Creates New Traffic

LAST October a count was taken of the number of horse-drawn commercial vehicles using the Toronto-Hamilton highway (at the eastern end). It was found that in one month there was more such traffic than in the whole year of 1914. Since the concrete road was built, the highway is carrying a large amount of the traffic that formerly used parallel routes.

This is a striking illustration of an important fact, namely that "good roads concentrate traffic on a few of them." This makes it easier for a community to build a connected sytem of

Permanent Highways of Concrete

It is estimated that 17% of Canada's highways carry 80% of all Canada's traffic. A relatively small mileage will serve—and that mileage should be built of the most durable material—CONCRETE.

BERLIN ADMITS SLAVS HAVE BROKEN LINE

BEMOANS DEFECTS, ASKS PUNISHMENT, MADE GRAND DUKE

President Li Yuan Hung Looses His Job, But Gets Compensation

BOY EMPEROR IS AGAIN ON THRONE

General Chang Hsun, Master of Situation, Leads Boy to Imperial Palace

By Associated Press.

PEKING, Sunday, July 1 (Delayed.)—According to an edict issued in the name of Hsuan-Tung, the young Emperor who was put back on the throne today under the protection of General Chang-Hsun, President Li Yuan Hung has submitted to the monarchy.

The edict follows:

"Li Yuan Hung memorializes us to take over the Government, stating that he was forced by the troops during the first revolution to become the nation's head. He bemoans his defects as head of the republic and asks us to punish him. We recognize his mistakes and also his merits. We hereby appoint him a duke of the first class."

Early today Hsan Tung, the boy Emperor, was taken into the Imperial Palace under the protection of General Chang-Hsun and placed on the throne.

The Legation quarter of the city is under a heavy guard and the troops of General Chang-Hsun are intermingling freely with the Peking soldiers. General Chang-Hsun is maintaining the strictest order and no trouble in Peking is feared. It is expected that President Li Yuan will resign tomorrow.

The Imperial emblem is everywhere displayed, marking the restorntion of the Manchu monarchy.

There has been no disorder. In a long edict Emperor Hsuan Tung, who was restored to the throne today, explains how, being youthful, he was forced to relinquish sovereign power to Yuan Shih Ki, late President of the Chinese Republic.

The country being threatened with disintegration and party strife and the people appealing to him to take over its administration to save the people from suffering, the young Emperor says he was compelled to take action.

China's future government will be based on the following:

FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

The country shall be administered according to the constitutional laws promulgated by the late Emperors.

"Expenses of the Imperial Household shall remain the same as those fixed by the Republic.

"Blood princes shall not be allowed to interfere in politics.

"There shall be no differences between Manchu and Chinese. Marriage between them is allowed.

"All foreign treaties and contracts shall remain in force.

"The stamp tax and other petty taxes are abolished.

"The republican criminal code is abolished and that introduced in the first year under Hsaun-Tung's Government is re-instated.

"Political offenders are pardoned.

"The wearing of queues is optional."

A hundred Japanese have arrived to strengthen the Legation guard. There is no news yet of President Li Yuan Hung's expected resignation.

NAMED NEW CABINET.

By Canadian Press.

TIEN TSIN, July 3. — Reports reachng here from Pekin say that the Emperor has issued an edict appointing Gen. Chang Hsun, Premier and Viceroy of the Province of Chi Li, and that he has named members of the new Cabinet, including Kang Yu Wei, president of the progressive party to which millions of Chinamen belong, and Hsu Shih Chang, former Secretary of State of China, who will head the Ministry.

Gen. Chang Hsun sent four delegates to President Li Yuan Hung to demand his resignation, but the President paid no attention to them. The Manchus have offered him a Grand Dukedom.

It is reported that Gen. Chang-Hsun has forbidden the appearance of newspapers for three days. Liang Chi, the famous reformer, declares Gen. Chang Ssun's coup suicidal and says it cannot succeed.

CABINET MINISTERS.

By Canadian Press.

PEKING, July 3.—Further edicts have been issued making the following appointments: Grand Secretary (equivalent to Premier) General Chang-Hsun; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Liang Tun-Yen; Minister of Finance, Chang Chen-Fang; Minister of War, Lei Chen-Chun; Minister of Interior, Chu Chia-Pao; Chief of the General Staff, Wang Shih-Scheng; Guardians of the Emperor, Hsu Shih-Chang and Qung Yu-Wei. General Chang-Hsun is appointed Viceroy of Chihli, but must remain in Peking. Feng Kuo-Chang is named Viceroy of Kiang-Si, and Kiang-Su, and commander of the Southern armies. Lu Yung-Ting is named Viceroy of Kwang-Tung. For all the other provinces military and civil governors similar to those of the Manchu regime are appointed. The edict is dated in the ninth year of Hsuan-Tung.

FUSION CABINET NOW LIKELY OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

GENERAL ELECTION WOULD COME QUICK

Conscription Bill is Off Order Paper Owing to Novel Circumstances

OTTAWA, July 3.— It is understood that plans are well advanced for the contemplated reorganization of the Dominion Cabinet along the lines of Union Government. Sir Robert Borden has been dealing with the matter and there is reason to believe that a number of Liberals are prepared to accept portfolios to aid in passing Conscription and whatever other measures conduce to the winning of the war.

The New Cabinet reorganisation will in all probability include a direct representation of labor and of western grain growers.

The situation seems to be that the Premier knows those he can get. It is for him to decide whom he wants and when their services should be availed of. Whether they will be from the Liberals in the House admits of some doubt. Some of these are likely to be included, but if tentative plans be given effect to, the most of the new blood will be secured from outside parliament.

It is improbable that there will be any conclusive action until after the division on the second reading of the Compulsory Service Bill. After that, developments are looked for. The decision rests in the hands of the Premier, who has not yet indicated upon whom he may call, or just at what stage it will be done.

Any new member of the Cabinet, drawn from the ranks of the Liberal party, will, of course, be representative of that large element of the party which favors conscription and will subscribe to a policy of prosecuting Canadian participation in the war without reference to politics or political considerations.

Any change in the Ministry will exercise some effect on the general situation. When Coalition with the Liberals in an official sense was planned, one of the features of the proposition was an appeal to the country prior to the enforcement of conscription. It seems very probable that if a union or fusion is now effected, the same course may be followed, and the people consulted with reference to it.

Should this be done, then the session would be appreciably shortened. In any event, something is under way and likely to come to a head almost any time.

BILL OFF ORDER PAPER.

The House of Commons resumes this afternoon after the respite of Dominion Day to find the Conscription Bill off the order paper. Last Friday night attention was called to the fact by Mr. Boulay, of Rimouski, that there was no quorum. Automatically the House adjourned. It is not an unusual thing for business to be proceeded with, even though a quorum is not in the Chamber. Friday, however, was the first time in a score of years when attention was officially called to the absence of a quorum and when, as a result the House had to rise. There were enough members about, but they were not in the Chamber. The great bulk of both sides had left to spend the week-end at home.

Under the rules, when the proceedings end in this way, the Bill under consideration drops from the order paper. The Conscription Bill, however, is not seriously prejudiced or affected by this occurrence. It will simply be necessary today to move to restore it to the order paper. Notice does not seem necessary, though possibly opponents of the Bill, looking for an opening to delay it, may raise a question on that point.

The occurrence is likely to have a salutary effect upon members who are accustomed to being in the lobbies or caucus rooms rather than in the Chamber.

From present plans, the division on the second reading of the Bill will take place on Thursday. Then will come the committee stage in which any member can speak to his heart's content so long as his remarks are confined to the clause immediately under consideration.

There is a possibility that Nationalists members today may call for notice before the Conscription Bill is restored to the order papers. The question also arises as to whether those who have already spoken may not be able to do so again.

The Bill will be put through all right, but that its enforcement may be preceded by a general election is quite conceivable, more especially if Union Government is arranged. On the other hand, if the large element of the Liberals who will vote for conscription also favor an extension of the term of Parliament, extension may possibly be effected without reference to those who oppose both it and the Compulsory Service Bill.

The more predominant view favors the idea of an appeal to the country, sometime before the autumn.

U.S. TO TAX WAR WEALTH, INCOMES, DRINK AND SMOKES

New Revenue Bill Will Raise $1,670,000,000—Claimed to Hit Wealthy Most — Tea, Coffee, Cocoa, Etc., However are Heavily Taxed

Special to The Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—War wealth, incomes, drinks and "smokes" will pay the bulk of the first great war tax. Of the $1,670,000,000 to be raised under the revenue bills framed by the Senate Finance Committee and reported today, $1,277,800,000 will be derived as follows:

From income taxes (incomes as low as $1,000 for single persons and $2,000 for married are hit), $532,700,000; from excess profits, $523,000,000; from distilled and rectified spirits, $111,000,000; from fermented liquors and wines, $44,500,000; from soft drinks, $10,000,000; and from tobacco and wines, $44,500,000; from soft drinks, $10,000,000; and from tobacco products, excepting the poor man's stogie, $56,600,000.

This schedule of taxes represents, authors of the Bill insist, a heavier burden on the rich and a lesser weight upon the poor than the committee originally contemplated.

However, some Senators insist that the rich and the big incomes are tapped too lightly and the purse of the poor-man and the man of average means is tapped too heavily in proportion. These Senators hold this belief on the promise that so long as the poor and the man of average means are in the great majority, when it comes to fighting, the very wealthy should be more heavily responsible for the financial part of the war.

Senator Lafollette, Wisconsin, has a minority report, signed by Senator Thomas, Colorado, and Senator Gore, Oklahoma, which would raise the entire $1,800,000,000 asked by the Administration by hitting excess profits to the extent of more than $1,000,000,000, swollen incomes more than $500,000,000 and the balance derived from internal revenue taxes.

ALL CLASSES AFFECTED.

Every class of people, however, will be affected under the tax bill reported by the majority—from the man who will have to pay a one per cent tax owning an automobile to those who will have to pay five cents on every telephone or telegraph message costing more than 15 cents, five per cent on amounts paid for Pullman seats costing more than 35 cents, and everybody will have to pay one cent more to mail a letter. It will cost more to buy sporting goods, more to own yachts; the girls will suffer from a tax on cosmetics and perfumes; patent medicines will cost more; and cameras too.

But the tax which will hit the average household will be that on tea, coffee, cocoa and sugar. Some of these levies are: Coffee, two cents per pound; tea, five cents per pound; crude cocoa, three cents per pound; sugar, half cent per pound; saccharine, $2.70 per pound; glucose, quarter cent a pound; grape sugar, molasses, and cane syrup from 1 to 2 cents per gallon.

The average man and his wife may seek respite from the woes of high prices at home by going to the theatre, but even there extra taxes, amounting to one cent for each ten cents worth of tickets, pursue them, except in the cases of movies where there is no levy except on shows costing over 25 cents.

HIGH COST OF DRINKING.

The already high cost of drinking will mount still higher owing to the complete lack of sympathy shown by the committee for the "essence of tra-la-la." In addition to taxes already imposed on these beverages the committee decided to put a prohibitive tax on spirits distillation and prevent their import from other countries, to say nothing of minor taxes on "red liquor" now on hand.

Beer is hit $1.25 per thirty-one gallon barrel, in addition to its present tax, and still wines are taxed double their present figure. Sweet wines must pay an additional tax of $1.10 per proof gallon on the grape brandy or wine spirits used in fortifying them.

Syrups and extracts used in soft drinks and sodas will be taxed on a scale ranging from three cents a gallon for those selling at no more than $1 a gallon, to twelve cents a gallon for those selling above $4 a gallon. A tax of one cent a gallon is imposed on all unfermented grape juice, ginger ale, pip and kindred thirst quenchers.

It will cost one cent for each 25 cents or less paid to ship packages by express or parcel post.

Second class postal rates are increased one quarter cent a pound and net incomes of all newspapers are taxed five per cent when exceeding $4,000.

GREAT BRITAIN MAY CREATE A MONOPOLY OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Special Star Cable.

LONDON, July 3.—The Government clearly showed its hand yesterday and indicated a disposition to establish a Government monopoly of liquor traffic and manufacture by appointing Commissions to investigate and report on the subject.

The instructions to the Commissions, one each for Ireland, Scotland, England and Wales, say:

"The Government being of the opinion that it may be necessary shortly, as an urgent war measure, to assume control of the supply and manufacture of intoxicating liquors during the war and demobilization after the war, and as such control involves the purchase after the war of the interests involved, you are hereby appointed a Commission to inquire and report on the terms upon which the interests should be acquired and the financial arrangements which should be made."

The announcement of such a program is especially disappointing to the liquor interests, which until the last hoped the Government might be satisfied to assume control during the war and then restore old conditions.

Instead, the Government commits itself to immediate control and purchase after the war, which, if carried out, would end the hope of re-establishing the liquor industry as an independent affair.

Mr. Bonar Law's concession in halving the proposed increased tax on tobacco, announced by him yesterday, is the result of strong representations made by the trade against such a heavy increase, which meant an addition of two pence per ounce to the retail price.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer also announced concessions of a similar nature in the tax on entertainment tickets, the proposed increase on which had caused heartburnings in the theatre and concert world.

WAR NEWS OF ONE YEAR AGO TODAY.

JULY 3, 1916.—The French captured the German second line positions of Herbecourt, Assevillers and Feuillieres, south of the Somme, and push their advance beyond Buscourt and Flaucourt. The British capture La Boisselle. The French lose and recapture the Damloup work, east of Verdun.

BEAR DRIVES TEUTONS ACROSS STRIPA; THREE MORE VILLAGES TAKEN

Presovce, Zboroff and Kershiduv Captured by Onrushing Russian Forces—Berlin Admits Strong Positions Swept Away in New Slav Positions

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 3, via Lonodn.—Russian troops have broken forward across the heights on the western bank of the Stripa in Galicia and succeeded in extending northward the gap they made in the Teutonic lines the previous day, Army Headquarters announced today. The Russian progress was halted with the assistance of German reserves, the statement adds.

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, July 3.—The new Russian offensive has resulted in the capture of 6,000 more prisoners. The Russians are advancing towards Zoloukhi, Galicia, the War Office announces.

Twenty-one guns and several mine-throwers were captured. Prisoners continue to be brought in.

The number of prisoners taken in the fighting southeast of Brzezany on Sunday is given as 53 officers and 2,200 men.

Russian troops have occupied the Galician villages of Presovce, Zboroff and Korshiduv. The Auso-German forces have retreated westward across the little Stripa river.

The two cities mentioned, Brzezany and Zoloukhi, are in the same sector in which Gen. Brusiloff made his initial drive. A continuance of the offensive here is taken to mean that the enemy lines have been penetrated and the enemy flanked in several places.

Official despatches declare that the count of prisoners is still incomplete and will undoubtedly go higher than the 19,000 odd so far accounted for.

ADVANCE CONTINUES STEADILY

Semi-official front despatches detail steady, speedy gains everywhere along the twenty-five mile front in which Gen. Brusiloff is pressing onward toward Lemberg. Not only that, but War Office reports show a resumption of a general offensive on every other Russian front. No major infantry actions are reported anywhere than in the Lemberg sector, but artillery all along the line is pouring shells into the Teutonic trenches, hinting at mass attacks everywhere.

According to news received by the Government the offensive on the southwestern front is developing in an absolutely favorable manner.

Up to the hour of telegraphing the advance was still in progress. A despatch received by the War Ministry, but unpublished, says that the staff of the Russian army in Galicia is more than satisfied with the progress made.

Never was an offensive so auspiciously begun. The local army staff was pleased with the speed of the advance, as the operation which the staff had expected would take two days was executed yesterday between the hours of two and nine.

VICTORY OVER EXTENDED AREA

Details from an authorized source of the victorious Russian attack in Galicia, state that a Finnish division participated in the victory at Koniuchy.

All enemy trenches on the slopes of Mount Sednaya Goura, east of Koniuchy, were occupied. Besides the village of Koniuchy the forest west thereof as far as Kolf was taken.

All German trenches south of Koniuchy and the wood west of the village of Schibalirm, were occupied.

Three lines of enemy near Schibalirm, also two lines of trenches northwest of Zolouski and similar positions southwest of Potoutory and east and southeast of Nitchichou fell into the hands of the Russians.

REPEATED HUN ATTACKS FAIL

By Associated Press.

PARIS, July 3.—The Germans made repeated attacks last night on the Aisne, on both sides of the Ailles Paissy road. The most violent fighting continued throughout the night.

Today's official announcement says the Germans were thrown back each time, and finally abandoned the effort this morning.

The French also repulsed German attacks on the Verdun front, between Hill 304 and Avocourt wood.

The official statement follows:

"After a renewed bombardment the Germans at about 6:30 o'clock yesterday evening began a series of violent attacks on the trenches we had recaptured on both sides of the Ailles-Paissy road. Very severe fighting continued throughout the night, resulting in a complete check to the enemy. We maintained all our positions.

"Two attacks on small French posts further west were repulsed with ease.

"On the left bank of the Meuse (Verdun front), the artillery fighting became very violent toward the middle of the night in the sector between Hill 304 and Avocourt wood. At about 2:30 o'clock this morning the Germans attacked on a front of 500 metres at the southeast corner of the wood. Their vain assaults were broken up by our fire, and the enemy, unable to approach our lines, did not renew the effort.

"In a raid on German lines in Champagne we blew up a blockhouse of the enemy. There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front."

GERMAN OFFICIAL REPORT

BERLIN, July 3, via London.—The artillery bombardment on the western front yesterday reached considerable strength in the Ypres salient, says the official statement issued by the German War Department.

On the eastern front, at Koniuchy, the statement says, strong Russian attacks broke down with heavy losses. The Russians did not find strength to repeat their attacks against the Brzezany heights.

KERENSKY RUSSIA'S HERO

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, July 3—General Kaledines, who captured about 80,000 prisoners in a forward movement last year and who is known as the breaker of the Lutz front, has been chosen hetman, or leader, of the Don Cossacks.

A slender, delicate-looking man racked with illness was the greatest of all heroes in Russia today. He was A. F. Kerensky, Minister of War. It was he who personally led Free Russia's troops in the start of the first offensive in which the Red Flag of the Democracy has been borne against Germany's autocratic hosts. It was he who planned the offensive, and who, finally when the supreme test came, went to the front trenches himself that he might inspire the men.

With such an example as this Russia's soldiers are performing prodigies of valor today.

All of the latest telegrams to the War Ministry agree that the soldiers are in excellent spirits and the Ministry authorizes the statement that preparations as regards munitions and equipment are in better shape than in any preceding period of the war.

SOLDIERS ADORE KERENSKY.

The new chief of the War Ministry information department is Lieut Perun, who is also a member of the executive committee of the Council of Deputies. Lieut. Perun has just returned from the front where he witnessed M. Kerensky's crusade in favor of an immediate offensive. The lieutenant told the Associated Press that the very eloquence of Kerensky was largely responsible for the change in the army's mood. The Lieutenant was present when Kerensky, having told the soldiers that he would not attack his noble march toward the enemy's trenches alone, was embraced and kissed by the soldiers.

Lieutenant Perun mentioned one division, especially known for its unwillingness to fight, which, after the Minister's speeches, became the most militant on the front.

"The army," said the Lieutenant, "was reborn under my eyes." The minds of the soldiers, he said, are thoroughly permeated with Russia's new political program. M. Kerensky's merit, the Lieutenant declared, is that he first realized that the Russians will fight only if they are convinced they are fighting not for imperialism, but for freedom at home and international peace.

The War Minister, he added, has accomplished the almost impossible task of convincing the soldiers of that fact. Lieutenant Perun declares that deserters are returning more rapidly than ever and says that the condition of the army is markedly better than Petrograd thinks.

DEMONSTRATION IN CAPITAL.

Crowds of enthusiastic citizens marched through the streets of Petrograd today carrying portraits of the Minister and General Brussiloff, while others thronged the sidewalks and filled balconies and windows, cheering and waving flags and handkerchiefs in celebration of the first victory of Russian arms on the western front since the revolution.

The demonstration started with a score of men who got the first news from the War Office of the Russian advance and grew rapidly to large proportions. Large portraits of the War Minister and the Chief of Staff were obtained and carried in the parade, exciting the greatest enthusiasm since the capture of Przemysl.

SIR HERBERT TREE, FAMOUS ACTOR-MANAGER, IS DEAD

Expired Suddenly from Heart Failure in London Last Night

SPLENDID CAREER ON THE STAGE

Special to The Star.

LONDON, July 3. — Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the distinguished actor and theatre manager, died with startling suddenness, from heart failure in a nursing home in London last night.

Sir Herbert had a slight accident on June 16. He slipped while descending a staircase and strained the ligaments of his right knee. He underwent an operation on June 21, which proved to be somewhat serious, but was expected to lead to his complete recovery. The attending surgeons, however, insisted upon the cancellations of all Sir Herbert's engagements, so that he could enjoy complete seclusion and rest.

A friend who visited Sir Herbert yesterday found him as he described it," as well as ever." In the evening however, he had a heart attack and the end came very quickly, the famous actor dying at 8 o'clock.

CHEERFUL TO THE LAST.

According to the morning newspapers the sudden death of Sir Herbert was not caused by the recent operation, but it was a case of collapse so sudden that he died in a few moments. Sir Herbert had discussed business affairs daily with Mr. Dana, his business manager, during the last few days. They were thus engaged for some time Monday afternoon, and when Mr. Dana left, Sir Herbert was in a cheerful mood as he expected to be able to leave his bed soon.

Sir Herbert had received many interviewers during the past week or so, discussing with them his plans for the future. In The Daily Chronicle he had been publishing a series of articles giving his impressions of America, and on Sunday he wrote a lively letter to Robert Donald, the editor of that paper, expressing the hope that he would soon be about again.

The newspapers publish lengthy biographies and appreciations of the famous actor, paying tribute to the work he has done for the stage in Great Britain and also expressing gratitude for the great service he rendered to the cause of the Allies in this war, "in the capacity," as one paper describes it, "of informal Ambassador to America."

