WHEAT SPECULATORS RUN WILD IN CHICAGO PIT WITH PRICES NOW OVER DOLLAR MARK

Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg People Are Mentioned Among the Big Winners in the Tremendous Rise in Prices—World Conditions.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Chicago, Ill., May 18. — The highest prices on the crop have been reached. The world is in the wheat market on a larger scale and more generally than ever known before in the history of Chicago's oldest wheat men. The public came into wheat six weeks ago, and it came in on the buying side and in a big way.

Mostly All Buyers.

The farmer, the country storekeeper, and the country banker all entered the big pit on the Chicago Board of Trade as buyers. Their purchases were small at first—too small to attract general attention—when the entire professional grain trade was bearish and "tickled to death" so to speak, because of the fact that the suckers were not all dead. The buying power increased slowly but persistently.

The increase came from the public. There were a few exceptions in the ranks of the professionals on 'Change. Those with crop experts in the country were buyers with the public.

Thousands Caught Short.

A day of reckoning arrived. It caught thousands of men short. They were anxious to even up their contracts, and when they sent brokers into the pit in order to purchase the wheat the grain was not available at the old figures. The wheat was wanted and it was wanted at once. Brokers were instructed to buy it, the orders being "open" affairs. The wildest scenes accompanied this buying and the market jumped upward.

Sensational Advances.

The advances were sensational, and they were continuous. The public sold enough wheat to become rich off their investment, and the longs are now holding enough wheat to make another fortune when it reaches $1.25 or a higher level.

Largest Winner.

George W. Patten is probably the largest local winner on the upturn in wheat. Other big winners are James A. Patten, William H. Bartlett, W. H. Lake, the Shearson Hammil crowd, A. K. White, Loman Bryan and following; John MacDougall, Moses Bloom, John Barrett, A. J. Cutten, Ware Leland and following, C. H. Canby and following, the Brosseaus, and the Montreal crowd, also the Toronto and Winnipeg crowd. Reports here are that the Ogilvie following in Montreal are among the biggest winners.

Heaviest Losers.

The Northwestern Elevator people have suffered the heaviest losses, and one or two of the local carriers have received rather ugly raps across the knuckles.

Situation Unprecedented.

"The world is confronted with an unprecedented wheat situation," said James A. Patten, of Bartlett, Frazier & Carrington. "It is confined to no one country or section. From Manitoba to India there is no country that can hope for an average crop on the basis of present outlook, and the dangers and vicissitudes of summer and harvest are still to be encountered. In this country the outlook is especially disquieting. We have seen our winter wheat acreage cut from 31,000,000 down to 28,000,000 by May 1st, with a condition that at that time did not justify the expectation of more than 396,000,000 bushels, while last year we harvested 29,000,000 acres that produced 492,000,000 bushels. The damage to the crop was occasioned by winter killing, and by the ravages of the aphis, or "green bug."

A Weakened Crop.

Thus the crop entered this month in a weakened condition, and in no shape to withstand further trials. But conditions have been worse rather than better. Killing frosts have extended all over the southwestern wheat belt almost every other night for the last two weeks.

Green Bug Extending Ravages.

The aphis, favored by the cool weather, has increased enormously and has extended its ravages from the southern tier of Kansas counties clear across the State, and is now found in constantly increasing numbers throughout Western Nebraska. Every report from Kansas indicates that the damage is continuous and every estimate is for lessened yield.

Present Estimates.

It would be only in keeping with known facts, to state that if a report on acreage and condition should be issued now, two weeks after the Government report, it would indicate very little, if any, more than 350,000,000 bushels, as against the May 1st estimate of 396,000,000 bushels. What the condition will be June 1st is purely a matter of conjecture, but we know the damage is progressive, and the area of infection is constantly increasing.

Spring Wheat Conditions.

Conditions in the spring wheat belt of the North-Western States and the Canadian North-West are so similar that they can be considered as a whole. In that section the season is short, and an early seeding and a warm seed bed almost invariably mean a bountiful harvest. This year, however, they have had no spring.

Doubtful Manitoba Harvest.

It is the 15th of May, and in Manitoba the streams and lakes are frozen, and snow is still on the ground. Not 85 per cent. of the fall ploughed land has been seeded, and no spring ploughing has been done. The seed that has been sown has gone into lumpy, frozen soil. At the Government experimental farm at Brandon, wheat has never been seeded later than May 8th prior to this year. A poor seed-time means a doubtful harvest, and in Manitoba it not only means a doubtful harvest, but undoubtedly frosted wheat.

Sown With Difficulties.

In North Dakota probably seventy per cent. of the wheat land has been seeded under conditions not quite as unfavorable as in the Canadian North-West, but during a season when every other day brought a blizzard and every night froze the seed bed solid. The wheat has been sown in this kind of a bed over sixty per cent. of the wheat area, but on the 15th of May not a seed has germinated, and it rests in a cold seed bed, waiting for sunshine and seasonable rains to start its growth.

Prospective Results.

There is one thing sure, the hundreds of thousands of acres unseeded wheat land throughout the north-western States and the Canadian North-West will not raise a bushel of wheat this season, and that which is seeded will need the most favorable of seasons to produce even a semblance of a crop. Whatever small surplus Manitoba may raise over its own seed and food requirements will no more than make good the great shortage in Eastern Canada, where Ontario has lost fifty per cent. of its winter wheat crop, and where the rest is weak and unpromising. East of the surplus wheat states, through Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, the wheat crop is a partial failure, and probably does not at the present time promise over 65 per cent. of an average yield. Further west the Pacific Coast States have had bad floods and inopportune rains, and present conditions do not promise any surplus over local needs.

COMPANY SUED FOR A QUARTER MILLION

New York, May 18.—Dr. Chalmers Prentice, of Chicago, announced to the press last night that he had instituted suit against the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, demanding damages in the sum of $250,000 because the master of Koenigen-Louise of that line caused the burial at sea of the body of the plaintiff's wife. The papers in the case, Dr. Prentice said, had been served on the agents of the steamship company.

Mrs. Prentice, who was in ill health, was a passenger, homeward bound from Naples, on the Koenigen-Louise, when she was stricken with a fatal illness and died April 27. Against the protest of her daughter, who accompanied her, the body of Mrs. Prentice was buried at sea. Later the captain explained that such immediate disposition of the body was imperative because of sanitary reasons.

London is certainly the metropolis of folo and is proud of her prowess and power. Nowhere in the whole wide world can better ponies be seen, better games enjoyed, or finer players be produced. It is a proud boast, but a pleasing one.—Field

Busy Men Need Relaxation.

Music is the antidotte for brain fatigue, and spent nervous energy. It balances the scale; it takes the mind away from business; it is soothing, restful, pleasing. Many men crave good music, but are not in the humor to dress for the opera or theatre, after a busy day.

The Pianola makes available in the home practically all the music there is, and best of all, it bestows the ability to personally produce it—anyone can play the Pianola.

You know how much benefit you get from listening to music; but:

You probably don't know how much greater the benefit, not to speak of the pleasure, of personally producing it.

If the dealer or salesman who represents any of the many imitations of the Pianola is too dishonest to admit, or too ignorant to know that the Metrostyle and the Themodist are exclusive with the Pianola, and are the great improvements in Piano-player construction that the critics have been waiting for, you need but call at Nordheimer's, where these marvellous instruments are in daily demonstration to the public, irrespective of any intention to purchase, and hear the difference between the Pianola and the host of other Piano-players.

IN THE REALM OF BOOKS

Books of the Week Reviewed

John Glynn.

By Arthur Patterson. (New York: Henry Holt & Co.)

This "novel of social work"—readers must not be frightened by the name,—is, we think, the most absorbing volume of fiction that has been lately published. It was first issued in London by the Macmillan Company, but was copyrighted in April by the New York firm of Henry Holt. The volume is dedicated to Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, whose keen social interest in the "slums" of London is well known. The identity of a really existing society for the amelioration of the poor of East London is thinly veiled under the title of "The Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor," or more briefly, "S.I.C.P.," as it was marked on the door of the central office. The scene is laid in a part locally known as "the Nile"—a district where, twenty years ago, the smartest cracksman in the metropolis lived or found refuge, where the receivers of stolen goods abounded, and where in adjacent thoroughfares pickpockets plied their nimble trade almost under the eyes of the police. It was here that Dick Brabant, who had for some time labored in the vineyard of Relton, adjacent to "the Nile," fell in with his old friend, John Glynn, a young Yorkshireman, thirty-two years of age, who had spent ten years in the West of North America, where he had amassed a large fortune, and had returned to London with the deliberate object of working on behalf of those desperate outcasts, who seemed to have little chance of helping themselves, except by making raids on the property of their more fortunate brethren.

Dick offers to introduce his companion to Edward Brooke, the secretary of the society, and also to Evelyn Grey, a clever and beautiful girl, of about five and twenty, the local secretary of the Nile division, with whom he confesses he is deeply in love, but by whom, when he offered her marriage, he had been rejected. These introductions promptly take place, and John has the good fortune to rescue Evelyn from the clutches of a burglar who had seized her cash-box, and might have killed her but for the intervention of her stalwart visitor from the western territories of North America. These two characters, Evelyn and John, play the principal parts in the development of a squalid story, which shows how many who have been bred in London's darkest haunts live, and think, and act—crime dogging the heels of poverty at every step. The king of the criminals, a "modern Fagin," as he is aptly termed, has most of the desperadoes under his thumb, inasmuch as, when they are "in extremis," he lends them money at exorbitant interest that it takes them a long time to pay. Some of the critics think that the villain of the drama is too villainous to be true to nature, and that many of the chief incidents are too melodramatic. There is, however, plenty of common-sense in the story, which, in its course, furnishes us with useful information about East End pauperism and criminality, in a more entertaining form than that of a formal report or blue book on the question. We will not spoil the reader's interest by even a slight outline of the plot. The book is sure to be eagerly read, and displays throughout its pages the author's high powers of description. The London Academy selects for special notice the account of the fight without gloves (the prize for which is the championship of the Nile) between Glynn and Tom Symes, the milkman prize-fighter. The critic declares that it is "worthy of comparison with Conan Doyle's magnificent 'Croxley Master,' or even with the more famous contest in the 'Amazing Marriage.'" John, knowing that his friend Dick has been several times rejected positively by Evelyn, falls in love with her himself, and is on the point of proposing marriage to her, when Brabant informs him that he is going to try his chance once more with the obdurate heroine. Accordingly, he leaves the field to his friend in a self-sacrificing manner, until when he is on the point of returning to America, Evelyn informs him that Brabant has at last acquiesced in his fate, and the two genuine lovers, who have been playing at cross-purposes, are at last united for life. The Spectator ends its review by a slightly disparaging remark, that "the good white people are too good, and the bad people too black in the story," but it adds: "no one can deny that this is the way to produce a highly sensational picture, and that the grey of ordinary human character is utterly useless for the purpose of melodrama."

Mr. Perkins of Portland.

By Ellis P. Butler. (Toronto: The Copp, Clark Co.)

This is a book of an entirely different style and calibre from "John Glynn." It consists of eight stories gathered together from American magazines, and from the first page to the last is extravagantly farcical. The author of "Pigs Is Pigs" rivals in his recklessness the quaint productions of Mark Twain's exuberant fancy and it cannot be denied that the impossible adventures of Mr. Perkins in the unlimited field of advertising are as ludicrous as can be imagined. The book is full of comical situations, and is admirably suited for those who admire what are called "side-splitting stories." The account of the fabulous sums of money that Mr. Perkins and his accomplices made by wholesale advertising of anything and everything, is, in the phrase of Horace, 'splendide mendax,' magnificently false, and the most sober-minded reader who meets with the volume will be astounded at Mr. Butler's audacity. "The Adventure in Automobiles" and "The Adventure of the Crimson Cord" are perhaps the most amusing of the narratives, after we have read the history of Mr. Perkins in the first chapter.

The American Idea.

By Lydia K. Commander. (N.Y.: Barnes & Co. 1907.)

The question discussed in this new sociological work is: "Does the determination of the American people to establish a small family ideal point to race suicide, or to race development?"

The writer dedicates her treatise, which she calls "a sincere study of a grave social problem," to Theodore Roosevelt, "who first aroused the nation to the danger of 'race suicide,' and who has been the only American President to recognize officially the supreme importance of those questions that directly concern the family and the home."

The book contains eleven carefully written chapters, in which the "pros" and the "cons" of the question discussed are clearly stated. The author gives us 284 pages of original work, and the remaining fifty pages are made up of a valuable "Appendix," citing quotations from trustworthy sources, and a "Bibliography." Mrs. Commander is entitled to the highest commendation for the time and trouble she must have spent in producing so elaborate a disquisition. The substance of her book is mainly first-hand material gathered from the great representative body of the ordinary men and women of the country. In the course of three years' observation, research and interview, any one of the chapters is worthy of an article from the pen of any conscientious journalist in the States, Great Britain, or Canada.

Nineveh and Other Poems.

By George S. Viereck. (Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. 1907.)

Mr. Viereck tells us that his father was a German and his mother an American, and that, though many of his poems were originally written in English, some of them were composed in German and then translated into English. He seems to be more than usually interested in himself and his verses, and demands that "each of my poems must be judged by whatever intrinsic value it may possess. It must also be judged as a whole. It must be viewed from one narrow angle of vision—moral, aesthetic, or philosophic. . . . The pieces have one quality in common, which, for lack of a better name, I should like to term finality of expression. That is, they solve without a remainder the equation between thought and utterance. They express, with supreme aptitude, finally and for all time, some mundane experience, some note in the infinite scale. No later poet can add to them, or detract. Their impressiveness is enduring, their vitality ultimate." This, of course, is very high praise, but we seem to recollect an old saying that "self praise is no recommendation." At all events, Mr. Viereck has the courage of his convictions, and is not afraid of being charged with egotism. The author adds: "If I am right, I have extended the borderland of poetry into the domain of music on the one side and into that of the intellect on the other. The new form—new in that it has never before been consciously applied—brings into play hidden possibilities of speech, and enables the authentic poet to multiply rhymes and rhythmic effects without straining the sense."

In preference to daring to criticize poems announced with so loud a blare of trumpets, the present critic will content himself, and probably also the author, with quoting the following verdict of James Huneker in the North American Review: "Mr. Viereck's poems are shot through with the splendors of Heine, Swinburne and Keats."

The Cruise of the Yacht Dido.

By Charles G. D. Roberts. Illustrated. (The Copp-Clark Co., Toronto. 1907.)

This volume is a welcome addition to the "Cosy Corner Series," and is sure of a wide circulation, because it is written by a favorite of the public, Mr. Charles Roberts, author of "The Kindred of the Wild," "The Watchers of the Trails," "Red Fox," and many other popular stories.

The present book is "A Tale of the Tide Country," and the narrative is so vivid that even those who have never visited the district described will lay down the volume with a very clear conception of the difficulties encountered by the yacht Dido, a shad-boat built with careful enthusiasm by its owner Reuben (or Reube) Dare, the intimate chum of Will Carter, who, after two years of college life, was, when the story begins, home for the summer vacation. Reube's keenest ambition was also to "put himself through college," but the poverty of the widowed mother—there are many widows in that land of sailors and fishermen—had sternly stood in his way. Reube's mother suffered from an affection of the eyes, and her son was anxious above all things that she should visit Boston or New York to consult the best oculists, to raise money for this laudable purpose was the chief reason for the building of the Dido, by which, during the shad season, he hoped to gain the requisite funds. While the two bosom companions were discussing the classically named yacht, the "Mauvais sujet" of Westcock—Mart Gandy—the hereditary enemy of the Dare family, was sighted by the two young men. He was never quite sober, and in the spring had, from petty spite, shot one of Reube's finest sheep. The quarrel between Gandy and Dare's family had begun about some land that Mart's father had wrongfully enclosed, as it really belonged to Mr. Dare. A lawsuit settled the matter in favor of the true owner, and the Gandy family never forgave the winner of the suit. When, therefore, Reube and his friend found that the Dido, which had been carefully anchored, was now adrift, a mile from where they could see her, the misfortune was at once attributed to the malice of Mart. The interest of the volume centres in the recovery of the yacht after considerable trouble, and the conviction and confession of the dastardly drunkard, Gandy. Instead of getting him sent to jail for his numerous crimes, Reube, seconded by Will Carter, acts the part of a good Christian, and by their leniency and kindness the two soften the heart of the old villain, who becomes a converted character, abandons all his evil ways, and thenceforth devotes years of loyal devotion to the service of the two friends who had taught him a new knowledge of the human heart. There is a pleasing episode in the volume, which relates how Will and Reube in their wanderings discovered in an old forgotten cave a blue jar filled with golden Louis, and a large number of Spanish pieces. The division of this treasure-trove adds to their pleasure, and enables Reube to send his mother to Boston for the best medical advice. There are seven clever illustrations.

British North America. 1. The Far West, the Home of the Salish and Dene.

By C. Hill-Tout. With 33 illustrations. Copp-Clark Co., Toronto).

This volume belongs to the series entitled "The Native Races of the British Empire," which is intended to supply in handy and readable form the news of those who wish to learn something of the life of the uncivilized races of the British Empire. It will serve the purpose equally of those who remain at home, and of those who fare forth into the world, and come in personal contact with peoples in the lower stages of culture. The present book contains a map of British North America, in which the linguistic stocks of the native Indians are carefully noted. Thirty-three admirably executed full-page engravings from photographs by the best artists add considerable interest to the twelve long chapters of the volume.

Both the races described by Mr. Hill-Tout, viz., the Salish and the Dene (with acute accents on each "e") possess, and (according to the best authorities) live up to, a lofty code of ethics, with a classification of virtues and vices, which is almost exactly Christian. The author's knowledge of the Salish especially is evidently of the most intimate nature, and we acquire from his book a quantity of detailed information, pleasantly conveyed, of their ways of life and thought, together with discussions, based on knowledge of first hand, of such subjects as "totemism" (that is, a vast social system of alternate obligation and restriction), and spirit religion. The inland Salish, as also the Dene, living the lives of hunters in the mountains and plains, instead of "squatting" in canoes and devouring easily-caught fish, have the wiry lissom figures seen in the hunting-tribes farther south and east; but, unlike many of the latter—and still more unlike the red man in Cooper's fictions—the British North American Indians are deplorable cowards. They are universally declared to be "timid, pusillanimous, and cowardly," and when an affair of honor has to be settled, even among warriors, they find sufficient satisfaction in a mere wrestling bout, in which hair-pulling is the chief mode of attack. When one man takes a fancy to another man's wife, he challenges the husband to a wrestling-match, when, should he prove the victor, the woman "ipso facto" becomes his property.

The dark spot in the picture drawn of the Indian tribes by Mr. Hill-Tout is the terrible rapidity in which they are disappearing; for it seems that their numbers now are little more than one-tenth of what they were when the white men first visited them, scarcely more than a century ago. The author tells us all about their habitations, dress and personal adornments, food and cooking, basketry and bark vessels, implements of war and the chase, religious beliefs and practices, social customs, folk-lore and myths; and, in fact, describes them picturesquely from the cradle to the grave. The book is trustworthy as the result of many years' personal observation. V

Archbishop O'Brien: Man and Churchman.

By Katherine Hughes. (Ottawa: The Rolla L. Crain Company.)

This book written by his niece, Miss Katherine Hughes, was not undertaken so much to chronicle the literary works of the late Archbishop O'Brien, as to portray the inner life of the man, out of which these works proceeded. Many men and women had known him and read his writings; many had admired, and, perhaps, loved him, having frequently come in social contact with him, but, nevertheless, there was something in his personality, apparent most to those who knew him best—an exquisite aloofness of soul, that, notwithstanding broad human sympathies, held its inner self apart from the world, for God alone.

Miss Hughes quotes a passage from Dr. Ireland's "Life of Sir Henry Vane," which she fails to understand as an acknowledged truth. The passage is this: "The very purity of a great man's life may detract from its interest." This seems to her unreasonable and incorrect. Why should the biography of Matthew Arnold appeal to readers with less interest than that of the reckless Lord Byron? It is not right that this should be so, and the fault is in the reader, who likes melodrama, not in the tranquil life of the man of letters. The facts of the Archbishop's life are soon told. He came of a good Irish family, and was born at Grovehill College, New Glasgow, P. E. I., on May 4th, 1843. In the autumn and winter of 1905 he planned a visit to Rome, being desirous of offering the tribute of his filial obedience to Pope Pius. But God disposes, though man proposes. In February he had an attack of rheumatism, but on March 9th attended an examination at St. Mary's Gort School, Halifax. In the afternoon of March 9th he returned to rest suffering from indigestion; but later assured his sister and his niece, who was his constant attendants, that he was better. At half-past ten she spoke to him, and he said that the pain was hard to bear. She then went to bring him some medicine that had been prescribed. He did not take it, but was silent, and, while he lay like one in a deep sleep he passed away imperceptibly.

Miss Hughes reproduces a tribute to her beloved uncle's memory, taken from a leading editorial of the Wesleyan, the official organ of the Methodist Church in Canada. It concludes thus: "He was a great ecclesiastical statesman, beloved by the people of all denominations for his purity of motives, broad outlook on affairs, and sterling character. His ability was recognized by his election as president of the Royal Society of Canada; but greater than the gifts of his mind and the grace of his culture was the genius of his heart, for he was a man who loved even the unlovely, as he was ever the friend of the poor. We mourn the loss of a saint and a scholar, and we drop a flower upon his coffin, for he was worthy of our love, and of the best that we can give." This praise, coming from a Protestant clerical journal, must have comforted the Archbishop's numerous friends in their sad bereavement.

A Strong Man's Vow.

By Joseph Hocking. (Toronto: Copp. Clark Co., 1907).

Rossini Keverne, a youth of nineteen, who had grown up half-starved and neglected by his clever but lazy father, the village tinker, attended the feast given by the Earl of Cornwall to celebrate his daughter's seventeenth birthday. Frightened by the sudden appearance of what was to her a terrible-looking creature, Lady Beatrice, with fear and loathing, expressed in looks and actions, withdrew from the sight of the uncouth Rossini, who gazed at her as if her beauty was angelic. He slouched away, but in his heart he registered a vow so wild that it seemed impossible. He now entered upon the crisis of his life. Determined to conquer this hitherto unknown world, he realized but one thing, that he must have knowledge. Through the friendship of a young dissenting minister, Hugh Harwood, the path to knowledge is disclosed. The ragged, ungainly youth conquered every task that was set before him, and in nine months had gained what most men would have taken nine years to acquire. A book on biography revealed the bent of his mind. Like Stephenson and Watt, he must be an engineer. An opportunity soon arose, and was eagerly seized, for the engineer who had planned a great bridge upon which Rossini was working as a laborer, fell ill, and no one could continue his work. Our hero, to the amazement of the other engineers, completed a draft of the plans, and the bridge was built. From this time onward success was certain. The young engineer's great work was the erection of a lighthouse upon Black Rock, an undertaking of stupendous difficulty. This brought him into contact with Lord Penwithen, who was a member of the Board of Admiralty and Lady Beatrice begged her father to invite to Penwithen the now famous engineer. Rossini accepted the second invitation, and in a most dramatic scene he tells Lady Beatrice the story of his great love for her. She admires strength above every other attribute of manhood, and nothing but her pride of race causes her to refuse to become his wife. Then another element enters, — that of friendship and gratitude; for Rossini learns that Hugh Harwood, now Sir Hugh, is a suitor for Lady Beatrice's hand. He urges his plea no longer and seeks to forget his life in his work. While he was building the lighthouse his life had been saved by Mary Fletcher, his foreman's beautiful daughter. She now risks her own life to warn him by informing him that her father had planned the destruction of the lighthouse to revenge himself for having been previously conquered by Rossini in a struggle. Fletcher attempts to murder the engineer but Mary nurses him back to life. He thinks only of Lady Beatrice, and makes no effort to regain his strength and vigor. The doctor says he must be roused, and Mary brings to his side the woman of whom she had heard so much during his delirium; for she is not the wife of Sir Hugh, as Rossini had believed. All interest now centres upon Mary's love for Rossini, and his infatuation for Lady Beatrice. The two women form as striking a contrast as their rank, life and fortune could well present. What was the outcome of the meeting, and the fulfilment of Rossini Keverne's vow the story itself must disclose.

Notes and Queries

"Know Thyself."

R. Fraser, of Westville, N.S., writes: "In the Star of April 20 a quotation (in the sermon on compulsory education), 'Know thyself' is attributed to Socrates. Kindly answer in the column of 'Notes and Queries' who the author is. Should it not be Thales?"

I am afraid that at this period of the world's age it is impossible to affiliate this venerable Greek apothegm, aphorism, adage, or whatever else we may choose to call it, on any particular wiseacre. In my opinion it is a much overrated maxim, and it does not make a pin's difference who was the originator of the dictum. All that we positively know is that the "wise saw" was inscribed in gold letters over the portico of the Temple at Delphi. Mr. H. T. Riley, of Clare College, Cambridge, who has edited in a very creditable manner Bohn's "Dictionary of Latin and Greek Quotations, Proverbs and Mottoes" (now published by George Bell & Sons), informs us that "it has been ascribed to Pythagoras, Chilo, Thales, Cleobulus, Bias and Socrates. It has also been attributed to Phemonoe, a mythical Greek poetess of the ante-Homeric period."

Figendum, et memori tractandum pectore."

That is to say: "'Know thyself' descended from Heaven—a maxim to be impressed on and pondered in thy mindful heart." Cicero, in his "Tusculan Disputations," 1.1.22.52, wrote: "Quum, igitur, 'nosce te'dicit, noc dicit,' Nosce animum tuum; nam corpus quasi vas est, aut aliquod animi receptaculum; ab animo tu quidquid agitur, id agitur a te'." In English this means: "When the God says 'Know thyself,' he means 'know thy own mind'; the body being, as it were, the vessel and recepticle of the mind, so that whatever is done by your mind is done by yourself.

Pope, in his "Epistle II," line 1, writes:

"Know then thyself—presume not God to scan—
The proper study of mankind is man."

Pope, who borrowed from anybody and everybody when it suited him, took "know thyself" from the Delphic Oracle, and pilfered his second line from Charron's treatise, "De la Sagesse," Lib. 1, chapt. 1: "La vraye science et le vray etude de l'homme, c'est l'homme."

After all, most men and women know far more about themselves than some moralists profess to believe, and I am by no means certain that they feel happier for their intimate acquaintance with what is called "the hidden soul." Dr. Johnson once said: "In ancient days the most celebrated precept was 'know thyself'; in modern times it has been supplanted by the more fashionable maxim, 'Know thy neighbor, and everything about him.'"

I would dearly love to read a sermon by the inimitable Mark Twain on the text "Know Thyself," but perhaps enough has now been said to satisfy my correspondent. I may, however, add in conclusion two quotations. One is from Owen Meredith (Lord Lytton) on the two words, "Know myself," and runs thus: "Only by knowledge of that which is not thyself, shall thyself be learned"; and the other is from Schiller's "Votur Tablets, the Key":

"Wouldst thou know thyself, observe the actions of others;

The Pronunciation of "Convalescent."

C. J. H., Palace street, writes: "In conversation with a friend, he mentioned that a mutual acquaintance 'had gone to a convalescent home,' pronouncing the 'a' short. On enquiring I find a considerable number of people here do so, including a school teacher, who says that it is correct to pronounce it with a short 'a' when you speak of 'a convalescent home,' but with a long 'a' when you say that 'a man is convalescent.' Is there any authority for this change of pronunciation of the same word? In Liverpool (England) we pronounced it always with 'a' long."

I am not quite sure that I understand my correspondent's meaning. But if I do, he is of opinion that "val" in the word "convalescent" is pronounced "vale." I canot agree with him. "Convalescent," whether we use it as an adjective or a noun, is pronounced in one way only, and that is "con-val-es-cent," with the emphasis on the third syllable. "Convalesco," I regain or recover my health, is a common inceptive verb in classical Latin, and is derived from the simpler form "convaleo." The stem "val" is found in a Sanscrit word which means "strength, power," and in every English term in which it occurs, it is pronounced "val," and nothing else. Take for example the word "val-e-dic'-tion, and val-e-dic'tory," both noun and adjective; "val-id," strong, and its opposite, "in-val-id," having no effect, or without value, weight or cogency. There is a noun, "in-val-id," a sickly person, but the "a" is, of course, short even in that. "In-val-i-date" is the verb, and in-val-u-a-ble," priceless, are pronounced in the same way. So are "val'or," or "val'id," "val'-iant," "val'-en-tine," "val'-e-ri-an" the plant all-heal, the root of which is used in medicine, and "val'-e-tu-di-na'-ri-an," sickly or weak.

There are three verbs, "avail, countervail, and prevail," all derived from the Latin "valere," to be strong, which are spelled "vail" as being more euphonious than "val." But even "prevail" gives us the adjective "prevalent," containing the original stem "val."

I may say more, but I think that it is not necessary. I am aware, that, as Butler tells us in his "Hudibras," Part III., Canto III., line 243:

"He that complies against his will,
Is of his own opinion still."

But I hope, and believe, that in this particular case, C. J. H. will allow that I am right in what I have written about "val." By the bye, Butler's couplet is almost always incorrectly quoted, as

"The man convinced against his will
Is of the same opinion still."

This, of course, is nonsene. If a man is really convinced, he would be an idiot to cling to his former erroneous opinion.

There is No Such Verb as "To Bath."

Grace Wright, Sorel, asks: Will you kindly tell me if the word "bath" is incorrect in the following sentence: In speaking of a lady bathing her infant, it was said, "She is afraid to bath it." I know the word "bathe" is proper," but I have heard the other also, and would like to know if it is incorrect.

When we have the verb "to bathe," used both transitively, as in the phrase, "to bathe a child," i.e., to wash as in a bath; and intransitively, as meaning "to take a bath," it seems folly to make the noun "bath" do double duty.

It cannot be justified on the analogy of the noun "tub," which sometimes means a receptacle for bathing water, and the verb "to tub," to take a bath in a tub." "Tubbing" is scarcely a lady-like phrase, and has a suspicion of slang about it; but when I was at Oxford we all spoke of "tubbing and rubbing" after rowing on the Isis, or after a long walk or run. The dictionaries make no mention of "bath" as a verb, and I see no reason for its existence when we have the more pleasing form "bathe."

Meaning of "'Sdeath."

J. A. C., Caledonia, N.S., asks: Would you kindly let me know what the meaning is of "'sdeath,' used in Tennyson's "Princess," by Arac, seven or eight times, I think.

In the "Princess," section V., "the genial giant, Arac," as he is called, uses the interjection, "'sdeath!" six times. It is an interjection, used to express any strong feeling, such as surprise, indignation, impatience, anger, etc., and is said to have been a favorite exclamation of Queen Elizabeth. It occurs only once in Shakespeare's plays, viz., in "Coriolanus," Act. I., Scene I., line 211. It is a corruption or contraction of "God's death," i.e., Christ's death; just as "s'wounds," or more commonly "zounds," represents "God's wounds," viz., those that Christ suffered on the Cross. These covert oaths were used in olden times to avoid the penalties of Acts of Parliament against profanity.

"She Nodded to Me."

"M. E. Y. asks for the poem, "She Nodded to Me." I believe the poem refers to an old lady and Queen Victoria." This request appeared in the Star of May 11th, and I have received answers to it from many correspondents, to whom my thanks are hereby tendered. I here give their names, and subjoin the verses in question.

"And falling, call to those behind,
"Play up, play up! play the game,"

L. Johnson (18th ave., Lachine), sends a manuscript copy, and so does a lady who signs herself merely "S. (Sherbrooke Quebec). Miss C. B. H. (Hamilton), who sends a printed version. H. Massey (775 St Urbain street), sends a hand-written copy, and so does E. M. N. (982 Dorchester street); so also does C. D. Leney (Dorchester street). Kate Davidson (104 R. street, Point St. Charles), sends a manuscript copy, while George K. Lanigan (5 Lorne crescent), encloses a handwritten edition, and L. Murphy (43 McGill College avenue), a typewritten copy, that I send to the printers.

SHE NODDIT TO ME.

I'm but an auld body
Livin' up in Deeside,
In a two-room'd bit hoosie
Wi' a toffa' beside.
Wi' my coo and my grumphy
I'm as happy's a bee,
But I'm far prooder noo
Since she noddit to me!

I'm nae sae far past wi't—
I'm gie trig and hail—
Can plant two-three tawties,
An' look after my kail;
An' when oor Queen passes
I'm oot to see,
Gin by luck she micht notice,
And nod oot to me!

But I've aye been unlucky,
And the blinds were aye doon
Till last week the time
O' her veesit cam' roon',
I waved my bit apron
As brisk's I could dae,
An' the Queen lauch'd fu' kindly
An' noddit to me!

My son sleeps in Egypt—
It's nae eese to freit—
An' yet when I think o't
I'm sair like to greet.
She may feel for my sorrow—
She's a mither, ye see—
An' may be she kent o't,
When she noddit to me!

"Play the Game"—A Poem.

Accompanying this is a copy of "Play the Game," by Henry Newbolt. This, I think, is the poem asked for by "Noel" in the Star of May 4th, 1907. The poem, I believe, was a favorite one of the late Dr. Drummond. Until I saw the poem in the last (May) number of the Educational Review, published in St. John, N. B., I was not familiar with it nor with the name of the author — Henry Newbolt.

(DR.) J. W. T. PATTON.

Truro, N. S.

PLAY THE GAME.

There's a breathless hush in the close to-night—
Ten to one an dthe match to win—
Pumping pitch and a blinding light,
An hour to play and the last man in.
And it is not for the sake of a ribboned coat,
Or the selfish hope of a season's fame,
But his captain's hand on his shoulder smote—
"Play up, play up! and play the game!"

The sand of the desert is sodden red,
Red with the wreck of the square that broke—
The Gatling's jammed and the colonel dead,
And the regiment blind with dust and smoke,
The River of Death has brimmed its banks,
And England's far, and Honor a name;
But the voice of a schoolboy rallies the ranks:
"Play up, play up! and play the game!"

This is the word that year by year,
While in her place the school is set;
Every one of her sons must hear
And none that hear it dare forget.
This they all with joyful mind,
Bear through life like a torch in flame,
And falling fling to the host behind:
"Play, up, play up! and play the game!"
—Henry Newbolt.

I have the same answer as Dr. Patton's from "Margaret C." (Dunham, Quebec), and other correspondents, and I hereby return my thanks to them all for their courtesy. One correspondent, who does not give his name, writes that "It is from a poem by the late Dr. Drummond." He is evidently wrong.

Wanted, "The Highland Man's Toast."

A lady writes to me as follows: "I have the verses, but cannot at the moment put my hands on them. Please publish the words of the song 'The Highland Man's Toast.'"

W. T. Stead's Nationality.

F. Mc., Monteral, asks: 1. Of what nationality is W. T. Stead? 2. How long did he live in the United States? 3. Do you know if he ever took out naturalization papers in that country?

William Thomas Stead was born in England in 1849, his father having been a Congregational minister. He went to work when fourteen years of age, and in 1871 became editor of a paper, since when he has occupied a conspicuous position in the journalistic life of England. He spent three months in jail as the result of an exposure of white slavery in London in 1885. He has made several visits to the United States, but only of short duration, and there is no record of his having foresworn his British allegiance.

William Henry Drummond.

(Died April 6th, 1907.)

Man ne'er had kindlier comrade,
Nor earth more noble son,
Earth's peoples truer singer,
Than he whose race is run.

He has crossed that last dread portage,
This valiant voyageur;
That place of the lonely mountains,
That valley where all must fare.

Not in the haunted even,
With faltering steps and slow;—
But in the noontide high and bright,
When life was all aglow.

With his burden of hope on his shoulders,
Wending where all must wend;—
He came to that shoreway, dim, where earth's Longings and sorrowings end.

And the folk of the homely patois
Will know his genius no more;
And the joyous heart of the outdoor world
Is lost to open and shore.

And "Leetle Lac Grenier" all alone,
Out on the mountain brow;
You may call in vain to the heart so still,
O, who will love you now?

And the peasant folk in the evenings glad,
Their simple loves may tell;
And all in vain may ring again
The bells of San Michel.

For out on the shining water
He has launched the shadow canoe;
With Love, and the soul of his little dead son,
His paddlemen safe and true.

But here on the shores behind him,
Where the manly heart is still;
He leaves a vacant place in our song
No other singer can fill:—

He, who gave us, so joyous,
Amid all our doubtings and fears,
Those heart-deep songs of a people,
Brimming with laughter and tears.
— Wilfred Campbell.

Toronto, Ont., May 18.—Professor A. M. Soule, a native of Wentworth county, and a graduate in 1893 of the Ontario Agricultural College, has just been appointed to take charge of the agricultural work of the State of Georgia. A new agricultural college is being built at Athens.

WIDOW OF YERKES DIVORCED

Has Obtained Interlocutory Degree From Youthful Husband.

New York, May 18.—Mrs. Adelaide Yerkes-Misner, widow of Charles T. Yerkes, the millionaire traction promoter of Chicago and London, was granted an interlocutory degree of divorce from her youthful husband, Wilson Misner, yesterday. By the terms of the decree, Mrs. Yerkes-Misner may resume her maiden name, and may re-marry should she choose to.

The marriage of the wealthy widow and the young Californian many years her junior, a few weeks after her husband's death, created wide public interest. Much secrecy surrounded the affair, and it was not until more than a week after the wedding that either Misner or Mrs. Yerkes would admit that a marriage ceremony had been performed.

HUGHES A PUZZLE TO FRIEND AND FOE

A WHITE HOUSE POSSIBILITY.

Special to the Montreal Star.

New York, May 18.—The political problem of the past few days in the metropolis is, of course, whether Governor Hughes has really triumphed in his battles with the State Legislature. Appearances are deceitful in any kind of politics, and they are especially deceitful when it comes to a matter of politics at Albany. It is remarkable that no one has revived the phrase, "Albany Regency" in connection with the situation at the State Capital nowadays. The word "Regency" would undoubtedly fit Republicans like Raines and Democrats like Senator Grady or Senator McCarren. For the people of this city and state learned long ago that there is nothing in politics except bi-partisanship when it comes to matters affecting the interests of the great corporations.

In order to understand just what is happening it is necessary to take into consideration the personal characteristics and the mental make-up of the Governor of the State of New York. He is probably the most sphynx-like man who has been plunged into the cauldron of politics in many a day. In many respects he is even more silent and reserved than General Grant. William R. Hearst has been accused of being a man of mystery, but in many respects he is open as the daylight when contrasted with the man who was his great rival in the late gubernatorial campaign. At any rate his papers have to a greater or less extent made public what he stands for. But it is still a matter of extreme doubt in many things where the present governor of the Empire State stands. During the last campaign it was remarked that most men nominated for a high office have something in the way of orations and speeches that will tend to throw light upon character—if only a few boyhood essays. In the case of Charles E. Hughes it may be said that here was a man without a speech. Even the incidents regarding boyhood and early manhood which have made the characters of men like Lincoln and Roosevelt so interesting are lacking in Hughes. There are no side lights to his character.

HUGHES NOT A POLITICIAN.

His methods of dealing with the State Legislature have been unique. He has notified each member of the Legislature that the Governor of the State of New York had nothing to buy and nothing to sell, and that he would not make trades with any one, no matter what might be the results. In other words, he has apparently tried to throw the members back upon their own responsibility as members of a legislative body. Where a man like President Roosevelt would have sent for this senator or that senator and would have told them "vote for this bill, or off goes the head of your man" —not in so many words, of course, but in effect, Hughes has wrapped himself in a mantle of gloomy grandeur and quiet dignity, and has refused to trade. In other words, while Hughes may be a great statesman—that remains to be demonstrated—he is certainly nothing of a politician. It is apparent that he would not have lifted a finger to save his Public Utilities bill even if he could have passed the bill with flying colors, simply by sending for one senator and telling that senator if the bill was not passed he would remove one janitor from the capitol building under the patronage of that particular senator.

WHAT THE BILL MEANS.

The question may be asked as to whether the Public Utilities Bill is good, bad or indifferent. That all depends upon whether the Governor of the State of New York is good, bad or indifferent. It may be said to be part of the centralizing process which is going on in the hands of the state as well as the nation. In a general way it may be said that the Public Utilities Bill is to the state what the railway rate agitation last winter was to the nation. The railways get a sop—at least here in New York city—by a legalization of the Interborough merger, watered stock and all. It can readily be seen that the centralization of the power in the hands of the Governor might be a good thing in the hands of a good Governor, and it might be a bad thing in the hands of a bad Governor. However, the people are calling out for relief so far as the matter of the exactions of the railroads are concerned, and if the Public Utilities Bill has no other effect it may have the effect of keeping them quiet while it is being tried and experimented with.

A PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY.

This reticence on the part of Mr. Hughes may make him an available candidate for President, however, in case it is necessary to find a man who can act as a sort of a compromise between the Conservatives and the Radicals. For it is not always that the man with the most pronounced views is the most available candidate before either the convention or the people. It will probably be recalled in this connection that up to the time of the holding of the St. Louis convention, William McKinley absolutely refused to say whether he was for silver or for gold though he made a number of forceful speeches for the gold standard after his nomination and before his election. Still if he had come out for the gold standard prior to the holding of the convention he might not have been available as a candidate. On the other hand, if he had come out for free silver in all probability he would not have been nominated. His very silence appeared to help him. Mr. Bryan has always advocated taking the people into the confidence of a public man, but history is full of illustrations where speech has proved silver—silence golden. Men like Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Stephen A. Douglass, James G. Blaine and many others have undoubtedly talked themselves out of a nomination simply by taking the American public into their confidence. And if President Roosevelt had not taken the American public into his confidence on the night of his triumphant election over Judge Alton B. Parker, who can doubt but that he would once again have been unanimously nominated as the choice of his party?

Hughes is likely to figure to a greater or a less extent in the puzzling presidential possibilities which confront the Republican party. Some of the enthusiastic Taft boomers have even suggested that Taft and Hughes would prove a winning ticket, but if that man exists who has dared to suggest a thing like that to the Governor there is at least no record of it. Under certain circumstances it is probable that Mr. Hughes could secure the New York delegation and with the New York delegation behind him as its choice for President no one can deny that he would prove a powerful factor at the next Republican convention.

WOMEN'S WORK and INTERESTS

MY LADY'S BOOK-SHELF

A Fascinating Personality.

All women who enjoy a good biography or volume of letters should read Elizabeth Bisland's collection of the letters of Lafcadio Hearn. Much has been said and written about this extraordinary man since his death last year, but a short resume of the main features of his life may be of interest. His father was an Irish officer and his mother a Greek girl. Returning to Ireland when he was a child, his father obtained a divorce from his Greek wife and re-married. Lafcadio was passed on to a relation who led a gloomy and lonely life, the only consolation of which was her intense devotion to her religion. Roman Catholicism did not appeal to Lafcadio and upon the death of this relation he was left penniless, while yet a mere youth. Straying out to America he began a roaming life, wandering from city to city, obtaining a precarious living as a journalist. Always of delicate health, the warmer climate of the south appealed to him more and more. Finally he went to Japan, where he settled permanently and became a naturalized Japanese. He also married a Japanese woman and entered into the most intimate knowledge of the strange ways of this peculiar people.

To obtain any idea of the charm of this curious man it is necessary to read his letters. He had an insatiable longing for knowledge, especially knowledge out of the beaten track. Handicapped by the loss of one eye and extreme weakness of the other, combined with poor health, he yet managed to do a wonderful amount of work. Morbidly sensitive, self-depreciating, jealous and peculiar, he had not many friends, but those he did have were bound to him by the strongest ties. The study of a personality has always tremendous interest, and that of Lafcadio Hearn is quite out of the ordinary.

Curious Japan.

There is no nation at present attracting so much attention as Japan. A few years ago it was looked upon as simply a land of geishas and chrysanthemums, a fit setting for a comic opera. Now the civilized world is beginning to realize the terrific force of character which characterizes the little yellow man of the East.

In Lafcadio Hearn's books on Japan we get a most intimate knowledge of this curious people. Their devotion to country and Emperor, their rigid observance of ancestor worship, their absolute fearlessness of death, their curious religious observances form the principal topics of his books.

Of particular interest to those who read this column are the parts dealing with the position of women in Japan. To say their position is low is to put it mildly. They exist simply and solely for the use and pleasure of men. They are not supposed to have any mind of their own, any opinion of their own, any rights of their own. They must always smile, must always be amiable no matter what provocation they may receive. Hearn writing on "The Eternal Feminine" in "Out of the East," says: "Taking the word 'woman' in its most refined meaning, and postulating a society in which woman seldom appears, a society in which she is never placed on display,' a society in which wooing is utterly out of the question, and the faintest compliment to wife or daughter is an outrageous impertinence, the reader can at once reach some startling conclusions. . . ."

It is difficult to imagine a society where a high class woman kills herself because she has disgraced her family by bearing twins, and where a man on the eve of departure for the war, murders his wife and family so that he will not be deterred in battle by thought of them. These are only a couple of incidents taken from Hearn's books, which all should read, anteceding them by his life and letters by his friend Elizabeth Bisland.

New England Epitaphs.

Old New England is particularly rich in old time burying grounds, and doggerels (which might be termed farcical, but for the solemnity of death in which they are enshrouded) were used lavishly upon the tombstones. It was an outlet for the genius of the local poets, there being few country papers with their "Poet's Corner" in those old days.

Prostrate upon the bank of the Piscataqua in the Kittery Point, Maine, cemetery, lies a granite block, bearing these words rough hewn by the hand of a member of the only race that could ever perpetuate a bull upon a gravestone:

Bridget and I have two children dear,
One in Ireland and the other here.

John Hall, 1762-1813.
May he rest in peace till we meet again.
His Loving Wife.

FOR THE SELF-CONSCIOUS.

The basis of good manners is self-reliance. Necessity is the law of all who are self-possessed. Those who are not self-possessed obtrude and pain us.

—Emerson.

Design by May Manton.

5644 Tucked Blouse. 5642 Tucked Flounce Skirt.

A DAINTY GOWN OF FOULARD.

There is no material that makes a more thoroughly useful gown than foulard, and it retains its favor season after season in spite of all effects to supersede it. Here is a very attractive, graceful and altogether charming model that shows the material in nattier blue with rings of white, and that is trimmed with black velvet ribbon and with cream colored lace. The color effect is really a delightful one, giving that sensation of coolness that is always to be desired with the coming of warm weather, while the material takes eminently graceful and altogether desirable lines. There are, however, so many pretty stuffs this season that such a gown as this one affords exceptional opportunity for the exercise of individual taste and preference. Among the silks themselves are to be found an infinite number of suitable sorts, ponnees are always desirable for warm weather wear while marquisettes, voile and the like are eminently in vogue and again the model can be utilized for the still simpler cotton and silk and cotton materials with perfect success and propriety. The waist is a novel one that can be made with an entirely separate adjustable yoke or with one that is joined to it and includes distinctive sleeves that are as pretty as they are new. The skirt consists of the straight upper portion and straight flounce, so that it is peculiarly well adapted to washable materials. For the medium size will be required, for the blouse 3¾ yards of material 21, 2¾ yards 36, or 1⅞ yards 44 inches wide, with ⅞ yard of all over lace; for the skirt 11 yards 21, 7 yards 36, or 5½ yards 44 inches wide, with 10 yds. of velvet ribbon.

A May Manton pattern of the waist, No 5644, sizes 32 to 40 inches bust, or of the skirt, No. 5642, sizes 22 to 30 in. waist, will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper on receipt of ten cents for each. (If in haste send an additional two-cent stamp for letter postage, which insures prompt delivery.)

