Ontario section as a purely local meet, with the hope that, if George Vernot and Clayton Bourne would compete, it would give the Brantford meet an Olympic setting. It was at the Brantford meet that Walker and Chapman were chosen by the Olympic Committee, and my letter to Mr. Mulqueen, dated June 19, and published in the Montreal Star the next day, explains our reasons for not allowing them to swim at Paris. The same peoples who tried to dissuade Vernot and Bourne from going to Winnipeg were probably responsible for advising Chapman and Walker not to bother about the Winnipeg trials. That they were badly advised is quite apparent now, and the fact that the International bodies controlling athletics upheld the stand taken by the C.A.S.A. and recognised our authority should be a good enough reason that it was not "AN INSIDE AFFAIR."

I sincerely hope that the next Canadian Olympic Committee will be a truly neutral body, properly constituted and representing all branches of sports, working in harmony with all the recognized amateur bodies, instead of causing dissension, as the present Olympic Committee did.

Hoping that you will publish this letter in your paper in justice for the general public, I remain,

Yours very truly,
J. E. SIMARD,
Secretary-Treasurer C.A.S.A.

ROY AND DUNDEE MAY BOX IN NEW ARENA BEFORE HOCKEY SEASON WILL OPEN

The Star is informed that negotiations are under way to try and have Leo "Kid" Roy and Johnny Dundee box a ten or fifteen round bout at the new Canadian Arena, which is now being built on the site of the old Forum, before the hockey season opens.

Raoul Godbout, when spoken to about the matter, said: "I am convinced that Roy can hold his own with Dundee if in good condition. He is tough, and is capable of taking the hardest of knocks.

"Dundee, I understand from Aleck Moore, is willing to come to Montreal and fight Roy on reasonable terms, providing it is understood that his championship is not involved in case Roy should knock him out or beat him.

"I hope the matter can be arranged. It would draw the biggest boxing crowd ever seen in Montreal, and would be a great advertisement for the new building."

THREATENS SUITS

George Pulos, the owner of the candy store which was pictured in the Star a week ago as the stumbling block to the erection of the new Arena, announced this morning that he would take an action for big damages against the Arena Company, the Reford Company, who were the former owners of the land, and against the Atlas Construction Company.

He claims that when the roof was taken off his part of the Forum during the last few days, the demolishers only left the lath covering on his store, with the result that during the recent rain-storm his stock and fixtures were injured to the extent of several thousand dollars.

"I was never served with any Court order to vacate," he says.

St. Louis Won Victory Off The Giants

NEW YORK, July 26.—(United News)—Friday's major league activities were confined to the National League pennant race in which interest is dulled because of the runaway lead of the Giants.

The schedules, however, made the American League inactive and the National Leaguers received the full share of the attention.

They proved themselves relatively poor showmen for their games Friday caused hardly a stir in the sensation-seeking heart of the major league fan. With the exception of the off-repeated advance of the Pittsburg Pirates to third place and the subsequent dislodging of the Dodgers, all positions in the league remained unchanged.

NEW YORK, July 26.—(National)—The St. Louis Nationals hit the ball hard and opened their five game series with New York with a 13 to 5 victory.

The Cardinals batted Bentley for four runs in the first inning and knocked him out in the second. Haines, the St. Louis pitcher, was also hit hard. Frisch and Jackson both hit home runs. Every St. Louis player made one hit.

Forty Men Candidates For Rugby

With the rugby season in eastern Canada still a long way ahead, the M.A.A.A. shows that this year they will not be missing anything, by announcing, at this early date, a list of prospective candidates for the senior team, which will dispute the honors of the Big Four Interprovincial League.

Already they have forty odd men in view, the majority of whom have been approached and have signified their willingness to help along the winged wheel squad, which will be under the direction of Major Earl Greenwood.

As announced in The Star a couple of days ago, men like Parmelee and Crane, of Ottawa, and Mundel, of Queen's, are in the city at the present time and have been spoken to. They are expected to be at the Westmount grounds when the first practice is called in the latter part of August.

Coach Greenwood is in favor of having the team candidates eat and sleep at the M.A.A.A. Westmount Clubhouse, two or three nights a week to start with and then when the team is practically chosen, keep the men there all the time. He believes that this will bring closer field relationship and real harmony all through the season. He is also anxious to have as many practice games with the McGill team as possible before the playing season. In point of fact it is expected that McGill and M.A.A.A. will be in closer touch with one another on the gridiron this year than ever before.

Following is a list of the players that the M.A.A.A. management has in mind for early work at the present time: Boo Anderson, of McGill and M. A. A. A.; Peen Bennett, M.A.A.A.; Don Baillie, old McGill quarter; Dink Carroll, McGill and M.A.A.A.; Jack Crankshaw, Westmount & M.A.A.A.; Ralph Cummings, M.A.A.A.; Jack Dawson, M.A.A.A.; Walter Dickson, Westmount and M.A.A.A.; Ferdy Dewhurst, Ottawa and M.A.A.A.; Clary Foran, Westmount and M.A.A.A.; Don Foss, McGill and M.A.A.A.; Jack Gardner, M.A.A.A.; Joe Glickman, M.A.A.A.; Hanmile Hamilton, M.A.A.A.; Bob Holt, M.A.A.A.; Romeo Joseph, M.A.A.A.; Jack Klein, M.A.A.A.; J. Boxing Night At Boat Club Chateauguay

The directors of the Chateauguay Boating Club have decided to hold a gala "Boxing Night" on Friday evening, August 1. The show will be held in their club house, and is scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m.

Billy Armstrong, boxing director of the M.A.A.A., has been asked by President Coffin, of the Boating Club executive, to take full charge of the arrangements, and having accepted the honour, is sketching out a program.

Five competition bouts will be the main attraction, and as this will be the first time that real competition bouts for a decision have been staged in Chateauguay, it is the intention of Mr. Armstrong to visit Chateauguay, where many of his acquaintances have summer homes, and ask them to donate the prizes for these events and help to make next Friday's show at the Boating Club a real success, as many ladies are expected to attend. All boxers taking part have been ordered to appear in the regulation gymnasium suit.

Among the bouts the veteran instructor is trying to arrange, and for which the Boating Club will offer prizes both to winners and losers, are the following bouts:—

In addition to the boxing bouts, several vocal and instrumental numbers will round out the bill, chief among these being the appearance of E. J. Hanrahan. This gentleman's singing was one of the features of the big out-door show recently staged on the M.A.A.A. grounds. Another singer of class to appear will be Lile Phillip. Mr. Phillip is well-known in business circles throughout the city, and is also known as a singer who really knows how to sing. Mr. Armstrong will be at the M.A.A.A. both tonight and Monday evening at 8:30, where he will be pleased to meet the above-mentioned boxers and others who may wish to take part in next Friday evening's show at Chateauguay.

ST. EUSTACHE B. C. WILL HOLD CLUB REGATTA

The annual Club Regatta of the St. Eustache Boating Club will be held on Saturday next, August 2nd, starting about 3 p.m. (D.S. time). As this is strictly a club feature, members only will be allowed to compete. The program committee have drawn up an attractive list of events which includes canoe races, flat bottom boat races, swimming races, etc., details of which will be announced later. The sports committee includes W. R. Dohn, Leo Haynes, L. McKechenney. The officials for the day are: W. G. McCutcheon, J. J. Gagnon, T. Doherty, judges; Ben Haynes, Bert Johnston, clerks of course; F. L. McLaughlin, announcer; W. G. Taylor, starter.

HINSDALE, Ills., July 26.—(United News.)—There was a fight to the bitter end in the semi-final matches of the Western Amateur Championship here Friday. Nothing was conceded, everything had to be played out, and when all was over, and only a few of the gallery remained to rehash the day's play.

ROYAL ST. LAWRENCE SEA SCOUTS RETURN FROM RECORD CRUISE

Visit Carillon, Ottawa, Smith's Falls, Kingston, Prescott, in Naval Whaler—Went 400 Miles and Enjoyed it—Slept in Regular Beds Only Once

One of the longest cruises yet undertaken by Sea Scouts, under charge of the boys themselves, has just been completed by a crew of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club Sea Scouts—with Kenneth Hall, boatswain of the troop, in command.

The Sea Scouts now own three yachts, Jellicoe, Shackleton and James Caird, and it was in the last-named that this interesting cruise was made of more than four hundred miles of lake and river. The boat itself is a twenty-seven foot Montagu whaler, and can be propelled either by sails of by oars—the latter sometimes referred to as the "Armstrong Motor."

Leaving Dorval on Saturday afternoon, June 28, the crew reached Ste. Annes de Bellevue under oars, and camped there that night. Next morning sail was set to a freshening breeze, and before long it was necessary to take down two reefs in the mainsail, to allow for the heavy wind blowing. Dinner was cooked at anchor in lee of an island, and Carillon was reached at night—with all crew and gear soaked by sea and spray.

On Monday morning all blankets and personal gear were dried, and by 2:30 the Carillon Canal had been cleared. By heavy rowing Chute a Blondeau was finally cleared; by 8:30 the Grenville Canal was reached; and at 10:15 the Scouts arrived at Stonefield Locks, where they camped that night, after a day that proved one of the hardest of the whole cruise, owing to heavy head winds and current. Through the courtesy of the lockmaster at Stonefield, the boys were allowed to sleep in one of the lock houses.

USE ARMSTRONG MOTOR.

On Tuesday, the 1st of July, the Scouts cleared the Grenville Canal at 12:15, and then proceeded up the river. At 5:15 in the afternoon the wind died out, and it was necessary to take to the Armstrong Motor near Pointe au Chene. At 8:30 that night the Scouts were about to camp on the shore when they spied a tug of logs going up the river. Speedy rowing enabled them to reach the boom, and after asking permission to make fast, they did so, and decided to continue steadily through the night, standing watch and watch on the boat. During this time the meals were cooked aboard by means of a "Coleman" stove, and in this way Ottawa was reached on Wednesday morning, July 2. Through the kindness of the management, the Sea Scouts were allowed to camp in the Exhibition Grounds, close to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who also extended many courtesies.

July 3rd, 4th and 5th were spent in Ottawa visiting the Parliament buildings and the Museum. Charts were purchased for the Rideau Lake system; and on Saturday evening the crew departed at 6 o'clock. By that night they made Long Island Lock, where camp was pitched. The next night was spent at anchor in the river, and by 6 o'clock in the evening of the 7th, Edmond's Locks had been reached, where the boys camped for the night in the lock house through the courtesy of Mr. Dalton, lockmaster. Smith's Falls was reached at 5 o'clock the next night, while the night of July 9th was spent at Rideau Ferry. Chaffe's Locks was reached at 9 o'clock on the night of the 10t, and camp was made.

SLEPT IN REAL BED.

At 8 o'clock on the night of the 11th, Seeley Bay Bridge marked the end of the run, and here the boys received one of the kindest reception of the whole cruise. Mr. Prior, bridge-keeper, placing his house at their disposal. This was the only occasion on the cruise when the members of the crew slept in beds. During the next day, July 12th, the crew made one of the best rowing records of the whole trip, covering under oars about twenty-five miles against a head wind in record time. Kingston was reached at 7.30, but the crew only stopped long enough to pick up mail, as all members were anxious to reach the Thousand Islands. Kingston was cleared a little after 8.00 o'clock, and by 1.00 o'clock in the morning Apohaque Island, Gananoque, had been reached. Here the Scouts camped, and next day transferred their camp to the Armory at Gananoque through the courtesy of Col. Mooney. The next four days were spent in Gananoque, outing about the Islands, fishing, swimming, etc. Gananoque was cleared on the afternoon of July 16th, and under strong favorable winds Prescott was reached that night. This made a record run of sixty miles under sail alone. Prescott was left the next morning at 9.00 o'clock, and after another splendid day of sailing and running the rapids, Stanley Island, Lake St. Francis, was reached at 9.00 o'clock in the evening. On Friday, the 18th, the crew cleared Stanley Island at 9.00 o'clock, and with a strong favorable wind the head of Soulanges Canal was reached at 11.30. The canal was cleared by 3.00 p.m. and course was laid to Beauharnois. Upon reaching Beauharnois, a straight course was set for Pointe Claire, and thence home to the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club at Dorval at about 5.00 o'clock. Thus ended a four hundred mile cruise, during which the Scouts fended for themselves entirely as to living and sleeping.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

The Victorias went out managed by J. Auberton to meet the Royals of Jacques Cartier and were defeated by one point. It was a hard struggle between Tanguay of Royals and Sauve of the Victorias. Lack of practice prevented the Victorias from winning their game. The Victorias were well received by the Royals, but hope to have their revenge.

The Victorias are in position to meet any teams ranging from the ages of 17 to 20 years.

Lachine Walloped McGill 11

The Lachine cricket eleven administered defeat to the McGill club in the first half of a two-day match on the McGill Campus yesterday when they took a total of 94 runs to McGill's score of 70. The two-day match now in progress is a play-off for the honour of meeting the Toronto team when they come down to Montreal to decide the ownership of the Ross Robertson Trophy, which last season was held by McGill. Each of the local teams had one innings yesterday afternoon, and each will have another today, when the play starts at eleven-thirty this morning.

The weather outlook was decidedly black yesterday until a rift in the clouds allowed the sun to pour through and dry up the pitch, which was then carefully swept and rolled. At three o'clock the crease was pronounced fit for play, and McGill took the field. M. Mitchell started bowling with a good, speedy ball, but the bowling honours of the innings went to Potter, who took four wickets for only 23 runs. The McGill fielding was very prettily executed for the most part. Ince and Wallace proved the best batting combination that Lachine exhibited, Ince being caught out after 40 runs had been made. The Lachine batting was finally halted after ten wickets, with a final score of 94 runs.

The McGill batters could not cope successfully ith the bowling of Ince and Freck, and were forced to accept second best with a total of only 70 runs for the ten wickets. Thompson, of Lachine, had a little hard luck at bat, but his fielding was highly praiseworthy.

Lachine, through some misunderstanding due to the weather, were a bit disorganized, but they nevertheless scored a victory. The match today should prove thrillingly close, as McGill will be exerting themselves to the utmost to regain lost prestige.

CRAIG CAMPBELL'S SOCCER GOSSIP

This afternoon Sons of England play Canadian National at Alexandra Park. Taking relative league positions, this looks something like "cat and the mouse," "lion and the lamb," etcetera, and just because it looks that way, it may turn out to be nothing of the sort. Indeed, it may be a vastly entertaining game, and worth the visit of anyone. The Sons, to whom the fates dealt a heavy blow when their ground was taken from them, have been, in the venacular, up against it, being forced to play their home league games on Monday evenings. This has not been conducive to sustaining league intereat in their doings. Also they have met defeat after defeat, enough to break the stoutest heart, but they have plugged on and kept smiling, a jolly hard thing to do at times, reducing margin of defeat, until now they can put up a good fight. Those who admire pluck and gameness, could put in an afternoon to good advantage, by visiting Alexandra Park. Canadian National have no cinch.

The Sydney Daily Guardian is far from complimentary in dealing with the second Test match, when Canada defeated Australia by 1—0. Their soccer scribe has this to say:

"Considered as an international exhibition of soccer football, Saturday's Test match must be labelled a farce. It was 'roughhouse.' Every spectator saw the flagrant breaches committed—pushing and tripping were frequent—but the referee went on his way with his whistle silent. Both teams offended by playing the man instead of the ball, and dangerous kicks were exchanged by players who are regarded as sporting rivals.

Referee Allerton did not assert his authority at any stage of the 'battle,' although the sparring incident in front of Australia's goal, just before the final whistle, called for drastic action. No objection can be taken to hard tackling, but the rules should be enforced for dangerous play. It is interesting to note that Manager Adam asked the N. S. W. authorities for a round table conference on this question soon after the Canadians arrived.

CUNNING CANADIAN SKIPPER.

Skipper Harley proved a shrewd general. Stobbart scored for Canada 15 minutes after, the kick-off, and Harley then was content to keep the advantage for the rest of the game. The sodden ground suited the visitors' short-passing game and helped kill the home forwards' 'shock' tactics. The spoiling defence of the Canadian backs, plus their big advantage in weight, shattered Australia's attack, time after time. Mosher gave a brilliant exhibition between the Canadian sticks. Soon after the start, Chapman injured his knee again, and the Canadians really finished with four forwards, since he took no further part in the attack.

The Australian half-backs suffered in comparison with the opposing trio, Harley, Dierdon and Stobbart smothered every move made by the inside forwards, using their weight to advantage in the individual clashes. The only goal of the match was Stobbart's brilliant effort. He snapped up the ball outside the penalty area, worked into position, and then let drive with a shot which was too well placed for Robinson to clear. The teams were:

Australia — Robinson, (Vic.); Gallen, (N.S.W.); Falkiner, (Tasmania); Storey, (N.S.W.); Henderson, (N.S.W.); Spurway, (N.S.W.); Bourke, Ward, Masters, Sherrington and Thompson, all N.S.W.

Referee—W. Allerton.

Returning to Canada for a moment, Johnny Peace, of Royal Highlanders, was married this morning, and if wishes, and good ones too, will help, Johnny and his bride has them to the full from soccermen in this district.

The Board of Management of the Soccer Players Mutual Benefit Society, met at the office of the Society, 123 St. Peter street last night, to consider the extraordinary circumstances in which the Society is placed on account of the abnormal number of accidents reported and claims arising from same.

The secretary reported that the claims paid from July first to July 25th amounted to $360.00 and doctors't ees, $175.00, which does not include two outstanding doctor's accounts, the total payments for the month to date amounting to $535.49. It was further reported that the premiums paid into the society for the present season (about three month to date) amounted to $1,292.00, and the benefits paid out $1,320.00, leaving no balance whatever for working expenses. By way of comparison the disability benefits and doctor's fees for the whole season 1923, only totalled $1,350.00.

Abuses had crept in it was reported, and claims had been made contrary to the letter of the rules. Reckless play was in some measure responsible for many injuries, and players "taking a chance" when they were physically unfit to play. Club officials were to blame more than the players, it was stated, especially when players are rushed into the game again after having drawn upon the funds of the society. The report concluded in a none too hopeful spirit, to the effect that unless claims were more sparing the society could not carry on.

Arrangements were made for staging the Cup Competitions the proceeds of which will, it is anticipated, replenish the funds of the society.

THAT ATHLETIC BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

SLEEP CENTRES.

In likening that body of yours to a motor car, your brain and the nerves leading from it were likened to the battery and wires.

The battery is in a case, and the wires are all insulated.