HIS EARLY SUCCESSES.

Born in London on December 17, 1853, Herbert Beerbohm Tree spent the first seventeen years of his life in England and Germany, after which he became a clerk in his father's office in London. Even in those days of ledger and grain tables, he made amateur theatricals his hobby. His first professional appearance was at Folkestone Town Hall in 1877 with a minor travelling company, where he played blind Colonel Challice in "Alone." Next he played Monte Prade in a French production of "L'Adventure" at the Prince of Wales' Theatre in London, after which he toured for five years in the English provinces. In 1884 he married Miss Maud Holt, who is well known as Lady Tree on the English stage.

His London career began shortly afterwards and embraced such roles as Joseph Surface in "The School for Scandal," Rev. R. Spalding in "The Private Secretary," the German swindler in "Jim the Penman," and Demetrius in "The Red Lamp," the latter opening his final managerial season at the Comedy Theatre.

SHAKESPEAREAN PRODUCTIONS

In 1887 he became lessee and manager of the Haymarket Theatre, and during the next eight years made thirty-five productions of modern and classic drama. His first essay in Shakespeare was as Falstaff in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" in 1889, "Hamlet" following in 1892, and the first part of "Henry IV." in 1896. He also produced Henry Arthur Jones' "The Dancing Girl," Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People," Oscar Wilde's "A Woman of No Importance," "Fedora," and George Du Maurier's "Trilby" during these years, to mention but a few of his more important performances.

It was in 1897 that he opened His Majest's Theatre in London with Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Seats of the Mighty," following this with "Katharine and Petruchio," "Julius Caesar," "The Musketeers," "King John," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Rip Van Winkle," Stephen Phillips' "Herod," "Twelfth Night," "Ulysses," "The Eternal City," "Resurrection," "Richard II," "The Darling of the Gods," "The Tempest," "Much Ado about Nothing," "Business is Business," "Oliver Twist," Nero," "Colonel Newcome," "The Winter's Tale," "Antony and Cleopatra," "The Van Dyck," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Drake," to mention only the important plays given in London at His Majesty's.

In 1896 he made his first visit to America, presenting among other plays Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People." In 1907 he visited Berlin, where he played "Hamlet" and other Shakespearean plays.

In 1909, he received the honor of Knighthood.

REVIVAL OF "HENRY VIII."

He revived Shakespeare's "Henry VIII.'" at His Majesty's Theatre in London in 1910. The play achieved a run of 254 performances, a record for any Shakespearean play on any stage. In the spring of 1916 he brought "Henry VIII." to the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York and it was the phenomenal triumph he won in that city that decided him to take his entire production on tour, as well as a company of 100 players, including Miss Edith Wynne Mathison. Montreal witnessed this splendid production early last winter and again early this spring.

Sir Herbert was also a charming writer, and his published writings twelve lectures on The Imaginative Faculty, and a Hamlet from an Actor's Prompt Book: Henry VIII and His Court; Thoughts and Afterthoughts; and "Nothing Matters, the latter published only a few months ago.

Lady Tree (Maud Holt) is an accomplished actress, and their daughter, Viola Tree, has also been prominently associated with him.

Miss Louise Murphy and Miss Morrow of the High School did much to stiumlate this by talks pictures, etc. The ladies' auxiliary of the Knowlton conference presented two valuable books as prizes for bird and nature study. These were won by Elinor Brown and Annie Dobson. Miss Mabel Jamieson, general secretary of the association was the conference executive.

Miss Mary S. Edgar who returned with the girls from Knowlton left immediately for Camp Canorasset, Y. W. C. A. holiday camp for girls. This camp was opened Saturday with a first of July week-end for business girls, many of whom availed themselves of the opportunity to spend the holiday in the mountains.

This afternoon a party of 50 girls, in charge of Miss Ethel Roertson, Fairmount Branch secretary left to attend the 10 day camp for school girls.

The Province of Quebec was represented by nine delegates at the National Y. W. C. A. Conference held last week at Elgin House, Muskoka, six of these being from city and student associations in Montreal. The Misses Shepherd, Scott and Layton have returned home; the Misses Nichol who represented the Royal Victoria College Association remained to do fruit picking in the Niagara peninsula.

SOHMER PARK

Lunette Sisters are Headliners in Acrobatic Work

Record audiences crowded Sohmer Park on Sunday and Monday and the programme was worthy the occasion. The headliners, the Lunette Sisters were among the most graceful and atttractive seen at the Park for many a day. Two pretty and shapely girls gave an original acrobatic performance which gets away from any by that name now in vaudeville. They did clever dances, Japanese, butterfly and skirt dances, on the stage and then performed about twenty feet in the air suspended by their teeth, changing costume while so suspended. Next in popularity were the Four Entertainers, a comedy male quartette, with an up-to-date repertoire. They simply had to stop giving encores to allow the programme to proceed. Woolford's Canine Circus, of wonderfully trained Boston terriers and a monkey comedian, is among the best of its kind. Frank Carmen, in his novelty hoop-rolling act; and Marlow and Duffy, in their comedy acrobatic number, were amongst the other notable attractions The Park Military Band had especially pleasing programmes, changed at each performance. The promenade concerts after the show and the Wednesday and Friday gala nights continue to be most popular.

SOUSA'S BAND

Will Be at Dominion Park for Sixteen Days

Commencing Saturday, July 14, and for the following 16 days the management of Dominion Park has engaged Sousa and his band, who will give two concerts daily.

An ordinary Sousa tour includes between one hundred and two hundred towns and cities. Of the larger places there are, usually, twenty-five cities in which two concerts are given, aggregating say, two hundred to four hundred concerts, according to the number of places. To undertake to provide a distinctive program for each concert or place is an utter impossibility. To prepare a given number of programs is an exacting and difficult thing to do.

The announcement made a few days ago by the park management that Sousa and his band would be here for a limited engagement, commencing Saturday, July 14, was welcomed by music lovers and by the public in general. Sousa's band music is like nothing but itself. It is not merely original, it is unique.

RESCIND SALMON ORDER.

LONDON, July 3. — Robert P. Skinner, the American Consul General, was informed yesterday that Great Britain had rescinded the order prohibiting the importation of canned salmon from the United States and Canada. Fifty per cent of the amount imported in 1916 of this commodity will be permitted to come in.

"ON TRIAL" GIVEN BY THE ORPHEUM STOCK COMPANY

Clever Melodrama Effectively Interpreted Makes Big Hit

One of the most attractive features of Stock is that it is always affording surprises to its patrons. A company will go along for two or three weeks without achieving anything better than a dull level of mediocrity, and then it will rise to the superior requirements of some play more difficult than those it has been interpreting and give a performance of that play equal to the standard one exacts from much more elaborate organizations.

The Orpheum Stock Company this week is playing "On Trial." The play is frank melodrama, but melodrama treated in a novel manner, handled with discretion, made plausible to the extent of conviction ,and maintaining a high level of sustained interest.

It does not matter, but it may interest the passer-by to learn that the dominant feature which makes this play so interesting—the harking back from the description of events in a murder trial to a visualization of the events themselves by the protagonists on the stage,—was not adopted by design, but by accident, by reason of the playwright's lack of knowledge of stage technique.

Briefly, "On Trial" tells the story of a murder trial. As each of the principal witnesses tells his or her story on the stage there is an interruption at the crucial moment and after a few moments of darkness the curtain goes up and we see enacted on the stage the very incidents which the witness has been describing a few moments before.

It is an actual defiance of all dramaturgy, for we find the murdered man alive before us, enacting the incidents that lead to his murder. But it is novel, effective, and of extraordinary power in fixing the significance of the dramatic moment in the minds of the audience.

Strangely enough, it does not seem at all incorrect that the trial should be interrupted while we are presented with a portrayal of the scenes the witnesses have begun to describe, and when the curtain again goes up on the Court scene, and the question "And what happened then?" is asked, it seems quite natural that the witness should resume the recital at the point where the actual enactment of the events left off.

The play is soundly constructed. The dialogue in particular has been skilfully handled, and the development of the story is effected with simplicity, directness,—despite the involution of events,—and plausibility.

In the hands of amateurs or of a careless or indifferent company, however, "On Trial" would be an appalling failure. It is largely because of the sincerity, the earnestness, and the painstaking care the Orpheum Players bring to bear upon its interpretation that it proves a big success here. To date it is the best thing, taken in all, they have accomplished; the best thing Percy Meldon has accomplished, too.

The play opens with speeches by counsel, and in this particular both Mr. de Cordova and Mr. Miller acquit themselves with distinction. The Court scene does not partake of either the melodramatic or the burlesque, as so many Court scenes on the stage often do. It is convincing because it is well done,—and not overdone.

Mr. Ranous is the defendant, and has little to do in the Court scenes, but ample opportunity in the scene in which he discovers his wife's liason with Gerald Trask, the man he murders. Mr. Ranous shows sound judgment in this scene, working up to a dramatic climax steadily and with a reserve force that emphasizes the tragedy of the closing moments. He has done nothing better since he joined the company.

Mr. Hayden Stevenson, as the murdered man—a society Don Juan of middle age,—has a role that repays study, and in it he scores an emphatic success. His assumption of the manner of the blase roue is admirably done, and throughout,— especially in the hotel scene with the young girl Trask ruins,—he plays with a keen sense of dramatic values and with a sharp eye for legitimate effect.

As the murdered man's widow Miss Dale also has opportunities denied her last week, and makes the most of them, with equally satisfactory results. In the scene between Trask and his wife, in which she reproaches him for his infidelities but finally consents to give him one last chance, Miss Dale revealed considerable skill in the deft manipulation of dialogue, in expressive coloring of phrase and utilization of telling gesture.

Miss McGrath as the defendant's wife contributes another adequate and convincing example of her qualities as an emotional actress. She has undoubted gifts along these lines, and she is on the right road. Her portrayal of grief is achieved without ostentation, and her outburst at the close is well controlled. In the hotel scene, where she portrays the young girl Traak betrays, she depicts youthful innocence and happiness with a spirit and an insouciant charm that wins her audience.

The minor roles were adequate. Mr. Meldon made one of his rare appearances, in the role of the doctor.

The staff of the theatre, as well as the management, are to be congratulated upon the celerity of the scenic changes. Aided by a revolving apparatus, they achieved a speed record the Orpheum has never before attained.

If only Frank Veitch would remove that unhappy female face from his programme cover, one might be able to enjoy the music in the entr'actes. But who can look upon this lady clutching herself as though suddenly attacked by a hatpin without feeling that pictorial art, as represented on the Orpheum programme cover, is on the decline?

She was attended by Miss Gladys A. Gorham, who wore a dress of flesh-pink Georgette crepe and leghorn hat to match. The groomsman was Mr. Harry A. SAMMIES INVADE PARIS FOR FOURTH OF JULY PARADE

France to Honor Men from Land of Old Glory Tomorrow

Special Star Cable by United Press.

PARIS, July 3.—A battalion of American troops arrived in Paris early today at the Gare du Quai D'Austerlitz. Only a moderate crowd gave them an enthusiastic greeting, Parisians not being advised of the arrangements for their arrival.

The battalion is the one which is to parade in tomorrow's celebration by Paris of Independence Day.

At Austerlitz, the troops were served with black coffee and bread. Then they marched to barracks near at hand, stepping along in lively fashion to the stirring music of their band.

PREPARE TO INVADE PARIS.

Special Star Cable by United Press.

A FRENCH PORT, July 2 (delayed)—Envied of all their comrades, a certain battalion of Gen. Pershing's Sammies were putting an extra finish shine on their guns and bayonets and an added brushing to their uniforms today as they prepared for a friendly invasion of Paris. They were to be the centre of the French capital's celebration of the glorious Fourth.

But those left behind took it philosophically—and got busy at once arranging baseball games and field sports as their own American celebration of Independence Day.

This French town now looks like an American village all dressed up for a Fourth of July celebration. The army has just about made it over. American flags fly in profusion everywhere. The American sailor blue and white and the American olive drab and khaki overshadow the occasional dingy war-worn uniforms of a few French Poilus here. In the streets rumble American motor trucks, with barrels and boxes and packages on which are American names.

It hasn't taken the American Sammy or the American Jackie very long to get acquainted with the pretty girls of the town—even if both are badly handicapped by lack of a common "lingo." Nor has it taken the Americans any time to search out places to spend money. The shopkeepers are deluged with spenders.

Over all—over the joyous liberty hours in the town no less than over the grim war preparations in the camp—a glorious sun shines down in the trees, and grasses are green and the whole world is beautiful. It may be different later—but Sammy takes things just as they come and is at home everywhere.

The camp of the American expeditionary army is in the midst of great yellow wheat fields where women and aged soldiers at work merge into the landscape almost imperceptibly. Flowers dot the roadways and two big hills stand like sentinels on one side of the hut city where the troops are "billeted" while on the other the land rolls away to the distant sea.

PORT WAS ASTONISHED.

"There is a great dispute on here as to which unit had the honor of first bringing the American flag to the camp. The driver of one big motor "lorry" is believed to have the honor. He hustled ahead full tilt at soon as the big machine was swung to the dock and unfurled the flag at the first hut. The French port has finally recovered from its astonishment and pleased surprise over being selected as the spot where history was made in the landing of the American forces.

"We were entirely surprised over the arrival of the troops," said a member of the Chamber of Commerce today. "We hurried out at once seeking the band so they could play the 'Marseillaise,' and the 'Star Spangled Banner' in greeting. All of the musicians were hard at work and it was difficult to round them up.

"Besides, they hadn't had much time to practice. We got all our citizens we could to meet at the quen in greeting—but most of our quen belong to the army. We tried to show how we felt in our hearts—and how all France feels about these American soldiers."

As a matter of fact the French port was totally unprepared to welcome the Americans. The town went quietly to bed one night to awaken the next morning and see American blue jackets nonchalantly strolling about everywhere and out in the harbor great gray ships creeping. Then the soldiers landed, stretched their legs, had a brief march, and at night reembarked again on the transports. The next the real landing took place. By this time the town had a chance to get out its American flags and decorate.

Before long American movie fans will probably have a chance to see on the films some of the incidents of this landing as movie operators cranked away hundreds of feet of film throughout the day.

After several days of the Americans as visitors, this French port agrees emphatically with General Pershing's tribute, when he set eyes on his Sammies again:

"They are great, strapping troops—just magnificent. Their appearance is inspiring."

SALUTATIONS FROM PRESIDENT WILSON ON CONFEDERATION

Special to The Star By Our Own Correspondent.

OTTAWA, July 3.—From the President of the United States, the Governor-General today received the following felicitous message on the Confederation semi-centennial.

"At this time when the ties between the Canadian people and my countrymen are made even stronger by association in common cause of human freedom, I offer cordial congratulation on this half-century anniversary of the foundation of the Dominion of Canada."

(Signed) Woodrow Wilson.

CENTRAL BOARD FOR SCHOOLS HOLDS MEETING

Standing Committees are Chosen—New Secretary Will Get Increased Fee

The Central Board of the new Montreal Catholic School Commission met for the first time this morning at the Commercial Academy, for the purpose of organizing the business of the Board and to elect standing committees. All the members of the Central Board, Mgr. Roy, Mr. Justice Lafontaine, Aime Geoffrion, K.C., Dr. O. S. Letourneau, Rev. Father Brophy J. N. Perrault and J. A. Richard were present.

At the outset of the meeting, Mgr. Emile Roy, former president of the old School Commission, was unanimously elected president of the new Central Board, and the following standing committees were appointed:

Finance Committee: J. A. Richard, Aime Geoffrion and Mr. Justice Lafontaine.

Works Committee:—Dr. O. H. Letourneau, Rev. Father John C. Brophy and J. N. Perrault.

School Committee:—Mgr. Emile Roy, Rev. Father Brophy and J. N. Perrault. It was decided that two members of each committee would constitute a quorum.

The question of the engagement of a secretary-treasurer and of an accountant gave rise to a lengthy discussion in which Mgr. Roy, Mr. Justice Lafontaine, Messrs. Geoffrion and Perrault took part. Mgr. Roy expressed the opinion that the secretary of the Central Board should devote all his time to his duties as secretary.

In former days it had been customary to appoint a secretary who occupied another position; for instance, the former secretary of the School Board was Mr. Justice Lafontaine's brother, Ulric Lafontaine, police magistrate, and his assistant was the latter's son, Ayme Lafontaine, advocate. It was also pointed out by Commissioner Richard that the next secretary should receive a salary commensurate with the position he is to occupy. Mgr. Roy insisted that he should also possess pedagogical ability. In order to obtain this from the prospective nominee to the position, it was practically decided that a salary of from $3,000 to $4,000 per annum will be paid.

It was also resolved that the accountant to be appointed should also act as treasurer of the Board, under the supervision of the secretary.

The names of Principal Millaire, of Oller School, and that of Ayme Lafontaine, advocate, were mentioned in connection with the post of secretary, but the question was finally left inabeyance and will be decided later. Mgr. Roy and J. N. Perrault were inclined to favor the appointment and promotion of Principal Millaire, but it was finally decided that Ayme Lafontaine, assistant-secretary of the former School Board, should continue as temporary secretary until August 1, at a weekly salary of $75. Victor Dore, the accountant of the former School Board, will also be asked to continue in office until August 1, at a salary of $75 per week. It is understood that the latter will be replaced at his own request, as he wishes to devote all his time to his duties of teacher at the School for Higher Commercial Studies.

It was understood, however, that whoever is appointed as secretary and as treasurer-accountant will have to devote all his time to the duties of the Central School Board.

TRIAL OF CABMEN IS POSTPONED

Sleek and smiling, Alphonse Gagnon, of 675 Champlain street, and Joseph Lemelli, 592 Champlain street, the two cabmen charged with taking two 15-year-old girls to a disorderly house in St. Timothy street, appeared in the Police Court this morning, prepared to make their voluntary statement. The case was not ready, however, the transcript of the evidence not having been finished; they will appear before Judge St. Cyr tomorrow morning. They are out on bail.

The two little girls at the enquete, when Gagnon and Lemelli were committed last week, said they had met the men, who are at the stand at St. Denis and Rachel street, and had told them they had been hunting all day for work but had been unable to find any. The keeper of the house to which they were taken was fined $300 on charge of keeping a disorderly house, selling liquor illegally and keeping liquor for sale. She also was put under bonds of $500 to keep the peace for a year. A woman who said she was the defendant's mother paid the fines and furnished the bonds.

FRESH AIR FUND A MORAL SUPPORT TO POOR CHILDREN

Health Insured and Delinquincy Averted by Out-Door Life

"Sumer is icumen in," wrote an author centuries ago, and the words and melody have come down the years as the oldest example of English vocal music extant. The suggestion therein contained is probably as strong today as ever it was to encourage happiness among the rich and well-to-do; but to the poor, what a mockery the promise might bring!

Summer is indeed less of a season than an individual experience. To the man, woman or child possessing enough of this world's goods to enjoy the out-doors which invites excursions to seaside, mountain, lake or river, summer is a time of rare blessedness; but to the poor who are boxed up in the slum districts of a city, the hot weather only represents added discomfort, tedium, suffering, sickness, death. To one, the period spells relaxation, ease, health, sports, mental expansion and general well-being; to the other, the hot months bring discouragement, stifling nights and sweating days, more dirt and the crying of children who are discontented without knowing why.

A student of psychology who took up social work was early engaged in helping to manage a picnic by which needy children were taken into the country for the first time in their lives. He was bent on watching the effect upon them of the excursion and registering their emotions. And the great song of thankfulness that he heard was for the trees,—their beauty and their plentitude. Food was relegated to second place, it was the trees the picnicers gloated over.

The Fresh Air Fund exists and is sustained for the purpose of taking to the trees mothers and children who otherwise could not rest their tired vision with country pictures. Generously supported by philanthropic citizens, the Fresh Air Fund continues year by year its saving work of preventing disease and giving comfort to the weary. Since its inception, the Fund has benefited hundreds of thousands of women and children whose only holiday, but for this means of recreation, would have been spent on the doorstep in a crowded street or in the confined back-yard. And those who do this work for the poor and suffering do it without recompense save the gratitude of those they serve.

Those active in social service are agreed that environment exerts a powerful influence over the morals of the young. How large a part poverty plays in the development of juvenile delinquency has yet to be determined, but that want is the father of many misdeeds is certain. Complete regeneration has been known to follow residence in the country of the growing offending member of society.

The physical effect of country life is too obvious to be overlooked. Delicate bodies are strengthened by free exercise in the open air and wide spaces, and maturing muscles gather spring and reliability by the process of reasonable sports.

It is these advantages which the Fresh Air Fund offers to those dependent upon the sympathy of their more fortunate brothers, for what may be classed in the daily catalogue as extras, but which in reality should be listed with the necessities. The benefits react upon those who supply them, since more fresh air (with all the supplementary good things furnished by the Fresh Air Fund) means fewer civic bills in the fight against disease, a lessening of social unrest and a consequent betterment of conditions for the entire community.

GERMANS BLAMED FOR RACE RIOTS AT ST. LOUIS

By Associated Press.

EAST ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Fires which were started by rioters in three negro quarters at noon today, were fanned by a high wind and spread rapidly, getting beyond control. Troops and police have hurried to the scene where rioters also were assembled.

Special to The Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Government officials today started an investigation to ascertain whether German agents are in any way connected with the bloody race riots in East St. Louis, Ill.

The Wilhelmstrasse is also suspected of having had a hand in the recent Boston outbreak.

It is known the Kaiser's agents in the United States are anxious to stir up internal strife, in line with Berlin's policy of hindering war moves in enemy nations by giving hostile Governments plenty of worry at home.

ANOTHER CHILD FOUND IN HOUSE

Another 15-year-old girl appeared this morning in the Juvenile Court, having been found in a raid on a disorderly house on St. Lawrence boulevard, kept by Alice Dubois. The girl was remanded until the 11th, to enable the police to complete their investigation.

The Dubois woman was brought before Mr. Recorder Geoffrion this morning and was fined $100 for keeping a disorderly house, $100 for selling liquor illegally and $50 for keeping liquor for sale. She paid the fines and costs, a total of $275.40, and was released.