LEAVES FROM A NOKE BOOK

The Standard of Beauty.

The standard of beauty has nothing to do with the beauties in the Standard. This is not saying that the Standard beauties are not according to the standard of beauty, but that this standard varies from country to country and even from mind to mind. To be very vulgar and quote proverbs, "One man's meat is another man's poison." The woman we think lovely, someone else thinks most unattractive; the girl who is classed in this country as a beauty would be put among the plain ones in some other clime. In the Far East excessive fat is a great attraction, while we do everything we can to keep slight. Here we take most painful measures to get rid of any tendency to a moustache, while the women in the island of Yezzo, from which the original inhabitants of Japan are supposed to have come, make up their faces to give the impression of a moustache. This is accomplished by tattoing and a particularly fine piece of work marks a woman as a belle and she is likely to make a good marriage.

At present it is the fashion to wear ear-rings and very pretty and becoming they sometimes are, but what do you say to nose-rings? Logically, there is no reason why nose-rings should not be as pretty as ear-rings, except one would fancy them to be rather in the way, particularly when colds in the head are as prevalent as they have been this spring. Perhaps the peoples who wear nose-rings never suffer from influenza! Then, of course, there is the old question, why is it not just as beautiful to squeeze you feet as it is your waist? We think the Chinese unutterably silly for torturing their pedal extremities while we torture our insides.

The Standard of Beauty! Where is it, and how shall we know it when it is found? The Venus of Milo is often held up as a model, but if we met the lady to-day in a Paris hat and frock, and with her arms, we should think her a great, beefy creature with too pronounced features. Therefore, pretty women take heed and plain women rejoice, if we were to be transplanted to the Antipodes, things would probably be reversed and the plain would be pretty and the pretty plain.

The Lucky Baby.

Of all the babies of to-day the luckiest is not the one who was born in a palace amid the good wishes of the whole world. He was a victim of ceremony even before his birth. His mother, hitherto refused all rights of privacy, must violate all precedent in a land where precedent is inviolable law, if she obtains her wish to nurse him. Swaddled according to statute, he will play by ancient rule and live each moment of his boyhood cramped by etiquette. Other newcomers in the world to-day have no need to envy the Prince of the Asturias.

He is a luckier baby than his cousin of Russia, it is true. Spain is at peace, and, thanks to the United States lopping off of costly colonies, is prospering. His royal papa is popular, and his mother will be more than ever beloved in her adopted country because he has entered upon the scene. As kingly fortunes go, all auguries are favorable on his birthday. But the really lucky babe is the one born in the cottage of the Spanish peasant or the modest home of the commoner in any other land; who will live and fight, and play and love and die, unknown and poor perhaps, but a man among men as many a prince can never be.

The Sin of Dowdiness.

"Dowdiness," so someone said, "is a deadly disease. It has its chief seat in the head outside and inside; and in the neck. To escape it one must avoid the Scylla of a badly arranged neck, and the Charybdis of an untidily unfashionably coiffured head. Dowdies are born, not made; an undue humility has much to answer for, as the typical woman of no importance soon goes to pieces on the rock dowdyism." I read these lines—they set me thinking. To be dowdy nowadays means annihilation to the dowdee.

What, then, does dowdiness consist in? To have one's hair badly done, and one's neckwear ill-arranged only? If so, the poorest of women may easily pull off smartness. A well-dressed woman in society we gave out—"By their heads ye shall know them!" And surely she was right in laying so much stress on a smart coiffure. Another, equally modish, put the question even more neatly in a nutshell—"To be chic, you must bulge in the right places." If one achieves smartness, however, in my humble opinion, one must likewise have a good deal of spare time.

To do the hair really well means a good twenty minutes at the very least; to put on a veil exactly, and just so, requires that infinite pains shall be taken; and besides every little thing that one wears — the very littlest!—ought to be put away with conscientious care, that it should look well on coming out again. Every speck of dust brushed from the hat, the veil folded, the blouse shaken, hung up in the air, then softly folded and with silver paper put into the sleeves, and not less than twenty minutes be devoted to the brushing with soft and hard brushes—selon!—of a coat and skirt which has been worn in the street. Boots and shoes both must be rubbed with some preservative cream, and put on trees every night in the year—or rather, I should any when still warm and just as they leave the foot.

THE HOME MAKERS DEPARTMENT

A May Pole Decoration.

Nothing is prettier or more novel for a May luncheon or dinner than a table decoration consisting of a miniature representation of the old English May Pole.

To make it the carpenter must be called in to fashion a pole three feet high, an inch or more in diameter, its base fastened in so heavy a round of wood that there will be no danger of its toppling over. Then, when it is ready, it is wound from the base to the top with ribbons in alternate colors, pink and white, or pink and rose, preferably, and when the top is reached, a bow is tied; under this, tacked to the top of the pole, are ribbons an inch wide or less, one for each guest. These are drawn lightly down so that they will slightly dip as they descend, and one is fastened in front of each cover, pinned to the cloth. Just before the guests arrive the wooden base of the pole is concealed by a flat mass of pink flowers; pink and white English daisies are loveliest of all for this particular day, and they can be stuck in sand in shallow dishes to support the stems and give the effect of planting; a little green will conceal the dishes. From the top of the pole a few light vines may fall on the ribbons half the way down their length, and where each ribbon is pinned a knot of the daisies with a bit of vine may be fastened. Apple blossoms may be used if daisies cannot be found, or mountain-laurel, but not hothouse flowers, unless others cannot be secured.

Under the ribbons on the table are to be the little dishes of salted nuts, candies, olives, and small iced cakes; candies, used only at dinner in spring, may stand quite outside on the edge of the table; these match the flowers, pink, with pink or rose shades.

Vegetarian Soups.

Now that the vogue of vegetarianism is growing so rapidly a few recipes for vegetable soups may be welcome.

Cauliflower Soup.—Cook a cauliflower, with other vegetables, for three or four hours; an onion stuck with cloves, turnips, celery, carrots, etc. Add salt and pepper, and an hour before serving it, some peeled potatoes. Taste it, and correct the seasoning, and serve it with the vegetables poured over slices of bread. Soupe Maigre. Very Substantial.—Grate two or three potatoes and as many carrots and throw them into a quart of boiling water, with pepper and salt. Cook them over a gentle fire about an hour. Put a quart of hot milk and one or two yolks into the soup tureen; pour the soup in, and add fried bread. The soup should be fairly thick, but transparent. This is enough for six persons. Curried Vegetable Soup.—Cut some carrots, turnips, cauliflower, etc., into fine julienne, and fry them in butter, with an onion cut in rings. Put them in a saucepan with enough water to well cover them, a dozen cloves in a muslin bag, and a dessert-spoonful of curry powder, pepper, and salt. Let them simmer till they are tender, then add some boiled rice. Add Bechamel sauce, or flour mixed smoothly with milk or water, to thicken the liquor, and serve the soup unstrained.

A Children's Party.

For a children's May-day party make a very large cake by this simple rule: half a cup of butter, a cup and a half of sugar, whites of four eggs, half a cup of water, two cups of flour, two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, juice and grated rind of a lemon; beat all five minutes and bake three-quarters of an hour. Ice this prettily, and when it is cold put a long, thick, wooden knitting-needle in the centre, pushing it well in, and wind it with narrow ribbons in two colors; have ready some little jointed dolls dressed in crepe paper, and put a small-headed hatpin down the back of each under the hair; push these pins down into the edge of the cake. Then raise the inner arm of each doll and tie a ribbon to it from the top of the little pole. This cake will make a lovely centrepiece for the party table, for the effect of the gay little dolls dancing among the ribbons will charm the children. At the end give a doll to each child.

For the supper creamed chicken in little paper cases is a good first course served with sandwiches and small cups of cocoa, and, if the children are small enough to appreciate them, animal crackers. Or there might be creamed chicken, with creamed chopped potatoes in the cases.

The ice cream may be a plain white vanilla sliced; or there may be meringue shells filled with the ice cream.

Best of all, in the eyes of the children, are the crackers holding mottoes and paper caps; after these latter are put on there may be a delightful dance about a large May pole.

PRACTICAL FASHIONS

The Wise Use of a Small Income.

With regard to ruches I do not advise the purchaser of these inexpensive materials, a ruche is one of the few articles of dress that need not be of first class material to prove effective. And no matter what one pays dampness spells their ruination, and a second season finds them hopeless. So by all means get one of the smart new ones that are to be had for $3 or $4, and wear it through the next six months to be thrown away with a quiet mind in the autumn. If one of point d'esprit or some desirable material be left over from last year it is possible to manipulate it into chic lines with the addition of bows in among the plaits to support its limpness, but it is not worth while to attempt to knock a tulle one into shape if it has seen any service to speak of. Net or point 'desprit may be cleansed, but this does not put new bone into either.

Smart Parasols.

If exquisitely rare handles, rich lace and hand embroidery are an impossible luxury for one's sunshades, then a girl can at least carry one that is faultless in taste and a symphony of coloring with the frock. Crystal balls and olive shapes mounted with delicately tinted taffetas will answer perfectly for dress occasions, while for morning use a natural wood handle with serviceable colors (not necessarily sombre, however), is above criticism. Bright emerald green, scarlet, sapphire blue, amethyst, coral and nasturtium shades are modish. One can get these for about $3 apiece, well made and in admirable quality of silk. It is hardly advisable to have parasols recovered unless one possesses a handsome handle or a lace cover of value, for in less expensive materials the making exceeds the cost of a new one. Not many are needed altogether, three or four colors at most will tone in with all one's gowns, and it may be possible to manage with fewer, but I advocate this accessory heartily as it gives a finish to the costume that nothing else accomplishes.

Summer Embroidery.

For those who do not play bridge here is a piece of embroidery with which to while away odd moments on the club or hotel piazza during the summer days. Let this be a flounce for a fine cambric petticoat; scallop the edge and work about it some pretty sprig or flower or a conventional wreath or bow knot. The work grows rapidly and the result is sure to be satisfactory. If not a beautiful specimen of hand work there is the knowledge that it will not be too closely viewed. An effective pattern should be chosen.

Fashion Notes.

Spring tailor-mades are showing a tendency towards stripes rather than checks, and it is by no means unusual to see the skirt or both skirt and coat panelled with the material showing the stripe crosswise or bias. In other models, bands are on the bias or cross trim, and have the edges stitched in several rows of the deepest color shown in the material thus reverting to a fashion of ten or more years ago.

The pompon effects in false marabout, which is the fashionable name for short, soft turkey feathers, are among the prettiest possible for school girls' hats, for they are fluffy and decorative to a degree reached by no other plume or feather. A great advantage also is that they have no curl to lose which in our uncertain climate where rain seems to prevail, is a feature worthy of consideration.

Velvet ribbon loops are seen on the bandeaux of many of the new hat models, being substitutes for tulle and maline which have been used so long and satisfactorily for the purpose of softening the line where head and hat meet. The secret is this, that both these materials are exceedingly scarce this season and other effects must be introduced that are becoming and unusual to meet the demand for graceful, soft outlines.

Burnt straws trimmed with Copenhagen blue or emerald green, seem to have captivated the larger portion of the feminine world; they vie with the flower-bedecked hats of natural color straw braids for general chic and becomingness.

FROM OUR READERS.

More About Durham Terrace.

A correspondent signing herself E. L. MacN. sends us a very interesting letter about Dufferin Terrace and its change of name. She says, in part: "Around the old name clustered the most brilliant historical, military and social associations, and it was long before the new one was generally adopted. Even yet its use is hardly universal. Our French citizens desired if any change were made it should be to "Frontenac," and that name has never been quite dropped. Quite recently I saw a letter in one of our dailies reminding people that since the Terrace was really named Dufferin, people should not allow themselves to go on calling it Frontenac."

With regard to the custom of bandplaying on the Terrace, our correspondent encloses a clipping which reads: "Band music on the Terrace commenced early in the season half a century ago, the notice being printed in the newspapers of the 13th of April, 1857, that the band of the 16th Regiment would give a concert on Durham Terrace on the following afternoon, namely, the 14th inst. One is led to suppose that the season must have been further advanced this year than it is to-day."

An Irishman to the Rescue.

Last week we published a letter from an Irish B. A. scolding the Note-book for some remarks on Englishwomen. This week we have another Irishman to the defence of the Note-book. This one signs himself an "American Ph. D." but is also a really true Irishman, having been born near the "banks of that river on which the bells of the Shannon sound so grand on."

We regret we cannot publish his letter in full, but it might instead of clearing the atmosphere, as he thinks, tend to make relations still more strained. Here is part of his gallant defence of the Note-book: "The Note-book, after quoting from the German, asked, 'Are Englishwomen brainless?' She gave their present campaign as proof that they were not. What applies to Englishwomen can fairly well be applied to the women of the British Isles. Have we forgotten how Note-book defended our English sisters against the attacks of Marie Corelli? She would not give even the name of the book or of the author, but bravely defended our sisters nevertheless. Why not face the situation honestly and admit the facts? We of the British Isles, regardless of sex, have not, when we land on American soil, the 'get-up-and-git' and smartness of Americans." The conclusion of his letter is that the German slandered our English sisters, that 'women of the British Isles' be substituted for "Englishwomen," and that the inhabitants of the British Isles are equal intellectually and morally to Canadians and Americans. And this closes the matter, thanking an Irish-American for his kindly letter and brave defence.

Cleaning a Lace Hat.

The Editor of the Woman's Page:

Would you please tell me in one of your columns how I can clean a lace hat without taking it to pieces? It is made of lace about one inch wide.

A DOCTOR'S WIFE.

It is very difficult to clean a lace hat without taking it to pieces. If it is wet the wire is apt to rust. The only possible way seems to be to clean it in gasoline. Fill a bowl, which is large enough to hold the hat, with gasoline, and then put the hat in, letting it stay a few minutes, and then dip up and down in the gasoline. This will take off the greater part of the dirt. The only other way is to take it to some cleaner's, which, if it is a good hat seems the better plan.

STRONGLY OPPOSED TO MOUNTAIN CAR LINE

President of the Hackmen's Union Criticizes Proposal—A Convenience to Loafers, He Says.

In conversation with a Star representative yesterday, Mr. Thomas Thompson' president of the Hackmen's Union, discussed from an interesting point of view the proposed electric car line through Mount Royal Park. He regards the scheme with great disfavor.

"I am not in favor of it," he said. "No, sir, neither is any citizen I know of who has studied the progress, and kept track of the ups and downs of this city, as I have done, for the past thirty years."

"But, if carried through, it will afford the poorer class a means of reaching this beautiful park quickly and at small cost," remarked the Star man.

"Yes," said Mr. Thompson, "it would afford an easy access for numbers of loafers, who at present generally 'hang out' along the water front, and other loose characters to run up there and lie under the trees with a few bottles of rum to keep them company. Why, sir, it would require half the city police force up there to keep order; and our wives and daughters would in a short time become disgusted with what is at present one of the most beautiful pieces of natural scenery in the world.

"No, sir, no railways to the mountain top for me. Keep, if possible, every branch and shrub in its own beautiful and natural state, as it was planted there by the Creator. Keep our cemeteries quiet—quiet 'cities of the dead'—keep it so that the visitors can truly say and feel that he is 'far from the madding crowd.'

"But once you commence to stud it over with trolley poles and wires, and introduce the creaking of wheels and the ding-dong of bells, then our mountain park, the pride of our citizens and the admiration of strangers, as at present, will be no longer its old sweet self, for even the little squirrels will seek out other parts 'where savage grandeur reigns.'

"If you have visited the Adirondacks, sir," continued Mr. Thompson, "you have seen there how those millionaire companies keep their summer resorts as far as possible in their natural state of preservation."

"Do you think promient citizens of Montreal will favor the project?" was asked.

"No, sir," was the reply of this sturdy defender of natural beauty. "They were always against it."

The Civic Library Status.

A meeting of the Civic Library Committee was held yesterday with a view to ascertaining the exact status of the technical library and whether its scope can be enlarged in order to admit classical works of literature. It was shown that the library had not been established by any by-law, but by virtue only of a resolution of the City Council. It was therefore decided to ask the Law Department if the library has a legal status. If not, what procedure it will be necessary to follow to give it legal standing.

THE COAL CARTERS GOT AN INCREASE

The Employers Granted a Dollar a Week More Without Awaiting a Strike.

An era of unrest appears to have set in the local labor world this week. While the longshoremen and their fellows of kindred classes of work, were seeking to gain an increase in pay, carters engaged in the coal trade succeeded in gaining an addition of a dollar a week to their compensation. They were receiving $8 a week, but after a conference their stipend was raised to $9 and this is now the prevailing rate for coal carters. There are 600 men used in that particular service during the present season and in the course of a week's time they handle an average of 10,000 tons of the very dirty but exceedingly useful black fuel product. This time is a busy one although the coal merchants are not rushed and a series of "resignations" would be rather disagreeable to the merchants. At present the work largely consists in moving steam coal to factories and industrial plants. At the moment the individual householder is not a big factor in the coal market so that even if a strike were declared it would not immediately affect the private citizens. However it would hardly be appreciated by consumers who have large plants to run.

The coal merchants employ altogether about four hundred men of the six hundred men now used in carting coal, the other two hundred being employes of the cartage companies. The four hundred are employed with fairly steadiness throughout the year, the men of the cartage companies being used only in busy seasons.

These men have no organization, but as they had passed the word along amongst themselves, they had succeeded in establishing a concentrated effort that would have brought out practically all of their number, a result that would have proved inconvenient to the vendors of coal.

The trade was generally willing to accede to the request of the men, it being generally recognized that the rate of pay is not at all too high. The class of men engaged in the work is not exactly skilled, but it is a dirty, unpleasant occupation and offers very little inducement to a man who can secure any other kind if employment. Like many other unpleasant occupations, it is a necessary one, and the trade and consumers are well pleased that this embryonic strike was settled quickly and satisfactorily.

Long Feud Ended in Bloodshed.

A long-standing feud between two clans of Antrim families had a tragic sequel the other day in Cushendall Courthouse, when two men, named Delargy, were remanded, charged with the murder of a middle-aged farmer named James McAuley. Leaving church after mass one Sunday, two younger representatives of the hostile parties fought on the roadside, but were separated. In the evening, however, the quarrel was renewed, and a terrible melee ensued, in which members of each family (men and women) engaged. One of the accused, it is alleged, wielded the hammer to such effect that the deceased's skull was crushed in like an egg shell, several other combatants being seriously injured.

The impulse came from Percy Darrow and his idle talk of voodoos. As usual he was directing his remarks to the sullen Nigger.

"Voodoos?" he said. "Of course there are. Don't fool yourself for a minute on that. There are good ones and bad ones. You can tame them if you know how, and they will do anything you want them to." Pulz chuckled in his throat. "You don't believe it?" drawled the assistant turning to him. "Well, it's so. You know that heavy box we are so careful of? Well,that's got a tame voodoo in it."

The others laughed.

"What he like?" asked the Nigger gravely.

"He's a fine voodoo, with wavery arms and green eyes, and red glows." Watching narrowly its effect he swung off into one of the genuine old crooning voodoo songs, once so common down South, now so rarely heard. No one knows what the words mean—they are generally held to be charmwords only—a magic gibberish. But the Nigger sprang across the fire like lightning, his face altered by terror, to seize Darrow by the shoulders.

"Doan you! Doan you!" he gasped, shaking the assistant violently back and forth. "Dat he King Voodoo song! Dat call him all de voodoo—all!"

He stood wildly about in the darkness as though expecting to see the night thronged. There was a moment of confusion. Eager for any chance I hissed under my breath; "Danger! Look out!"

I could not tell whether or not Darrow heard me. He left soon after. The mention of the chest had focussed the men's interest.

"Well," Pulz began, "we've been here on this spot o' hell for a long time."

"A year and five months," reckoned Thrackles.

"If he's busy."

"They've been busy."

"Yes."

"Wonder what they've done?"

There was no answer to this, and the sea lawyer took a new track.

"I suppose we're all getting double wages?"

"That's so."

"And that's say four hunder' for us and Mr. Eagen here. I suppose the Old Man don't let the schooner go for nothing."

"Two hundred and fifty a month," said I, and then would have had the words back.

They cried out in prolonged astonishment.

"Seventeen months," pursued the logician after a few moments. He scratched with a stub of lead. "That makes over eleven thousand dollars since we've been out. How much do you suppose his outfit stands him?" he appealed to me.

"I'm sure I can't tell you," I replied shortly.

"Well, it's a pile of money,anyway."

Nobody said anything for some time.

"Wonder what they've done?" Pulz asked again.

"Something that pays big." Thrackles supplied the desired answer.

"Dat chis—" suggested Perdosa.

"Voodoo—"muttered the Nigger.

"That's to scare us out," said Handy Solomon, with vast contempt. "That's what makes me sure it is the chest."

Pulz muttered some of the jargon of alchemy.

"That's it," approved Handy Solomon. "If we could get—"

"We wouldn't know how to use it," interrupted Pulz.

"The book—" said Thrackles.

"Well, the book—" asserted Pulz pugnaciously. "How do you know what it will be? It may be the Philosopher's Stone and it may be one of these other damn things. And then where'd we be?"

It was astonishing to hear this nonsense bandied about so seriously. And yet they more than half believed, for they were deep-sea men of the old school, and this was in print. Thrackles voiced approximately the general attitude.

"Philosopher's stone or not, something's up. The old boy took too good care of that box,and he's spending too much money,and he's got hold of too much hell afloat to be doing it for his health."

"You know w'at I t'ink?" smiled Perdosa. "He mak' di'mon's. He say dat."

The Nigger had entered one of his black, brooding moods from which these men expected oracles.

"Get him ches'," he muttered. "I see him full—full of di'mon's!"

They listened to him with vast respect, and were visibly impressed. So deep was the sense of awe that Handy Solomon unbent enough to whisper to me:

"I don't take any stock in the Nigger's talk ordinarily. He s a hell of a fool nigger. But when his eye looks like that,then you want to listen close. He sees things then. Lots of times he's seen things. Even last year—the Oyama—he told about her three days ahead. That's why we were so ready for her," he chuckled.

Nothing more developed for a long time except a savage fight between Pulz and Perdosa. I hunted sheep, fished, wandered about—always with an escort tired to death before he started. The thought came to me to kill this man and so to escape and make cause with the scientists. My common sense forbade me. I begin to think that common sense is a very foolish faculty indeed.

It taught me the obvious—that all this idle, vapouring talk was common enough among men of this class, so common that it would hardly justify a murder, would hardly explain an unwarranted intrusion on those who employed me. How would it look for me to go to them with these words in my mouth:

"The captain has taken to drinking to dull the monotony. The crew think you are an alchemist and are making diamonds. Their interest in this fact seemed to me excessive,so I killed one of them, and here I am."

"And who are you?" they would ask.

"I am a reporter," would be my only truthful reply.

You can see the false difficulties of my position. I do not defend my attitude. Undoubtedly a born leader of men, like Captain Selover at his best, would have known how to act with the proper decision both now and in the inception of the first mutiny. At heart I never doubted the reality of the crisis.

Even Percy Darrow saw the surliness of the men's attitudes, and with his good sense divined the cause.

"You chaps are getting lasy," said he. "why don't you do something? Where's the captain?"

They growled something about there being nothing to do, and explained that the captain preferred to live aboard.

"Don't blame him," said Darrow, "but he might give us a little of his squeaky company occasionally. Boys, I'll tell you something about seals. The old bull seals have long, stiff whiskers—a foot long. Do you know there's a market for those whiskers? Well, there is. The Chinese mount them in gold pipes. Each whisker is worth from six bits to a dollar and a quarter. Why don't you kill a few bull seal for the 'trimmings'?"

"Nothin' to do with a voodoo?" grunted Handy Solomon.

"Darrow laughed amusedly. "No, this is the truth," he assured. "I'll tell you what: I'll give you boys six bits apiece for the whisker hairs, and four bits for the galls. I expect to sell them at a profit."

Next morning they shook off their lethargy and went seal hunting.

I was practically commanded to attend. This attitude had been growing of late; now it began to take a definite form.

"Mr. Eagen, don't you want to go hunting?" or "Mr. Eagen, I guess I'll just go along with you to stretch my legs," had given way to, "We're going fishing: you'd better come along."

I had known for a long time that I had lost any real control of them; and that perhaps humiliated me a little. However, my inexperience at the anomalous character of my position to some extent consoled me. In the filaments brushed across the face of my understanding I could discover none so strong as to support an overt act on my part. I cannot doubt, that had the affair come to a focus,I should have warned the scientists even at the risk of my own life. In fact, as I shall have occasion to show you, I did my best. But at the moment, in all policy I could see my way to little besides acquiescence.

We killed seals by sequestrating the bulls, surrounding them, and clubbing them at a certain point of the forehead. It was surprising to see how hard they fought, and how quickly they succumbed to a blow properly directed. Then we stripped the mask with its bristle of long whiskers, took the gall, and dragged the carcass into the surf where it was devoured by fish. At first,the men, pleased by the novelty, stripped the skins. The blubber,often two or three inches in thickness, had then to be cut away from the pelt, cube by cube. It was a long, an oily, and odoriferous job. We stunk mightily of seal oil; our garments were shiny with it, the very pores of our skins seemed to ooze it. And even after the pelt was fairly well cleared, it had still to be tanned. Percy Darrow suggested the method, but the process was long, and generally unsatisfactory. With the acquisition of the fifth greasy, heavy, and ill-smelling piece of fur the men's interest in peltries waned. They confined themselves in all strictness to the "trimmings."

Percy Darrow showed us how to clean the whiskers. The process was evil. The masks were, quite simple, to be advanced so far in the way of putrefaction that the bristles would part readily from their sockets. The first batch the men hung out on a line. A few moments later we heard a mighty squawking, and rushed out to find the island ravens making off with the entire catch. Protection of netting had to be rigged. We caught seals for a month or so. There was novelty in it, and it satisfied the lust for killing. As time went on, the bulls grew warier. Then we made expeditions to outlying rocks.

Later Handy Solomon approached me on another diplomatic errand

"The seals is getting shy, sir," said he.

"They are," said I.

"The only way to do is to shoot them," said he.

"Quite like," I agreed.

A pause ensued.

"We've got no cartridges," he insinuated.

"And you've taken charge of my rifle," I pointed out.

"Oh, not a bit, sir," he cried. "Thrackles, he just took it to clean it—you can have it whenever you want it, sir."

"I have no cartridges—as you have observed," said I.

"There's plenty aboard," he suggested.

"And they're in very good hands there," said I.

He ruminated a moment, polishing the steel of his hook against the other arm of his shirt. Suddenly he looked up at me with a humorous twinkle.

"You're afraid of us!" he accused.

I was silent, not knowing just how to meet so direct an attack.

"No need to be," he continued.

I said nothing.

He looked at me shrewdly; then stood off on another tack.

"Well, sir, I didn't mean just that. I didn't mean you was really scared of us. But we're gettin' to know each other, livin' here on this old island, brothers-like. There ain't no officers and men ashore—is there, now, sir? When we gets back to the old Laughing Lass, then we drops back into our dooty again all right and proper. You can kiss the Book on that.Old Scrubs, he knows that. He don't want no shore in his. He knows enough to stay aboard, where we'd rather be."

He stopped abruptly, spat, and looked at me. I wondered whither this devious diplomacy led us.

"Still, in one way, an officer's an officer, and a seaman's a seaman, thinks you, and discipline must be held up among mates ashore or afloat, thinks you. Quite proper, sir. And I can see you think that the arms is for the afterguard except in case of trouble. Quite proper. You can do the shooting, and you can keep the cartridges always by you. Just for discipline, sir."

The man's boldness in so fully arming me was astonishing, and his carelessness in allowing me aboard with Captain Selover astonished me still more. Nevertheless I promised to go for the desired cartridges, fully resolved to make an appeal.

A further consideration of the elements of the game convinced me,however, of the fellow's shrewdness. It was no more dangerous to allow me a rifle—under direct surveillance—for the purposes of hunting, than to leave me my sawed-off revolver, which I still retained. The arguments he had used against my shooting Perdosa were quite as cogent now. As to the second point, I, finding the sun unexpectedly strong, returned from the cove for my hat, and so overheard the following between Thrackles and his leader:

"What's to keep him from staying aboard?" cried Thrackles protesting.

"Well, he might," acknowledged Handy Solomon, "and then are we the worse off? You ain't going to make a boat attack against Old Scrubs, are you?"

Thrackles hesitated.

"You can kiss the Book on it, you ain't," went on Handy Solomon easily, "nor me, nor Pulz,nor the Greaser,nor the Nigger, nor none of us all together. We've had our dose of that. Well, if he goes aboard and stays, where are we the worse off? I asks you that. But he won't. This' is w'ats goin' to happen. Says he to Old Scrubs, 'Sir,the men needs you to bash in their heads.' 'Bash 'em yourself,' says he, 'that's w'at you're for.' And if he should come ashore, w'at could he do? I asks you that. We ain't disobeyed no orders dooly delivered. We're ready to pull halliards at the word. No, let him go aboard, and if he peaches to the Old Man, why all the better,for it just gets the Old Man down on him."

"How about Old Scrubs—"

"Don't you believe none in luck?" asked Handy Solomon.

"Are."

"Well, so do I, with w'at that lawcrimp used to call joodicious assistance."

I rowed out to the Laughing Lass very thoughtful, and a little shaken by the plausible argument. Captain Selover was lying dead drunk across the cabin table. I did my best to waken him, but failed, took a score of cartridges—no more—and departed sadly. Nothing could be gained by staying aboard; every chance might be lost. Besides, an opening to escape in the direction of the laboratory might offer—I, as well as they, believed in luck judiciously assisted.

In the ensuing days I learned much of the habits of seals. We sneaked along the cliff tops until over the rookeries; then lay flat on our stomachs and peered cautiously down on our quarry. The seals had become very wary. A slight jar, the fall of a pebble, sometimes even sounds unnoticed by ourselves, were enough to send them into the waer. There they lined up just outside the surf, their sleek heads glossy with the wet, their calm, soft eyes fixed unblinkingly on us.

It was useless to shoot them in the water; they sank at once.

When, however, we succeeded in gaining an advantageous position, it was necessary to shoot with extreme accuracy. A bullet directly through the back of the head would kill cleanly. A hit anywhere else was practically useless, for even in death the animals seemed to retain enough blind instinctive vitality to flop them into the water. There they were lost.

Each rookery consisted of one tremendous bull who officiated apparenly as the standing army; a number of smaller bulls, his direct descendants: the cows, and the pups. The big bull held his position by force of arms. Occasionally other, unattached, bulls would come swimming by. On arriving opposite the rookery the stranger would utter a peculiar challenge. It was never refused by the resident champion, who promptly slid into the sea, and engaged battle. If he conquered, the stranger went on his way. If, however, the stranger won, the big bull immediately struck out to sea, abandoning his rookery, while the new-comer swam in and attempted to make his title good with all the younger bulls. I have seen some fierce combats ont there in the bide water. They gashed each other deep—

You can see by this how our hunting was never at an end. On Tuesday we would kill the boss of a certain establishment. By Thursday, at latest, another would be installed.

I learned curious facts about seals in those days. The hunting did not appeal to me particularly, because it seemed to me useless to kill so large an animal for so small a spoil. Still, it was a means to my all-absorbing end, and I confess that the stalking, the lying belly down on the sun-warmed grass over the surge and under the clear sky, was extremely pleasant. While awaiting the return of the big bull often we had opportunity to watch the others at their daily affairs, and even the unresponsive Thrackles was struck with their almost human intelligence. Did you know that seals kiss each other, and weep tears when grieved?

Durer's Famous Painting Missing.

Rome, May 18.—A great sensation has been caused by a report that Albert Durer's famous painting of the Madonna at Fabriano has disappeared. It has been kept in a cupboard for a long time and was never exhibited. It is feared that it was stolen long ago, sold, and smuggled out of the country.

TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN SKILL

London Financial News Deals With Development at Niagara.

Declares Success of Scheme Marks New Era in Our Industrial History.

In a leading article in a recent number of The Financial News, of London, England, the project of supplying electrical energy from Victoria Falls, on the Zambesi River, to the whole of Rhodesia, and to the Rand, is said to have as its prototype the power development at Niagara. Speaking of the feat before the engineers in South Africa, this journal says: "They will undoubtedly derive much assistance in studying the experiments carried out, and recently crowned with success, in harnessing the Niagara Falls. The arrival of electrical energy in Toronto from the Niagara Falls marked a new era in the industrial history of the Province of Ontario, and Canadians are justly proud of the fact that this vast undertaking has been entirely carried out by Canadian enterprise. The electrical plant at the power-houses of the Electrical Development Company which distributes power to Toronto has been constructed by the Canadian General Electric Company and the Canada Foundry Company. It is claimed that in bringing its installation plans to a successful issue the Canadian General Electric Company has performed a feat unequalled in the history of electrical undertakings in Canada, and that it has executed the biggest contract in electro-hydraulic machinery that has ever been given out. In the work of converting the tremendous force of water into electric current, the company has had to contend with unprecedented conditions, which have necessitated not only the manufacture of plant such as had not been used before, but the invention of new types of machinery.

"The enormous iron castings," continues The News, "of the penstock, the flume, the steel gratings, the switch-board gallery, and the steel towers, to say nothing of the steel structural work of the massive buildings, were all built by the Canada Foundry Company. In the whole undertaking this company has supplied about 8,500 tons of metal. As regards the installation plant, five units are already erected, or in course of construction, capable of producing 75,000 horse-power. It is in the construction of these generators that the skill and inventive ingenuity of the staff of the Canadian General Electric Company have been employed, and all credit is due to the company in the enterprise and success of its great engineering feat."

RUIN THREATENS ALHAMBRA.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Madrid, May 18. — Great agitation reigns in Granada because on account of the parsimony of the Government which will not vote funds for its proper repair, the celebrated Alhambra is threatened with collapse. The local newspapers are publishing strongly worded articles praying that this great monument,one of the glories of Spain, which attracts thousands of visitors to Granada everly year, may be saved from ruin.

The building of the Alhambra at Granada was begun in the thirteenth century by Mohammed I., and continued by successive monarchs, the finest parts of the structure, including the Court of the Myrtles and the Court of the Lyons, being due to the fifth Mohammed. Its decorations were restored by Ferdinand and Isabella, but its period of neglect and decay dates from Philip V., who in 1716 converted to his own uses the revenues assigned for the preservation of the building. A good deal of damage was done to the noble structure by the French in 1812, but subsequent efforts at restoration have been made.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

GRACE ELLISTON AT HIS MAJESTYS — J PALMER COLLINS AT THE ACADEMY — EUGENIE BESSERER AT THE FRANCAIS

Somebody has said that nowadays all that is needed is to think up, or gather in a bunch of epigrams and write a play around them. It is noteworthy that this is now becoming the vogue in melodrama as well as in problem plays. Those who don't know what they miss by not taking in a melodrama house now and then. There is where they are brought into direct touch with life as she is lived. In fact you can see phases of life in a melodrama that you can't see anywhere else. First, it is essential that the author should go into the garden of literature and pluck a few aphorisms which exalt virtue and reprehend wickedness. It must always be remembered that an adventuress who goes about with her reticule as full of poisons as a drug store on bargain day must be foiled at least once in every act, and made to feel so ashamed that she can't look the footlights in the face, or the melodrama audience won't permit the play to go on. It is also absolutely essential that the villain must be so unmistakably bad that you couldn't take him for anything else but a crook if he had the leading lady's spot light making a nimbus around his wicked black curls. It is also necessary that these powers of darkness should be rebuked in becoming manner by the heroine or somebody else once in so often, to keep things going. As for the story of the play—well you don't need to have a story—but if you can work in an impossible mechanical effect or so it will go, and a fusilade of fire arms is always popular, no matter whether it has anything to do with the piece or not. There was a delicious melodrama flitted athwart the Montreal horizon within a thousand years of the present time, in a theatre which can be found without buying a guide book. There was where you saw a genial old gentleman in white hair, who had a habit of going round in his bare head and getting caught by the villain and his accomplice once in every act, and rescued by the heroine, his daughter, just before the fall of every curtain. One rescue was celebrated by a lot of men climbing up on the roof and others running all over the house inside, the whole outfit firing all the revolvers in the company at nothing in particular. The great sensation, however, was a trial in a divorce court, where the heroine is to be divorced from her husband—who doesn't want to lose her and whom she wants to cleave unto—at the sole wish of the husband's father. The villain happens into finding that the lady's lawyer is a gentleman who stole cherries and eggs, away down on the old farm when they were both young, and holds him up on his past and compels him to promise to throw the lady down. The Court, however, kindly permits the lady to conduct her own case, and when she and the author of the play get things so hopelessly mixed that something has to break, the heroine—a slight young lady—jumps over the rail into the witness box, catches the burly villain by the neck and plays rough house all over the court room with him, the judge finally leaving the bench to separate the belligerents. The villain as soon as he gets his breath accuses the heroine of having murdered a detective. The divorce court is about to be converted into a criminal court to try the lady under the summary convictions act, when the detective in question—who has been easily recognized as a detective in consequence of his being an easy mark and multitudinously disguised and repeatedly exterminated all through the piece—comes to life. By virtue of his office he proceeds to arrest all the right parties—that is the parties who have done wrong—and the curtain descends upon a cheering, happy audience. Talk about your Shaw's and Shakespeares, it was great!

"Stick to St. James's and Belgravia
And nevah go east of Temple Bah"

THE WEEK IN PLAYHOUSES.

"The Lion and the Mouse," by Chas. Klein, probably the most talked-of play in America to-day, will receive its first presentation in Montreal Monday evening at His Majesty's, under the direction of Henry B. Harris. The same cast and production that played at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, for more than 600 consecutive performances, will be seen here. Everyone who is interested and keenly alive to the influence wrought upon American politics by the money interests, trusts and kings of finance, will appreciate Mr. Klein's drama. Briefly outlined, it relates the story of Shirley Rossmore, daughter of Judge Rossmore, a judge of excellent standing, who, through the rendering of decisions in opposition to the interests of a despot in the financial world, John Burkett Ryder, known as "Ready Money" Ryder is impeached by the latter and financially ruined. Ryder's son, Jefferson, who has been in Europe, falls in love with Judge Rossmore's daughter, Shirley. Upon her return she finds her father ruined in reputation, broken in health and financially embarrassed as a result of the ruling. One man holds the proof of Rossmore's innocence. That man is Ryder. Through his love for Miss Rossmore Ryder's son purloins certain papers, which will prove Judge Rossmore's innocence—at least morally. Discovering this, Ryder orders the girl from his house, in which she has become an inmate as the writer of his biography and under an assumed name. The scene which follows is a striking and dramatic one, and the love interest, seemingly subservient in the struggle, becomes the vital factor in the situation, said to be unconventional in its treatment and finely dramatic in its presentment and climax. In the cast that will present this play here are Oliver Doud Byron and Grace Elliston. A special matinee is announced for Friday, Victoria Day. The season at His Majesty's closes on Saturday, May 25th.

"The Bonnie Brier Bush" will be seen at the Academy next week, with the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees and a special matinee Friday, May 24th (Empire Day). The play is so familiar to the public through its four years of stage life, that any extended comment is unnecessary. The drama is wonderfully true to life in its delineation of Scottish character, such as may even now be found in country towns in Scotland, where the Calvinistic doctrines of redemption and damnation are lived up to so closely that domestic ties are apt to become sundered on the altar of religious duty. In Lachlan Campbell is shown a man whose heart is overflowing with tender love for his motherless daughter, yet who, in a moment of what he deems righteous wrath, drives her from his home, and struggling against his fatherly affection, tries to make himself believe that his act was that of a just and God-fearing man. How he is transformed from an ascetic and literal believer in the Calvinistic interpretations of the Scriptures to one who, after all, sees some good in the practice of the golden rule, is very beautifully brought out in the play. The comedy element in the piece is strong and persistent. Its chief exponent is Posty, whose droll philosophy and witticisms are an excellent foil for the more serious portions of the play. The company this season has a quartette of male singers, and Robert Ireland, the Scottish bag-piper, late pipe-major of the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, will add to the general effectiveness.

The new Hal Reid play, "A Millionaire's Revenge," is to be presented at the Theatre Francais next week. It is a reflex of a recent affair of international amazement that commanded the attention of the reading population of both hemispheres. The theme of this play is based on what is termed "The Unwritten Law," and deals with the lives of men and women of high social standing, and unfolds a narrative that is claimed to be not without its moral lesson. Mr. Reid has divided his play into four acts. For his plot, story, incidents and episodes he did not resort to imagination, as he had actual facts to deal with, and base and build his play on. "A Millionaire's Revenge" is said to have been given one of the heaviest scenic productions ever attempted at popular prices, and the Mitenthal Brothers, who are the recognized promoters of this form of attraction, have engaged a company of dramatic celebrities.

In the performance to be given by "The Innocent Maids" company next week at the Theatre Royal, beginning next Monday matinee, is the burlesque entitled "The Maids in Chinatown," and "Fiddle-Dumm-Dumm," besides a strong olio. The merit of the olio lies in its variety and the many new acts presented. Larry Smith and Larry Seyon are the chief fun-makers. Sandwiched in between the two burlesques is an olio of acts headed by Larry Smith and Mamie Champion, in a German sketch; Miss Sadie Huested, comedienne; Larry and Julia Seyon, in a funny skit, "The Census Taker"; Hughes and Hazelton, in their travesty on "Virginius"; Hill and Hill, the two daring cyclists, and Smith and Convey. The chorus of twenty adds greatly to the performance and there are ten funny comedians to keep the laughing going.

Those who have had an advance peep at Dominion Park declare that the attractions will be even greater than were those of last year. Apart altogether from what are known as the "concessions," including the scenic railway, the chutes, etc., the park has been beautified in many respects. Flower beds have been arranged at different points and the river promenade has been finished off in a manner that will appeal to all who are fond of a stroll by the river on a warm summer night. The incubator attraction promises to be greater than ever, and the Johnstown flood, accepted as one of the big features of last year, remains intact. The House of Nonsense has added to its nonsense. Just how remains to be seen by those who are interested in the manner. The big new feature will be the laundry. They say: "Try the new laundry and get a bright finish." It is said that it will be among the most popular things that the park has yet introduced, and that is saying a good deal. The management have prepared an exceptionally good line of attractions for the open air performances and for the opening days Rosh and Lenon have been secured. Their act is done in a cage and they are shown in pictures which have been received here to do an act that seems little short of marvellous. They were in Grand Rapids recently and the newspapers there speak in unqualified praise of the newness and the daring of the act. Van der Meerchen's band, which has been greatly augmented by artists from the other side of the water, will furnish the music. The opening takes place to-day and preparations are being made to look after a record crowd.

Since the opening of the Nationoscope a week ago, the hall was crowded at every performance. This is an evident proof that the public appreciate the spectacle. The programme for next week will be better than the one of last week. Among the lot of animated views promised are: "Lost in the Alps," "Charles VIII.", "The $100 Bill", "The Carnival of Venice," "The Stolen Pig."

The Windsor Biograph promise an exceptionally fine programme at to-day's exhibition in Karn Hall, including such pictures as "The Electric Belt," "Crayon Artist," "Unskilled Skater" (all humorous), also "The Great Boar Hunt." Montreal sportsmen should not miss this picture. Illustrated songs will be sung by Mr. J. P. Kiley. Mr. Malcolm M Pierce will again appear in another song specialty.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

The Fuller Stock Company, which made a very favorable impression and a host of friends here last season, at the Francais, will return to fill an engagement at that house, opening on Monday, May 27, with a complete production of Charles E. Blaney's military play, "Across the Pacific," including the two car loads of scenery required for the presentation of this play. A company of 35 people and a band of "Rough Riders" is carried, together with three genuine gatling guns.

DOINGS OF THE PLAYERS.

Richard Mansfield sailed for Europe on May 11, accompanied by two attendants. His condition still causes his friends the deepest anxiety.

Tyrone Power has been engaged as leading man with Henrietta Crosman in The Christian Pilgrim.

The Lion and the Mouse will probably have another hearing in London this year, by one of the companies now presenting the play in America.

It is definitely announced by her managers that Fay Templeton will retire from the stage at the conclusion of her engagement at the Grand Opera House, New York, this evening, May 18.

It was announced last week that Margaret Anglin would begin a tour of Australia in March, 1908, under the direction of J. C. Williamson. Negotiations were conducted by Sanger and Jordan.

The engagement is announced in New York of Florence Fyles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Fyles, to George Young Bauckle. The marriage will occur on May 23.

A new version of Uncle Tom's Cabin, by James W. Harkins, Jr., and Edwin Barbour, will be presented at the Majestic, New York, for an indefinite run, beginning on Monday, May 20. Little Eva will be played by Gretchen Hartman, the child recently seen with Wilton Lackaye in The Law and the Man.

Supreme Court Justice Truande on Friday last handed down his decision in the case of John T. and Eva Fay against Chauncey Herbert and Louis M. Granat, who have been doing an expose of the Fays' Thaumaturgy specialty since last summer, when they first presented it at the New York Roof Garden. The Justice's decision forbids the defendants from using the name "the Fays" or the expression, "Fasing the Fays" in a vaudeville act. The case was tried late in March and much evidence was given on both sides. The counsel for the Fays did not seek to have the defendants enjoined from giving their performance, but simply argued that they should be prevented from trading on the Fays' reputation, as it was alleged that many people were under the impression that the Fays were appearing in the theatres in which the defendants were giving their performances. It is said that the next step to be taken by the Fays will be to sue for damages the managers in whose theatres the defendants have appeared during the season.

Halifax papers have been unstinted in their praise of the singing of Miss Hope Baynes, daughter of Mr. O'Hara Baynes of Montreal, who made her first public appearance in Halifax at the concert of the Halifax Conservatorium of Music, on Friday last. On this occasion, she made, the reports state, a most favorable impression; her rendering of "Ouvre tes yeux bleus," being received with great applause. Miss Baynes went to Halifax some months ago to study with the vocalist, Miss De Fabritis.

The Musical Johnstons are in town, having just finished eighteen weeks with the Keith and Proctor circuit. They will sail for Liverpool June 1st, on the Cunarder Lucania, opening in Birmingham June 10th, for thirty-two weeks' tour of the Moss and Stoll Empire theatres. They are booked for a return engagement at the Alhambra Theatre, Leicester Square, London, and will play eleven weeks there; also bookings in Paris, Vienna, Berlin and other Continental cities.

Mr. Arthur Plamondon, tenor, pupil of Karl von Steege, and Miss Alice Michot, of "Les Concerts Collone," Paris, were recently married at the Church of St. Pierre lès Gros Cailloux, in Paris, where Mons. Plamondon is soloist. They sail by Empress of Ireland, May 31st, for Montreal, where they will be the guests of Mrs. Plamondon, St. Denis street. Mr. Arthur Plamondon is a brother of Mr. Rodolphe Plamondon, who, with his wife, Madame Plamondon Dufritch appeared in concert given at the Montreal National last October. Mdme. Arthur Plamondon won the first prize at the Conservatorium of Paris for piano playing.

The following will be the programme at the students recital of McGill University Conservatorium of Music, at 3.30 this (Saturday) afternoon, in St. George's Church, by Mr. G. M. Brewer, winner of the Casavant organ scholarship:

Mr. Herbert Spencer, musical director of His Majesty's Theatre, and Mr. J. C. Molinari, have been elected delegates of Local 406, to attend the convention of the American Federation of Musicians, which will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, next week. There are nearly four hundred members of the local, and over fifty thousand in the Federation, comprising all the principal orchestras and band musicians in the United States and Canada. After the convention Messrs. Spencer and Molinari will visit Detroit, Buffalo, Toronto and other cities. The delegates will be escorted to the station by a band.