However, your nervous system seems to have a number of auxiliary stations which control various functions, and the brain proper doesn't have to bother much about them.

Some of these centres are our sleep centres, and are therefore very important.

When you are asleep they seem to be recharging themselves, just as the storage battery does when you are not using it up for starting and lighting.

When you are awake and your brain active you use up this stored energy. If you get sufficient rest after this mental work, which might include physical work also, as this often entails the use of the brain, then the centre, this storage centre gets a chance to store up energy again. If you don't get sufficient rest, then the recharging is interfered with and your nervous system suffers.

Some physiologist has estimated that if you lose one complete night's rest, that it takes seventeen days to restore the body to its normal condition of nervous health.

The loss of an hour's sleep may mean very little, or the loss of half the night's sleep is soon rectified, but one complete night, with not even five minutes' sleep is of serious import.

And this is the reason that sleep is so important, then, because real sleep, unconsciousness on your part, actually turns off the power or juice, your centre does not have to supply any, and actually gets a chance to recharge or restore itself during that time.

If you sleep poorly, are troubled with dreams, you can easily see that there is really not a good chance for your little storage battery to recharge itself, because you do not turn off your mental activities completely.

And just another important point.

You have often been under strong emotional excitement, worry, anxiety, or the exhilaration of a football game or boxing contest and wonder why you can't sleep.

Your battery runs down, doesn't it?

Similarly then, under strong excitement or emotion you are using a tremendous amount of nervous energy taking all that your little nerve centre can supply.

Now if in addition to this you can't get your sleep you can see what your nervous system is up against.

Just when you need complete recharging of the centre, you keep awake, thus using energy, and it charges up poorly instead of completely.

New Club House of the Mount Bruno Golf Club Taken by Staff Photographer

The new club-house of the Mount Bruno Golf and Country Club, which next Friday and Saturday, August 1 and 2, will be the scene of the Canadian Open Golf Championship. The exterior design of the edifice is of English character, the walls being of stucco, with the introduction of a certain amount of half-timbered work in the gables. The roof is of shingles and stained a dark red. The general appearance is of a very simple but harmonious character. The professionals' quarters are as located before in the former building, which was destroyed by fire, with the exception of a small lounge rom to occupy the former location of the bag room, which is located beyond the professionals' quarters. The upper story of this building contains bedrooms for the male help. Beyond the bag room the building turns at an angle to follow the crest of the hills, and in the "ell" are the secretary's office and the ladies' locker room. A covered way connects the end of this building to what might be termed the main club house, which, although larger than formerly, retains the main characteristics of the former club house, the great feature being the large open gallery between the main rooms. A change has been made, however, in the disposition of these main rooms, the lounge room being at the end and the dining room, or, rather, the dining porch, on the interior side, but jutting out towards the edge of the hill. Sleeping quarters for the female help are provided above the service portion of the building.

Royal St. Lawrence Crew Will Sail Fast Race Here This Afternoon

Will Compete in the Second Race for Commodore's Cup at Dorval — Leave for the Lake-of-the Woods at 7 o'Clock Tonight from Dorval

The second race of the series being sailed by the "B" Class yachts of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club for a cup presented by Commodore Wm. C. Finley scheduled to be sailed over the Pointe Claire Course this afternoon has been changed to the Dorval course in order to give ample time for the crew, who are leaving for the west to compete.

This will, therefore, be the last opportunity they will have of sailing until they get afloat on the Lake of the Woods.

The crew, who will represent the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club in the international races with the Lake of the Woods and White Bear Yacht Clubs, namely hear Commodore R. C. Stevenson, Alex Poe, Jack Foster and Bob Tudor will sail the "Vega" in this afternoons race.

LEAVE FOR DORVAL.

The local crew will leave for Kenora from Dorval on the Canadian Pacific Railways Trans-Canada at 7 o'clock this evening arriving at the Lake of the Woods at 7 o'clock, Monday morning. They will get sailing on Monday and this will give them for days providing there is a breeze to become acustomed to the strange craft and strange waters before they commence their racing on Friday, August 1st.

WINNIPEG, July 26.—(Star Special.)—Weston and Beliol football teams are in fine fettle for the second game of the finals of the Connaught Cup, which will get under way this afternoon. The men who entered the play Thursday night came through in good shape and will be available for today. Manager Bindoff has hopes of playing Albert Jackson, who was injured in the semi-final game at Fort William. His presence should give added strength to the Easterners who are confident that the one goal held by Weston will not bar them from bringing the coveted trophy East.

REGATTA OF BELOEIL AND ST. HILAIRE AUG. 2

The annual regatta of Beloeil and St Hilaire will take place this year on the 2nd and 3rd of August.

The program comprises, as in previous years, yacht races, canoe, boat and swimming races, and fireworks. Novelties for this year are also promised by the organizers.

The big free-for-all is already being much discussed, and there will be this year entered the fastest racers of the province. Several yacht owners from the United States have written for information and have decided to come down the Richelieu.

Last year's winner, M. Parker, with the famous "Miss Montreal," has again entered the race and it is his expectation to repeat his feat of last year, permitting him to keep the splendid cup that he has had in his possession since then and to win the purse to be given the winner.

Doubleheader At Shamrock Grounds Tomorrow

Ottawa will be visitor to the Canadiens at Shamrock ground tomorrow in a double-header, first game to start at 2 p.m. This will be the first visit of the Ottawa aces since the re-organization of the league. The same clubs will continue their series at Atwater Park Monday and Tuesday.

MAH JONGG

By G. M. LE HAIN

Copyright by the RENOUF PUBLISHING CO., of Montreal.

L. G. H., Old Orchard, Me.

Question—I have recently gone Mah Jongg on a hand of all characters, no sequences. I claim three farns for complete hand in one suit, and a farn for no sequences.

My claim for no sequences would have added over four hundred points to my score, but it was not allowed. If I have followed the articles in The Star correctly and my memory serves me right, my claim is correct. Others who have also read your articles claim I am in error. Will you please put us right.

Answer. Your claim is correct. You get three farns for a hand all one suit, and still another double for no sequences. Your friends must be mistaken. This rule was made very plain in pars. 117 and 118 which were published in The Star.

H. E. R., Montreal.

Question—Will you kindly say if playing with the Mandarin tiles makes a more interesting game. Many of my friends insist upon playing with them, but it seems to me that they are neither essential or necessary. I suppose however it would be correct to infer that they are always used by the Chinese when playing the game, and as this game originated in China where the sets are manufactured these tiles would not be included in same unless they were intended for use. I would be pleased to have your views on the use of these tiles, and if they are generally used by the Chinese. I will look for your reply through the columns of The Star.

Answer—As a general rule, the Chinese do not care to play with the Mandarin tiles, for several reasons. First, because by lucky drawing of these tiles, the value of the hand may be doubled over and over again, without any skill on the part of the palyer. To offset this, some of the farns are not counted, when playing with the Mandarins — also the "winds of the round" are eliminated. In other words, the whole game is spoiled by these tiles—therefore the Chinese hardly ever use them. You have somewhat the same idea, with "duces wild" in the game of Poker. All ratio of chances are upset by the introduction of any such play. The mere fact that the mandarin tiles are included in the sets is no reason to assume that they must be used—for instance do we use the Joker in playing Bridge? Yet there is a Joker in every pack of cards when you buy it.

J. C. C., Portland, Me.

Question—Will you kindly say if there is any penalty for calling Mah Jongg, and after discover your hand is not complete? I have heard different rulings on this, what is yours? Your ruling is to be accepted to settle the discussion, therefore kindly give the straight rule.

Answer—Making false declaration of "Mah Jongg." This calls for the most drastic penalty in the game. A player, who under the impression that his hand is complete, calls "Mah Jongg," and exposes his hand, and then discovers his hand is not complete, is penalized to pay double the limit to East Wind and the limit to each of the other players. If East makes the false declaration, then East pays double the limit to each of the other players. (See par. 147-148 for "limit".)

There is a reason for this drastic rule. In a game in which the stakes are high, a player might make a false declaration to save paying a big hand which he sees, or suspects, another player is making up.

While this is the absolute rule which covers this play, in ordinary friendly games, it seems to have become the custom to reduce this penalty considerably. For instance, suppose the player calls "Mah Jongg," and exposes this hand, and it is then seen that his hand is not complete, the player who has made the false declaration has to take up his hand again and finish the game. It is considered apparently, that it is penalty enough for the other three players to know just what is in the offender's hand, as they can avoid giving him any tile he may need.

If, however, the offender exposes his hand, and some other player also exposes his hand, then the penalty is by arrangement before hand, either the "limit" or half the "limit," or any other payment.

Note: The Chinese do not consider that a hand is "exposed" unless all the tiles are exposed. If one tile is still hidden, when the player making the false declaration, discovers his mistake, there is no penalty even though he called "Mah Jongg." Of course, if following the call of "Mah Jongg," some other player exposes any of his tiles, then the penalty will apply.

F.B., MORRISBURG, ONT.

Question (A)—One evening as we played I was having very poor luck, and I drew a hand that was a mixture of everything, but I had eight different winds, terminals, and dragons, and decided as the hand could not be any worse for me, I would try for the 13 wonders, and I got them all from the wall.

Now what I wish to ask: is it permissable to take the completing tile from the board (discard) or must the hand be completed with a tile, drawn from the wall?

Ans.—You could claim any tile, when being discarded to complete this hand. You could claim a tile from a closed kong to complete this hand (of course, only at the time the player was declaring the kong). You apparently had the thirteen wonders all right and it is the first time that I have ever heard of the hand being actually completed. The Chinese with whom I have played, have told me that they have never known the hand to be completed. Of course the element of luck might give this hand several times in one evening—but apparently this 13 wonders hand is beyond ordinary chances.

Question (B)—In order to get a three farn hand, all one suit, do you have to declare, or to get a one farn hand, all one suit, except winds and dragons, or do you just have to declare when three groups are exposed. Also whether the winner of a declared hand, say in circles, is paid for all by the one who discards the tile which gives him Mah Jongg, if it is a wind or dragon, and not a circle, or does this penalty just apply to the player discarding a tile of the suit of the winner's hand, which fills the winner's hand. Or does this penalty just apply to a three farn hand, i.e., all one suit?

Ans.—The penalty to which you refer, applies only in the case of a hand all of one suit (3 farns), when at least nine tiles of the hand are exposed on the table. If, in the face of the exposed tiles, a player discards a tile which completes the hand, all in one suit, then that player pays the penalty—(unless he also exposes his hand and shows that he had tiles of no other suit, nor honours, or winds).

The penalty does not apply in a hand in which there are honors, or winds, etc. It must be a hand all one suit, scoring three farns.

TRENTON PLANTS WILL OPERATE

Hold Another Inspection Before Re-Opening Allan Mine Shaft

NEW GLASGOW, July 25—(Star Special)—President R. M. Wolvin of the British Empire Steel Corporation, accompanied by G. F. Downs, of New York, director and J. E. McLurg, Sydney, vice-president, in charge of operations, spent today in New Glasgow conferring with local officials and inspecting the Pictou county plants of the corporation.

While admitting that business generally was bad, and the outlook not promising, Mr. Wolvin stated that the Trenton plants of the corporation would not be closed at present and work would be carried on as long as orders were available.

The British Empire Steel Corporation Colliery officers conferred with T. J. Brown, deputy Minister of Mines, with regard to the advisability of re-opening the Allan shaft which recently was visited by a disastrous explosion. While the daily tests which were carefully studied showed much encouragement, it was decided not to open the mine until at least the end of August and another conference will be held on August 15 to again study conditions.

MARS TO MAKE VISIT NEAR MOTHER EARTH

Closest Approach of the Ruddy Planet in 200 Years Will Take Place in August

THE biggest social event to be scheduled in our family of planets for several years will take place August 23. Mars is coming around our way. He does not pass near Mother Earth very often, only about once in two and a quarter years, to be exact. This year he will come closer than he has during the past two hundred years, approaching to within some 34,630,000 miles.

Not having had such a good chance to give her ruddy neighbor a good looking over since telescopes became abundant, Mother Earth is going to subject Mars to a severe scrutiny, something like a combined physical examination and intelligence test. He will be measured and weighed, accurate studies will be made of his complexion, and he will be tested to see how bright he really is. Many of these tests will be for the purpose of seeing whether or not there is a possibility that he is inhabited—but let's drop the metaphor here.

Mars is the next planet beyond the earth, counting from the sun out, and the nearest to us except Venus, the next planet on the sunny side. But his distance from us is a very variable thing. Sometimes he is stand-offish to the extent of getting 160,000,000 miles or so away, while at his near approaches he ranges from about 40,000,000 to 60,000,000 miles. The present prospective approach to less than 35,000,000 miles being unequalled by any approach in two hundred centuries, and will not be equalled during the lifetime of any man now living.

The reason for this variability of distance is that Mars is much farther from the sun, and so it takes him longer to go around once than does the earth. His year is equal to about 687 of our days, or nearly one year and eleven months. For that reason he never stays at the same relative position with respect to us. We are always overtaking him, and when we do catch up every two years or so he is nearer to us than at other times.

The distance of these near approaches varies because neither the orbit of Mars nor that of the earth is exactly circular. They are ellipses. Sometimes the earth is 2,000,000 miles farther from the sun than at other times, and if it happens that the earth catches up to Mars somewhere near that time and at the same time Mars is close to his nearest approach to the sun, it follows that the earth and Mars come nearer together than at any other time. That is just what will happen in August.

Although Mars has been the target of telescopes since they were first turned toward the heavens, much more needs to be known about the physical conditions existing on that planet. Its size, density, position and motion with respect to the sun, the length of its seasons and days have long been known with satisfactory accuracy. The questions now interesting many astronomers are those that have been hotly disputed for many years:

"Is there life on Mars?"

"Is the planet inhabited by intelligent beings?"

It was in 1877 that the Italian astronomer, Schiaparelli, found narrow streaks on the surface of Mars. He called them "canals" which should have been translated into English as "channels," so called because Schiaparelli believed they connected great dark areas then thought to be oceans. Unfortunately the word was actually translated as "canals," a term that suggests artificial construction. Hypothetical inhabitants were created to perform these great feats of engineering skill, and the popular imagination was spurred by such thrilling fiction as Wells' "War of the Worlds."

Before the canals and their possible constructors are considered, let us see what sort of place our next door planet appears to be.

The atmosphere of Mars is much rarer than that of the earth, only one-twelfth the density of the air that we breathe. Astronomers differ as to whether there is water and oxygen on Mars. Many have concluded that there are ample supplies of both, on Mars, but spectroscopic tests made at Lick Observatory seem to prove that there is very little of either water vapor or oxygen on the planet.

Water would boil on Mars at about 110 degrees Fabrenheit, as compared with 212 degrees here on earth. Gravity at the surface is about 35 per cent. what it is here and a man weighing 150 pounds on earth would weigh about 52 pounds on Mars.

The diameter of Mars is a little more than half that of our own planet, and its entire surface area is about equal to the land surface of the earth. From the earth at any one time half of this surface is exposed to view.

If a small telescope, say one of eight inch aperture and 400 diametres magnification, is directed at the ruddy planet, some idea can be obtained as to why there has been so much discussion about the Martian landscape.

The most striking of the surface features of Mars are the white polar caps which vary in size with the seasons of the planet. As the Martian winter advances, the caps increase in size, and when summer comes they seem to melt away. These great white masses may be composed either of snow, such as we have on our earth, or of carbonic acid gas in the frozen state.

Those who hold for the snow cap theory also believe that the progressive darkening of the surface from the pole toward the equator during the melting of the cap is due to the growth of vegetation fed by the unlocked water. If this is so, the order of seasonal growth of vegetation on Mars is just opposite that on earth, where the green of vegetable growth follows the advance of the sun from the equator toward the pole, appearing first in low latitudes of the temperate zone.

The so-called canals of Mars have given rise to the most spirited of the controversies resulting from a study of this planet. Prof. Percival Lowell in 1894 built an observatory at Flagstaff, Arizona, for the express purpose of studying the planet and its canals, and since that time many careful visual and photographic observations have been made there. Out of the intense interest in the surface markings of Mars there has also grown an organization known as The Associated Observers of Mars, which keeps the planet under constant surveillance. At the time of the close approach of the planet in 1920, there were reported 86 canals which had been observed and located independently by two or more widely separated observatories. Prof. W. H. Pickering at Jamaica, one of the most assiduous observers of Mars, insists that the coarser canals, about 150 miles wide, can be seen with a telescope as small as three inches under good observing conditions.

Yet other astronomers, even using instruments of the highest power, cannot see any systematic net work of so-called canals. It is true that they recognize the coarser workings of the Martian surface, but they cannot agree with the evidence brought forth in favor of great artificial canals built by intelligent beings to lead water from the melting snow caps to the equator for irrigation purposes. The best photographs taken are still too small to confirm the details which some claim to have seen.

Even when it comes to taking the temperature of Mars, the astronomers do not agree. Due to its distance from the sun, Mars receives only four-ninths as much heat from the sun as does the earth, yet owing to the fact that Mars is not wrapped up in clouds like the earth, a larger proportion of the heat reaches the surface and heats it up. The solar radiation is thought to be sufficiently intense to heat up the desert soil to as hot as the deserts here on earth, but when that surface rotates into the Martian night the lack of heat confining moisture is felt and the temperature may drop below zero every evening even at the equator. At the poles the very air may liquify.

Again there is controversy. Cloud-like markings on Mars have been observed and the presence of heat preserving blankets of water vapor has been inferred.

The more conservative scientists say:

"Very possibly Mars supports life. But very improbably is this life abundant or of high order."

At the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Arizona, special preparations are being made to take advantage of the coming close approach of Mars to the earth. This observatory has one of the world's finest collections of photographs and drawings of its surface.

All the usual observations will be carried out with added refinement and new lines of attack on the mystery of the planet will be pursued. Measurements will be made of the relative brightness of the planet's surface to determine the character of the markings and to get more definite information of the Martian atmosphere.

Large scale photographs will be made with the 40 inch reflecting telescope, using color sensitive plates exposed through color filters so that the color values of the different markings may be determined. These are expected to give valuable information on the nature of the surface markings and the changes that they undergo.

The heat of the surface of the planet will be measured by a radiometer which will record the heat energy emitted from the surface of the planet. The temperature of the surface of course has an important bearing on the ability of the planet to support life. Measurements of the heat radiation were made by Dr. W. W. Coblentz, of the United States Bureau of Standards, and C. O. Lampland, of the Lowell Observatory, at the time of the last opposition of Mars in 1922, and it was found that fully 30 per cent. of the heat radiations from Mars come directly from the surface of the planet as a result of its heating by the rays of the sun.