The police say the girl told them she was 15 years old, but that the woman declared she told her she was 19. The girl has been before the Juvenile Court before and was released on probation.

Pulos is "in Wrong," Twice Fined; Kept Gambling House

George Pulos was found guilty of keeping a gambling house, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs, or three months, in the police court this morning. This is the second conviction against him in two weeks, and Judge Lanctot said that if he were convicted again it would mean a jail sentence, without the option of a fine. Thirteen men pleaded guilty to being found in a gambling resort, and were fined $10 each. They were gathered in Sunday night, at 316a St. Lawrence boulevard.

DRIVEN TO SOUP KITCHENS.

By Canadian Press.

COPENHAGEN, July 3.—The food difficulties, particularly the disappearance of potatoes, have driven Berliners in masses to the municipal soup kitchens, where they hope to get better rations than at home.

The management of the kitchens reports 21,000 new registrations. The kitchens, however, are badly supplied, and the fare is most scanty and monotonous. The potatoe ration this week is one pound, but it is admittedly only on paper.

The woman was found by the police in her house early this morning unconscious and bleeding. Her husband said that she had been drinking, rose from her bed and fell out of the window. Yet, she was fully clothed.

JURY RETURNS QUICK VERDICT IN MURDER CASE

It took the coroner's jury about two minutes this morning to find Guiseppi Toloreco criminally responsible for the death of Rodolphe Godin. Jauntily smoking a cigar, he was led straightway between two officers before Judge Lanctot, pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder, and was remanded for preliminary trial July 10. He refused to give any evidence.

The chief witnesses at the inquest held before Coroner McMahon were the widow of the murdered man, and Arthur Paquin and Ephren Ferron, who saw the fight between Godin and Toloreco and saw the latter draw a revolved from his pocket and shoot.

"I came here from New York at the time of the garment workers strike and it was then that I obtained a permit to carry a revolver," said Toloreco to The Star as he sat outside and awaited the jury's verdict. "I was formerly a tailor for the 58th Battalion and obtained a revolver permit without the recommendation of any police officer because I had my honorable discharge from the army. The man attacked me with a stone and I shot him in self defence."

Though he assumed a rather jaunty air as soon as he got out of the court room and lighted a big cigar, Toloreco was very nervous during the inquest.

Mrs. Godin, widow of the murdered man, appeared in heavy mourning.

WOUNDS FATAL TO SGT. A. M. BROWN

He was an ex-secretary of the Montreal Ayrshire Association. Before going overseas he was employed with the James Robertson Company, Limited, and resided with his sister at 18 4th avenue, Viauville.

MAYOR AGAINST NEW MONUMENT

Mayor Martin expressed his disapproval this morning of the vote passed by the Board of Control during his absence last week, granting $[illegible]00 for the erection of a monument in Lafontaine Park to the late Sir Louis Hippolyte Lafontaine. The grant has yet to be approved by the City Council. The Mayor states that "at present all our resources and energy should be devoted to the relief of the unmeasured poverty caused by the war. When human beings are suffering and dying in thousands, one should not think of anything but subscribing and giving as much as possible to those who are in misfortune. When the city is obliged to stop all public works and put many laborers on the street, it is not a good time to subscribe to monuments."

The $5,000 was to come off next year's budget.

CORONER TO LOOK INTO MAN'S DEATH

Inquest will be held by Coroner McMahon tomorrow into the death of Benjamin Sheppard. He was found unconscious Sunday at 3 Anderson street with a fractured skull. He died at the General Hospital last night without regaining consciousness. The police have been unable so far to solve the mystery of his injury.

SHIPS AFLOAT

The cargo ship, which was yesterday ashore near Little Metis is reported to be afloat again.

GILLETT'S LYE

MEDERIC STATES HE WILL VETO VOTE FOR CIVIC SURVEY

No Need for it, He Says—City Comptroller Pelletier Favors Idea But Points to the Shallowness of the Civic Purse

Despite the fact that the mayor stated that he would veto their vote, the aldermen at a caucus this morning expressed their determination to vote at the council meeting this afternoon for the survey of civic administration by the Bureau of Municipal Research, and to vote the $18,000 required to come from the $20,000 turned back to the reserve fund after it had been voted to pay for the experts' report on the aqueduct. The aldermen made their decision after reading the following letter from Mr. Pettetier, City comptroller and auditor:

"Today the Board of Control submits for your approval a recommendation to retain the services of the Bureau of Municipal research at a cost of $18,000. With regard to this I think I should draw your attention to the facts concerning the reserve fund. To meet unforeseen claims, judgments and settlements from now till December 31 there remains only $2,700. The watering and street cleaning service is in a very precarious state.

It is true that the Board of Control has purchased automobile street cleaning apparatus, but the Road Department will have no funds to continue these services over any interval that may be caused by delay in the delivery of these machines. Moreover there is no provision for snow removal during November and December. I regret to have these remarks to make on the occasion of voting for an expertise, which I consider to be a good measure in itself, but I think it my duty to call your attention to these facts before you are asked to vote the sum of $18,000. If you aprove the Board's report I will be obliged to return the certificate according to law."

WASTED MONEY, SAYS MAYOR.

Mayor Martin expressed himself as strongly opposed to any survey by an outside commission.

"What do we need it for?" he said. "It will be throwing away $18,000 for nothing. Why can't we conduct a survey ourselves? Do we need people from New York to tell Mr. Laurendeau, the city attorney, Mr. Mercier, the city engineer, or myself—what to do? Do away with the Board of Control to begin with, that will save quite a lot of money. And then let us get together and find out what is wrong besides, and apply our own remedies to the situation. It is a foolish idea, this outside survey."

In the meantime Herbert B. Sands, assistant director of the Municipal Research Bureau of New York, has written Controller Villeneuve, who initiated the idea of a survey, stating that his firm is ready to go ahead as soon as the vote is passed. He stated that he had understood the survey would not be called for, on account of the opposition that was first made to it.

MFR'S EXECUTIVE TO MEET HERE; NEW PLAN IS ADOPTED

Important steps, towards extending the work of the Montreal branch of the Canadians Manufacturers' Association, are being taken by the local executive and it is probable that some of the meetings of the Executive Council, which has its headquarters in Toronto, will in the future be held here. This is in accordance with a resolution unanimously adpoted at a meeting of the local executive held on June 28 inviting the Executive Council to meet in Montreal at least twice a year.

Transportation matters are also exercising the attention of local manufacturers, and in order that the Montreal office may be in full possession of the data concerning matters affecting their interests, and to increase the service of the local branch in this respect, the acting secretary, W. P. Hughes, will be in Toronto for a month or two so as to study the methods of the transportation department there. This plan has been endorsed by the Executive as one calculated to increase the service of the Montreal office.

The chairman reported that a biweekly visit from J. E. Walsh, manager of the transportation department, had been arranged which would bring, in a much more effective manner, the work of this department to the assistance of Montreal branch members.

The new office space, it was stated, is now ready for use and is proving of practical value as a consulting and committee room. Arrangements have also been made with the McGill Library whereby the Institution will loan books of interest to manufacturers for study by members of the association.

A resolution passed by the legislation committee to the effect that everything possible be done to influence the Government towards a more equitable distribution of the war tax, it was further announced, is now in their hands.

POLICEMAN SHOT

Mysterious Murder in Calgary — Beer Bottle Clue

Special to The Star.

CALGARY, July 3.— Mystery surrounds the death of Police Constable Arthur Duncan, who was found shot to death on a vacant lot in the west end of the city at an early hour yesterday morning. Duncan was a patrolman and was last seen about midnight on his beat near the spot where the body was found. People in the neighborhood heard four shots shortly after twelve, but it was not till half-past four that the body was found by a passerby. The weapon used by the murderer was a 45-calibre automatic revolver, four empty shells of which were found beside the body, two bullets had entered Duncan's body. Not far from the body was found a travelling bag containing one empty beer bottle.

ESCAPED ALIEN ARRESTED HERE FOR SMUGGLING

Fred D'Aperng, a German, suspected of being implicated in the smuggling of drugs into Canada from the United States, was arrested last night in a downtown hotel, and is being held by the alien immigration authorities at the registration offices, St. Antoine street, pending investigations. It is alleged that D'Aperng has been under surveillance for some time by New York detectives and the McLaughlin agency of this city, and evidence obtained appears to have been sufficient to warrant his arrest. D'Aperng was formerly employed as a drug clerk in this city, and, it is alleged, had previously been before the authorities charged with being mixed up in similar smuggling operations. Some time ago he was sent to the alien internment camp at Kingston, but left there without permission.

CAPT. THOMPSON, M.C.

Canadian Physician is on His Way Back to Front

Following three brief weeks of leave from the western front, Capt. Thompson, Royal Army Medical Corps, was in Montreal today on his way back to France. Capt. Thompson lives in Coaticook, Quebec, and, in the early days of the war, proceeded to England and offered his services. They were accepted, and he was attached, as battalion medical officer of the Lancashires and Yorks Regiment.

For his distinguished services whilst tending to wounded under fire, Capt. Thompson was awarded the Military Cross. That was on the first day of the first big push on the Somme last year.

Capt. Thompson is registered at the Windsor.

Major-General Pershing Investigating Lead of Troops' Arrival

Special Star Cable by United Press.

PARIS, July 3.— Major-General Pershing announced today he had taken up with the British Government the alleged evasion of the American censorship by which Reuters' agency, of England, had prematurely announced the arrival of American troops in France. "Nobody feels this outrage more strongly than I," he said. "Premature publication of the news imperilled the lives of thousands who were afloat at the time."

Premier Borden Renews Promise at Inspiring Ceremony on Parliament Hill in Commemoration of Confederation — Governor-General Makes Stirring Speech.

Special to The Star From Our Own Correspondent.

OTTAWA, July 3.—The glories and achievements of the Canadian Confederation in the fifty years of its existence, and its splendid and determined participation in the war, were pictured here yesterday when on Parliament Hill thousands gathered for the commemorative celebration.

They heard speeches from the Duke of Devonshire, Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, witnessed a parade of the Ottawa regiments headed by a hundred returned soldiers, and listened to inspiring patriotic songs from a massed choir. Between speeches it sang "Rule Britannia," "O Canada," and "The Maple Leaf Forever." Ideal weather favored the simple but appropriate ceremonies.

His Excellency the Governor-General received a vice-regal salute on his arrival, the band playing the National Anthem. He was welcomed by the Prime Minister and his colleagues and a distinguished gathering of the official set and prominent people.

Today's ceremony combined the celebration of the semi-centennial of Confederation with the dedication of the new parliament buildings. A commemoration tablet in what is to be the Hall of Fame in the new building was unveiled. The inscription bears record of the historic occasion which today celebrates.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SPEECH.

"On this anniversary we are privileged to dedicate to the service of the State a stately pile which is being reared upon the foundations of the building in which for nearly fifty years the high court of the nation has annually assembled. Here were enacted many stirring scenes of the nation's history. Here met in strong, sometimes in fierce, debate the great protagonists in the early days of Confederation. Here were debated and determined the policies which guided and shaped the destinies of the young nation.

"There are present today those who have consecrated many years of their life to the service of the State within the walls which were devastated by fire more than a year ago, men of diverging ideals, of differing economic opinions, of conflicting aims, but all animated by the common purpose that Canada shall seek and follow the path that leads to strong nationhood and high destiny.

"The building which was destroyed was of splendid proportions and great architectural beauty. That it was designed and commenced six years before Confederation is in itself an evidence that the men of those days saw far into the future. But now upon the same foundation we rear a more stately structure. It symbolizes at once the splendid achievement of the past and the still more glorious hope of the future.

"It commemorates those who accomplished the great purpose of fifty years ago; it bids us remember those who have consecrated their lives to the resolve that purpose shall be maintained. It is a happy conception to combine, in its lofty portal, the highest exemplification of architectural art as developed by the two pioneer races of this country.

TO HONOR NATION'S HEROES.

"In its interior there is more notable unity of design and of purpose than in the building which preceded it. Instead of a low and tortuous passage to the magnificent library which overlooks the cliff, there will be a lofty spacious approach, with ample opportunity to commemorate on either side those who have best served the nation whether in war or in peace.

"May this new building be emblematical of our country's future, foreshadowing a nobler national purpose, a higher conception of duty and of service, a truer consecration to those ideals of democracy and liberty upon which alone we can stand secure in the years to come.

"Within the walls that are rising before us will be debated and determined questions of high import, profoundly affecting our future status and destiny. It was hardly within the dreams of the men of fifty years ago that Canada should assume, among the nations of the world, the proud position which we occupy today. It may perhaps be beyond our imagination to realize the Canada that shall be during the lifetime of children now within the sound of our voices.

SPIRIT INSPIRES MEN IN FRANCE.

"Faith, vision, courage, pointing to an everlasting purpose which for the time overbore all the considerations of whatsoever import, such was the inspiration of our fathers in shaping the destinies of the young nation. From them we hold in trust for those who are to succeed us a surpassing heritage. In all that concerns not only the national but the spiritual welfare of the State, that trust must be observed as a sacred obligation.

"Today with all the glories of summer surrounding us, with a bountiful harvest preparing, we, taking our part in the world's contest, its struggle to preserve all that civilization and democracy have upbuilt in the past, are yet privileged to enjoy undisturbed within our borders the manifested blessing of peace.

"Let it be present ever in our hearts that nearly 150,000 Canadians are holding our battle-line beyond the seas; let us not for a moment forget that, if that battle-line were once broken, the horrors of war might roll over a devastated country, within our boundaries.

"It is the spirit of those who founded this Confederation that inspires the men who hold the lines in France and Flanders and assure to us the security and the blessing which happily are still ours.

STILL HERE IN SPIRIT.

"So the great men of bye-gone years are still here in the spirit. Their faith, their vision, their courage and their devotion still live in the hearts of their children who slowly but surely are breaking down the stubborn resistance of tyranny and militarism three thousand miles away.

"To us the theatre wherein that world-tragedy is being enacted may seem infinitely remote. It is difficult to realize that the battle-line where yesterday the thunder of Canadian guns heralded this anniversary is hardly more distant from this city than are the western confines of our country.

"The dauntless spirit of resolution which conceived and created this Dominion, which sustained it through trials and difficulties of no ordinary measure, and which raised its people to their present proud position among the nations is still strong and unflinching.

"On the fiftieth anniversary of her natal day Canada, in proud sorrow for those who have fallen, with solemn pride in what they have achieved, with firm confidence in her sons who hold humanity's battle-line beyond the seas, sends to them a renewed assurance that their sacrifice shall not be in vain and that their country will sustain them to the final issue of peace through victory.

His Excellency, the Governor-General said:

"The inscription which I am about to unveil is a worthy record of an occasion which will touch a sympathetic chord in the heart of every true Canadian and which will equally appeal to all who believe in British institutions and British traditions. In happier times the jubilee of Confederation would have been celebrated with a becoming manifestation of national rejoicing and pomp, but it is right and fitting that even in these days of stress and anxiety so important an event in our national history should be adequately recognized.

"Confederation will stand for all time as a monument of the work accomplished by the devotion, the unselfishness, and the far sighted vision of those men whom we are all proud to call the Fathers of Confederation. To those men and their work we owe a debt which we can never repay, and it is for us in our generation to see that the glorious heritage to which we have succeeded shall be handed to those who come after us unimpaired and, as far as lies in our power, with added glory and lustre.

"The progress of Canada during the last fifty years is a story which fires the imagination and quickens the pulse, but it is not only from a Canadian point of view that we should regard the proceedings of today.

"I doubt if there is any living individual who could measure the effect which the evolution of Canada has had upon the British Empire. That effect on the Empire is to be judged, not merely by the test of material considerations and a study of statistics, but by the growth and development of the character of her citizens.

BASIS OF THE EMPIRE.

"Hardly, perhaps, did the Fathers of Confederation realize that their work would serve as the fundamental basis on which the great self-governing Dominions of the Crown have been built up and that the Empire of which we are all members is to a large extent a creation of theirs. Still less could they have been imagined the spectacle which we are witnessing today.

"I am confident, however, it would be a proud moment to them if they could know that Canada was taking so glorious a part in the most terrible war that the world has ever seen, and that she is giving willingly and spontaneously her best and bravest to the cause of liberty and justice.

"We are indeed keeping this anniversary under the shadow of a stupendous crisis, but we can look forward with confidence and certainly to the eventual result, provided we rise to our responsibilities and make the fullest use of our resources and opportunities.

"If we do hope, we can, I hope, await the judgment of posterity in the sure and certain hope that fifty years hence this noble pile of buildings which is now arising will look down upon the capital of a Canada as grateful to us as we are to those who laid the foundations of the first fifty years ago."

THE PREMIER'S SPEECH.

Sir Robt. Borden, who followed, said in part:

"Half a century measures the chief activities in the life of the individual; in the life of a nation it may count for little. In the history of a young country such as ours, with limitless resources and vast possibilities, the first fifty years of its development naturally constitute a more interesting and important period.

"Looking back over the half century which spans the existence of Canada as a United Dominion, we are thankful and proud that, although mistakes have been made, our progress has been wonderful and indeed inspiring. In material development achievement has surpassed all anticipation. Among those who contributed in the greatest degree to laying the foundation and erecting thereon so splendid a structure of national life and purpose, none was greater, none had a finer purpose or a more glowing vision than the last survivor of that remarkable group of men who are known in our history as the Fathers of Confederation, Sir Charles Tupper, passed away less than two years ago, and he lived to see all his splendid prophecies amply fulfilled and indeed surpassed. He lived also to see a united people, animated by the spirit of those who first imagined and then achieved confederation.

SIR WILFRID LAUREIR'S TRIBUTE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who followed the Prime Minister, said that fifty years ago, the Fathers of Confederation conceived the idea of joining together the scattered colonies in British North America and uniting them in the principles of democratic Government. It was a bold experiment. Many doubted it would be a success, but the experiment was fully justified. It was the Nemesis of fate that on the present occasion, which might be one of rejoicing, Canada and the Empire should be in the saddest part of their history under the shadow of the war into which we had thrown all our forces.

In normal times the day would be one of national celebration. Today there were too many homes in mourning; too many others living in all too much fear of sad news from the front.

The assemblage was in commemoration of the day and in expression of gratification to the great men who conceived confederation. They were men of broad vision, not limited by the horizon of the original four colonies. They had cast their eyes far beyond to the ocean where gentle breezes blew. What was then their dream—confederation of all Canada, —was now not an ideal but an accomplish fact. New provinces had arisen out of the wilderness. Distances had been overcome by railways till the two oceans were now nearer to each other than either used to be from the great lakes to these new territories.

EXAMPLE EMULATED.

Canada had invited the people of the world, had shared with them their lands. The only condition was that of true Canadian citizenship, loyalty to the King of England, the King of Canada. The men in 1867 had built far better than they imagined. Their example had been emulated all over the Empire.

Sir Wilfrid referred to Australia, South Africa and New Zealand. From the Northern Star to the Southern Cross they had been joined together in the bond of British unity. It was no Empire of old ideas held together by the iron rod of despotic rule, but, as General Smuts had said, a commonwealth of free and open nations.

The extraordinary development of the British institutions never shone so brilliantly as in the present hour of danger. When in 1914, Britain, seeing treaties dishonored treated with such impunity as to bring freedom to an end, entered the war, she had been followed by her colonies in the full power of their legislative freedom.

"Looking back over the events of fifty years, it could be said that Canada had just cause for pride in her achievements. Yet no one could say that Confederation had realized all hoped for it. Much had been done; much more remained to be done. Nothing was to be feared if the people held sacred the principles of justice, tolerance and broad human sympathy, and if they kept high ideals as beacons guiding the nation in its vicissitudes.

"There would be storms, it was folly to hope otherwise, but they would be weathered if we remained true to the faith and if our courage was equal to all emergencies.

Afterwards, in a march past, the returned soldiers, local regiments, boy scouts, girl guides, Federal and civic police were reviewed by the Governor-General.

CONGRATULATIONS RECEIVED.

OTTAWA, July 3.—The following messages of congratulation on the event of the jubilee of confederation have been received on behalf of Canada by the Governor-General.

From Premier Lloyd George:

"Fifty years ago the statesmen of all provinces of Canada gathered in convention in Quebec to work out the basis of a federal union. From that act of statemanship the Dominion of Canada was born. Confederation has done much for Canada. It has enabled the Canadian people to attain to internal unity and self-government and to achieve the beneficent development of the resources of their country.

"It has done no less for the Empire. It has made Canada the pioneer of that autonomous nationhood which is the unique characteristic of our commonwealth of nations, and it has had its logical outcome in the imperishable record which the army of Canada has made on the battlefields of Flanders in the cause of human freedom. The history of the past fifty years is, indeed, a certain proof of the part which Canada is destined to play in concert with her sister nations in promoting the peace and unity of the world after victory has been won."

The following is from Right Hon. Walter Long:—

"Please convey to your Government and the people of Canada my heartfelt congratulations on the fiftieth anniversary of the Dominion. The progress made by Canada since federation is striking evidence of the wisdom and foresight of the statesmen who brought the Dominion into being and justifies the most sanguine hopes for its future prosperity and greatness."

TORONTO'S CELEBRATION.

TORONTO, July 3.—Toronto celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of confederation yesterday by a great parade, in which the Toronto garrison, troops from Camp Borden, the sailors of the Niobe, the Great War Veterans, and veterans of other wars, public school cadets and boy scouts took part, and by several patriotic addresses, delivered by prominent men, at the exhibition grounds, whither the parade proceeded. A feature which afforded great interest to the many thousands who lined the route was the presence of twelve airplanes from Camp Borden, which gave an exhibition of high flying and later descended low, as they circled over the city.

The speakers at the exhibition grounds all struck the patriotic keynote and emphasized the need of Canada doing her bit in the war to the end.

Sir Mortimer Clark, who presided in the absence of the Lieut.-Governor said: "We must maintain intact the great privileges and blessings of our time."