A CANADIAN'S EXPERIENCE IN SECURING ENTRANCE TO THE PIT OF A LONDON THEATRE

Special Correspondence of the Montreal Star.

London, May 8.—Everyone has ambitions, and for years mine have included a desire to occupy a place in the "Pit."

Not the deepest "Pit" of unsounded depth and future associations be it understood, but merely that section of the main floor of an English theatre which is separated from the stalls by a low wooden railing and yet draws the line of demarcation between Society in its best clothes and ten shillings and six pence the seat, and mere theatre lovers who show their devotion to the drama by standing for an hour or more outside the Pit entrance in order to occupy a two shilling and sixpenny allotment on a thinly cushioned bench.

For years I've gazed longingly each time I have seen the long queue of people standing patiently until the doors open, but instead of joining the waiting army I have always weakly surrendered to the charms of the box office when it came to the point. Last week, however, I decided I'd realize my ambition or drop from fatigue in the attempt and when by accident on Wednesday I saw two messenger boys and an aenemic young woman stalled up against the Pit entrance to the Gaiety Theatre I availed myself of the opportunity and joined the ranks. There was room for the four of us in the doorway, and sheltered somewhat from the chill breezes that chased each other up and down the Strand and round the corners, I awaited developments, and the passing of the sixty minutes that must elapse before the hospitality of an open door was offered to a waiting crowd.

The boys, pert looking little district messengers, talked "shop" and indulged in mild jokes, while they awaited the coming of the patrons for whom they were holding the top of the line. The aenemic young woman conceived an ardent curiosity as to the passing of time and unobtrusively consulted my watch bracelet whenever she thought I wasn't similarly employed. A lame newspaper seller prevailed upon me to purchase a giddy looking pink newspaper from his stock in trade and for a time I buried myself within its complexion improving folds and read the news of yesterday rehashed to make an "extra" of this afternoon. Another person added herself to the waiting list. She was pretty and fair and her costume consisted principally of black cloth, chinchilla and violets, nor was this in any way extraordinary, for one isn't expected to wear one's worst on a visit to the "Pit." Next to be added to the line was a youthful pair, evidently newly engaged and of them more hereafter. Close to them was a delightful grandfatherly looking old man with a school girl clinging to his arm. Further on were two nurses who had driven up in haste in a hansom. Just beyond were any amount of what might easiest be described as "couples." Altogether it was a most heterogeneous collection of humanity.

Street hawkers helped the moments to flit merrily by. They plied us with matches, "a penny the box"; they offered us "fresh Parma violets tuppence the bunch, lidies." They pursued us with bonbons, and prevailed upon us to invest in things for which we had no earthly use and which ranged from Easter bunnies, that hopped when pressed to do so, to a linen backed map of the metropolis. Sandwich men paused at the curb to gaze at us. Trays full of shoe laces were placed at our disposal. We were urged to buy on every hand. Chocolates were freely indulged in. Books of the play were purchased from the vendors and the pictures they contained eagerly commented upon. But on the whole it was a most sedate crowd and the door we were besieging might have been the entrance to a chapel instead of a theatre were it not that in lieu of hymn books we carried opera glasses.

It began to rain, but the glass canopy overhead protected us from the drizzle. The life of the Strand with its mixture of gaiety and gravity flowed by in a steady stream. 'Buses pulled up, and drivers flicked their whips, as only 'bus drivers seem to know how. In ingratiating tones conductors rattled off the bourne to which each particular 'bus was bound, in the intervals of their monologue dragging unresisting young persons into the capacious maw of their respective vehicles, while the passenger with the pipe perched himself up aloft like Dibden's historic cherub. Hansoms whirled by or paused to disgorge their fares at the aristocratic theatre entrance at the corner. Slowly the once dry pavement disappeared in the thick brown grease that in place of mud, exudes from the London asphalt. More and more were neatly shod feet in evidence; the display of silken frills became less reserved. Anxious faced women burdened with the consciousness that their very best hats were unprotected from the rain, dashed by at the terrific pace an English woman can adopt when in a hurry. The two messenger boys yielded up their places to their employers, vapid looking, cigarette smoking youths.

It was life in a backwater to us standing there, and full of fascination, as well as discomfort. Shrill voiced snatches of conversation were echoed back to us, a hundred phases of existence hastened by. In an hour one saw more in watching the throng than in a day when only part of it. Slowly the last few minutes passed by, and suddenly a step was heard within. A second later the portal was thrown open and a deep voice emanating from a rotund figure in livery murmured gently like the refrain of a comic song, "Mind the step, please mind the step."

The two youths who headed us were evidently old hands at the game, for they stopped at a tiny wicket and got tickets. I was fourth and I deposited my silver coin on a little run way that shot it down through a hole in a little wire grille and deposited it in the hand of the ticket seller. Through another little hole he shoved up to me a square ticket made of something hard and enduring, and grasping it firmly I followed the procession and penetrating deeply down a winding staircase at last came out into what would be the parquet of a Canadian theatre. Fate placed me second from the centre gangway (gangway being English for aisle) and directly in front of the newly engaged couple. Before us stretched the rapidly filling stalls. For two pence I became the possessor of a programme, which on the stall side of the barrier, would have cost me sixpence, and for a shilling bought some chocolates, which made me feel at home among the munching-brigade by which I was surrounded. I could have bought a dozen other things, including lemonade, tea and biscuits, and theatre souvenirs—but I didn't. Finally the play, "The New Aladdin," began the uneven tenor of its somewhat stupid way, until it served to introduce Miss Gaby Deslys, a compatriot of Anna Held, but much younger, twice as good looking, three times as clever, and at a conservative estimate not a quarter as vulgar.

Suddenly I ejaculated, not loud, but deep, for the engaged young man behind me while trying to fasten the engaged young girl's best bonnet to the back of my seat ran a hat pin—what seemed half a mile, but was probably only half an inch—into my side. This, I believe was not considered correct deportment, according to the ethics of the Pit, but his apology was worthy of the occupant of a grand tier box at Covent Garden. However, apologies are a poor panacea for pain, and as I limped out I philosophised upon the fact that all gratified ambition is but Dead Sea fruit.

STAGE SOCIAL SWIM AND THE REAL THING

Special to The Montreal Star.

New York, May 17.—A pantomime scene: Anne Hathaway's cottage at Stratford-on-Avon. Characters: Shakespeare and Anne? No. Mark Twain and Ethel Barrymore. They are discovered in a conversation that looks all-absorbing. They don't show that they know they are observed. Has nobody told them that the front wall of the room has been cut out, and that the street is crowded by people looking in? They gaze into each other's eyes soulfully, as though neither is aware of any other person on earth than t'other. If the dialogue could be heard it might run: "You are the greatest ever." "There's been a greater then you, no never," and so on in adulent flattery. Is the play entitled "Proposing?" No. If I were asked to name it, I should say, "Posing." For Ethel, loveliest of this day pets of the stage, is never off guard. No camera could catch her in other than a pictorial pose. This daughter of Drews and Barrymores was born in a spotlight, and has never been out of the focus. At this disclosure, she is dressed for the role of a Gibson girl out for afternoon social calls. She may have dropped in to pay her respects to Shakespeare, yet there is no hint of that once well known man in view, while on the wall is a portrait in bas-relief of Ethel's uncle, John Drew, an old etching of her Grandma Drew, a photograph of Papa Barrymore, and a sketch of her own rare self.

So young Ethel Barrymore is holding the bright centre of the stage, and old Mark Twain is circling in the outer dimness? Well, not much, and not any. This Mark isn't an easy mark to miss. He stands out for all the shots of publicity that go flying around. Ethel's hair is brown and soft, but Mark's is white and stiff. If her face is the centre of a rose with petals gently edging it, his is the middle of a chrysanthemum with a mass of fluff flying wildly. And his raiment, oh, his raiment! It is all as white as his hair: the linen of his shirt, collars and cuffs, the flannel of his coat, vest and trousers, the silk of his stockings, necktie and watchguard, the leather of his shoes—all spotless white. Such is the costume in which the aged humorist holds his own with the young actress as a poser at the Actors' Fund fair. At the time of my description they are at the booth of the Player's Club. Circumstances have boomed him, too. Another theatrical coterie, the Century Theatre Club, invited him to be its star shiner at the fair. The club's president, Mrs. Rosenfeld, an ardent Christian Scientist, bethought her that he had written down Mrs. Eddy as a fakir, and she made a row, ending in her resignation. Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund, and away up in the Players' Club, made Twain the oratorical opener of the fair. That fixed the great joker in the public eye. And from Mrs. Eddy came to the Players a copy of her "Science and Health," marked by her own hand "to the players of good dramatic lessons," which has been sold at $200, and a portrait to the Century inscribed, "Having one infinite God unifies men and nations, constitutes the brotherhood of men, ends wars, fulfills the Scriptures." Chances to draw that were taken at an aggregate of $250. Christian Science is the religion of many of our stage people.

A booth of fuss, fun and feathers was one bossed with booming, blooming beauty by Hope Booth. She may have asked herself what would quickest arrest the attention of women? Millinery, may have been her reply. What would give the most special engrossment to it? Why, to have favorite actors trim hats in sight of the public. Like most thoughts that are inspirations, it seems easy after once it has been evolved and realized. I suspect that some of these amateur man-milliners qualified themselves by study for the role they played. Robert Mantell treated the subject with tragic dignity, Henry Miller and Arnold Daly in a vein of classic comedy, and William Collier and Louis Mann were farcical, while Eddie Foy led a lot who burlesqued their jobs. Amelia Bingham helped Miss Booth, and a legitimate business was done in hats trimmed by deft actresses.

But if hats handled by gods and goddesses of the stage possessed an extra value in the selling market, how much more might be the charm of an article of apparel that had been worn by a dramatic divinity? That question was raised by Alice Fischer, and she got an answer by putting on sale a blouse that had been a part of Maude Adams's costume as a boy in a play—a shapeless garment of common stuff; but a young fellow bought it fondly at $10, and declared that he would have it made over for a smoking jacket. Alice Fischer, president of the Twelfth Night Club, had a thinking spell after seeing the quick transaction in Maude Adams's blouse; and that evening she hung out the placard: "The shirt that Kelley wore!" I may be able to make the reader comprehend what a dainty, fluffy, altogether nightrobe it was, but I won't try to convey an understanding of Kelley's hold on the hearts of matinee girls in the Harlem section of New York. He is the adored leading actor of a stock company.

"His worshippers long ago cut his shadow into bits, and wear them in lockets," said Miss Fischer; "but here we have the shirt that Kelley wore. Didn't you?" and she appealed to the actor.

"I cannot tell a lie," Kelley replied, with a gulp and a swallow of conscience; "I wore it."

"And I am selling chances at a quarter apiece," Miss Fischer cried.

Before midnight, a hundred tickets had been sold, and the winner wouldn't give her name. "What shall you do with it?" I asked.

"That is a personal matter," she replied.

"I humbly beg your pardon," I pleaded; "I might have seen that it is beautiful enough to need no adaptation for a feminine nightie."

"How dare you," she exclaimed. "If you must know, I shall make a shirt waist of it to wear at Kelley matinees. And won't the girls envy me?"

Here and there among the persons and things were reminders of the past. Helena Modjeska sent a silver cup which, she believed, had been used by Shakespeare, and the young man who bought it at $50 said he meant to work it two ways for a mascot—to make him write plays like Shakespeare, and his sister act like Modjeska. The sister purchased one of the autographed portraits that Mary Anderson had sent from England. "'Twon't hurt to have two mascots," she said, "and mebbe they'll make act like the very devil—like both Helena and Mary." The brother was not pleased, and he remarked: "Mebbe they'll make you act like two devils; you can act like one now." A silver punch bowl that Lotta Crabtree had given to the Actors Fund Fair of 1892, to be voted on a valuation of $2,000 to the most popular New York Club, was sent by its winner, the Hoffman, to be disposed of a second time in the same manner; and the Players got it. A bedquilt that Mrs. W. G. Jones, the oldest American actress now in service, had made of silk souvenir programmes and other mementos of dramatic events, was won by Henry E. Dixey, who said: "It is a very precious thing, and I am awfully glad to get it." Then he looked at its hodgepodge of patchwork and added, doubtfully: "Yes— I guess I am glad."

Continuous vaudeville was given by the Greenroom Club and when I looked in George Cohan was finishing a song and dance, and Montgomery and Stone came next, with Maud Raymond to follow. The White Rats had a sideshow of burlesque freaks. The Lambs outfitted a cafe, where I gave my order for chops and ale to Richard Golden, the head waiter. The Professional Women's League operated a Chinese garden, where chop suey and rice rum were served to me by Eleanor Robson and Grace George, whose chink costuming consisted solely of oriental fans. Superimposed upon their street toilets? Why, what are you thinking of? The Actors Society had a Japanese tea house, Mme. Pilar-Morin in a Jap makeup as chief of imitation geishas prettier than the genuine, brought me a cup and a cake; and Charlotte Walker poured a glass of Japanese wine which, she said, would make me feel like going out and seeing things to buy. At the Actors Church Alliance booth I bought a prayer book autographed by Bishop Potter, and it may have been the wine that made me do it—yet Carrie DeMar was the sales girl. And my next stop was at the racecourse of tin horses, where Caroline Countiss, in charge of a dark troop of girl tipsters led me to lose on Cold Molasses, "a dark good dark thing sure to run away from its name."

Mrs. Hamilton Fish, the leader among the matrons in Astor-Vanderbilt society, took charge of the flower booth during five afternoons and evenings, and another woman from the same circle, Mrs. James Speyer had the candy booth. Those were rallying points for sight-seers, and the relays of posy and sugar girls, drafted by Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Speyer from the smart set, made a good showing of prettiness in competition with the actresses, while their superior pull on the pursestrings of the lavish spenders enabled them to turn in more than $7,000. It may be said that society and the stage mingled, but hardly that they mixed, although there was a blending at the edges. The Goulds were observable along the division line. Mrs. George Gould, who used to be an actress at Daly's, and is now solidly grounded in our imitation aristocracy, sent to the doll's booth a miniature woman dressed like herself as Shakespeare's Sweet Anne Page. Mrs. Howard Gould, also a former actress but never recognized by the Gould's, and now parted from Harold, was sauntered through the fair at the same time that her husband was doing it, and they would have met if both hadn't shied.

A chance encounter, though, happened to this Mrs. Gould and Buffalo Bill. It was he who put her on the stage as Katharine Clemmons, two decades ago, at a cost which he subsequently testified was $60,000; and young Gould by marrying her forfeited $5,000,000 under his father's will; but she was exceedingly beautiful. Well, Aldrich Libby was a bogus Buffalo Bill at the fair as the barker for a burlesque Wild West sideshow, and when the genuine personage came in, his former protege didn't note the difference quickly enough to turn aside. They bowed politely; and then he fell into a bevy of salesgirls.

"My—my—but it's Colonel Cody," one of them exclaimed, getting right in front of him. "Deary me, I've dropped my pencil." And when he had picked it up, she rattled on: "Now you've got it in your hand, won't you write your name several times in this little book?"

"You want my autograph, eh?" he smilingly responded.

"If you please," she gurgled; "Opposite as many numbers as you please—chances for a grand piano—only fifty cents—per chance, not per piano. Oh, thank you so much."

And I have mentioned only a few persons and things that were in this show of shows!

THE ALLAN LINE'S NEWEST STEAMSHIP

THE CORSICAN NOW COMES

Will Be Launched This Month and Leave for Quebec and Montreal in July.

In the new steamship Corsican, which was launched for the Allan line by Messrs. Barclay, Currie & Co., Limited, on April 29th, the results of years of experience and the observation of modern requirements are shown. The new steamship is fitted with triple expansion engines, with 17-knot speed, and is representative of the type of modern steamship which is finding increasing favor with shipowners and the travelling public. She is intended to sail on July 11th, 1907, on her first voyage from Liverpool to Quebec and Montreal.

The dimensions of the Corsican are: Length, 516 feet; breadth, 61 feet 3 ins.; depth from bottom of keel to top of deck at centre, 42 feet 9 ins.; gross registered tonnage, about 11,500 tons; triple expansion twin-screw engines of 8500 indicated horse power, constructed by the builders; speed at sea, about 16 knots; number of first-class passengers, 300; do. second, 400; do. third, 1600.

The scantlings of the main structure are all in excess of the requirements of the British corporation. The hull, generally, has been constructed of Siemens-Martin mild steel, open hearth process. It is divided into seven compartments by water-tight bulkheads, and to ensure further immunity in case of collision or stranding, a complete inner bottom is fitted, divided by numerous partitions into separate water ballast tanks, each being capable of being filled or emptied independently, so that the trim and draught of the vessel can be adjusted at any time to suit the conditions of the service.

FOUR STEEL DECKS.

Four complete steel decks are fitted, viz., orlop, lower, main and shelter, the last named being completely sheathed with pitch pine, and the lower and main being covered with the most modern substitute for wood, "terrano." Above the shelter deck at the fore end is the forecastle deck, providing accommodation for stewards, firemen and crew. At the after end is a long combined poop and bridge, sheathed with pitch pine, forming a promenade which is assigned partly to second-class passengers and partly to third-class. Above this is the promenade deck, which is reserved exclusively for first-class passengers, and above this again is the upper bridge deck, on which is placed the officers' quarters, the flying bridge, which is used for navigating purposes being formed by an extension of the roof of the officers' house.

The now general practice of placing a number of staterooms on the promenade deck has been adhered to in this vessel, each of these rooms accommodating two occupants, which fact, coupled with the obvious advantages of situation, should make them the most popular on board. The passages throughout the accommodation are extra wide, having abundance of light and air.

Metallic beds having spring mattresses, patent fold-up lavatories, boot-racks, jewel cases, etc., comprising the furnishing of each room, all served to accentuate the resemblance which modern steamers bear to a first-class hotel ashore. The ventilation has received special attention, the usual method of tube ventilator being supplemented by a complete installation on the thermo-tank system.

LUXURIANT ACCOMMODATION.

The first-class dining saloon, a large roomy apartment, is situated in the deck house at the fore end of the bridge deck, extending right across, and is lighted by extra large square windows on three sides. The decoration is carried out simply and in good taste the paneling being in oak, with white enamelled ceilings relieved with gold.

Passing through the entrance hall, which is on the same level and adjoins the dining saloon, a grand staircase leads to the music room entrance above and thence to the music room. This room is situated on the promenade deck with all the advantages of light and air which that position bestows. Large square windows on three sides provide light similar to that of the dining saloon. The decoration of the music room is carried out in white with mural panels in silk, the ceiling enamelled white and picked out in gold.

The first-class smoking room, placed on the same level as the music room, is a large and airily constructed apartment, well lighted and ventilated, and as a further add to ventilation a large teak skylight is fitted above the centre of the room. The decoration is in fumed oak, with ceiling in white, and comfortably placed seats and tables are fitted, together with a bar leading directly off the room.

The sanitary arrangements may be described as perfect, being placed in detached blocks, so as to be easily accessible from any part of the accommodation.

HANDSOME SECOND-CLASS.

The seconr-class passengers are provided for in a style differing but little from the first-class. The second-class dining saloon, smoke-room, entrance hall and music room are quite as comfortable, if not so ornate, as the first-class. On the shelter deck is placed the dining saloon, which extends right across the ship, and is tastefully decorated in white with a mahogany dado, the natural color of the wood making a pleasant contrast to the general color scheme.

At the after end of the engine casing of the bridge is the music room, the walls of which are done in mahogany, with lincrusta paneling. In the same house is placed the entrance hall and smoking-room, paneled in fumed oak.

CARING FOR THIRD-CLASS.

At different parts of the vessel comfortably fitted up entrance halls, smoking-rooms and ladies' cabins are provided for third-class and steerage, showing the pains that the Allan Line Steamship Company, Limited, have taken to promote the comfort of this class of passengers.

An interpreter is carried and civilization is kept in touch with through the medium of Marconi installation, which is fitted on board.

The vessel, in addition to catering for the travelling public, has a freight capacity of some 11,000 tons deadweight. Cargo loading and discharging facilities are unusually complete, six large hatches being served by twelve powerful winches and derricks to suit, and a powerful warping winch in steering gear house. Large tanks capable of containing about 400 tons of fresh water are built into the ship for the service of passengers.

The machinery of the vessel, which has been constructed by the builders consists of two sets of triple expansion engines, the diameters of the cylinders being 28 inches, 47 inches, 79 inches, with stroke of 54 inches. The intermediate and low pressure cylinders are fitted with flat slide valves. Direct steam starting and reversing gear is fitted, also steam and hand gear for turning engines in port.

The surface condenser is horizontal, and built of steel plate, with cast iron ends, the condensing surface being 6,000 square feet. Propellors are three-bladed, having cast-iron bosses and blades of manganese bronze. The boilers are seven in number with a working pressure of 190 pounds per square inch. Each boiler is fitted with four furnaces. Forced draught of Messrs. Howden's system is supplied by two fans. The total number of furnaces is twenty-eight, the heating surface 22,000 square feet, and the grate surface 639 square feet. The machinery is estimated to drive the vessel on trial at a speed of over 17 knots.

FRAE AULD SCOTIA

BAD PAISLEY MAGISTRATES

Introduced So-Called American Methods Into Scotland—Is Hector Macdonald Alive?

Frae Oor Ain Correspondent.

Glasgow, May 7.—If e'er there was a country that was as muckle troubled wi' its kirks as Scotland is it maun hae been lang afore my day. For though I hae read somethin' aboot maist o' the countries in the warl', there are nane o' them that seem to hae sae mony kirks that their folk tak seriously as we hae, or sae mony sma' things connected wi' them to differ ower. Dr. Robert Howie, since a moderator o' the United Free Kirk, has been sayin' at a meetin' o' ministers in Glasgow that a' this squabblin' ower the doctrines o' religion is drivin' folk awa frae the kirks an' that this "new theology" frae London has already begun to mak the folk o' Scotland mair careless about the strictness o' religion an' the observance o' kirk ordinances. This, say orthodox ministers like Dr. Howie, is what follows the shakin' o' the auld pillars o' Christianity, an' it wad be far better to stick by the auld doctrines, an' no drive folk into indifference by leavin' them nae firm creed to believe in. Just as if folk werena learnin' ilka day to think for themsel's, even in a creed-bound auld country like this, an' then the ministers wonder why mair folk dinna gang to the kirks.

The uncertainty in things religious comes oot in the action o' ministers themsel's noo an' again. The Rev. C. Rolland Ramsay, minister o' St. Luke's United Free Kirk, Glasgow, has gane ower to the Auld Kirk, an' ta'en the job o' parish minister o' Townhead, in the east end o' the city. No lang syne the Free Kirk minister wha went back to the Auld Kirk was looked on as a sort o' backslider, as a man wha was desertin' his principles, but although the Auld Kirk presbytery grumbled at a parish takin' a minister frae anither kirk when they had lots o' young men in their ain kirk wha couldna get parishes, an' the United Free Presbytery grumbled at losin' ane o' their hardest workin' members, naebody seems to think onything the less o' Mr. Ramsay for shiftin'. Dunfermline Auld Kirk Presbytery has had an application frae a probationer o' the United Free Kirk for admission to the Auld Kirk an' they, too, had naethin' to say against the principle, except that it was hard lines on 180 probationers in their kirk already, a' lookin' for parishes. This leanin' across to the Auld Kirk by ministers o' ither Presbyterian kirks is ane o' the encouragin' signs o' the times, even though it may show that minsters themsel's arena sae particular aboot denominational differences as they used to be. It points to the day when there will be a big union o' the Presbyterian kirks in Scotland, an' somethin' like a trial made to get them to agree among themsel's afore they preach peace an' goodwill to common humanity.

The Kirk Commission is daein' what it can to heal up the breach atween the Frees an' the United Frees, but it isna makin' muckle headway. It has still somethin' in the 'teens o' kirks to decide the owners o', an' the end o' its labors in the matter o' dividin' property is in sicht. But it hasna managed to mak the twa ony better freen's. The commissioners advised them to try to arrange, in poor country parishes, to use the same kirks by haudin' their services at different times, and said that they wad confirm ony agreement o' this kind the twa kirks micht mak. Somebody said the commissioners should themsel's mak regulations for the joint ownership o' kirks but they wadna dae this, because they said sic regulations might need to be altered frae time to time, and when they were done wi' dividin' the property they wad cease to exist as a Kirk Commission, an' they couldna leave agreements that micht turn unworkable in a year or twa. What they wanted was for the kirks themsel's to draw up agreements which they themsel's could alter as the years went by. But someway, there seems little hope o' the kirks tryin to dae this, an' the commissioners will likely be compelled to dae with the remainin' kirks what they hae done wi' the rest — gie them to ae side or the ither, an' let the side which gets nae kirk gang oot into the wilderness. It will be a while afore the Frees an' the United Frees get over the heartburnin' o' their union an' anti-union squabbles.

We were readin' in the papers aboot the election o' a mayor in Chicago an' the ways o' American elections generally, an' just on the back' o' this, an' when we were thankin' Providence that we werena as these Yankees, Paisley cam forard an' knocked the words doon oor throats. Paisley isna a big place compared wi' Chicago or New York, but it seems fairly clever for its size at copyin' the ways o' American toons. A case in the coorts shows that twa o' the magistrates—sittin' as magistrates—said a certain public hoose wad hae to be altered in certain ways or it michtna get a license next time the tenant asked for ane. This was a serious business for the tenant, an' she at since started to get the alterations made. Noo it turns oot that the twa magistrates—the ane as a maister joiner an' the ither as a maister plumber—got the contracts for the alterin' o' the public hoose which they themsel's—as magistrates—had ordered to be altered, or they themsel's—as a licensin' coort—micht refuse the license. See hoo it works oot? But the twa o' them differed ower the payment for the contract, an' when they took the case to the coorts the haill story cam oot, an' sae disgusted was the sheriff that he gave them a big bit o' his mind, an' said he wadna hae believed sic things were done in this country. It micht be possible for a man to be an upright magistrate, an' an upright tradesman in circumstances like that, but the law wad be unca suspicious on the point. Little wonder.

When Dr. Alex. MacBain passed awa' at Stirling the ither day, Scotland lost its ablest Gaelic scholar an' ane o' its cleverest men. Dr. MacBain kent mair aboot Gaelic an' Hielan' things generally than ony ither livin' man, an' he wrote books that are the authorities on these subjects. His "Celtic Mythology and Religion" made a name for him as a writer in 1885, an' he was editor at different times o' the "Celtic Magazine" an' the "Highland Monthly." It was in 1896 that he published his biggest book—"The Etymological Dictionary of the Gaelic Language." Into this book he put a' he kent aboot the language, an' it was praised a' ower the warl', especially by Celtic scholars in ither countries. He was rector o' Inverness High School, an' ane o' the big men o' the Highland capital. When I min' first there were three big men in Inverness, that is, three men big in the public eye. There was, first, Alexander Mackenzie, better kent by his nickname "The Clach," wha wrote books showin' up the evils o' the Highland land laws, an' helped by his writin's in the papers to keep the land law reform agitation sae strong that the government o' the day were forced to pass the Crofters' Act. There was, second, John Murdoch, "The Highlander," wha tramped the country simmer an' winter, agitatin', agitatin', agitatin', an' was ne'er seen except in kilt an' plaid. There was, third, Alex.—MacBain, the scholar, wha stayed at hame an' nursed the ancient literature an' language o' the Celts. Noo it seems to me there is naebody in Inverness o' any importance.

Just when the Dingwall memorial to Hector Macdonald is ready for showin' to the public, there comes since mair the story that he is still livin'. Last time it came frae the Japanese army in Manchuria, whaur it was said Macdonald was helpin' the Japs to conquer the Russians. Noo it comes frae the heart o' China, whaur he is said to be drillin' Chinese soldiers as he drilled the Soudanese in the years afore Omdurman, until he made them fit to stand up against the wild rushes o' the dervishes, an' gain Khartoum an' the Soudan for civilization. If he trains the Chinese in the same way, China winna be lang until it has an army that will gie a fright to the rest o' the warl'. But is he livin'? A man wha was twa hunder miles inlan' frae Shanghai in December last says he was within six feet o' him, an' kent him as weel as he did when he saw him in Pretoria at the time o' the Boer war. He was drillin' Chinese soldiers, an' as soon as he saw that this man seemed to ken him, he spak to a Chinese officer, and this officer ordered the teller o' the story to clear oot or it wad be waur for him' an' never to show his nose in that countryside again. See he cleared oot, but he learned in ither Chinese toons that it was quite a common belief amang English an' Scot folks in China that Hector Macdonald was in that country. It wad be the biggest mistak on' o' the century if he wad come hame for the unveilin' o' his ain memorial at Dingwall next month.

The Government seems inclined to stop the fishin' for whales in the seas aff the Orkney an' Shetland Islands by companies frae Norway. They've introduced the Whale Fisheries (Scotland) Bill, which, if it passes, will mak the fishin' for whales without a license frae the Fishery Board for Scotland a criminal offence. Naebody will get a license for mair than ae whalin' steamer, an' nae license will be granted except to British subjects or companies registered in Great Britain. Naebody will be allooed to kill whales within three miles o' low water or within a mile o' ony fishin' boat, either anchored or engaged in fishin'. Whale fishin' will be totally prohibited frae the first o' November to the end o' March. This will mean that the Norsemen will hae either to turn British subjects, or register themsel's as British companies if they want to keep up the whale fishin' at the islands. It will also mean that they winna carry sae muckle money hame to Norway at the end o' each season as they hae been daein' for twa-three years back, when there was nae restriction on the number o' steamers they micht employ or the closeness they could come to the land. But it winna mean that mair Scottish fishermen will gang in for catchin' the sma' whales that live in the seas around the islands. Scottish fishermen arena strong on whale fishin'.

LOCUSTS DEFY FIRE DITCH.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Cape Town, May 18.—Fate seems to be against Germany's efforts to make anything out of her colony in South West Africa. Locusts are now proving hardly less destructive than the three years rising of natives.

A settler attempted to defend his little plot of land against the invaders. He dug round it a ditch and at the bottom he lit a fire. But the insects swarmed into the ditch till the flames had been extinguished by their accumulated corpses, when those which came after them overran the garden and devoured everything in it. Nothing like the present scourge has been known since 1871.

Labor Situation Unchanged Despite Official Action and Presence of New Factor

Men Select Committee to Draw up Conditions of Settlement—Chairman of Harbor Commission Will Select Committee and Both Bodies Will Confer Before Waiting on Shipping Federation—Exciting Scenes in Lengthy Meeting of 'Longshoremen at Which Acting Deputy Minister of Labor and Chairman of Harbor Board Were Present—Affairs Quiet Along Water Front.

Unsettled.

Briefly, the position in the wharf labor difficulty remains unchanged today, yet there is a possibility that machinery set in motion last night will result in a movement to mark the beginning of the end.

If it fails?

If it fails Montreal will be plunged into a labor war with the harbor as the centre of action and the result will be a severe blow alike to the interests of the men and those of the shippers.

The machinery is this. On the suggestion of Mr. George Washington Stephens, chairman of the Harbor Commissioners of the port of Montreal, a committee of three selected by the 'longshoremen will this morning meet a committee, also of three, making a total of six, and this general committee will draw up the conditions acceptable to the men. Afterwards, this agreement, written, will be submitted to a general meeting of the laborers. When it has been fully ascertained that the conditions so written are really those desired, the demand will be submitted to the shippers and from this basis efforts towards conciliation will be again commenced.

As a matter of fact this is not an actual advance. What it means is this, that by it the men are committed to a definite statement of their wishes and will be compelled to act upon the conditions asked for in the document drawn up to-day, or whatever time it is placed in shape.

The tenor of last night's meeting, which ended at a quarter after midnight this morning, was that the men wanted an increase of five cents an hour, and that they were willing to make an agreement for three years with the shippers on that basis.

Asked by Mr. A. F. Acland, acting deputy minister of labor, if they would agree to accept the offer of the shippers to an increase of 2 1-2 cents an hour, leaving the balance of 2 1-2 cents an hour to arbitration—the arbitration being either to proceed while the men were at work, or while they remained idle pending a decision, the answer was emphatically no.

FIVE CENTS A SLOGAN.

"We want five cents," "Cinque cents" came in English and French, and after a while it appeared that five cents was a slogan, the password of the gathering.

The meeting at which all this occurred was held in Gauthier's place at the corner of St. Gabriel and St. Paul streets. The meeting was addressed by labor men and later by Mr. Acland, and by Mr. Stephens. Later these gentlemen went away. The opinion in the hall was that they went to meet the members of the Shipping Federation. The real purpose of their departure was in order to gain an opportunity of conferring with Hon. Mr. Lemieux. This they did. Afterwards these gentlemen returned to the meeting. The result of their second visit is as told in the foregoing.

On the advice of the president, Mr. John Ryan, the men went away quietly and without disturbance. The last word was that there is to be a meeting at 11 o'clock this morning in Gauthier's hall.

The last action of the meeting was to select the committee as suggested by Mr. Stephens. This committee will be composed of Mr. Ryan, Mr. Louis Martin and Mr. William Mansfield.

Dock workers filled the Gauthier Hall to discuss the offer of the Shipping Federation and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

PEACEMAKER WAS WELCOMED.

Mr. F. A. Acland, acting Deputy Minister of Labor, arrived on the scene about an hour after the appointed time for commencing the meeting.

He was given a good reception and no time was lost in commencing proceedings.

Among those on the platform were Messrs. George W. Setphens, chairman of the Harbor Board; Felix Marois, secretary of the Board of Conciliation of the Province of Quebec; John J. O'Donoghue, legal adviser of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada; Albert Saint Martin, J. A. Rodier, and others.

Mr. Acland opened the meeting by reading the following offer from the Shipping Federation and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company in English and French.

OFFER OF THE COMPANIES.

"Montreal, May 17, 1907.

"To whom it may concern:

"The Shipping Federation of Canada and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company submit a further offer, without prejudice, of an increase in wages to the 'longshoremen of the port of Montreal of 2 1-2 cents an hour, day and night, and will at once submit the question as to the allowance of a further increase not exceeding 2 1-2 cents per hour, night and day to arbitration, on condition that the 'longshoremen resume work forthwith and on the condition that the rates above-mentioned of 2 1-2 cents per hour day and night, or such rates as may be fixed by arbitration will remain in effect until the last ocean vessel sails from Montreal, season of 1907.

"One arbitrator to represent the Shipping Federation of Canada and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company; one arbitrator to represent the 'longshoremen of the port of Montreal and the third arbitrator to be appointed by these two arbitrators. In the event of these two men failing to agree on a third arbitrator such third arbitrator is to be appointed by a judge of the Superior Court. The decision of the arbitrators to be binding on the parties and to be final and to have force and effect until the last ocean vessel sails from Montreal, season of 1907.

"The decision of the Board of Arbitration must be rendered not later than May 25, 1907.

"(Signed), HUGH A. ALLAN,
"Chairman of the Shipping Federation;
"D. McNICOLL,
"Second Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company."

CONCESSIONS GAINED.

Mr. Acland said:

"You will see by this document that I have succeeded in getting more concessions, although some of the members of the Shipping Federation were opposed to the proposition."

Mr. Acland urged the men to accept the offer. He said he had received a sympathetic message from Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General and Minister of Labor, expressing the hope that the difficulty would be settled to-night. He thought the action of the men was not fair to the Department of Labor. The men had thrown the Lemieux law in the dust and trampled on it. In his opinion it would have been better if the provisions of the law had been complied with, and he made an earnest anneal to the great gathering to accept the offer before them.

REFUSED THE OFFER.

"Will you accept this offer?" said Mr. Acland.

"No," filled the hall, and there was much excitement.

A voice—"There are some clauses in the offer that are unfair, and we will not accept it."

After President Ryan had succeeded in restoring order, Mr. Felix Marois, secretary of the Province of Quebec Conciliation Committee, was introduced.

Mr. Marois commenced by referring to the situation as a "strike"

He was informed from all parts of the hall that this was "no strike." There was more discussion, and a dramatic scene followed.

The president orderd one of the men to keep quiet, and give the speakers a hearing or get out. The man arose from his seat and took up a position immediately in front of Mr. Acland, and holding up his right hand, said in an excited tone of voice:

WILLING TO GO TO JAIL.

"I am a married man, and before I will go back to work for 27 1-2 cents an hour I will go to gaol."

Mr. Marois then contended that the men had practically suceeded in their demands and advised them to return to work in the morning. He believed the arbitration committee would award them their five cent increase if all he had heard about the treatment and advanced cost of living was true. He was also convinced that the Shipping Federation would answer the Employes' Correspondence next spring. Mr. Marois thought that the police on the docks, who were doing nothing but putting in long hours shuld be paid extra.

A RUSSIAN SPEAKER.

A. Litvitt then delivered a stirring address in the Russian language, contending that the days of slavery were not altogether at an end. The capitalists of Montreal were in the same category with the employers of Russia.

Edmond Charron, president of the Civic Employes' Union, said he was pleased to see Government officials on the platform. He believed that Messrs. Acland and Marois had been misinformed as to conditions in the port of Montreal by the members of the Shipping Federation. He declared that, as a rule, the earning powers of the men, day in and day out during the shipping season, would not exceed $10 or $12 a week. He declared that the Shipping Federation had no regard whatever for the Alien Labor Law. Men wer brought from Portland, and other United States ports, under contract, and all promises with the men had been shamefully violated in the past, and this promise of arbitration was only a scheme to further humbug the workers. He warned the men to be sure of what they were signing.

ALIEN LABOR ACT FARCIAL.

Mr. John O'Donoghue, of Toronto, legal adviser of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, was given a warm reception. Mr. O'Donoghue, after commenting favorably on the Lemieux law, made a bold statement to the effect that the Alien Labor Act was an absolute farce and not worth the paper it was printed on. He believed that all workers were entitled to enough wages to maintain their wives and children in a respectable condition. There were some fair employers, but they were like roses on McGill street in January. He did not blame the men for not having confidence in the members of the Shipping Federation.

TWO SIDES TO QUESTION.

Mr. George Washington Stephens, M. L. A., chairman of the Harbor Commissioners, pointed out to the men that there were two sides to the dispute. He did not want to see the port of Montreal destroyed. He believed in a man getting a fair day's pay for a fair day's work. He did not want to see the port filled with foreigners, and Americans, and when it became apparent that the offer of the Shipping Federation and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company was not going to be accepted he asked the men to make their demands in writing and he would use that as a basis for a conference with the Shipping Federation.

COMMISSION WAS COSTLY.

Mr. Charron then delivered another short address during which he claimed that while the old Harbor Board were fighting with the Shipping Federation it cost the citizens of Montreal more than $200,000.

Louis Marin contended that no agreement should be signed with the Federation unless the coal shovellers were included in the agreement. These men were standing by the 'longshoremen and it was up to the longshoremen to support them.

Other speakers were Messrs. Albert Saint Martin, and J. A. Rodier.

The question of a committee having been put to the meeting and accepted, the affair ended.

WHARVES WERE QUIET WHILE MEN WERE MEETING

The wharves last night presented the same deserted appearance that they have for the past few days. Some of the sheds were almost totally deserted, and with the exception of persons going to and from the boats there were very few in sight. At the Allan line sheds a small gang was at work, and at other sheds the members of the ships' crews were engaged in handling the freight, but there was no sign of any excitement or trouble.

The number of ships in port is now twenty-two, three more, the Escalona, the Montrose and the Englishman, having arrived during the afternoon. Two sailed during yesterday, the Pretorian and the Tunisian, while the Dageid has cleared and will sail on Monday. The crews of many of them are working hard to get the vessels cleared in something like the regular sailing time. The Sicilian has a crew of about two hundred, and of these about three-quarters are able to work on the cargo. On the Cassandra about 150 men of the crew can be put at work, and everything possible is being done to get the cargoes unloaded.

CROWDS IN THE STREET.

Quite a crowd was on the streets around the hall at the corner of St. Gabriel and Commissioners streets, where the 'longshoremen were holding their meeting. The windows of the hall were all open, and the speeches could be plainly heard, and many of the men remained outside where the air was somewhat more pure, and there was more chance to breathe. All were very quiet, though, and there was no sign of a disturbance. Chief of Police Campeau, Chief Detective Carpenter and Inspector Leggett were on the scene, remaining there until after the meeting broke up.

On the opposite corner is another hall above a saloon, and here many of the men had gathered and the strains of a fiddle and the shuffle of feet could be heard. During the time that the men were waiting in their hall for news from their committee, a number of songs were given by different members of the crowd. All seemed carefree and contented, and at that stage the meeting represented a social gathering more than a meeting of men who had stopped work and were contemplating, in order to get what they say is their rights, being without work for an indefinite period.

The Police Reserves at lunch.

EVANSVILLE STRIKE RIOT.

Evansville, Ind., May 18.—After a day of rioting, the second day of the street car strike ended with one person dead, six injured and street car traffic suspended. A meeting of the Board of Safety and Order was called, and two hundred special policemen were sworn in.

A street car manned by a non-union crew, and going at full speed jumped a curve and dashed into a two-storey building, partly destroying the building. The death occurred in this accident. The car company says that a strike sympathizer boarded the car, and after knocking down the motorman and conductor, put on full power, causing derailment. Felix Oden, a strike breaker, was assaulted in the street by a mob of several hundred persons, and had his ear cut off and his arm fractured.

BIG CENTRAL POLICE STATION IS NEEDED

Awkwardness of No Suitable Quarters Was Very Much Felt This Week.

Labor troubles along the wharf during the present week show sharply the necessity for a big central police station, altogether separate from other departments. The modern economy calls for a police establishment which is big enough to comfortably house a great number of men required on any special duty, and one which can also provide for such courts as are needed, close by the centre of police activity, and for the maintenance of patrol service. The present trouble has shown that concentration of the force is an absolute necessity. The greater portion of the men must be gathered at a point from which they can readily guard the territory under surveillance, and there maintain a reserve body sufficient to cope with any emergency situation. Without the makeshift quarters, the police gymnasium in the Bonsecours Market building, the force would be in a pretty plight. The present police headquarters in the City Hall has a guardroom hardly large enough for the men needed there for daily service, and the addition of reserve men has resulted in cramped quarters for all in the place. By the use of the gymnasium the greater portion of the force on strike duty has been centralized at this point, sleeping and eating in that place. The extra men held at the regular headquarters have also been using the commissariat at the gymnasium. This has been useful, but even that has brought about a state of congestion.

The most approved plans for such a Central station would be those which would provide for a large hall, one in which at least five hundred men could be quartered for emergency duty. A place in which guard beds could be stored and in which they could be distributed so as to allow ample sleeping accommodation for the men off duty. This place should also have good kitchen accommodation, because in such cases it is necessary to provide meals for the men. The reason of this is that the reserve detail may always be on hand, so that even if engaged in the very useful practice of dining, the men are on the spot and ready to swing into line for duty. The suggestion of a Central station, and one with a hall to accommodate at least five hundred men, is one approved of by the officers of the force. Indeed, one of them was years ago responsible for a plan to such an end. That a place of such size is needed will be understood when the rate of growth of the city of Montreal is understood; it will also be appreciated when it is remembered that the force at present under command of Chief Campeau numbers 509 men, rank and file. That force is being added to and must needs increase as the metropolis grows.

By the construction of such a police headquarters an evil that at present exists could be abolished; that of driving patrol waggons to the station and bringing prisoners across an open space so that all who pass may see. The plan for a Central station would provide for a covered way through which the waggons could drive to an interior court and there discharge prisoners. At present the waggons drive to the western entrance of the City Hall and prisoners are carried across the sidewalk, the sight proving an attraction for all the loafers in the vicinity as well as a majority of the passersby.

DOLLY VARDEN AND FOOT-RITE SHOES.

The two young men who have secured the Third Agency for the Exclusive Sale of these High Class Shoes on Notre Dame Street.

In the business founded by their father, Messrs. Arthur and Henry Robitaille have achieved a good measure of success in the Grand Union Shoe Store at 397 Notre Dame street west.

The Dolly Varden Shoe Company announce the awarding of the down town agency for their famous shoes to these two young men.

ARTHUR ROBITAILLE, THE GRAND UNION SHOE STORE.

The Dolly Varden still maintains their proud boast of selling their shoes in the three great shoe marts of the world at the same stamped prices. It is a shoe of the first class, and a lady who wears one always feels that she is in the height of fashion and does not have to suffer the foot tortures of the average fashionable shoe.

The Foot-rite Shoe Company also opens this week in the Grand Union Shoe Store. The Foot-rite was fittingly called the Napoleon of Shoes. It has with its 30 improvements stolen a march on the antique methods of other shoe manufacturers, and promises to easily vanquish all opposition. This is distinctively a mannish shoe for men, and it not only corrects foot faults, but it gives an athletic help to its wearers.

HENRI ROBITAILLE, THE GRAND UNION SHOE STORE.

The Grand Union Shoe Store, situated in the shopping district, which was at one time Montreal's leading thoroughfare, will have a profitable advantage in these two exclusive agencies.

Neither the Victorian nor the Virginian make very fast time up the river because of the care necessary to bring the huge vessels through the narrow channel.

Tracks Laid in Toronto Ordered Torn Up by City.

Toronto, May 18.—The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board has ordered that, to cope with the "overcrowding situation, the Toronto Railway Company must construct between ten and fifteen additional miles of double track and one hundred new cars, the latter to be finished in time to be put into operation as soon as the new lines are built. Passengers are to be prohibited from entering by the front door, arrangements being made for them to enter by the rear door and leave by the front door. Regulations should be made by the company to put a stop to the rule of the "end seat hog" on open cars.

Another dispute has commenced between the city and the Street Railway Company. Without waiting for permission from the city, the Street Railway started to put a curve in front Queen street to the New Scarboro Amusement Park. Yesterday a force of men was sent from the City Engineer's office and the rails put down were torn up. The Street Railway Company claimed that under the recent judgment of the Privy Council it can put curves and loops when-ever it pleases, and this last trouble will probably lead to an interpretation of the judgment.

The officials of the Textile Workers' Unions state that their labor troubles have been settled satisfactorily.

At the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council it was decided to stand behind the striking granite cutters, carpenters, teamsters and 'longshoremen in their fight for better conditions.

J. A. Champion, Toronto, 2nd vice-president of the International Association of Machinists, has returned to the city and will help the men to settle their wage dispute with the officials of the G. T. R.

Several new members were initiated at last night's meeting of the Electrical Workers' Union. The organization was reported as being in good shape. It was stated that trade was brisk and members fully employed.

The granite cutters will hold a general meeting of the organization, in the Labor Temple, on Tuesday evening. Matters in connection with the strike situation will be considered. All the members have been requested to attend.

Mr. John O'Donoghue, Toronto, legal adviser of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, is in town in the interests of the local union of Machinists in their fight with the Grand Trunk Railway Company. "Jack," as he is called by the boys, is undoubtedly one of the best informed lawyers in Canada on the labor movement. He has made a life study of the problem of capital and labor and is very popular with the labor leaders of the Dominion.

J. J. O'Keefe, of Cincinnati, of the Iron Mounders' Union of North America, arrived in the city to-day for the purpose settling the strike of the iron moulders of the Standard Foundry, at Longueuil, Mr. O'Keefe, accompanied by President Robert, of the local union, had a conference with the management of the foundry, and it is expected that all hands will return to their benches on Monday morning. It was not a dispute about wages or hours. The men refused to work with non-union moulders.

ENFORCEMENT OF LABOR ARBITRATION.