To the ordinary observer without a telescope, Mars is almost the most prominent object in the evening sky. By the end of July it will surpass Jupiter in brightness and attain pre-eminence. It will then rise early in the evening in the southeast, and this fact and its bright red color will make identification easy.

Take a good look at it, for even if you are a child and science adds 50 years to your span of life, you will never see the martial planet as bright again.

Left—If the full moon were observed with the unaided eye and Mars were viewed through a telescope magnifying 500 times, they would appear as they do in this drawing. When Mars is at its point of nearest approach, it is seen as a telescopic object seven times as large as the full moon ordinarily looks. At the same time, when Mars is most distant from the earth the telescope enlarging 500 diameters would show it just five-sixths the size of the full moon that we all see often in the evening sky.

Centre—Path of Mars and the earth about the sun this summer when they come close to each other.

Right, top—One of the largest photographs ever taken of the planet Mars. This is an unretouched view obtained through the use of one of the Mount Wilson Observatory large telescopes. Note the white polar cap and the dark markings, but the absence of a discernible network of so-called canals.

Right, lower—A drawing of Mars made in 1907 by Prof. Percival Lowell, founder of the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Arizona, and the most devoted student of our neighbor planet. He held that the fine markings were canals built by intelligent beings for irrigation purposes.

ORIGIN OF "HONEYMOON."

Q.—How did the word "honeymoon" originate?—Cartierville.

A.—Although we still use the word "honeymoon," the custom by which it originated is a thing of the past. It had its origin among the ancient Germans, when newly married couples drank mead mixed with honey for thirty days after the wedding.

KILMER'S POEM, "THE TREE."

Q.—Where could I obtain a copy of Joyce Kilmer's poem entitled "The Tree?"—Unlearned."

A.—Following is a copy of the famous poem by Joyce Kilmer (1886-1918), a young American poet who lost his life in France during the Great War:

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.

"A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;

"A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

"A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;

"Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.

"Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

SCOTT'S "QUENTIN DURWARD."

Q.—Will you please publish a synopsis of Sir Walter Scott's "Quentin Durward?"—Student.

A.—"Quentin Durward," one of the greatest of the romances written by Sir Walter Scott, was published in 1823. The story deals chiefly with various plots and counter-plots made by the enemies, Louis XI. of France and Charles the Bold of Burgundy. The Encyclopaedia Americana states that "The scene of this tale is France during the reign of Louis XI.; the hero, Quentin Durward, is a Scottish archer who, having a relative in the Scottish Guards of the French king, goes to France to seek his fortune. The book was written at the flood-tide of Scott's popularity at home; the ebb began with 'St. Ronan's Well,' published six months later." In "The Reader's Handbook," the Rev. Dr. E. Cobham Brewer remarks concerning this story of French history that "The delineations of Louis XI. and Charles the Bold of Burgundy will stand comparison with any in the whole range of fiction or history."

NO TRIBUTE PAID BY CANADA.

Q.—Will you kindly state what annual tribute Canada pays to Great Britain? I have lived in various parts of Canada, from Cape Breton to Vancouver Island, during 28 years, and all along the line I have met with some people who assert that a tribute is paid. When I have contradicted the statements I have been floored by the remark, — Who should know most about it, one who was born and educated in the country? or a person like myself who wasn't? I have just met two Canadians, one French and one English-speaking, who both agreed that there was a tribute, and one of the two mentioned the sum of 13 millions. This is paid for military and naval protection and other things.—Jersey.

A.—Not a cent of tribute is paid by Canada to Great Britain, nor is a single copper asked for by the Mother Country for military, naval, diplomatic and consular purposes. Canada has full control of her finances and Parliament is supreme in all matters of expenditure.

LINES FROM COWPER.

Q.—Would you kindly tell me where the following lines are to be found? I have an idea that they are from Cowper, but cannot find them in his works.

"Thou are the source and centre of all minds,
Their only point of rest, eternal Word!
From thee departing, they are lost and rove
At random, without honor, hope, or peace.
From thee is all that soothes the life of man,
His high enreavor, and his glad success,
His strength to suffer and his will to serve.
But oh, thou bounteous Giver of all good,
Thou are of all thy gifts thyself the crown!
Give what thou canst, without thee we are poor,
—"H. McQ."

A.—These form the last lines of Book V. of "The Task," a lengthy poem by the British poet, William Cowper (1731-1800).

Q.—What requirements are necessary to get into the Canadian navy? Is the navy taking on recruits at present? If it is, where should I go to enlist?—B. O.

THREE GREAT CITIES.

Q.—Would you be so kind as to give the present population of Paris, New York and London?—O. W.

A.—Paris has a population of 3,000,000; New York has a population of 5,927,617, and London a population of 7,476,168.

"TICKLER," A STRAIT OF WATER.

Q.—Will you please look up the word "tickle" and see what the dictionary has to say about this word as applied to a narrow inlet of water? It is employed in this sense in Gaspe and on the Newfoundland coast, and I cannot account for this use of the word. Many of our Gaspe inhabitants say "tittle," but I am pretty sure that "tickle" is correct. But why "tickle" in this connection?—J.W.W.

A.—Webster's New International Dictionary gives the following as one meaning of "tickler": "In Newfoundland and Labrador, a narrow water passage, as between two islands to a harbor." The Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary says that the word "tickler" means "(Newfoundland). A narrow and difficult strait or water-passage." The meaning, apparently, of "tickler" as used in this sense is that it is a ticklish,—that is, a difficult or a dangerous passage, on in which a boat would require careful handling.

"THE CHEEK OF A CANAL-HORSE."

Q.—Could you enlighten me as to the origin of the expression, "The cheek of a canal-horse?" — B.S.W.

A.—The Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary gives among other definitions of "cheek:" "One of the outside branches of a horse's bit; also, in a harness, the part of a bridle next a horse's cheek," and says that "to put up to the cheek" means "to fasten the reins to the top or first ring on the cheek of a horse's bit, easing the pressure on the mouth." Webster's New International Dictionary says that in vulgar English, "to put up to the cheek of a horse" means "to attach the reins of" (a horse) "to the first or highest rings of the curb to lighten the leverage on the mouth." The expression "The cheek of a canal-horse" may have arisen partly from this. Another explation is that canal-horses are usually so badly treated and so ill-fed that they become as bold as brass, develop a character all their own, and are extremely "cheeky" or have plenty of "cheek." Since towing is going out to a large extent, this expression is not now employed as much as it used to be.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHPLACE.

Q.—To settle an argument will you please tell me where George Washington, the first President of the United States, was born?—F. L.

A.—Bridges Creek, Westmoreland County, Virginia, was the place where George Washington (1732-1799), the first President of the United States, was born, the date of his birth being February 22 (old style February 11), 1732.

CANADA'S NATIONAL WEALTH.

Q.—Can you give me a general idea of the national wealth of Canada?—M. R.

A.—Canada's national wealth in 1921 was $22,195,000,000, according to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. In the tabulation, agricultural wealth comes first with $7,982,871,126, nearly 36 per cent of the total. Of the provinces, Ontario ranks first with an estimated aggregate wealth of $7,358,000,000. Quebec comes next with $5,540,809,867, followed by Saskatchewan with $2,845,842,000; Alberta, $1,950,873,000; Manitoba, $1,650,495,000; British Columbia, $1,365,896,120; Nova Scotia, $752,697,086; New Brunswick, $597,596,000; Prince Edward Island, $119,912,000; and the Yukon, $16,869,000.

"A COCK-AND-BULL STORY."

Q.—Where does the expression "a cock-and-bull story" come from?—M. T.

A.—More than one explanation is given regarding the origin of this term. One is that it is derived from the papal bulls, so called because of the "bulla" or seal attached to the documents and having on them the figure of St. Peter and that of a cock. The Rev. Dr. E. Cobham Brewer, in his Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, says that the term "cock-and-bull story" is "a corruption of concocted and bully story. The catch-pennies hawked about the street are still called cocks,—i.e., concocted things. Bully is the Danish 'bullen' (exaggerated)." Compare our bull-rush (an exaggerated rush), a bull-frog, etc. "Another etymology may be suggested: The idol Nergal was the most common idol of the ancient Phoenicians, Indians and Persians, and Nergal means a dung-hill cock. The Egyptian bull is equally notorious under the name of Osiris. A cock-and-bull story may therefore mean a myth, in reference to the mythological fable of Nergal and Osiris. A third suggestion refers to fables, where dumb animals are made to speak and act like human being. The French equivalents are 'faire un coq a l'ane and 'un conte de ma mere l'oie' (a mother goose tale.)"

BOROUGHS OF NEW YORK.

Q.—Please give the population of the five boroughs of New York—Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond.—O. W.

A.—According to estimates made by the Bureau of Vital Statistics, Municipal Department of Health, New York, the population of the five boroughs of New York City on July 1, 1923, was as follows: Manhattan, 2,267,006; Bronx, 840,544; Brooklyn, 2,156,780; Queen's, 535,739, and Richmond, 127,548.

ORIGIN OF "O. K."

Q.—Would you be good enough to give me—or to tell me where I could easily find—a good explanation of the origin and true meaning of the expression "O. K?"—G. O.

A.—The best authorities say that "O. K." originally came from the initial letters of a humorous way of spelling "all correct," i.e., "oll korrect" or "orl korrect." The following definition of "O. K." is given in Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary: "To pass; certify; indorse; as, to 'O.K.' a bill." The Imperial Encyclopaedic Dictionary says of "O.K." that "to 'O.K.' an account is to vouch for its correctness. This practice has become general in business circles."

CALIXA LAVALLEE.

Q.—Please publish a biographical sketch of Calixa Lavallee, composer of the music for "O Canada."—L.L.L.

A.—Calixa Lavallee (1842-1891), the French-Canadian composer, was born at Verchieres, Que., on December 28, 1842. The "American Supplement" of "Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians" states that he "had pianolessons from his father and appeared in public at ten. At fifteen he entered the Paris Conservatory, studying piano with Marmontel and instrumentation with Bazin and Boieldieu. In 1881 he made a concert-tour of the United States with Madame Gerster, attempted to start a conservatory in Quebec, and then located in Boston, where at the time of his death he was teaching in the Petersilea Academy. He was active in the promotion of music by Americans, and was president of the Music Teachers' National Association in 1887. Of his compositions two are still popular, the piano-etude 'The Butterfly,' opus 10, and the Canadian national song 'O Canada.' He also composed two operas, an oratorio, a cantata, a symphony, two suites for orchestra, two string-quartets, a piano-trio, a suite for 'cello and piano, a sonata for violin and piano, many piano pieces and some church music." Lavallee died in Boston, Mass., on January 21, 1891.

THACKERAY'S "HENRY ESMOND."

Q.—Would you please publish a synopsis of Thackeray's "Henry Esmond?"—N. J. W.

A.—"Henry Esmond," the novel which ranks among the greatest of William Makepeace Thackeray's works, was published in 1852. It is described by the New International Encyclopaedia as "one of the finest historical romances in English. The scene is laid in England in the reign of Queen Anne. The hero is a young colonel in the army, at first deeply in love with the beautiful daughter of his guardian, but finally married to her mother, the widowed Lady Castlewood."

FELIX MENDELSSOHN.

A. — Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (1809-1847), the celebrated German-Jewish composer, was born at Hamburg on February 3, 1809, but spent most of his life in Berlin and Leipzig. The figure of Mendelssohn is distinct among the famous musicians of the past on account of the prosperity of his circumstances, the serenity of his nature and the stability of his character. His comparatively short career as a musician—(he died when he was only 38)—commenced at the age of 4, when he began to study music. He composed pieces of music for the family orchestra when he was 9, and composed and directed a three-act' opera when he was 15. He visited England, where he was extremely popular, a number of times. Happily married in 1837 to Cecile Sophie Jeanrenaud, Mendelssohn drew around him a congenial circle of friends, including his talented sister Fanny, and Robert Schumann, Jenny Lind, Hiller, and Moscheles. A popular concert performer because of his ability in extemporizing and his willingness to play music composed by other musicians, he found his own compositions always in demand. He organized the musical conservatory of Leipzig, received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Leipzig, and was given the title of "Kapellmeister" by the King of Prussia. News of the sudden death of his sister Fanny in the spring of 1847 gave him a shock from which he never recovered, and he died in Leipzig on November 4, 1847. Mendelssohn's works include operas, symphonies, oratorios and church music. His best-known works are probably the oratorios "Elijah" and "St. Paul," but "Songs Without Words" and other pieces he composed are also extremely popular.

ORIGIN OF "LBS."

Q.—How did "lbs." become the designation for pounds (weight)?—"Curious."

A.—"Lb." is the abbreviation for the Latin "libra," pound, and the plural has been formed by the addition of the letter "s."

RUDYARD KIPLING'S "IF."

Q.—Will you be kind enough to print Rudyard Kipling's poem which starts something as follows:—"If you can keep your head when all the world is losing theirs."—A. H. S.

A.—The following is the piece in question, entitled "If—" from Rudyard Kipling's "Rewards and Fairies":—

"If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;

"If you can dream — and not make dreams your master;
If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim,
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two imposters just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools:

"If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss.
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them: 'Hold on!'

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!"

SEX IN BUSINESS

Pansy's letter touches upon a very important problem in our modern industrial life. Has sex been kept out of the office and factory? Is its decentralizing presence there due to the aggressiveness of the male or the age old "come hither" look in the female eye? I have always been an ardent feminist and I certainly agree that theoretically women are entitled to all the social and industrial privileges of the men but actually how does it work? Do youth and beauty reign supreme in the business world to the detriment of efficiency and justice? Is it within a mere man's moral scope and capabilities to spend eight and nine hours daily with a pretty woman and this constant association not constitute a moral temptation for which he is not to blame? Can a woman forget all her womanly attributes and her limitless depths of sex in-so-far as she would never wilfully bring into play, her undisputed charms and elusive feminine mystery upon her male captive in such uncompetitive ground as a narrow office? Will she never use her own particular sex weaknesses to obtain holiday concessions and prey on a man's sympathy and masculine chivalry? I am not asking these questions idly. I have heard of these cases which are not scarce. Is it not too much to ask of any man or woman—no matter how strong they may be morally, to remain true under such trying circumstances? Does the divorce court prove that they do or not? Is not a wife justified in resenting this uneven and unfair comparison with a pretty, young, well-groomed girl with whom her husband spends most of his time after leaving the wife in the more or less dull atmosphere of the breakfast table? Where will it end?

Sometimes I think that the French-Canadian way of bringing up girls is the ideal way. They are brought up to think of marriage as an end in life and after a fair education, comprising domestic science and sewing, these girls stay home with their mothers for a year or so and then they are married—always before twenty years of age. Slaves? Perhaps, but even the girls of other nationalities who are trained for a business career marry at twenty or thereabout. The feminist movement has not lessened the marrying age because no movement can change nature. They marry and have the disadvantage of being totally ignorant in the running of a home and their hearts are set elsewhere. They are unhappy because, after the glamour of marriage has worn off, ambition and love of independence return and they realize they could again make money in the career for which they have been trained. Dish washing and floor scrubbing has no appeal to the woman who has been efficiently trained for the office or school. It requires just as much special training for these homely tasks as it does for the others. One cannot take a trained lawyer and put him to dig ditches—he would make a mess of it. Each job requires special training. Hence I say that if we wish happy homes, women have to be trained for it because it cannot be learned in a day.

After all, is the unhappiness of freedom preferable to the happiness resulting from domesticated feminine minds? Is it best to keep girls out of the path of temptation or teach them to live in daily pitfalls and praise the survival of the fittest morally? Is it best to leave the feminine mind in its primitive state, unvexed by complexity, or must we sophisticate her completely at the age of sixteen so that she can hold her own morally in the intimate and more or less uncouth relations of business life with men twice and three times her age? If it can be done, I credit the modern young girl with an immense power for assimilation and will-power.

Independence is a great word in modern life but in attempting to catch its elusive meaning, may we not simply grasp its fleeting shadow? Are women happier today than they were thirty years ago? After all happiness is the gauge of life. In our enthusiasm have we missed the mark?

If Pansy's letter is the result of experience, then certainly women in the business world is a maudlin mistake. If we cannot keep sex out of business and politics, the whole thing is a huge farce. Certain women have then a right to complain of other women competing with their husbands for jobs in such an unfair and unnatural way whereby the appeal of sex to a boss will tip the balance in favor of the woman and perhaps control substantial increases when the man in the case may have a large family to support. Is that fair competition? This problem is locked and interlocked and may rebound to strike some of our own sex mercilessly. Who is to blame?

LOUISE.

By a rather odd coincidence about fifteen minutes after I had read the letter of "Louise," I picked up an American magazine which contained a special article by a woman who had been deputed to ask the heads of big business houses if there is a prejudice against women in business—and why.

She found out that there is a prejudice and she lists the reasons for it, as follows:—

1. WOMAN IS A LESS STABLE UNIT THAN MAN.

She gets married and doesn't give up her job—and the job suffers.

2. WOMAN IS WOMAN.

She creates friction:
By using her sex as an influence.
By an overbearing and complacent manner when she attains efficiency.
By her capacity for gossip and scandal.
By her greater sensitiveness to personalities.

This writer discusses these reasons at greater length than I can in these columns and she takes up the question of bobbed hair, cosmetics, chiffon stockings and decollete frocks, telling how much employers object to these things, especially to the rouge and lip-stick and the sleeveless, low-necked frocks.

She also mentions the sex antagonism which makes men jealous of women in business; of how a man hates to have a woman as "boss" and of how he hesitates to give a woman credit for being brainier and more successful than he is.

The facts in their favor were:—

"That for certain mechanical and monotonous jobs requiring patience, women were usually more successful than men. In the telephone operating division, for instance, girls were preferred because they were more courteous and patient than boys;

"That in factories which keep statistics women were found to be less tardy than men;

"That girl clerks are often more highly strung, more conscientious, and of a higher type than boys, but against such virtues must be placed the fact that they are also under the influence of personalities and are apt to imagine injuries and slights;

"That there is a certain type of woman who is as level-headed as she is clever, who has passed up marriage and finds her chief interest in her career and who is unusual enough to be excluded from the general average and composes a class of her own, almost a third sex."

"In regard to the element of sex which enters into the mixed staff and creates the second basis of prejudice, several spoke hopefully that time might effect an improvement. Women are comparatively new to the business life. Either they are too sure of themselves or not sure enough. In the former case they create antagonism by an overbearing manner; in the latter they use their sex to help them along. With further experience they may learn to take their place in the business world as units and not as women.