Sir William Hearst urged a renewal of the pledge to support Canada's soldiers with reinforcements, and to maintain at home a national spirit worthy of those heroes.

Mr. N. W. Rowell said: "Let us dedicate ourselves anew to the flag which has protected us all our days and to the cause of liberty for which so many of our gallant sons have died."

The principles on which confederation was based, said Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University of Toronto, were being endangered on the battlefields of France; it was there that they must be maintained.

Mayor Church deprecated the attitude of a small section at Ottawa, who were thinking too much of what was good for their party, while men were dying by thousands in France.

Another feature of the day's celebration was the fifteenth annual open-air horse show and parade, which was generally pronounced to be the best the city has ever witnessed in point of quality, although the entries were somewhat fewer than last year.

ELDER DEMPSTER LINER SENDS HUN U-BOAT TO BOTTOM

Special to The Star by United Press.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 3.—How the Elder Dempster liner Akabo on Friday evening, June 14, sank one out of four German submarines in a running fight of five or six hours, was told by passengers from England today on their arrival here.

The big liner evaded all the German attempts at firing torpedoes as well as gun-fire. One of the Akabo's shots carried away a submarine's periscope and then one following struck the hull of the U-boat. There was a big explosion and the submarine went down.

The three remaining submarines pursued the liner until dawn, when British patrol boats beat them off.

The passengers also told of the torpedoing of the Cunard liner Ausonia. All aboard were saved and the vessel itself was towed into port. The Ausonia is a steel vessel of 8,153 tons. Passengers on another ship told of a thrilling fight in which a destroyer, a submarine chaser and an airplane drove off and probably sank a submarine.

The battle ended, when following a hail of shells from the destroyer, the airplane dropped two bombs on the submarine.

DYING IN STREETS OF HUNGER.

STOCKHOLM, July 3.—Three Poles now in Stockholm, M. Scheko, formerly a member of the Russian Upper House, M. M. Sobieski and Sobanski, have issued an appeal for aid for the Poles of Warsaw. Their appeal says people are dying in the streets of hunger. The Associated Press is informed from other sources as well, that conditions elsewhere in Polana are equally grave, being particularly serious in Lodz.

MUCH FOOD GETS INTO GERMANY BY SCANDINAVIA

Holland, Norway and Sweden Back Doors for German Supplies

WASHINGTON, July 3. — With action by the newly created Exports Council imminent, the publication of figures purporting to show the vast quantities of foodstuffs entering Germany through Holland and Scandinavian countries has caused something of a stir in the embassies of the neutrals.

It has been reported here for several days that the diplomatic representatives of the neutral countries have been endeavoring to have President Wilson soften the terms of his first embargo decreee, and that a thorough consideration of the facts they have presented has been one of the reasons for temporarily withholding the executive proclamation.

On the other hand, other interests have been urging upon the President that drastic steps should be taken to end the system by which German soldiers are being fed through producing products of neutral countries dependent upon the imports from America.

Wires were busy all yesterday as a result of the prominence given to the figures obtained from an official source, showing that sufficient food was obtained from Holland and Scandinavia to supply the entire German army at the front. It was taken as an indication that definite steps were contemplated by this Government which would end such a practice, a step for which the neutrals might well adjust their affairs and prepare.

From an official high in the Netherlands Legation, it was learned today that figures have been presented to President Wilson intending to show that Holland has sent but twenty-five per cent. of her exports to Germany. The other seventy-five per cent. is going to England. This twenty-five per cent is virtually being forced by Germany, it was said, in order to permit Holland to maintain an existence.

WHAT BERLIN THREATENED.

"You have already cut your normal shipments to us." is in effect the message sent from Germany to Holland. "Is it the neutrality of which you talk to refuse our offers to business altogether? If you refuse what we want, you will get none of our coal."

Chevalier Van Rappard, Netherlands Minister at Washington, would not discuss the details of the present situation. He consented, however, to tell of the difficulties of his country in preserving neutrality.

"My country," he said, "cannot be forced into this war by economic pressure. But let one soldier of either side set foot on Dutch soil, and it will be shown that Holland can fight again against overwhelming odds, can fight a whole century for her liberties, as she has done before.

"Ours has been a most tremendous burden. Our people are living now on reduced rations. The Dutch workman gets but a pitiful allowance of bread. Besides, we are feeding a million refugee Belgians. More, when the Belgian Commission ran short of grain a while ago, Holland let them have 70,000 bushels of the grain she herself needed so badly.

"Yes, it is true that the imports of Holland from the United States have increased since the war. But our imports as a whole have been reduced almost forty per cent. We got most of our grain before the war, from Rumania and from Russia. Both those sources are closed to us now. Of course, our imports from you have increased, but that has not meant an abnormal supply for us.

DENIES ILLICIT TRADE.

"It is ridiculous to talk of a huge illicit trade with Germany. Every newspaper that I get from home tells of one or two poor devils shot while trying to run the border guards. The border is so guarded that no considerable business could be got across it.

"Of course, we do some trade with Germany, but it is only one-third of the exports we make to England.

"Once more I want to say," M. Van Rappard concluded with emphasis, "Holland cannot be forced into this war by economic pressure. If we must suffer privation, well, we know how to do it. We will not fight unless we are attacked. It is all very well for some persons who say that: they are three thousand miles from the war. It is at our very doors. We are bearing the burden of maintaining a half million men under arms, and millions of refugees in a country that is not self-supporting. But we will not be the first to make an attack at arms.

CHILD SCALDED.

Bessie Goldberg, aged 2 years, of 1464 Marquette street, was admitted to the General Hospital yesterday, suffering from severe scalds received at her home, when she pulled a pan of boiling water from the stove. Her condition is critical.

PREPARING FOR GREAT LOTTERY FOR U. S. DRAFT

Special to The Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Every energy of the Provost-Marshal-General's office turned today toward finishing the multitude of preparation for the huma lottery of the draft within two weeks. As the first move, telegrams were sent out today to each board to rush their organization and complete their preliminary duties by next Saturday, July 7. By that time, Gen. Crowder hopes to have every one of the 9,700,000 registration cards designated with their "key" numbers and copies in the Capital. With this tremendous task finished, everything is ready for the lottery of men.

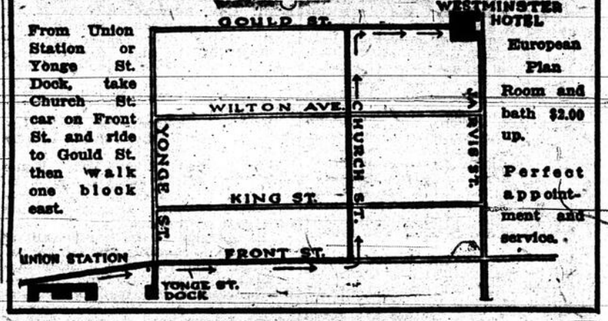

The stage is being set for the drawing in Washington. In an office of the War Department the numbers will be chosen at random. As each number is pulled out it will be flashed by telegraph to every local board in the country. Each number drawn will indicate about 4,590 men—the men assigned that number in each specified precinct in each state.

With the exception of New York City, all of the local exemption boards are appointed. Many of them are organized and ready for duty. They are ordered to give each registration card a serial number, irrespective of alphabetical order. These names and numbers will be posted publicly and published in the press. A copy must be sent to the War Department in Washington and the Adjutant General of the state.

Meantime nominations are coming in for the district of appellate boards of exemption. The greatest care is being taken with these appointments as they have the most difficult task of the draft-exemption for occpational grounds and review of appeals.

The quotas of men that each state must furnish for the armies is being figured by the Provost-Marshal-General's office. To aid in the fair apportionment, Gen. Crowder called upon the census bureau for a set of revised estimates of the states population.

Buy According to Food Values!

"If we do not economize in food stuffs we stand a grave chance of losing the war."
Herbert C. Hoover, ex-Chairman of the Belgian Relief Commission.

WHEN you have nothing else to do with your money, it may be alright to spend it on extravagant food and out-of-season delicacies. But now—in this critical year of the war—there are more important uses for it!

Save it by purchasing economically—and to do this, study food values. You will be surprised to know how extravagant some supposedly cheap foods are, and how some that seem high are really more economical. These true values are brought out clearly in a new National Service pamphlet, "How to Live in War Time," which we will gladly send you on request.

Under present conditions careless buying is worse than wasteful. It encourages still higher prices, and makes conditions harder yet for the less fortunate who are already feeling the pinch.

Buy carefully for their sake—for your own sake—and for your country! Canada needs every dollar you can save and invest in Canadian War Savings Certificates. Buy these certificates at any Bank or Money Order Post Office, at $21.50, $43 or $86. In three years you will get back $25, $50 or $100, respectively—which means over 5% interest. Or you can get your money back at any time you need it.

WAR MINISTER LEADS RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE AGAINST AUSTRIANS

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, July 3.—The brilliant Russian advance, the news of which has sent a wave of rejoicing through the entire country, was led by the War Minister, M. Kerensky, in person.

For the last four days the War Minister has been continuously at the front, spending every effort to urge the troops to advance. He finally rode to the front line trenches, and, placing himself at the head of the troops, gave the order to advance.

The spectacle of the popular War Minister on the firing line accomplished what oratory had failed to do, and the Russian revolutionary army resumed the ofensive on July 1. In his message to the Premier, the War Minister says:

"On July 1 the army of revolutionary Russia took the offensive, with great enthusiasm. The ofensive proved to Russia and the entire world its fidelity to the revolution and its love for liberty and its country. Ignoring the small groups of cowardly souls, the free Russian soldiers are consolidating by their offensive a new discipline based on the sentiment of civic duty.

"Whateven may happen, this puts an end to all slanderous attacks against the democratic Russian army. I beg of you to authorize me to hand to the regiments which participated in the fighting on July 1 red revolutionary flags, and to give them the name 'Regiments July first.'"

Premier Lvoff granted the requests.

APPEALS TO THE ARMY.

The commander of the armies on the western front has issued an order of the day reading:

"Our army on the southwestern front has vanquished the enemy and broken his lines. A decisive battle has begun on which depends the fate of the liberty of the Russian people. Our brothers on the southwestern front are advancing victoriously. They expect assistance from us. We shall not be traitors; the enemy shall hear the thunder of our guns."

Kerensky has issued an appeal to the Russian armies to take the offensive. He says that Austria and Germany have replied to Russia's appeal to all democracies in favor of peace by the dishonorable proposal that Russia should conclude a separate peace which enable them to crush Russia's western allies. On Russia's rejection of the proposal, the enemy, says the War Minister, threatened an offensive against Russia, and the freedom of the country and the revolution itself were in danger. The appeal concludes:

"Every day's delay strengthens the enemy. That is why we appeal to our armies to take the offensive. Let all the world know that it was not from weakness that we talked of peace. Let it be known that liberty increases our military strength. All Russia will bless your exploits in behalf of liberty, your country's future and an honorable and lasting peace."

OVER 10,000 PRISONERS.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—Prisoners exceeding 10,000 and the capture of the village of Koniuchy and strongly fortified positions southwest of Brzesany are the first fruits of the new offensive movement of the Russian forces in Eastern Galicia.

North of Koniuchy the Russians have attacked and fresh battles are in progress.

The Russian artillery, long inactive from lack of shells, played an important part in the defeat of the Austro-Germans at Koniuchy. For two days a rain of iron was thrown into the German positions, and Berlin says officially that they were turned into a crater field. The Russians not only carried three lines of German trenches and Koniuchy, which was strongly fortified, but also advanced to the Koniuchy stream south of the village, which is on the Zlota Lipa river.

Around Brzesany the fighting was most bitter, and Berlin claims that sixteen Russian divisions were thrown forward. The Russians carried the fortified Teuton positions at several points in face of a desperate resistance by Austrian, German and Turkish troops.

GOOD NEWS FOR BRITAIN.

The resumption of the Russian offensive is the most cheerful news the British have had for some weeks. References in recent German official communications to the activity of the Russians have given hope that something really serious was about to occur, but the public was hardly prepared for such immediate and successful results, as it was thought it would take a few days for the artillery to destroy the Austro-German defences which were under construction for so many months.

The scene for the Russian success, between the Stripa and Zlota Lipa rivers was the battle ground of much hard fighting after General Brussiloff's offensive a year ago, Koniuchy being on the latter river.

This like the other demonstrations, is in the direction of Lemberg, the greatest strategic and political importance. General Brussiloff apparently has resumed his concentric manoeuvre which was interrupted by the advent of winter and then by the revolution.

OFFICIAL RUSSIAN REPORT.

PETROGRAD, July 3. — The Russian official announcement today says that the Russian have advanced to the Koniuchy stream and also have captured seven heavy guns. Teuton prisoners continue to be brought in. The official announcement reads as follows:

"Western (Russian) front—In the direction of Kovel (Volhynia), in the region of Rudkasaitovichskaya, our scouts under command of four officers, after destroying the wire entanglements of mines, penetrated the enemy's trenches, killed some of their occupants and captured a number of prisoners. According to the testimony of prisoners, the Austrians knew of our attack from two deserters, Senior Non-commissioned Officer Karsokin and Private Kolotuinov. An investigation is being made by the authorities of the governments to which the soldiers named belonged.

"In the direction of Ziochoff, after two days' artillery preparation, our troops attacked the Austro-German positions on the Koniuchy-Byshki front. After a severe engagement, they occupied three lines of trenches and the fortified village of Koniuchy, and advanced to the Koniuchy stream to the south of the village of the same name.

"As a result of the engagement on Sunday, 164 officers and 8,400 soldiers have been counted so far as prisoners. We also took seven guns and seven machine guns. Prisoners continue to come in.

"Southwest of Brzezany, after artillery preparation, our troops attacked the strongly-fortified positions of the enemy, and after stubborn fighting occupied them at places. Germans and Turks made counter-attacks, and formidable positions changed hands constantly.

"On Sunday we captured on this front nine officers and 1,700 Germans, Austrians and Turks. Some of our detachments sustained severe losses, especially of officers.

"Altogether on Sunday we took 173 officers and more than 10,000 soldiers. We also captured seven guns and seven machine guns.

BRITISH OUTPOSTS RETIRE.

LONDON, July 3.—"As the result of hard fighting west of Lens yesterday and today, our advanced posts have been driven back a short distance," says the official report from British Headquarters in France, issued last night.

"There is nothing further to report, except considerable artillery activity by both sides at numerous points along the front."

FRENCH GUNS ARE ACTIVE.

PARIS, July 3.—The official statement, issued by the War Office last night, reads:

"During the day, both artilleries maintained very great activity in the sectors to the west and east of Cerny. No infantry action took place. Intermittent cannonading occurred north of St. Quentin and on the California Plateau. Everywhere else the day has been quiet.

"The Belgian communication reads: An enemy detachment attempted to reach our trenches to the south of Het Sas, but was repulsed with losses. During the day the artillery firing has been especially violent in the region of Dixmude, Steenstraete and Het Sas."

"Army of the East, July 1 and 2.—Patrol fighting took place on the Struma front. The enemy artillery has been more active in the regions of Lake Doiran and Hournie. It has been quiet on the rest of the front."

VERDUN ATTACK EXPLAINED.

LONDON, July 3, via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.—Telegraphing today from French headquarters, Reuter's correspondent says that the sudden return of the enemy to the offensive on the Chemin-des-Dames and on the left bank of the Meuse is probably to be explained by the German Government's need of victories, or rather local successes which can be magnified into victories, to offset the substantial gains of the Anglo-French offensives.

At the moment when the inspired press of the Fatherland is endeavoring to explain away the latest British successes in Flanders, and knowing that more must come requiring further explanation, and also knowing that the fact that the vanguard of the American army is already on French soil is spreading among the German army and the people, the High Command feels that something must be done to counterbalance the effect of all this.

In any event there is not yet any indication that a more serious intention lies behind the sudden resumption of activity.

Both in the Mort Homme and the Cerny sector, the enemy in the event of success stands to win important local advantages, notably in the latter, where he would regain at least a portion of the observatory line on the Chemin-des-Dames crest to retain which he fought so hard.

By the operations of yesterday and today, the enemy regained a very insecure footing on the crest about a mile west of the Dragon's Den, from which he was expelled last Monday.

The small gains the enemy hitherto secured were obtained by means which either side can employ at will, and which, of course, result in temporary advantage to the side which secures them.

It is a case of heavy concentration of artillery against a narrow front, followed by an infantry attack. The value of such acquisitions lies solely in the power to retain them, and the enemy has not yet been shown to possess this power. Hitherto he has been merely able to annex narrow belts of front without depth.

If he is counting in the slightest degree on the decline of fighting spirit in the French army to exploit these gains, he is counting without his host.

AUSTRIAN ATTACKS FAIL.

ROME, July 3.—Austrian troops last night made unsuccessful attempts against the Italian positions between Lake Garda and the Ledro valley, in the southwestern Trentino, according to the official statement issued by the War Office yesterday. The statement reads:

"During the night, the enemy was particularly active between Lake Garda and the Ledro valley. After violent artillery preparation, an enemy detachment numbering not less than two companies, attacked the line of our outposts between San Giovanni and Biacesa (south of Riva) but were stopped and driven back with considerable loss.

"At the same time other hostile parties attacked our outposts in the same sector north of Malga Giumella and northeast of Messolago, but they were stopped by the vigilance of our troops before reaching our lines. The artillery struggle continued active yesterday in the area between Lake Garda and the Adige.

"At several other points on the front, and particularly the head of the Zebach and in the neighborhood of San Lucia Tolmino, we repeatedly and successfully shelled enemy troops assembled and in movement. On the Mrzli a big enemy mine was exploded without altering our position and causing only slight damage.

"Albania—A well-executed attack by one of our armed Albanian bands on June 30 destroyed a small enemy post near Pantaret on the Upper Osum river. Some Austrian regulars were captured, and the attack caused great alarm within the enemy lines."

GERMAN OFFICIAL REPORT.

BERLIN, July 2, via London, July 3. — The German official statement issued today says that the Galician village of Koniuchy was lost yesterday to the Russians, but that the Russian mass attack was "caught up in a barring position." A fresh Russian attack against this position, the statement adds, was frustrated. The German General Staff says the Russian losses surpassed any hitherto known. Some Russian units, it reports, were entirely dispersed. The statement follows:

"Army group of Prince Leopold — The Russian attack Sunday between the Upper Stripa and the eastern bank of the Narayuvka led to heavy fighting. The pressure of the Russians was directed chiefly against the Koniuchy sector and the lines to the east and south of Brzesany.

"An exceedingly strong artillery preparation, which lasted two days, turned our positions into a crater field, against which the enemy regiments stormed throughout the day. The village of Koniuchy was lost.

"The Russian mass attack was caught in a prepared barring position, and a fresh attack against this barring position was frustrated. The fighting was especially bitter on both sides of Brzesany.

"Sixteen Russian divisions, constantly employing fresh troops, assaulted our positions there, which were completely maintained or recaptured by counter-attacks by Saxon, Rhineland and Ottoman division, their brave defence swaying the battle. The Russian losses surpassed any measure hitherto known. Some units have been entirely dispersed.

"Along the Stokhod and on the Dniester, the lively attack of the enemy broke down before the front of an Austro-Hungarian division.

"Western theatre of war—Only in a few sectors between the sea and the Somme did the artillery battle increase. While reconnoitering advances of the British to the east of Nieuport, at Gavrelle and to the northwest of St. Quentin failed, some of our shock troops succeeded on the Yser lowlands, north of Dixmude, in inflicting considerable losses on the enemy by a surprise attack, and captured a large number of Belgian prisoners.

"Early this morning and again in the afternoon, the British attacked to the west of Lens. At a few points they penetrated our line, but were repulsed everywhere by our Upper Silesian regiments in hand-to-hand engagements, in which over 175 prisoners and 17 machine guns were captured by us.

"Army group of the German Crown Prince— After strong artillery preparation, the French delivered fresh attacks on the Chemin-des-Dames against the trenches they had lost south of Bovrelle farm. All the assaults of the enemy were defeated in engagements which were especially bitter on the eastern slope of the plateau.

"Army group of Grand Duke Albrecht—There was nothing of importance.

"Macedonian front—Unchanged."

The supplementary official statement from General Headquarters, issued this evening, says:

"There is nothing new to report in the east. At Koniuchy, the Russian attacks broke down.

"Further north, fresh battles have developed."

AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL REPORT.

VIENNA, July 2, via London, July 3.—The official communication from General Headquarters, issued today, reads:

"Between the Narayuvka and Stripa rivers, the enemy yesterday threw dense infantry masses into the battle in his usual reckless way, indifferent to the heavy losses which our artillery had already inflicted on him. He pushed his assaulting waves into hand-to-hand conflicts, continuously employing close masses of reserves. At least twenty infantry divisions gradually came to grips with our troops.

"On the whole of a fifty kilometre fighting front, an infantry battle raged with utmost violence and bitterness. During these engagements, the enemy was for the greater part repulsed before our first line trenches.

"The heaviest massed attacks were directed against the region south of Brzesany and at Koniuchy, where the Russians were repulsed in our barring positions. All the enemy attacks were rejected including those made today to push forward in these regions. The enemy suffered exceedingly heavy losses.

"West of Zborow and in the Stokhod salient attacks sarted by the enemy failed before our artillery fire. A continuance of the battle may be expected.

"On the other sectors of the front, the artillery fire revived temporarily.

"Italian front—Apart from an operation by Austrian Landsturm troops west of Riva, during which sixteen Alpine soldiers were brought back from enemy trenches, there is nothing of importance to report."

TURKS' LATEST CLAIMS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sunday, July 1, via Amsterdam to London, July 3. —An official statement issued by the Turkish War Office today says:

"Caucasus front—There was only insignificant artillery firing and patrol activity. An enemy airplane was brought down behind our lines and the pilot and observer made prisoners. There is nothing else of importance to report.

LURING GERMANY.