Special to the Montreal Star.

New York, May 18.—The Tribune, in an editorial, discusses the enforcement of labor arbitration. It says:—

"The industrial arbitration law of New Zealand has been watched by the world as one of the most interesting experiments in the adjudication of disputes between labor and capital. It may still be too soon to pass final judgment on its beneficence, and it may be that opinions concerning its general effect thus far upon trade and industry differ widely. But one point on which there was at first much doubt appears, according to the High Commissioner for New Zealand in London, to be pretty well settled. That is, the practicability of enforcing the provisions of the law upon workingmen as well as upon their employers. Under the law, disputes as to wages, etc., which cannot be settled by direct negotiations are required to be submitted to a court of arbitration, the decrees of which are binding on both parties—that is to say, on all who have registered for the purpose of being subject to the act. It was recognized that it would be easy to enforce obedience upon capitalists and employers, but it was widely supposed that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to do so upon workingmen. Thus, if men demanded higher wages and the court refused to grant them, they might go on strike and it would be impossible for the court to compel them to resume work at the old rates.

"As a matter of fact, however, that very thing which was regarded as impossible has proved to be not only possible, but easy. A little time ago the High Commissioner relates, about two hundred butchers in the slaughter houses at Canterbury demanded an increase of five shillings for each 100 sheep slaughtered. The arbitration court decided that they should have an increase of only three shillings. This award the employers accepted The men rejected it and went on strike. Thereupon the court fined them £5 apiece for striking in contempt of court. They refused to pay the fines or to resume work. Then the court issued warrants for their arrest and imprisonment for a considerable time unless they at once complied with its decree. That brought them to terms. They went back to work at the three shillings advance decreed by the court, and paid their fines, the court generously permitting some of them to do so in instalments of £1 a week. In several other places men who attempted to evade the decrees of the court were brought to book in the same summary fashion. 'In this way,' concludes the High Commissioner, 'the act was vindicated.'

"Whether such a system will prove permanently satisfactory remains to be determined by experience. We can imagine some men regarding it as little better than slavery. To fine a man heavily for voluntarily quitting work and to compel him, under pain of imprisonment, to work for lower wages than he wants may seem sheer despotism. Yet, after all, it is a matter of keeping or breaking contracts. When men in New Zealand engage to work they enter into a contract to continue work, and in case of dispute to abide by the decision of the court. If they quit work and refuse to accept the court's decision they violate their contract. Certainly if an employer is to be held to his side of the contract under penalty it is only fair that employees should be held to their side of it; and seeing that the New Zealand system was adopted chiefly by the device and at the demand of the workingmen, there should be no complaint from them against its impartial enforcement."

LABORERS REFUSED LANDING

Mexico City, Mexico, May 18.—A despatch from Guaymas says that the steamer Maori King has arrived here. She had on board 1,200 Chinese and 800 Russians, who are being brought to this country to work on the Guadalajara extension of the Southern Pacific.

The Mexican Government refused the passengers a landing because 21 armed American guards were aboard. No comment on this phase of the case was made at the War Department. During the trip across the Pacific, twenty Chinese were killed in a riot on the vessel.

THE INSTRUCTOR: The only Child's Shoe made in Natural Shapes of Solid Leather.

The way your children's shoes wear out must often surprise you.

They seem to fall to pieces or the soles wear away as if they had been held to a grindstone.

You have put it down as the result of the incessant running of the little feet.

That, of course, has something to do with it, but only to a small extent.

The real reason is that all children's shoes have been made from factory leavings. You know only part of a hide is good, tough, even-grained leather. The balance is poor stuff that falls to pieces in a short time.

Now each factory uses the best part of each hide of leather to make their best shoes—the shoes they put their name on and back up with their guarantee.

But they want the profit that is in the balance of the leather. It is a dead loss to throw it out, so they make it into "nameless" shoes for your children's growing feet. They put them together in any way with cheap labor, because it is cheap leather—the result is a poor, cheap, nameless shoe.

It is the "nameless" shoe that surprises you by wearing out so quickly. It is also this "nameless" shoe, thrown together in a cheap, shapeless manner, that distorts your children's feet and fills their future years with the pains of corns and bunions.

Now comes the Instructor Shoe—the first child's shoe made in Canada on a scientific basis—the only child's shoe branded with the name, and guaranteed by its maker to be solid leather through-and-through.

We are putting the best leather, the best skill and the result of years of foot-study into the Instructor Child's shoe. We have staked our reputation on it.

The Instructor Shoe is made of the best parts of the best leather. The soles are cut from the centre section of the finest oak-tanned sole leather. The soles are sewn on by the new system which sinks the stitches in a channel, so the sole can wear down without the stitches cutting and the sole falling to pieces.

The foot takes its natural position in the Instructor Shoe

The Instructor Shoe is built on lasts modelled from children's feet. The shape permits the foot to lie perfectly flat— each toe out straight—growing as nature intended it should.

The Instructor Shoe is the only child's shoe which is made in several widths—a perfect fit is certain.

If you would give your children the life-long joy of perfect, painless feet—if you would buy shoes for them that will outwear two pairs of the ordinary kind—ask your dealer for the Instructor Child's Shoe, made in 35 styles and four widths. Name plainly stamped on the sole. 18

EASY MATTER TO REMOVE GRATES

If necessity requires, it is an easy matter to remove the grates from the Sunshine.

Could any operation be easier or simpler?

These four grates are made of heavy cast-iron with the strongest kind of bull dog teeth. Heavy and strong enough to grind up the biggest clinker into particles small enough to sift through the narrow openings between the teeth.

What's left in the ash-pan is not worth sifting.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Geneva, May 18.—Ernest Kasser and Otto Hegerter, two engineers, employed by the Federal Railways, have met with a tragic death. Accompanied by four members of a Zurich Alpine club they left Wessen without a guide, to climb the Speer, 6,220 feet high. Near the summit they lost their way in the deep snow and decided to return.

Kasser and Hogorter led the party which attempted to make a record descent with glissades. The first two men suddenly arrived at a steep slope leading to a precipice. They saw their danger, but were unable to stop, and as they slid down with frightful rapidity they warned those behind of their danger. The next moment they were hurled over the precipice and fell 300 feet, being instantly killed. The other four men returned in safety.

A Sermon for the Readers of the "Star"

THE SECRET OF NATIONAL BLESSING.

(By Rev. J. Charles Villiers, First Congregational Church, Kingston Ontario.)

Human Society had its most primitive and simple representation in the family. But in the course of human history, in the nature of events, men could not confine themselves to the family relation. Of necessity, the circle of human fellowship must be enlarged, and so, in the course of time, there came to be the tribal, and later the national, and still later the international relation.

With the growth and development of the community, life then came into being a community, sentimental and spirit, and as the community continued to increase in numbers, and to develop in intelligence, and in the ideas of larger fraternity, the community sentiment was also increased and intensified until each separate community or nation had a genius peculiarly its own.

The Bible in its record deals very largely with the history of a single nation. The story of that nation is told briefly, but with sufficient clearness to disclose to us that in national affairs as well as in the affairs of the individual life.

"There is a Divinity that shapes our ends, Rough hew them how we will."

The Hebrew people beginning their community life under a most simple form of commonwealth, elected later to be governed, as were the more advanced communities contemporaneous with them, by a king, and under kingly rule they continued, except for such periods as they were the captive or subject people of other and superior powers, which for the time being, eliminated or limited the letter, if not the spirit, of Hebrew national life.

In the course of human progress several forms of civil government have come into existence and held sway. They may, in a general grouping, be placed under three heads, Monarchical where the King rules—Constitutionally or autocratically, aristrocratic where the best born or most powerful rule, or democratic, where the people rule. Under whichever head a nation is at present grouped, it is safe to say that it has leanings and leadings in various directions, which bring it into affiliation more or less close with nations grouped under either one or other of the other two heads. For instance, one of the most absolute of monarchical governments to-day is that of Russia. But Russia is not able, try she never so hard, to withstand the onward and upward march of other civilizations. Far away as she is from those principles of true democracy which are the very life and genius of our British Empire, she is much nearer to them to-day, than she ever was before, and possibly much nearer to stepping into possession of their fullest blessing than are some of her neighbors, who at present out-distance her in their political freedom.

Count Tolstoi has very recently given expression to his opinion of the Church—but Count Tolstoi's thought of the Church is colored by his knowledge of the disposition and character of the Russian-Greek Church, a church so absolutely self-centered and so interwoven into the affairs of State in Russia, as to be of a spirit inimical to the broadest life, and best interests of all classes of the nation. In view of this fact, it is matter for no astonishment that Count Tolstoi, saturated as he is with the ideal social teachings of Christ, should think and speak of the church, as he knows it, with some bitterness of spirit. Russia's present internal conflict is due to failure on the part of both the Greek Church in Russia, and of the Imperial Power to learn and realize that they exist for the people, and not the people for them. Once that idea takes possession of the State and of the Church in Russia, the spirit of rebellion in that mighty country will be allayed. The world will never be led, nor will the people of any nation be led to the true genius of community life by any policy in which there is the least element of oppression. The nations shall bless themselves in Him, whose mission was to set men free, and bring them into a life rich and glorious. To the nations as surely as to the individual soul comes the appeal, the eternal appeal—"What doth the Lord thy God require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God," and the nation which in ignorance or in self pride, refuses to give countenance, and to make instinct with life among the people, this appeal, shall not know the things of peace, but of turmoil and of the sword.

He the form of government of a nation whatsoever it may, it were wise that its rulers should remember that no nation can secure unto itself immunity from the controlling hand of God. He, the Eternal, all obtrusive and universal Ruler, never, for a moment, is without knowledge of, or control, over the world's affairs. It was something more than that, it was the enunciation of a great truth to which Browning gave expression, when he said:

"God is in His heaven.

The nations that forget God, and count not on Him, as a determining factor in their community life are doomed to perish. Few nations, if any, have died and passed into history to be known only as names, for lack only of material prosperity. They died the victims of their own self-indulgence, pride and folly. They forgot God, and those eternal principles of righteousness on which alone nations can endure. Yes, God sits majestically and with sovereign power, the Universal Ruler, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and though communities, large or small, may assume an attitude of indifference to the principles of His Divine Government, and act as though they lived in a charmed circle, into which He cannot and will not enter, yet in their rebellion against Him the truth remains that He is nearer to them, far nearer to them than they imagine, in an over-ruling providence from which they may not and cannot get away. Let us pass to international relations.

Two nations, such as Russia and Japan, go to war, both claiming that they do so for patriotic reasons. Once neighbors, they now become foemen and enemies, each determined on vanquishing the other. In the strife between them great hardship is endured by both contending parties, and the most terrible havoc and loss of life ensues. And though our blood warms and our being is thrilled when we hear of a battle in which a mighty victory was won by the forces with which we ourselves are in sympathy, we cannot wholly suppress the thought and feeling that such bloody warfare is wholly at variance with those principles of eternal righteousness, which should exist between nation and nation. And in such thought and feeling, we are true to God and to ourselves, true to the better instincts and intuitions of our humanity. Our knowledge and understanding of the laws by which God threads his way through and overcomes the evil in human affairs, is so very limited, that we feel in the presence of the best philosophy we possess that we are but—

"Children crying in the night,
Children crying for the light,
And with no language,
But a cry."

Notwithstanding this is our rejoicing that of the Christ, the human manifestation of God to the world, it is proclaimed that He is the "Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace," and that of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, and that it shall for ever be established with justice and judgment.

True, it is that God rides victorious over the mad passions and jealousies of the human race, and the ways that to us are mysterious and past finding out, makes the wrath of men to praise Him, yet He would have us learn that He "hath made of one blood all nations." And, to His praise, be it said, the nations to-day are slowly, but surely, learning the great lesson of the solidarity of the race. We are coming to understand, as we never understood before, that each community and nation is most nearly related to every other community and nation, and that the New Testament doctrine, "members one of another," is to receive no narrow interpretation in the councils of the nations. We are not becoming less patriotic, but we are becoming more philanthropic, slowly is it dawning upon us that the whole world is one family, and that the family of God.

The doctrine "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," is ceasing to be thought of as an unattainable ideal, and is coming to be regarded as a most practical doctrine, which may be, and ought to be, made instinct with life among all people. For through Christ all nations "have access by one spirit unto the Father, and are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God."

The next of the series of sermons for the readers of The Star, will be by Rev. Wylie C. Clark, Chalmers Church, Quebec.

NEW CATECHISM FOR THE YOUNG

Sir Oliver Lodge Proposes One to the British Child Study Association.

Sir Oliver Lodge delivered an address at the annual conference of the British Child Study Association at Birmingham University, on the "Religious Education of Children."

Sir Oliver said they sought to implant such ideas and habits as would result in a happy childhood, and a sound, healthy, and useful life. In the present barbarous state of society children in too many cases received the religion of their parents, which sometimes was a slum religion of a dangerous and troublesome kind; while at the other end of the social scale the religion was mere greed, selfishness, and social apathy, a religion of the trough and the sty. Children needed individual notice and attention, and in the ideal family they got it, but the conditions of average family life throughout Europe, was so bad that the State had to step in and act as foster-parents.

A NEW CATECHISM.

The lecturer concluded by reading a new catechism for very young children, though he said he was by no means satisfied with it, and should probably modify it. The catechism is based upon the one recently published, but combines some of the questions and answers. The following was the text of the catechism:

(1) What are you? I am a living being on the earth, with a body ascended from animals and a spirit descended from God.

(2 and 3) What is the chief difference between animals and man? Man can choose between right and wrong; he was not in a state of innocency like the animals, and he was conscious of a fall when he does wrong.

(4) What are our chief duties? To be helpful and industrious, to endeavor to be good, and learn the rules of life and to obey them.

(5 and 6) How do we know good from evil? Goodness leads to harmony and joy; evil leads to discord and misery. Conscience tells us when we are tempted to do wrong.

(7 and 8) What is sin Sin means doing harm when we know it to be harmful. It is chiefly caused by selfishness—"evil is caused by want of thought as well as want of heart"—but sometimes the results of thoughtlessness are as bad.

(9 and 10) Are there other beings than man? Earth and air and sea are full of every variety of life; it appears wherever it can take hold. The earth is only one of millions of worlds, some of which we see at night in the sky. Man cannot be the highest of all creatures in existence.

(11) What is God? The highest and best Being that we can conceive; infinitely higher and better than we are, manager and controller of everything, kind and loving to all.

(12) Why is man said to reflect an image of God? Because in our small sphere we, too, can manage and control things, and we, too, can be kind and loving.

(13) How have we learnt the nature of God? Partly by means of everything that exists, but chiefly through the revelation of Jesus Christ, who came down from heaven and lived on earth as a man, in order to show us His Father and our Father, His God and our God.

(14) Where may we read about these things? In the Bible, and chiefly in the part called the gospels.

(15) What have you been taught to believe? I have been taught to believe in a Heavenly Father, in His loving kindness as revealed in the life of our Lord on earth, in His Holy Spirit, who will help me if I pray, and also in the Life Eternal, the Communion of Saints, and the Kingdom of Heaven.

(16) How may you pray? I may pray to my Heavenly Father for everything, and especially that I may know and do His Will here and now and always.

(17) What do we ask in the Lord's Prayer? We think of the holiness as well as the loving kindness of God, we long to live in that state where everything will be done on earth happily and well; we pray for food enough for our needs, and for forgiveness as we forgive others; we ask to be preserved from harm and hurt, and we trust in His Fatherly protection for ever.

(18) What is meant by the Life Eternal? It means the highest kind of life possible. We may begin to enter upon it now, but it does not cease when we abandon our earthly bodies. It can continue for ever. Development and progress can continue for ever.

(19) What is meant by the Communion of Saints? The whole of the beings who help and love each other, some of them known to us, others at present unknown.

20) What is meant by the Kingdom of Heaven? The Kingdom of Heaven is the perfect condition of life on the earth, and of existence everywhere and always. It is sometimes called the second coming of Christ. We can help to hasten it a little. It is the only thing worthy of eager and passionate striving.

ter into possession of their new and commodious quarters. The records now show an enrollment of over 400 in the Sunday School. An address will be given by the Rev. C. T. Scott, pastor of Douglas Church. There will be other addresses and special music by the scholars.

Invitations have been extended to a large number of friends to be present at the opening tea and public meeting to be held on Monday evening. Rev. W. H. Emsley will give the address, and the excellent choir under the able leadership of Mr. D. E. Jennings will render a number of selections. Tea will be served in the School room from 6 to 8 p.m.

The services will be continued on Sunday, the 26th inst., when Rev. Dr. Young, of St. James Methodist Church and Rev. E. E. Scott, of Dominion Square will be the preachers.

The need of a new church for the use of Methodist families in the Town of St. Louis has been apparent for some time. The rapid growth of the town during the past half a dozen years has made the present church inadequate to fulfil the demands made upon it.

The corner stone of the new building was laid by the ex-Mayor of Westmount, Mr. J. W. Knox, on Saturday, September 15th, 1906. The General Conference of the Methodist Church was then in session, and Rev. Dr. Carman and other delegates took part in the ceremony. The present beautiful structure is well situated at the junction of Fairmount avenue and Hutchison, only two block west of the old Church. The cost of land, furnishings and church will be about $27,000.

WORK OF WESTERN GENERAL HOSPITAL

Character of the Work Being Carried on and the Requirements of the Future.

As the new Western Hospital building is about to be opened, a brief review of its history and present status may be interesting to all who have contributed to its funds, or who have in any other way aided this west end charity.

The building was erected in 1872 thirty-five years ago, and for about twenty years was used for special hospital work, after which it was changed to a public general hospital. This change occurred in 1894 and the management found it an arduous and uphill task, for although good work was done, the collections for several years were insufficient and debt accumulated. A new organization was then decided upon and Mr. Charles F. Smith accepted the presidency of the institution. His assiduous attention to the work aided by an active and energetic committee of management soon placed the hospital in a better condition than it ever was before, the debt being paid off, and the yearly receipts brought to a point where they exceeded expenditure.

The medical board consists of some of the leading physicians of the city and the various departments are under the care of well known practitioners who are prominent in their profession.

Owing to the growing wants of the west end district for hospital service, due in a measure to the accidents occurring in the factories and mills of the lower city level, cases have been refused, sometimes daily, when the old building with its limited accommodation was filled up. Under these conditions the governors decided some time ago to build a fireproof wing, and this is now about to be opened for the reception of patients. This new wing will have about one hundred beds, including twenty-two private wards. It has been built with all the most modern improvements and conveniences in lighting, heating and ventilation with the latest medical and surgical appliances and instruments. When completed this will be of immense service to the district tributary to the institution.

Hitherto the appeals to the public for funds to assist this work have not been frequent. The erection of the new wing, however, now renders a general appeal necessary for the hospital is supported entirely by public benevolence. The cost of the new building will be about $75,000, and the committee of management have decided to endeavor to raise a special fund of $100,000 to cover this cost, and also to provide a small amount for necessary alterations and improvements. About one-third of the sum is said to be practically in sight, but the committee hope to secure it all in the immediate future, either in present payments or payments extended over five years. The good work done by the hospital in the many years of its existence warrants the committee in thinking that their object will soon be attained, and the funds wanted readily secured. In its public department it serves a large and growing manufacturing district situated in the south-western part of the city. The management are anxious to be in a position to handle promptly and efficiently the numerous emergency calls from this district. They feel assured that with this object in view they will have the hearty support of the many manufacturers and others whom they can thus serve.

The growing desire on the part of the wealthier classes to obtain the best hospital treatment when sickness arises and at the same time to secure the attendance of their own private physician, has led the committee to pay special attention to the private ward department. In fitting up twenty-two private wards where patients will have the best nursing and general care, under the supervision of their family medical attendant, the committee feel that thy are supplying a want specially urgent at the present time, when it is almost impossible to obtain private wards in any of the larger Montreal hospitals. This department will always be self-sustaining.

This condensed history of the Western Hospital shows it to be in a highly prosperous and progressive condition, and the management have been sufficiently encouraged in the good work to hope for aid generous enough to cover the sum required.

ADVANCE MISSION WORK IN CHICAGO.

What the Congregation of a Montreal Presbyterian College Graduate is Doing to Help the Young.

The First Presbyterian Church, of Chicago, proposes to establish in connection with its railroad mission Sabbath school a unique settlement and institutional church scheme that will cost more than $100,000. Announcement of the plan was made by the pastor, the Rev. John Archibald Morison, at a celebration of the mission's fiftieth anniversary.

Dr. Morison graduated from the Presbyterian College, Montreal, in 1891, from which he received the honorary degree of D.D., in April last. The First Presbyterian Church raised last year $112,000 for missionary and benevolent purposes.

"A church will not be erected," Dr. Morison said, "but there will be a suitable building for Sabbath school and mission work. It will be on the southwest side, in a locality where there is an area of a square mile that has no Protestant church. There will be football and baseball grounds, running tracks, tennis courts, a gymnasium, natatorium, and, in fact, accommodations for all sorts of amusements and field meets. When members of my congregation are made acquainted with the great good that results from attractions of this sort for the young they will not hesitate to contribute all the funds needed."

The mission was founded by the Rev. Brainerd Kent, May 10, 1857, in two abandoned passenger cars of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, standing on the tracks near Van Buren street. Boys of the neighborhood had been annoying the railroad company with their depredations. When the Rev. Mr. Kent proposed organizing them into a Sunday school the railroad lent its encouragement, and subsequently bought a lot for the mission.

Empire Day Concert.

The annual Empire Day Concert of the Protestant Public Schools will take place on May 23rd. Some 1,300 pupils, under the leadership of Mr. W. H. PUBLIC MEN SENT TO PRISON.

West Ham Guardians and Officials are Condemned for Bribery.

London, May 18.—With one exception, all the members of the West Ham board of guardians and the workhouse and infirmary officials, on trial on the charge of receiving bribes, were found guilty and sentenced to prison.

In summing up Justice Jelf characterized the practices disclosed in the evidence as being a curse to the country. He added that he was afraid it was a growing curse, and that the people were losing their hold on all that was best in the civic life of the country.

OUR IRISH LETTER

Canadian Pavilion at the Dublin Exposition.

IS NOW NEAR COMPLETION.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star.

Dublin, May 7.—The Canadian pavilion of the Dublin Exposition is well forward under the personal supervision of Colonel Hutchison. It is a very handsome building, and neither trouble nor expense has been spared on it. It has a floor space of 18,000 square feet, the building being 70 feet high, 90 feet in breadth and 200 in length. It is constructed in the half-timbered style, with stucco facings. On the eastern gable the name "Canada" is worked out in huge letters, while over the entrance door are the words, "Irish-Canadian Entente Cordial." A trip through the building with Mr. Brodie, the courteous Government commissioner, gives one some idea of the wonderful resources of the Dominion. The "cold storage chamber" is one of the first things to attract the attention, as it is the centre of the hall, and here all perishable articles, such as cheese, butter, eggs, bacon, etc., are stored and preserved at a temperature of 32 deg. F. In this section, too, will be found a large variety of the splendid tinned fruits, fish, meat, vegetables, cream, milk, honey, etc., which Canada can furnish. An interesting exhibit seen in this section is the little known (on this side of the Atlantic) but delicious maple syrup and sugar. The mineral resources of Canada are of course well represented. Among the exhibits are gold, cobalt, silver, as well as coal, iron, copper, etc., while mica and asbestos, which are largely found in Canada, are also shown. Canada produces, it is said, from 85 to 95 per cent. of the two last named minerals. The centre of the eastern gable is occupied by a railroad map of Canada, 25 feet long, with portraits of Sir Wilfird Laurier and the late Sir John A. Macdonald on each side. At the opposite end is another huge map showing the distribution of minerals in the country, with portraits of Lord Strathcona and Earl Grey on each side. The "Products of the Forest" section gives a very interesting exhibit, numerous specimens from the Canadian woods being shown, one notable log of Douglas fir measuring six feet in diameter. The pulp wood exhibit is also most interesting, especially when it is said there is sufficient to supply the world for thousands of years. Cut off from the rest of the building by a division of plate glass is the fine collection showing the fauna of Canada. In the foreground are three magnificent specimens of the buffalo, two of them having been specially killed for the present exhibition out of the herd now being preserved under Government auspices. Other animals shown are the polar, black and other bears, the moose, caribou, wapite and various other species of deer, beaver, raccoon, wolf, fox and a splendid collection of native birds. An artistic background nearly 400 feet long sets off the animals, birds, etc., to great advantage. It consists of a painting showing the Canadian prairies, etc., and is most effective. Nice roomy business offices are attached to the building, and there is a comfortable reading room, which will be supplied with all the newspapers and magazines published in Canada. This, no doubt, will prove a great attraction to the many Canadian visitors, who are certain to visit Dublin this summer.

Mr. Lonsdale, hon. sec. of the committee of Irish Unionist members, has given notice of a question to the Chief Secretary for Ireland directing his attention to the order recently issued by the Irish Board of Education requiring that in schools under Protestant management, where the substantial majority of the children belong to one denomination, the assistant teacher shall belong to the denomination of the minority of the children. Mr. Lonsdale will ask why this rule has been made applicable only to Protestant schools, and whether it is intended to apply it to all national schools in Ireland without distinction of creed.

Taxation in Ireland has been very much raised in the past half century, though the population has reduced by one-half. In the year 1849-50 the taxation of Ireland was £4,564,000; in 1889-90 it had risen to £6,691,000, and 1905-06 to £8,254,000. Mr. McVeagh, M.P., put the question to the Secretary of the Treasury as to the reason why the taxation had increased to such an extent. In reply to Mr. McVeagh the Secretary also gave some information as to the cost of the Irish services defrayed out of the Imperial funds. It was shown that the expenses had increased from £5,939,000 in 1856 to £7,635,000 in 1905-6. The cost of the Post Office service in Ireland has risen from £808,000 to £1,199,000.

A study of the Secretary of State for War (Mr. Haldane's) memorandum on his army scheme leaves some doubt as to his exact proposals with regard to the Irish militia. It is clear it is not intended that the Irish militia battalions are to be thrown into the territorial army with the rest of the reserve, and auxiliary forces, but they are to form part—and a very substantial part—of the special contingent; 14,000 bayonets out of 33,000 bayonets, to be precise. But there is a special note to the effect that the details of the reorganization of the Irish militia have not been finally settled. They will be awaited with a good deal of anxiety here.

Speaking at a Unionist meeting at Ballymena, on Monday, Mr. William Moore, M.P., said that the truth with regard to Home Rule had been made clear to the English electors Unionists need have no fear of the result. The last session had been a barren one for the Government, with its great majority, and he, with many others, believed that a general election may arrive much sooner than most people expected at present.

A Crimean veteran has just been admitted to the County Armagh Infirmary. He enlisted at Armagh in the 89th Regiment (Royal Irish Fusiliers), in 1846, when 18 years of age. He served over 21 years, 12 years of which was spent abroad in East and West Indies, Canada, China, and Ceylon. He was discharged at Kingston, Ontario, in September, 1869, receiving a pension for life of one shilling per day. He took part in the battles of Balaclava, Alma, and Inkerman, and has several medals. Up to a short time ago he was in fairly robust health, but a complication of diseases has compelled him to go to the Infirmary. His name is John Knowles.

The Dublin fire brigade has been immensely improved in the last few years, and is now one of the best forces to be met with, in a city of the size of Dublin. The report has just been issued by the chief (Captain Purcell), and gives a fine record of the good work done during the year. There was a substantial decrease in the number of fires in the city during the past year, but some of them were serious enough, and but for the promptness and efficiency of the brigade, might easily have resulted in very heavy loss.

Two new arrivals have come to the Dublin Zoological Gardens this week. These are a fine pair of Rheas, which the Duke of Bedford has presented to the zoo. The birds are making themselves quite at home in the large enclosure which had been prepared for them. Rheas do well in this country, and a few years ago Sir Douglas Brooke had a pair which bought out quite an interesting young family in his demesne in the Co. Fernanagh. The Rhea is a South American ostrich.

The Sinn Fein Society and the United Irish League have not been long until they came in conflict. The new movement (Sinn Fein) has been growing rapidly in the County Tyrone, and branches have been established in all the principal towns. A convention, under the auspices of the Irish League in Coalisland on the 7th inst., was held, and at the same time the Sinn Fein advocates held an open-air meeting at Annaghmore Cross, about a mile from Coalisland. Proceedings at the last named meeting had hardly commenced when about a hundred stalwart United Leaguers, armed with sticks and pitchforks, arrived on the scene and announced their intention of breaking up the meeting. Although in the minority, the Sinn Fein men were nothing daunted, and showed a bold front. Revolvers were drawn, and a desperate conflict seemed imminent, when a force of police managed to put a stop to what threatened to prove a very bad fight. The Sinn Fein supporters say they will oppose any Leaguers who may be candidates at the next urban and rural district council elections. It looks like as if there would be war to the knife between the parties in County Tyrone.

Put New Blood Into the Arteries

And the Feeling of Weakness and Fatigue Will Give Way to Health and Vigor.

At this time of year, nothing is of such great value to the human system as new, rich blood. Feelings of languor and depression, headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, impaired digestion, nervousness—these all tell of thin, watery blood and a run-down system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is, above all else, a blood-building restorative, which puts new blood into the arteries, and by so doing lays the foundation for health and vigor.

It sharpens up the appetite, strengthens the nerves which control the flow of digestive fluids, forms new, firm flesh and tissues, and gives vigor to the vital organs of the body.

You can be sure that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing you good, because each dose goes to the formation of a certain amount of pure, rich, red blood. It cures by the building-up process, and its cures are therefore thorough and lasting. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

DETECTIVE KILLED AN INNOCENT MAN

Crowd Pursue Official Who is Shot and Held by Policeman—Piers Burned.

New York, May 18.—A fatal shooting, and an attempt to lynch the man who fired the shot, marked the strike of the longshoremen in Hoboken yesterday. The man who lost his life was an innocent bystander, Harry Marshall. He was struck by a bullet fired by Benjamin Vincent, a private detective, who had been employed on one of the docks affected by the strike. Vincent shot at some strikers with whom he had quarrelled and by whom he was being pursued.

The trouble began when Vincent entered a saloon near the docks and asked for a drink. As the bartender passed the bottle to him, one of several striking longshoremen who were in the saloon shouted: "Don't give it to him; he's a scab." Vincent denied the charge, but the bartender refused to serve him.

Just what happened then is not known, but a moment later Vincent dashed into the street with a revolver in his hand and a crowd of strikers at his heels. As he reached the street he turned and fired. Marshall was standing on the sidewalk, and the second bullet from Vincent's revolver struck him in the head and killed him instantly. When Marshall dropped to the sidewalk the strikers started toward Vincent with cries of "Lynch him. Lynch him." Vincent sped down the street with the revolver still clutched in his hand and the angry crowd only a few feet behind him. When a policeman barred his way the fugitive brandished his revolver as if about to fire, but the policeman was too quick for him and sent him rolling into the street with a bullet in his leg.

The officer stood over the prostrate detective and held the mob in check until several other policemen arrived.

STRIKERS HELP FIREMEN.

Fire last night destroyed the piers of the Morgan line owned by the Southern Pacific Railway on the Hudson River, at the foot of Canal street, Manhattan. A large quantity of the freight stored on the pier in the sheds was destroyed and several ships which were berthed there narrowly escaped. The loss will reach $500,000.

The firemen worked shoulder to shoulder with hundreds of striking longshoremen from other piers, who did all that was possible to save the freight stored under the sheds. The Morgan line was the first of the lines reaching New York to grant the demands of the striking stevedores.

Several engines from the land sides and two fire tugs from the river side attacked the flames, but the piers and pier houses are practically ruined.

NOBLE SENT UP FOR TRIAL.

He Assaulted Family Physician Because of Son's Death.

Toronto, May 18.—Nicholas Noble, fruiter, of Queen street west, was sent for trial by Magistrate Denison on a charge of aggravated assault. He was admitted to bail in $2,000 to appear at the next quarterly sessions.

Dr. Andrew Eadie, the compainant, said he was riding his bicycle and was turning off Queen street into Niagara street, when Noble told him that "he had it in for him." At that moment, he says, he was struck on the side of the head with a whip stock. He was unconscious for two weeks. It appears the defendant was grieving over the death of a son, who was operated on for appendicitis. He believed that Dr. Eadie, who was the family physician, hastened the boy's death.

Unmerited Vilification.

Great Britain is described by foreign critics as at once the most greedy and the most sordid of nations. It lacks both imagination and chivalry. Its policy is mere selfishness, qualified by stupidity. Yet what other nation than the British would be capable of giving back to a conquered land its independence, and entrusting its administration to the general of the defeated race! Imagine Germany doing this in Alsace.—Life, Melbourne.

Motorists and Hedgerows.

English hedgerows form one of the characteristic beauties of English country, and here is a cool proposal that they should all be lowed down to a minimum level in order that motor-car drivers who insist on going at a dangerous pace should be able to see each other better! We should not advise motor-car owners, in their own interests, to commence any such attempt. If they do, they will raise a storm of indignation that will probbaly rather astonish them.—Builder, London.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P.

It has been difficult, hitherto, to discover whether he is a man who puts England's interest before all party considerations or whether he is a politician who mistakes vehemence and verbosity for action. From the cable messages he might have been qualifying as a great statesman, or he might have been demonstrating his fitness for the position of president of a rural debating society.—South China Morning Post, Hong-kong.

NOVI-MODI WARDROBE, 558 St. Catherine St. West

or two, he begins to notice that his "kidneys have gone wrong." The urine gets highly colored—there is frequent desire to urinate—bad headaches—stomach upset—sharp pains in the back—swollen hands and feet—Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia.

It is the constant motion of the train that brings kidney trouble. The vibration loosens the ligaments—strains the muscles—weakens the kidneys so they cannot do their work properly.

Gin Pills
Cure Kidney Trouble.

They give new strength—invigorate muscles and ligaments of the kidneys—take away the bad effect of so much riding.

Railroad men say that there is nothing like Gin Pills for that biting pain in the back and through the hips—for painful and scanty urination—and especially for Rheumatism and Sciatica. You not only feel that Gin Pills are doing you good—you SEE it. Gin Pills have the peculiar property of turning the urine BLUE. A few hours after taking them, the urine changes color—thus showing that Gin Pills have reached the kidneys and bladder and are already making you well.

Just to prove our confidence in these wonderful pills, we will send you a free sample if you write and mention this paper. Do it now. Regular price, 50c. or 6 boxes for $2.50.

KNEBWORTH, THE BEAUTIFUL ENGLISH ESTATE, WHERE LORD STRATHCONA, ENTERTAINED THE COLONIAL PREMIERS

The Ancient Home of the Lytton Family, it is a Treasure House of Historically Rich Objects—Building of Many Stately Rooms Surrounded by a Beautiful Italian Garden--Something of its History.

Special Correspondence of the Montreal Star.

London, May 7.—Wherever Canadians congregate the hospitality of Lord Strathcona is proverbial, whether it be exercised at his London or Montreal houses, at Silver Heights, near Winnipeg, at beautiful Glencoe, his Scottish seat, or at his more recently acquired estate, Debden, in Essex. Familiar as all these places are to Canadians, it is perhaps, in his character of host at historic Knebworth that Lord Strathcona has exercised his hospitality most largely, and to Knebworth many associations of its present tenant will long cling.

There, in the splendid setting afforded by the fine old house, the Canadian High Commissioner, who has done so much for Canada, is, perhaps, seen at his best. There he lays aside the multiplicity of interests which make him one of the busiest men in England, and becomes primarily the genial, kindly master of the house, with apparently little thought beyond the comfort of his guests.

Always an admirable raconteur, Lord Strathcona is heard to best advantage at the foot of his own table, and it is always with regret that the ladies of the house party accept Lady Strathcona's signal for adjournment and leave Lord Strathcona with a purely masculine audience to enjoy his delightfully told reminiscences of Canada and Canada's great men. In England as in Canada, Lord Strathcona's position is unique, his great wealth, his undoubted generosity and his unquestioned ability, to say nothing of his keenness of judgment all tending to form a personality that has not its superior today in Great Britain. Added to this he has apparently discovered the secret of eternal youth, for to-day he is younger to all intents, and certainly as well and hearty, as he was in those far off days when he first won my gratitude and that of hosts of other women by making possible our admission to McGill University on a practically equal footing with men. It is at Knebworth, undoubtedly, that Lord Strathcona shines pre-eminently as a host, and it was there, on April 30th, that he entertained in honor of the Colonial Premiers.

HISTORY OF KNEBWORTH.

Knebworth, the family seat of the Lyttons, is situated near Stevenage, in the most attractive part of beautiful Hertfordshire, and is within easy distance of London; indeed, when press of business causes Lord Strathcona to miss trains, a motor takes him from London to Knebworth in a very short time. Just now the present Lord Lytton and his wife—who when Miss Pamela Plowden visited Lady Minto in Ottawa—reside at the Dower House, the Dowager Lady Lytton having built herself a small house in the immediate neighborhood. Knebworth House itself has had a varied history which can be followed to a great extent in the periods of the various parts of the building, and in the wonderful collection of interesting objects it contains.

During the present tenancy the house has been much improved as a dwelling place by the installation of modern heating apparatus, and of electric light, both having been done so carefully that they have not in any way disturbed the general character of the house, while undoubtedly rendering it much more comfortable. As it stands to-day in the midst of its thousands of acres, Knebworth is unique. As commemorated in an inscription in one of the porches the original fort was granted to the famous Eudo Dupifer at the time of the Conquest, and passing through a variety of hands was purchased during the reign of Henry VII., by Sir Robert de Lytton and by him enlarged into a manorial residence. In 1811 it passed to Elizabeth Bulwer Lytton, sole heiress of the families of Lytton and Robinson. It was she who drew up the plans for the rebuilding and the restoration of the house, and these were carried out by her son, Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, the novelist. The house itself is a huge pile of dull brown faintly flecked with moss where it is not covered with creepers, and from a little distance presents a wonderful picture of solidity and magnificence. The architecture of the newer part of the building, however, leaves something to be desired, as the profuse ornamentation of minarets, cupolas and griffons is somewhat too fantastic to be in perfect taste.

The mile and a quarter approach from Knebworth station is up a gentle incline, and the lodge gates once passed, a tree-bordered road leads to the great castellated gate flanked with cannon, which in turn gives on the splendid facade of the old part of the house. Stretching out from the balustraded terrace directly in front of the main door there is a splendid view of typically English scenery. Slightly to the left of the house, and within a minute's walk of it, lies the wonderful old Norman Church of St. Mary's, which, though much restored, still possesses many evidences of its antiquity. Features of the church are its splendid brasses, to "rub" which enthusiasts come from all parts, and the quaint chapel filled with monuments of dead and gone Lyttons. The pulpit of the Church is of carved oak and is over three hundred years old. Opposite it, and on almost the same elevation is the great pew reserved for Knebworth House, from which a view of church and congregation can be obtained on all sides, and in which one is a veritable example perched up aloft. The church is surrounded by many ancient gravestones, and is still in use. Prettily sheltered by trees, it forms one of the most picturesque bits in the immediate vicinity of the house.

AN ITALIAN GARDEN.

On the garden side the house gives on a quaint, formal, Italian garden, with numerous statues and fountains. A little further on, and skirting a small pool, is the Horace garden, with its many statues, and its beautifully clipped trees and hedges. Near here, too, is the memorial erected by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton to his mother. To the west of the house a long avenue of splendid elms leads to the Lake Lodge, and to Knebworth Lake, where numerous waterfowl make their homes including several swans. On the far side of the lake, on the verge of the woods is a small thatched cottage to which the novelist used to repair to work in solitude when Knebworth was filled with guests. There, one morning early in April, we found great yellow patches of primroses that formed the only spot of color in a rain drenched scene. While the preserves are not very large, the shooting on the estate is fairly good. A feature of the park is the herd of deer numbering well over three hundred, which make the park and wilderness their own, and are so tame that they approach quite close to the house. There are also two Canadian deer imported by Lord Strathcona, and these are so friendly that they allowed us to approach within a few yards of them and stared back at us quite fearlessly.

The ground plan of the house is cruciform in its arrangement of passages. Everywhere heraldic designs and armorial bearings are in evidence. Nearly every ceiling is panelled with them, certainly almost every window has them emblazoned in its upper panes. Everywhere one is confronted with the glories of the Lyttons; everywhere one is reminded of them, even in the fireplaces. Above the main porch on the inner side are the arms of Sir Robert de Lytton, and the date 1563. This porch gives on the outer hall, to the right a carved screen of the time of Elizabeth gives access to the splendidly proportioned banqueting hall. Beyond it to the left lies the picture gallery, a very long room, the screened off end of which is used as a dining room. To the right, and directly opposite, is the library which is reached through a lofty and well designed hall with splendid wide branching staircase richly ornamented. This staircase on the left leads to the minstrel gallery and the Tudor corridor, and on the right, beyond a handsomely carved wooden screen, to the drawing rooms and the Presence Chamber. Beyond the library and also to be reached by way of the banqueting hall is the oak drawing room. All the rooms in the house are hung with many pictures, some of which are very valuable; others are of interest from the subjects they depict, or the skill with which they have been painted by long forgotten artists.

MANY WAR-LIKE TROPHIES.

The halls are decorated with many war-like trophies including splendid suits of armor of the time of the Tudors as well as chain mail worn by a Crusader. The wide staircase is hung with pictures including a number of family portraits. Facing the great window that lights the staircase is an equestrian portrait of the Emperor Charles V., which has been in the possession of the Lyttons since the time of Henry VIII. Beneath it hangs one of the finest pictures in the collection, Spinola, by Velasquez.

The screen leading to the banqueting hall is of richly carved wood and dates from Elizabeth; the ceiling which has the armorial bearings of the families from which the Lyttons are descended in the female line, is still older and goes back to Henry VII. The chimney piece which has a picture of Boulogne empanelled in it, and the wainscot panelling, are of the time of Charles I. from designs furnished by Inigo Jones. The many banners hanging from the ceiling represent the battles in which members of the family have borne arms since Hastings. Placed among these banners is that presented by Queen Victoria to the Lord Lytton who was Viceroy when she was proclaimed Empress of India. Opposite the screen and above the red velvet covered plate table is a fine portrait of Antonio Cavalieri, a noble Venetian whose daughter married a Lytton. The inscription on the frieze around the banqueting hall is as follows:

"Rede the rede of this roof tree.
Here be trust safe, opinion free,
Knightly right hand, Christian knee;
Worth it all, wit in some;
Laughter open, slander dumb;
Hearth where rooted friendships grow,
Safe as alter even to foe,
And the sparks that upward go
When the hearth flame dies below;
If thy sap in these may be
Fear no winter, old roof tree."

THE PICTURE GALLERY.

In the great picture gallery the walls are covered with stamped leather of the time of Charles I., the folding doors and dwarf bookcases being of carved oak. In the big bay window are the armorial bearings of Welsh princes from whom the family are descended. A huge leather screen encloses this window and the great fireplace opposite, thus forming three sides of what is used as a dining room, the fourth side being the mirror panelled end of the picture gallery. Adjoining this end of the gallery is the room once used as a study by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton. The picture gallery contains many portraits of great interest among the most notable being that of King Edward VI., given by him to Sir Edward Lytton; a portrait of Shakespeare at the age of thirty-one with a rare engraving of the same set in the frame, formerly at Windsor; it was given by George III. to Princess Amelia; a rare portrait painted when she was only thirteen of Anne of Austria, Queen to Louis XIII.; a portrait by Lely, of Lucy Waters, dressed as her son the Duke of Monmouth; Queen Anne, by Kneller; the Duke of Gloucester, son of Charles I., painted by Old Stone. There are also portraits of Robert Cecil, first Earl of Salisbury, Cardinal Wolsley, Mary Stuart, Cardinal Richelieu, Sir Thomas More, Sir Francis Drake, Prince Rupert, and a picture of Algernon Sidney, believed to be the only genuine portrait of him painted in existence. Many of the chairs in the picture gallery are of ebonized wood, covered with antique Genoa velvet. A touch of modernity is given here as elsewhere in the house, by tables covered with periodicals and illustrated papers. Here, too, Lady Strathcona shows her love of flowers, and at the time of my visit to Knebworth the dwarf bookcases and the tables were resplendent with magnificent geraniums.

The library, is a great room much used as a sitting room, and here, afternoon tea is always served. It has armorial bearings in the ceiling and in the stained glass of the big window overlooking the garden. From floor to ceiling it is covered with bookshelves even the doors leading to the hall and the oak drawing-room being book covered. Let into the walls at intervals are mirror panels, and also narrow cupboards for the preservation of rare books. The great chimney piece has above it the inscription "Hic vivunt vivere digni."

THE DRAWING ROOM.

The drawing room adjoining the library is panelled in oak and chief among its treasures is a long rosewood cabinet which in addition to a very valuable collection of china, has among other mementoes the snuff boxes of Pitt, Fox, and of Beranger the poet; miniatures of the Lytton family; one of the pearl crosses presented by Mary Queen of Scots on the day of her execution to her attendants; a lock of Wellington's hair; and a lock of Nelson's hair cut off after he fell at Trafalgar. Panelled into the chimney piece of this room are curious portraits of Henry VII and of Edward IV. In addition to numerous family portraits, there are those of Clara Eugenia Infanta of Spain, and Duke Albert of Burgundy, both by Rubens; a very quaint old portrait of Frances, daughter of the second Sir William Lytton, and wife of Sir Anthony Cope; a picture of Queen Elizabeth as Diana; and small portraits of Mary Queen of Scots and Elizabeth, above the door leading to the banqueting hall. The oak chimney piece and the door leading to the library are splendid specimens of antique carving.

The upper part of the house is quite as interesting in its way as the ground floor. Mounting the stair case to the right and passing the handsome wooden screen one enters the State Drawing-room, formerly known as the Presence Chamber, which in ceiling and windows has the armorial bearings of allied families. It is a most imposing room, and at the far end the great stained glass window contains a full length portrait of Henry VII. The pictures include canvases by Carlo Dolce, Murillo, Claud Lorraine, Coreggio, Velasquez, Tintorette and Nicholas Poussin. Part of the furniture of the room is covered with Genoese cloth of gold, a few of the chairs being of Indian work in ivory and gold. There are Sevres and ormolu vases which belonged to the Empress Josephine, a bust by Canova of Petrarch's Laura; and very odd high branched candelabra from India. Factures of the room are the wonderful inlaid tablets, some of Indian, some of early German workmanship, two even dating from reign of Henry VIII.

Adjoining the State Drawing-room are three smaller rooms of great interest. The Oval room contains a curious carving in wood of the Procession of the Cross, dating from the fourteenth century. There is also a portrait of the Emperor Charles V at the age of nineteen. In the small western drawing room the walls are covered with wonderful bugle tapestry in a foriage design, and once in the palace of the Medici. Here, in bas relief, the wainscot represents subjects from sacred history. The pictures include The Magician's Study by Rembrandt. In this room are two oak cabinets inlaid with silver. In the ante-drawing-room the walls are covered with Venetian leather of the fifteenth century, the design being considered unique. The carved wainscot represents the cardinal virtues.

BANQUETING HALL.