"And, finally, out of the many conversations I had, a question suggests itself. As a little humility on our part certainly won't hinder the removal of the prejudice which exists against the woman in business, I will, with some trepidation, give it utterance!

"'Would woman have made her successful inroad into the business world if, in every case, she had demanded the same salary as man?'

Thus Beatrice Barmby in "Liberty." Reading her article just after "Louise's" letter, it seemed to me it would be a good idea to combine the two and to ask you to write me what you think about the whole subject.

Letters welcomed.

WHICH IS CORRECT?

To settle an argument will you tell me which of the following is correct? (a) "The money is for you and me," or (b) "The money is for you and I."

Hoping you will find room in your valuable column for such a trifling matter, but it is for two younger children who will not believe that (a) is correct.

FOR HEATHEN CHINEE.

You ask how we know how children in China are treated. It is true we do not, as we are not all able to go there to live and to see for our selves.

But some one else must know or else they have made up a story.

If you would like to read it, just get my address from Miss Currie. Then you will understand what we are taught to believe. As for the stamps I don't know. If what you write is true I am glad to hear that the children have a home to be taken to and are not allowed to starve.

HELMAR II.

A SENSIBLE GIRL.

I have just been reading "Pansy's" complaint of hurt feelings caused by the scorn of the single business girls, and would like to say a word or two in favor of the employers' good judgment in giving the single girls the most encouragement. A married woman certainly has more points of advantage outside the daily office round. She has the interest of her home, she has the moral, if not also the financial, support of her husband to depend upon, whereas a very large number of the single business girls are in rooms among disinterested people, and are more dependent upon their office life for interest and maintenance. I am fortunate enough to be a business girl with a home, but I have always made it a point to be specially considerate to the girls who are "on their own," and I think the attitude of the employers is the utmost in kindness and thoughtfulness, which should be appreciated. If I am called upon to fill the role of wife and mother in the future, I shall always endeavor to make home my functioning place. If the breadwinning funds run low at any time, then I shall certainly try to take a share in increasing them, by earning money right there at home. Surely there are ways and means.

ONLOOKER.

WHY MEN LEAVE GIRLS.

In your column for Thursday last there was a letter from one signing herself "Jenny," inviting men to express themselves on the question as to why does a man call on a girl regularly for some time, acting as if he is in love and then for no apparent reason stops having anything to do with her.

There are many different reasons, many of which cannot really be understood. Also, you have not given enough details about any of the cases so a fellow could give his opinion, and what's more you couldn't give such details that would be needed in a letter that had to appear in the public newspaper like this. I mean how exactly the fellow acted, and what exactly he said about marrying or what he didn't say, and whether he kissed her much or held her hand or only sat on the other end of the sofa. Now no girl would be willing even if only a nickname was signed to the letter to tell such stuff to the public. The old-fashioned people would say that the girl might ask her mother, but nowadays that wouldn't do, because many girls have complained to me they have tried that and their mothers are much greener than they are themselves.

Also no one can say for sure why a man quits being fond of a girl when no one can say for sure why a man starts being fond of a girl. Nobody knows why they fall in love with Alice more than Angela, if they stop to think the matter out, but, of course, they never do, and would merely ask you if you were crazy if you asked them why they didn't fall in love with the latter.

Now, unlike some writers to this page, I don't pretend to be infallible in matters of the heart, but I think likely the reason the man stopped calling was one of the following. He may have never had any intentions of marrying, but was only out for a little flirtation, or necking as they used to say in 1922, and when he saw the girl was serious he thought he better quit when the quitting was good. Or maybe he had what they call love at first sight, and when he got his second sight it didn't look so good. Or maybe one night the girl had forgotten to powder her nose right or had a pimple on her forehead or hadn't washed her hair lately or had bad teeth. Little things like that will turn a man against a girl very suddenly. Or maybe he puts up with them for a while and then can't stand them any longer and just goes off an leaves her wondering why. But what seems to me most likely of all is that this man made love to this girl, and she showed she liked him pretty well. Well, a man is pretty conceited most of the time, but when he thinks he has got a girl in love with him, it is ten times worse, so the idea this man gets into his head is that having got one girl he can get any other he has a fancy for, so he looks round, and gets dissatisfied with the one he has, seeing others that are prettier or cleverer, or better cooks or something. He feels he is a devil with the women and the only trouble is he hasn't aimed high enough, so he leaves his first poor girl to weep if she is foolish enough, and tries elsewhere. But don't worry, Jenny, he soon gets brought to himself for he will find there are others don't notice him as much as if he was a hairpin on the sidewalk. All his tricks and good points that went so big with his first don't get him anywhere now, and soon he sets down and writes a sorehead letter to this column or tells his friends he is a womanhater.

"IKE PYKE."

POSTMAN PAYS FARE.

Signed Justice as a Non de Plume. Justice complains about the Postman, fireman, and policeman, sitting down in the street cars when people who pay have to stand up. Justice also claims that he or she personally, saw a conductor tell a postman to get up to give his seat to a woman. I can not make myself believe this because every conductor knows or ought to know that a postman is not free on any car as Justice seems to think. His fare is paid every year by the Government, and he has a perfect right to sit down as well as Justice or anybody else. If he got up to give a lady his seat it is because he is gentleman enough to do it and not because he is obliged to. The fireman and policeman ride free and are not to be classed with the postman. I would like to inform you Justice, that you should know what you are talking about before you start taking the postman's number to the tramways manager as you will have your trouble for nothing. I would also like to inform you that you have no right to call your self Justice. If you know what the word means you would not be complaining about a postman sitting down as he certainly deserves it after carrying a load of mail between forty and forty-five pounds for eight hours, he is surely entitled to his seat.

LETTER CARRIER, NO. 411.

I noticed in your column a complaint written by a person who signs "Justice." Justice would like to know why the postman, fireman and policeman remain seated in the street cars while people who pay their fare have to stand up. I would like to call the attention of Justice to the fact that the postman is not obliged to stand up and give his seat to anybody. He has a perfect right to sit down, as long as he likes. His fare is paid yearly by the Government and every conductor on the Montreal tramways knows or ought to know it, therefore, I think Justice must have been seeing things when he saw a conductor tell a postman to get up and give his seat to a lady. If he did this, then the conductor, like Justice, does not know what he is talking about. The fireman and policeman ride free on the street cars as a privilege from the tramways. That is why they have to stand up. I would like to inform you Justice, that you shouldn't take up valuable space in The Star complaining about postman sitting down in the cars, when you don't know if they should stand up or not.

LETTER CARRIER No. 416.

Plaid

The effective use of plaid material on plain is shown in this gown of black faille, trimmed with black and white. It is really nothing more than our standby this year, the coat dress, given a little extra fixings in the way of frills and bands. The jabot front and frilled sleeves are feminine and engaging looking and are much more becoming to many women than the severe finish of tailored lapels. The wrap around skirt caught up at the side cannot be improved upon for comfort and is universally becoming.

Smart for Autumn

Here is the type of frock Paris says will be smarter for fall than the tailleur. It has neat, simple lines, but is not so bar of trimming as the models for spring were. The embroidered sections in the front panel do not detract from the utility of the frock, but they do add to its charm. You will notice the wide pleat on the shoulder, which gives plenty of freedom but no appearance of fullness and nothing to detract from the flat effect.

Seven women out of ten are using a wrong shade of face powder

Mme. Jeannette
Specialiste en Beauté

In a general way, there are four distinct tones of skin—the medium, the very dark, the white, and the pink skin. And because of this fact there are four shades of Pompeian Beauty Powder—a right shade of powder for every typical skin.

The Medium Skin. This skin is harder to determine than others, for it is frequently found with light or dark hair, light or dark eyes, or combinations of middle shades.

The medium tone of skin is neither milk-white not swarthy, nor yet is it the pink type that often is found with fair or red hair. It is pleasantly warm in tone, with faint suggestions of old ivory, and fleeting suggestions of sun-kissed russet.

Medium skins need the Naturelle shade of Pompeian Beauty Powder. If you are hesitating whether you have a light skin or a dark skin, the chances are that you really have a medium skin, and should use the Naturelle shade of Pompeian Beauty Powder.

The White Skin. This is the milk-white skin that is quite without trace of color except where the little blue veins show. It appears only in certain types of very blonde-haired people, very black-haired people, and most often with red hair.

This is the only skin that should ever use white powder, and even women with this type of skin will be more effective in using White Pompeian Beauty Powder for evening only—using Flesh or Naturelle for daytime.

The Pink Skin. Most women who have a pink skin become sensitive about it as they approach the thirties, for then the youthful pink may deepen and result in a too-high coloring.

"What is this woman with the medium type of skin doing? Is she selecting Flesh shade of powder? No! She knows what is correct—and she uses Naturelle Pompeian Beauty Powder."

However, this is a skin that can be turned into a definite asset of beauty if it is properly treated.

Women with pink skins often make the mistake of using a white or a dark powder. They should always use the pink tone of powder—the Flesh shade of Pompeian Beauty Powder. This shade tones in with, and at the same time tones down, the pink of the skin.

The Olive Skin. Many artists think there is no type so beautiful as the clear, dark skin we frequently see in beautiful Spanish or Italian women. The shade of powder for this rich skin is Rachel Pompeian Beauty Powder.

Why women prefer Pompeian Beauty Powder

Many women, beginning to use powder, have, through frank affectation of being "different," started with the use of a face powder that is almost prohibitive in price. They find they get more protection, more satisfaction and can practice a justifiable economy in using a powder of less price, and equal, if not greater, merit.

The ever-increasing popularity of Pompeian Beauty Powder comes from its sheer excellence. Its odor is exquisitely evasive—a tantalizing suggestion of lovely perfumes, with the provocative charm of elusiveness. It may be obtained at toilet goods counters everywhere. The price is 65c the box.

Pompeian Beauty Powder is made from the finest selected ingredients. It has an adhesive quality that women appreciate, and that assists in keeping the skin well covered over an unusual period of time.

The New Pompeian Compact —a thin model—

Thousands of women who are devotees of Pompeian Beauty Powder will welcome the news that this powder is now available, compacted in a new, smart, refillable case.

The new Pompeian Powder Compact is a graceful, round, golden-finished case—thin, of course, to avoid ugly bulging when carried in pocket or bag. The top is engraved in a delicate design, the cuttings filled with violet enamel—a color typical of the regal purple of the Pompeian packages. The mirror in the top covers the entire space to give ample reflection — and the lamb's wool puff has a satin top. Price, $1.10. Refills are of the usual Pompeian quality. Examine this compact at the stores.

GINGER BEER

Would you please give me the recipe, for making ginger beer, also herb beer; as it is made in England?

H. A. W.

Ans.—Ginger Beer: Five qts. boiling water, 1 1-4 lbs. sugar, 1 oz. of whole ginger bruised, 2 lemons, 1-4 oz. cream of tartar, 1 good tablespoon brewer's yeast. Remove rinds of lemons as thinly as possible, strip off every particle of white pith, cut the lemons into thin slices, removing the pips. Put the sliced lemon into an earthenware bowl with the sugar, ginger, and cream of tartar, and pour in the boiling water. Allow it to stand until luke-warm, then stir in the yeast and let the bowl remain in a moderately warm place for 24 hours. Skim the yeast off the top, strain the ginger beer from the sediment, bottle, tie the corks down securely and in two days it will be ready for use.

Hop Beer—Five oz. hops, 8 gals. water, 2 1-2 lbs. brown sugar, 3 or 4 tablespoons yeast. Boil hops and water together for 45 minutes, add sugar, and when dissolved, strain into a bowl or tub. As soon as it is luke-warm, add the yeast, let it work for 48 hours, then skim well, and strain into bottles, or a small cask. Cork securely, and let it remain for a few days before using.

I have not a recipe for herb beer and gave you the hop beer recipe instead. Perhaps some reader can give us a recipe for herb beer.

How to Keep Well, By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, of matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. HEALTH FROM SUNLIGHT.

Recently I heard two men discussing the theory that nature never visits man with a disease without creating a plant which manufactures an antidote for it. The men were riding in an auto and the statement was excited by the vegetation — some dense woods through which the car was passing. The theory is narrow and egotistic. Although old and widely accepted and although it has been the basis of research for centuries, there is very little proven evidence to support it. If nature has a panacea for human ills and a prevention of every human ill, a universal remedy — that potent draft is sunlight.

Right now we know that sunlight will cure as well as prevent rickets; will both cure and prevent tuberculosis in man and beast; will cure some cases of cancer; will heal old ulcers that other measures will not heal; will cure some skin conditions, and will favorably influence the thyroid gland.

It has the power to build up simple chemical compound into the red coloring matter of the blood; into the green coloring matter of plants and into the various ferments, vitamines and organic chemicals found in them.

The power to analyze or to change higher compounds into lower ones is common, but there are only a few agencies that can build simpler compounds into higher ones. That, light can do.

The length of the vibrations of light range from almost inconceivably short ones to the lengths that are used in the radio. The eye can only recognize a small part of this ray. The great bulk of it lies above and below what the eye can see. About those parts of the ray which can be seen we know much.

About those parts which lie beyond that which we see, we are just beginning to accumulate knowledge. We know that some parts of the ray cause nervousness and insomnia; others cause fever; others, hemorrhage; others, blister and some parts cause cancer. On the other hand parts cure disease, kill bacteria, build up resistance and develop muscles.

The little we know is well told in Baleeby's "Sunlight and Health." In a few years from now, more than one volume will be required to tell what part of the ray does harm, what part does good and how to use the various parts of this wonderful medicine.

DIETETIC INFORMATION

A.P. writes:—I suffer with rheumatism and stomach trouble, and I am told to eat a lot of vegetables. As I do not know how to prepare the different vegetables I should appreciate very much if you could advise me through your column where to get a booklet on how to prepare vegetable.

NO DANGER FROM STAMPS.

Mrs. F. J. writes: My husband is a dealer in old stamps and, as such, handles them continually.

It there any danger of contracting any diseases such as tuberculosis, or anything else that persons who originally used the stamps might have had?

Reply.

No.

PIMPLES NOT A DANGER SIGNAL

Miss R. N. D. writes: I am to be married very soon, and the young man I am to marry has some kind of rash or pimples on his face, but as he is only 20 I thought maybe they would disappear. If they do not, do you think they will affect the generation to come?

Reply.

Marriage cures pimples in most cases.

I see no reason for worrying about the generation to come.

HE HAS A CHARLEY HORSE.

G.W. K. writes: Recently I was pitching against another team in a baseball game and that night the muscle in the upper part of my arm tightened up very much and if I hold it straight up it pains me.

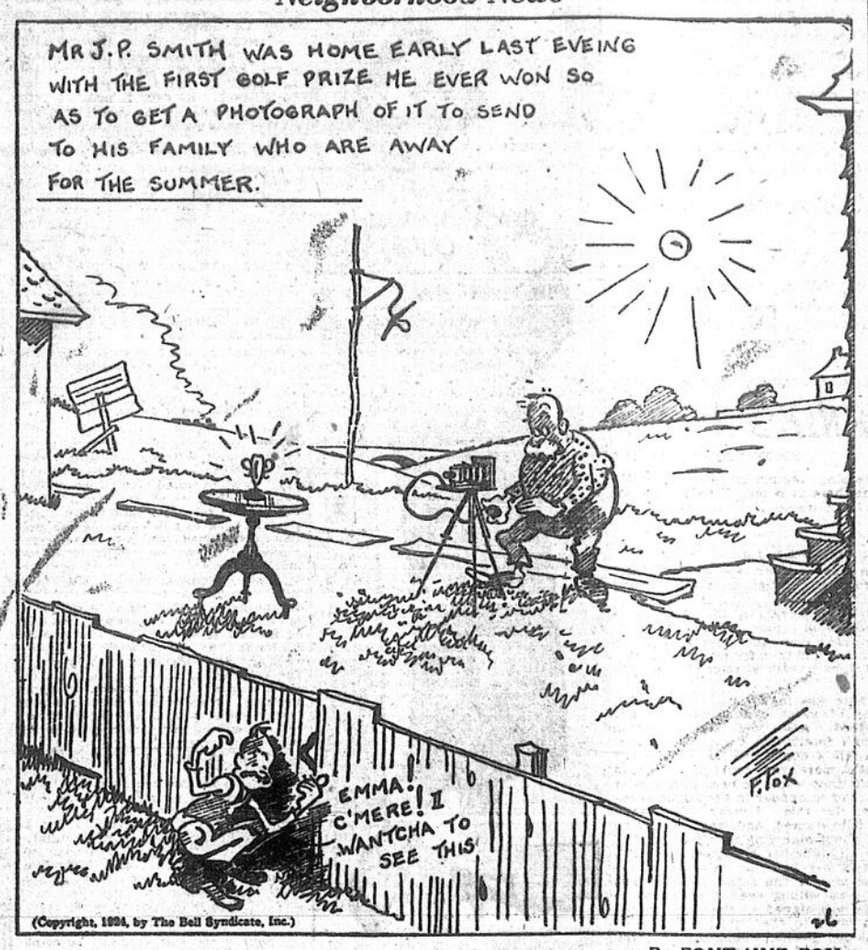

Is this very serious? If I keep on playing will I throw my arm out?

Reply.

This is not serious.

If it troubles you enough, take some massage and heat and light treatment. Diathermy taken at once after your Charley Horse developed would have helped greatly.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

A CONVENTION OVER THE RADIO

Oh! Father, I fear that these jeers that I hear,
From the floor of the party convention,
And the menacing tones of these gutteral groans
Are augurs of horrid dissension.
They talk about bandits and plunder,
And I'm greatly afraid that the row they have made
Will split the dear party asunder.

Rest easy, my son, when the shouting is done,
And all of the venom is vented,
When the worst and the best of the lies has been passed,
The breach will be firmly cemented.
If you think a few knocks run our cause on the rocks,
Your notion is wholly erroneous;
I can tell by the fight we have just heard tonight
That the party at last is harmonious.

But Father the chair begs the crowd to beware
Of voicing their wild indignation,
Lest the cops raid the hall and lay hands on them all
And hurry them off to the station!
And the sergeant-at-arms is now sounding alarms
That unless they attend to his warning,
And try to calm down, they'll be guests of the town
In a couple of jails before morning.