German Paper Sees Artfulness Employed in Lloyd George's Speech

VIENNA, July 3, via Amsterdam. —Commenting on the peace speech, made recently at Glasgow by Premier Lloyd George, the Neue Freie Presse says:

"The speech of the British Premier is different from his former ones because he for the first time shows the world an outline of his peace aims, namely, peace by understanding. The importance of the speech is that it is the first attempt made to sound Germany and Austria though it is not without that artfulness which is Lloyd George's second nature.

"Germany is to be lured with the prospect of regaining her colonies if she renounces her greatest creation —her fruitful labor in Asia Minor— and accepts separation from Turkey politically and economically."

CALLS QUEBEC A DRAWBACK TO REST OF CANADA

A hit at those in Quebec who demand a referendum on Conscription was made by W. Davis, Grand Secretary, in his report at the 43rd annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Quebec of the International Order of Good Templars yesterday.

"Here in Quebec the people have been refused the privilege of saying whether or not they desired prohibition," he said, "refused it by the self-same political party, which refused prohibition to the Dominion when by a referendum the people demanded prohibition. Had Quebec politicians granted our request in this matter their present position in demanding a referendum on another important question would be more easily understood and appreciated.

"The situation in this city and province is most discouraging," he continued. "Large stocks of liquor have been dumped into Montreal from adjoining dry territory east and west and held here by bogus and other companies for shipment into the very territory from which it originated. The express companies are doing a bumper business in the liquor shipping business and in this way the advantage of prohibition in the adjoining provinces is largely nullified. I trust that this Grand Lodge will take a decisive stand on this matter and endeavor to arouse the Dominion Parliament to take such action as will end this traffic throughout the whole Dominion and not leave it in the power of any one province to contaminate the whole Dominion.

TOO MUCH HARD WORK.

"The situation in Quebec is encouraging in so far as success at the county and town prohibition fights is concerned, the drys winning in most every case, but it is too slow a method of ending the business and entails too much hard work. The present need is an immediate remedy and that can be found only in national prohibition. Other remedies are only make-shifts, as our present experience shows. The Government during the past winter urged the curtailment of passenger train services in order that war material, etc., might move more freely; why should the liquor traffice have been permitted to encumber the commerce of the country while some people were unable to obtain sufficient fuel to keep their homes comfortable? In some cases public buildings were closed up owing to the lack of fuel; we did not hear of any breweries closing down because of their inability to ship ther produce.

J. H. Roberts, Grand Councillor, presided in the absence through illness of W. H. Lambly, Grand Chief Templar.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Grand Chief Templar, W. H. Lambly; Grand Counsellor, John H. Roberts; Grand Vice-Templar, Mrs. D. S. Wilkinson; Grand Superintendent of Juvenile Work, A. H. Paterson; Grand Electoral Superintendent, Joseph Sharkie; Grand Superintendent of Temperance Education, N. M. Bloore; Grand Chaplain, Miss Muriel Joss, Lachute; Grand Secretary, William Davis, 14 Oxford avenue, Montreal; Grand Marshal, John Paterson; Grand Treasurer, D. S. Wilkinson; Past Grand Chief Templar, L. McArthur, Lachute.

An earnest lodge-building and membership recruiting campaign was decided on and a resolution adopted demanding prohibition during the war.

WAR PRISONERS

Agreement Reached Between British and Germans

By Canadian Press.

THE HAGUE, July 3.—The War Prisoners' Conference between representatives of Germany and Great Britain held its last sitting yesterday. A protocol was signed, and the points on which an agreement was reached will be submitted to the British and German Governments for confirmation.

RAISE 25,000 MEN HERE, EASY SAYS SEVIGNY

By Canadian Press.

QUEBEC, July 3.—The Hon. Albert Sevigny, Minister of Inland Revenue, interviewed while in Quebec city yesterday evening, said that he will again be a candidate in Dorchester County, and that he will be elected. He forecasted that the vote in the House on the Conscription Bill will be taken by this week-end and passed by a huge majority.

Speaking of his statement that Quebec Province could easily raise 25,000 men through conscription, Mr. Sevigny gave figures on the men each city, town and parish should be called upon to provide.

"Montreal," said he, "with its population of 600,000, should easily contribute 10,000 men; Quebec city with its population of 100,000 should give one thousand men. In the Province of Quebec, we have 1,200 municipalities and if each sent only twelve men, we should have a force of 12,000 men from the rural centres. That would give 23,000 men, and to give the complement of 25,000 men we could call upon towns like Sherbrooke, Hull, Three Rivers, St. Hyacinthe, Levis, Valleyfield, Fraserville, etc."

AMERICANS OF CONSCRIPTION AGE MAY CROSS LINE

Special to The Star.

BOSTON, Mass., July 3. — Word comes from Washington that men of conscription age may leave the country on business, pleasure and wedding trips, provided they have the written permission of the Provost Marshall General.

W. W. Scott, Superintendent of Immigration for Canada, has just covered the Canadian phase of the matter in a letter to an American tourist agency as follows:

"There is no document, passport or any other kind required in the case of tourists or visitors coming to Canada for a temporary purpose, except in the case of those who may be of evident enemy origin. Those born in an enemy country, who claim naturalization in the United States, should carry their naturalization certificates. Those of evident enemy origin, who claim birth in the United States, should carry a birth certificate.

"Citizens and subjects of allied or neutral countries are as free and as welcome to enter and leave Canada as at any time in the past. There is a regulation in Canada at the present time which requires that males between eighteen and forty-five years of age, who are ordinarily resident within Canada, shall not be allowed to leave without getting a permit. The permit is issued as a matter of right on proof of citizenship to citizens of allied or neutral countries. British subjects are given permit to leave as the circumstances warrant.

"You will observe from the above that the regulation has no reference to others than males between the ages mentioned, nor has it any reference to males, Canadians, Americans or others whose residence is in the United States, and who are merely in Canada for a temporary purpose. I think there has been some mistake in the information which has reached you that a nurse has been detained at St. John. We are not detaining any nurses, or women."

WILL REMAIN IN INDIA.

LONDON, July 3.—In the House of Commons yesterday the Government leader, Andrew Bonar Law, gave the assurance that, pending the discussion of the Mesopotamia report, no person censured by the Commission would be promoted to any higher position than he now holds. He added that there was not at the present time, and never had been, any intention of transferring Lord Hardinge, the former Viceroy of India, to the Paris Embassy or to any other diplomatic post.

LT.-COL. TRIHEY DENOUNCED BY ORANGE EDITOR

Special to The Star.

TORONTO, July 3.—"Lieut.-Col. Trihey absolutely lies when he says that all Irish-Canadians are against conscription and enlistment."

This was the refutal given today by H. C. Hocken, editor of the Orange Sentinel, organ of the Loyal Orange Lodge in Canada, to the statement alleged to have been made to the New York Evening Post, by Lt.-Col. Trihey, to the effect that all Irish-Canadians were against conscription and enlistment because Home Rule had not been granted in Ireland, and because the Irish-Canadian Rangers, which he commanded, were split up into drafts overseas.

Mr. Hocken pointed out that the L. O. L. which includes many Irish-Canadians, is strongly in favor of conscription. The question of Home Rule for Ireland was not a factor in the conscription issue in Canada, and the fate of the Irish-Canadians, in being broken up overseas, was the same as that of many other fine Canadian regiments.

The total membership of the Loyal Orange Order in Canada is about 250,000. Eighty thousand members of the Order, and members' sons, have enlisted in the Canadian overseas forces.

JEWS AND PALESTINE

Convention Would Have British Protection of Holy Land

WINNIPEG, July 3.—The sincere sympathy of two great statesmen with the Zionist movement has now been announced since the fifteenth annual convention of the Canadian Zionist Federation opened its sessions Sunday morning.

Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden sent a telegram to the convention yesterday expressing his regret at being unable to attend because of pressing business, and extending to the convention "sincerest good wishes of myself and colleagues."

Hope that Great Britain will make Palestine a protectorate so as to ensure just government, is expressed in a resolution passed unanimously yesterday morning amid wild outbursts of applause.

"Let every stigma rest upon those men who are traitors to Juraism," said President de Sola in moving a resolution protesting against a letter to the London Times sent by members of an Anglo-Jewish organization which opposes Zionism. The letter declared that the Jews do not want Palestine restored to them. The convention passed the protest resolution unanimously.

TO REORGANIZE LACROSSE AT A SPECIAL MEETING

The National Lacrosse Union Schedule will be re-organized at once as forecasted in The Star yesterday.

The Shamrocks will hold a meeting tomorrow and a meeting of all the clubs interested still in the remainder of the season, will be called shortly after by President Lally it is understood.

A three club double schedule, with an amalgamated club from Cornwall and Ottawa players is the most likely solution of the matter at present, according to both National and Shamrock officials.

CORNWALL DISAPPOINTED.

Special to The Star.

CORNWALL, Ont., July 3.—The people of Cornwall and those more closely identified with the management of the Cornwall Lacrosse Club, were greatly disappointed yesterday morning when the announcement was made shortly after 9 o'clock that P. J. Lally, president of the N.L.U., had been warned by The Star there would be no game, and Montreal had afterwards received the following telegram from Charlie Querrie of the Toronto Tecumsehs, relative to the inability of the Indians to put in an appearance for the big Dominion Day match here yesterday afternoon.

"Joe Lally, Cornwall. Only seven players at station to go to Cornwall. Impossible to make trip. Will have to default. It looks as if we were through here, as players will not make trip. What would you suggest for us to do. It does not look very good and I am sorry, but under circumstances could do nothing else. Please notify Cornwall Club. C. L. Querrie, Tecumseh."

In view of the Tecumseh win over the Shamrocks on the Island on Saturday the contents of the above telegram came as a distinct shock to most people, who had anticipated a lively game here this afternoon. While Cornwall players did not count on Fitzgerald and Kalls making the trip to Cornwall, they did not expect a flop from the Islanders so early in the season, though it was common talk among the players that Querrie and his braves would not finish half the season. Cornwall was due to go back to Toronto next Saturday, and it was felt that Querrie would wait until after that gate to throw up the sponge, but he has beaten all calculations by nearly a week. The same thing almost happened on the Ottawa trip on June 9, but on that occasion Querrie had the bare twelve men and they went along and took a six to four defeat from the Ottawas.

MANY DISAPPOINTED.

From an entertaining standpoint the greatest disappointment comes. The weather was ideal for lacrosse yesterday afternoon and the match would have attracted the largest crowd of the season. Cornwall was in confederation attire, every industry and place of business being closed for the day and the big stand would probably have been filled. Dominion Day is one of the days the Cornwalls count on to make both ends meet, and in this respect the coffers of the club will suffer, for it was the best chance the club has had in many a day to secure a big gate, as by mutual agreement, every place in town was closed and the employes given the day. On Saturdays the club has not this portion of the population to draw from. The argument advanced by the Cornwall and Ottawa ends of the N.L.U. early last spring that the league would be better without a Toronto team, would now seem to have been a sensible one, even if other Eastern teams could not see it in that light. Cornwall and Ottawa fought the Tecumseh application for some time, but finally both clubs gave way on receiving a guarantee from the Tecumseh. How well they intend carrying out their promises is now seen. The Tecumseh probably pulled out of a big hole by the Shamrock match on Saturday, and now that they are on the top of the bank, they are going to take no chances on falling into a deeper rut. Their failure to turn up here yesterday has certainly not strengthened the hold lacrosse has on the public and it would seem as though the suggestion from the Shamrocks of an amalgamation of the Ottawa and Cornwall clubs with a newly drawn double schedule for the balance of the season, is the most reasonable way of retaining public interest. While the principal officers of the local club could not be located yesterday afternoon, a few of the players seen were not averse to the idea. If the scheme goes through, matches would be played alternately in Ottawa and Cornwall and the new blood infused should make the game more popular.

It is the firm conviction of those who were closely identified with "Newsy" Lalonde during the early days of the present season that he foresaw the present crisis and it was to overcome these conditions that he made his overtures to the national directors for his release to come back to his native town and endeavor to place a winning team in Cornwall. Newsy's friends as well as his lacrosse opponents will admit that he has foresight enough to see further than his nose and had he been given a little latitude instead of being openly accused of "playing the game from both ends," Nationals, Shamrocks, Cornwall and Ottawa would have been better off today and would not have been carrying any dead timber. Newsy was credited with not being sincere in his proposition, but now that the cat is out of the bag perhaps his sincerity will be more apparent than it was a couple of months ago.

Special to The Star.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 3.—Lacrosse men anticipate immediately big changes in the composition of the National Union. It would not be surprising, in fact, were the league to resolve itself into a two club series between the National and Shamrock teams.

The announcement in yesterday's Star that Tecumsehs had defaulted to Cornwall was the first intimation the Ottawa officers had received of the impending explosion. Referee Mike Cooney, who handled the Ottawa, Montreal game, broached to President Booth and his confreres the suggestion that Ottawa and Cornwall amalgamate and form one strong team. President Booth called a special meeting of the directors for tomorrow night to consider it, but later came news that the Tecumsehs had failed to report at Cornwall. This was of course a surprise in a way though it will be recalled that Ottawas fought at the annual meeting against the admittance of Tecumsehs and preferred to continue the circuit along last year's lines.

MEN CANNOT GET OFF.

The Ottawas themselves have never been able to field strong teams on foreign fields for the reason that the men cannot get off. They are all playing as Amateurs, and cannot be expected to sacrifice their time. Reconcile the Ottawas get more some of the difficulty by signing men for all time lost. This helped some.

However, the Ottawas have had troubles of their own in the operation of an amateur team. Their finances, thanks to the big crowd which turned out to see Nationals play today are in good shape, but several of the veteran players who have been the mainstay of the Ottawa team emphatically declared when questioned as to their view on the amalgamation that they were prepared to drop out. Jack Shea, Clint Benedict, Jimmie Dooley, and one or two others state that they are tired of losing steadily. Evidently they have become discouraged over their long string of defeats. One member of the team, in fact, declared that it would be unfair to Nationals and Shamrocks to continue under present circumstances, and believed that the best purpose could be served by the suspension of the Ottawa franchise until such time as the capital could field a fairly strong team. In any event, the question will be threshed out by the Ottawas tomorrow.

"When we joined the N.L.U. last year," said one of the Ottawa executive officers tonight, "Shamrocks, Nationals, Montreal and Cornwall were then in it. They were not very strong. The unexpected withdrawal of the M.A.A.A. gave Shamrock a grand opening, and they molded their forces into one team that was far too good for us, though we imported a few players. This season we have found it impossible to cope with the National or Shamrocks teams. We can appreciate what Charlie Querrie has been up against.

The suspension of operations by the Ottawa Club would be regretted, and it is felt that if the present effort to revive lacrosse fails the game will be a gone goose in this town. The players, veterans and youngsters, have done their best, but that does not appear to have been good enough. If the Ottawas disband some of their players may figure on the National or Shamrocks clubs.

LONDON, July 3.— At the Stamford Bridge amateur athletic meeting the Canadian artillery won two open relays, Captain Campbell, Gunner Hector Phillips and Private Tressider being prominent.

CRICKET NOTES

The Westmount Cricket Club met Ridley College, St. Catharines, Ont., on Saturday, June 30, at Westmount Park, and received a severe defeat at the hands of the visitors. The Westmount captain won the toss and elected to bat first. With the exception of Anthony who played a nice innings of 35, and Reynolds, who played a careful 14, the rest of the team could do very little against the bowling of the visitors. The innings closed for the small total of 72.

The college boys on going to bat ran up a score of 148, the most notable contributors being Williams, who played a brilliant innings of 47, ably assisted by Irvine 31, Bullen 14, and H. R. Barr, 15. The visitors were equally good in every department of the game, their fielding being exceptionally brilliant. Full score is given below:

NEW YORK, July 3—The weight agreed upon by Leonard and Kilbane for their six round bout at Philadelphia on the night of July 23rd, is 136 pounds at 8 o'clock on the night of the bout. Leonard has been guaranteed $10,000 with an option of thirty-three per cent. of the gross receipts.

This contest will bring into competition the twow boxers who stand out as the most interesting and important performers in the American ring today. In their respective classes they stand out prominently, and this is especially true of the featherweight champion. Kilbane of late years has encountered such difficulty in securing bouts with legitimate featherweights that he has found it necessary to engage boxers weighing considerably more than himself.

To the featherweight champion the contest will mean more than any other in which he has participated since annexing the crown. If succesful in scoring a knockout over Leonard, Kilbane will have the distinction of holding two titles at the same time. He is considered to be more clever than the local boy, and his wider range of experience gives him an advantage.

For Leonard there is everything to lose and nothing to gain, for even if he should score a knockout over Kilbane, which is only a remote possibility, he would not benefit by his performance, for he would be unable to make the required weight to defend the featherweight championship. The bout, on the, whole, shapes up as one of the best of recent years, despite the fact that it is only for six rounds for the principals are conceded to be the clevereest and best all round boxers in the ring today.

IN Brooklyn they say the war has caused a 10 per cent. decrease in attendance. Beats all how many things they can find to blame on the war.

OTTAWA WENT WELL AT START THEN FELL DOWN

Special to The Star.

OTTAWA, July 3.—The Ottawa Lacrosse Club's champion hopes received a severe set-back yesterday when the Nationals, after overcoming a four goal lead trounced the locals in becoming style in the N. L. U. fixture at Lansdowne Park by the score of 16 to 7. The biggest crowd of the season turned out to greet the Flying Frenchmen over three thousand five hundred passing through the gates. After the first period the Senators were never in it with Newsy Lalonde and his Purple Shirts. Injuries and penalties gave the Nationals the odd man through almost the entire game and the visitors were not lax in taking advantage of it. Both Referee Jack Marshall and Judge of Play Mike Cooney were very strict and the Ottawas suffered thereby.

A SPLENDID ONE.

However the match was a splendid one from a spectators' point of view. In the first period both sides played brilliantly, and although it looked like a walk-away for the Senators the comeback of the Nationals in the succeeding quarters easily gave them the decision as the better team. After the initial session the visitors outplayed the Senators in all departments, Lalonde, Pitre, Boulliane and Lamoureux playing stellar lacrosse. Tommy Gorman was easily the most valuable man on the Ottawa team, although Jimmy Dooley, Cecil Duncan and Jack Shea acquitted themselves well. Gorman tackled on the first three for Ottawa and Spring made it four. "Une" Lamoureux got the only one for the Nationals in that period. In the second the Nationals scored seven to the Ottawas one, and followed up in the third by running in five straight before another Ottawa man tallied. The final session was featured by considerable rough play.

This dog, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Randall, 17 Third avenue, Maisonneuve, is particularly well known to followers of soccer. At the Caledonian games a week ago this dog collected $8.49 for the Red Cross. His collections now amount to nearly seventy dollars since the third week in March last.

Charlie Querrie Wires Open Letter to Star Explaining His Unfortunate Position in Lacrosse

Special to The Star.

TORONTO, July 3.—Charlie Querrie, the veteran lacrosse player addressed the following open letter to The Montreal Star today in reference to the default of the game at Cornwall. The Tecumsehs' chief is disgusted with the way the players turned him down after all the trouble he and a few others had gone to, to try and revive the game in Toronto. The following is the despatch.

"Believing that the Tecumsehs' lacrosse club owe some explanation to the public in reference to their failure to go to Cornwall yesterday, I am writing you with reference to our inability to secure a team to play at Cornwall.

"This spring a number of lacrosse players asked me to try and secure a franchise in the N. L. U. and after securing the assistance of Mr. Fred Thompson and a few other lacrosse enthusiasts, we decided to enter a club, with the assurance from about twenty or more players that they were willing to play the game for the fun of it. We started all right and had fifteen players out at practice, and plenty of them to play at home. When we went to Ottawa a couple of weeks ago we had trouble in securing a team, but managed to secure a dozen men. Saturday, after defeating Shamrocks in one of the best games of the year, several of the players failed to come to the station, and we could only muster about eight players and several of these were juniors. Nearly every day, first one and then another of the local experts decided to quit and we had to secure the assistance of Fitzgerald and Kalls to make up a team to play Shamrocks. Mr. Thompson, the president and Messrs. Hambly and Forsythe of the executive worked hard to give the boys a chance to bring the game back again, and on behalf of them and myself we wish to state our position clearly.

"Barnett, Whitehead, McKenzie, Braden, Spellen, and Torpey are about the only ones of the squad who have attended practice regularly, and were ready to go to Cornwall.

"So far as I am concerned, personally, I feel our position keenly, as this is the first time in their long career that the Tecumseh Lacrosse Club ever forfeited a game and it will be many years before the players will ever have another chance to figure in the big league lacrosse. I am absolutely through and my only regret in a long career as a lacrosse player is that I was forced to cancel a game and leave Cornwall without a game on the holiday.

"(Signed) C. L. QUERRIE,

"Secretary Tecumseh Lacrosse Club."

LIEUT. "JIMMY" C. LITHGOW WANTS MORE MEN TO JOIN

Special to The Star.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 3. — Lieut. James C. Lithgow, so well known to Montreal followers of amateur sport, is now "somewhere in France" with a Nova Scotia battalion. In a letter he makes an appeal for recruits among the athletes, in which he says:

"I wish I could impress on so many boys who have come under my notice during the last fifteen years in the various sports that they should enlist at once, and come over among their friends.

"I have always recognized the seriousness of this war, and it is not fair to the ones who stay at home to have their friends, who have one, two and more gold bars for being wounded to be sent to Blighty, and then later to the 26th Reserve Batt., to recuperate and do some more training, and then come over here again to once more do their bit.

"Come on boys, your friends want you to give them a badly needed rest, and they cannot get it unless you come.

"We had a Heiney (Hun Air Craft) come over this camp last night and give us an exhibition of what he could do. He dropped some bombs, sounding a couple of men in the next lines, and dropped one on our parade ground. It was quite interesting watching him through my glasses, and seeing our air guns and craft trying to get him; they got him some time afterwards.

"We anticipate a happy time for a while in June, and I am very thankful that I am here to help to make it a bit pleasant for our boys; after that, we will be at the Huns again.