Descending the main staircase to the landing, and ascending again to the left one comes to the minstrels' gallery which is furnished with handsome Indian cabinets, and which looks down upon the banqueting hall, being situated directly opposite the plate table, and above the screen. From this gallery a glazed door gives on the splendid Tudor corridor one hundred feet long where most of the principal bedrooms are situated and all of which have interesting historical associations. This corridor is hung with rare prints, and at the far end is a magnificent stained glass window containing the arms of Henry VII and Elizabeth. Beneath the latter is the inscription "The arms of Elizabeth, Dei Gratia, R. A., who was lodged under this roof A. D. 1588 by her loyal servants Sir Rowland Lytton, Lord Lieutenant of Essex and Herts, Captain of Her Majestie's Band of Gentlemen Pensioners, and his wife the Ladie Anne, daughter of Lord St. John of Bletsoe and cousin of Her Majestie thro' joint descent from Margaret Beauchamp, Duchess of Somerset." A feature of this corridor is a remarkable and early model of St. Mark's at Venice which is glazed and panelled into the chimney piece.

Each bedroom has its name in early English glit letters over the door, and chief among them is that known in old inventories of the house as Queen Elizabeth's Chamber, and said to be the room in which she slept during her visit to Sir Rowland de Lytton in the year of the Spanish Armada, when her host was commander of the forces of Essex and Herts at Tilbury Fort. This room has wooden frieze from which hangs the tapestry which conceals the walls and even the door. Part of this tapestry is very old, but most of it is more modern and was made at Beauvais. The fittings of the room are of the Tudor period, the huge four poster having its carved canopy supported by wooden figures. The carved oak mantelpiece, and the dressing table with its quaint swinging glass are also of the time of Elizabeth. Two wonderful cabinets in this room are said to have been spoil from Spain.

Two other interesting rooms in the Tudor corridor are the Hampden and the Falkland, so called because these worthies occupied them when guests at Knebworth at the commencement of the Long Parliament. These rooms and that of the late Mrs. Bulwer Lytton contain a number of family portraits. The apartment known as the St. John is a curious and somewhat uncomfortable room to occupy, owing to the arrangement of mirrors which reflects every thing in an eerie fashion. Knebworth, of course, is not without its ghosts, and one of these, known as the green man, is supposed to haunt a room in the Tudor corridor, doing nothing more fearsome, however, than show a disposition to warm himself at the fire.

Returning through the minstrel gallery one comes to the circular stair which leads to the tower room, passing on the way a colossal figure in boxwood of Sir Walter Raleigh. This tower room is used as a bedroom, the bed having its footboard adorned with a highly carved Flight into Egypt. From the hall on which this room opens, access may be gained past many bedrooms, and the nurseries, to the Lytton wing which at present is practically given up to the use of the Hon. Mrs. Howard and her family. Here one tapestried room with a most attractive arched ceiling is said to have its own particular ghost.

At Knebworth, this interesting home of the Lyttons, Lord Strathcona has entertained largely for years. When his tenancy expires in a little more than a year's time he has his splendid estate in Essex to fall back upon. The house at Debden is large and square, comfortable and modern. It is within easy reach of London, and it possesses some of the finest shooting in England, for at Debden record bags are the rule. It is not likely that Lord Strathcona can contemplate leaving Knebworth without a touch of regret, but the loss is not entirely on his side, for in losing him the old house, with its many associations, loses one of the most worthy of its long line of masters.

END OF DEBATE ON PREFERENCE

Concluding Speeches Before the Colonial Conference.

GOVERNMENT IMMOVABLE

Finally Determined Not to Incur Any Danger of Placing Tax on Food of Masses.

The fate of the preference resolutions before the Colonial Conference in London, have already been cabled to the Star. Fuller details of the incidents preceding their disposal have been received from London.

On the last day of the discussion Sir Wilfrid Laurier observed that Canada, as he had already indicated, stood by the resolutions of the conference of 1902. As regards the precedent of the German Zollverein, to which reference had been made, he pointed out that there commercial unity preceded political unity, whereas in our case we already had political unity, and the question was how far commercial unity would follow.

Free Trade within the Empire had been suggested, just as there was free trade within the boundaries of the United States, Germany and France. For the British Empire this was impossible for two reasons—the United Kingdom was not prepared to limit Free Trade to the Empire, and the Colonies were not prepared to accept Free Trade even within its boundaries. In Canada the policy of Free Trade within the Empire was impracticable, as it was necessary for her to have customs duties as a main source of revenue. Canada had given the British preference deliberately, and had no cause to regret it. She had from time to time increased it, and in the last tariff had maintained it generally at the increased amount of 33 1-3 per cent.

Canadian opinion had been almost unanimous in favor of preference, for Canada felt that she would, as a result of the preference, sell more to Great Britain and buy more from her. Mr. Asquith had not given Canada all the credit to which he thought she was entitled in making a comparison which showed no great advantage to British goods. He dwelt on the effect of the proximity of a nation like the United States, of their own stock, enormous in numbers, and most enterprising in trade; it was not a matter for surprise that their trade with that country had increased.

But, so far as they could, they had done everything to keep trade within the Empire. They had built canals and railways from east to west of Canada, and they had taken care to assist the principle of mutual trade so far as legislation could do it. He proceeded to move that the resolutions of the Conference of 1902 should be re-affirmed. He felt assured that the first three of those resolutions would be approved by all representatives of the dominions beyond the seas. With regard to the fourth, the Australia Commonwealth desired to go further, and put forward their second additional resolution, which he did not consider could be pressed, as it stood in present circumstances. The first additional resolution of Australia, however, regarding the extension of preference by the colonies to one another he cordially approved, and he described the progress which had actually been made in that direction.

THE NEW PRINCIPLE.

He explained that in the recent revision of the Canadian tariff they had adopted a new principle in providing an intermediate tariff for negotiation. They were prepared to negotiate with nations like France or Italy on the basis of that tariff, but their lower preference tariff remained reserved for the British Empire.

There was one matter to which he felt that he must refer, and that was the exclusion of Canadian live cattle from this country. They thought that there was no justification on the ground of the sanitary condition of their cattle, and they resented the measure as an injustice. In the interests of good relations in the Empire he thought it necessary to invite His Majesty's Government to consider the question seriously.

Mr. Asquith observed that as a private member of Parliament he had urged the Canadian view of the question, and he would undertake that the matter should be considered by the Board of Agriculture with the seriousness which it merited.

Mr. Churchill made a long speech in support of the view of the Home Government on the preference question, devoting himself to the question of the inconvenience and undesirability of the proposals from the point of view of Parliamenary procedure. In the end the Conference re-affirmed the resolutions of 1902, with reservations proposed by the Imperial Government.

Mr. Lloyd-George, President of the Board of Trade, on behalf of the Government, also made an exhaustive statement, further assuring the Colonial Premiers that, although the Imperial Government would not object to consider any suggestion coming from an important colony, no such consideration could induce them to change their position in regard to the tariff of the United Kingdom.

He thought consideration should be given to practical proposals, and he made suggestions for improving and cheapening cable communication, the appointment of commercial attaches, and the improvement of transport and passenger communications between Great Britain and the colonies.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE.

Before Mr. Lloyd George addressed the conference, Dr. Jamieson intervened to express the hope that there would be a more sympathetic answer on behalf of his Majesty's Government from Mr. Lloyd George than had been received from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whose able and clear speech had conveyed a decisive refusal of the request of the Colonies. He asked to be allowed to move a further resolution in the following terms:

"That, while affirming the resolution of 1902, this Conference is of opinion that as the British Government, through the South African Customs Union—which comprises Basutoland and the Bechuanaland Protectorate—do at present allow a preference against foreign countries to the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and all other British possessions granting reciprocity, his Majesty's Government should not take into consideration the possibility of granting a like preference to all portions of the Empire on the present dutiable articles in the British tariff."

He pointed out that this went no further than to ask his Majesty's Government to take the matter into consideration, and that the preference was limited to a preference on present dutiable articles.

Mr. Lloyd George said in reference to Dr. Jamieson's resolution that his Majesty's Government would not object to consider any suggestion coming from the representative of an important colony, but at the same time, no such consideration could induce them to change their position in regard to the tariff of the United Kingdom.

He did not propose to submit to them at that moment a definite plan; it would be better that a scheme or schemes should be elaborated slowly and in detail after thinking out all the ramifications of the problem. When such schemes had been prepared and were presented with the full responsibility of the respective Governments behind them, each Government could examine them and confer further.

His Majesty's present Government had been accused of giving the cold shoulder to the colonies. His Majesty's Government had given the colonies the answer which the colonies would have given if his Majesty's Government had tried to induce them, for Imperial or other reasons, to change their own fiscal systems.

His Majesty's Government could not give any other reply to any proposal involving taxation of the food of the people, and this was known before the colonial representatives left their homes. He would only again ask them fully to consider the condition of a thickly-populated country like Great Britain, dependent for its supplies on other lands, and how different those conditions were from what prevailed in the colonies.

His Majesty's Government held that a change from Free Trade to Protection would simply aggravate the difficulties which existed.

In the meantime, his Majesty's Government could only appeal to the colonies not to countenance any scheme which, however, much it would profit them, would involve a risk of increasing existing evils in this country.

In these circumstances he thought that consideration should be given to the proposals of a practical character such as Sir Joseph Ward had brought before the Conference. He made three important suggestions:

(1) For improving and cheapening cable communication with this country;

(2) The appointment of commercial attaches or consuls in the colonies to assist British trade;

(3) The improvement of transport and passenger communications between the Mother Country and her colonies.

MR. CHURCHILL'S VIEWS.

Mr. Winston Churchill in the course of his remarks said: Preference could only operate through the agency of price. It meant better prices; that is to say, higher prices. If it did not mean that, it meant nothing, and could effect none of the purposes for which it was intended. Every tax, however small, must be a factor in price. Its effect might be obscured by all manner of other more powerful forces, such as the acts of Nature and speculative operations. Great fluctuations occurred in the price of all commodities subject to climatic conditions. It was highly dangerous to associate the idea of the Empire in the minds of the masses of the people with enhanced food prices. Many causes of the fluctuations of prices were beyond our control, but the taxes, however small, being the only factor absolutely within our control, would bear all the unpopularity in times of scarcity, and there might easily arise an irresistible demand for their abolition. At present any unpopular tax could be reduced or removed, but these preferential food taxes, these curious links of Empire would be irremovable. They would be fixed as if by treaty with the self-governing dominions, and in return for them advantages would have been accorded, upon the basis of which the whole industry of the Colonies affected would have grown up tier upon tier. If ever the day came when the electors demanded in overwhelming majority the removal of a food tax, which could not be removed without consultation and agreements with Governments and Parliaments scattered all over the globe, a shock and a wrench would be administered to the structure of the British Empire such as it had never before sustained. Even if the economic case against Preference were waived, the political objections to such a system were insuperable. Even at this Conference, where all had been discussed with so much good will and good-feeling, it had been an apple of discord. He agreed with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that any proposal involving the principle of Preferential tariffs would be rejected in the present House of Commons by three to one. But His Majesty's Government felt bound to decline to join in a Preferential system, not because they were not willing to take electoral risks, or still less to make sacrifices for the Empire, but because they believed it to be a system vicious in itself and dangerous to the concord of the British Empire. Some day, when Imperial unification had reached a higher development than was now possible, he believed that men would look back to the Conference of 1907 as a date when one grand wrong turn had been successfully avoided.

COMPOSITION OF THE COLONIAL CONFERENCE OF 1907 AND SOME FACTS ABOUT THE COLONIES

The Colonial Conference of 1907 is now a thing of the past, and the next one will meet in 1911. In the intervening four years great changes will, no doubt, take place in the seven colonies of the British Empire, which were so ably represented in the late conference. It is only possible to think of the many influences which may be at work to alter the personal complexion of the next meeting. Death removed one of the striking characters of the 1902 conference in Richard Seddon, and several colonial statesmen made their first appearance at this year's Imperial gathering. Many changes may take place ere the next conference year comes around.

In this connection it will be interesting to give a few biographical facts about the men who composed the notable conference of 1907 and the countries they represented.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER (Canada).

Area of Dominion, 3,745,574 square miles. Population, nearly 6,000,000. Industries: Agriculture, mining, manufacturing, fishing, lumbering.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the only Colonial Premier to attend all the Colonial Conferences up to 1907, hereafter to be known as the Imperial Conference. Through his long experience and commanding ability he took the first place in the conference's deliberations. He was born at St. Lin, Quebec, in 1841, and in 1860 began the study of law in Montreal, and was called to the bar four years later. Three years afterwards, owing to ill-health, he retired to the country and took up journalism, and later, upon the restoration of his health, resumed law practice at Arthabaskaville. He entered public life in 1871, as a member of the Quebec Assembly, and three years later became a member of the Dominion House of Commons. His first Ministerial charge was Minister of Inland Revenue in the Mackenzie administration in 1876. Following the retirement of Hon. Edward Blake he became the leader of the Liberal party, then in opposition, and in 1896, upon being returned to power, became Premier, a position which he has since held.

HON. ALFRED DEAKIN (Australia).

Area of Commonwealth, 2,992,906 square miles. Population, 3,774,282. Industries: Gold mining, corn, sheep, and dairy produce.

Like his colleague Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Hon. Alfred Deakin began his career as a lawyer and journalist, though the Australian is a much older political hand, nearly thirty years having elapsed since he entered political life. He became a member of the Victorian Parliament when only twenty-three, and for a number of years has shown himself an indefatigable worker.

He has two hobbies—a Parliamentary one and a private one. The former is factory legislation and irrigation, while the latter is novel reading, and, if report speaks truly, he reads a fresh one every day. Mr. Deakin was present at the first Colonial Conference, and has refused a knighthood.

GENERAL BOTHA (Transvaal).

Area of Colony, 111,196 square miles. Population, 1,269,357. Industries: Gold and diamonds.

Perhaps the most interesting figure at the Conference was General Louis Botha, who took such a prominent part in fighting against the British during the Boer war. Such matters, however, are now consigned to the realms of history, and General Botha is now Premier of the Transvaal, working for the happiness and prosperity of both British and Dutch.

The General, who is a well-educated, thoughtful man, was born in Natal forty-four years ago. He married a Miss Emmett, a descendant of the Irish patriot, and has several children.

DR. JAMESON (Cape Colony).

Area of Colony, 276,995 square miles. Population, 2,500,000. Industries: Gold and diamond mining, wool, wine, ostriches corn and cattle.

It is the trifles which so often alter the whole complexion of a man's life, and if Dr. Jameson's health had not broken down, he would now in all probability be one of London's leading lawyers. As a young man he had a brilliant career at London University, but when his strength gave way he was advised to go abroad.

His choice fell upon Kimberley, and there he shared rooms with the late Cecil Rhodes, who from the very first exercised a wonderful influence over the young medico. "Dr. Jim," as he is familiarly known, is a typical colonial, a staunch Imperialist, and a persistent advocate of Colonial preference.

SIR ROBERT BOND (Newfoundland).

Area: 40,200 square miles. Population: 225,000. Industry: Fishing.

Sir Robert Bond, who was born in 1857, is another old political hand, and has been serving the colony of his birth since he was twenty-five, having been a member of the Legislature, Colonial Secretary, official delegate member of the Colonial Conference, and Prime Minister. He is a great authority on all that concerns the colony's fishery rights, and was the leading spirit of the Ottawa conference of 1895. He was also appointed to assist Lord Pauncefote in negotiating a reciprocity treaty with the United States.

Sir Robert, who originally studied law, is very anxious to see his colony made a stepping-stone across the Atlantic, and hopes to see a mail service between England and America via Newfoundland.

SIR J. G. WARD (New Zealand).

Area of Colony: 109 657 square miles. Population: 948,783. Industries: Coal mining, wool, gold, agriculture and sheep farming.

Sir Joseph Ward, who succeeded Mr. Richard Seddon as Premier, was born in Melbourne fifty years ago, but migrated to New Zealand when still of tender age. Here he has risen with mathematical accuracy, becoming a municipal councillor at twenty-one, a mayor at twenty-five and and M. P. at thirty.

During his career as head of the Post and Telegraph Department of the New Zealand Government he effected numerous useful reforms, while he also passed sixty-five bills through the Legislature during the first two months of his Premiership.

MR. F. R. MOOR (Natal).

Area of Colony: 35,371 square miles. Population: 1,108,351. Industries: Coal, wool, tea, sugar, tobacco fruit, corn and hides.

Himself an agriculturist in the County of Weenen, the Hon. F. R. Moor is another of the advocates for colonial preference. Born in Natal in 1853, he became a member of its Legislature in 1886, and is one of the men who helped to carry on a responsible government. He was Minister of Native Affairs for four years, beginning in 1893, and in 1898 he represented his colony at the Customs Union Conference at Cape Town. He was also acting premier when Sir Alfred Hime visited this country for the King's coronation.

Mr. Moor once sought a fortune in the Kimberley mines, but soon returned to his old love—agriculture.

FINANCIAL SIDE OF BETTER STREETS

TREASURER NO OPTIMIST

Neither Is He Enthusiastic About Success of Asphalt—No Share of Loan for Streets.

The financial side of the question of the improvement of the streets of Montreal, now so pressing a problem, was discussed with a Star reporter this morning by Mr. William Robb, city treasurer. His views as to the prospect of a speedy betterment of the situation are to say the least very gloomy.

"What prospect is there then of getting the streets properly paved?" Mr. Robb was asked.

"Inasmuch as the civic revenue is not more than sufficient for general and ordinary maintenance," he replied, "it is useless to speak of a comprehensive paving of the streets, unless a special rate is struck for the purpose or that proprietors be assessed for the cost—and inasmuch as those who are not proprietors get as much benefit from good paving as those who are—the first would seem to be the more equitable."

"What portion of the contemplated loan $5,000,000 would be available for street paving?"

"Not any of it—4-5ths of it being for water works purposes and working capital and 1-5 to cover redemptions of debt and anticipation of special work already voted to the several departments."

"What addition to the present 1 per cent. rate would be necessary to get the streets put in proper shape?"

HIGHER TAX RATE.

"That would depend on the ratio of progress; 1-8 per cent. would yield $250,000; 1-4 per cent, $500,000, and so on, but the tax need not continue beyond the time when what should have been considered essential in the way of permanent paving had been accomplished, as the ordinary revenue derivable from the 1 per cent. should be sufficient for maintenance afterwards. The serious question is, however, the permanency, or otherwise, of the pavement when it is laid—certainly the popular asphalt has not proved itself to be so in our city. Not from any fault in itself, so far as I know, but from the apparent impossibility of securing a solid bed for it to rest on. It must be patent to any one passing along the streets that it is in the hollows or depressions only that the asphalt has given way and that where the substructure of concrete remains level the asphalt is good. It does not seem possible to secure this essential condition. However well the substructure may be prepared—the endless cutting up for drains, gas and water pipes, etc., destroy just so many foundations which are never restored to their original condition, and this goes on till the pavement as a whole is spoiled."

"Do you think then, Mr. Robb, that asphalt as a material for paving should not be used?"

VALUE OF ASPHALT.

"I think that it should only be used where there is a reasonable chance of its being left level and undisturbed, and that proprietors of vacant lots should be compelled to put drain, water and gas pipes opposite every 25 feet before the work of consolidating the foundation is commenced. But well-made macadam roads (of bano rouge not limestone), which can be rolled back when disturbed or stone blocks which can with equal facility be replaced, would appear to be most suitable for places where traffic is heavy.

"Let any one contemplate the condition of St. James street from Victoria Square to the Grand Trunk Station and imagine repairing it—why, there is as great an area of subsided broken and disintegrated asphalt as there is of the original level. It seems a hopeless task to attempt to repair it, and to renew it with the same material would be to waste, for a second time, the money it cost."

DOCTORS CALL WEST-MOUNT'S WATER PURE.

The evidence in the suit against the Montreal Water & Power Company by the Town of Westmount has reached the stage where the evidence of bacteriologists as to the quality of the water Westmount imbibes is being heard. Dr. A. B. Bruere, who had made investigations, pronounced the water free from evidence of sewage, and containing no bacteria which necessarily came from sewage. He considered it good potable water. It was equal in quality to Montreal water, and preferable to that of Back River. Testimony of similar character was given by Dr. Duval, pathologist of the General Hospital, and Dr. Klotz, of the Royal Victoria.

SETTLEMENT EXPECTED IN MACHINISTS' TROUBLE.

Mr. John O'Donoghue, representative of the men on the G. T. R., machinists arbitration, when interviewed by a Star reporter, stated that he expected an amicable settlement between the machinists and the Grand Trunk Railway Co. by this evening.

Cadet Corps Camp.

The permanent camp of the Westmount Cadet Corps will be open this summer as usual. With the exception of practice in military signalling, the time spent in camp will be devoted entirely to recreational purposes. Capt. F. C. Greaves, Victoria Hall, Westmount, is in charge of arrangements.

Moderators are Appointed.

Columbus, Ohio, May 18.—Rev. Dr. W. H. Roberts, of Philadelphia, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

Birmingham, Ala., May 18.—Dr. J. R. Howerton, of Montreal, North Carolina, was elected moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (South), in the United States.

The Post editorially says Prof. Leacock will achieve his purpose better by continuing to address his audiences in the fresh, invigorating style of self-confident young Canada than if he endeavored to force his ideas into the mould of old world conventionality.

DOG SHOW FINISHED IN STYLE LAST NIGHT

Awarding of Specials Finished the Work of the Judges, Which, on Account of the Large Number and Excellence of Entries, Was Arduous.

The Dog Show finished as it started, one of the best shows of its kind ever held in Canada.

The exhibits were excellent, and some very important sales were made, a sale of a Boston Terrier, for instance, bringing considerably over a thousand dollars.

The special offered by Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, was won by Mrs. Allister Mitchell's Blow, a Pomeranian which took many firsts in the "Poms" class.

The "Disinfectol" cup, for the best setter or pointer, bred in America, was won by Ed. Outhet's Maxim Bernice.

The J. Cochrane cup, for the best brace of dogs entered by a resident of Montreal, was easily carried off by W. Roy's Colla Kennel pair Baron and Rex, while the special prize cup for the best local Prince Charles spaniel on exhibition, presented by W. H. Lavers, was carried off by Miss H. Lumsden's Minnie Warren.

The money prizes for the best toy dog and bitch in the show was won by Mrs. Allister Mitchell's Blow and Mrs. John Pitt's Japanese spaniel.

The Lipton Cafe's cup for the largest exhibit owned and benched by one exhibitor went to W. O. Roy's Colla Kennels.

The cup for the best exhibit from the Ottawa district was given to the Governor-General's Welsh terrier, but this award was protested in the ring by one of the Ottawa breeders, who held that the word "best" in the catalogue meant the largest exhibit.

The C. W. Buchanan cup for the best wire-haired fox terrier in the show was carried off by Thomas Moore's Donnington Topper.

F. E. Grafton & Sons' prize for the best local St. Bernard, either sex, was taken by Wm. Dier's Dolly Gray.

The same firm's donation for the best local red cocker spaniel, either sex, was won by Mrs. R. A. Ross' Cinderella.

Messrs. Henry Morgan's offer of a work of art for the best stud dog on exhibition with the largest and best exhibit of his get benched, went the way of the Colla Kennels.

Mr. Stansall's prize of a gun metal watch for the best English, Irish or Gordon setter puppy was originally assigned to an English setter pup, but was protested on the ground that the animal was over age. This matter will be referred to the Kennel Club of Canada.

New York, May 18.—Next Monday, the Brooklyn Handicap is to be decided at the Gravesend course of the Brooklyn Jockey Club. This year the big race appears to be a remarkably open one, but already a number of the eligibles have been seen under colors, and it has been possible to secure a very fair line on their relative merits. The Carter, the Excelsior and the Metropolitan are three stakes that have been calling together the good ones, but it is the Brooklyn Handicap—the first of the rich mile and a quarter fixtures—that is the first leg on the season's championship. It is the race that owners and trainers look forward to every time a likely yearling comes into their hands.

Frequently, on account of the early running of the race, it seems on paper to be a very open affair, but each year the good ones come from winter retirement earlier, until now, May 20, is a date when the capabilities of many former turf heroes is moderately well known. This year almost every starter in the probable field has already been to the post, and enough has been shown in public to warrant the prediction that it will be a turf battle worthy of the traditions of the prize.

After a careful study of the probable field, my choice is made on Harry Payne Whitney's magnificent mare Tanya. Away from the races for a season, Trainer Rogers has brought her back in excellent condition, and she is a miss that is well qualified to race the distance. She is a very rapid breaker, a decided advantage in the big field that will go to the post, and she is as game a mare as ever looked through a bridle. Tanya was brought back for this Brooklyn and I expect her to be returned the winner.

Dr. Gardner, though not the most reliable horse in the world, is the one that, in my opinion, is most to be feared. He has a phenomenal turn of speed, and has already demonstrated that he is capable of carrying it useful distances. His easy victory in the Excelsior, when he took up 123 pounds, made it appear that he could race on indefinitely. Since that running he has been undergoing a skillful preparation, and I know that Trainer Frank Weir is very sweet on his chances. If he will race to his promise he should be very close to the chestnut mare at the end of the mile and a quarter.

C. E. Durnell has an excellent chance to take third with his pair, Sister Josephine and colt Nealon. His race in the Metropolitan was an excellent one, and had it been the Brooklyn distance, there is better than a chance that he would have beaten Glorifier.

Go-Between, entered in the Mount Royal Handicap, is another of the older horses that will surely give a good account of himself in the Brooklyn. Well suited at the distance, he has shown that he has come back to the races a thoroughly good one. Buttling, who will probably be seen at Montreal, is in nicely at 107 pounds, and should there be sloppy mud for the running, he would be almost sure to give a good account of himself. Accountant, Tokalon and Dishabille are others that might prove troublesome.

On all form of last season Salvidere would stand out over the three-year-olds, but the Brooklyn is a very severe test for a three-year-old, and he is required to give away great lumps of weight, when his impost is fixed at 107 pounds. J. C. Core, nominated for the Mount Royal, is a much better colt than his showing in the Metropolitan would indicate, and Sewell would surely have done much better in the same race, but for his running out on the turn. Then there are several other very eligible young ones in the field, but I do not expect any one of them to be placed at the finish. They may beat the horses that beat them when the season is older, but a mile and a quarter for three-year-olds, on May 20, is asking a little too much.

My summing up of the race would be Tanya first, Dr Gardner second, Nealon third.

LARGE LAND PURCHASE BY STREET RAILWAY.

The Montreal Street Railway has purchased a large block of land near its west end car barns in St. Henri. The purchase was made from the Sisters of St. Joseph of the Hotel Dieu, and it is understood will be used for terminal purposes. The lot, which is No. 1632, parish of Montreal, fronts on Bethune street, and has a total superficial area of 115,630 square feet. It was purchased for the sum of $46,200 or at the rate of 40 cents a foot.

Another real estate change of note is the sale of the St. Antoine street residence, held by the estate Matthew Hicks, and once owned by the late Sir Francis Hincks, for $17,500.

Strike Settled at Hull.

Mr. Felix Marois received a telegram last night to the effect that the difficulty in the lumber mills of Gilmour & Hughston, of Hull, Que., had been settled. The firm conceded the demands of the men for an advance in wages.

VETERANS TO PARADE ON VICTORIA DAY.

Sergeant-Major Edwards presided at the regular May meeting of the British Army and Navy veterans, when Sergeant-Major Johnston, of the South African constabulary, was appointed Sergeant-Maor of the Veterans. The members of the Association have received an invitation from Lieut.-Col. Buchan to take part in the military entertainment on May 24, and on their part the veterans extended an invitation to all South African veterans who do not belong to the Canadian militia to join them. The members will decorate the graves of their deceased comrades buried in both cemeteries and also hold their annual church parade early in June.

Death of Dr. S. S. Ship.

Dr. Samuel S. Ship, L.D.S., D.D.S., died on Saturday night after an illness of one month. Typhoid fever followed a cold and he gradually sank until the end came. He was twenty-two years of age and his career promised to be a brilliant one.

LIVELY TIME AT HYGIENE COMMITTEE

Ald. Gadbois, Who Was Visitor, Asked by the Chairman to Stop Talking.

Owing to difference of opinion among members of the Hygiene Committee, Ald. Dagenais was yesterday obliged to peremptorily adjourn the meeting while topics under discussion were in a rather confused state.

The lively series of incidents to which the order of the day gave rise culminated in Ald. Martin's jumping up from his chair and exclaiming: "I have always sided with you, Mr. Chairman, but I cannot countenance this manner of doing business."

Ald. Dagenais—"Very well, the meeting is adjourned then."

The first passage of arms was between Chairman Dagenais and Ald. Gadbois, the latter attending the meeting as a visitor. When permitted to speak, Ald. Gadbois persisted in his effort to have the committee postpone action on a resolution taken at its last meeting to have plumbers discontinue installing Renaud valves in connection with bathroom and sink fixtures.

A sub-committee was then appointed to reconsider the matter, but Ald. Gadbois was not satisfied that justice would be done to the trade in that manner. He thought certain members of the sub-committee were already prejudiced on the subject.

To decide matters a second vote on the sub-committee appointed was called and the members were unanimously in favor of it.

ASKED TO STOP TALKING.

Ald. Gadbois was continuing his argument, when Ald. Dagenais told him to stop.

Ald. Gadbois—"Why can't I talk?"

Ald. Dagenais—Simply because I prevent you from doing so."

Ald. Gadbois immediately abandoned his position near the table, muttering some disconnected remarks about the limits of chairmen's powers.

The question of Renaud valves raised at the meeting has a history extending from the year 1900. Plumbers had been in the habit of installing a 16-inch pipe of black iron in connections with plumbing fixtures as a back vent on traps to prevent syphoning. It had been found that from the corroding of this pipe chips would fall to the bottom of the pipe, blocking it at the elbow. To overcome this difficulty, Mr. Louis Renaud, in 1900, introduced a flat-valve device and the Hygiene Department decided to give it a trial. After four years' experience with the invention orders were given, in 1905, to discontinue its use.

Last summer Mr. Renaud came before the committee with another device in the form of a flap-valve, which he claimed was an improvement on the other. Ald. O'Connell and Gadbois, and Mr. Dore were appointed to look into the question, and after examination Ald. O'Connell, and Mr. Dore made a report against the valve, while Ald. Gadbois, as a minority, was in favor of it. The committee decided in favor of Ald. Gadbois, and the valve was adopted. Following this decision Mr. Dore was obliged last April to enter an action against a plumber for using Mr. Renaud's old valve, which had been condemned, instead of the new.

The plumber came before the committee at its last meeting, and a resolution was passed that the valve should not be used in connection with contracts made after May 1.

Mr. Renaud protested to council against the suddenness of this action, hence the Hygiene Committee's decision to appoint another sub-committee to again look into the question.

CAUSE OF CONFUSION.

An endeavor to fill the position of statistician was what caused the confusion at the end of the meeting. Dr. Ward, formerly of the Civic Hospital, and Dr. Lafleur had applied for the vacancy. Ald Dagenais favored the appointment of Dr. Ward, as he believed he was more qualified to fill the position; but other members insisted on putting it to a vote by ballot, in which there was a majority of one in favor of Dr. Lafleur.

Ald. Dagenais moved that the vote be reconsidered, which was passed, but the members could not agree on the manner in which the vote was to be taken, and as a compromise it was suggested that both candidates should be examined by Dr. Laberge with the committee, as a whole, present.

When this motion was put, Ald. Levesque did not vote, but the chairman insisted that the motion had passed, and in the middle of the protest from Ald. Marin, the meeting was adjourned, with the question apparently unsettled.

CARTIERVILLE.

At the fourth annual meeting of the Cartierville Boating Club, held some time back, plans for the coming summer were discussed, and the question of a new wharf, electric light, and limitation of members were gone into. The election of new officers resulted as follows:—

Hon. president—Thomas Sonne.
President—E. W. Barlow.
Vice-president—J. A. Bremmer.
Secretary-treasurer — F. B. Brown, St. Francois Xavier street.

Executive committee—W. C. MacNaughton, J. A. Deceu, R. E. Costello, E. Drolet, G. E. Radford, J. H. Roy.

Among the first to open their summer houses were Mr. Hartland B. MacDougall and family.

Mr. Thomas Sonne and family have come out to their summer residence in Cartierville.

A pavilion is being erected on the polo grounds at Cartierville, and is designed by Messrs. Finley & Spence, architects. The house contains ample dressing-room accommodation, shower baths, and tea and ladies' club room, and will be ready for Victoria Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Martin, the bride and bridegroom of last season, have come out to their pretty cottage in Cartierville.

Mr. Ed. Gohier and family have been out to their summer residence, and will soon take up residence there for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Berry and family have again come to Cartierville for the summer.

GAS EXPLOSION WRECKED TENEMENTS

Young Man Who Tried to Find Gas Leak With Match Badly Injured.

The ancient and ever-dangerous custom of searching for an escape of gas with a lighted match found a devotee in Montreal last night in the person of Hector F. Barthe, with the result that a serious explosion occurred in a 12-tenement building on Beaudry street. Barthe was the only one injured, but three dwellings were wrecked, the total damage being estimated at $2,000.

The scene of the affair was No. 311 Beaudry street, and it was close upon six o'clock, when several of the inmates discovered that gas was escaping from an unoccupied house on the ground floor. Realizing that the lives of the inhabitants of the neighboring houses were in danger, the young man Barthe, who lives in an upper tenement, gallantly volunteered to enter the affected area in order to put matters right. He gained the back of the house, where the odor of gas was very strong, and then thoughtlessly struck a match near the metre in the bathroom. The inevitable explosion followed, and Barthe was hurled through the open door into the passage.

So terrible was the force of the flaming gas that the ceilings and brick wall in each of the three tenements in the wing were shattered, while most of the front doors of the other dwellings were torn from their fastenings and nearly every window in the structure was smashed. Barthe had a marvellous escape from instant death, and although one of his legs pained him severely he managed to stagger out into the street. He was conveyed to Notre Dame Hospital, where his injuries were attended to.

A few seconds after the loud explosion had alarmed the residents in the district, fire caught hold of the wooden work of the ceiling and floor and the firemen of the eastern division on arriving had considerable difficulty in keeping the flames within bounds. The fire had run along the gas pipes connecting the metre with the main, situated in the cellar of the building, making it impossible for the fire fighters to extinguish the blaze until the floor was raised. In twenty minutes, however, the last flame had been extinguished and the men of the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company had stopped the leak.

The architect of the building, Mr. Joseph Arthur Godin, said that the gas fixtures of the building had been joined to the main yesterday afternoon and that the workmen had finished their work just a few minutes before the accident. The connections in the vacant house had evidently not been tested prior to the turning-on of the gas.

BOND CONTROVERSY RAGES.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, May 18. — Regarding the Churchill-Mail controversy, Sir Robert Bond has received a communication from the Colonial Office and replied thereto. He says it would be discourteous for him to anticipate what action the office may take by making any further statement.

Sir W. Lyne expresses disappointment at the results of the conference, where the colonials had been unfairly treated in more ways than one.

The Daily Mail has obtained the following statement from Mr. Deakin: "The report of Sir Robert Bond's remarks in the Mail correctly summarized his speeches and general attitude. Bond certainly protested emphatically on behalf of his colony, both against the treatment to which its Legislature had been subjected, and against the refusal of the Imperial Government to reverse its attitude."

Mr. Deakin, however, believes that Sir Robert Bond did not leave the conference room till the conference closed.

Winston Churchill, in the House of Commons, said that the Mail's statement that Sir Robert Bond admitted its report of the incident at Tuesday's conference was substantially correct, was, in his opinion, another misrepresentation from the same mint.

The News, which describes the Mail report of Premier Bond's speech as a malignant invention of journalistic thugs, hopes Bond values his reputation more highly than to leave his work in an equivocal position.

The Name of the New Sub-division. The Winner of $20.00 in Gold.

Friday morning took place at the offices of Charruau & Daoust, Real Estate Brokers, the selection of the names suggested to the Federal Realty Co for their newly subdivided property at Boulevard St. Paul. Not less than 500 interesting names were sent; but only one was to be used.

Laurier's name being sent by about 20 persons, this giving an idea of the popularity that it would bring to the property, the officers of the company decided to use it. Jardin Laurier and Park Laurier, both splendid names, could not give the exact idea of the high level of the new sub-division, Mount Laurier, indicating better the character of the property, was accepted unanimously. The lucky winner is Mr. Gustave Monat.

Newbro's Herpicide

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ. It eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and permits a natural hair development by destroying the tiny vegetable growth (a germ or microbe) that causes hair destruction.

Nature constantly struggles to supply life and vigor to the hair, but the dandruff germ saps this vitality and strangles the life out of the hair.

I can conscientiously endorse it for doing all you claim, and it gives me great pleasure to recommend it."

CZAR'S DEATH DECREED.

Failure of Recent Attempt on His Life Will Not Deter Others.

London, May 18.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Telegraph says that the judge investigating the plot against the Czar found convincing proof that Premier Stolypin and Grand Duke Nicholas were also to be murdered. The plot provided several expedients to achieve the purpose. A milkwoman who often mets the Czar on the Tsarkoe-Selo road was engaged to throw a bomb at His Majesty. The frustration of the plot merely cuts off one of the hydra's heads. The others remain very numerous and dangerous.

VAN DYCK PICTURES ARE SPIRITED AWAY

Italian Authorities Concerned at Disappearance of Art Treasures From Palace.

Rome, May 18.—The rumour is again circulating that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has purchased the celebrated Van Dyck pictures which were mysteriously spirited away recently from the Palazzo Cattaneo at Genoa. Although at the time it had been affirmed that these portraits had been safely delivered to Mr. Morgan's agents in London, his denial evidently convinced the Italian authorities, as they now incline to believe that these paintings have not yet been smuggled across the border, but are still hidden in Italy. The case of Mrs. Gardner, of Boston, who bought a celebrated painting by Giorgiore, representing Christ on the cross, and who had to wait five years before the canvas was delivered to her, has been recalled, and Mrs. Gardner's name has also been connected with the disappearance of these Van Dycks.

DEPARTMENT IS BLAMED.

That the portraits were removed from the walls of the Cattaneo Palace is evidence of the lack of interest taken by the fine arts department. In fact, the director of fine arts in Rome received secret information of the intended sale fully six months before it was effected. The state is entitled by law to a high percentage on the price paid for the purchase of works of art, which in many cases acts as an inducement for permitting their exportation.

In the case in question the fine arts department limited its action to a simple warning sent to the authorities at Genoa to watch the Cattaneo Palace. But a long report reached the department denying most emphatically that any sale was contemplated and their suspicions were completely lulled. Six months after, proof was furnished that the Van Dycks had been removed, one at a time, from the palace. A Government inspector hurried to Genoa, but the Cattaneo family informed him that the paintings had been sent to Ferrara, stoutly denying that they had been sold to a foreigner. Inquiries at Ferrara failed to locate the portraits, and the fine art department, realized, when it was too late, that they had actually been sold abroad.

PORTRAIT SALE WAS FICTITIOUS.

The intermediary in the present case appears to have been a certain Sig. Monti of Ferrara, who purchased the portraits in his own name. But this sale was evidently fictitious as Monti is known to have had dealings with a certain nobleman residing in Paris, who deals in antiques and who is credited with being the agent of several American art collectors. This nobleman was seen at Ferrara when the portraits were sold and it is believed that the details of shipment and smuggling out of Italy of the canvases bought were arranged at this time. The police assert that the portraits were hidden in the cushions of a motor car and carried to a place of safety, but they were unable to discover whether they are actually out of Italy or still concealed waiting a good chance to be shipped abroad.

THEFT OF IRISH RAILWAY.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Dublin, May 18.—The daring theft of an entire railway has almost been accomplished in Ireland. The story of how the derelict Birr and Parsontown Railway was literally stolen "off the ground," was told by Mr. William Trench, Deputy Lieutenant of Portumna, at a meeting of the Railway Commission on Irish Railways.

Twelve miles in length the line was built in 1868, and worked by the Great Southern Company, nearly $300,000 capital being subscribed locally, and by the Board of Works and the working company. The books, said Mr. Trench, had disappeared and nobody knew what had become of them. After the Great Southern gave the line up, mortgagers took possession, but did not work the railway. Then the people began to steal the wire. The property was assessed for rates by the county authorities, and the rates got into arrear because there was noboby who would pay them. The county collector seized some of the rails and tried to sell them at auction, but nobody would buy them. A great deal of pilfering went on, and the line commenced to disappear very rapidly. Even a bridge was very nearly taken. The bridge spanned the river Brosna, near Birr, and after this looting of the railway a man came down with cranes and other appliances intending to carry away the metal girders, but there was a police station at Riverstown close by, and a sergeant of police took it upon himself and prevented the theft.

PARIS WAITERS CAN NOW GROW BEARDS

Special to The Montreal Star.

Paris, May 18.—The Paris cafe waiters consider that their strike has been the most successful of modern times; at least so far as this city is concerned. They point to the fact that it actually accomplished something, if only the definite and permanent righting of one grievance. It gained for the strikers the right to trim their faces henceforth as they desire. No longer will their faces constitute in themselves a badge of servitude. Moustache and beard are sprouting on a thousand faces along the boulevards.

The "patrons" or syndicate of cafe proprietors have not unanimously agreed to reduce the fine for breakage that has hitherto been a part of the waiter's burden. It is confidently predicted that they will have to do so. The waiters point out that they are paid not a cent of salary, that they have about eighteen hours' work daily, that they have to contribute to an old-age pension fund and have other minor calls on their earnings; and that the least the patrons can do is to pay for breakage themselves.

A funny incident occurred the other day. The trains from Havre and Cherbourg had just disgorged some Americans into the town. The police in front of the cafe, who numbered but a score or two, had decided to warn away from the terrace every smooth-faced man, so as to be sure no striker was about. The order to that effect had been given hastily at the police station near by. Consequently the Americans were hustled away with some dozen others, the latter probably bona fide strikers. Never was greater bewilderment painted on a human face than upon those of the visitors. When they managed to catch their breath they were in the gutter or up against the newspaper stands.

RAILWAY RUMORS AT COBALT.

Line May Be Built From Sudbury Direct to Silver City.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Cobalt, Ont., May 18.—Railway rumors have been current here since surveyors began to map out a line between Sudbury and Cobalt. Many think the Temiscaming and North Ontario Railway will eventually be built from Sudbury to Haileybury and New Liskeard, and the present line virtually abandoned. The distance from Sudbury to Cobalt is 90 miles as against 103 miles from Northbay to Cobalt, with easier grades. Cobalt is destined to have a large population and the next ten or twenty years will see a wonderful increase in the exports from this north country. The spur line of the Temiskaming and Northern line from Cobalt to Kerr Lake is being pushed ahead rapidly.

In mining matters the decline in Foster attendant on the news of the transfer of its control to Wills & Co., has been the sensation of the week. It is quite on the cards that Wills & Co. will place it on the London Market, the same as has been done with Montreal Cobalt. The idea in reducing the force of men on the Foster is probably that the development work of the mine will be made more extensive. It is thought locally that C. A. Foster, the original holder, must have parted with his holdings. Mr. R. E. Kemerer, who is generally considered to be the executive head of Wills & Company, was the executive head of the late Estates, Limited. The decline of other stocks could not be but sympathetic.

Mining operations are progressing as usual with nothing sensational occurring. The reports of strikes and ore shipments are not as frequent as formerly, but that is for the reason that rumors of either of these events have now no effect upon the price of stock.

Fruit Cures Constipation

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Constipation because they are Fruit Juices in Tablet form.

Constipation means a disordered liver. When the liver is weak, bile is lacking. And it is the bile—which the liver excretes—that flows into the intestines and moves the bowels.

Fruit is the great liver tonic. It invigorates the liver and causes more bile to flow into the bowels.

Purgatives, powders and purging mineral waters, never reach the liver. They irritate the bowels and FORCE them to move. They generally do harm. They NEVER do any PERMANENT good.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices—in which the medicinal action is many times intensified by the wonderful change which takes place when the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes are combined.

"Fruit-a-tives" have already proved a cure to many thousands of people in Canada.

"Fruit-a-tives" are free from calomel, cascara, senna and other bowel irritants. They are concentrated fruit juices with valuable tonics and internal antiseptics added.

IRELAND'S AFFAIRS DISCUSSED By Seumas MacManus

An Irish novelist of no mean merit has passed away in the person of Robert Cromie—passed away, too, at a comparatively early age, ere yet he had reached the height of his powers.

In Robert Cromie science, finance and literature were reconciled. He was a busy banker, who yet found time to write books that were eminently readable and improving. His best known and most valued novels were "A Voyage to Mars," and "The Crack of Doom," novels of the Jules Verne style, yet far from slavish imitations.

His short stories, of which he wrote many, were capitally told tales, and powerful, that were in demand by the leading magazines on this side of the water. Mr. Cromie, who was a genial, sociable goodfellow, had a large circle of personal friends, who deeply regret his early demise. Unlike most of the Irish litterateurs of the present day, Mr. Cromie was not in the national movement. He was a Belfast man, who, like the great mass of his towns-people, took no active part in work for Ireland, and it is regrettable that such a fine man did not throw in his lot with the other brave young men of the country. Mr. Cromie was son of the late Dr. Cromie, and brother-in-law of Sir John Newall Jordan, the British Minister at Pekin.

Edward Martyn, of Tilyra Castle, Co. Galway, one of the prominent figures in Irish national life, the author of "The Heather Field" and other dramas, is pursuing an action at law against the Kildare Street Club, the great Conservative and Landlord Club of Ireland, and claiming damages from them for illegal expulsion. Edward Martyn, who was himself a landlord, was at one time a Conservative, but being a man of thought raised himself into the national ranks. He was deprived of his commission of the peace for County Galway. When at a semi-public social function at his castle ten years ago he refused to allow the loyalists to sing God Save the King.

In the course of his national progress he joined the United Irish League, and was for years a pillar of that league, and of the Irish Parliamentary Party, contributing to their support large sums. Four or five years ago, believing, in common with the thousands of other national thinkers, that the Parliamentary Party were weakening Ireland's cause by a shifty and compromising policy, he withdrew his support and advanced into the present-day Young Ireland party, the Sinn Fein party, who believe in teaching the nation self-reliance and refuse to acknowledge the right of England's King and Houses of Parliament to legislate for Ireland. Mr. Martyn quickly became a persona non grata with the rampant loyalists of the Kildare Street Club. His infamy was crowned when last year he gave public expression to his conviction that any Irish boy who turned traitor, and joined the ranks of England's army or navy deserved to be flogged.

There was a furore in the Kildare Street Club when this fiery treason burned a hole in the murky atmosphere of the Liffey. An extraordinary general meeting of the club was by telegram convened, and the terrible rebel from Galway was by bell, book and candle excommunicated. Mr. Martyn has taken action against the fervent loyalists, and hopes to mulct them heavily for their loyalty. Edward Martyn is a member of the executive of the Gaelic League, and an ardent worker in that cause. Likewise he is president of the National Council (the council of the Sinn Fein party). He is a great patron of music and art in Ireland, and only a few years since gave ten thousand pounds to endow a Gregorian choir in Marlboro Cathedral, Dublin.

The rector of St. Michan's Protestant Church in Dublin is retiring from his duties, the Dublin papers announce. St. Michan's is a most interesting old Protestant church. In it was laid the body of Charles Stewart Parnell while awaiting interment in Glasnevin. And the Rev. Mr. Long's name will go down in history as the man who officiated at the grave of Parnell. Some have said that the body of Robert Emmet lies in St. Michan's graveyard. Two other "rebels" repose there, the Rev. William Jackson and Oliver Bond. The former died in the dock of the Green Street Court-house immediately after he had been convicted of high treason. Oliver Bond died in Newgate prison while he lay under charge of high treason—and Dublin Castle, by the way, was rumored to know more than it should about the cause of his death. The brother Sheares, who were executed in '98 for loving their country too well, and whose memory is enshrined for all time in the hearts of Irishmen, lie in the vaults under St. Michan's Church. Handel, during his residence in Dublin, played upon the beautiful carved organ which still is in St. Michan's. This very interesting church was visited by Gladstone when in '77 he came to Ireland. The tower of St. Michan's was erected thirty years after the Norman conquest.