Don't worry my lad, but be thankful and glad
That they are not too placid and quiet;
They are functioning best when they show enough zest
To pull off a brisk little riot.
A convention, my child, isn't meant to be mild,
Nor its sounds to be softly euphonious,
And means they are fully harmonious!

By Mrs. Enoch Taylor.

(Requested.)

I have a new bonnet; I'll go up to church
To hear the new preacher, young Jonathan Burch.
He's single and handsome, but they say he's so shy,
And that his sermons are long and dreadfully dry.
But, being a bachelor, I'll try for his sake

What a good congregation! I'm glad that I came;
That face is familiar, but what is her name?
I wonder if Murray will ever propose?
The choir has finished its opening hymn,

They say that he thinks even dancing is wrong.

I wonder what beau Belle Laws will have next.

I declare Mary Reilly has got a new sack,

Well, the sermon's progressing, I must listen and learn;
Mary Gray is in mourning; I wonder who's dead?

Just hear that cross baby; I know Mr. Burch
Must hate so to have it disturbing the church;
And how can he preach and pray through it all?

The sermon is finished, the Bible is closed;
The collection has wakened the deacon that dozed.
Why, there's Mary Martin! What a beautiful hat.
How pretty she'd be if she wasn't so fat!

And now we will have a tune from the choir;
I think that their singing lacks feeling and fire;
I wonder if Murray will be at the door,
Or if he will join that part Minnie Moore?
I do wish I had some six-button kids.

I think for today I've had preaching enough.
The aisle is so crowded we'll have to go slow;

I'll pretend not to see her and turn up my nose,
And show how indifferent I am to the beaus;
There's Jennie Jones opposite waiting to see
If I had a gentleman come home with me.
Ah, me, I just know ma and pa will be vexed

CLEANING GLOVES

A good way to clean kid gloves is to put them in a Mason jar of gasoline and allow them to soak, shaking the jar occasionally. When they seem to be clean rinse in a jar of clean gasoline.

SCALLOPED VEGETABLES.

USE FOR STALE BREAD

Soft stale bread from which the crusts have been removed may be used for puddings, scalloped dishes, pancakes and omelets.

DEODORIZE KNIVES.

When knives and forks retain the odor of any strong foods for which they have been used, deodorize them by soaking in a bowl containing tea leaves.

PREVENTS SLIPPING.

Place a rubber ring such as you use on a fruit jar under a plate you wish to set on ice and there will be no danger of slipping.

PLENTY OF ICE.

To get the best service from a refrigerator it must be kept well filled with ice all the time.

LOVE OR FAME?

By Violet Dare

XXIII—AN UNHAPPY HOME-COMING.

He told me a lot of other things, but I hardly knew what he was saying. Somehow, to marry a man who had been married before — I couldn't just see doing that. I cared a good deal for him, of course; I realized that, too. I liked having him kiss the palm of my hand and then kiss all the finger tips. I thought of all the girls who would have given anything in the world to have him fall in love with them. I really wanted to care enough to say "Yes," but it just wouldn't come. And so at last I got up and straightened my sweater sash gathered up all my courage.

"I can't say what you want me to now," I told him, and you can't imagine how hard it was, with those wonderful eyes of his looking into mine. "I do care for you—truly I do—but I don't seem to care enough to marry you."

He seemed awfully disappointed; his shoulders drooped, and he threw out his hands in a little gesture that I remembered having seen him use on the screen more than once. Maybe that was what made it seem unreal. I couldn't be really sorry for him; I couldn't get over the feeling that, even though he did care so much for me and feel bad because I didn't love him, he remembered how he looked, too, all the time.

We walked back to the hotel together, and he was awfully nice; laughed and talked about all kinds of things, and told me all sorts of funny stories about his life on the stage. But when we got to the little clump of trees on the hill just above the hotel he stopped and put his hands on my shoulders, turning me around to face him. I felt all shivery and excited when he touched me.

"I'm willing to wait, little girl," he told me, "since it's the only thing to do. But remember that I love you so much that, sooner or later, you'll have to say 'Yes.'"

I stumbled down the hill then, leaving him there watching me, and ran to my room. I felt like crying, and yet I was happy, too. And I was glad that I was going back to New York and would see Lawrence French again soon.

We got back early the next morning in a rainstorm. Somehow that was the last straw. I hadn't slept well, and my head ached, and everything seemed to go wrong. Neither Mrs. Phillips nor the two men was awake when I got up, so I slipped out into the station alone, thinking I'd hurry home and get into some fresh clothes and call Lawrence up right away to tell him I was back. My linen suit felt damp and sticky, and I'd lost one of my hatpins, so that my hat kept sliding down over my eyes. My suit case was heavy, too, as I walked across Forty-second street to get the elevated.

And then, at the corner of Fifth avenue, a taxi flashed by me and turned down Forty-second street toward the Grand Central Station, from which I'd just come. It slowed up the least bit as it turned the corner, and I got a glimpse of the people in it. And they were Sylvia Stearns and Lawrence!

I couldn't think for a moment. In a taxi so early in the morning, bound for the railway station — it could mean only one thing. They must have got married! I knew they liked each other awfully well, of course. And now that I thought of it, even when Lawrence took me and some other man took Sylvia when we went on our little parties, he divided his time pretty evenly between us.

NEWS and CHAT of PLAYS and PICTURES

The Drama in London

LONDON, July 2.—It does not require a very exhaustive investigation of theatrical conditions here to reveal the fact that London is suffering today from a period of depression, so far as the Drama is concerned. Not, mark you, a theatrical depression. For the theatres are full, and the theatre rents are enormous. But the Drama appears to have fallen upon somewhat unfortunate days, just as it has in the United States and Canada. The frivolous and the frothy, the trivial and the trumpery, possess the greatest appeal to the majority of the theatre-going public. I should be inclined to say that conditions, broadly speaking, and with the necessary allowances made for differences in methods, are very similar in London and New York. Here, as in the American Metropolis, the influence of the motion-picture has made itself felt,—though it is very difficult to get any general admission of the fact. But when one sees long queues waiting outside motion-picture houses to see films that would stand very little chance of being booked in any but a third-rate movie theatre in Montreal, and when one begins to realize that the movie here is a very cheap form of entertainment indeed,—both as to price and quality, in many instances,—then it is not difficult to understand why producers are appealing to the theatre public with the lightest form of dramatic material, or why plays that contain something more than froth and frivolity are difficult to find upon the boards.

* * *

The fact that all London is busily engaged in catering to the Wembley spirit just now must also be taken into consideration. There seems to be a very clear conviction here that what the visitor from overseas wants to see at the theatre after a day, or a succession of days, at Wembley is something that will make him laugh, something that will not require of him any mental effort, something, in short, that he can watch without weariness or conscious thought, that will provide him with an evening's laughter,—and nothing else.

Of course the London producer cannot be blamed for that. He is only taking a natural advantage of a commercial situation, and he would be less than human—or shall we rather say, superhuman?—if he did not. When one reflects that one of the most progressive of London producers, C. B. Cochran—an American, by the way—is occupied in enticing over a hundred thousand people daily to see Canadian and American cattle chased across an arena by cowboys and deftly thrown by the twisting of their horns, and that this is being heralded by most blatant advertising as a thrilling theatrical entertainment, it is easy to understand why the real Drama is suffering an eclipse in London today. People go to see the rodeo at Wembley just as they go to see Coney Island in New York—because it is "the thing," because everybody is supposed to see it once, and because it is largely a matter of self-defence to be able to say you have seen it. They go to the frivolous shows at night because the general spirit of the hour seems to demand it. That, too, is perhaps quite natural, or at any rate inevitable.

But though the Drama is passing behind a cloud just now, that does not mean that there is no Drama to be seen. It is still possible to find plays that contain ideas, acted by artists who bring to bear upon their interpretation both intelligence and schooled tradition. And there is a public for these plays also,—London is too big for them to be neglected. I find, moreover, that there is a spirit of optimism, despite the pessimistic jeremiads of certain cynics who seem to be possessed of the idea that the old habit of acute self-depreciation is still an excellent thing for the British public to be fed upon.

Theatrical advertising is far less flamboyant over here than in America or Canada. The old conservatism still retains a certain hold, and yet there are some directions in which theatrical producers have taken strides that American and Canadian theatrical managers have seldom pursued. There is still a firm belief in the idea that reiteration is calculated to impress the public, and that it does so is evident from the extent to which it is utilized. I fancy, however, that the daily causerie, by far the best and brightest feature of the London dailies today, exercises a very potent influence with the theatre-going public. These causeries, which differ to such a degree from the daily "column" in the big American papers that there is no sense in instituting any comparison, cover a very wide field, and almost all of them touch upon theatrical matters in an intriguing and effective manner. And that the causeries are widely and closely read admits of no doubt whatever. They are an integral part of the Londoner's breakfast, just as much as is marmalade.

* * *

This does not imply that the regular theatrical columns have ceased to be the principal medium for the conveyance of information on matters pertaining to the theatre. But it is the casual comment in the causerie that catches the eye and stirs the interest of the theatre-goer who has no time to read the theatrical column. And as it is only natural that the writer of the causerie should direct his readers' attention to what is uppermost in the gossip of the day, it follows that the form of theatrical entertainment which attracts most comment is that which is receiving the largest share of public patronage. The smart people go where the crowd is. The old days when a fashion in theatre-going—and, often enough, incidentally, the fortune of a playwright—was established overnight have gone for ever, it would appear. London has caught a good deal of the spirit of living for the exciting hour, and, in the mass, prefers the entertainment that moves it most easily to mirth to any other. To what extent this is likely to prove a lasting or a beneficial influence, I propose to discuss later on.

S. MORGAN-POWELL.

An announcement of real interest to theatregoers in Montreal has been issued by J. A. Gauvin, lessee of the Orpheum theatre. The Duffy Players will continue with musical comedy productions until the end of August. Miss Margaret Knight terminates her engagement today. Mr. Gauvin will resume active management in September, and will present a series of attractions ranging from Grand Opera, drama, musical comedies, ballets, and comedies to Sunday matinee concert.

There will be a short season for the famous Porte St. Martin theatre company direct from Paris, with its own scenery, costumes, an ensemble. The repertoire will include "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Mme. Sans-Gene," "Camille," "L'Aiglan," "Montmartre," and "La Femme Nue." Among the artists will be Pierre Magnier and Andree Pascal.

Later in the season a second Parisian organization will be seen. And in the spring of 1925 there will be a big Music Festival.

The season will be divided equally between French and English plays, under present plans, and there will be several weeks of popular attractions at popular prices. Mr. Gauvin declares that the Sunday concert series will be on more ambitious lines than any hitherto attempted in Montreal.

Gitz Rice Scores A Hit With a Song And Dance Feature

"From The Movies"

THERE are occasions when producers of moving pictures hit on a story that has in it a real human interest appeal because it deals with a problem that is faced by thousands of people in their every day life, no matter what part of the world they live in. Such a problem Arthur Stringer handles in "Manhandled," which appeared recently in one of the popular weekly magazines, and which has been adapted to the screen. It will be shown at the Capitol Theatre all next week. It is Gloria Swanson latest picture. "Manhandled" is the story of a salesgirl who is a "regular girl," the kind that everybody likes, with all the longings of the average girl. Clever and attractive, she is persuaded to seek the good times she desires and becomes popular among the men, only to find that she is misjudged and her actions misinterpreted. She realizes that her good times have brought her reputation down into the bargain counter class, and that she has lost more than she has gained. Now she pulls up and goes back to the safe and sane life, happy in the love of a real man, makes a story that is not only full of romance, but is rich in hour of a kind that reveals Gloria Swanson in a new role. The supplementary items include an unusual dancing and vocal number, "Limehouse Blues," done in Chinese costume by Leon Leonidoff and Miss Florence Rogge, with John Martin as baritone soloist.

Probably most motion picture lovers are unaware that the greatest factor in the success of a photoplay is its theme. They may be unaware of its presence or unable to describe it in so many words, but if the picture stirred up a heart-throb, made one gasp or sent a thrill chasing up one's spine it is safe to assert that it had a theme. Themes must be unobtrusive, but they must be there. Otherwise the critics will assail the production as not plausible and untrue to life. "The Woman on the Jury," which is coming to the Palace theatre next week, possesses one of the strongest of themes—that there is no sacrifice too great for a woman to make for the sake of love. Sylvia Breamer is cast in the role of a young bride who is called upon to make the greatest sacrifice of which a woman is capable—that of ruining her own reputation—and the situation which evokes this tremendous ordeal is said to be gripping in its dramatic power. In this production Miss Breamer has not only to play the role of a young bride, but is forced to spend her honeymoon serving on a jury in a murder trial, she and her husband both being drawn for the panel and the judge, although a personal friend, refusing to excuse them. Thus, instead of postponing their marriage, they are united and go to be locked up in the jury room with the rest of the "good men and true" until a verdict is reached.

"Young Ideas," said to be as sprightly as it sounds, will be one of the feature films at the Strand for three days, starting tomorrow. The story concerns a young girl with old ideas, the mainstay of her family, who is so good-natured she continues to support her relatives even after it is apparent they are simply "sponging" on her. But a young man in love with her did wonders in rectifying matters. "Western Luck," featuring Charles Jones, will be the added attraction. What should prove another attractive program will be presented during the latter half of the week, when Madge Bellamy will be seen in "His Forgotten Wife," while Anna Q. Nilsson will have the leading role in "Between Friends. The latest of Witwer's "Telephone Girl" stories will also be screened.

"The Love Master," the latest picture featuring "Strongheart," the wonder dog, and regarded by many as the best in which he has ever appeared, will be screened at the Regent during the next three days. There appear also in the cast Lady Julie, Strongheart's wife, and the Strongheart puppies. The production contains many thrilling scenes. "The Girl I Loved," with Charles Ray portraying the leading character, and Snub Pollard in "The Courtship of Miles Standish," will complete the bill. Pola Negro and Tom Mix will be the leading players from Wednesday until Saturday in "The Trouble Shooter and "Shadows of Paris," respectively.

Pola Negri in "Shadows of Paris," which comes to the Papineau for a three days' engagement, beginning tomorrow, is surrounded by a brilliant cast, including Adolphe Menjou, Charles de Roche and Huntley Gordon, Vera Reynolds, Gareth Hughes and Rosita Marstini. Harold Lloyd's success, "Bumping Into Broadway," and other shorter films will also be shown. The mid-week double bill will include Strongheart in "The Love Master" and "The Girl I Loved, with Charles Ray. "Why Men Leave Home" will be the outstanding film on Friday and Saturday.

The latest Shirley Mason picture, bearing the interesting title, "Love Letters," comes to the Belmont for three days, beginning tomorrow. The story is described as a romance of youthful folly in which the thread of mystery has been entwined. The action is said to be swift with a surprise for a climax. "The Breaking Point," adapted from Mary Roberts Rinehardt's popular story of the same name, will be the other feature. Nita Naldi, Patsy Ruth Miller, George Fawcett and Matt Moore have the leading roles. Tom Mix in "The Trouble Shooter" and "A Man's Mate," with John Gilbert, will be shown on Wednesday and Thursday, along with one of Witwer's Telephone Girl stories. Friday and Saturday's program will comprise "The Lovemaster," and Patsy Ruth Miller and Conrad Nagel in "Name the man."

* * *

"Triumph," which opens a three days' engagement at the Corona tomorrow is a type of ultra-modern society love drama. There are many popular players in the cast. Buster Keaton's clever comedy, "Day Dream," and a number of short subjects will round out the bill. "The Arizon Express" and Monte Blue and Evelyn Brent in "Loving Lies" willl be the feature films on Wednesday and Thursday, while on Friday and Saturday John Gilbert will be seen in "A Man's Mate,' 'and Charles Ray will portray the leading role in "The Girl I lived." A comedy, "The Hollywood Kid," will also be screened.

"Name the Man" will be the outstanding film at the Plaza tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. Included in the cast are Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch, Patsy Ruth Miller, Hobart Bosworth and Creighton Hale. John Gilbert in "A Man's Mate" will be the added attraction. "This Freedom" and "The Breaking Point" will be the feature on the mid-week program, and "The Marriage Circle," with Marie Prevost and Monte Blue, and Harold Lloyd in "Bumping Into Broadway" the chief films for Friday and Saturday.

The Mount Royal Theatre presents from today until Monday "Broadway or Bust," featuring Hoot Gibson and Ruth Dwyer and "Loving Lies," a story by Peter B. Kyne. The former picture is the story of two cowboys, one of whom becomes possessed of a fortune after his sweetheart has thrown him over because she has become rich. The cowboys go to New York to show folks how to spend money and they take their horses with them up Broadway and into the most exclusive hotel in the city. From then on events come in rapid succession, drawing rooms and yachts becoming the stamping round of the Westerners. There is a meeting with the girl and a rescue of her from the society villian, "Loving Lies" is a beautiful story of the sea, other shorter subjects complete the double-bill.

The attraction at the Electra today and tomorrow will be Agnes Ayres in "The Guilty One," Monday until Thursday Mae Murray will be featured in "Mademoiselle Midnight," "The Orphans of the Storm" with Lilian and Dorothy Gish is to be Friday's presentation.

From The Theatres

WITH a cast headed by Dale Winter, Henry Duffy will offer George M. Cohan's musical hit "Mary," at the Orpheum Theatre next Monday night, July 28th. As time goes on the lilting melodies of "Mary" seem to lose none of their tunefulness and seem as refreshingly sweet as when they were first sung, and such numbers as "The Love Nest," "Mary," "When a Girl Exits Laughingly," "Waiting," "Tom, Tom, Piddle" still linger as pleasant memories. The story of "Mary" has for its theme the adventures of Jack Keene, an attractive young man who joyously starts out to solve the problem of the high cost of living. Monsieur Marceau a French Inventor, interests him in a portable house, and Jack finds a way to construct these dwellings cheaply, and thus outwit the rent profiteer. Otto Harbach has developed the story along logical lines not, however, making comedy subservient to logic, but revealing a charming romance through a succession of amusing situations. Miss Dale Winter will have the part of "Mary," a typical modern girl, self-reliant and ambitious. William Naughton will have the role of Jack Keene, and Henry Duffy will be seen in the chief comedy role that of Monsieur Marceau. The regular cast has been augmented for this production and will include Katherine Revner, Franklin George, Margaret Wolfe, John Carmody, William Phelps, Viola McEwen, Paulette Roadina, Paul Douglas, and a host of others. The special orchestra will be under the direction of Albert E. Bray.