"Come over boys and give us a hand to drive the Huns from this beautiful France, and by doing that you must remember you are fighting for the whole British Empire."

C.P.R. RECREATIONS

The Canadian Pacific Recreation Club had an enjoyable field day at their beautiful grounds, Sortin, yesterday. The program included tennis, baseball, football, field sports and other enjoyable items. Lieut.-Colonel F. L. Lydon and the Highland Cadets were present. The Cadets gave an excellent exhibition of drill and marching to the music of the Cadets' own pipers band. There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen, and all exhibited a keen appreciation of the outing. Sir George and Lady Drury were present, and Sir George was highly pleased during his inspection of the grounds. The tennis courts are now in perfect order. The baseball and football arenas are no less inviting to players of these games. In the evening some of the members took part in a dance in the club house. Music and song were also features of conclusion of the day.

BARRY'S SECOND STRING PITCHERS STOOD THE TEST

Special to The Star by H. C. Hamilton, United Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 3.—A comprehensive slant at the standing of the Major league clubs today proves beyond question that the White Sox have pitfied in their desire to sew things up in the American League. Likewise, it is fully as evident that the Giants are some distance from having things cinched in the National. Leering at the White Sox from second place, held tightly in spite of what had been expected to be a rough brush with the Yankees, stand the Red Sox. They're there mainly because Jack Barry, in his endeavor to hold his head up while Babe Ruth was taking a vacation, found out that he has a very capable young south paw named Pennock and that George Foster is far from being ready for the waivers.

Barry, having discovered he has a secondary defence, will bear more watching than he has been given to date.

The Red Sox are working in up to their eyes in a short time. After they wind up a serious opening today with the Athletics, they will hie into the West to meet every club in that end of the Czar Johnson's domain. Proved a good road club, they are bound to make things decidedly uncomfortable. The White Sox, however, will be at home for practically the same stretch. If they intend showing any quantity of dust to their pursuers now is their time to be up and doing.

Apparently things have tapered off in the National League to a struggle between the Phillies and the Giants. Both clubs are in excellent condition for a drive. Slightly less brilliant than the Giants, but carrying a threatening punch the Phillies promise formidable opposition right up to the final stages of the campaign.

With the season virtually half gone two clubs in each league should supply the fireworks the rest of the summer—Phillies and Giants in the National, White Sox and Red Sox in the American. The miracle of the Braves sticks close to memory, but it is hardly probable any club will do any such performing this year.

COBB HITTING

Hit Safely in His Thirty-First Consecutive Game Yesterday

Ty Cobb today has a stretch of only nine games remaining ahead of him in which to hit safely to equal his major league record of walloping out at least one hit in forty consecutive battles. Ty connected in his thirty-first game yesterday.

SCOTLAND WON THE INTERNATIONAL BY SCORE OF 2-1

Scotland won the senior international, yesterday afternoon, defeating England on Grand Trunks' ground after a most interesting exhibition, by 2 to 1. And the best side won. The gate exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine First Division supporter, for a thousand spectators represents money, and the treasurer was gladdened thereby. Several changes had to be made, Duff, Streetly and McKay, crying off for injuries received Saturday. Nevertheless two good elevens faced each other, and under referee Dick Walker, lined up as follows:

Scotland: Orr, Rae, McDonald, Alexander, Menary, Worsley, Cochran, Baillie, Reid, McLeish and Sellars.

England: Harper, Charlesworth, Emery, Hill, Wright, Watkins, Reynolds, Payne, Taylor, Stott and Jones.

Stott won toss, and for some reason or other decided to face the wind England had the best of the first exchanges, Taylor and Payne causing Orr to save. Then the Scots steadied themselves, and went for Harper. McLeish had a try and just missed. Harper got rid of Sellars effort. The Scots were showing the neater footwork, and for a time Dick Emery was "wobberly." Wright started out a master, and finished one, but he could not prevent the ball passing out to Cochran of Verdun, who scored with a shot at the speed of the "Overland Limited." The play was worth the goal. England often got away but Stott was robbed many times. Both sides indulged in fancy stunts, such as letting the ball pass between the legs to a partner. Sometimes it came off, sometimes, not. Considering that nationality ran rampant, good feeling was excellent allround. England rushed up, and Stott catching the ball on his head, bowed it nicely to Watkins toes, and the latter equalized with a shot that Orr misjudged Score Scotland 1; England, 1. And so it remained at half-time.

The heat necessitated reasonable delay in resuming but the Scots forged ahead and luck only saved Harper whose clearances were often weak and lacked seeming confidence. From a visit towards Orr, one of the Scots' backs handled. Stott took the penalty kick, and shot right into Orr's hands, the latter saving brilliantly. Stott came again with a back heeler, but Orr was there, also Adam Rae and Macdonald. England now did their best work, and deserved a score Jones was repeatedly prominent with good left wing work, and Watkins with an open goal headed over. But on the run of it the Scots were showing better football.

Sellers was allowed too much time to steady himself and centre the ball, Baillie met the pass and made the score.

Scotland, 2; England, 1.

Stott was now at his very best, and used all his arts to beat Orr, but Johnny denied, no matter the speed or angle. Both sides missed chances but nothing further could be accomplished in the scoring line, a clever clean game ending, Scotland, 2; England, 1.

The Second Division's International was a very poor affair, several players failing to arrive. The Englishmen won, 6-1.

In Junior circles, Scotland defeated Ireland.

OLD MANAGER DEAD

Al Buckenburger, Veteran Ball Player, Dead in Syracuse

Special to The Star.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., July 3. — "Al" Buckenburger prominent in professional baseball circles a decade ago, died here last night. He had been manager of the Syracuse, Rochester clubs in the old Eastern League and also was at the head of the Boston, St. Louis and Pittsburg National League Clubs.

Buckenburger also managed the Toronto Club years ago when they played over the Don.

GOVT. MAY NOT LET BOWIE MACHINES BE USED AGAIN

KING EDWARD PK. WILL START TO GET HORSES TOMORROW

With the opening of the meeting at King Edward Park less than a week away, the shipment of horses from Mount Royal track will commence tomorrow. The boats to King Edward Park will make four trips during the day which will carry the majority of the horses to the island course. The plant at Isle Gros Bois never looked better than for this season. There have been several improvements made while the mutuel system of wagering will be carried on for the first time. The paddock which was inconveniently arranged for previous meetings has been moved to the far end of the course which will bring it nearer to the betting enclosure and the stables.

The tracks has been well harrowed and is now in a fast condition. With continued fine weather the going will be in better condition than it has been in for some seasons through the care it has had this season. The stand has been overhauled and is now ready for the opening. The Bowie system of wagering will be operated under the direction of G. D. Bryan who originated it and who operates it at Bowie race course.

The boat service this season will be better than in former years and will leave on a new schedule. Seven runs will be run each afternoon which has never been done at King Edward Park. There will also be a good car service from the boats to the city.

Royals Dropped Two Games to Herd; Unable to Hit

Continuing their dizzy clip, the Royals had little trouble in dropping both games to the Buffalo tribe in the holiday events. The first was a shut out, 4-0, and the second nearly so, 6-1. Moran forgot himself so far in the second encounter as to crack out a four ply swat.

And to add to the gloom, it was an ex-Royal who manhandled the locals in the morning. Jaynes walked eight Montreal athletes, but when it came to allowing hits he proved one of the most stingy parties seen at the ball park this season—he permitted but three. The Herd made three times that many off Lyons. A bright spot in the gloom cast by the morning clash was a triple play started by Damrau and finished by Madden.

Though they were not hitting in any circus style, still the Royals showed they were not slipping by again gathering three singles in the afternoon. The Buffalo people got seven off Hersche. Smith was the only Howleyite to hit safely in both games.

It is announced semi-officially that the Provincial Government may not permit the Bowie pari-mutuel machines to be used here again.

This is liable to be a bit awkward for the King Edward Park people as it is understood that the latter have virtually made arrangements to have the ones used at Maisonneuve taken to the Park for next week. However, there are other machines which can be hired for that occasion.

It is also stated that the applications of all tracks except Delorimier, for holding meetings during the remainder of the season are still under consideration. It was reported that these applications had all been granted, but latest information is to the effect that new points have been brought up to the Government which necessitated a rigid reconsideration.

SOCCER NOTES

President Gillespie has now taken the Juvenile League under his wing, and has called a special meeting of clubs forming this division for tomorrow evening, Wednesday, at his residence, 546 Dorchester street west.

Ernie Duff, who was injured Saturday against Lyalls, has had his shoulder under the X Rays at the Victoria Hospital. At first the doctor thought his collar bone was broken, but examination revealed only a severe bruise. Duff will not be able to play for two weeks at least.

Duff received his injury by pure accident. Robinson, in heading the ball fell heavily on him, and no one was more sorry than Robinson.

Locos say Streetly is off for the season, and they are hard pushed to find eleven sound men for tomorrow in the replay against Lyalls.

On the subject of kindness some people imagine that the P.Q.F.A. granted the release of Jones and Crowe, from Locos, in order to placate Lachine, over the recent trouble. If the board is composed of such soft hearted gentlemen, why not present Locos with the Quebec Cup? Say on the 50-50 basis.

The sailors from the warship in port have become Montreelers, two more are playing for a local club, Invictas, and between the pair, scored Invictas' three goals against the S.O.S. Handy in peace or war.

McLagan, of Sons of Scotland, did a very daring thing on Saturday last. Seeing that Harris was beaten to the wide, wide world, and the ball rolling to the net, McLagan, picked it up, and threw clear, to Johnny Orr. Naturally a penalty kick resulted, which unfortunately for Invictas was sent away over.

Smart, Mr. McLagan, but, not football.

Cote St. Paul clubs would do well to keep some of their over zealous spectators in check. Lately there has been too much repetition of rushing on the field.

For a man who has been to the front and returned wounded, "Dicky" Flanagan, of Lyalls, puts up a wonderful game. As good as ever, "Dicky."

On Saturday, Vickers blessed the day Lyalls released A. Manders, for it was Manders the tip of his boot that landed Vickers to the final of the Charity Cup.

The Referees' Committee of the P.Q.F.A. are not at all pleased with the decision made by the Protest Ditto, in only censuring President Springthorpe, of St. Paul Rangers, for using abusive language to Referee Ryder.

Eddie Stott amused the crowd with his eagerness to beat his club mate, Johnny Orr, for doing which he would have given a bright penny.

England was well served in Wright, Emery, Charlesworth and Jones.

SUNDAY BASEBALL.

NEW YORK, July 3.—President Charles H. Ebbetts, of the Dodgers and Manager Robinson, were to appear in court today to answer charges of violating the Sunday baseball law. The law and order department of a local civic league holds that because admission was charged Sunday in the game between the Phillies and Dodgers the law was broken. The receipts, Ebbetts says, will be turned over to war organizations.

THE PASSING HOUR

A problem play was being produced in Chicago. One evening it was discovered that a certain man, evidently from the rural districts, had attended the play six nights in succession and always sat well down in front. Each night he leaned forward eagerly in his seat and drank in the words of the drama.

These facts were communicated to the theatre's press agent, who scented a good story. Approaching the interested spectator between the acts, he apologised for his intrusion and said: "Would you mind telling me just why you are so interested in this play? Do you know some member of the cast?"

"Nope," said the man from the outlands. "That ain't it. But I'll tell you about it. You know the scene in the private room of the restaurant, where the dark man and the other man's wife get up and leave by the left-hand door just a moment before the woman's husband enters by the right-hand door?"

"Yes," said the press agent expectantly.

"Well," said the interested spectator, "some night the husband's going to come in before they leave."

The construction gang was filling in the valley from a cut in the hill and the carts went in steady procession to and fro. Flannigan was slow in dumping and delayed the others. Flinn rushed up in a rage.

"Here, ye butter fingers!" he yelled. "What deya t'ink this is, a rist cure? Lit me show ye how a rale teamster dumps a kyart." He seized the bridle, yanked the old horse around, jammed him back to the edge of the dump, pulled the linch pin and threw her over, neglecting, however, to remove the tailboard. Over went the load and with it went the cart, horse, and Flinn.

Flannigan peered down at the struggling heap below. "That may be th' way to dump a kyart, Muster Flinn," he shouted, "but ain't it a little thryin' on th' horse?"

"What is bread worth today?" she asked, pointing to a loaf about the size of a biscuit. "Worth about two cents, lady," responded the truthful grocer, "but we're charging 10."—Puck.

A perspiring Tommy, burdened with about five tons of equipment, climbed wearily into a 'bus outside a London railway terminus.

There were no vacant seats and no one offered the weary man a seat. He was dead tired and so resolved to get a seat by strategy.

He flashed from his haversack a bomb.

"This is one of the things we use out there, you know," he remarked to the interested passengers. "See this pin here? When I pull it out like this it should explode fifteen seconds later. They're pretty deadly, too. If I put it back again the thing's harmless." Then, beginning to search frantically, "Gosh! Where on earth did I put that pin?"

The passengers rose in a body and scrambled for the door, tumbling over one another to get off. Tommy watched them go. Then, putting the bomb back in his haversack, he stretched himself full length on the cushioned seat.

CAMPFIRE RUNS A GREAT TRIAL.

R. T. Wilson's Campfire, champion two-year-old of last season, which ran such a disappointing race in The Withers at Belmont Park, was worked between the third and fourth races at Aqueduct Saturday as a public trial, so to speak, for the Brooklyn Derby on July 11.

He worked a mile over the dead, cuppy track in the remarkably fast time of 1:39 2-5. Tom Healey, who knows how popular the horse is with race lovers, decided to work him in public that all might see, and this sportsmanlike action was quickly approved by Mr. Wilson.

That Campfire is himself again was clearly indicated by the fractional times, which were as follows: 0:47 3-5, 1:09 3-5, 1:13, 1:25 4-5 and 1:39 2-5.

Johnny McTaggart, who was suspended for five days on Friday, had the mount. The horse moved freely and easily, and most of the trainers who watched him carefully, pronounced it a sensational move.

JUDGES REFUSE ENTRIES FROM OWNER NORMILE

Because of the sharp reversals of form shown by the horse Broomsedge, the officials at Mount Royal yesterday notified E. Normile, the owner, that his entries would be refused in the future, while they set Jockey White down for an indefinite period.

As the Mount Royal track closed yesterday the punishment meted out would not seem to be very severe.

Broomsedge was out Monday and won handily; the next time out he made a miserable showing, but yesterday he came back to form and beat a good field in the feature event, the Dominion Handicap.

Black Frost was the cause of Jockey White's suspension. This horse showed splendid form the last time out and was installed the favorite in the feature yesterday, but ran nowhere.

CANADIAN TAKES OVER 16 YEAR OLD BICYCLE TITLE

Special to The Star.

NEWARK, N.J., July 3.—Arthur Spencer clinched the bicycling championship of America by winning the race here from Alfred Goullett before 12,000 fans, every one of whom got up and gave the youthful Canadian a tremendous ovation after he had sprinted over the tape a winner in one of the most exciting finishes ever witnessed in a championship race. There is still the five mile championship to be decided, but regardless of how this turns out Spencer cannot be beaten. He takes over the title that Frank L. Kramer, one of the greatest athletes the world has ever known, has held for sixteen years. Spencer is the first rider not a native born to win the American title. Spencer defeated Goullett, but not without a tough battle. He went at Goullett a lap and a quarter from home, forcing the blond Australian all the way. At the first turn on the last lap Goullett switched him, but Spencer finally drew up on even terms with him and they raced neck-and-neck for a half lap, while the stand and bleachers fairly shook with excitement, when Spencer finally drew away from Goullett a mighty shout went up, and when he won the crowd went wild, in the heat to decide third and fourth place Kramer defeated Willie Spencer but not without a hard ride. Arthur won his first heat easily, and then defeated Francisco Verri in the semi-final, his brother Willie in the grand semi-final, and Goullett in the final. Goullett defeated Madden and Kramer in reaching the final.

After the race Arthur Spencer, who is a quiet chap and never had much to say, thanked every one for their good wishes, and then said: "I am glad that I won today and clinched the championship. Send my best wishes to my friends in Toronto, who have been rooting hard for me."

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME BY THORNTON W. BURGESS

FUN AND FISH.

Oh, little fishes in the brook
Who dart about in careless play,
Go hide among the weeds and stones,
For there is danger on the way!

Billy Mink loves fish, especially trout. Perhaps I should say he likes fish, for things we love we never harm. Mrs. Billy likes fish. There is nothing either of them likes better. So it would have been very queer, indeed, if the five little Minks hadn't liked fish. They did. They liked them so well that they kept Billy and Mrs. Billy fishing a good part of the time. The bigger they grew the more fish they wanted and needed.

Now, Mrs. Billy is one who believes firmly that children should be taught early in life that they must look out for themselves and do their share as soon as possible. So just as soon as she thought the five little Minks were big enough she took them for a swimming lesson. It was necessary that they should know how to swim in order that they might be able to catch fish. Of course.

So very early one morning she led them to a very shallow little pool in the Laughing Brook for their first swimming lesson. First they went in wading. It was great fun. They romped and played. They splashed water over each other. They liked the water. Their mother showed them that under or among the stones in the water were bugs good to eat, and they had a great time hunting for them. When they had grown quite used to the water Mrs. Billy swam out where it was deep enough for swimming and began to dive and swim beneath the surface and have such a good time as only a good swimmer can have.

The five little Minks watched her and wished and wished that they could do as she did. At last one of them got courage enough to go out where his feet could not touch bottom. It frightened him a little and he paddled with all his might, and, of course, he began to swim. Then he was no longer afraid. Of course, he didn't go far, because he tired easily, but just as soon as he was rested he tried it again. Seeing how proud he was and what a good time he was having, his brothers and sisters tried it, and the first thing they knew all of them had learned to swim.

After that they went swimming every day, and every day they could swim a little faster and a little farther than the day before. They enjoyed it so much that they spent a great deal of their time in the water. One morning Mrs. Billy led them out as usual, but instead of taking them to their usual swimming pool she led them down the Laughing Brook to a pool they never had visited before.

They Went Swimming Every Day.

"Now, children," said she, "I am going to show you how to catch a fish."

It was a deep, dark looking pool, with an overhanging bank, just such a pool as trout dearly love. Mrs. Billy slipped into the water and dived with hardly a ripple to show where she had gone. The five little Minks sat on the bank and watched. It was very exciting. It seemed to them that their mother was gone so long that something must have happened to her. Suddenly her brown head popped above the water right in the middle of the pool and in her mouth was a fat, gleaming, speckled trout still flapping. She swam ashore, climbed out on the bank, and bit the trout in the neck so as to kill it. Then such a feast as those five hungry little Minks did have! You see, the trout was big enough for each to have a share. While they were eating it and pretending to quarrel over it Mrs. Billy dived again and presently she had another trout, which she ate herself.

Then she led the way to another little pool—a shallow little pool. In it a school of minnows were at play.

FRANK.

If your friend's wife prefers to call you "Mr." I should think it purely a matter of her personal preference. Too much familiarity is never wise, and I think you should leave her to follow her own wishes.

LAUGHTER.

"The daughter of girls is, and ever was, among the most delightful sounds of earth." Truly there is nothing sweeter or pleasanter to the ear than the merry laugh of a happy, joyous girl, and nothing dissipates gloom and sadness quicker and drives dull care away like a good hearty laugh. We do not laugh enough. Nature should teach us this lesson, it is true: Laugh heartily, laugh often, but not boisterously. Everybody will laugh with you even though they feel more like crying.?

"What made you fall in love with her?"

He replied, "her honest laughter, God bless her."

FLUFFY ETHEL.

P. S.—Now everybody laugh with me.

ENLISTING.

Now is the time for young men to show themselves for what they are: whether they are red-blooded, strong, and brave, ready to fight for home and country, or whether they are contemptible, cowardly creatures hiding behind such excuses as, "Oh, enough have gone from Canada, let the Americans go now," or "Canada needs to have some men left here," or "I will not fight for England," and so on indefinitely.

Yes, indeed, many, many brave and loyal Canadians have gone, but not enough it seems to stem the tide of cruelty and oppression that already would be overwhelming us but for our brave soldier boys that have left just as happy homes and loving friends as these "things" (not men) possess, that shamelessly stay at home. Thanks to our intrepid soldiers they still have a home to stay in, although they do not care enough for it seemingly to fight for it.

Neither does it excuse the slackers to say, "Let the Americans go now." The Americans are going by thousands, but it will take more than the Americans to keep the slackers safe at home with their mothers and sisters away from all harm.

As for some men being left in Canada there will be thousands left to till the soil and make munitions, etc., who are ineligible through some slight physical defect for active service. As for the slackers imagining they are remaining here to protect the country, the country, happily, will not need their worthless protection while there are any "men" left outside of Germany.

The senseless remark in regard to not fighting for England does not afford the slightest shelter. If a man will not fight for England let him fight for France or for the U. S. A. or Italy or Russia, and if he will not fight for any of these let him fight for freedom and humanity and lastly his own honor.

"Oh, but I am married," is much more of an excuse in some cases than in others. Thousands of our heroes (God bless them) are married men but men of self-respect and courage as well, who would disdain to hide behind petticoats and to say to the coming generation, "No, darling, grandpa did not go to war."

However, why waste words? The shirker has been tried in the balance and found wanting. If he has any respect for himself he is the only one. And in closing let me say that he may be sure that the girl who clings so trustingly to his arm and looks up at him out of dark and limpid eyes is fooling both herself and him for in her heart she knows he has failed her and deep down in her consciousness she regards him only with a silent contempt.

Let every man make a rigid examination of his own conscience and if he finds no real reason to cause him to shirk his duty let him see himself as others see him, as a coward.

TOMMY.

PLAYING CARDS.