The British House of Commons occasionally furnishes fun for the readers of our dull dailies. The latest story going the rounds is as follows taken verbatim from an English weekly: Two of the most respectable members were seen with their coats off, and, for an instant, a staid old constable standing between them. They had gone downstairs to wash their hands, and by some mischance changed coats. Entering the chamber at the same moment one of them, putting his hand into one of the coat pockets, discovered a briar pipe, which was not his. He looked at his coat, then at his neighbor's, apologized, and explained the situation. "Try if you do not find a cigar-case in that right-hand pocket." "So there is. Let us go into the division lobby and change. This was where the policeman came in. Seeing the two facing each other, and taking off their coats, he feared the worst, so rushed in, and, placing a big hand on the shoulders of each, exclaimed, "Gentlemen, gentlemen; not here, please!"

Children Give Concert.

The Allan liner Victorian, which has just arrived in port, brought to the city a party of children from Liverpool, consisting of 63 boys and 46 girls. These children were sent out from the Shelters, Home in the English port by Mrs. Birt, and they are to be taken to the Distributing Home at Knowlton, Que., whence they will find their way into various families in the Townships and elsewhere. In order to give the public of Montreal an opportunity of acquainting itself with the class of children that Mrs. Birt sends from time to time to this country, and also to give it an opportunity of assisting in a practical manner in the work, it has been arranged that the children shall give a concert in the Y. M. C. A. building, at eight o'clock on Tuesday evening next.

ALCOHOL AND MEDICINE.

The Superiority of the B. Leon Croizet Brandy—High Testimonials.

It is unquestionably true that alcohol plays a primitive role in medicine. And of all medicinal products it is perhaps the one which is still the most generally used.

Brandy has therefore been well-named "Eau-de-vie," (water of life) this precious spirituous distillation obtained from the juice of the vine.

But the medicinal liquor, par excellence, is unquestionably the real cognac. Doctors frequently prescribe it, and the heads of the medical profession such as Mr. Ducluax, director of the Pasteur Institute at Paris, as also the eminent German Doctor J. Sturke, agree in saying that alcohol is a food as well as the different foods for which it is substituted because it contains, weight for weight, more energy than the others.

But in the same degree that a good cognac can be beneficial, so one of inferior brand may be dangerous. Too much care cannot be exercised therefore in choosing a good cognac for medicinal purposes.

Taken as a tonic, a stimulant, or a digestive, cognac is greatly superior to all other things. The medical authorities also strongly advise its use in all cases of nervous prostration, brain exhaustion, general debility and above all to combat tuberculosis.

Therefore the celebrated B. Leon Croizet house, proprietor of the most famous vineyards which are the glory and the wealth of the Charente, has just launched on our market a special brand of one of its most highly-reputed growths of the vineyards of the Grande Fine Champagne; the B. Leon Croizet medicinal cognac.

For over a century the B. Leon Croizet cognacs have enjoyed throughout France a reputation which is the glory of the Chateau de St. Meme and de Flaville vineyards, the exclusive property of Monsieur B. Leon Croizet, the great vine-culturist, purveyor to the President of the Republic as also to several foreign courts.

This novelty supplies a need in the Canadian market, and it is also for us a rare bargain of which we should not fail to take advantage.

The B. Leon Croizet Medicianl Cognac possesses in a very high degree all the desired qualities to assure the superiority of such a product.

To those who are suffering from physicial depression, dejection, overwork, those whose restoration to health is progressing too slowly, to persons who are weak and worn out, etc., we can recommend nothing better or more appropriate than a few spoonfuls of Croizet Medicinal Cognac, lightly mixed with water or in a glass of milk.

"The Lancet," the English journal which is the highest authority in this matter, and which is altogether disinterested in its announcements, gave in a recent issue, the following appreciation of the B. Leon Croizet cognacs:

"The B. Leon Croizet Cognacs are pure and mild, and of unquestionable genuineness. Made of well-ripened grapes, they are very agreeable to the taste, and they possess the ethereal bouquet and the characteristic aroma of real cognac."

"The Lancet" adds: "Such cognacs as these should be exclusively recommended for medicinal purposes."

Thus, the fact that the B. Leon Croizet house has come out victorious from all the principal universal expositions held either at Paris, Melbourne, Bordeaux or Amsterdam, is an incontestable proof of the merit of its growths. Why not always decide in favor of the best. (Advt.)

"DINKELSPIEL" ON GARDENING

George V. Hobart, "Dinkelspiel" writes as follows in the New York American on gardening:

Mein Lieber Looey—Ve haf receifed your letter from Inchunapplesauce, Indffiananna, und ve vas glat to hear dot your healt vas enchoyable und not mitouid its compensations, alretty.

Ve vas all vell at home mit der eggseption dot your mother has started to build a vegetable garten ouid back of der house.

After your mother hat come py der conclusion dot a vegetable garten vould be a nice idea arount der house she composed herself into a Board of Directors on der supcheckt.

You know, Looey, a home-made vegetable garten vas vun of der most bashful ideas vich peoples dot lif in der country haf to contend mit.

For an instance, Looey, nine times ouid of eight ven you carefully plant a fine bunch of Spring onion seed it no sooner gets in der ground den it changes its mind und decides to blossom fort as a bundle of Scotch t'istles.

I remembrance vunce ve hat a garten ven you vas a leedle fellow, Looey, und ve liffed over on Long Island, und I planted nine dollars' vorth of cabbage for der purpose of sauerkraut, und all ve efer got ouid of it vas an intense assortment of poison-ivy und a litter of kittens vich a neighbor's cat staked us to.

WHAT MR. BALFOUR REALLY SAID.

The verbatim report of Mr. Balfour's address to the Primrose League, in which he was described by the cables as coming out flat-footed "in favor of protection, under the name of preference," hardly bears out the exciting condensation. Still, it does carry Mr. Balfour a very considerable distance forward. He does not insist so venemently as he did but recently that he is a free trader; but neither does he propose by so much as a whisper anything which bears the remotest resemblance to protection.

What he does propose is "to extend the basis of taxation." He quotes Mr. Asquith's recent budget to show that the present system of "war taxes," levied upon certain luxuries and upon industry and individuals by the income tax, must be maintained in a time of peace if the prospective programme of the present Government is to be carried through. He refers to these war duties as "enormous duties, duties from the ad valorem point of view of really preposterous magnitude, on some of the largest articles of consumption by all classes of the community"; and the shilling income tax is described as "an immense burden thrown upon industry as well as individuals."

Now Mr. Balfour proposes to lighten the burden of taxation upon the very few pillars which now support it, by drawing the revenue "necessary to carry on the work of national defence and the work of social reform"..... "from duties small in amount, but on articles of large consumption, and which, because they are articles of large consumption, will yield a large revenue, and which, because the duty is small, will yield that revenue without any serious dislocation of trade or without throwing any serious burden on the consumer." This is a very Balfourian sentence; but it would not be regarded in any protectionist country as preaching the fiscal doctrine which was there practiced. We would look upon it here rather as the utterance of a "tariff for revenue" man.

Indeed, Mr. Balfour commends it to the free traders. Coupling it with a proposal that it should be used to grant the Colonies the preference they ask and so bind the Empire together, Mr. Balfour said:—"For my part, I am utterly unable to see what there is in that which any free trader need object to." Nor will the most of us, if we understand free trade in the English sense which really means a tariff for revenue. Mr. Balfour's policy would be met if the British Government were to take a few more articles on its list of imports and levy duties upon them for revenue purposes. These duties might or might not incidentally assist "home industries." If they did, probably the strictest sect of the free traders would insist also that inland revenue rates be levied upon these same articles in order to prevent such a calamity befalling the country; but free traders, as we have them in Canada, would never notice so insignificant an affair.

If this extension of the basis of taxation is to give Britain a chance to offer a valuable preference to the Colonies, it is obvious that it should include at least some of the articles which the Colonies ship to the Motherland in large quantities. Thus it ought to include grains. Now, where will Mr. Balfour stand upon that? Here is a subject upon which he might have been more explicit if he had desired to carry comfort to the Colonial advocates of the preferential policy. Still possibly it was good tactics to go only as far as he did go; and we must comfort ourselves with the assurance that he is on the road. That he is now headed toward Chamberlainism, seems far more probable than it ever has before; but it would be a misuse of language to pretend that he has yet stepped into the Chamberlain boat, or that—if the health of the great leader should prove to be finally gone—we have discovered a successor in the man who, more than any other, prevented the spontaneous growth of Chamberlainism when it had the inspiration of the Man from Birmingham to lead it on.

Still, Mr. Balfour's "conversion"—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman accused him of "collapsing upon the penitents' bench"—is a most encouraging sign. No one is a better judge of the direction of political currents than the ex-Premier. When he moves in a given direction, it is a fair inference that the water in which he floats is moving in the same direction with even greater rapidity. That he can assist the movement immensely, no one will deny; and if he will come out now as a courageous and progressive champion of a real tariff which will leave room for a real preference, there will be no enquiry into why he has been idling along the roadside during the last few years.

SUCCESS ON THE OLD EASTERN FARMS.

The unusually late coming of warm weather throughout the Canadian West has given rise to fears respecting the grain crop, for the time of sowing has been so delayed that the period of growth may be so considerably shortened as to lessen production and expose the unripened grain to early frosts. Still the western farmers are undismayed, the brief mild spells have been improved to the utmost and a wave of summer heat may come at any time when delayed spring's work will be pushed ahead with all the vigor of the vigorous West.

In the East spring is equally late. The effect of this has been a diminution of the output of dairy products. But the season is still young and it is quite possible that the remaining months may be so favorable that the total production will be up to the average. Abundance of grass through the midsummer and well into the autumn will keep the creameries and cheese factories busy and give the farmers the revenue they have learned to depend upon.

One hears to-day so much about the boundless prairies and the golden wheat fields of the West that the products of the East and the contributions the eastern farmers are making to the trade of Canada is apt to be overlooked. The old home farms of Central and Eastern Canada, from which so many sturdy sons have been lured away by the call of the prairie, the ranch and the mine, are still the backbone of a great deal of Canada's life and prosperity, and every year they are giving a better account of themselves. There is no effete East in this Dominion. The East may have been drowsy and a bit slow, but it has roused itself and the stay-at-home Easterner on a good farm realizes more fully each year that on the old homestead as well as elsewhere industry wisely directed is sure of its reward.

A few years ago the conditions of agricultural production changed almost suddenly and for a time the Eastern farmer may have been somewhat bewildered, but he soon recovered his bearings, met the changed conditions and turned them to greater success. It is not long since the West became a wholesale producer of breadstuffs and of meat. With his comparatively small farm whose soil had become weary of growing grain, the Easterner saw that he must change his methods; he saw that he must devote less time and labor to the growing of raw, bulky crops and turn out a more highly finished and valuable product by which he could sell not only the output of his soil and his manual labor, but his skill as a trained agriculturalist. The field of dairy farming lay before him—he entered in and took possession.

Here the eastern farmer has entrenched himself and to-day his position is so secure that none can drive him from it provided he labors to hold it with as great skill and assiduity as he strove to secure it. Last year the Canadian dairy farmers, after supplying the home market of six millions of people who have set for themselves a high standard of living, sold abroad cheese and butter to the value of twenty-six million dollars, being about ten million dollars worth more than they sold in 1897, and eighteen million dollars worth more than they sold twenty years ago. Dairying has infused new life into the farming of the East; it has increased the farmer's profits and given him an assured future as one of the large and steady producers of the country.

Having secured the field it behooves the dairy farmer, and all directly connected with the dairy industry to maintain the high standard Canadian dairy products have attained, and do nothing either in the making of the products or in the manner of handling them that will injure the quality or detract from the good name that Canadian cheese and butter have won for themselves at home and abroad.

A MODEL MILK ENACTMENT.

The city of Birmingham, Eng., has recently adopted a new milk by-law, which is a model in many respects, and is well worthy of perusal by our own City Council. In Birmingham, about one hundred and twenty dairies supply the city. They are situated from two to ten miles from the city limits, and are visited almost daily by inspectors. Each time a dairy is inspected, a careful examination is made of the condition of the cows, including their water and food supply; places, methods and manner of handling the milk; the sanitary condition of the barns, milk-houses, and so on. When a dairy property is found in an unsanitary condition, the proprietor is served with a ten days' notice to put the place in an acceptable condition. Should he fail to promptly comply with the command, he is forbidden to sell milk in the city.

All dairymen are compelled to make application to enter into the dairy business and sell milk, and no permit is granted until a thorough investigation has been made. Each dairyman is obliged to have neat and perfectly clean waggons, with cover to keep out the dust, and to protect the milk from the heat of the sun. The milk must not be sold if it is over fifty degrees Fahrenheit. Samples of milk for analysis are always secured from the dairymen en route, so it is practically certain that the milk delivered to the customers is of the same quality as analyzed. A careful watch is kept for cows that may, in any way, be affected with tuberculosis. It has been ordered that there shall be frequent publications of the result of all tests of milk and the conditions prevailing at the dairies. This publication is to be made through the local daily papers. It is anticipated that, in this way, the public will be put in a position to judge for themselves as to the exact condition of the dairies, and as to the quality and purity of the milk they are entitled to get. Dairymen are not permitted to fill empty bottles, collected from customers, with milk to be delivered to other customers, before the bottles have been properly washed and sterilized at the dairies.

There is a certain grim humor about the Montreal Police. Of course, they did right in obeying the behest of the officials who demanded the arraignment and punishment of the grocer who exposed food to the dangers of Montreal dust. Yet they must have chuckled in the deep dark blue sleeves of their uniforms as they noticed the aldermen still at large. No one who undertakes to provide food for the public has any right to allow the same to be exposed to microbes and dust that corrupt, and to bacilli that break through and kill. There is no doubt, but that food left uncovered in front of a shop or a door way will be peppered like a deviled bone; but will the city authorities tell us where, outside of a sealed can, food can be kept free from street contamination while the dust goeth where it listeth? Fining a man for letting food get covered with dust in Montreal is not unlike sending a man to prison for failing into an unprotected excavation.

Too Early in the Season.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—In connection with the criticisms of this year's militia drill, let me say that I belong to the Montreal Field Battery, and, so far, we have never had a harder season's work. If "Brown Bill" had kept his little criticism till July or August, it might be better worth discussing.

Repairing the Streets.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—In view of the much-discussed, but nevertheless vitally important consideration of the condition of our streets, I would like to make a suggestion: I had occasion to observe Metcalfe street the other day; I noticed that between Burnside and St. Catherine streets, they had strewn a large quantity of stones, and none of the stones were of the regulation diameter of two and one-half inches. I just mention this one instance of culpable neglect on the part of the Corporation, and trust that in future they will be more careful in the discharge of their duty.

The South African Memorial.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—Will you allow me a few lines in your columns to voice the opinion of a number of South African veterans in regard to the memorial now being finished on Dominion Square? It seems a great pity that the names of those who gave their lives for the Empire are not to be engraved on the memorial as a lasting tribute of the Dominion, the space being apparently taken up by the two bas reliefs. Many of us thought that at least a place for the names of the officers and men who lost their lives on the field would have been found.

The Garbage is Still There.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—Residents on Emily street should think themselves lucky if they have only been kept waiting three days for the scavengers. What we want to ask, on Sherbrooke street near Delorimier, is, are the scavengers ever coming again? Myself and neighbors put our garbage out nine days ago, and it has not been called for yet. I telephoned the department last Saturday, and they assured me that it would be removed during the day. Some enterprising person has dumped our garbage and taken away the box. A large yellow dog comes several times a day to see if he has got all that is coming to him. The papers have become loose and the street and vacant lots are strewn with them.

Misleading Statements.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—Having read the account of the "British political scandal" and A. Brome Wilson's comment thereon, allow me to state a few facts. Mr. Albert E. Southall has been secretary of the National Union of Conservative Associations, with offices at St. Stephen's Chambers, Westminster, London, S.W., for over twenty years. I quote from the letter heading of the National Union and my own personal knowledge. He took that position on the celebrated fourth party headed by Lord Randolph Churchill coming into control of the Conservative party and was certainly the intimate friend and confidant of Lord Salisbury and succeeding Conservative Premiers, Cabinet Ministers, Government whips, etc. The "chief Conservative organizers" mentioned by Mr. Wilson were Capt. Middleton, ex-naval officer; Commander Wells, ex-naval officer and ex-fire chief, and Colonel Haig, ex-army officer, all figure heads, with no political training, taking charge of the party funds, looking after elections, etc.

The writer, like unto Mr. Wilson, appeals to you for fairness and justice to the well-known ability of Mr. Southall as an organizer and as a protest against "hitching the under dog when he is down" upon what may be "a misleading and inaccurate statement."

JUDGMENT WAS RESERVED.

Montreal Case, Turcotte vs. Ryan, Before Supreme Court.

Ottawa, May 18.—Judgment was reserved in the Supreme court yesterday in the case of the Consumers' Cordage Co. vs. Pallister.

Turcotte vs. Ryan was then heard. The action for $15,000 was brought by the widow and children of the late Patrick Callery, who was killed on the sidewalk at the crossing of a street in Montreal by being knocked down and run over by a horse and vehicle driven by Turcotte (a defendant) while in discharge of some of his duties as an employe of Desjardins, the other defendant. The horse belonged to Turcotte, but was kept at the expense of Desjardins, who was owner of the vehicle and the harness in use at the time. The trial judge held that Turcotte and Desjardins (as his employer) were jointly and severally liable, that both the driver and the deceased were to blame under the circumstances in which the accident occurred, and, consequently, as provided by the civil law, divided the damages, assessed at $3,700, and allowed $750 to the widow and $1,000 to her two daughters. In the Court of King's Bench this judgment was affirmed, Sir Alex. Lacoste, C.J., dissenting as to the liability of Desjardins on account of the horse being owned solely by Turcotte and its use being independent of his employment.

Judgment was reserved.

The cases on the Ontario list will be taken up on Monday morning.

MR. BIRRELL'S SPEECH ON THE INTRODUCTION IN BRITISH HOUSE OF HIS IRISH ADMINISTRATIVE BILL

CHIEF FEATURES OF THE BILL.

Bill to provide for the establishment of an Administrative Council in Ireland, the following being the chief points of the measure:

No new legislative power or authority. Irish members still to sit at Westminster.

The Supreme Court of Judicature, the Royal Irish Constabulary, the Dublin Metropolitan Police, the Land Commission, and the General Prisons Board are not affected by the bill.

The following departments are subject to the bill's provisions: The Local Government Board Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, Congested Districts Board, Commissioners of Public Works, Commissioners of National Education, Intermediate Education Board, Inspection of Reformatory and Industrial Schools, and the Registrar-General.

The Lord-Lieutenant may by Order in Council apply the bill to other departments, such as the Irish Lights Commissioners and Lunatic Asylums.

The establishment of a Representative Council of 82 elective members and 24 nominated, with the Under Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant as an ex-officio member.

Elective members to be elected by the Local Government Board electors, which includes peers and women.

Nominated members to be nominated by His Majesty during the first term, but after that by the Lord-Lieutenant.

The Chief Secretary to have the right to attend the Council meetings and speak thereat, but not to vote.

Powers to remain vested in the departments, but the exercise of those powers to be controlled by resolution of the Council.

But there must be Finance, Public Works, and Education Committees.

Each committee to have a chairman appointed by the Lord-Lieutenant.

Complete transfer to the new Council of the powers of the present Education Commission as to primary and secondary education.

The Lord-Lieutenant to have power to appoint additional members to the Education Committee, the number so appointed not to exceed one-fourth of the total.

Women may be appointed as additional members.

The Council elections to be for three years.

A separate fund to be established for the Act, to be called the Irish Fund.

An Irish Treasury to be established by Order in Council, and at its head to be a Treasurer for Ireland.

The Consolidated Fund to pay to the Irish Fund certain sums to be fixed by Parliament every five years.

A sum of £650,000 to be paid in excess of the £2,000,000 the present cost of administering the eight departments.

The Lord-Lieutenant in future to be appointed without regard to his religious opinions.

Any question involving contravention of the Act to be brought before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

If found a success the measure may pave the way to Home Rule.

MR. BIRRELL'S SPEECH.

Mr. Birrell, in introducing the bill for the establishment of an administrative council in Ireland, said: When the bill I am now asking leave to introduce has been printed and published, it will be scanned and scrutinized not only by every member of both Houses of Parliament, but by every class of political critic, and particularly by Irishmen and Irish women, not only in Ireland, but all through that great and famous Empire in the building up and maintaining of which many of the Irish race have played so conspicuous a part. When that bill comes to be scanned and scrutinized, line by line, and it may be letter by letter, it will be found that it does not contain a touch or a trace, a hint or a suggestion of any new legislative power or authority. No law, public or private, can ever be made at any time or in any circumstances, by virtue of any one of its provisions. It does not authorize the levying of a single tax or the striking of the humblest rate.

This Imperial Chamber of which we are all so proud will remain majestically unaffected by the provisions of this bill. Our friends from Ireland in undiminished numbers will still continue to foregather with us.

But though the bill is thus limited in its scope, and though it will be found to be well defined as to the sphere of its operations, it has, as its reasons for existence, an object, the almost supreme importance of which will be called into question by nobody, sit where he may in this House.

That object is the association of the sentiment of the Irish people as a whole with the administration of the numerous statutes, rules, and regulations which direct the conduct of purely Irish affairs within Ireland herself. The making of laws is one thing, and their daily administration amongst the people for whose benefit they are intended is quite another thing.

For the purpose of to-night I shall assume that what is called "Dublin Castle" administration is a failure.

If anybody here believes the present system of administration of Irish affairs to be sound, sensible, and economic, or that it is a system which is likely to train the Irish people into habits of self-respect and economy, I must wait to hear how that individual seeks to make out his case. I bring no accusation whatever against Dublin Castle or against the Irish officials. Language of praise from one who has been so short a time in office would be fulsome and language of censure an impertinence.

GROUPING OF DEPARTMENTS.

The total number of departments, boards, and offices, excluding the Admiralty and War Office, is, I believe, matter of controversy. I have, however, been supplied with a list of 45, which are grouped as follows. There are ten which come under the full control of the Irish Government—the Royal Irish Constabulary, the Dublin Metropolitan Police, the General Prisons Board, the Reformatory and Industrial Schools, the Inspector of Lunacy, the General Registry Office, and the Departments of Registry and Petty Sessions Clerks, Resident Magistrates, Crown Solicitors, and Clerks of the Crown and Peace.

Under the partial control of the Irish Government there are three—the Land Commission, the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and the Public Record Office.

Not at all under the control of the Irish Government, except so far as regards appointments and framing of rules, there are five—the Board of National Education, the Board of Intermediate Education, the Commissioners of Endowed Schools, the National Gallery, and the Royal Hibernian Academy.

Not under the control of the Irish Government, but with the Chief Secretary as President ex officio, there are three: The Local Government Board, the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, and the Congested Districts Board.

There are four boards exercising statutory powers in Ireland not under Government control—the Public Loan Fund Board, the Commissioners of Irish Lights, the Royal University, and Queen's College. Not controlled by the Irish Government there are eight. They include the Supreme Court of Judicature and Offices, the Registry of Deeds, the Local Registration of Titles, and the Railways and Canals Commission.

There are 12 English departments working in Ireland, including the Customs, Inland Revenue, and Board of Trade.

The question we have to determine is—how many of these departments, boards and bodies should we attempt to place under some kind of real and effective control? Some, for obvious reasons, lie altogether without the scope of any such proposals as ours will lie, like the Customs, the Inland Revenue, the Post Office. Nor do we propose to affect the Supreme Court of Judicature, the Royal Irish Constabulary, the Dublin Metropolitan Police, the Land Commission, or the General Prisons Board. These and others are left outside the provisions of the bill.

We propose to make the following eight departments and boards subject to the provisions of the bill. The Local Government Board, the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, the Congested Districts Board, the Commissioners of Public Works, the Commissioners of National Education, the Intermediate Education Board, the Inspection of Reformatory and Industrial Schools, and the Registrar General.

By a provision in the bill the Lord-Lieutenant, after consultation with the Irish Council, may, by order in Council, apply the provisions of the bill to certain other departments, not of an important character, such as the Irish Lights Commissioners and Lunatic Asylums, but for the purposes of our discussions to-night we may confine ourselves to these eight.

A REPRESENTATIVE COUNCIL

These are the eight departments which mark out and define the sphere of our operations. We propose that they should be placed under the control of the representative Council. If I am asked why a Council at all, I can only say that in a democratic age, in a democratic country, and in this very democratic House of Commons the resources of civilization are somewhat restricted.

We propose to establish a representative Council, an Administrative Council, consisting of 82 elective members and 24 nominated members, with the addition of the Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant as an ex-officio member. The elective members will be elected by the Local Government Board electors, which is like the Parliamentary franchise, except that it includes peers and women.

The nominated members are to be nominated by His Majesty during the first term of office, but after the expiration of that term they will be nominated by the Lord Lieutenant. I dare say that if the population of Ireland were not segregated in the way it is some other method of nomination might be adopted to secure the representation of minorities, but I don't think that, the population of Ireland being as it is, any system of minority representation would secure for the protestants in the south and west any representation whatever through that means, and therefore it is only by the process of nomination that that great object can properly be attained.

APPOINTMENT OF PRESIDENT.

The president of the Council will be appointed by the Council. The Chief Secretary, though not a member of the Council and not entitled to vote, it is suggested will have the right to attend meetings of the Council and committees, and, if so moved, he may speak on such occasions.

The function of the Council is to control completely the exercise of the powers to which the Act applies, now vested or hereafter to be vested in the departments to which I have referred. The method by which it is to exercise those powers is by resolution of the Council itself. The authority in whom the powers are for the time being vested "shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, act in accordance with the resolution of the Irish Council with respect to the exercise of these powers, and shall obey any directions given by the Council in respect to the submission of any matters relating to the exercise of these powers of the Council."

The powers remain vested in the department, but the exercise of these powers is to be controlled by resolution of the Council in the manner I have indicated. The final authority or control of Parliament is maintained by means of power which is entrusted to the Lord-Lieutenant to reserve any resolution of the Irish Council, which will not be operative until confirmed by him. He may either confirm a resolution or annul it, or remit the matter for further consideration by the Council all together.

Where immediate action is expected, the Lord-Lieutenant may make such order as circumstances necessitate. Any action of his coming under consideration of this House will be defended if necessary by the Chief Secretary.

WORK OF COMMITTEES.

It is intended that the Council should exercise these powers of complete control by means of committees. It shall be authorised to vote as many committees as it thinks fit, either general or special, and consisting of such members as it finds necessary.

There must, however, be a finance committee and public works committee, and an education committee. These are required to be forthwith set up. The work of these committees will be subject either to alteration, adoption, or rejection by the Council.

Each committee will have a chairman appointed by the Lord-Lieutenant. Now we must make a distinction between the six departments and the two education departments. The six we will leave alone, doing their ordinary work, subject to the control of the Council. But we do not propose to leave the Education Board in that position. As soon as the Council take power to constitute the new Education Department, and when it has been constituted, there will be a complete transfer to it of the powers of the office of the Commissioners, who will be thereupon dissolved. Therefore, we propose that, for the first time, there shall be in Ireland an Education Department which shall have responsibility for primary and secondary education in the country, and that that department as constituted will come under the control of this new Council.

THE ELECTED MEMBERS.

There will be 82 elected members of the Council returned from county borough and counties. Add to these 24 nominated and one ex-officio, and that makes a total of 107.

I do not think, having regard to the number of committees, probably found to be necessary to manage it, is difficult business, and taking into account the size of the Education Committee, that that is too large a body for the work. With regard to the Education Committee, we propose that the Lord-Lieutenant shall have power on that committee to appoint persons having experience in education, and not being members of the Council, to be additional members of the Education Committee. The number so appointed must not exceed a quarter of the total number. Women may be appointed as additional members.

The Council elections will be for three years.

We propose to establish separate funds for the purposes of this Act, to be called the Irish Fund, and all payments to that fund should be made to the Bank of Ireland, or wherever determined.

We propose to constitute by Order in Council an Irish Treasury having at its head a Treasurer for Ireland. In order to feed this Irish Fund we will charge the Consolidated Fund to pay into the Irish Fund certain sums to be fixed by Parliament every five years. What is that sum to be for the first five years?

The present cost of administering the services covered by these eight departments is well over £2,000,000. It would be impossible to induce any body of men to attempt under these conditions to do the work we all wish to see done for Ireland without a considerable increase of the funds to be placed at the disposal of the Irish people. We, therefore, in addition to and in excess of this £2,000,000, propose to pay the sum of £650,000. It is based upon a general view of the state of certain Irish services and of the certain needs of these departments during the next five years. I am prepared most actively to maintain that it is not one penny too much. (Nationalist cheers.)

FOR GENERAL DEVELOPMENT.

This excess sum of £650,000 per annum is to be treated separately in the bill. Since £300,000 a year of that is intended to provide a capital for the purpose of public works and the general development of Ireland, we strike a distinction between the natural annual outgoings in connection with any particular department and capital expenditure on enduring works. We propose to carry £300,000, although it is part of the Irish Fund, to the Public Works account.

Mr. Balfour—Is this in substitution of the existing system of loan or in addition to it?

Mr. Birrell—It is an additional grant of £300,000 a year for the purpose of this particular work. It is not substituted for any statutory obligation, but so far as it is discretionary with the Treasury that may enter into the case. We intend this to be a sum paid every year for the purpose of providing the new Council with a sum for which they can obtain advances upon, being a certain sum which they will receive each year during five years.

There is £114,000 of this £650,000 which is intended for expenditure in the nature of capital expenditure—for example, school buildings.

We proposed to give £40,000 a year before we entered into this particular proposal for the period of three years for the purpose of school buildings. That is the kind of expenditure which we have in our minds when we say that this £114,000 will partake of the nature of capital expenditure and will not be annual expenditure.

That leaves a sum of about £236,000 per annum to assist in providing for the general department of administration and expenses of the Council. These three sums make up the £650,000, which is the excess over and above the present cost of running this department.

Those sums will altogether constitute the Irish Fund, plus the £1,450,000, the local grants that are allocated by statute to particular purposes.

Altogether these sums amount to over £4,000,000, which will constitute the Irish Fund, which will be a guarantee fund in substitution of the existing guarantee fund.

We propose that these funds, constituting the Irish Fund, shall be paid in the manner I have described into the Irish Bank. And all the expenses of the Irish Council and incidental to the powers of the eight departments, otherwise incurred in the execution of this Act paid out of the Irish Fund, and Parliament is relieved, of course, of any obligation to provide for these expenses, otherwise than by means of payments directed to be made by the Irish Fund.

AVOIDING FUTURE LOSS.

At present, for every £100 of stock we raise in order to pay the landlords, we only get £85 in cash. This involves an annual loss, spread over 68½ years, of £4,000 for every £1,000,000 of Irish stock that is raised. Under the act that loss was contemplated, and it was thrown upon the Irish development grant.

The Treasury are considering means by which they may prevent this loss on the issue of every million of land stock. At present, however, all we can say to Ireland is that the Irish Development Grant will last as the main fund liable to pay these losses on flotation for at all events three years.

We are also going to throw on the Irish Development Grant the losses, representing £73,000, occasioned by the methods adopted to induce the public to take these shares. In the opinion of the law officers they could not properly be charged on the Development Grant as it stands, and we are taking power to do that. Therefore, the immediate loss of the Irish ratepayer will no longer fall upon him, and the prospective loss will not occur for two or three years, during which time the Exchequer confidently expect they will be able to devise some plan by which the nightmare may be taken off the minds of the Irish ratepayer.

LORD LIEUTENANT'S RELIGION.

We make use of this occasion to get rid of a doubt as to whether the office of Lord Lieutenant can be held without reference to religious beliefs. The bill provides that every subject of His Majesty should be qualified to hold the office of Lord Lieutenant without reference to his religious beliefs.

There is a clause which provides that no preference should be shown to any religious denomination, and any act or thing done, so far as it gives any such preference, should be declared invalid. Any question involving the contravention of the act is to be brought before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council within one year. The committee shall determine the question, and their decision shall be final.

The power to appoint or to remove officers to whom the act applies will be exercised by the Council.

We may be told that this bill paves the way to Home Rule. If the proposals contained in this bill become law, and obtain a fair trial, if the new Council, after some years, is a success, then I dare say it may pave the way. If, on the other hand, it is a failure, it appears to me that it would present a very considerable obstacle to persuading the electors of this country who have been called the predominant partner to accept Home Rule.

HER HUSBAND WAS A DRUNKARD

A PATHETIC LETTER

"I had for a long time been thinking of trying the Tasteless Samaria Prescription treatment on my husband for his drinking habits, but I was afraid he would discover that I was giving him medicine, and the thought unnerved me. I hesitated for nearly a week, but one day when he came home very much intoxicated and his week's salary nearly all spent, I threw off all fear and determined to make an effort to save our home from the ruin I saw coming, at all hazards. I sent for your Tasteless Samaria Prescription, and put it in his coffee as directed next morning and watched and prayed for the result. At noon I gave him more and also at supper. He never suspected a thing, and I then boldly kept right on giving it regularly, as I had discovered something that had set every nerve in my body tingling with hope and happiness, and I could see a bright future spread out before me—a peaceful, happy home, a share in the good things of life, an affectionate loving husband, comforts and everything else dear to a woman's heart; for my husband had told me that whiskey was vile stuff and he was taking a dislike to it. It was only too true, for before I had given him the full course he had stopped drinking altogether, but I kept giving him the medicine till it was gone, and then sent for another lot, to have on hand if he should relapse, as he had done from promises before. We never has and I am writing you this letter to tell you how thankful I am. I honestly believe it will cure the worst cases."

ONLY the repair-shop people really know the woes of the man who buys an automobile on the strength of a beauteous catalog and a "road demonstration" by a clever salesman. And there are more men like that than you would suppose,—catalogs seem to count for so much with some. Yet the makers of the staunchest, smoothest-running honestly-good automobile that ever honked a horn, issue a catalogue which is a mere horror! Buying a car by catalogue is a shaky investment. Buying by a friend's say-so is quite as shaky,—no two men ever wanted just the same things from an automobile. Our business was started and has thrived on the belief that the automobile buyer can be served best by experts who analyse the world's auto-output with an eye single to actual, demonstrable superiority of merit. Thus, when we have placed a car on our list, and backed its quality with our corporate guarantee (apart from its makers), the buyer may choose from that list in the certainty that it contains no car, but has proved its right to class with the rare few in construction, in economy, in downright value. If this policy of safe-guarded choice-with-certainty appeals to your common sense, we shall be glad to correspond with you before you complete any automobile purchase. 35

PLAN OF SKEENA CITY TOWNSITE.

The Coming City of the Pacific

WHERE RAIL AND COASTING LINERS MEET

AMID the multitude of opportunities at present offered for investment, the shrewd business man (as well as the man with small capital) looks for something with sound reason behind it. He wants to buy where reason declares there is a future. Reason and fortune point to Skeena City. If the enormous railroad development now going on in Western Canada means anything, it is that the present epoch of prosperity must culminate in another galaxy of populous cities on our Pacific Coast. The most favored in situation and natural advantages will develop first and fastest, and for at least the next twenty years people and money will pour incessantly into the terminal cities of the Grand Trunk Pacific. For over two years our clients have been asking for investments on the coast along the line of this new transcontinental, and during the past winter our Mr. Howey spent several weeks in British Columbia looking into conditions and getting acquainted with a limited number of select and safe investments. As a result we are in a position to offer to our clients for the first time what we consider one of the safest and best propositions in the Western Province. We have just concluded an arrangement whereby we have obtained the exclusive handling of the townsite of SKEENA CITY, the New Westminster of the Grand Trunk Pacific—the first port reached by the new transcontinental on the Pacific Coast. And investors should bear in mind that the bonds of the G. T. P. for the building of the new transcontinental through the mountains to the coast are guaranteed by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, making investments at this end of the road particularly safe and attractive. Remember also that Skeena City is not a subdivision. It is a townsite. SKEENA CITY is situated at the mouth of the Skeena river, and on the railway side of it. The railway is surveyed through it and must pass through it, for on one side is a river six miles wide, and on the other a towering mountain 3,500 feet high. It is less than one-half a mile from the river's edge to the mountain side. Nature has therefore decreed that the railroad must pass through the very heart of Skeena City; but in order to make it doubly sure, the Prince Rupert Development Syndicate, Limited, who own the townsite, have given this guarantee that "to every party who buys lots in Skeena City they will refund their money if the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad does not touch Skeena City when it builds to Prince Rupert or Port Simpson; and further they agree not to sell the timber which they now hold on the Khyex River to any party or Company who will not agree to erect a saw mill at Skeena City." This timber represents about one hundred million feet of lumber. SKEENA CITY is the only possible townsite with a deep water harbor east of Prince Rupert. It must, therefore, be the bulk-breaking point for the wealthy Skeena River Valley, the coal fields and copper mines of the famous Bulkley Valley, and the vast timber limits of Northern British Columbia. Already it is destined to be the first construction camp of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway on the Pacific coast. While the railway is being built it will be a busy, hustling city, and when construction is over it will be the permanent industrial and shipping centre of the north. The Canneries of the Skeena River, the best salmon waters of the world, must locate here. The saw mills which will reduce to lumber one of the greatest standing timber forests of America must locate here. There is no other possible location for them. Now, this is the first opportunity offered to the public to obtain what they have long waited for. You know that the building of the Canadian Pacific made many millionaires. You know that the completion of the Grand Trunk will mean as many more. While all will not be millionaires, a very large number can confidently expect to better themselves by several thousands of dollars, and we are certain that SKEENA CITY is one of the safest, surest and quickest methods by which this can be done. But it will be well to get in early. The earlier in, the safer, surer and brighter are your prospects. The prices here stated are only introductory. They will positively be raised in a few weeks. The turnover of property in SKEENA CITY will itself enormously augment these values. These prices are for you if you buy now.

Elk Block, Moose Jaw, Sask.

At any rate you will hear of her soon.

Moose Jaw isn't saying much, but is doing a lot.

Within the last four years she has jumped to first place amongst Saskatchewan cities.

She has the largest population and smallest and most compact townsite of any city in the Provinces.

In 1904 her assessment valuation was one million dollars. This year it will be about seven millions.

Building Permits for $300,000.00 are already issued this year.

She will spend thousands this year extending and improving them.

With the true up-to-date spirit, she is boring for natural gas.

In addition to this the C. P. R. will spend about half a million dollars in Moose Jaw this year in railway improvements.

There are also good indications that the C. N. R. and an American railway will build into Moose Jaw in the near future.

Thousands and thousands of acres of land in the Moose Jaw and surrounding districts have never been cropped.

When farmers begin raising grain on all this land the producing power of the country will be something enormous.

It will demand more railway facilities, large and rapid expansion of cities, points of distribution, etc.

Moose Jaw is a natural centre. Notice her location on the map.

She possesses those peculiar natural advantages favorable to railway development.

The C. P. R. are here to stay.

They realize the tremendous expansion that must come in all lines with the development of the country, and are getting ready for it.

You can get ready for it, too, if you like.

You can buy right where things will be doing in the near future.

You can secure your lots now and pay for them while they grow in value.

This valley runs East and West.

To the East the ground is broken and cut up by the river which runs criss-cross through the valley bottom, thus preventing the city from building Eastward to any extent.

The city is now built to within four blocks of this property and is steadily building on.

Westmore Annex is directly across the path of the building movement. All Industrial plants, including the Moose Jaw Brewery, Flour Mills, Machine shops, Foundry, Planing Mills, etc., are located in the West End. Others will follow.

This will mean increased activity in the West End.

You should secure your lots now. Prices do not stay long in the same place.

$55.00 per lot and $75.00 for corners is dirt cheap for this choice property with its wonderful possibilities.

The terms could not be more easy; $5.00 cash and the balance $3.00 per month per lot without interest places them within reach of all. Less than $1.00 per week per lot.

It's an opportunity that should not be let slip. We have only a limited number of lots for sale at this price. Simply mail us a letter with remittances stating number of lots desired.

We will then select best lots unsold upon receipt of your letter.

If location we select is not suitable, you can change to any other unsold lots in the Annex.

The chance of a lifetime is before you. Grasp it.

Accident Drove One Time Favorite to Great Poverty.

Vienna, May 18.—When the Emperor Francis Joseph visited Prague, a woman threw herself in front of his Majesty's carriage so that the coachman was obliged to stop the horses. She then ran, and with clasped hands presented the Emperor with a folded paper. The woman was taken before the police commissioner, and identified as a former solo ballet dancer, once a great favorite with the Czech public during her long engagement at the Prague National Theatre.

She was by birth a German named Agnes Walter. In 1886, she joined the ballet corps at the National Theatre, where her youth, grace and beauty soon raised her to the position of leading dancer. Her popularity was enormous and her future seemed secure. One Christmas eve, on leaving the stage amidst loud applause from the audience she fell into an open well, which through some carelessness had been left uncovered. The public saw nothing of the accident and the ballet proceeded as she lay insensible beneath the stage. Her injuries were so severe that her life was long despaired of. After a from the public, she made an unsuccessful attempt to return to the stage; dizziness seized her and she was forced to retire. She even proved unable to fill any of the small posts which were offered her in the theatre and since then has lived entirely upon charity.

The Emperor was so moved by her piteous story that he ordered a small yearly pension to be paid to her for

Special to The Montreal Star.

Cairo, May 18.—Mr. H. Vischer has made a remarkable journey across Sahara through the forbidden hinterland

The distance covered was nearly 1,700 miles, and the actual marching time two and one-half months.

In the mountains of Gharian, Mr. Vischer found people living in subterranean dwellings. Through entrances, ten yards long, and one yard broad, he came upon a square courtyard, which was, in reality, a great hole open to the sky. All of the rooms and the stables converged on this. The rooms windows, but the most absolute cleanliness prevailed. Round the courtyard was a wall protecting the dwelling underneath.

Beyond Gharian the expedition proceeded over rising ground to the hills, where fig and olive groves lay among Roman ruins. Nearing Mussuk, Mr. Vischer came on stretches of petrified forest.

Describing part of his journey across the unlimited desert Mr. Vischer said: "We had a five days' march across the desert without water. All caravans waited for one another before starting, until our combined party numbered over 500 camels. No caravan dared go through the desert alone. Everywhere the ground is covered with wind polished stones, which are gradually themselves becoming sand. Often apparently, we saw lakes and palm groves, but on all sides were nothing but stones.

Delorimier Avenue Going Through Fairmount

It is the Great Artery of the East End and Always Will be, Even When Montreal Has Grown to the Back River.

Delorimier Avenue will be built through Fairmount as far as the C. P. R. Tracks, on a guaranteed contract to be completed before December 1st, 1907.

Simard Avenue has drains, water, already built with rows of houses on both sides.

Three years ago, Fairmount was a farm land. To-day the lower section is laid out with streets, houses, including all improvements such as water, drains, gas, electric light, and an excellent street car service right to the property. They were wise buyers, who took our word a year or two ago, that all these things would be accomplished. We kept our word and immense improvements are now in progress. People who own lots in Fairmount need not have the slightest doubt about the assured increase in value.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS ARE STILL TO BE MADE IN FAIRMOUNT. THERE ARE STILL A NUMBER OF VERY VALUABLE LOTS IN THE LOWER SECTION. AS AN INVESTMENT THERE IS NOTHING TO-DAY IN MONTREAL WHICH SURPASSES THEM IN VALUE, AND WITH THE SAME PROSPECT OF A RAPID RISE.

Any persons well versed in real estate need only to see the property, the beautiful location, being on the same level as Outremont. The immense Angus Shops are only ten minutes away, where from seven to eight thousand people are employed. The land in Fairmount is like a lawn, sloping gradually down from the highest point in the north end. The lower section to-day is throughly improved property with young maple trees planted all through, and any one securing one of the remaining lots is making as safe a purchase in real estate as can be secured.

The upper part of Fairmount has been placed on the market. Seeing the development that is taking place at the present moment on Delorimier Avenue, could you think of any wiser move than to secure a lot on Delorimier Avenue in the upper section? The investment is positive and within every person's reach. It only takes $10.00 to secure a lot; the payments monthly, ranging from $6.00 o $8.00. There is not a single lot which will be purchased which will not advance hundreds of dollars in value before it is paid for, and perhaps greatly in excess of this. Many were wise and took our advice last year and to-day every lot is more valuable. We state positively that every lot bought in Fairmount this year will fetch a higher price next year. There is no part of Delorimier which excels Fairmount in natural beauty. There are no cheap wooden houses erected. Everything must be either brick or stone. The buildings on the property already, are either flats, self-contained or semi-detached houses (principally flats).

HERE ARE A FEW MORE REASONS WHY, IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN BUYING LOTS, YOU SHOULD THOROUGHLY INVESTIGATE THE PROPOSITION IN FAIRMOUNT.

1. The advance in value is positive.
2. If the purchaser of a lot dies his heirs immediately receive a free deed, provided all payments have been made which were due at the time of his or her death.
3. We are erecting dwellings, flats or cottages for which payments are made on the same basis as rent; many of which are to-day almost self-supporting.
4. Real Estate in Montreal is not only a safe investment, but if well selected, the best way that money can be invested.
5. Within a few years Fairmount will be built up solid and you will probably not be able to purchase a lot for less than two or three times the value at which you can buy it to-day. There is a great demand for lots and those who want to get good choice will have to decide and buy quickly.
6. Restrictions as to buildings are such that will invite only a high class of residents, such as skilled mechanics and persons of moderate means.
7. There are two car lines to-day running up to the property and would place a person at the Post Office in twenty minutes.
8. Taxes are exceedingly low.
9. There is no better building land on the Island. Excavations of any kind can be made on the cheapest basis possible.

Don't let golden opportunities go by. Here is one. Fill in the Coupon and full particulars will be sent to you. You place yourself under no obligation and we assure you that as an investment proposition and easy method of purchase, lots in Fairmount have no equal.

HOW TO REACH FAIRMOUNT.

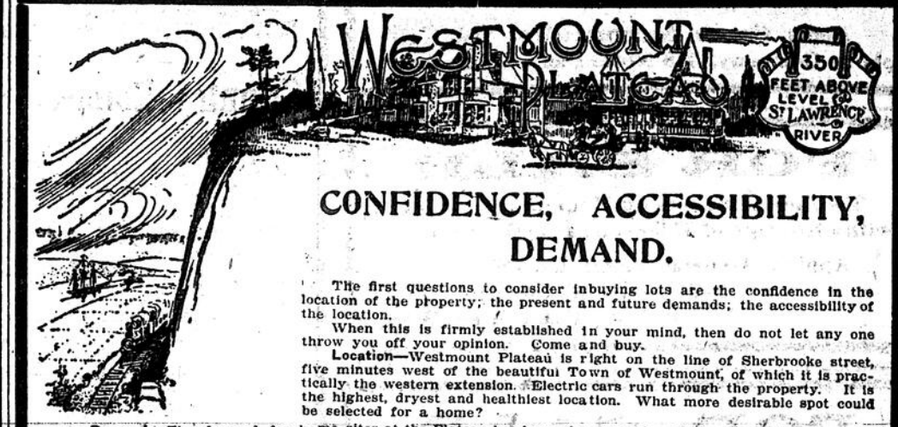
CHARRUAU & DAOUST, LA LRESSE BUILDING



CONFIDENCE, ACCESSIBILITY, DEMAND.