Marge Waldron, premiere danseuse, will be featured at the Imperial next week, assisted by Josef Martin, concert pianist. Miss Waldron's program is called a unique classical offering. A few minutes with Jack Benny will prove that a violin is meant for something besides difficult concerts—in the proper hands it possesses a sense of humor. Just to show that he is really a musician he plays one operatic number, but the rest of the time he occupies the stage is devoted to banishing blues. He does this both with his fiddle and a rapid fire line of patter. Eddie O'Rourke and Warren Jackson have the knack of harmony and the voice to harmonize with it. They have also a keen sense of humor which is productive of a liberal amount of merriment. A Joyfeast of Merriment labelled "Oh, My Goodness" is the offering of J. Burke Morgan and DeForest Woolley—the keynote of which throughout is "Laugh and the World's With You." Clark and Crosby, make a comedy skit called 'Tony Don't Understand' a clever bit of characterization as well as a bright bit of entertainment. James and Edith James, call their efforts "A Musical Surprise." It is a pretty novelty, the instruments used being the xylophone, accordeon and piano. Rod LaRocque, of "Triumph," "The Ten Commandments," and "A Society Scandal," portrays the leading male role in "The Code of the Sea," in which he is supported by Jacqueline Logan and George Fawcett.

In "The Hill Billy," Jack Pickford's latest photoplay, which comes to Loew's Theatre next week, is an embodiment of the genius of the young actor, his sister, Mary Pickford, and Marion Jackson, the writer. Jack and Mary Pickford had talked over the idea of "The Hill Billy" for several months. They had planned together that it would make a great motion picture production. So brother and sister decided to write the story. With the aid of Marion Jackson the two produced an original tale of the Kentucky Mountains, now known to the cinema world as "The Hill Billy."

In addition to the feature, the first of the series of the new Jack Dempsey pictures called "Fight and Win" will be shown. Each picture tells a complete story in itself, and cannot be classified as a serial. They are most entertaining in the respect that they show Jack Dempsey in action, and each is replete with comedy. On the vaudeville section, Patsy Shelly and Erny Holmgrem with their entertainers will provide the feature attraction. This act possesses an eight piece band, and Miss Shelly is well known as an exponent of modern dances. Rome and Bolton will offer their all comedy sketch called "The Extremes." Mason and Cole will be shown in a vehicle entitled "Rain and Sunshine." O'Brien and Josephine in the "Song Salesman," and Howard Nichols billed as "The Ace of Hoops," will round out a well balanced program. clothing." Mrs. Lovett, the talented pie-maker, and "the ghost" of the murdered mariner, looking remarkably material, that rises to confound the wicked Sweeney at unexpected moments.

But above all, there is that charming personage, Colonel Jeffrey, of the Indian Army." How many female hearts has the gallant Colonel caused to flutter? Who so military as he; who so manly? The noble man if left alone on the stage after his interview with the heroine. He twirls his mustachios with eyes downcast, demure. Left leg straight, right knee slightly bent, he simpers, "Is it love?" And the house can contain itself no longer.

* * *

The plot is there, plenty of it, therefore, what matters the construction. Every kind of thrill is provided from the "foul" murders and the finding, by the seedy individual, of a human hair and a trousers button in the veal pies he is consuming, to the final denunciation and sentence of the cringing barber. What boots it then how it all comes about? If the 'prentice boy wants to stop and denounce his wicked master instead of making good his chance of escape, why should not he? If the seedy one decides to break into a madhouse and rescue the lad, what is there to stop him? If the hero, without explaining why, shall suddenly demonstrate that he was not murdered and clap the heroine to his arms before the final curtain, who shall gainsay him? It was all good enough for our great-grandfathers, and it ought to be good enough for us. Besides, there are many plays on Broadway that would be just as hard to explain—and harder to excuse.

It is excellently done. So much so that it would be almost unfair to discriminate, but one especial mention must be made. Some day we are going back again, just to view once more that gallant officer and gentleman, "Colonel Jeffrey, of the Indian Army."

If there be any for whom the revival of an old melodrama has no appeal, then the music alone should charm them. Under the direction of Signor Ieilio Sadun, a selection of eighteenth-century English ballads is exquisitely rendered by the orchestra. The use of an old spinet, loaned by David Belasco, also serves to remind us that, musically, we have progressed to the phonograph!

There remains but one thing more to add. Passing reference was made to the advertisements on the paybill. Some of these merit quotations, so herewith some extracts:

And another:

"Personal. Respective Widow fully competent to superintend the household affairs of a Single Gentleman or a Mercantile Establishment.—Mrs. S. care Bell Yard Printery."

"Personal. Last Tuesday evening, a female child, of about three weeks old, was left in a basket at the door of Buckingham House. The servants would have carried it into the park, but the case being some time after made known to the Duchess, who was told it was too late to send to the overseers of the parish, and that the child must perish with cold without speedy relief, Her Grace was touched with compassion, and ordered it to be taken care of. The person who left the letter in the basket is desired, by a penny post letter, to inform whether the child has been baptised; because if not, Her Grace will take care to have it done; and likewise to procure a nurse for it. Her Grace doth not propose that this instance of her tenderness should encourage any further presents of this nature, because such future attempts will prove fruitless."

* * *

We have Mr. Dodge's word for it that the advertisements are genuine. He told us, with a mischievous, boyish grin, how he had dug them up from old playbills in his own possession. Incidentally, we have a shrewd suspicion that the producer is enjoying this thing as much as anybody in the audience, for he positively exudes enthusiasm. "How do you like my curtain he asks, "it's Cruikshank." It was: as truly Cruikshank as any Dickens-illustration.

For all of which, we say, long life to "Sweeney Todd, The Demon Barber of Fleet Street; or The String of Pearls."

Almost we forgot to mention; years and years ago, a man named George Dibdin Pitt wrote this thing.

CLIFFORD BAKER.

Latest News of New York Theatres By Clifford Baker

NEW YORK, July 26—"Sweeney Todd, The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," did more than create diversion for the people of England in the days when Queen Victoria was young. It pointed a moral, and the moral was this: it is wrong for barbers to murder their customers, cut them up and sell them to a pastrycook to make pies of. If, therefore, it had done nothing more during the past eighty-two years, than serve as a warning to possibly unscrupulous members of the shaving craft, it would have earned the (undying?) graditude of all the bearded. But it has other merits.

Before passing to a consideration of these, it should be explained that "the immense success and greatest of all English melodramas" has been revived at the Frazee Theatre by Wendell Phillips Dodge, a producer doubly endowed with a precious sense of humor and a love of the antique. The mere revival of the old production itself was not sufficient for Mr. Dodge. He set out to create for it at the Frazee an atmosphere in which it might feel thoroughly at home—and he has been eminently successful. In addition to the customary program, each member of the audience is presented with a faithful copy of an old playbill containing, in addition to the titles, cast and other matters, some truly interesting advertisements of the period. The document itself carries the perfume of age, but a footnote thereon explains: "The musty odor of this paper is due to its having lain in Bell Yard for more than a hundred years." Unkind persons will accuse Mr. Dodge of being the equivalent of a romanticist. The more charitably inclined will admit him to be an artist.

But this is not the only color provided. The orchestra is dressed as it would have dressed for the Britannia Theatre, London, in 1842, while on the stage, the actors are to be seen in fully costumed, doing their own scene-shifting. Perhaps the most delightful touch of all, however, is provided unexpectedly by the individual with twirling mustachios, a cigar in his face and a stove-pipe hat askew on his head, who walks to the front of the auditorium, leans the footlights and surveys the house before the curtain rises. "Give 'em trarnsfera," he calls to the doorkeeper, "don't turn no money away." And he doesn't look as though he would. This the self-possessed gent follows up with a speech to the audience, describing the wonders they are about to witness and finishing up with an admonition to "you boys in the gallery," not to "drop no horange peel on the bald 'eads of the gents in the pit."

As for the play itself, it is, of course, melodrama of the good old "blood and thunder" type. They liked action at the Britannia in 1842—and they certainly got it. Moreover, it is only slightly burlesqued at the Frazee, which is as it should be. There is the diabolical Sweeney, of the Satanic countenance and the dank locks and last, but, but not least, the graveyard chuckle. With fiendish glee he prepares his razors and, at the psychological moment, lowers his victim, chair and all, to the grim cellar beneath, there to despatch him. Then he treats the audience to tearful monologue concerning his affection for his sainted mother.

There is the priceless string of pearls, motive of the crime, which Mr. Wordsworth himself would have blushed to exhibit. There is the stiff but confiding hero, who describes in detail to the nearest stranger the precious jewels he carries. There is the ill-treated 'prentice who, becoming suspicious, is rushed to Bedlam and a straight-jacket by the gentle barber, calling on Heaven, meanwhile, to come to his aid. Heaven does, by means of the seedy individual who delivers the "honesty poverty" gospel to a delighted audience. There is the gentle heroine; oh, so gentle expected momentarily to die of grief at the cruel loss of her beloved. There are many others too, not forgetting Dr. Aminadab Lupin, "a wolf in sheep's

C. Aubrey Smith and Martin Sabine presented on July 17 at the Comedy Theatre, London, a three-act play entitled, "The Creaking Chair," by Alice Tupper Wilkes and Roland Pertwee. This piece has already enjoyed a successful trial trip in the provinces under the title of "The Man in The Wheel Chair." An excellent company has been recruited, including Tallulah Bankhead, Rita John, Reginald Dance, Nigel Bruce and Aubrey Smith himself. Gerald du Maurier, meanwhile, has accepted the post of producer.

On Saturday night, July 19, two mere London theatres, the Regent and the Garrick, put up the shutters. At the first the closure, however, will be for no great length of time, as Walter Payne is now busy completing arrangements for the reopening of the house about the end of this month. His scheme is to present the very best touring companies in a series of London successes. As to the future of the Garrick nothing as yet has been settled, but it is more than likely that the house will be let for a term. Tom Walls and Leslie Henson re-entering later with an entirely new piece. Meanwhile J. Bannister Howard, who has accepted London's verdict with a praiseworthy serenity, is sending "The Other Mr. Gibbs" on tour in about a fortnight's time. Will Evans taking Robert Hale's place in the cast. The farce, before then, is to be carefully overhauled, and in the second act a sprightly cabaret scene will serve materially to enliven the proceedings.

The Flapper In The Movies; A Short Study Of A Passing Phase

THE Flapper, who for a time has been an attractive and daring figure in society and in fiction, is rapidly passing from view. But before she vanishes entirely it is an interesting thing to note that although there have been representations of her type, and very adequate ones, in the movies, she has not established such a hold on the screen as she is supposed to have done elsewhere.

Of course those who claim that any well-dressed girl who is unmarried and modern in her ways is a flapper simply display their ignorance. No one over twenty can possibly be a flapper, and sixteen is the age when they are really at their best; so the classification of all modern girls as Flappers is not only wrong, but disparaging to a large number. A giddy young thing, who goes to extremes in everything, whose special addictions are cigarettes, Scotch, and boys from the ages of eighteen to twenty-five, and who, with all these unsuitable impulses, adds to the list of soft heart and a weak mind,—certainly this description would be resented if applied to the majority of the 1924 girls, but in reality that is just what a Flapper stands for, while the type holds the stage. The New Girl will be far more intelligent,—not a prude, but one who can use discrimination and take people at their own value.

The movies, which are popularly supposed to express the sentiments of the people as they change from one year to another, do not seem to have taken an extraordinary interest in the Flapper. There are only a few instances in which a really convincing Flapper has appeared on the screen, and although these brief appearances were entertaining and rather refreshing, the film was as a rule so mutilated by the solicitous censors that the poor little heroine appeared largely under false colors and lost all her vivacity and a great deal of her naive wickedness. As this last quality is the breath of life to a really honest Flapper, when it is taken away nothing remains.

Pauline Garon in that entertaining film entitled "Adam's Rib," gave us, a few years ago, a very adequate and attractive picture of a young movie Flapper. Since then there have been a few others, but she was one of the first to portray the type in the movie world. Later, of course, came Colleen Moore as the delightful Pat in "Flaming Youth." Had that picture survived the dire work of the censorial knife, we might have had occasion to say that the movies had given us a perfect picture of a Flapper. But this was not to be, at least not for those who saw the film after it was censored. The result was that Miss Moore, when she undertook her next role in "The Perfect Flapper," proved an attraction that filled the theatres. And disappointment was not awaiting the eager spectators, for Colleen danced, flirted, and smoked in her most shocking manner to the intense amusement of the audience, but hardly to their conviction that it was quite the thing. Clara Bow, who played the Flapper role in "Black Oxen," was the most abandoned type of all, and even the severe beauty of Corinne Griffith as the rejuvenated and stately woman of the world, could scarcely be compared for charm with the ruthless and open war waged by this irrepressible child in order to capture the man she had set her heart upon.

* * *

All three were excellent Flapper types, but it is to be feared that they will soon have to adopt themselves to parts of a different nature, for the Flapper in the movies has danced her dance, and her day is almost over. Audiences no longer enjoy the spectacle of very young and pretty girls represented in a state of semi-intoxication and evidently very much in love with anemic, not to say depraved-looking, young men. The reason for the public objection to this sort of thing is probably that they have seen too much of it off the screen, and do not like being reminded of the fact that among the daughters of their dearest friends or even their own children, some more or less resemble these giddy young women.

* * *

The reaction after the war was largely responsible for the extreme Flapper. There is no doubt of that, but the effects are passing swiftly away, and the Flapper is being replaced by a young woman who is responsible for herself and who, although she will be a good sport, will respect certain conventions and moderations. And the moving pictures, as they have always done, will follow the trend of public opinion and furnish their scenarios with young ladies very pretty, very gay, but not given to excesses that at times overstep the mark of hilarity to the point of vulgarity. That is one disadvantage with which the Flapper has had to contend throughout her brief reign, both on the stage and in real life. It has often been difficult to distinguish her from a demi-mondaine of the more successful type, and on several occasions, had it not been for the enlightening titles, her social status on the screen would have been in doubt.

* * *

But the poor little Flappers have been much abused, so we had better leave them in peace. This is not the state in which they have been allowed to indulge for any length of time. They are really very dear at heart and will probably grow up quite nicely, have large families and spoil their husbands. Their capacity has been exhausted. All they require now is a neat little tablet with the initials R.I.P. The next type will swiftly come into vogue for a brief period and grace both our films and our streets.

Pola Negri is said to have ambitions for fame, on the English-speaking stage. She acted in a little sketch in San Francisco recently and is said to have gratified her admirers greatly. She was a highly successful actress in Germany before devoting her talents to the screen.

"Havoc," produced by the Shuberts, and "The Conquering Hero," by the Theatre Guild, will reach their theatres at about the same time next year. They are both war plays, but of widely varying viewpoints.

Anne Nichols, who has gone abroad for the Summer, is said to be writing a sequel to "Able's Irish Rose," which will pick up the story of the two infants brought into the third act of the original play. Five companies of "Able" are to continue all Summer.

Arthur Hopkins, while abroad, purchased two new plays—one by Arnold Bennett and the other by Michael Arlen. The Bennett work, it is reported, is a romantic drama.

* * *

William Faversham plans to do a little dusting of his own next season with a play that has been on the shelf for nearly twenty years. He will feature in "Hearts Are Trumps," with the cast made up of prominent Broadway players. This old play was last presented in New York with Jessie Busley in the featured role.

* * *

Bertha Kalich, having laid aside "The Kreutzer Sonata," has decided to try her luck next season with a play called, for the present, "The Pastimes of An Empress." It is from foreign sources, and Louis N. Parker, who gave us delightful "Pomander Walk," has made the English adaption.

* * *

Puccini's new opera, "Turandot," will be given its first performance on any stage at the Metropolitan Opera House next season. The composer is expected to go to America to direct the performance.

The ballet will be in a prologue and two acts, elaborately staged in settings painted by Korovin. The music will be arranged from compositions by Ludwig Minkus, who was prominently identified with the Yussupov Orchestra in St. Petersburg 75 years ago.

Julia Lydia Hoyt is to have the title role in "Judith," the adaptation by Gladys Unger of Henri Bernstein's French drama. It will open in New York next Autumn. Miss Hoyt created the role last Spring when the piece was tried out by Stuart Walker in Baltimore.

* * *

John Golden's statement that "The First Year," which is to tour Canada next season under the direction of Theatrical Enterprises, Limited, is "A Comic Tragedy" has caused many to wonder where the "tragedy" can be in a play that kept Broadway laughing for seventy-four weeks.

* * *

Arthur Hammerstein plans to open his season at the Imperial Theatre, New York, on Labor Day, with "Rose-Marie," an operetta by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein, with music by Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothart. * * *

Rosamond Pinchot, who originated the part of the Nun in "The Miracle," recently sailed for Europe. While abroad she will be coached by Max Reinhardt in the part of the Madonna, as she is scheduled to be Lady Diana Manners' alternate in that role.

Never before have there been so many Hungarian plays on Broadway as will be produced in New York during the coming season. Practically all well known Hungarian authors will be represented in the Broadway productions. Their list is topped by Ferenc Molnar, Lajos Biro, Melchior Lengyel, Ernest Vajda and all internationally known names which are familiar to the sophisticated New York theatregoer.

* * *

Percy Hutchison is still in a dilemma as to what plays to select for his coming Canadian tour. After practically deciding on "Bulldog Drummond" as his first presentation, he was persuaded that "The Havoc" would be more suitable as an initial offering. Now he has been offered the Canadian rights for "In the Snare," a historical costume melodrama by Rafael Sabatini and Leon M. Lion, which was enthusiastically received upon its London premiere at the Savoy on July 8.

* * *

Billie Burke is to feature next season in a musical comedy, under the management of Florenz Ziegfeld. Clare Kummer has written the book, lyrics and music, and Edward Royce will stage the production. The premiere is scheduled for September.

"The Fifty-Second (Lowland) Division, 1914-1918," by Lieut.-Col. R. R. Thompson, M.C., McGill Ct., C.O. T.C. Canadian Militia, late Captain 1:5 Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Maps and Plans compiled from Official Sources and drawn by Captain J. B. Ramsey, 7th Camerons; Published by Maclehose, Jackson & Co., publishers to the University, Glasgow.