(1)—What queen was it invented playing cards to amuse her crased son? (2)—Could you send the words of piece "Wild Zingerella" (a piece written of a Spanish flower girl on the streets of London). (3)—I have a new walnut Jacobean bedroom suite, bedroom is painted white, doors and woodwork mission finish, floor is hardwood, waxed, with small blue rug beside bed, two windows with cretonne curtains, blue, window box is covered with same blue and green cretonne as well as couple of cushions on large wicker chair. Pictures have brown and green (mission) frames. The whole looks well, but for bed. The white bedspread seems out of tone. What would you suggest, cretonne spread or lace or embroidered spread with color underneath?—and then pillows-shams I am told are out of date—and bolsters I don't find comfortable—what would you suggest? (4)—What to do with fire place in sitting room during summer months—it looks bleak? (5)—We are married nine months today, and we have not had one unpleasant word with each other, do you think that a record.

PATRICA.

Ans.—(1)—As is the case with all very ancient pastimes the origin of playing cards is obscure, many nations having been credited with the invention, but the generally accepted view is that they came from Asia. In the Chinese dictionary, Chingtsze-tung (1678), it is said that cards were invented in the reign of Suenho, 1120 A.D., for the amusement of his concubines. There is a tradition that cards have existed in India from time immemorial—very ancient ones, round in form, are preserved in museums—and that they were invented by the Brahmans. Their invention has also been assigned to the Egyptians, with whom they were said to have had a religious meaning, and to the Arabs. The time and manner of the introduction of cards into Europe are matters of dispute. The 38th canon of the council of Worcester (1240) is often quoted as evidence of cards having been known in England in the middle of the 13th century, but the games there mentioned are now thought to have been a kind of mumming exhibition. No queen is found in the earliest European cards. The safe conclusion with regard to their introduction is that, though they may possibly have been known to a few persons in Europe about the middle of the 14th century, they did not come into general use until about a half-century later. Whence they came is another question that has not yet been answered satisfactorily. (2)—Referred to readers. (3)—Either spread would be pretty. You would make the spread long enough to pull it up over the pillows, so that you would avoid the necessity of either shams or bolster. (4)—A tall vase full of flowers on the floor in front of it or a pretty screen are the best devices. Special screens are sold for that purpose. (5)—I hope it isn't.

ONE WOMAN'S STORY

By CAROLYN WEBER.

The teller of the story, butterfly daughter of a well-to-do family, marries Robert Drayton, an ambitious young lawyer, who takes his bride from New York to a modest home in a small city. She becomes jealous of Holland Lansing, a client of her husband, who, however, marries Tod Freeman. Then, jealous of Phyllis Lawson, for whom Robert secures a divorce, she accepts the attentions of Harper Carlton. Eventually he declares his love for her, and is hurt at her acknowledgement that she has only led him on. Then comes what she believes is proof that her husband is in love with Phyllis Lawson.

CHAPTER CXII.

In spite of my declaration that I needed no change, I was languid and easily tired. My sleep was still broken.

As I passed Robert's office one afternoon after a shopping expedition, I thought I would run in and rest for a moment. I had nothing in particular to say to him, and rather hoped he would be out. I had developed a new timidity, almost an embarrassment, when with him since that terrible scene with Harper.

As I opened the door the pretty blond stenographer looked up in a peculiar manner, and when I spoke to her she was seemingly relieved, although embarrassed.

"You are surprised to see me," I said to put her at ease. "I don't wonder. I do not come often."

"Yes—no—it wasn't that. I thought it was Mrs. Lawson!" she blurted out, then added hastily, "Mr. Drayton is away. He went to Lawrence this morning, but will be back this afternoon."

"Oh, you expected Mrs. Lawson, did you?" I asked, ignoring, scarcely hearing, what she had said about Robert.

"No—not exactly. But she comes in often, and when I saw a woman I thought for a moment it was she," replied the girl, her awkwardness increasing.

"And you are glad it wasn't," I declared smilingly. Like a flash came the thought that this girl also disliked Phyllis Lawson; perhaps she, too, was jealous of her. Well, I would use her to satisfy myself concerning Robert's infatuation—as I called it to myself.

"Why—I—" she stammered.

"Never mind, my dear," I returned, convinced by her manner that I was right. "I myself do not care much for her." Then I blushed furiously that I would take such means to spy upon Robert.

"You see, Mrs. Drayton, she bothers me with my work," the girl explained. "I will be getting along nicely with what I am doing, and she will come in with a story she wants done at once, and she makes me waste an hour or two putting it in shape for her. Of course, Mr. Drayton tells me to do it."

"But you have plenty of time, do you not? You are not obliged to neglect any of Mr. Drayton's work on her account?" I queried, to lead her on.

"Oh, no!—it isn't that! I have time enough, but I dislike her kind of work, it upsets me." Then, as I did not reply, she continued, "I hope you won't tell Mr. Drayton I complained. I didn't mean to, but I guess the work has got on my nerves. He might not like it if he knew I talked of office matters, even to you."

I knew very well that Robert would not like it, and while I reassured her, I smiled to think that I was as anxious as she could possibly be that she should know nothing of our conversation. I had already been too friendly, and simply said as I left the office:

"I must run along now. You need not worry Mr. Drayton by telling him of my call. I haven't been very well, and he might think it was because of that I came in, and worry."

"I shall not mention it, Mrs. Drayton," the girl replied respectfully enough, but I imagined I detected a peculiar gleam in her eyes as she turned again to her typewriter.

Two things were in my mind as I walked slowly along.

Pearl Bailey, the handsome stenographer, was in love with Robert, and resented Phyllis Lawson's intimacy with him; and he had probably discharged Miss Perkins because she objected to doing Mrs. Lawson's work.

But why was a man like Robert interesting to a girl like Pearl Bailey? Was it because of his unusual personality, his dignity, his seriousness? He was unlike the men of her own class. Of a sudden I knew that as far as she was concerned my fears had been groundless. She would not so fear offending Robert, would not so dislike doing Mrs. Lawson's work, if he had shown any fondness for her.

"Hextra! Hextra!" my thoughts were interrupted by the shrill call of a newsboy, "Hextra! all about the train wreck."

Mechanically I motioned the boy. With no special interest I bought a paper.

"Wreck on the C. and N. local. Many prominent citizens injured. Among them District Attorney Drayton."

I read no further. My knees trembled so I could scarcely stand. Robert injured—perhaps killed. Just as I turned to retrace my steps I met Tim Mulhany.

"They have taken him home, Mrs. Drayton. You mustn't give way, he may need you. Yes, he is alive," he answered my look, and taking my arm he turned back with me.

I didn't try to answer, but hurried along, dragging on Mr. Mulhany's arm to hurry him. I was almost running in my anxiety to reach Robert.

The doctor met us at the door.

"I have just left him, Mrs. Drayton. I will come back within an hour. Other poor fellows need me. He is unconscious, and will be for some time, I'm afraid."

Cold with dread I went in to my husband lying so still on his bed.

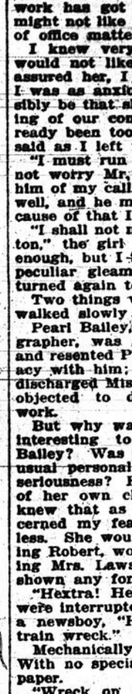

BRAN BREAD.

Would you kindly publish receipt for making bran bread (not Graham or brown bread.) —Mrs. J. S.

Ans.:—I make it by simply substituting a pint of bran for a pint of white flour when I am setting bread, and otherwise I proceed just as I do for white bread. Some people substitute molasses for white sugar as well as the bran. For instance, for one cake of compressed yeast, I use about 2¼ quarts white flour, and 1 pint bran, ½ cup molasses or brown sugar a small handful salt and 1 quart water. I set and let rise exactly as for white bread. I should be glad to receive other recipes.

Rice in Swiss Style.

Half a pound of rice, two ounces of butter. Spanish onion, a tablespoonful of minced parsley, pepper and salt. Boil the rice in two quarts of boiling water with the minced-up parsley, pepper and salt. When the rice is tender, strain it, add the butter, and turn out on a dish. Garnish the top with the Spanish onion which must have been previously shredded up and fried a nice brown color. Serve as a vegetable with meat.

THE WAR.

KERENSKY.

HATS off to Kerensky, the Lion-hearted! A man in failing health (he is suffering from tuberculosis of the kidneys, one of which was lately removed) but with the spirit of a gladiator, he has been from the first the inspiration and the leader of that section of the Russian Radical party which saw plainly that the most menacing enemy to liberty in the world was the German oligarchy. There is no more devoted friend of the people in Russia than Kerensky. He was a labor leader for years, a Radical Socialist and the chief of the Labor group in the Douma. He did not appear in the spot-light in the first days of the Revolution; for the leaders of that first movement were not so "extreme Left." But he early arrived. The real strength of the Revolution lay with the groups which he led; and Kerensky soon become the indispensible man.

He was one of the first of his colleagues to see the danger of the tacit armistice with Germany. For more than a month, he has been preaching and crusading against it. An indefinite prolongation of the war may be a policy full of peril to the Revolution, but a German victory would work the certain ruin of the Revolution. That is his gospel. He is as much in favor of an early peace as ever, provided it is a real and universal peace; but he knows perfectly well that, if either a separate peace or an armistice permitted Germany to get a fresh grip on her campaign of conquest, peace would be pushed farther into the future than ever. So he has been steadily urging upon his countrymen the absolute necessity of keeping up their military pressure on the Teuton front while they sought a basis for an early cessation of hostilities all round. And now, with a fine flash of inspiration and the gallant dash of a patriot without fear, he has put himself at the head of the army before Brzezany and urged its masses to the assault.

CAN RUSSIA FIGHT?

As for the technical aspects of this first engagement of the Revolutionary Army, they are being studied with anxious care in every Allied Capital. Are the Russians, with all their good will and courage, in a condition to conduct a steady and effective offensive? Have they the guns and munitions? Have they been weakened by a relaxed discipline? In the matter of guns, the German communique tells us that their two-days' artillery preparation was "exceedingly strong" and that it turned the German positions into "a crater field." This is precisely in line with probability. The Russians may not have any great equipment for the production of guns and munitions, but they have not been using any for nine months. So they should have plenty now. And General Brussiloff is just the man who would have them in plenty at the point where he intended to deliver his first smash. There should be no failure nor slackening for lack of material in the near future.

In the matter of men, it is clear, again by German testimony, that there is no difficulty about getting the men to go forward. They attacked strong positions in constantly succeeding waves throughout the whole day of the first drive, in spite of losses surpassing any measure hitherto known. The Germans say that sixteen divisions were engaged. The Austrians put it at twenty. Both speak of the constant arrival of fresh troops and masses of reserves. The most iron discipline could not do better than this. The appeal of the flame-like Kerensky had a far more stirring effect than the commands of the most stern and respected disciplinarians. Today's advices indicate a swift expansion of the victory, especially at the expense of the unhappy Austrians.

LIKE THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

The parallel to the French Revolution continues to develop. The other day two hundred sailors from the Baltic fleet appeared at Riga in response to an appeal for "two hundred brave men willing to die for their country." This could have been copied almost literally from Barbaroux's appeal to Marseilles for "six hundred men who know how to die." Now we have an army, which has discarded discipline, advancing in irresistable waves in the face of unparalleled losses against murderous artillery, and winning a signal victory. They capture impregnable positions and bring in prisoners by the ten thousand. The armies of the French Revolution were intensely democratic. The officers of the German States, trained in the old traditions, thought that they "would fly like poultry." The fact proved that they not only stood like heroes but advanced like demigods. The Revolutionary Army of France was able to do far more than ever had the finely disciplined and armed forces of the Great Louis.

As we have said from the first, there is no foe so dangerous as a people newly tasting the sweets of liberty. They have something to fight for. Fighting, with them, is not a duty, but a passion. Liberty is a religion. And history shows us no such victorious armies as those which follow the gleam of a religious inspiration. The Arabs are not now regarded as a great military people—they were not so regarded before the Prophet came to Mecca—but, under the touch of religious fervor, they swept up the Danube to Vienna, across the north coast of Africa, and up through Spain to Tours. The Crusaders went to Jerusalem. The devotees of liberty, equality and fraternity in France marched across Europe from Moscow to Madrid. If Germany has now drawn the lightning of the new soldiers of liberty in Russia, she can read her lesson in the Jena campaign. Austria can look up to story of Austerlitz.

THE ENEMY PLANS.

The Germans and the Austrians seem to have been caught with two budding offensives on their hands—one against the French forces in France and the other against the Italians. This renewed activity in Galicia will be likely to bleed both these offensives to death. The German attitude toward the British offensive seems to be that it expects to lose ground to it, but regards it as satisfactory when the losses are not too great or rapid. Our immense masses of artillery are not to be denied. So they give ground when they must—counter-attack as a formality largely, their counter-attacks against us lacking bite and being seldom duplicated—and calculate upon their U-boat campaign to gradually reduce our hitting power. But they strike with more weight against the French front, possibly because it is a closer menace to lines which they simply must hold. Austria has naturally desired to hearten her own people by launching an offensive against the Italians who have been making good progress this year; but it seems likely that the Karensky-Brussiloff combination may cause a change of mind.

JERUSALEM.

The report that we have been dropping bombs within a mile of Jerusalem suggests that the British expedition, halted for a long time now near Gaza, may be thinking of pressing forward in the cooler hill country of Judea. One purpose would be to keep Turkish troops there, now that the Russians have re-opened operations and may easily be soon fighting the Turks at several points. If we have command of the sea from Port Said up the coast to our armies, we can conduct a summer campaign in Judea without suffering very much from the heat. A Turkish camp near Jerusalem means that it is at the head of the railway running down to Beersheba, and possibly in all-rail touch with the Damascus-Adana-Baghdad system. Our flyers will be careful, we imagine, not to bomb the sacred places in Jerusalem itself. That would create a most unpleasant impression throughout the whole East, Moslem as well as Christian—to say nothing of the Jews. The Mosque of Omar is one of the most sacred places of Islam, just as the Church of the Holy Sepulchre is one of the most revered spots to Christendom.

ANOTHER SCRAP OF PAPER.

THE sorry spectacle is seen of one of the City Controllers declaring he will do all that lies in his power to prevent the city keeping its pledge as to giving a generous amount to the Patriotic Fund.

The quoted words of the Controller are: "As far as I am concerned the Canadian Patriotic Fund will not receive a cent of the million subscription which has been promised to it by the city. I shall fight against the authorization at Quebec of any loan to pay the money."

Giving his reasons for this extraordinary stand the Controller said: "It is not fair to ask taxpayers to pay this money for a patriotic purpose. Patriotism ought to be individual, and the subscription should be raised by the people"—meaning the city ought not to ask the Legislature for power to set aside the sum in question

When the corporation gave its pledge to the Patriotic Committee it was accepted in good faith. The Controllers and City Council of Toronto promised, on behalf of the citizens, something like half a million dollars, and the thought of recanting of the gift has never for a moment been thought of. It remains for Montreal's civic administration to adopt so reprehensible a course. What a fine sense of honor is exhibited by those we have elected to govern the city! A solemn pledge is treated with utter disdain. The story of the "scrap of paper" over again.

The courts have proven that fully a million dollars were wasted in maladministration and "graft" in the St. Joseph Boulevard expropriation, and a quarter of a million bodily "stolen" in the Drolet street expropriation; in other words, there are millions galore for graft but "not a cent" for the widows and children of those who have so unselfishly laid down their lives for the cause of freedom.

American troops will go into action with long and sharp knives in their leggings. Now listen to the Germans howl about uncivilized warfare.

No doubt one of the things the new food dictator will be able to solve is why a finished food product like bread, which is boosted in price when the raw material from which it is made becomes dearer, never seems to come down in price as the raw material does.

• • • • • •

Baron Rhondda, British Food Controller, hits the nail on the head when he proposes to investigate the cost of food before determining the selling price. Whatever may be the conditions in Britain, there is usually mighty little relation between cost and selling price in Canada.

THE WORLD'S PRESS

Herod Not in the Hun Class.

Washington Post: "No," said the shade of Herod, "I don't care to meet any of those newly arrived submarine commanders. Even under the plea of the higher necessity. I slaughtered boy babies only."

Lucky Uncle Sam.

New York Herald: The Navy Department refuses to pay $2.88 a ton for coal, declaring that $2.33 is sufficient. New York, which now is paying almost three times as much, wishes the censor would lift the veil so it can discover the Navy's secret.

German "Wool" Is Shoddy.

Textile World Journal: A prominent worsted manufacturer in this country secured samples of the goods used in the uniforms of German soldiers recently captured. His analysis of the fabric showed 25 per cent of cotton, 40 per cent of paper yarns manufactured from the cellulose derived from weeds and grasses, while the remaining 35 per cent was entirely made up of wool shoddy. There was not an ounce of raw wool used.

No Written Constitution.

Westminster Gazette: We shall have no written Constitution which will bind any of the Dominions to do anything against their will, but we shall have the firmest faith that they will be one with us in all great emergencies. This faith has been abundantly justified by facts and events, and as Sir Robert Borden says that "under no relations other than those existing could "the Dominions have done so much towards the prosecution of the war," we may take courage to believe that the free Empire has greater virtues than some Imperialists have realized.

To Falter, a Crime.

Philadelphia Ledger: The submarine was our product; let us meet it with that other glory of our inventive genius, the aeroplane. The manufacturers say that they can give us the machines; we have the men and the money. So, with all these facts before it, surely Congress, knowing what England and France have done, and with the daily demonstration of the need of a great aerial fleet, cannot refuse to do what is asked of it. The air way pointed out by Perry and Coffin spells victory. Why not follow it? To falter or palter is a blunder that is worse than a crime!

Russian Graft and Treachery.

Springfield Republican: To illustrate the treachery and graft in the armies of the Czar of Russia the Wall Street Journal tells this story:

Here is a single instance of the past few months. A large and costly consignment of motor cars was shipped from this country, after delivery had been accepted and payment had been made through J. P. Morgan & Co. Those motor cars were actually delivered in Germany. They went straight through the Russian lines into German hands; and the consignment was so valuable that there was evidently enough graft to divide amongst the large number of civil and military officials necessarily cognizant of that act of treachery. If this could happen, it is not difficult to see the state of chaos now existing in the Russian lines of support and supply.

Yet an equally sound inference is that Russia would have been virtually good for nothing as an ally if the Czar had remained on the throne.

Must Fight to Victory.

Chicago Tribune: We cannot play with such fateful words. We cannot shirk a compact upon which rest the destinies of great nations and our own. We must make it good wth our blood. We cannot compound in cash. We must fight and fight to victory. This is not an issue of tomorrow. We are today the sole hope of the Allies. Without our strength they are done. More than that, it is not only they who will fall with our failure but we ourselves, the America we have made and hoped to be. The fight is on for us—now, not tomorrow. Every American must wake to this. Every American who holds back from what he can give or do, himself or his possessions, is betraying America. It does not matter what his blood or his part. The doors of the past are shut. Either he is American or not American. Who is not with us is against us, and the choice is here. We are in the war. We carry its issue in our souls. America is in the front trenches. America must win the war.

Pronunciation Does Not Count.

Boston Transcript: The French people are having as hard a time to pronouce General Pershing's name as Americans had to pronounce General Joffre's. The obscure vowel of the first syllable of Pershing, and the muted Anglo-Saxon "ng," are as queer to the French ear as the subtle Gallic final "re" is to us. The curious unlikeness of French pronunciation not only to that of English but to that of all other western European tongues is an interesting study for the philologists. Unquestionably all other western Europeans acquire one another's pronunciation more readily than any one of them acquires a perfect French accent; that is something always for the tongue and the lips of youth. However, the sympathy between the French and the American people triumphs over the mutual difficulty of language, for it the French accent is subtle, the French mind and heart are plain as day, and if the Yankees' tongue is thick, their thought regarding French devotion to duty and principle is as limpid as their mountain rills.

Check the Profiteer.

London Daily Express: The profiteer still pursues his evil path comparatively unchecked. Food prices are inflated not merely by the unavoidable consequences of war, but by the greed of speculators and traders. The fact cannot be denied. We have the warrant of official admissions to justify its affirmation. The Prime Minister cannot be ignorant of the effect that profiteering must have on the morale of the nation. Think of the soldier's wife wth her man at the front. Her separation allowance would, before the war, have assured her family enough food, a decent home, and perhaps a little over for occasional treats. Now she can barely make two ends meet. The husband reads Captain Bathurst's admission that meat profiteering is rushing up the price of meat. He realizes that unchecked rapacity is making it impossible for his wife to feed his children as they should be fed. What does he think? He is giving his life for his country, and his country leaves his dear ones the helpless victims of men without conscience and without scruples. Look around at home! Trade unionists have temporarily surrendered the privileges won by years of agitation. Their wages are high, but prices are higher, and they know that these prices are artificially inflated. Is it any wonder that industrial unrest grows more and more menacing? Food profiteering is a dark blot on the nation's honour. It is postponing victory because it is eating into the spirit that makes victory possible. It must be stopped.

Conscription.

You ask me why I gave my son?
(Ah, well does God know why?)
That Prussian blood may swiftly run,
That tyranny may die—
That over earth all men may go
At freedom's call, and none may know
The Vandal's power in our land,
The Vandal's arrogant command!

You ask me why I gave my son?
(Ah, well does God know why!)
I gave him that the barbarous Hun
Might well defeated lie.
I gave him that the coming race
Might meet with Justice face to face
And freemen mingle over earth
In Liberty's divine rebirth.

FROM THE STAR FILES

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

From The Montreal Star, July 2, 1887.

The late Judge Girouard.

A cablegram has been received stating that the Privy Council has given its decision in the case of the Provincial Government against several insurance companies and banks. The Government imposed a tax on those doing business, and the latter objected that it was ultra vires, as it was an indirect tax. Messrs. Lacoste, Church and Girouard appeared for the Government. Of the above counsel, two were eventually raised to the Bench. A sketch of Sir Alexander Lacoste was given in this column some time ago.