The first questions to consider in buying lots are the confidence in the location of the property; the present and future demands; the accessibility of the location.

When this is firmly established in your mind, then do not let any one throw you off your opinion. Come and buy.

Location—Westmount Plateau is right on the line of Sherbrooke street, five minutes west of the beautiful Town of Westmount, of which it is practically the western extension. Electric cars run through the property. It is the highest, dryest and healthiest location. What more desirable spot could be selected for a home?

Demand.—The demand for home-sites at the Plateau has been phenomenal. Out of 1,227 building lots we had here a year ago, there remain only 200 for sale. This demand will constantly be increasing as the place builds up, which will bring enormous profits to people who are wise enough to buy at present low prices.

Improvements.—Although the Plateau was opened up only a year ago you will already find there an abundant supply of pure water from Lake St. Louis. Wide avenues lined with over one thousand shade trees. A beautiful green lawn of 25 feet in front of each lot. Dozens of artistic homes costing from $3,000 to $30,000 each. A public park of nearly 13 square arpents right in the centre of the Plateau, improving the appearance and adding to the many attractions of the whole district for homes and investment.

Notwithstanding the above improvements our prices remain the same, namely:—$425 per lot and up, payable ten per cent. cash, and as little as $5 per month, interest included, if desired. Any one buying at present price is bound to make 300 per cent. within the next two or three years.

LAFLAMME CASE WILL BE TAKEN UP

In Montreal To-day and in Quebec on Monday.

LIBEL TRIAL ADJOURNED

Further Information About the Issue of Mining Permits Elicited From the Records.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Quebec, May 18.—The Asselin-Prevost libel trial was adjourned yesterday at half-past three owing to the desire of a juror living out of town to reach home in the evening. Before adjournment, Mr. N. K. Laflamme challenged the Attorney-General and his representatives to meet him before the council of the Bar of Montreal to-day, and Mr. Taschereau replied with a statement that two witnesses would appear before the district magistrate in Quebec on Monday and give evidence of statements made by Mr. Laflamme with regard to the possible suppression of the case against Olivar Asselin.

The closing of the session was a relief from the monotony of the searches made by the witness, Arthur Lemont, into the records of the department, though a little interest was infused by a statement of Mr. Laflamme that he expected to prove that the Minister had deceived the Legislative Assembly by making an alteration in a bill drafted by the officers of his department for the better development of the mining resources of the province.

Some delay was also caused by the absence from the department records of a notice of transfer of a mining grant, which transfer, the witness testified, had been made for $4,500 by A. E. Guay, of Ville Marie, though Mr. Guay had paid the Government only $55 for the permit and grant of the territory.

After establishing by the witness that transfers of the mining grants must be recorded in the department, Mr. Laflamme asked whether the books showed how much Mr. Peter Mackenzie had paid for permits to prospect in the territory of the Northern Gold Fields Company, an organization with a capital of $2,000,000. The witness found that Mr. Mackenzie had paid only $85. Mr. Justice Bosse enquired whether by the act there was a fixed price for mining grants, or whether such grants were to be obtained through competition or by fixing the highest price.

Mr. Laflamme declared he would contend that the amount fixed in the law was merely the minimum price, but that the Minister was bound to use his discretion and obtain a greater price if the territory was worth more.

THE DELAGRAVE PERMIT.

Mr. Laflamme took up the permit issued to Charles Delagrave. Mr. Delagrave had produced a map of the territory. It was a section in which the transcontinental engineers were surveying about that time. Mr. Delagrave had never visited it, and it was hard to locate. The map which Mr. Delagrave produced was a portion of the may in use in the Crown Lands Department, which was also used by the Mines Department.

Mr. Justice Bosse—Was any one from your department in that neighborhood at the time?

Mr. Lemont—Yes, Mr. J. Obalski, the superintendent of mines.

Mr. Laflamme elicited the information that the witness and the other officials of the department were struck by the fact that the description of the territory was so accurate. It even mentioned that the square mile applied for lay at the foot of a hill of rock. Mr. Ernest Prevost, acting secretary of mines, who issues the permits, remarked upon it to Mr. Delegrave.

"Did not Mr. Delagrave answer," asked Mr. Laflamme, "that the man who drew that plan knew what he was about?"

"Well," replied the witness, "I would not like to quote his words exactly but the impression he conveyed was certainly one that could be fairly expressed that way."

"Mr. Delagrave is a nephew of Mr. Obalski, is he not?"

"I do not know. I do not think he is a nephew. There is some connection, though, I think."

CHARGE AGAINST MR. PREVOST.

Mr. Laflamme then had the witness identify the bill passed at last session to amend the Mining act. The draft prepared by the officers of the department contemplated limiting prospecting permits to five miles square, or thirty hundred acre lots, whereas the bill limits the permits to twenty-five miles or thirty hundred acre lots.

Mr. Laflamme sought to have the witness tell what remarks Mr. Dufault, deputy minister, had made upon his change.

"I object to witness telling anything that happened between Mr. Dufault and himself in the absence of Mr. Prevost," said counsel for the Crown.

"Is Mr. Prevost accused in this case? I thought Oliver Asselin was the accused," retorted Mr. Laflamme. The latter declared that he did not wish to prejudice the minds of the jury by stating beforehand what information he expected to elicit on this subject? But he did maintain that it was an important point for him to bring out. "We will prove," he continued, "since the Crown will have me make this declaration, that the Minister of Mines, Hon. Jean Prevost, deliberately deceived the Legislative Assembly. He caused a draft of a bill to be made by Messrs. Dufault and Obalski in accordance with the technical knowledge and administrative knowledge which they had of the subject. This draft bill restricted permits to five miles, or thirty lots, which was about an equal extent of territory. They handed this draft to Mr. Prevost, who, when he put it before the House, substituted 25 miles for the five miles, and foisted it on the House as the result of the experience and knowledge of Messrs. Oblaski and Dufault."

Mr. Lemont declared that when the bill was passed he had discussed the matter with Mr. Dufault, who expressed disapproval of the change. The witness pointed out the inequality in area between twenty-five miles and thirty lots, and Mr. Dufault said that was one of the bad changes made at the end of a session when bills were rushed through without due deliberation or consideration.

MR. LAFLAMME'S CHALLENGE.

Mr. Laflamme asked the Judge to order Mr. Tanner to give him copies of the famous Baron E. Lepine, better known as the Charneuse letter, containing the significant capital letters C. E., together with the official letter of the previous date, and Mr. Turgeon's letter acknowledging two letters of the Baron. He wanted to show the bar of Montreal by four reliable and honorable witnesses, though he was accused of having attempted to cause the destruction of these documents, and to have the case stopped, he knew nothing of even their existence for twenty-four hours after his conversation with Dr. Demartigny and Mr. Langlois in Montreal on last Saturday. He therefore challenged the Attorney-General to meet him before the Bar at any hour on Saturday with his witnesses. "I want to come back here on Monday, entirely relieved from any insinuation of that character which has been cast upon me, and since those who made the charge have not dared to press it, I have been forced to do so myself." he concluded.

Mr. Justice Bosse remarked that he had caused Mr. Tanner to take notes of all the declarations made by the Attorney-General and by Mr. Laflamme on Tuesday last upon this subject, and had gone over these documents after they had been transcribed by the stenographer. Mr. Laflamme was entitled to copies of the same and Mr. Tanner would hand them over so that the proceedings before the Bar or before the enquete court could go on independently of this case.

Mr. Alex. Taschereau said the Attorney-General had made his declaration on his own responsibility: "I do not represent the Attorney-General for the purposes of any prosecution against Mr. Laflamme, nor do I nor my colleagues here represent the Attorney-General in Montreal. The Bar of Montreal has now before it a statement of facts presented by the Attorney-General's Department. Mr. Laflamme appears certain that he will cause his innocence to be proclaimed. I am sure that I, as well as my colleagues, will rejoice and congratulate him if he succeeds in this. Certain papers whether inspired by Mr. Laflamme or not I cannot say, have hinted that the Attorney-General will not go on with the prosecution, which he declared it is his intention to initiate."

Mr. Justice Bosse adjourned court until Monday at 10 a.m.

A Correspondent Mentions the Time When a Big Deal in Flour Went Wrong.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—In your issue of the 13th you publish a table of prices to show that "wheat has often been over the dollar mark."

The highest price for May, 1867, per your table, was $2.95.

The highest price for July, 1868, per your table, was $2.20.

The highest price for August, 1869, per your table, was $2.47.

They are the prices in Chicago in American currency, gold then at a high premium. The prices for 1868 and 1869 were the settling values on corners on No. 2 wheat in those months. Immediately after the settlements there was a large decline in each instance, on the same days that the settlements were made. The said prices are not prices founded on crop or other natural conditions.

The price for May, 1867, was the culmination of wide spread speculations, which commenced in the autumn of 1866 and ended in the ruin in May, 1867, of some of the speculators, who were caught with large stocks of wheat and flour, when the more active of the speculators during the winter were sold out.

Previous to 1867 wheat had been under $1. But $1 was then considered by fair-minded men the fair normal value at shipping ports to allow a profit to the grower.

At that time fluctuations of 25 cents a bushel above or below the $1 were due to crop rumors, stocks on hand, accidents and suppositions of the traders as to how prices were likely to tend.

The moving causes which made the extreme figures in your table were not natural; they were coercive manipulation. Your figures for the years 1867, 1868, and 1869 incidentally prove this. There was nothing but manipulation in those years to cause the cost of production of wheat to be advanced in 1867 from $1.55 to $2.95; in 1868 from $1.04 to $2.20; in 1869 from 76c to $2.47.

On the 23rd of May, 1867, I sold 500 barrels of a bakers' flour at $9.75 in Montreal; about the same time spring wheat was sold in Ingersoll at $2 per bushel. There were sales about that time of other brands of flour at $9 to $9.25 in Montreal. But about three weeks thereafter the same grades of flour were down $3 a barrel.

On the day that I sold at $9.75, it was being said on the Corn Exchange that flour would sell at $12 within ten days, but it has never since sold at $9.75. It was being said that the farmers had no wheat on hand, none for seed wheat, but when sales were made at $2, good dry wheat that had been in reserve for a few years come out in plenty.

When the speculative fever was about at its highest, one of the sanguine bulls bought 1000 barrels of winter wheat flour in Toronto, and another 1000 barrels of winter wheat flour in Guelph at $10 per barrel, and consigned the 2000 barrels to Chicago, where, he said, he refused an advance of $3 profit on the day of its arrival there. He lost his chance; the market broke, the 2000 barrels were shipped back to Canada to his own order, and transferred to me for sale in Montreal, after the decline of over $3 a barrel.

Turning again to your tables, I select 1885, the price for the year 54c and the highest price, in April 83c. Both prices were the result of manipulation. Strong capitalists had been striving all winter to put wheat to $1. Stronger capitalists had been selling short to break the market. One of the latter had bought largely in the North-West to send into the elevator warehouses for deliveries on his May contracts. His opposing manipulators took up all the storage room to shut out the wheat for those deliveries.

The two great financial combinations in opposition were very much interested in pork, as well as in wheat, and the short seller, balked by his opponents, offered pork down $10 a barrel and wheat with the same crushing influence he offered down into the figures from which you get the 54 cent wheat in your table.

The great financial bulls suspended payment. They were great in finance then; they are great in finance now, but before the onslaught of the multimillionaire bears the bulls succumbed, and the men of almost unlimited wealth and credit failed.

There was a money panic. About 600 banks went into the hands of receivers during the year; there were many bankruptcies among traders and manufacturers, and wheat was kept below the normal in the years 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896.

Wheat has since been coming through the clouds, slowly, but with claims to favor the service it has rendered towards the resuscitation of trade, and already some are talking $2 wheat.

All talk tending to raise expectations of $2 wheat is as unfair to the greater community as 48 to 54c at Chicago was mean and dishonest to the farmer.

The farmers of the North-West will become rich with wheat at $1 at the shipping ports, if railways are alike reasonable in the rates of freight to the seaboard. But speculators with advance prices for wheat above the dollar mark and the history of prices in 1867 may be repeated at lower altitudes than those attained in May, 1867.

SILVER OUTPUT AND PRICES.

How the Production Affects Price of Metal.

The London silver market has been nearly steady since December, 1905, though in that period the highest price since 1903 was touched. The quotation which rose to 32¼ pence per ounce last December, is now about 30, the highest price of this year having been 32½.

In 1906, when the recovery was at the high point, the world's production of silver was 157,700,000 ounces. In 1903, when silver was at the lowest price it ever reached, the price was 21 11-16 pence per ounce, and the output was 167,700,000 ounces. The largest production in any year was 1900, 173,600,000 ounces, the output in 1903 being 600,000 ounces less. In those years the average price was 23¼ and 27 3-16 pence per ounce.

TO ANNEX COTE DES NEIGES TO MONTREAL.

At a short meeting of the Annexation Committee yesterday afternoon, it was decided to report to the City Council in favor of Cote des Neiges being annexed to the city. The municipality of Cote des Neiges had previously notified the city that it was willing to throw in its lot with Montreal.

After the meeting, Ald Lavallee, chairman of the committee, spoke of a proposition which had been made that Maisonneuve should be annexed. He said that this annexation had been considerably impeded by the fact that the municipality had recently passed an enactment to borrow the big sum of $40,000. If the city annexed this place it would have to shoulder this debt as well as certain other large liabilities. Ald. Lavallee further stated that it was his intention, in the near future, to propose that certain other outlying municipalities be annexed to Montreal. He explained that he favored annexing places while they were small; by this procedure the city was not called upon to take over heavy debts. In annexing places that were not very large the city would be giving opportunities to citizens to go to outside places to live. The city was rapidly growing in every direction, and it was absolutely necessary that the people should have means of getting away from the crowded city after their labors were completed. It had to be remembered that no matter how far distant a municipality might be it would not be long before it had a street car service after it became annexed.

The general feeling was that there should be annexations when the conditions were at all favorable.

Death of Former Montrealer.

Harold McLean, formerly a resident of Montreal and well known here, died Wednesday night at Halifax, of tuberculosis after a three months' illness. The young man, who was about 25 years of age, was the son of Mr. Hector McLean, of 123 Berri street, and was some years ago with his father, in the employ of the Elder Dempster company here. At the time of the South African war he enlisted in the Strathcona Horse and on his return entered the service of the Marconi Company, in whose employ he has been at Cape Race for the last three years.

WAY OF TRANSGRESSORS BEFORE JUDGE CHOQUET

Judge Choquet sitting in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday imposed the following sentences: Alfred Laliberty, found guilty of having broken into J. Pony's store, corner of St. James street and St. Lawrence Boulevard, and on a charge of theft at his boarding house, was sentenced to one year in jail. Robt. Paterson, alias Sparrow, who pleaded guilty to a charge of highway robbery by stealing $1 from the person of Constable Forget will have to pass two months in jail. Arthur Moriesette, who was arraigned on a charge of theft, was sentenced to two years at the penitentiary. Alfred Desrochers, found guilty on three charges of theft will have to go to the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary for two years. Joseph St. Onge, for selling liquor at Verdun without a license was fined $150 and costs or three months in jail.

Mustn't Keep What You Find.

On a charge of theft, Rosa Bloum, entered a plea of not guilty before Magistrate Lafontaine yesterday. She was remanded for enquete until next Tuesday.

It is alleged that a couple of days ago a gentleman who was going along the street dropped a pocketbook containing $56. The accused, who was behind the man, noticed the purse and picked it up. Two young boys who were in the same vicinity noticed the movements of the woman and told her who the owner of the purse was. The Bloum woman then refused to go over to him and give it back. The boys seeing this, went to the detectives' headquarters and related the incident. The case was put in the hands of Detective Laboeuf and Trudel, with the result that the woman was arrested last evening.

Seek Release From Penitentiary.

In the Practice Court, to-day, Mr. C. A. Wilson, K.C., applied to Mr. Justice Fortin for a writ of habeas corpus for the release of Ivanno Loyon, Alfred Daigneault and Adelard Morin, who are serving a term in the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary for assaulting and robbing Celestin Borret. Mr. Wilson claimed that there had been nothing on the record to show that there had been a conviction, although one has since appeared. How it turned up he was unable to say. The commitment was made for "aggravated robbery," which he claimed was no crime known to the law. The writ of harbeas corpus was granted made returnable on Monday next.

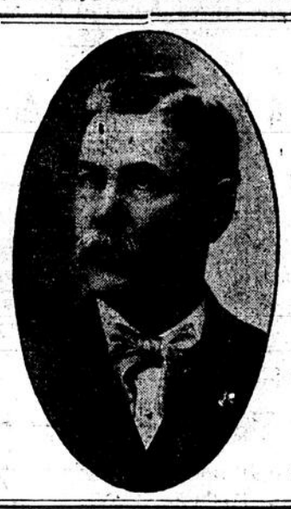
McDERMOTT in CHARGE of HULL MINES

Captain William McDermott, the Most Famous Mine Superintendent in America, Under Whose Management the United Verde, Our Next Door Neighbor, Has Paid Millions in Dividends, is Now in Charge of the Hull Mines at Jerome, Arizona



William McDermott
Jerome, Arizona.

Messrs. O. B. Stanton & Son,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen:

I am familiar with the property. I believe the property can soon be put on a solid basis, and I feel confident we will succeed in developing another great mine in Jerome. It should not take long to put the Hull Copper Company second to the great United Verde mine in the Jerome District as a copper producer.

With kindest regards and best wishes for the future, I am

Very sincerely yours,

Wm McDermott

THIS announcement is of the greatest interest to the whole copper world, on account of the eminent standing of Captain McDermott. He has been the right-hand man of Senator Clark, the Copper King, for the last 10 years, and it has been upon Capt. McDermott's advice and reports that Clark has purchased his most famous mines.

The mere fact that Capt. McDermott has taken charge and will personally direct developement of Hull Copper Co. is significant to the mining world that the most sucesssful expert and mine worker in America has implicit confidence in Hull Copper. When Capt. McDermott casts his lot with a mining enterprise, staking his enviable reputation upon the success of that undertaking, the success of the property is assured. Capt. McDermott put enough ore in sight in the United Verde to give it the stupendous value of $100,000,000.00.

Capt. McDermott, in taking charge of this property, will bring with him the mine boss of the United Verde, a man who has been associated with him for years in developing United Verde.

GOLD SEEKERS RUSH TO YELLOWHEAD PASS

Special Correspondence of the Montreal Star.

Edmonton, Alta., May 18.—There is an under current of excitement in Northern Alberta just now over a persistent but indefinite rumor that gold has been found in the Yellowhead Pass country. Just when or how the rumor originated is not known, but it has been very much in evidence. The result is already seen in a movement of settlers in that direction, who purpose sharing in the gold-strike if there is one.

The report of the find has also started off a number of prospecting parties.

To Edmonton this new gold hunt is interesting. It was the Klondike talk of 1896-8 that was virtually the means of discovering modern Edmonton to the rest of Canada and giving it its later impetus. The route via this city was found to be the best to the Klondike, and prospectors poured in and through, outfitting on the way. Incidentally, it resulted in the gold-hunters coming back themselves to buy Edmonton land or in their writing to friends in the East that Edmonton land was good land, and worth buying. From this side-issue of the Klondike gold fever there came enlivened prosperity to Edmonton. There is less likelihood of such a result in the present case. Land buyers hereabouts are already in legion, and the city does not stand in need of publicity, as it did then, even if the gold-strike proved equally good. There is, too, the possibility as yet that the Yellowhead gold find may come to no more glorious consummation than the find last winter at Battleford, where an old-time rush of would-be miners took place on the strength of a very imaginative newspaper story.

EDMONTON'S AMBITIOUS PROGRAMME.

Edmonton ratepayers are to vote on May 27th on expenditures amounting to more than $300,000. These new cities in the West need many things, and need them much, and it is no easy though a very necessary matter to keep public improvements in pace with the growth of population. The capital has already this year passed appropriations for street paving, street railway, and extension of water works, and sewage, and will now vote on the purchase of a new power-house site, $76,000; extension of electric light and power plant, $120,000; cost of scavenging machinery, building, etc., $22,000; new fire halls, fire alarm system, and apparatus, $41,000; surplus cost of new isolation hospital, $10,000.

These several items, having been judged necessary by the city commissioners and Council, will almost certainly be authorized by the ratepayers. Western citizens are liberal with civic funds, because if one thing is more apparent than another in the western town it is that lavish expenditure is the price of health and orderliness, and that almost no expenditure is extravagant in view of the future development. In proof of which is Calgary's vote, a few weeks ago, on a municipal street railway enterprise. Calgary already had on its hands a quarter-million City Hall to be built this year, and an absolutely imperative extension of the water works and sewage systems. These would have been enough in one year for a city of 18,000 in the east, and even in Calgary there were those who argued that a street railway was a luxury that these other things already passed, were the chief and absolute essentials, and that the motor bus service already inaugurated would answer very well in the way of street transit. But the citizens as a whole felt that a city of Calgary's ambitions had real need of electric cars, as well as of sewers, and that while these would be built in any case the others should be provided, too, in keeping with the city's growing metropolitanism, and they accordingly voted two to one in favor of another $250,000 for a street railway service.

And in the same spirit of liberality Edmonton will probably support the by-laws providing for these and other expenditures to the tune of $300,000.

Yukon Mining Rules Changed.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 18.—A change is made by order-in-Council in the Yukon mining regulations, so that henceforth the judges of the Territorial Court and the Gold Commissioner, or any two of them of whom the Gold Commissioner must be one, may make general rules for practice and procedure before the Gold Commissioner. It is specially stipulated that practice and procedure must be as summary, expeditious and inexpensive as possible.

Mayor Schmitz, of San Francisco, Denies Commission of Severe Story.

San Francisco, May 18.—In a statement to the Evening Post Mayor Schmitz said:—

"The statement that I have handed over the reins of the Government to any person or commission is an unqualified falsehood. I called a committee of fifty together some time ago in order that I might take advantage of the wisdom and advice of the best citizens of the city, in a financial and industrial crisis. The committee of fifty selected sub-committees in order that the important work might be systematized and carried out, and one of the committee is the so-called committee of seven.

"I have not resigned, nor yielded my prerogative to anybody, and any statement to the contrary is a malicious falsehood. There is no reason why I should turn over the reins of government to other people.

"As for Ruef's charges, I will say he has not paid me any bribe money and he knows that. If he says he paid bribe money to me he simply lies. I only know that he has made such charges from what I am told, and from the newspaper representatives."

The examination of Abraham Ruef before the grand jury was resumed to-day. He was further questioned as to the alleged bribery of Mayor Schmitz and the supervisors by the United Railroads, pursuant to his testimony of yesterday that $200,000 was paid by that corporation for the purpose of electrifying the street railway system. Ruef refused to forecast the information he will impart.

Mr. Matzen, of his counsel, says the mayor will appear for trial in Judge Dunne's department of the Superior Court next Monday.

AN AGRICULTURAL CENSUS ORDERED

Complete Statistics Will Be Collected With Regard to Progress of Farming.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 18.—The census commissioner, Mr. Archibald Blue, is preparing in accord with the latest Census Act, to collect statistics in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces with regard to farms, live stock, field crops. A circular letter to the farmers of these provinces appears in the Canada Gazette.

In Ontario the Bureau will work with the Provincial Bureau of Industries, which has been working on these lines for 25 years, the one schedule serving the object of both governments. In the other provinces the whole work of collection, compiling and publishing will be conducted by the Federal office.

The schedules now issued ask for information regarding the area of each farm, the area cleared, the area in crops, the area in orchards, small fruit and vineyard, the number of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry and the principal field crop.

Later in the season reports will be obtained from correspondents in all townships and parishes of the average yields on field crops, for use in computing the total yields of the crops, and the results will be printed and published by counties and provinces for general distribution.

It is noted that the law makes it the duty of persons receiving these schedules to fill them out, and a pledge is given that the information obtained will not be used for purposes of taxation.

PRAYER NOT SUFFICIENT.

Prosecution for Homicide to Follow Failure to Provide Medical Care.

New York, May 18.—A recommendation that a law be passed in New York State subjecting to prosecution on a charge of homicide all persons responsible for failure to provide proper medical attendance for children suffering from dangerous diseases was made at a coroner's jury. The jury heard the evidence in the case of a girl four years old, who died without medical attendance, on May 4. The verdict also censured the father of the child and charged him with criminal negligence.

According to the evidence, the child died of pneumonia. Her father testified that the treatment consisted of prayer. He said that before four other children of his died he called in physicians, but did so simply to comply with the law. He did not administer the medicines prescribed as he thought nothing could serve better than prayer.

These 800 Acres Were The First Claims Staked In The Rich Larder Lake Field.

Last summer, before any staking had been done in the Larder Lake region, our experts located TWENTY gold-bearing claims, amounting to eight hundred acres, two miles north of Wilson's Bay, of Larder Lake. (You can have a map of the property for the asking.) On some of the claims there are wide reefs that assay from $7.50 to $18 a ton. We have assays on file that show as much as $1,800 a ton. There is no richer property in the country,—and Larder Lake is as RICH AS THE FAMOUS RAND of South Africa. All our holdings are in ONE BLOCK, which means economy in working the claims. The ore on these properties is FREE-MILLING,—we have our own water-power on the property. We have an abundance of wood and water—every item that counts in the economical operation of gold mines. Our expenses will be far lower, and our assays are higher than those of mines which have paid seventy millions in dividends—and our ore will grade far higher.

We have nothing to hide, nothing to lie about. We ask you to learn the simple facts, and we are ready to put them before you and to prove to you that

Sulphide Vein

75 per cent. of the World's Copper comes from Sulphide ore. 90 p.c. of the abandoned copper mines are abandoned for the lack of it. Other ores, though worth millions, give value to the mines containing them only to the extent of ore actually in sight. Authorities say the Sulphide Strike is, almost invariably, the crown of a deposit, assured for considerable depth—especially in the proven district of Bonanza Belt.

From the 3,000 year old Rio Tinto Mines of Spain, down to that infant prodigy, our neighbor, Calumet and Arizona, sulphides have characterized the prominent copper mines, paying permanent dividends, measured in extent by the amount of output and market price of metal.

971 ACRES OF MINING LANDS, in the very heart of the richest Cobalt district. 27 claims in all. Surrounded by mining properties which have already made their owners and stockholders rich men. Not one of these noted properties offered as promising prospects as the lands of the CANADIAN PACIFIC COBALT DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, LIMITED. Think of it, Mr. Investor, 971 acres, 27 properties, which have already been passed upon by the most trustworthy engineers in Cobalt, and who state upon their reputation as responsible mining engineers, that "Every one of the 27 claims should prove valuable mining properties if systematically developed."

"As the Presence of Cobalt, Silver and Gold is Certain,"

Treasury stock has been offered openly and publicly at 12 1-2 cents a share for the past week. Results have demonstrated a larger number of shares sold in the same length of time than of any other stock, large or small, ever offered on the Canadian market. This, at a time, too, when stocks have been quiet.

It emphatically demonstrates that the people, rich and middle classes, have the utmost confidence in this great mining proposition and realize its immense importance as a sure investment. Without the shadow of a doubt fortunes are going to be made by those who are quick enough to buy stock at 12 1-2 cents. Remember

MONTREAL 1, NEWARK 0, ANOTHER FOR NEWTON

The Versatile Doc Shut Newark Out With All Kinds of Ease in the Contest Yesterday Afternoon.

Mr. Newton, M.D., is getting to be such a consistent performer at handing out lemons that you can set your clock by him.

Yesterday Doc. went into the fruit business again and put it all over Newark.

Take our word for it, gentle reader, on the pitching proposition this season, Doc is the big noise, and no questions asked.

J. Bean departed from this vale of tears on Wednesday, and the schedule yesterday called for the appearance of Mr. Burnham's pallid performers.

The change of climate didn't agree with Newark. Doc. touched the match to them, and they blew up.

Mr. P. Powers, president of the Eastern League, ever solicitous for our comforts, sent an extra Ump to arbitrate the differences that occasionally arise, and also to relieve Ump Owens.

Mr. Owens is undoubtedly a resourceful Ump, but no Ump, however good, can read love letters and render close decisions at second base, as Mr. Owens has been trying to do lately.

So Mr. Hoffner is in our midst, and while Mr. Owens is looking over his extensive correspondence, Mr. Hoffner hands out a few underdone decisions to the satisfaction of the tumultuous throng.

The umpiring duet worked well yesterday, and apart from the fact that Mr. Mullin called Mr. Hoffner a sausage, the affair was most pleasant.

The score, we may observe in passing, was 1 to 0, and the contest itself excessively tame.

However, our one and only run came as the result of the squeeze play, and in the memory of the oldest inhabitant this is the first time the squeeze play has ever worked.

MADIGAN'S ARM STILL THERE.

Another event that stirred our emotions to the breaking point was a skilful exhibition by our Mr. Madigan.

Mr. James Cockman, a sterling performer, well and favorably known to the local critics, was on third base in the fourth innings, when Mr. Sharpe, who can throw almost as big a shadow as a bean pole, hit the ball a biff out to our Mr. Madigan.

Now, of course, having seen Mr. Madigan perform so often we are next to the fact that Mr. Madigan's throwing arm is all to the molasses.

Mr. Cockman was in the dark, however, in regard to Mr. Madigan's glorious achievements, and the moment the ball hit Mr. Madigan's glove Mr. Cockman lit out for the plate on the glad gallop.

Mr. Cockman can sprint a few, but our Mr. Madigan lined the ball to Mr. Kittredge, and it was a hurry-up order.

It is unnecessary to relate further. We will be brief, and merely say that the throw was a beaut from every standpoint.

Newark has an Indian pitcher who is said to be a Tomahawker.

Cockman returned with thanks in the fifth when he pulled off a lulu catch of a foul fly.

But let us wander from this tame exhibition into more invigorating channels of thought.

DO WE KNOW THE GAME?

The other day in a thoughtless moment we ventured the alarming assertion that Montreal fans still have a few things to learn about the historic game of bat and ball.

The thought was based on the fact that the crowd strained its voice cheering every time somebody caught an easy fly while Hill failed to get a single hand of applause when he pulled off one of the best plays of the year in the infield.

Our little weakness in this respect has always been the source of a good deal of amusement among the players themselves, but when we mentioned it the other day it aroused the ire of an esteemed reader.

Rolling his shirt sleeves up, and drawing a stub pen from the arsenal, he dipped it into a pot of black vitriol and mailed the following to the:

Baseball Editor Star:

Sir,—I beg to take exception to the statement made by you in Monday's issue to the effect that Montreal baseball fans do not know the game.

The "Phoney" line of talk that crowds here will applaud the smothering of an easy skyscraper while the clean handling of hard liners and ugly ground balls will escape unnoticed, has gone the rounds before.

It is a canard pure and simple and a direct insult to the intelligence of the Montreal baseball loving public.

Any habitue of the bleachers will bear out my statement that each and every play made on the local diamond is followed closely, understood, discussed and applauded as it deserves.

Nobody except possibly a few youngsters or perhaps some rabid lacrosse fiends who have blown in at a strange form of entertainment, would ever put a higher valuation on the skill displayed in the catching of an easy lift to the outfield, than on the rapid and accurate handling of hard hit grounders. When a long fly is caught after a hard run it deserves the applause it evokes.

After the cheering which follows the catching of a comparatively easy floater which retires the opposing side is merely the reaction following the period of excitement attendant on an interesting inning.

Perhaps, however, the individual who asks "do we know the game?" wishes only to speak only for himself and other press representatives when he confesses ignorance of the rudiments of baseball.

"FIRST BASE BLEACHERS."

Far be it from the justly celebrated expert who writes baseball for the Star, to attempt an argument with a sterling authority like "First Base Bleachers."

So we put the question up to "Tip" O'Neil, while breezing out to the grounds the other day in an open car.

The situation, in all its harrowing and heart breaking details, was explained to "Tip," who pondered over the matter for a moment, and then handed down a sweeping decision in favor of the Star.

Prosecution to pay the costs.

A SURPLUS OF "TIP" O'NEIL'S.

"Tip" still takes a whole lot of interest in baseball, and ventures the guess that we have a good team.

It might be strengthened a little in a couple of places," he said, "but it is the best aggregation we have ever had here."

And speaking of the mighty "Tip" himself, the hero of the old St. Louis Browns, and one of the greatest sluggers the game has ever seen, recalls the fact that every O'Neill who butts into the noble pastime these days immediately calls himself "Tip."

There are "Tip" O'Neils playing ball to-day in California, Texas, Illinois, Montana, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Carolina.

No man can throw a stone in the baseball situation and not hit a Tip O'Neil on the coco.

The only original Tip has lived quietly in Montreal for so many years that the newspapers in the States have lost track of him.

Thus it is that every once and awhile we pick up a paper and read:

Deadwood, N.D., April 32.—(Special.)—"Tip" O'Neil, the great ball player of St. Louis, died here to-day, the owner of a string of gold mines worth $35,000,000.

And then they vary it a little:

Colorado Springs, April 23 (Special.)—A little child was standing on the Santa Fe bridge to-day, and fell 4,000 feet to the canyon below. "I will save her," yelled a man, and diving into the yawning chasm, he grabbed the girl just as she was about to hit the rocks. The brave rescuer of the fair maid was none other than "Tip" O'Neil, the great fielder of the old St. Louis Browns."

"Tip" has read his obituary about 350 times by the clock.

SUMMARY.

Bases on balls, off Newton 4, off Carrick 1; struck out, by Carrick 3; sacrifice hits, Morgan, Newton and Phelan; first base on errors, Montreal 3; stolen base, Brown; left on bases, Montreal 6, Newark 5; hit by pitcher, Madigan and Brown; wild pitch, Newton. Umpires, Owens and Hoffner. Time, 1.25.

NOTES.

Madigan's throw from deep right centre that cut off a run at the plate was the only bright feature of an otherwise dull game.

Engler, the Newark shortstop, was responsible for two of the Sailor's three errors. Both were fumbles of liners, but neither proved costly.

Phelan and Newton were responsible for the Royals' two errors. Phelan allowed a grounder that should have been good for a base only, to go through him and the runner continued to second, while Newton, in trying to catch a Sailor at first, made a bad throw.

As the slit column shows, both pitchers had 'em guessing most of the time. All the hits were rather scratchy and a pass started Kittredge on the only run scored.

Cockman, the Canadian third baseman of the Newark team, is a very fast man and fields his position in splendid style. He also shows up well with the stick.

By defeating Buffalo again yesterday, Baltimore takes the lead in the league, and the defeat of Jersey City by Toronto, puts the Skeeters in second place. Toronto still remains third.

Two umpires yesterday for the first time this season. Mr. Owens still continued to give decisions on balls and strikes in his own inimitable style, while a Mr. Hoffmer looked after the bases. Hoffmer is another new one here.

Mike Joyce still continues to swat the ball in a manner that is gladdening the hearts of all. One of the three yesterday went to his credit.

Newark again to-day, while to-morrow Providence, the team that is at present pulling off a few stunts in Rochester will be here for three games.

Y. M. C. A. Football Club.

Commencing Tuesday next, the 21st, the Y. M. C. A. boys will have a practice every Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the Baseball Park, Atwater avenue, starting at 6.30 p.m., each evening. Members will please note change made with regard to evenings for practice, from henceforth. Quite a number of players were out in the evenings this week, and from present indications a good season will be expected. Some of the new men showed up well, and after a little practical training by the coach, they should find a place on one of the league teams.

New Brunswick Player.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Fredericton, N.B., May 18.—George Finnamore, who was with Joe Page's Farnham team of the Canadian Baseball League, left here last night to join the Augusta team of the Maine State League. He is a fast infielder and hard hitter, and was recommended to Augusta by Pitcher Stackpole, of Holyoke.

REVIEW OF KING'S PLATE CHANCES

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, Ont., May 18.—From all appearances the Ontario Jockey Club's spring meeting, which opens to-day, promises to be the most brilliant and interesting in the long series of successes that have marked the club's history. The class and the number of horses here for the meeting are such as to assure good racing and large fields.

The list of probable starters is the strongest evidence of the belief that this year's plate is a very open race.

Fifteen horses are carded to start and they represent eleven different owners. Last year only six horses ran, representing but five owners.

This three-year-old showed great speed in shorter distances, but when as his training progressed, the journeys became longer, it became a question if he would be suited to go the long route necessary to win the plate. His high action was one thing that counted against his ability to perform creditably over a distance of ground and in his last two serious works he was decidedly beaten by Sea Wall. As a result, Trainer Littlefield decided he should not hope to win to-day's race with Assemblyman, and the latter therefore will not carry the colors this afternoon. With Assemblyman also dropped out Haruko, the four-year-old sister to Inferno.

Of the three horses on which Mr. Seagram has now to depend, Sea Wall is counted as the best. In fact, the other two—Half a Crown and Supper Dance—seem to come in less by their own merits than by the failure of Assemblyman and Haruko to meet expectations.

Mr. Davies will have two representatives in Capstan and Gay Dora, and the Kirkfield Stable has the three-year-old Kirkfield and the four-year-old Wicklight ready to race. The one horse that stands out, however, is Hon. Adam Beck's Photographer. His work has been very satisfactory to his owner and Trainer Nixon, the latter of whom says: "If this colt races up to his work, he will win from end to end."

OPENING OF THE SENIOR LACROSSE SEASON.

PROSPECTS FOR THE CRICKET SEASON

A Review of the Strength of the Various Clubs Hereabout and What They May Do.

The prospects for a good cricket season seem exceptionally bright this year and the weaker teams will nearly all be strengthened. As usual the Montreal and District Amateur Cricket League is divided into two sections, A and B. The teams comprising section A are McGill, Montreal, Longueuil, Westmount I, and Point St. Charles.

The McGill team will be practically the same as last year, but will have lost the services of one or two valuable men, including King. These, however, will be replaced by young players of promise.

Montreal will be exceedingly strong this year and bids fair to wrest the championship honors from McGill, who has topped the league for the past two seasons. They will be captained by Mr. Heygate, and will welcome the return of the Rev. Mr. Plumptre. Wallace, the ex-professional, has been reinstated and will be permitted to play with them also.

Longueuil have much the same team as before, and the weaker teams, Westmount I. and Point St. Charles, will be strengthened by some new players.

The teams comprising B division are the Dominion Cotton Mills, Lachine, Westmount II., Victoria Annex, Valleyfield, and Cote St. Paul. Valleyfield, which won the championship of section B two years ago, has re-entered after a year's absence from the league. Osborne also applied for membership, but had to withdraw on account of the difficulty of procuring suitable grounds. Even so there are two more clubs in section B than there were last year. Although the Dominion Cotton Mills won the championship of this section last year they have not taken advantage of their opportunity to replace the tail-enders of Section A. Thus section A remains identical with that of last year.

With regard to fixtures with outside teams, McGill has a series of four home and home games with Ottawa, two with Quebec, and two with Lennoxville. Lennoxville will open the season here this afternoon in a match against McGill. At the end of July or the beginning of August there will be a "Cricket Week" in Ottawa. Teams will be sent up from Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg.

The Staten Island Cricket Club, of New York City, have arranged a tour which will take in Quebec and Ottawa, as well as Montreal. While here they will play matches against both the McGill and the Montreal teams.

The International match will take place this year in Toronto, and it is practically certain that the American team will visit Montreal and Ottawa.

There is some talk of the Canadian Cricket Association forming a Western Association to correspond to the Eastern Association, and a committee has been appointed to look into the matter of the amalgamation of the two. If such an arrangement could be reached it would greatly benefit the game of cricket throughout the whole Dominion.

Honorary vice-president, Gilbert Ferrabee.

President, John Duthie.

1st vice-president, A. B. Wood.

2nd vice-president, W. C. Baber.

Secretary, W. E. Hansford.

Honorary treasurer, W. H. Duthie.

At a recent meeting the proposal to change the name of the league to the Montreal and District Cricket League, leaving out the word amateur, in order to admit Hainsworth who is at present debarred from playing with McGill, was rejected. The reason for this is that only two clubs, McGill and Montreal, can afford to pay a professional and that these two are strong enough already with respect to the other teams.

At present cricket is not as popular as it should be. The main reason for this is the fact that there are no public grounds suitable for cricket, where children might learn to play from the beginning as they do in the case of hockey, lacrosse, or baseball. Again men in Canada cannot devote the time that Englishmen give to the game. However, there is some really first class cricket played both here and in the States (especially at Philadelphia) and it seems a pity that the clubs are not more encouraged.

NATIONALS IN GOOD TRIM.

For Game With Toronto Saturday Afternoon.

The final selection of the referees for the game between Toronto and Nationals has not been made yet, but the matter will be definitely decided this evening. Toronto suggested Ald. Tom O'Connell, Tom Carlind, Phil. O'Reilly, Roddy Finlayson, Dr. Irvine and Dr. Cameron. As any of these are acceptable to the Nationals it is not likely that there will be any trouble in securing satisfactory officials.

The Nationals had their last practice before the match last night and the team is in fine trim. The team will be selected at noon to-morrow from the following players: L'Heureux, Cattarnich, Blanchard, Secours, Clement, Decary, Hebert, Lamoureux, Sauve, Pitre, Laviolette, Laderoute, Gauthier and Duckett.

AN EXPERT ON THE CHANCES OF "SOCCER"

Many Good Players Cannot Get Off on Saturdays—More Privacy by Having Closed Grounds.

This year prospects are brighter than ever for a most successful season for the Montreal and District Football Association. There will be nine clubs in the senior division, these being the Point St. Charles, Westmount, M.A.A.A., Y.M.C.A., Rosemount, C.P.R., Valleyfield, Ottawa and the Caledonians. In addition to these there is McGill, which stands in rather a unique position with regard to association football. In order that the club may have any claim on the use of the McGill campus they must be the recognized members of some league. Consequently each year the McGill Club plays home and home games with the two teams which come second and third respectively in the league championship. If they are victorious over both they then have the right to challenge the leaders of the league for the championship. By this rather unique arrangement the McGill Soccer Club is enabled to claim the use of the campus. The noticeable absentee from the senior ranks this year will be Outremont. This is due to them being unable to procure grounds. The Points and Rosemount will be practically the same as last year. However, there will be three changes in the line-up of the champions. Sutherland, George and Jimmy Ross will be replaced by Everenden, Armstrong and Dorman. The other seven teams will have their ranks recruited by players who are largely strange to Montrealers, but they will all be as strong as, and probably stronger, than last year. This strengthening of the weaker teams is sure to make the race for the Hemsley Shield most exciting and very keenly contested.

The Points at present hold all of the three trophies which are offered. These are the Hemsley Shield, emblematic of the League championship, given by Richard Hemsley; the Caledonian Cup, given by Peter Lyall; and the Freedman Cup, given by Isidore Freedman. The last two are open to challenges from any club at all.

Enclosed grounds will be taken advantage of by at least six clubs this year, the Points, Rosemount and the Caledonians being the only ones who will not use them. In the city C.P.R. have got the use of the Mascotte grounds, Y.M.C.A. will use the Baseball Park, Westmount will have their new grounds early in June, and M. A. A. A. will, of course, use their own grounds. In the past one of the great drawbacks to Association football has been the want of closed grounds, and the privacy in practice entailed in the use of them. Now that this has been greatly remedied the game ought to take a long stride forward.

The officers recently elected for this year are as follows: — President, Mr. F. Davis; vice-president, Mr Geo. Millard; second vice-president, Mr. G. Wells; secretary-treasurer, Mr. Frank Calder. The new executive promises a great improvement in the refereeing this year, and a number of prominent Old Country footballers have been procured to act as "knights of the whistle."

On Saturday, June 1st, the Westmount team will entertain the famous New England League team, Fall River, at the M.A.A.A. This was the only team on the continent to lower the colors of the famous Corinthians, and a fine exhibition of soccer is expected.

The fact of two outside teams belonging to the league will provide two very pleasant trips for the Montreal clubs, while Ottawa and Valleyfield will each have eight trips.

The intermediate schedule this year is as large as last, and the clubs are Rosemount, the Colonial House, Westmount, Y.M.C.A., Points and C.P.R. The class of football in the intermediate league promises to be superior to that displayed in the past.

The Junior League, under the direction of Mr. Couves, will also be a prominent feature this season.

With regard to the chances of Soccer in Canada ever reaching the standard of that in the Old Country, Mr. John Kyle, who last year piloted the Points to victory, but is now with Westmount, made the following remarks:—

"The one thing which is at present killing the chances of Association football in Canada is the fact that nearly all the men who might play, such as stonemasons and bricklayers, are compelled to work all day Saturday. It is not that we haven't the players out here, but it is that we can't use them. Now that the junior teams are progressing so well, and soccer is being taken up in the schools, its spread and advance should be most rapid. You will notice how firmly Association is remaining amateur here. We can't afford professionalism, that's why. No, Canadian soccer will never reach the standard set in England until it is taken up by every school, besides being professionalized. It is true that we have better football here than in Australia, but we cannot come up to the soccer played in the States, where it is already practically professionalized."

Ottawa Lawn Bowlers' Premises Ready—New Greens and Courts Open Next Week

Ottawa, May 18.—The Ottawa Lawn Bowling Club has reorganized for what promises to be the most successful season on record, and next week will see the inauguration of the popular summer sport. The club has now over three hundred members, including many of the most prominent residents of the city, and has also one of the finest bowling greens and clubhouses in Canada. The headquarters of the club are situated on the Glebe, west of Bank street, between Second and Third avenues. The ground was purchased last fall and the club house constructed, and the greens prepared this spring. Workmen are still engaged putting the greens into shape, but will be finished early next week. The grounds are sodded as perfectly as possible, and besides the bowling green, there is also a splendid tennis court. The property is all fenced in, and presents a very pretty appearance. The club will probably enter a bowling team in the Ontario Lawn Bowling association, and will visit Toronto, Montreal and other Canadian cities, bringing the representatives of those places here for return games. The locals have a great many excellent bowlers and expect to have a great season. The grounds are in charge of an English expert, who took care of one of the finest bowling greens in the old country and neither time nor expense will be spared to have the property kept in good shape.

The property and club house are valued at about $8,000, and the officers, recently elected at the anual meeting, are as follows: President, Mr. J. L. Orme; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. A. Machado and William Douthie; treasurer, Mr. George Kydd; secretary, Mr. Harold Fisher; directors, Messrs. J. L. Orme, J. A. Machado, John McKinley, William Douthie, G. E. Valleau, W. H. Walker and P. E. Ritchie; property committee, Messrs. John McKinley, Robert Reid, G. E. Valleau, W. H. Walker, F. W. Fee, O. P. Schreiber, P. E. Ritchie, J. A. Machado and George Kydd.

Overcomes the Rule That Only Boys in Long Trousers are Eligible.

"I can't give you a baseball schedule until you wear long pants," said the office boy, in the Semi-Ready store, as he waggled at another boy in knickers.

Half an hour afterwards, the office boy said to the cashier: "Don't wonder that Jim's at the head of his class. He borrowed his big brother's trousers and asked for a baseball schedule as bold as brass."

Nearly 4,000 copies of the Eastern League Baseball schedule have been given out by the Semi-ready stores. "There are not very many left," said Riley Hern, the well known hockeyist, who is in the St. Catherine street west store.

A New Roller Club.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Peterboro, Ont., May 18. — A roller hockey club has been organized here, and likely will enter a league composed of Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. These officers were elected: President, S. J. Sheridan; vice-president, J. Seymour; secretary-treasurer, S. Gibbs; manager, Walter Miller; executive, F. Clancy, George MacDonald and H. Staunton.