This handsome book is dedicated to all those who gave up their lives when serving in the units of the Fifty-Second (Lowland) Division, and to the womenfolk of all those who served in its ranks. The chapter titles will give some idea of the war service of this splendid Scottish Division: "The Mobilization of the 52nd Division and Its Sailing for Gallipoli"; "Gallipoli: Cape Helles"; "The Battle of the 28th June, 1915"; "The Batle of the 12th-13th July, 1915"; "August and September at Cape Helles"; "October and the Cooler Weather"; "The Glasgow Howitzers at Anzac and Suvla, and Sir Charles Monro's Report"; "The November Fighting in Krithia Nullah and the Coming of Winter"; "The Attack on G 11a and G. 12"; "The Last Attack in Krithia Nullah"; "The Evacuation of Cape Helles," "Dueidar"; "Romani"; "El Arish"; "The Advance Into Palestine"; "The Second Battle of Gaza"; "The Raid on Sea Post and Other Operations Before Gaza"; "The Third Battle of Gaza"; "Wadi Hesi"; "Esdud or Beit Durza"; "Burkah and Brown Hill"; "Mughar and Katrah"; "Nebi Samwil and El Jib"; "The Turkish Counter-Attacks at Beit Ur El Tahta and Et Burj"; "The Battle of Jaffa—The Passage of the Auja"; "France"; "The Second Battle of the Somme; The Breaking of the Hindenburg (Siegfried) Line About Henin Hill"; "The Second Battle of Arras, or of the Scarpe: The Storming of the Drocourt-Queant Switch of the Hindenburg Line"; "Moeuvres"; and "The Canal Du Nord—Flesquieres—Mons." It is a great and moving story and the closing words of the author may well be quoted here, as a tribute to the memory of those kindly Lowland lads who take their long sleep far from Afric banks and braes, the burns and the knowes of their own beloved land: "It only remains now, as we close this story of the 52nd Division, to salute those comrades who have gone on before and who remain as silent witnesses in many lands. Some were killed in battle, some died of their wounds, and some of disease, but all gave up their lives in defence of their country's and the Empire's honor. Some lie on the bleak moorlands of Gallipoli, and some in the sands of the Cinai Desert; some sleep on the plains and the highlands of Judaea, and some in the sea; some were laid to rest in the fields of France and Belgium, and some in their own beloved island home; but all will live forever in the grateful hearts of their fellow-countrymen, whom they died to save."

"Who's Who in Canada," 1923-1924: An Illustrated Biographical Record of Men and Women of the Time. Edited by B. M. Greene and Published by Hodder & Stoughton, Limited, 268, 265, 267 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

This standard work has reached its seventeenth year of publication, and the 1923-24 edition is more complete and exhaustive than any of the sixteen which have preceded it. While the main purpose of the book is to supply detailed biographical information concerning prominent Canadians, the inclusion of outstanding personalities in Newfoundland, Bermuda, Barbados, Trinidad, British Guiana, Jamaica and the Bahamas is a valuable addition. The numerous excellent portraits with which the book is embellished are a feature of great interest and utility. Containing as it does accurate biographies of more than 3,825 people prominent in educational, artistic, political, commercial and social life in Canada and other British possessions in the western hemisphere, the current publication is the largest yet in point of size. It contains one thousand five hundred new sketches since last year's publication. The editor, Mr. B. M. Greene, has been assisted in the preparation of his work by editors, principals, and librarians of universities and public libraries.

For thirty years he has been a political student and writer. "The Story of Calvin Coolidge," he says, "is a lesson for every American and for those across the seas, of hope and realization. His biography is a stimulating lesson. It symbolizes the force of those great words of the Scriptures: 'Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many.'"

"The Conquest of Worry," by Orison Swett Marden, published by the Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York—As this book by Dr. Orison Swett Marden was passing through the press, the announcement was made that the author had passed away. For over a quarter of a century his books have been issued by Thomas Y. Crowell Company. More than two and a half million copies of his works have been published, in more than twenty different countries. Year in and year out he did battle against fear, worry, doubt, anxiety, discouragement, indecision, hurry, envy, vacillation and the rest of the treacherous band—all of them insidious enemies of the human race. Who can estimate the enormous good of such a widespread message? Dr. Marden was constantly in receipt of letters from persons whom he had helped, or who sought a personal word of advice. It is said that a college was founded in India as a direct result of his first book, "Pushing to the Front." Dr. Marden was his own best examplar. Beginning life as a friendless orphan, he worked his way through college and to distinction in more than one line of enterprise. Many distinguished men, including two Presidents of the United States, claimed him as a friend. "The Conquest of Worry" is a worthy closing utterance, but believe not the last, as it is stated that he had gone over the manuscript of another volume during the last weeks of his life. He laid down his pen at the ripe age of seventy-five, busy, far-reaching, and clear-visioned to the last. The subjects discussed in "The Conquest of Worry" include: "The Arch Enemy of Mankind," "Everybody Cursed by a Pet Fear," "How Our Emotions Prey Upon Our Bodies," "How Fear Thought Encourage Disease," "We Lend Power to the Things We Fear," "The Spectre of Failure," "The Terror of Coming to Want," "A Bogy of the Imagination," "To-morrow's Bread," "As a Man Expecteth So is He," "The Utter Folly of Worry," "Setting the Brakes on Efficiency," "The Great Human Curse,—Doubt," "The Child and His Fears," "What Discouragement Will Do to You," "Inviting Trouble," "The Suggestion of Inferiority," "It Won't Last, Nothing Does," "Taking Business Home with You," "Enemies of Refreshing Sleep," "Making Haste Slowly," "Stunted Lives," "Self-control and Mastership," "The Tonic of Courage," "What Sort of Message are You Broadcasting?" and "The Truth That Makes Us Free."

"Blood Pressure: Cause, Effect and Remedy," by Lewellys F. Barker, M.D., and Norman B. Cole, M.D., published by Frederick D. Goodchild, Toronto.—This volume goes thoroughly, but without technicalities, into a subject that is of growing concern to both doctor and patient. The doctor is concerned because he sees more and more clearly the relation of abnormal blood pressure to heredity; to acute infectious diseases; to hardening of the arteries; to diseases of the kidneys; and finally to old age and the maladies, so often fatal incident to it. The non-medical man is concerned because he is learning that the development to high blood pressure is a process rather than a disease; that symptoms develop rather late in its course; and that preventive measures must, therefore, be taken early. This admissible little volume gives the non-medical man in plain, readable English, the information he would like to have on this all-important question.

"The Land of the Northern Men," by Lillie A. Brooks, published by The Ryerson Press, Toronto.—The author of this book is a true Canadian and a singer in strong and tuneful lines of the beauties of this northern land. These themes include "The Land of the Northern Men," "The Burnt Lands," "Lake Simcoe Beaches," "The Beach Dweller," "Glacier Inn," "Chief Morning Star," "The Wilderness Trail," "To the Memory of Pauline Johnson," and "Vagabondage." Here are two verses from the poem which gives title to the book, "The Land of the Northern Men":

"Sing me a song of the Northern land,
Of the ice and the stinging snow;
Of the silent peaks, and the lonely plains,
Where the savage stormwinds blow;
Where nature scorns the weakling soul,
And he must fight who can;
Sing me a song of the mighty North—
My sire was a Northern man."

The North with its shine and shade,
With the springtime's crown on the forest trees,
And the bloodroot bloom in the glade;
Sing of the ghosts of the gallant dead,
Who come in the twilight, when
In the land of the Northern men."

A Canadian Viewpoint

IMAGINATION is the supreme gift of God to man. Without it a palace is a poor habitation and the pageant of beauty a meaningless procession. It is the architect of castles more wonderful than the marble achievements of the middle ages; it makes the desert to blush with roses and imparts to the gray skies a glory rarer than the sunlight which they have lost. It is the interpreter of beauty and the translator of that Sanscript of nature which is a foreign tongue to the clod. It is a lost trail leading to Heaven and they who find it may lie on Abraham's bosom all the year.

To say a poet possesses imagination is to praise him beyond all other praise. And yet the bards who possess this gift in a marked degree are few in number. There are a hundred poets who walk the foothills of fancy to one poet who dares the sharp crags and lonely summits of imagination. The imaginative quality is seldom found in the verse of women although their poetry is often rich with fancy.

The fanciful mind can see beauty in a rose-bush or in the passion of a cluster of rhododendrons or in the sensuousness of sunsets but the imaginative soul knows the joy of the melancholy of marshes, and the invisible trails of the air are his highway. Along one of these trails wandered Rupert Brooke when he wrote:

To the unseeing eye and the unbelieving heart this low, sweet alley is a foolish conception but to the dreamers of the world it is the only trail worth travelling.

The world of imagination is the only world that can never be destroyed. It is like the lamp of Aladdin whose glow dims not with the falling of stars or the fading of moons. There is no formula in its analysis and there are no words that can give but a hint of its character. William Wordsworth made the most notable attempt to describe imagination that can be found anywhere in the world of books and he succeeded where others had failed because he assailed the unassailable with a negation:

"The light that never was on sea or land;
The consecration and the poet's dream."

True imagination has little kinship with hectic thought and the ensignia of its office is control. The lesser poets, endeavoring to reach the citadels of the greater bards, sing riotously and with unbridled voices. I remember verses by a western American poet that were hailed far and wide for their "imaginative beauty." But these verses died and will no more be resurrected because they lacked that restraint which is the very core and marrow of true imagination.

The avenues to great poetry are many and varied and it is possible for a poem to be totally devoid of the imaginative qualities and yet be a poem. Immortal song may be but a musical and faithful interpretation of the humor or pathos of life, and some of the most deathless runes of the world are totally devoid of imagination. One poet achieves the authentic note with a philosophic utterance; another strikes it in a moment of human anguish or joy; some gain it with a tantalizing witchery of rhythm; others woo it with the magic of almost meaningless diction. Inspiration has no permanent abode and as many poets find the Parnassian tone in a tavern's revelry as in a cathedral's solemnity. It is proof of the power of poetry that the description of a harlot may be as immortal as verses written in honor of an angel or a god. It would be hard to choose between the magic of Oscar Wilde's description of the inmate of a brothel in the lines:

"Some times a horrible marionette
Come out and smokes its cigarette

and Rosetti's:

"The blessed damosel leaned out
From the gold bars of heaven.
Her eyes were deeper than the depths
Of waters stilled at even."

These two quotations illustrate the futility of asking all poets to approach from one avenue, and the paucity of true criticism lies in the fact that few critics know how utterly varied the dress and form of beauty may be.

But while a poet who lacks imagination may write an occasional indestructible note from the richness of an experience, nevertheless it is the bard with the "gift of gifts" who will repeat most often his immortal gestures. In relating experience the fountain is sucked dry but in imaginative utterance the tapping of each fount but increases the flow. All bards of a single line or poem are bards who have achieved through the lucky recording of an experience. If they possessed imagination they could repeat.

"And high above the din and rout

and Merton will be forever known as the "one-line poet."

Imagination is something more than a daring conception and the universal idea of its varied character is appallingly inadequate. It is reached with daring in Goldsmith's:

"As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form
Above the gale and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread

and again it is attained without a trace of the spectacular in Browning's:

"He signs his song twice over
Lest we should think he never could recapture
That first fine careless rapture."

The narrow and common concept of imagination will admit of the first and excludes the second, but this is because imagination has been so long associated with daring. To the average person it is always arrayed like the shooting stars while in truth it comes as often garbed in the common dust of roadways. The most daring description of the Ancient Mariner does not equal in poetic imagination the almost forgotten lines of Coleridge:

"Twas partly love and partly fear
And partly 'twas a bashful art
That I might rather feel than see
The beatings of her heart."

The most imaginative poet of the group of '61, which includes Roberts, Carman, Campbell, F. G. Scott and Duncan Campbell Scott, is the last-named. In a splendid poem captioned: "The Eagle Speaks" he says:

"I swirled low over earth

That the land which leaps from the crags of Gaspe to the rose gardens of Vancouver Island, that bids her poets walk one day amid the vineyards of the Niagara peninsula and commands them on the next to march the wilderness with the torch of the northern lights in their hands, should produce poets of imagination is obvious. If the note of protest were added to the noble fancy of some Canadian bards it would not be long before our singers would rank among the immortals. But this note is sadly lacking.

STORE BLOCK ON OLD M.A.A.A. SITE

The trend of the times is shown in the development of a number of cross streets off St. Catherine street between Peel and Union avenue. This is particularly noticeable on Mansfield street where developments have been remarkable in the past few years. Recently more stores have been added and were immediately taken by St. Catherine street merchants glad of the opportunity to get out of the high rent district.

Now other investors, seeing a future for this locality, have under construction, on the south east corner of Mansfield and Burnside streets, a block of eight stores. The building will take in one hundred feet on each street and will be four stories high. It will be faced with buff pressed brick and cut stone trim and was designed by Ross & MacDonald, archetects.

This building will occupy the site where formerly stood the old club house and gymnasium of the M.A.A.A. It appears that the old traditions, of this site, are to be perpetuated, for it is understood that considerable space in the new building is to be devoted to bowling and athletics.

N.Y. Movement in Rails—Hollinger And Dome Plans—Local Market Action

INDECISIVE PRICE MOVEMENTS ON LOCAL EXCHANGE IN PAST WEEK; BREWERY STOCKS FIRM FEATURES

Price movements on the Montreal Stock Exchange during the past week were of an indecisive character. Gains and losses were about evenly divided in a narrow range of issues, and in spite of an active and generally strong market in Wall Street local trading was very dull.

Brazilian Traction was one of the more active features. Very little definite news trickled through regarding the uprising at Sao Paulo. The stock was sold in moderate quantity, and it reacted 2 points below last week's close. The balance sheet of the company, showing earnings in 1923, slightly lower than in the preceding year owing to adverse exchange rates, made its appearance, but it apparently had no influence one way or the other on the character of the trading in this issue. The dominating factor is the Sao Paulo trouble and the consequent deleterious effect on the mlreis.

Other traction groups were influenced by individual situations. Montreal Tramways, after reacting 2½ points, recovered all the loss and an additional two points on the likelihood that the United Securities would secure control of Tram-Power. Detroit was slightly easier, but did not break its previous low of 30. Twin City was weak and declined to new low ground. Winnipeg Electric issues adjusted themselves to new levels; the common, which made a sharp recovery last week, reacted 2 points, while the preferred, which had been quiet for some time, advanced 2¾.

Beer stocks and Dominion Glass were strong on the likelihood that Ontario may vote for amendment to its present Temperance Law in the referendum next October. National Breweries was very active and advanced to its former high, closing only a small fraction below that level. Frontenac Breweries advanced to a new high level, while Dominion Glass equalled its former high record. Industrial Alcohol was also active and fairly steady.

Quebec Power and Southern Canada Power were strong features in the utility group, both issues closing at new highs. Montreal Power was unchanged after a moderate rally, while Shawinigan was slightly easier. Paper stocks were quiet, but rallies were made by Abitibi, Brompton and the Spanish Rivers. Other firm features included Sherwin-Williams and Dominion Textile preferred, both up to new highs, while Atlantic Sugar was a weak spot with a decline to a new low.

The week's range was as follows:—

SLIGHT CHANGES IN QUIET LIST; CUBAN SUGAR UP

Trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange was very quiet during the first half-hour this morning. Only a handful of issues appeared and price changes were insignificant. Abitibi showed one of the biggest price changes with a reaction of ⅝ to 57, after having been quiet during the past few days. Montreal Power was slightly firmer at 172¾, up ½, while Quebec Power, which rose to the new high of 77 yesterday, was 77¾ bid this morning, an odd lot selling at 78.

Brazilian showed no change at 45, and Twin City was also unchanged at 45, the new low established yesterday. Announcement of net earnings of the latter company for the first half of the present year shows a substantial decline from the corresponding period of last year, and the market's action is evidently the discounting of the lower earnings.

A strong feature was Cuban Canadian Sugar preferred, which was up 3½ points at 37½. St. Lawrence Flour was unchanged at the high of 73. In the bond department Quebec Railway bonds moved up ¼ to the former high of 88½.

Our Trade With Australia and New Zealand

Exports from Canada to Australia are falling off. The monthly movements are very similar to those of last year, but at a lower level. The value of exports in March was $2,142,612, in April $526,908, and in May $1,180,300. Imports show little change, and were, in May, $94,242. Exports to New Zealand are on the whole better this year than last. The May value was $1,069,475. The March exports to both New Zealand and Australia consisted largely of automobiles. May imports from New Zealand had a value of $107,284.

Mr. Dickinson Advises Holders of Twin City

Mr. Dickinson of the Stock Exchange firm of Dickinson & Walbank advises the holders of Twin City Rapid Transit shares not to sacrifice their stock at present very low levels, notwithstanding the severe shrinkage in earnings for the six months of the current fiscal year.

The decline in earnings is by no means peculiar to Twin City as most of the carrying companies throughout the United States are showing from forty to sixty per cent decreases in their comparative earning statements.

Shareholders of Twin City should momentarily ignore the earning position, and await the decision of the Railroad Commission with full confidence. This decision is imminent, and shareholders will appreciate that the present severe decline in earnings may possibly turn out to be a blessing in its support of the reasonable attitude which it is expected the members of the Commission will take.

It should be to the interest of shareholders to concentrate upon the tremendous equities this company enjoys, which can be summarized in the fact that during the past fourteen years the company has increased its property values and reserves by approximately $20,000,000 (which is equal to 91% on the outstanding common stock), and against this increase, the company has received practically no new capital whatsoever. This should be a most reassuring consideration to shareholders, as it indicates positively that the company has an earning resource over and above its dividend requirements, which has enabled it to put such an unusual amount of earnings back into the property in a comparatively short time.

The current earnings are at the rate of nearly 4½% per annum, and this calculation includes unusual loss of $150,000 in March last due to the severe snow storm.

The equities and the undoubted earning power of this company, should convince shareholders that present quotations are considerably below the true intrinsic value of the stock.

SUDBURY, July 26.—(Star Special.)—J. McKay is stated to have entered into a deal under the terms of which 40 per cent of the Westree Mines may be disposed of for something like $250,000. Official confirmation has not been secured at the time of writing.

HOLLINGER PLAN CONNECTED WITH POWER PROGRAM

TIMMINS, July 26.—(Star Special.)—The power transmission line of the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines is in final stages of completion to the company's new power plant on the Abitibi River. Also, the Hollinger has completed the installation of Diesel engines at the mine where 1,200 h.p. can be supplied as auxiliary energy in cases of emergency.

It was officially stated today to your correspondent that the Hollinger will turn this energy to good account immediately. The plan is to transmit Diesel engine power from the Hollinger mine to the site of hydro-electric power development on the Abitibi River. This energy will greatly facilitate construction progress. The transmission of power to the Abitibi River will commence about August 15 and will be used in every way possible pending completion of the 24,000 h.p. plant which is intended to in turn supply the full power requirements of the Hollinger Consolidated Mine.

Summed up, the situation at the Hollinger is that the company is prepared to reach a reasonable settlement of power questions, that the directors are determined to otherwise use the energy developed by the company itself, and that the mine is measuring up to expectations which already assure the objective of 8,000 tons daily, and with assurance of a particularly long life. In any case, the objective will be attained within a year, while in event of a settlement being made, the time for realization of the proposed achievements will be limited only to a matter of a few months.

The central shaft of the Hollinger is now down about 1,900 feet. The immediate objective in this shaft is a depth of 3,200 feet. This depth is considered to be the reasonable limits of economic vertical hoisting. Four skips will operate to this depth by this time next year, according to present plans. Hoisting equipment will be divided into two units in the same shaft. In event of mishap to a hoist, the ore in storage on surface, together with operation of the single hoisting unit will carry operations on at normal rate pending repairs.

Diamond drilling which has indicated good ore and favorable structure at a depth of 3,050 feet on the Schumacher side of the Hollinger has given good indications that shaft-sinking will have to be continued to still greater depth. In connection with this, it is intended to instal the necessary hoisting equipment at the 3,200-ft. level—possibly on the Schumacher side of the mine. Conditions revealed during the course of development to 3,200 feet in depth will determine to a large extent the size of the shaft below that horizon, as well as the size of the hoisting equipment required. It is considered probable, however, that the hoisting machines to be instilled in due time at the 3,200-ft. level will be designed for possibly 4,000 feet or more below that horizon and may reasonably permit work to be carried to the greatest depths to which miners have ever gone.

Announcement is made that the payment of 6⅔ per cent on account of arrears of dividend on the outstanding preferred stock of the St. Lawrence Paper Mills, Limited, will be made on August 10, to shareholders of record July 21.

KING EDWARD ISSUE

The offering of $500,000 of the bonds of the King Edward Hotel Company of Toronto is the second half of an original issue of $1,000,000. The first part of the issue was handled by a New York bond house. The issue, which is being offered simultaneously in Canada and the Eastern States by Credit-Canada, Limitee, and Pond & Company, Inc., consists of first refunding sinking fund mortgage 7 per cent. gold bonds series "A." These bonds are subject only to a mortgage of $2,500,000, held by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, of New York City. The land and buildings covered by the two issues have been appraised by the insurance company at about $7,000,000.

In addition to the property security the present issue is a first lien on the furniture of the hotel, valued at over $1,000,000. During the past year the net operating profits applicable to interest were $542,471, or nearly five times the interest requirements on this series after meeting the interest on the $2,500,000 mortgage. In 1922 a new addition was made to the hotel, with 500 rooms, and the 1923 earnings reflect only part of the increase estimated as due to this addition.

LONDON AWAITS ANGLO-ONTARIO MINE PROSPECTUS

LONDON, July 26.—(Canadian Press)—Nothing has happened this week to rouse the Stock Exchange from its condition of extreme lethargy. It has been rather the reverse, in fact, for what news the people have had of pourparlers on the continental situation, gives small justification for embarking on any financial enterprise.

British Government stock, on the whole, is weaker than it was, and the news from Brazil, or the lack thereof, being anything but reliable, has taken the shine out of South American securities.

Home rails have been somewhat brighter on the declaration of satisfactory dividends, having regard to a considerable decline in the gross earnings during the last six months.

The maintenance of the three per cent dividend on the London, Midland and Scottish Railway is good news, although it has been necessary to raid the reserve funds to an extent, not disclosed, in order that this might be done. The Southern Railway is paying five per cent six months' dividend, but there is no announcement as to what the junior stockholders are going to get, till the full year's accounts are presented.

The Great Western Railway repeats its interim dividend of three per cent, and while the reserve is not mentioned, it is imagined that the fund has been requisitioned. The Metropolitan Railway has increased its interim dividend from 2½ to 3 per cent through the considerable expansion of business owing to the Wembley traffic, while the quotations pretend that the shareholders in this stock expect better dividends at the end of the year.

Harland and Wolff, the noted Belfast shipbuilders have issued £4,000,000 six per cent preferred at par, a goodly portion of which doubtless has gone to the underwriters. This is the first public issue of this Company which has never published its accounts, so with shipbuilding and engineering generally in their present parlous state, investors look doubtfully on the omission of even a firm with such well-established connections as Harland and Wolff. Apart from this, the signs are accumulating that the market intel has been surfeited with new issues.

The Furness-Withy Company, a well-known shipping concern whose balance sheet is a strong one, nevertheless shows that the firm's profits have come from other branches of the business than the shipping and also from investments. Despite an improvement in revenue, there is no change in the Furness-Withy dividend of five per cent with a bonus of 2½ per cent.

Next Monday the prospectus of the Anglo-Ontario mines will be published. The Anglo-Ontario Company is offering 750,000 dollar shares at four shillings per share, in connection with the acquisition of a large interest in the Keeley extension which adjoins the Keeley Silver mines and also in the Bell Ellen Huvner Mine and the British Porcupine Mines with a contract for the purchase of the Taylor-Conkey claim adjoining the Bell Ellen.

NATIONAL CEMENT PORTLAND CEMENT
MONTREAL

¶ The consumption of cement in the United States was 17,230,644 barrels in 1902 and 113,870,000 barrels in 1922.

¶ A great many of the Canadian cement mills were built before 1914, when that industry was still in the experimental stage, and have since become obsolete.

¶ The mill which the National Cement Company is building at Montreal East is the very last word in cement engineering. It will produce, at the lowest cost, 3,600 barrels of cement per day and at least 900,000 barrels a year.

¶ The National Cement Company is a Quebec concern. It fulfils all the conditions required to capture part of the market of this province.—Private consumers will gladly deal with it. At equal prices, the governments, municipal or otherwise, will be forced to give it a share of their business.

¶ Since the National Cement Company has appeared, cement prices are coming down in the Province of Quebec. No amount of bullying could keep it out of the market. No price cut will put it out of it.

¶ Back up those who help you. Make a sensible investment. Buy a few bonds of the National Cement Company.

¶ The Common Stock offered as a bonus may some day be worth par, and it does not cost you one cent.

Big College Tour Arrives Back in Montreal Tomorrow

A comparison of the passenger figures of the Cunard and Anchor Donaldson lines for the summers of 1923 and 1924 shows a tremendous increase this year in Canadian business over last year.

The Cunard Steamship Company inaugurated a new service between Quebec and Liverpool early this summer operated by two of their most popular steamers the S. S. Carmania and the S. S. Caronia.

It was thought possible that the Montreal service to Plymouth, Cherbourg and London operated by the three Cunard oilburning cabin steamers, Antonia, Andania, and Ausonia, would suffer through competition; but figures show a 70 per cent increase for these ships over last year, and an a 160 per cent increase in the total Cunard Canadian business from St. Lawrence ports.

FOR NEXT YEAR.

The Cunard fleet of passenger steamers sailing from Montreal next year will include the three newly built "A" boats, Ascania, Alaunia and Aurania, the latter being ready for her maiden voyage now.

Anchor-Donaldson figures over the same periods show a increase in Canadian passenger traffic this season of 60 per cent and the company has announced its intention of further increasing the Montreal-Glasgow service next year by the addition of the Letitia, an oilburning cabin steamer of the latest design, at present nearing the stage of completion on the Clyde.

She will be a sister ship of the well known Anchor-Donaldson liner Athenia, largest steamer on the Montreal-Glasgow run, and one of the speediest Atlantic liners to enter the port of Montreal.

COLLEGE MEN RETURN.

The tide of tourist traffic has turned westward. This will be seen when the White Star-Dominion liner Doric, docks tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock with an exceptionally large list of Montrealers and Canadians as well as American tourist who went to visit Europe the beginning of the season and are returning by the Scenic St. Lawrence route.

Among the 800 passengers there is the largest party of college tourists to leave this continent.

The tourists have had a three weeks tour of Europe, where in England, they made extensive motor trips in the Shakespearian country as well as visit to the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley.

In Belgium they saw the former German naval base, Zeebrugge, and the ruins of Burgess as well as the capital, Brussels.

In France special arrangements were made to see the final events of the Olympic track and field game as well as the principal buildings and public institutions, including the Louvre with its renowned art treasures gathered from all parts of the world.

Montrealers returning on the Doric include: L. A. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hogg, Miss C. Wells, Miss A. Coker, Miss M. Kidd, Mrs. M. Langstaff, Rev. Father V. Nicolle, J. INTERNATIONAL PAPER AND SALE OF RIORDON

NEW YORK, July 26—That International Paper Co. is taking a keen interest in the sale of Riordon properties is beyond the rumor stage, states the Wall Street News. Officials of the Company approached on the subject refuse to either confirm or deny that they are interested, though it can be stated that the subject is being discussed as in line with the present policy of enlarging the scope of International's activities across the border.

There seems to be little likelihood of International Paper considering taking over the Riordon properties as a whole. The former has ample timber limits of its own across the border, so that purchase of additional lands from Riordon does not seem necessary, and would not be likely unless offered for sale on extremely liberal basis. What would be logical and likely to happen is that International would make a bid for Riordon plant at Kipawa, Ont. The American company has already announced its intention of constructing additional mills across the border, and the requisition of the Riordon plant would give it a complete and modern plant which probably can be purchased much below cost of re-production.

Any deal whereby International Paper would acquire portion of the Riordon properties would naturally entail new financing. While the company has ample working capital for its present needs it is not in position to make any heavy expenditures for capital account. To finance on the basis of acquiring properties in Canada which could within a short time be made a source of earnings should be an easy matter for the company, and certainly cannot be continued as an adverse factor.

International Paper Co's. policy of depreciation in past years has been liberal, so that elimination of several of the American mills by sale or scrapping is not necessarily a hardship. Owing to the peculiar construction, and lack of demand for paper mills in this country, sale as going properties would be difficult, so that they probably would have to be scrapped as paper mills. Many of the mills are now obsolete despite the fact that the company has spent large sums for upkeep.

PRODUCTION OF NON-FERROUS METALS DOWN

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics issues the following revised statistics on the shipments of chromite, manganese, molybdenite and tungsten from Canadian mines in 1923.

During the war years chromite and molybdenite were produced in Canada in considerable quantities while manganese and tungsten were produced in less amounts, but since then the output of chromite and manganese has fallen off greatly, and molybdenite and tungsten have not been mined at all.

Chromite is mined in the parish of Coleraine, Quebec Province. The mill rock after primary and secondary crushing is ground, screened and concentrated, and the resulting material which runs about 48 per cent., is exported to the United States, where it is consumed in the iron and steel trade. The production during 1923 totalled 3,558 tons valued at $52,650, as against 1,087 tons, valued at $19,566, in 1922.

The production of manganese reached its maximum during 1888 when 1,800 tons was produced. Of late years the production has never topped the 1,000-ton mark. During 1923, shipments of wad manganese amounting to 200 tons were made from New Brunswick deposits to Quebec Province.

Production of molbdenite reached its highest point in 1918 when 34,030 tons of molybdenite concentrates valued at $33,935 was shipped. There has been no production of tungsten during the past six years.

CROWDS BESIEGE PAPER WAGONS AND YOUNG JIMMY GIVES DICKENS NEW EXPRESSION—"HOT DOG" HE SHOUTS IN OLIVER TWIST

By RING LARDNER

To the editor:

I suppose everybody is dying to know what has took place lately around the old homestead. Well in the 1st place we had a Democratic convention in New York and when I finally got home from same the kiddies was calling me mister not knowing who was it. They's a certain newspaper in New York that claims to of broughten the convention to New York and during the convention they had their delivery wagons running around with the signs on them saying "We brought the convention to New York."

During the last two or three weeks of the convention, hotel owners, theatrical managers, restaurant keepers, relatives and etc. was chasing these wagons with bricks and their elocum was you may of broughten it here but who is going to take it away. The convention was what might be termed a howling success and everybody was in on the howling. Four years from now they will probably be some more national political conventions but you won't hear about no great efforts on the part of the cities of Cleveland and New York to have them held there respectively.

YOUNG BUT NOT DUMB.

Well when it was all over I moved back home and who should be training for a fight right up the hill but Georges Carpentier known as the greek god. Georges was training at the home of Jack Curley and one day we got an invitation to come over and spend the afternoon as Georges was going to learn the ladies of Great Neck how to reduce.

Well practically all the ladies of Great Neck was present at the lesson and long before the end of the afternoon they was all reduced. Personally I did not half to pay much attention to the instructions as the two conventions had took 16 pounds off of me.

The next event on our social program was when two stage stars come out to spend the sabbath, one of them being Beatrice Lillie, the star of Charlot's revue and the other one was Winifred Lenihan who played Joan of Arc in Mr. Shaw's play and Miss Lenihan thought they should be a picture taken of Miss Lillie standing along side of our cow to show the contrast so Miss Lenihan tried to move our cow which is no small chore and before she was ½ through with the job we had to call for help from our retinue of servants. He is the only one who has got anything on our cow and he looked her right in the eye and made her behave herself.

Well, the next event was that I had two nieces visiting here from Michigan aged eleven and seven and one day they decided to put on the play of Oliver Twist assisted by my kiddies. John played Fagin and his make up was composed of a beard which had been bobbed. My recolection of Fagin is that his beard was red but that did not seem to make no difference to John.

The climax of the play come when Jimmy, who was playing the part of Oliver, was adopted by Rose Maley's mother or whoever adopted him and her line was "I am going to make you my own son" and he replied: "Hot dog."

EXCITING SPORT.

During Miss Lillie's visit we played charades and a sister of mine that come along to take care of her two nieces give on which was as follows:

"This is a three syllable word which is a proper name of the heavyweight pugilistic champion of the world. The first syllable is Jack. The second syllable is a swear word. And the third syllable is the plural of the verb saw."

After we had all failed, Miss Lillie guessed that the name could be none other than Jack Dempsey.

Next I give one in honor of the guest of honor and I says it was the first name of a prominent English comedienne and was made of three syllables and I would give it all at once and I said a certain man said to a girl will you meet me tomorrow night and she said yes and he said let us shake hands on it. The answer was to be a tryst.

That is about all the news I know except that the parrot has been spending the afternoons out of her cage and has destroyed the bulk of the porch furniture and my son Bill lost two pounds during what I have termed the hot spell and one day the ice man never showed up at all during the time we needed him most.

OLYMPIC TRAPSHOTS ON WAY TO HOMES

Five of the seven members of Canada's trap shooting team which took part in the Olympic games in Paris passed through to their various homes having arrived back on board the Canadian Pacific SS. Montcalm, one of the other members having returned previously, while the seventh is still in England.

The trap shooters who returned and who were interviewed on board the liner were: W. Barnes, accompanied by Mrs. Barnes; George Beattie, Hamilton; R. J. Montgomery, St. Catharines; R. Newton, accompanied by Mrs. Newton, Sherbrooke, and S. G. Vance, Tillsonburg. The remaining two members are Messrs. H. W. Cooey, Toronto, and J. H. Black, Winnipeg.

The men expressed themselves as being pleased with the trip, but, of course, were disappointed after making a good showing all through the trap shooting contests that they did not "bring home the bacon."

SUPERDYNE CIRCUIT.

Q.—I have built the four tube Superdyne set shown in The Star and it seems to be a good one. My only trouble is from body capacity from the condenser on which the plate coil is mounted. If after tuning in a station I put my hand on the dial of this condenser the set breaks into oscillation, removing my hand clears the signal up again. Is there any way of overcoming this without shielding? Another thing I have noticed, especially when listening to KDKA which comes in very loud, is that when I lay the phones on the table the set starts to howl, touching the metal parts on the phones stops the howling and the music can be heard clearly in the next room. At other times touching the phones when they are on my head cuts down the volume. What causes this? At present I have it mounted on a wooden panel but intend to mount it on a hard rubber panel later. I enclose the results of the five nights I have been using this set and would like to know if they are good for this time of year. Would also like to know the wave length range of this set. In closing I wish to thank you for your advice in the past.—E. H. T.

A.—The best method of overcoming body capacity effects is to shield the back of the panel with thin sheet brass or copper. The effect you notice when touching the metal parts of your phones with your hand is often due to a poor ground connection to the set, and this may be the cause in your case. The results you are obtaining at this time should leave you little to grumble at. The set should tune over the complete broadcast wave length range.

HEARD CHURCH SERVICE.

Q.—Can you tell me please, which radio station it was that I heard Sunday night at 11:45 daylight saving time from California. A church service, first the sermon, a hymn, the sound of a gong, and another hymn. Then my "B" batteries were noisy and for that reason I could not get the station call letters. I hope you can help me in this.—K. B.

A.—The details you give are somewhat vague, but perhaps some other radio fan heard this station and can identify it.

ONE TUBE SET.

Q.—I have decided to build a one tube set but don't know which one tube set is best, the Reinartz, Copp and Copp non regenerative have been suggested. Which of these three is best? Of the latter two which is the better. What is meant by non-regeneration or by regeneration? Is a spiderweb coil good for a crystal set.

K.R.S.T.L.

A.—Any of the circuits you mention should give good results if carefully constructed. You might start by making up the one which seems best to suit your constructional capabilities and the parts you have on hand. A regenerative circuit is one in which a portion of the amplified signal from the plate circuit of the tube is impressed back on the grid circuit, so as to obtain further amplification of the signal, by the reaction of the one circuit upon the other. By using this method the audibility of signals can be much increased over that obtainable when a non-regenerative circuit is used, but great care must be observed in obtaining regeneration, otherwise the signals may be badly distorted. A spiderweb coil can be used satisfactorily in a crystal receiving set.

IMPROED REINARTZ SET.

2.—What is the lowest and highest wave length that this set will reach?

3.—What is the greatest distance that this set will reach?

5.—What type tube is most suitable for this set?—M. C.

3—The distance it will cover depends upon several things, such as local conditions, how well the set is made, etc., but under favourable conditions it should tune in stations from 1000 to 1500 miles distant and perhaps even more.

Life and Character Reading
JULY 26

People of this birthdate are secretive or frank as best suits their purpose. The men demand the utmost probity of their wives but refuse to be called to book in return. Women born on this date are generally very intense and if treated unkindly or indifferently are likely to conceive a great disgust for their marital companions.

The sign of this date is the cusp of Cancer-Leo and this accounts for the intenseness of the women. The governing planet is the Moon, and the birthstone is a black onyx. The astral colors are russet brown and green.

Life, at its best is a difficult thing, and why make it more difficult when by the simplest of means it can be made easy. Use the Want Ads and save yourself a great deal of worry.