LACROSSE SEASON MAY BE LONG ONE

The Teams Will Be Very Strong and Well Matched—First Exhibition Match Played Here To-day.

At present the prospects for a good lacrosse season are looking far brighter than ever before. All the teams will be strong this year, and it is expected that more than one will be right in it for the Minto Cup, when the schedule is finished. In fact, some of the officials of the lacrosse league have hinted that the teams are so well matched that it might be necessary to have a post season series of games of considerable length in order to decide as to the possession of the Minto Cup. With such an evenly matched league the matches ought to be more exciting than ever this year, as no one will know who has won till the whistle blows. Taking the teams individually each is morally certain that they are going to top the league.

The Shamrocks look stronger than last year, with Tierney in goal and O'Reilly back. The latter was sick last season, but he is all right now, and in tip top condition.

The Montreals will be as strong as, if not stronger, than they were last year. The three new men, Povey, McGuinniss and Kavanagh, certainly look good.

The Nationals, who showed up so well last year as soon as Johnnie Tucker took them in hand, are also much stronger than last year. Laviolette has been away from Montreal for the last three years, captaining the American Soo Hockey team, and has now returned. The Nationals will also have Hebert, an Ottawa College man. Their new club house will be inaugurated on June 1st, with their first league match. The Mayor, the Archbishop, and many prominent citizens will be invited, and there will be a fine spread. This year it is reported that the National club has more members than ever before, and the officials are feeling very gratified with the encouragement they have received.

Toronto will be much the same as last year, but Roach and Kerwin will replace Kalls and Lowe.

Tecumsehs will be about the same as last year, but will replace Pitcher by Graham.

Cornwall and Capitals do not anticipate any changes. With regard to the trip of the champions to England, there is much to be said on both sides. In past years there have always been a bunch of kickers in the ranks of the Capitals preventing the team from getting into shape as early as is desirable. Of course, the trip will have overcome this obstacle. Again, although it may be argued that the games over there have kept the men in excellent practice, yet it must be remembered that the Caps have been playing comparatively easy teams all the way along, and perhaps this has developed features in their style of play that are not altogether desirable. Again, it will be clear that there is sure to be some harm done to their condition if it be borne in mind that they have been living very "high" over in the Old Country. Dinners, receptions, theatre-parties, music halls, champagne suppers and so forth are not conducive to good lacrosse playing. But there is so much to be said on both sides that it is best to consider the Capitals an unknown quantity.

There will be several very interesting exhibition games played during the summer, the first of which takes place this afternoon between Toronto and the Nationals at the grounds of the last named club. On May 25 the Nationals play the return match in Toronto. On Victoria Day Toronto will play Montreal here, and on May 25, Montreal will play the return match in Toronto. On this date the Cornwall team will also play Nationals here. The season commences on Saturday, June 1, with Montreal at Cornwall, and Shamrock at National, and it ends on September 21, with Montreal at National. However, if signs are true, it is safe to gamble that the "saw-offs" will carry lacrosse far on into the Rugby season.

President Roosevelt Presented With Life Membership to Baseball Leagues.

Washington, May 18. — President Roosevelt was yesterday presented with a solid gold folding card conferred on him for life membership in the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, with the privilege of admission to all the games played by the clubs composing the association. The card is of the regulation baseball ticket size, the President's photograph engraved in enamelled gold, the date of presentation and the name of as many of the cities as there was room for. The committee making the presentation consisted of P. T. Powers, of New York; Eugene F. Bert, of San Francisco; J. H. Farrell, of Auburn, N.Y., and M. J. Regan, of Boston. Mr. Powers, as president of the association, introduced Mr. Farrell, the secretary, who made the presentation speech. In accepting the card the President expressed his warm thanks and said he regarded the game of baseball as the typical American outdoor sport; that he was particularly interested in it because men of middle age could participate in it, and that the game always had his good wishes as had every outdoor sport.

$15.00 Eatonia Leader Grapho-Phone!

Do you understand what most Talking Machines are saying? The "Eatonia" Leader Graphophone, worth easily $10.00 more than our price, is clear and distinct, and undoubtedly the best value ever offered in a talking machine in Canada. The Cabinet is solid quarter cut oak, 12 by 12 inches square by 6 inches high. The Motor has powerful spring and runs absolutely noiseless. The material used in its construction is the best and calculated to stand long wear. It may be wound up while a record is being played. The Horn, 24 inches long, with 14 inch brass bell, has aluminum support and sound box arm, very light and strong. The sound box is concert size fitted with new improved needle clamp, doing away with the old worrysome thumb screw. The Turn Table is 10 inches in diameter, and on it can be played any size record, from the smallest to the large 14 inch size used for dance music. Because a Talking Machine is large it does not necessarily follow that it is a good machine, but the "Eatonia" Leader combines both these qualities. To form a proper estimate of its size, take your tape or yard stick and check off the above measurements, then compare it with some machine that has cost its owner $25.00 or $30.00. We wish to convince you that this is the best value ever offered. You run no risk in buying one of these machines because we will refund the price paid and pay express charges if not satisfactory in every way.

COLLIE ALLEN DENIES CHARGES OF 'FAKING'

Ottawa, May 18.—Collie Allen made a statement regarding the charge that his fight with Wesley Nichol two years ago was a fake affair. Allen states positively that he and Nichol made no such agreement as is charged, and says both went into the ring to fight to win. Before they started, however, Chief Genest and other officers of the Hull force interfered and informed the promoters of the go that they would be arrested if the boxers did not live up to their advertisements, which called for a "boxing bout." Allen says that the Hull police and Nichol will bear him out in this. He also denies that the gloves used on that occasion were larger than the ordinary ones; they were five ounce gloves purchased on the day of the mill.

"The Larouche fight was the only one in which I have fought that there was a tinge of crookedness about," said Allen. "It was my first and it will be my last."

BURNS AND SQUIRES FIGHT POSTPONED

Special to the Montreal Star.

San Francisco, Cal., May 18.—The fight for the world's heavyweight championship between Tommy Burns and Australian Bill Squires, which was set for May the thirtieth for Colma, has been postponed until July fourth. This postponement will give Squires a greater opportunity to become thoroughly acclimated for the battle and will probably serve to increase the interest in the contest. Burns is still at Los Angeles, but has announced his intention of leaving there Saturday for 'Frisco, there to begin training for the coming struggle. He will post his forfeit of $5,000 on his arrival here. This will go as a side bet if the conditions of the fight are carried out entirely.

CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.

Orrine Treatment is to be Used at Home Without Publicity, or Loss of Time from Business.

Thousands of persons who really want to quit the use of whiskey or beer, realize that they cannot do so without medical help, yet they can not afford the time or perhaps the money to go to a sanitarium. Happily a new cure for drunkenness has been discovered which is to be taken at home and costs less than the average drinker will spend in a day.

In using Orrine there is absolutely no publicity, as the remedy is sold by the leading druggist in nearly every city and town, or it can be sent by mail. Sure relief is positive when Orrine is used. So uniformly successful is this treatment that in every box is a registered guarantee which entitles you to a refund of your money if Orrine fails to effect a cure.

Orrine is in two forms, No. 1, a secret remedy, absolutely tasteless and odorless which can be given in food or drink without the patient's knowledge; No. 2, in pill form for those who wish to be cured. The price either form is $1 a box. Send to the Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., for free booklet and consultation blank.

The desire for liquor is soon destroyed after Orrine treatment is commenced, and before long the patient is freed from the terrible drink craving, and the drink will not be missed.

YOUNG CORBETT RETIRES FROM RING

The Conqueror of Terry McGovern Says He Will Open a Cafe in New York.

New York, May 18.—Young Corbett has quit the fighting game for good and will open a cafe here and "settle down." Corbett announced the other day that he had tried his best to "get back," but since his defeat at the hands of "Kid" Sullivan he has become convinced that he is a "has been."

"I have many friends in New York," said Corbett, "and if I once get started I know that I can keep going. I'm too fat to fight any more and I'll never get any thinner. I've been sapping my strength by trying to train down, and I find it doesn't pay. The only thing I can say about myself is that I have always been on the level and have tried my best."

The very fact that Corbett has always been a "straight" fighter will be a great help to him if he goes into business here.

Australian Was Beaten.

The Washer that Works Itself— —and Pays for Itself

HAVE you running water in your house? Well—if you have enough pressure on it, I'll make it do all your washing without any work. Yes, and I'll make it turn the Wringer, too.

You can just throw the clothes into the tub, turn a tap, and our new Self-Working Washer will do the rest.

Now I know this sounds too easy and too good to be true. But it is true, every word of it.

I'll send you one of these Self-Working Washers, to your own house, on a month's free trial.

I'll pay the freight out of my own pocket and I won't ask you a cent on deposit, nor a note, nor Security in any form.

I'll just trust any one I believe trustworthy with this whole machine. I'll take all the risk and expense of the Test myself.

If you find our Self-working Washer won't wash clothes without your doing a thing to work it but turn a tap, then send it back to me at my expense.

If you find it won't do better washing than the Washboard, with far less Wear on the clothes, send it back to me at my expense.

If it won't do the Washing in less than half the time your Washerwoman could do it, without the machine, then send it back to me at my expense.

Half your Washerwoman's time costs you about 60 cents a week.

That is about $30 a year. Our Self-Working Washer will save you that $30 a year for the ten years it lasts, or $300 in all.

And I'll take my pay for it out of what it saves you, so that the Washer thus pays for itself.

Remember this: If you find it won't do all that I say, and save you half your Washing each week, all you've got to do is send it back to me, at my expense, before you pay a cent for it.

But, if you keep it after the month's free trial—you must pay me 60 cents a week out of what it saves you until the machine is paid for. Is that a fair offer?

Could I afford to send this Self-Working Washer on a full month's trial, at my own expense for freight, if there was any trick in this offer?

How could I make any money out of this kind of offer if the Washer wouldn't do all that I say it will?

Will you try our Self-Working Washer a month at my expense?

If you haven't got running water in your house, I'll tell you how this Washer can be worked without it.

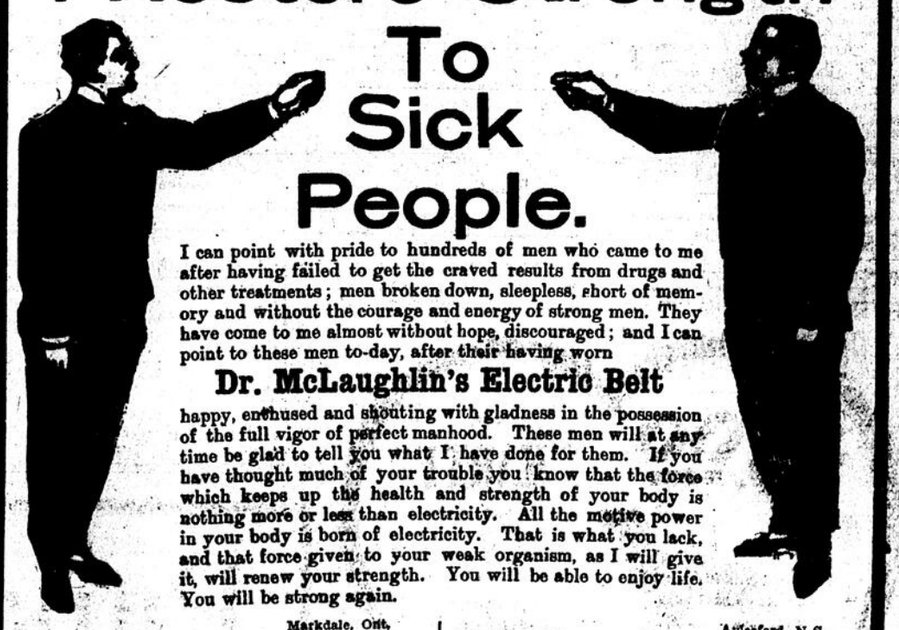
I Restore Strength To Sick People.



I can point with pride to hundreds of men who came to me after having failed to get the craved results from drugs and other treatments; men broken down, sleepless, short of memory and without the courage and energy of strong men. They have come to me almost without hope, discouraged; and I can point to these men to-day, after their having worn happy, enthused and shouting with gladness in the possession of the full vigor of perfect manhood. These men will at any time be glad to tell you what I have done for them. If you have thought much of your trouble you know that the force which keeps up the health and strength of your body is nothing more or less than electricity. All the motive power in your body is born of electricity. That is what you lack, and that force given to your weak organism, as I will give it, will renew your strength. You will be able to enjoy life. You will be strong again.

Markdale, Ont.

Dr. McLaughlin:

Dear Sir,—I wore your Belt steady for two months, for I had a lame back and pain in the muscles of the arm. After about a month, all pain ceased, and I have not been troubled since. I can say I had no lame back since I put the Belt on. A good many parties have written to me about the Belt, and I answered them the same as I do you. JOSEPH LITTLEJOHN.

Aylesford, N.S.

Dr. McLaughlin:

Dear Sir,—I am going to let you know how things are with me now. I do not know when I felt so well as I do now. I have not had an ache or a pain since I began to use your Belt. I sleep well, and when I awake in the morning, I am ready to spring out of bed. I feel so happy and well that I can hardly believe that I am the same person. Thanking you very much for your kindness and your Belt, I remain, C. H. MELVIN.

If you haven't confidence in electricity, let me treat you at my risk. I will give you the Belt on trial, without one cent of risk to yourself. Give me reasonable security, and I will take your case, and you can

WILL TAKE ANOTHER WEEK TO GET JURY

Public Prosecutor is Preparing Report on Publication of Orchard Interview.

Boise, Idaho, May 18.—With five peremptory challenges exhausted out of twenty, with thirty-two talesmen to be examined, eleven talesmen in the box waiting peremptory challenges and one still under examination for cause, the case against Wm. D. Haywood, charged with the murder of former Governor Frank Steunenberg opened to-day with small prospects of a jury being completed before the end of next week.

The session to-day will be shorter than other days of this week. The storm raised over the published interviews with Harry Orchard seems to have almost subsided. The public prosecutor to whom was entrusted the investigation into the liability of the newspapers responsible for the interview is expected to submit his report to the court at the afternoon session to-day.

Counsel on both sides are willing to admit that no possible cause for contempt proceedings against the newspapers is likely to be found. It is pointed out that in the first place an intent to prejudice jurors must be shown, and in the second place that the jurors examined at yesterday's session admitted they had not read the papers and that if they had done so, they were not influenced by the report of the interview. This will depend upon the scope of the evidence brought in by the prosecution.

It is probable that the defense will reserve the opening address to the jury until after all the evidence for the prosecution has been offered and the state has closed.

STEEL COMPANY SEVERELY CRITICIZED.

Mr. James R. Wilson, managing director of the Thomas Robertson Co., who has just returned from a trip to Great Britain, reports that business interests in that country are very satisfactory. "Trade conditions there are, however," he said, "largely influenced by those prevailing in the United States. While prices in iron and steel in the English markets are firm and well held, this is to a great extent due to the unusually prosperous conditions that prevail in the United States, where, notwithstanding unprecedented production of raw material, they are largely importing from Great Britain.

"The gigantic strides made by the Americans in the iron and steel trade have forced the manufacturers of other countries to acknowledge that that country is the domineering influence which now holds, and will continue to control, the key to the situation."

In reference to the Steel and Coal dispute, Mr. Wilson spoke very strongly in criticism of the Steel Company.

"I was informed, when in Scotland," he said, "that the Steel Company had engaged a new superintendent there, and, if so, I hope he may be able to teach them some things regarding the quality of coal, which in the past they evidently have been unable to discover.

"So far, the only result of my investigations amongst the coal fields in Great Britain has been to cause me to look with wonder and amazement at the action of the management of the Dominion Iron & Steel Company. Their treatment of the Coal Company would lead me to infer that they want and require the whole earth for their own purposes. You know I have always said, and I do so strongly feel now, that they can't, and never will get it. I have, however, hopes that the management of the Steel Company will one o fthese days realize on which side its 'bread is buttered.'"

Suit Over White Lead Poisoning.

The plaintiff in the action of Bolly vs. the Carter White Lead Co., a suit for $1,500 damages for lead poisoning, which is being tried in the Superior Court closed his case yesterday, and the examination of the witnesses for the defence was begun. The evidence yesterday showed there were two conditions in lead poisoning, the objective and the subjective. By the subjective, Prof. Rivet, of Laval University, one of the experts examined, explained was meant that the poison may remain in the system for a length of time and impair the man's general physical condition.

The case was then postponed until Monday, when it is expected that interesting evidence will be given with regard to the manufacture of white lead; the industry of the defendant being the only one of its kind in the province.

A London newspaper man who has been staying at Stratford-on-Avon says he asked the landlady one day: "Who is this Shakespeare of whom one hears so much down here? Was he a very great man?" To which she replied: "Lor', sir, 'e worn't thought nothing on a few years ago. It's the Americans as 'as made 'im what 'e is!"

THE METHODS OF PRONOUNCING LATIN

A Criticism of the So-Called Continental System.

DIVERSITY LONG EXISTED

In Days of Erasmus There Was Controversy on Latin Pronunciation Which Remains To-day.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—Considerable attention has of late been given by the Canadian press to the pronunciation of Latin. In the interesting letter of Mr. G. O. Smith in your issue of March 29, he refers to this matter as follows: "But in the year 1872 the professors of Latin in both universities (Oxford and Cambridge) suggested that the Continental method of pronunciation should be adopted in preference to the English. In more recent years (1895-1899) I have heard the former method used as often as the latter at Oxford. Probably by now the majority of teachers have adopted the Continental pronunciation. Lastly, on October 24 of this year, the Classical Association, at its annual meeting, held in Manchester (by 98 votes to 2) a resolution recommending the adoption by teachers of the United Kingdom the changes of Latin pronunciation (i.e., to the Continental method), approved by the Pronunciation Committee (of the Association) and by the Philological Society of Oxford and Cambridge."

I notice when this change of pronunciation is referred to in the press, the new method is almost invariably spoken of as the "Continental." A few weeks ago a Montreal newspaper, replying to a question of a correspondent, said that the Continental method is in use in McGill University. Now, it seems to me incredible that at this late date, when so much light has been thrown on the imperial pronunciation of Latin, any reputable seat of learning would adopt the so-called Continental system. As regards McGill, I think I am safe in saying the Continental system does not prevail there. As a matter of fact, there is no such system in existence on the Continent of Europe. I don't know of any two European countries that have exactly the same pronunciation of Latin. As illustrating this point I quote the following from the New York Independent: "It is the common belief that there are just two ways of pronouncing Latin—the Continental and the English; but the French, German and Italian pronunciations are quite diverse. This was amusingly evident at the meeting of the Vatican Council. For a year before the meeting a stenographic corps of young priests was drilled in the pronunciation of the different countries. When the Council met, no one bishop was able to understand all the other bishops. The French bishops were the despair of the Italian, and there were some Irish bishops that might have spoken Chinese for all that the Spanish and Italians could understand. The Italian pronunciation is by no means as our schools teach it. Thus cedo is tchavdo; excelsis is exchelsis; cognosco is conyosco; mihi is meekee; nihil is neekil; and oratio is orahtsio.

"There was no greater uniformity in the pronunciation of Latin on the Continent of Europe hundreds of years ago than there is to-day. This is proved by the caustic remark of the famous Erasmus when speaking of the attempt of the ambassadors of his time to converse in this language, 'One would have thought,' said he, 'that all Babel had come together.'" It is quite true that there is not much difference in the sound of the Latin vowels on the Continent, but there is a great diversity in the pronunciation of the consonants. On this head King, in his "Latin Pronunciation," says: "In German, before e, i and y, c equals ts; in French and Portuguese, s in sin; in Italian ch in chin; in Spanish th in thin. In German, before a, l and y, g equals g in gun, with some variations; in French and Portuguese, s in pleasure; in Italian, g in gin; in Spanish, g, guttural. In German and Italian, j is equal to y in yet; in French and Portuguese, s in pleasure; in Spanish, ch guttural. In German v equals f, elsewhere, English v."

When I was a young student we were taught that there were just two methods of Latin pronunciation—the English and the Scotch, or Continental. It seemed to be taken for granted that the Scotch system prevailed everywhere in Europe, except in England. The Scotch method, or that which is known in America as the Continental, pronounces the vowels approximately as in Europe, and the consonants as in England. I think I am safe in saying that this cannot be the system in use in McGill at the present time, and this brings me to the reasons for which this letter is written. I make bold to assert that the method recognized in McGill is the Roman—a system as different from the socalled Continental as the Continental is different from the English. It is simply surprising that a scholar should confound these systems; but it is constantly done by newspaper writers. Once, when in conversation with a Catholic student, who was ordained to the priesthood a few months subsequently, I asked him what pronunciation prevailed in his seminary. The Continental or the Roman? He replied immediately, 'the Roman,' and a few minutes afterwards pronounced facio, fasheo! In the Roman method we have to all intents and purposes the imperial pronunciation of Latin as it prevailed in Rome in the days of the emperors. "During the last thirty years there has been much careful and profound investigation into these sources of information, and very diligent comparison of the knowledge obtained. Corssen in Germany; Roby, Ellis, Munro and Palmer in England; Haldeman, Blair, Richardson, and others in this country, have wrought wonders in elucidating obscure points, and have, without doubt, succeeded in bringing to light the main features of the Augustan pronunciation. The ordinary sounds of most of the letters have been ascertained. The knowledge already obtained enables us to form a much better idea of the rythm and harmony of the grand old Latin, and is of great interest and value to archeologists and philologists." In view of the foregoing it seems difficult to understand the statement of your correspondent, Mr. Smith, when he says that the Classical Association, by a vote of 98 to 2, advised the teachers of Great Britain to adopt the Continental method. May I, without offence, suggest that it must have been the Roman system that was thus recommended?

The difficulty so long found in bonding together new and old concrete has been obviated by a recent patent. This bond consists of an extract of coal tar, used instead of water as the mixing agent for neat Portland cement. The mixture is laid one-eighth inch to one-quarter inch layers on the old concrete surface, and immediately followed by new concrete or mortar. The inventor says that the compound is entirely insoluble, and forms a complete and monolithic bond between the old and new work.

Father Seeks to Recover Son.

Arthur Vaillancourt yesterday applied to the Practice Court for a writ of habeas corpus with the object of recovering the custody of his five year old boy. Three years ago, after his mother's death, the boy was entrusted to the care of Oneslie Rioux. It was now alleged that Rioux refuses to give up the child to his father, who has remarried, on the ground that Vaillancourt still owes him for the child's board. The application was granted by Judge Fortin, and the child will have to be brought before the court next Monday.

CANADA WILL TAKE CHARGE.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., May 18.—Commander Spain, of the Marine Department, has left for Detroit to confer with the United States authorities in respect to the navigation of the Detroit River, at the Lime Kiln Crossing. The channel at this point is in Canadian waters, and was dredged by the United tates Government at considerable expense. Two vessels have been maintained by the United States Government to mark the crossing, so as to guide shipping. These vessels are at the west side—one to the north and the other to the south of the Channel. In addition there are large lights on Canadian territory, which are being maintained by the United States.

The Department of Marine received a telegram from the Lake Carriers Association, stating it was desirable to have a vessel moving too and fro to control the traffic at this point, as boats were passing day and night at the rate of one every ten minutes. The Channel was narrow, and the Government vessel would prevent the mixing up of traffic and causing delay. As the Department had under consideration new rules and regulations for the navigation of these Canadian waters, Commander Spain has gone to confer with a representative of the Lake Carriers' Association, as to putting them in force. The intention is to supply and man the necessary steamer, and to control and guide the traffic through the channel.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Amherst, N.S., May 18.—A serious accident occurred at the Intercolonial Railway yards here this morning when a special freight crashed into the engine house near the Robb Engineering Works. The building was badly damaged, both ends being smashed to splinters, and the sides forced from their foundation. The engine, tender and three flat cars are a complete wreck. Fortunately there was no loss of life, as both fireman and engineer jumped. A misplaced switch caused the accident.

The engine and timbers from the building caught fire but the prompt arrival of the firemen soon extinguished the flames. The wrecked engine is one of the largest on the line.

QUEBEC MAP NOT AUTHENTIC.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 18. — The members of the Royal Society of Canada, when in Ottawa this week, were much interested in a reported discovery in Paris, by M. Paul De Cazes, of Quebec, of a map of Quebec, in 1635, which purports to throw some new light upon the much debated subject of the real place of burial of Samuel De Champlain, the founder of Quebec.

This map seems of unusual interest, because the first authentic map of Quebec in the possession of the Dominion archives branch, is dated 1660.

The discovery of M. De Cazes was submitted to Dr. A. G. Doughty, Dominion archivist, to Mr. Benjamin Sulte, of Ottawa, and Mr. J. E. Roy, of Levis. They all declined to accept the map as authentic. Their chief objection was that it was unsigned and might easily have been drawn by some irresponsible person from authentic maps. As to the map throwing any fresh light on the place of burial of Champlain, the historians lay stress upon the fact that Champlain died on Christmas Day, 1635, and that it was not at all likely that any cartographer would have been in such a hurry as to prepare a map within the week which elapsed prior to the end of the year.

THE CARE OF CHILDREN IN ENGLAND CONTRASTED WITH THE METHODS IN VOGUE IN CANADA

Special Correspondence of the Montreal Star.

She is a good housekeeper, a devoted wife, and, although she probably doesn't know it, often a neglectful mother.

In every household it is not only correct to have a nursery with inmates, it is desirable. It is a fashionable duty expected of every wife, and the Englishwoman always does the expected. In every villa as well as in every palace an heir is regarded as a necessary part of the menage. In tenements they may be found by the half dozen.

While the average mother is glad to have children in the house, she is even more pleased to have a nurse or a nurse maid, to relieve her of their care—even an upper and under nurse, if space and purse allow the extravagance. Nurses are looked upon as near-mothers, and their generic name of course is "Nannie." The small girl who said the other day, "I think it is better to be a Nannie than a Mother, 'cause Nannies see babies most," is sufficient comment on the situation to make any other superfluous.

To tell the truth the nursery is a place many mothers avoid, preferring to meet their children in the drawing room clothed alike in their best garments and their best behaviour. It is unusual to find a girl who does not admit that she was unhappy in her childhood and looked upon "grown ups" as a different race to be approached with reverence and caution, perhaps with dissimulation; while nurses were immovable objects in the general scheme of things, from whose sway there was no appeal. Nowadays, it is said, things are not so bad.

A young mother, witty, clever, and extremely pretty, told me the other day that, "Of course I'm fond of my children, but I find them too much of a nuisance to have about much when they are under five." A stately white haired woman confided to me that she was still afraid of those things with which her nurse threatened her. "We were tucked away behind a baize door in my childhood days," she said, "and my mother had little knowledge of what went on in the nursery side of it. And many a time the nurse we had has dragged me by my hair along the corridor because I had displeased her." Another reminiscence from an equally surprising source was that of a young matron rather noted in her own family for the care she gives her children. Her testimony was that out of sheer tyranny her nurse had made her get out of bed when she was a tiny girl and stand in the cold for twenty minutes at a time in her bare feet. This same charming woman owes her life to the fact that her mother on one occasion came home early and asked for her. The child had been naughty and her nurse had locked her in a cupboard, afterwards mislaying the key. When the door was broken open the child was found unconscious from lack of air.

Another authentic story that came to my knowledge was that of a young mother who was recently terribly indignant at the result of an investigation into the tactics of her trusted nurse, but she did not seem to realize that in a great measure no one was to blame but herself. Going to the nursery one day she heard the nurse say in menacing tones, "Don't you dare tell your mother." Investigation proved that this so trustworthy nurse was in the habit of putting her little three year old charge inside the fender when he was naughty, and leaving him there, threatening to burn him up if he ever told.

Of course there are many good, reliable women employed as nurses, but it seems curious that every person I have questioned on the matter has at some time been the victim of a more or less cruel attendant, and a young, inexperienced mother must have difficulty in satisfying herself that she has chosen the right sort. It is considered rather infra dig. for the upper middle class mother to take her children out for an airing, and I know of one country community which was quite roused over the fact that a young mother of unimpeachable social standing took her own children out walking every morning. She was adversely criticised on the grounds that she must be a bad manager if the nurse had not time to take her charges out. Fortunately the spirit of criticism is dying away, and her example is being emulated, while people are beginning to realize that a woman may take her children out because she likes their company, instead of from necessity.

The other day I was talking with a man whose name is known throughout England, and the Education Bill came up for discussion, and of course the conversation naturally drifted to Canadian methods of "teaching the young idea." "But," he asked, "where do your children get their religious training if not in the day or boarding schools?" And I replied, rightly or wrongly, but according to my own conviction, that Canadian mothers made companions of their children from inclination as well as because nurses were scarce; that Canadian mothers would resent having the religious teaching of their children taken out of their hands; and finally, that in Canada, Sunday schools were not looked upon as they seem to be in England, as a sort of kindergarten to the Hereafter maintained for the poor, but instead as a place where children of all classes are sent.

AN AMERICAN VIEW OF CANAL SCHEME

Proposed Georgian Bay Waterway Contrasted With New York State Gutter.

Special to The Montreal Star.

New York, N.Y., May 18.—The Sun says: "The work of Georgian Bay Canal Commission is now nearing completion. The proposals of the Commission are for a more elaborate and more extensive enterprise than was originally projected. The present scheme is of even greater concern to American transportation interests than was the earlier plan. Its relation to the New York State $101,000,000 barge canal enterprise assumes new importance. The economic advantage of the route between the Great Lakes and Europe is evident. It can be appreciated by a glance at the map. The actual transportation distance from Sault Ste. Marie to New York by way of Lake Huron, the St. Clair River, Lake Erie and the $101,000,000 New York State barge canal is about twice as great as that from the Soo to Montreal via the projected Georgian Bay route. Such a canal would practically make ocean ports of Fort William, Duluth and even Chicago. That is, cargoes could be shipped from those points to Europe without breaking bulk. Freight carriers of considerable capacity could be loaded with wheat or iron or beef or other commodities in lake ports and unloaded at European ports. It is estimated that the cost of transporting wheat to tide water would be reduced by at least three and half cents per bushel. If Canada carries out this plan as she is likely to do at no distant date, it will open direct and serious competition with the Erie barge canal route." Between this $105,000,000 route and its twenty-one feet of navigable depth and the $101,000,000 gutter across New York State the odds, as a business enterprise, are emphatically in favor of the Georgian Bay canal."

KUROKI LION OF HOUR.

New York, May 18.—The entertainment of the Japanese army and navy officers now in New York, reached its climax last night, in a banquet given in the Hotel Astor, by prominent citizens of the city. The official guests of honor were Viscount Aoki, Japanese Ambassador to the United States; General Baron Kuroki of the Mikado's army; Vice-Admiral Ijuin, of His Majesty's navy; the members of General Kuroki's party, and the officers of the Japanese cruisers Tsukuba and Chitose. Admiral Dewey, presided.

Yesterday was a day of rest for the visitors. During the morning General Kuroki received formal calls from Admiral Dewey and Major-General Frederick D. Grant. There was no formal programme for the day, and General Kuroki, soon after noon, went to the Nippon Club, where he was the guest during the afternoon of his country.

On Monday or Tuesday it is expected the party will go to New Haven to visit Yale University, where there are at present a number of Japanese students, and from which a number of men now prominent in affairs in Japan were graduated. The party will return to New York from New Haven, and a day or two later will leave for Boston. After a visit in that city the party will go to Niagara Falls, Chicago, Rock Island, where the Government arsenal will be visited, Milwaukee, St. Louis, St. Paul, Kansas City, Fort Leavenworth, Salt Lake City and San Francisco. They will sail from Seattle for Japan June 11.

SKILLED ARTISANS WANTED.

Manufacturers Request Government to Encourage Immigration of Workmen.

Toronto, May 18.—The Canadian Manufacturers Association will request the Dominion Government, through a resolution passed at the regular meeting of the executive council of the association to encourage the immigration to Canada of skilled artisans, for whom the association claims there is a great demand. The Government is asked to increase the number who come over through its present immigration officers, and by the appointment of special representatives for this purpose. The growth of the country and the expansion in industrial enterprise, create a demand for many more skilled men, and the association believe that as employers are prevented by the Alien Labor Act from bringing workmen from the United States, the Canadian Government should make an effort to meet the requirements.

SENSATIONAL SCENE IN COURT ROOM

Special to The Montreal Star.

Halifax, N.S., May 18.—Severe punishment was meted out in the Police Court yesterday, to two men who, in April, waylaid and murderously assaulted G. Verdi, an aged merchant, as the latter was going home from his place of business. Verdi was struck down with a bottle enclosed in a stocking, and after being robbed of forty dollars, was left unconscious on the street. Ira Carter and Thomas Walters pleaded guilty to the assault. They were sentenced to ten years each in the penitentiary and to receive ten lashes. Wheeling round on his fellow-prisoner, Carter exclaimed: "You're to blame for all," and struck him in the face, knocking him down.

CANADIAN GIRLS IN LIST.

Special to The Montreal Star.

New York, May 18.—Miss Alice Burbridge, daughter of Mr. Justice Burbridge, Ottawa; Miss Edith Campbell, daughter of the late Mr. Alex. Campbell, Montreal; Miss Marguerite Carr-Harris, daughter of Professor Carr-Harris; Miss Edith Tilley Hegan, of New Brunswick; Miss Emma De Veber Clarke, of Kingston, and Miss Olive Holwell Kirkby, another Ontario girl, were all members of the graduating class of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, at the thirteenth graduation of nurses, which took place last night in the Florence Nightingale Hall of the hospital.

Bishop Courtney, a former Canadian, and now rector of St. James Church, New York, opened the exercises with prayer. The address was given by Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, of Columbia University. Mr. John S. Kennedy, president of the Board of Managers, presented the diplomas, and Mr. Frederick Sturges, chairman of the School of Nursing Committee, presented the badges.

Canadian present were Mrs. George Burn and Miss Burn, of Ottawa; Mrs. Scarth and Miss Scarth, Mrs. and Miss Lindsay, Mrs. Longley, Mr. James Longley, Miss Eva Harrison, Dr. F. Carr-Harris and Miss Savage.

HON. MR. LEMIEUX DENIES.

Postmaster-General Issues Statement on New Postal Treaty.

Special to the Montreal. Star.

Ottawa, Ont., May 18.— Hon. Mr. Lemieux, Postmaster-General, denies having ever stated, as has been alleged, that the United States Post Office Department refused to grant a delay of six months for the coming into effect of the new postal convention. The Postmaster-General of the United States, he says, in view of the great advantage which the United States has been reaping ever since the inception of the convention, was naturally in favor of continuing this. It was because of this one-sidedness, however, that Canada abrogated the treaty, and the same reasons that led her to abrogate the treaty, also led her to wish the amendment to go into immediate effect.

Replying to the contention that a postponement should have been made to January, Mr. Lemieux points out that this would be as unjust to those whose subscription ended in the other months of the year, as the present arrangement is to those whose subscriptions end in January.

The women mussel gatherers of France wear trousers and high boots, which look grotesque worn with a tight-fitting waist, and a sailcloth apron, which is doubled up to keep it out of the water. They carry also woollen sandals of a wide and curious pattern which are intended to give them a firmer footing on shifting sands.

MR. GEO. GILLESPIE DIED LAST NIGHT

Death Removes Prominent Merchant Whose Life Had Been Devoted to Good Works.

Mr. George Gillespie, of the firm of Gillespie and Company, died at the Royal Victoria Hospital last night, at a few minutes past seven o'clock. Mr. Gillespie had been in bad health for about three months, and three weeks ago he went to the hospital, but it was seen at that time that there was little ground for hope.

The deceased gentleman was in his fifty-seventh year. He was a well-known and prosperous merchant, but his life was of such a simple character, that he seldom came into public notice except in works of charity. He was for years at the head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and his work in this connection will make his memory very dear to those who will not tolerate cruelty to dumb beasts. He was also a leading spirit in the Charity Organization Society, and he never tired of well-doing in this respect. He was a governor of the Montreal General Hospital.

Mr. Gillespie was never married. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

American Charged With Cruelty to Peons in His Employ.

Vera Cruz, May 18.— Charged with subjecting peons in his employ to such cruelties that some of them died from the effects, H. Miller, a millionaire American, has been arrested in the town of Acayucan, and is being held in jail pending an investigation.

Miller is general manager of the Miller Plantation Company and the San Juan Sugar Company, in both of which concerns he is heavily interested. He threatens to make an international question of the matter, and prosecute the authorities responsible for his arrest.

A MUNICIPAL TRADING TALK BY MAJOR DARWIN.

The speaker at the luncheon of the Canadian Club, yesterday, was no other than a son of Charles Darwin, the famous author of the "Origin of the Species," and the father of Evolution. But Major Leonard Darwin has other and more personal claims to distinction than merely that of being his father's son; and he gave ample evidence of having inherited a considerable measure of the scientific ability of his parent by his able exposition of the difficult subject of "Municipal Trading." The special point of this question more particularly considered was the financial result. Did municipal trading pay? Major Darwin confessed that the result in England, after making all allowances showed that there was a slight loss from the system. This loss, however, was, in the opinion of the speaker, more than compensated for by the advantages of municipalization.

Labrecque's Body Was Recovered.

The body of Napoleon Labrecque, who, two months ago, fell into the river, from a bridge under construction near Ste. Anne de Bellevue, was yesterday found floating near where the accident occurred. The discovery was made by Armand Lefebvre and Thomas Bonard, two boys living at Ste. Anne, and the authorities when notified had the remains conveyed to the morgue, where identification was established by the victim's brother-in-law. Labrecque was 34 years old. He had formerly resided in Sherbrooke, Qu., where his wife and family are still living. At the time of the accident the victim was in the employ of the Dominion Bridge Company, working at the construction of the bridge near Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

Schwab's Experience in 'Frisco.

Mr. Charles M. Schwab has been telling the San Francisco labor organizations that they are fast killing off the geese that have been laying golden eggs for them. He did not express it in that metaphorical guise. He put it plainer, declaring that the Union Iron Works, which belongs to his steel company, will never build another ship in San Francisco so long as labor conditions remain as they are now. "I have never seen anything like it anywhere," said Mr. Schwab, and went on to explain that he had acquired along with the Union Iron Works a contract to build three battleships for the United States government, and had built them at a loss of $2,500,000, which was more money, he said, than his company had been able to make in all its other works in other parts of the country. He wants no more such contracts. Unless labor conditions change, he said, all manufacturing must stop in San Francisco, since no man would dare bid on future contracts with the labor organizations constantly raising wages and reducing the hours of labor.

A large part of the real-olive oil consumed in New York comes to the city by way of New England. The olive oil men of California have formed themselves into an association, the members of which produce the greater part of the 250,000 gallons of oil now the output of this country yearly. For the eastern trade they have established a big bottling plant in New England, to which the oil is shipped in bulk in tanks such as are used for shipping petroleum.

MILITARY TOURNAMENT AT ARENA WAS GREAT SPECTACULAR SUCCESS

The spectacle of a military tournament and tattoo has been an event so foreign in the recent military history of Montreal that some of the older residents were forcibly reminded last evening of days of yore when the red-coated regular was a familiar figure on the streets of old Montreal.

'Mid the blare of trumpets, the beat of drums, and the opening "Marche Militaire," 'the myriad of electric light bulbs studding the length and breadth of the Arena flashed into a blaze of light, throwing into relief on a background of "red, white and blue" the gaily gowned and uniformed throng.

In the crowded boxes, the gay gowns and hats of the fair occupants were in sharp contrast to the brilliant uniforms of their escorts.

With the exception of the North End, the seating capacity of the building was practically all taken up by an interested, if not uproariously enthusiastic, assemblage of spectators. In the matter of applause, the latter were perhaps a trifle chary, in view of the fact that the occasion called for anything but anti-Imperialistic sentiments.

Decidedly the most attractive events on the programme were the gymnastic exercises and gun drill of the Kingston Cadets, and the musical ride and lance drill of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. There was something particularly fascinating in the lithe activity and neat precision of movement noticeable in every phase of the acrobatic feats and turns of the former.

A few feminine shrieks and some slight commotion were occasioned by the gun drill, but nothing more serious resulted from the rattle of the artillery than a moist, smoky condition of atmosphere,—somewhat resembling the London fog—which remained in evidence the rest of the evening.

Now and again through the performance the reflection would come over one that it was rather a pity nature had not endowed the acting field officer with a more enduring lung power, which one quite forgot, however, when listening to the more strenuous tones of Col. Buchan.

No great stretch of imagination was required to fancy oneself in the very heart and centre of "war and war's alarms," when the troopers of the R. C. Dragoons rode in on the tan-bark, through the retiring ranks of the infantry, to the inspiring strains of "The Red, White and Blue."

Vice-royalty graced the event in the person of Sir L. A. Jette, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, whose entrance was greeted by the playing of the National Anthem by the massed bands. Owing to his presence, there was some wonder among the spectators that the Royal colors were not "trooped" in place of the colors of the regiment. The explanation lay in the circumstance that the troops had not been notified that His Honor would represent Royalty and in the absence of such notification the usual ceremonial was carried out.

Among other distinguished visitors were Major Shephard, C.M.G., who, with Sir Louis, occupied the Royal box; Sir Henry and Lady Pellatt, of Toronto; and Lieut.-Col. and Madame Pelletier, who occupied Col. Buchan's box.

WANT TO IDENTIFY VICTOR OLIVIER

Senator David's Suit Against La Patrie Now Being Heard in Court.

Hearing of the case of Hon. L. O. David, against La Patrie Publishing Company was begun in the Superior Court yesterday, Senator David claiming $10,000 as indemnity for a series of articles published in May of last year, in which his competency as a member of the Senate, and as City Clerk was questioned.

Later in the same month a correspondent signing himself Victor Olivier undertook in La Presse to defend Senator David. To this La Patrie replied that Victor Olivier was none other than the Senator himself.

Senator David, who had publicly declared that he did not know the identity of Victor Olivier until he found it out through the management of La Presse, was in the witness box all day yesterday. Nothing that had ever been said about him, he alleged, had hurt him more than the articles in La Patrie.

"The newspaper has trampled under foot my fondest aspirations and wounded my feelings as no one has done," he went on. "There is evidently malice on their part, for I cannot concieve how it is possible to write like that without malicious intentions. I say this because, after formally denying that I was the author of the articles signed 'Victor Olivier,' La Patrie nevertheless kept up its campaign against me, and I see no other way of explaining such a persistency on their part."

The Senator expressed the opinion that La Patrie was seeking to create public opinion against him, so as to either cause the City Council to reduce his salary or to compel him to choose between the position of city clerk and senator. He could not understand what could have been the motive of La Patrie in attacking him, aside from the interest of winning the favor of the labor classes.

Mr. L. T. Marechal, representing La Patrie, endeavored to find out the identity of Victor Olivier early in the cross-examination, but Judge Bureau ruled that the question was irrelevant.

A Unique Criminal Case.

The Irish Lords Justices have commuted to penal servitude for life the sentence of death passed upon Thomas R. Mason, a prisoner in Armagh jail, for the murder of a carman named Morris. The case was unique. Mason had induced Morris to accompany him to a wood, where an acquaintance had hidden a quantity of dynamite, as he said, to prevent its being seized by the police. On arriving at the spot, Mason got behind his companion, who, as he afterwards declared, immediately heard three explosions, which injured him very seriously about the head. He remembered nothing more until next morning, when he was found blind and unconscious on the roadside. Mason, when arrested, at first denied that he knew anything of the occurrence, but subsequently he said that on the way to the wood he and Morris had been joined by a third man, who was evidently a confederate of Morris, who had planned to kill him (Mason) because he stood between him and Morris' wife. Morris, who died subsequently, said to the hour of his death that he had been the victim of a dynamite explosion, but on a post mortem examination being made, revolver bullets were found in his head.

Meat Inspection in America.

Prof. Harvey Littlejohn, of the chair of forensic medicine in Edinburgh University, lectured recently to the members of the Edinburgh Sanitary Society on a visit paid to the Chicago stockyards. Prof. Littlejohn traced the growth and development of the great American industry in Chicago and other American cities, and as an indication of the magnitude of the Chicago trade mentioned that the daily arrivals were over 40,000 animals. He arrived in Chicago almost believing many of the horrible accounts which had been printed in the newspapers of America and Great Britain; but he found the heads of departments highly educated and refined, while the ordinary employes in physique, intelligence, cleanliness and general appearance of health compared most favorably with the best of those he had seen in his own country. It was true he only saw over the premises of two large firms, but he thought they might be taken as representative, though there were doubtless some black sheep in the trade. He would infinitely prefer to partake of meat prepared as he saw it prepared than that dressed in the great majority of private killing houses, either in his own country or in Germany, as well as in not a few of the public abattoirs which were under municipal control. Having described the system of inspection in America, the lecturer asked if in this country they had any reason to assume a superior attitude on this question. Meat inspection in this country was by no means perfect. He knew a town here of some hundreds of thousands of inhabitants in which there were 120 slaughter houses and one or, at most, two meat inspectors. It was not difficult to imagine what might take place under such circumstances. It was surprising to him that such an outcry should have been raised in regard to American tinned meats, when out of millions of cans consumed every year they could almost count the cases of ptomaine poisoning attributed to them on their fingers.

The Scotsman's Destiny.

The spread and domination of the Scot continues in an increasing degree, for Scotland remains and must remain under present conditions a breeding-place of generations of men and women for all of whom there is no room at home. They must go forth into England and the world, for the most part to prevail, and where they fail to fail lamentably, for a bad Scotsman is usually a terrible blackguard.—Academy.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF A VALUABLE DOG.

DRUMCLAMPH FAIRPLAY.

(From a photograph taken specially for the Montreal Star, at Mr. Finlay's kennels, just previous to the Dog Show.)

One of the finest Irish terriers being exhibited this year at the Dog Show, died suddenly last Wednesday night at about 8.30. He had just won the Irish terrier open class, and had been taken back to his bench after the judging. His owner Mr. Finlay, was soon summoned by one of the men, who told him that his dog was acting very queerly; and ten minutes later the dog was dead.

This dog—Drumclamph Fairplay—was eighteen months old. It was a championship dog, and had never been exhibited without coming first. He won the championship at Toronto last September and again this spring. He also won at Boston, defeating the only dog that licked him in New York. He certainly had a great future before him if he had lived.

President W. C. Finley feels very badly over his loss, and as the suddenness o. the death looks very suspicious—for the dog had not shown any signs of illness previously, nor was he excitable—he has decided to have a post-mortem examination by Dr. Milton Hersey, to see if it was poisoned or not.

Lord Roberts' Ideal.

I look forward to the time when the Empire shall be bound together not only by ties of blood and kinship, but by that splendid bond of a brotherhood in arms, all ready to stand shoulder to shoulder in defence of the Empire for which our fathers have brought so many sacrifices, and which cannot be maintained unless we their descendants are prepared to do our share.—Lord Roberts, in the Call, Sydney.

The Better Bedroom

Bird's-Eye Maple, Mahogany or Oak?

In every home there is always a Better Bedroom. The greatest care is usually exercised in the choice of furniture for it and the best the market offers is what the demand calls for. There is an increased request for the pretty Bird's-eye-Maple this season and excellent results have been accomplished with its use. The Mahogany has been and always will be popular, where a brass bed is used the contrast between the rich red tone of the Mahogany and the bright brass is very pleasing and decidedly artistic. The quartered oak has its hosts of admirers who claim for it not only a distinct attractiveness, but the greatest durability. Its best effect is with a white enamel bed and brass trimmings. Our immense variety offers you the widest possible range. The article here quoted represents the highest degree of workmanship and worth.