The late Hon. Desire Girouard had a profound knowledge of the law, especially in regard to commercial cases, and for many years in later life sat as a judge of the Supreme Court at Ottawa. Before that, he had attained to a commanding position at the Bar, and was retained in many famous cases. For many years he represented Jacques Cartier in Parliament, and was prominent in the councils of the Conservative party. In Parliament he especially distinguished himself in connection with the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill, which he introduced two sessions and finally carried in 1882, after a prolonged debate and the most strenuous opposition. Although one of the staumchest supporters of the Conservative Government, he took a leading part in the movement against the execution of Riel, on the ground of insanity, and with sixteen other Conservative members from Quebec constituted for a term a separate group of the party known as the "bolters." He was chairman of the Standing Committee on Privileges and in that capacity presided over the investigation in the famous Langevin-McGreevy case, at a hundred and four sittings of the committee. No exception was taken to any of his numerous rulings in this lengthy enquiry. He was a learned and patient antiquarian and in numerous published papers threw much light upon the early settlement of the island of Montreal and the surrounding district. Sir Percy Girouard, who is famous for his splendid services to the British Empire, is a son.

Ottawa.—The Ayer Customs case was continued this afternoon.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

From The Star Files, July 2, 1897.

Montreal.—Picnics were held at many points of interest and various athletic events took place.

London.—In resumption of the discussion on the Transvaal Raid in the House of Commons today, the Shaw-Rhodes telegrams were produced. These showed that Cecil Rhodes was under the impression that he had "Joseph Chamberlain at back of him. One cable from Cecil Rhodes to Miss Shaw, Colonial editor of the Times, said: "Inform Mr. Chamberlain I shall get through all right if he supports me. I'll win and South Africa will belong to England."

A FURLOUGH FOR FIRST CONTINGENT.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir,—I ask your courtesy in permitting me to voice in your paper a petition on behalf of the mothers and wives of the men of the First Canadian Contingent.

We plead that a furlough be arranged for these plucky lads, who are putting not only their weeks and months, but even years, into this terribly nerve-racking war without one sustaining glimpse of home.

I myself am the proud mother of a dear lad of twenty years who went with the First Canadian Contingent in days when conscription was an undreamt of possibility. I would like to say that his letters are like himself and his contemporaries, full of grit. He is always "fine, and everything dandy," no matter what circumstances may be. Their undauntedness and grit, their patient uncomplaining, surely constitute a potent appeal in itself, emphasizing as it so clearly does how splendidly they would return to their strenuous life, rested and refreshed by a little alleviation and change, be it ever so brief.

We meet many returned soldiers in our streets day by day. How glad we are to see them back. We thrill with pride in each gallant lad who has so nobly done his bit, and so we appeal to the public, sure of its generous sympathy in any cause of justice and humanity, as this so surely is, not only for the boys a hardly-earned rest, but for the mothers and wives, who can only "stand and wait" joy unspeakable at sight of those so dear to them, and to whom they are so dear.

We earnestly trust that a movement will shortly be made in this matter—gravely important as it is. With many thanks, I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

MRS. CHARLES AYERS.

WHO WILL BE HIS GODMOTHER?

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir,—I am writing to ask if you will have the goodness to render a service to a poor Belgian soldier who has received no news of his family since the invasion of Belgium. I shall be deeply grateful for a war godmother, who will interest herself in my situation. Your humble servant, ALBERT COLLAR.
68, 3rd Company, Belgian Army in the Field.

French-Canadian Views

LE NATIONALISTE.

When we have been represented in the Allied and neutral Press, above all among our neighbors, as turbulent figures, as refractory to the law, with being almost on the verge of civilization, as beasts in human form having scarcely any care but that of reproduction and flooding the country—it is as such we are shown by Pertinax in the Echo de Paris of May 22, 1917—what friends will remain to us among those who scarcely know us? Who, in these circles—they are the majority—will even have some suspicion of pity for us if by chance an Anglo-Canadian general gives the order to fire on us, if regiments are let loose on our province, burn private properties, kill children, violate women, shoot without trial (as was done for Sheeney Skeffington in Ireland)—journalists and public men who displease conscriptionists and ministers?

No one will then have a word of pity for us. No one, not even our cousins in France, will intervene to ask that such repression shall cease, that there shall be an end to such deeds as were committed in Ireland not so long ago, deeds of which the recital was given before the entrance of the United States into the war, in the pro-Ally newspapers of New York—such as the Post and the Transcript.

If that is not the object of this anti-French-Canadian campaign in the newspapers of America and Europe; if it has not for its object the isolation of French-Canadians, the desire to show them in such an aspect that when men of our race are killed in our streets by soldiers paid with our money the stranger will cry, "It was a good thing to kill them; they are rebels, dangerous people for the country in which they live, for the Empire which has covered them with favors," then why these calumnies spread so unceasingly against us? What do our calumniators want? Where are they going?

L'EVENEMENT.

To try and give a reason for pronouncing themselves against conscription the Liberals have hastened to espouse the few arguments—on common ground—in favor of a referendum. A few days ago the idea occurred to them of calling for conscription of wealth, at the same time as for conscription of men. It is a fool play, and any other would have been a better one.

Here the Liberals counted on the ignorance of the people on the matter of conscription of wealth, which exists already, and that in an application far more severe than ever will be the conscription of men. The other day Mr. Middleboro, a Conservative member, in his speech on the Conscription Bill clearly demonstrated and proved the existence of a conscription of wealth. He produced statistics to that effect, showing what during the war twenty-two large companies are compelled to pay.

The companies in question contributed $5,896,321.30 to the war in 1915, and by this year's amendment they will contribute $11,101,402.97.

The Liberals have little grace in asking for conscription of wealth today, when it already exists and is imposed in such heavy manner. The Liberals' new war cry is a pure political trick. Even today many Liberals who are interested in these big companies complain of this conscription of wealth which, on the other hand, for their own political purposes, they call for. We do not speak of a host of measures already taken by the Government which have direct bearing on what the liberals call conscription of wealth, such as the naming of a food controller, of a grain commissioner, the restriction of paper export, and the control of prices.

LE BULLETIN.

Fifty years ago Upper and Lower Canada united to form the Dominion of Canada. The predominant idea of Confederation was evidently inspired by a desire to unite all Canada's power to work in a more efficient way for the development of a young country that was destined to grow rapidly and mightily. It was under the Liberal Government in particular that Canada became a great state of the world raher than a simple colony. It was under Laurier that Canada acquired her autonomy and the right to make her commercial treaties. At this fiftieth anniversary of Confederation we are present at the dismemberment of that Confederation that English and French alike from Cartier's time to Laurier's have striven to bind together and place in such a goodly position before the powers of America and Europe. Since Sir Robert Borden has been in power there have never been so many appeals to excite the fanaticism of race and religion and at the present time disintegration is working its way in a lamentable manner. So true is it that it takes less time to pull down than to set up, and that it takes only a poor workman to tear down the building built with so much labor, with so many struggles and so much mutual concession. On this fiftieth anniversary what has become of the Bonne Entente of which we heard quite lately? Such is the work of the fanatics of the two races who should live if not in friendship, at least in the esteem the one of the other.

L'ACTION CATHOLIQUE.

At the present time, there is a Canadian nation but it does not include the 7,600,000 individuals who appear on the census tables; it scarcely passes half of this number for it is found among the autochthons who look upon Canada as something more than an extension of a European country. They have a fatherland, Canada; they have a particular mentality, the Canadian mentality; they look upon external events from one point of view, the Canadian point of view. And Canada will take the path of its true destiny only when the number of these autochthons, English or French, has become so great that the influence of the other group is negligeable.

On that day, there will be peace in Canada because those who do not know our history have become more rare and newcomers who claim to fashion the country in keeping with its past and its traditions by reducing one of the two great races who share it to an inferior role will be regarded only with disdainful pity.

FRENCH-CANADIAN ASKS RACE TO BE BROADER-MINDED

Nap. Garceau Says "We are Too Much Quebecers"

DRUMMONDVILLE, July 3.—"We have not been taught all that could have been taught us, and that our country was not the Province of Quebec only, but the whole of Canada. In the past we have been in the habit of living isolated, and not mixing with others. We have been a little too much of 'Quebeckers,' and on this fiftieth anniversary of Confederation it is for us to take a lesson to remember that we are Canadians at home in Quebec or in Ontario, as much at home in Toronto as the people of Toronto are at home here."

This from the speech of Mr. Nap. Garceau, advocate, of Drummondville, was received with deep interest by an audience of about 1,000 people who had come to hear conscription denounced. Conscription was denounced by Mr. Garceau and the other speakers, but what was a new departure at a meeting of this nature was the blunt fashion in which Mr. Garceau dealt with the problem of the disunion between the races, out of which the campaign against the French-Canadians had come in connection with the big issues of the day.

Confederation had been based on the hope of union in Canada, and it was well to have an examination of conscience to account for the present state of feeling and the general press campaign against the French-Canadians.

"In conducting this campaign against us the authors have not thought of our mentality, and the fact that we were always taught to consider Canada as our only country, and that our duty was to Canada and not to other nations."

QUEBEC APPROVED WAR.

The world had moved forward, added Mr. Garceau, but it had to be admitted also that the French-Canadians in 1914 had realized that fact and had for that reason approved of the decision of the government to go into a war that was for the cause of humanity and for the Empire. The cry from one end of the province to the other had been to congratulate the government in 1914 because the people had understood their duty, not legal or constitutional duty, but duty for humanity and for Empire. He then made the statement quoted as to provincialism and added:

"We have been in the habit of being too provincial for national duty and not studying the people of Ontario, who also have been provincial, as well as sectarian and fanatical, and we have not studied their mentality nor them. There is a majority here of a different language which has the right to have their sentiments as we have ours, and if we wish the work of the Confederation to continue, it is necessary that we understand them, that they understand us, and that we all form a Canadian mentality, and not a Quebec mentality, nor an Ontario mentality."

Mr. Garceau said that it was regrettable that in certain sections of this province threats had been made against other provinces. If the two races threw stones at each other there would never be a Canadian mentality.

SHOULD TEACH LOVE FOR BRITISH.

"It is for us, the pioneers of the soil, to give the example. We have our schools, and there we teach French, and in some we teach English. Never in our school do we teach the children to run down the other races and the other provinces. We should go further, and in every school teach English, and teach love for the British flag, and British institutions; so that we will know the value of these institutions." The flag represented the same degree of liberty for all the provinces and the French-Canadians respecting it should be able also to require the people in Ontario to remember that the same flag floats in both provinces and the same liberties are due under it in both provinces.

Hon. Mr. Crothers had said that the reason for the Conscription Bill was because Quebec had not sent sufficient soldiers. Mr. Garceau believed that no law of that kind should be put forward without the necessary education, and that the bill had come at a most inopportune time. It had brought everything to a standstill, and under the circumstances was a crime, not only against the country, but against the Allies.

"If we have not done enough, let us be shown with reason that we should go further, and we will do so, but not through insults." Mr. Garceau recalled the campaign of 1911, and some of the campaigns since, and said that probably the Ontario newspapers took as the feeling of the whole province the opinions of those who did not even lead a feeble minority. With men like Laurier and Patenaude, who had risked their all in the course they had taken, one at the end of a long career and the other at the beginning he had confidence that, despite all, the ship of state would be safely steered into port.

Mayor Alexandre Mercure, who presided, said that in Drummondville every help had been given the government towards war aims, party politics having been laid aside, and when English-speaking recruiting officers, who could not speak French, had come to Drummondville, they had managed that their message should get to the people who did not know English. It had been the same with the National Service cards, and the Mayor spoke of "breach of faith" in putting in a conscription bill. The French-Canadians were patriotic and loyal, no matter what was said, but with many of their English-speaking compatriots, were against conscription, for he believed that those who wanted to go to war so much had gone.

WILL PETITION DUKE.

Mr. Gaston Ringuel read a petition to the Governor-General, which the meeting heartily carried. It reads as follows: "To His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada: You are the representative here of His Majesty the King; as British subjects we owe you respect and loyalty and it is a duty that we are happy to fulfill. As representative of His Majesty, you are the guardian of established order, of the constitution and the prerogatives of the Crown, but also of the rights of the people.

"Men who no longer hold our mandate sit in Parliament and wish to impose a law which very greatly changes the obligations of the British subjects in Canada. Parliament now has no legal authority.

"Solicitous for our rights and liberties, we would pray you to have the constitution and our rights respected. You possess the supreme prerogative of refusing to recognize the existence of this Parliament, the right of dissolution, and we respectfully ask you to exercise it.

"May the Crown protect us."

GERMAN THREATS

Press Says England Will Feel "Iron Fist" Again

AMSTERDAM, July 3—A semi-official telegram received here from Berlin says:

"The German press, referring to the British indignation at the air attacks on the fort of London says that if England wishes to spare her civilians she can remove them from the neighborhood of store places of war equipment. Folkestone, Dover, Sheerness and London are such store places.

"The German people, under the pressure of English starvation and the war, has become a hard race with an iron fist. England has felt that and will experience it again tomorrow. England may lie and deceive or rage and threaten. The hammer is in our hands, and it will fall mercilessly and shatter the places where England is forging weapons against us."

STATE CONTROL

Industrial Situation in Russia Threatens Strike

PETROGRAD, July 3. — Arthur Henderson, member of the British war council and Labor member on the British delegation now visiting Russia, has transmitted to the Russian Foreign Minister a document in which the directors of a number of important undertakings, mainly British, working in Russia, point out the serious position of industry. In many instances the stoppage of production is threatened.

The directors ask security for property and the adoption of all possible measures to prevent the threatened ruin of industrial enterprises which are of the utmost importance for Russia. They suggest that Government control be instituted, similar to that established in Great Britain.

Where shoes built on Neōlin are ready today

Perhaps you have not known just where to buy shoes built on Neōlin.

Numbers of people who desired the advantages of Neōlin's qualities have had to buy from other than their usual shoe dealer.

They sought the long, long wear of Neōlin soles.

They sought its protecting waterproofness, its easy flexibility, its modern style.

But they have had to depend on inquiry in identifying those stores that sell Neōlin-soled shoes.

The shoes you are buying to wear this summer, your dealer ordered early last Fall or Winter. At that time our factory capacity for producing Neōlin soles was limited. As a result most merchants were able to obtain only a small percentage of their stock with Neōlin soles.

That condition has been overcome. Shoe manufacturers' recent orders from dealers for shipment next Fall call for Neōlin on half the shoes. Realizing the superiority of Neōlin, many merchants are now ordering big portions of next Fall's stock on Neōlin. At that time you will be able to obtain Neōlin-soled shoes at any good store.

But you want Neōlin right away. So to make it easy for you to find it, we have offered shoe merchants the ticket illustrated here. They are on shoes in the windows. You can find Neōlin-soled shoes by merely looking for these tickets in shoe store windows.

Neōlin has been a great success. Because of distinct superiorities, it is replacing leather for shoe soles. Neōlin's appearance can be imitated. But Neōlin's qualities are the result of methods and materials known only to us.

Now there are other soles that look like Neōlin. But there is only one Neōlin—and every pair of soles is branded with the trademark shown on this ticket.

To be sure of the genuine Neōlin—mark that mark, stamp it on your memory. Ask for Neōlin, with the accent on the "O"—Neōlin —the trade symbol for a quality product.

LT.-COL. TRIHEY ON IRISH-CANADIANS AND CONSCRIPTION

NEW YORK, July 3.—Lieut.-Col. Henry J. Trihey, of Montreal, who commanded the now disbanded regiment of "Irish-Canadian Rangers," makes the following statement over his signature to the New York Evening Post:

"With regard to the attitude of Irish-Canadians toward conscription, allow me to say:

"Irish-Canadians always deeply interested in the welfare of Ireland, have never yet allowed that interest to interfere with their duty to Canada. They are Canadians.

"On the outbreak of war and at the first call for volunteers, Irish-Canadians came forward and continued voluntarily to respond as Canada made further calls, until scores of thousands of Irish-Canadians had gone overseas, diffused among the various Canadian units.

"During the first eighteen months of war no Canadian unit particularly represented the Irish-Canadian population, although the Scotch, English and French populations had each from the beginning its special regiment.

"At the end of 1915 the Canadian Government having given evidence of its desire to feature battalions representing different shades of national sentiment in Canada, with a view to encouraging voluntary enlistment, was asked by me for authority to raise an Irish-Canadian regiment for overseas service. This authority having been granted, patriotic Irish-Canadian citizens provided a fund of $40,000 to defray the cost of recruiting and of organizing.

"In February, 1916, the organizing of the Irish-Canadian Rangers was begun. The first poster issued bore the legend 'Small nations must be free.' The particular appeal was to those who desired to share in the honor of representing, in this unit, Irish-Canadian loyalty to Canada, at the front, fighting for the principle proclaimed on the poster.

CITES PROMISES MADE.

"Two members of Sir Robert Borden's Cabinet—one of them Minister of Militia—from platforms, in the city of Montreal, stated that the Government of Canada pledged itself that the Irish-Canadian Rangers would go to France as a unit representing Irish-Canadians. This statement was made at recruiting meetings as a special inducement to Irish-Canadians to enlist in this regiment. Relying on this pledge and animated by loyalty to Canada, Irish-Canadians volunteered, despite the aftermath of the Irish rebellion of Easter, 1916. The Irish-Canadian Rangers, fully organized, arrived in England on December 26, 1916. On January 3, 1917, I learned that the disbandment of the regiment had been officially decreed in England, but that it was the intention of the English Government first to send the Irish-Canadian Rangers to parade through Ireland. On confirming this I tendered my resignation as officer commanding and returned to Canada. All efforts from Canada were unavailing; the parade through Ireland occurred and the regiment was disbanded May 23, 1917.

"The disbanded men were scattered among English-Canadian regiments.

"Not one of the Irish-Canadian officers, not even our Catholic chaplain was sent with the men. The officers were not used; they were simply ignored.

IRISH POLITICS DRAGGED IN.

"Today the Irish-Canadian knows of the Irish-Canadian regiment, that Irish-Canadian loyalty organized to symbolize itself in Canada's effort for the freedom of small nations. He realizes what he formerly heard, but did not appreciate that Ireland is under martial law, and is occupied by an English army. He reads in the press that English soldiers in Dublin and in Cork with rifle and with machine gun fight those of his kinsmen who believe Ireland to be a small nation worthy of freedom. He wonders if the conscripting of 100,000 more Canadians would still be necessary if the 150,000 men comprising the English army in Ireland were sent to fight in France. He also wonders where Canadians now may best maintain the war purpose vital to Canada—small nations must be free.

"If conscription becomes law of course Irish-Canadians will loyally observe the law, for they are Canadians."

SOLDIERS' KIDDIES

Revel in Outings Provided by Val Morin Summer Home

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, of Val Morin, Que., again this year are providing for a fortnight's outing to fifty soldiers' children at their country home. They are being assisted by Mrs. Woodman and her daughter, and the first group of ten children are now in the country enjoying a happy holiday. Their expenses are all covered and every comfort provided in the way of bathing suits, games, boats, etc., for the fortunate children who receive the motherly attention and close supervision of Mrs. Jennings.

It is possible that other people with country houses could offer the same service, as there are doubtless hundreds of worthy children in the city who are in need of just such holidays and outing, and whose health is now a national asset to be conserved and treasured more strictly than ever, owing to the number of men being killed in the war.

LATE LOUIS MOQUIN.

The funeral of the late Louis Moquin, commission merchant, who died at his home, 598 Amherst street, on Saturday, will take place tomorrow morning to St. Catherine Church. He was born in Laprairie in 1848 and retired from active business some years ago. He was one of the founders of the Club Canadien.

PREMIER PRAISES WORK OF CANADIAN FORESTRY COMPANY

Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.

DUNDEE, Scotland, July 3.—Prior to leaving this city on Sunday, Premier Lloyd George specially visited the timber cutting operations which are now of such great importance to the nation in the prosecution of the war.

Mr. Lloyd George inspected the Canadian Forestry Company, 250 strong. In a short speech he said:

"It gives me great pleasure to have the opportunity of meeting this company of our gallant kinsmen from the great Dominion of Canada. I have seen something of this work which is being done, and can assure you that you are doing a work of the greatest national importance. You bring us from Canada a skill in this work which we here had almost lost. We, in the past paid too little attention to afforestation. You come and teach us one part of the work, namely, the cutting down of timber. We very often left the bringing down of trees to the action of winds and storm.

"I remember when Sir Robert Borden was at the First Imperial Conference. He told us how you could help, and I tell you what it means. We are going to save six million tons of exports in timber, ore and food by utilizing our resources. That is a factor of the first importance in countering the efforts of the submarines. That's where you can specially help.

"You all know this is the great anniversary day in the history of Canada, one of the brilliant members of the British Empire. Canada is a bulwark of freedom. Her sons have fought with magnificent courage in this great war. Their deeds of valor at Vimy Ridge and on many another battlefield are now a matter of history. They have shown Canada's might in the British Empire's strength. When the Old Country was assailed in its defence of freedom, the great Dominions were the first to make common cause with the Old Country. Together they have shown there is more in the might and muster of the British Empire than ever our enemies reckoned."

OMINION DAY IS ONORED IN ABBEY AT WESTMINSTER

ecial Star Cable from Our Own Correspondent. Copyright.

THE MONTREAL STAR OFFICE, Cockspur street, London, July 3.—The Canadian's new place in the rld was strikingly manifest at the bilee service in Westminster Ab- y today. In a stately procession bishops and clergy to the high al- , the King and Queen and Queen exandra were accompanied by two rilians only—both Canadians—Sir orge Perley and Gen. Sir Richard rner. The Royal personages pass- through serried rows of ambassa- rs and British statesmen, notable nong whom were Dr. Page, Ameri- n Ambassador, who had expressly ked for permission to be present, e Ambassadors of France, Italy and pan, the Ministers of Montenegro, umania, Servia and other second- y states, and English statesmen of l parties, among them being Mr. alfour, Lord Crewe, Walter Hume ong. The Archbishop of Canterbury, robed, sat next to Col. Almond, nior Canadian Chaplain. Others resent were Ladies Perley, Drum- ond, Turner, Currie, Strathcona d Sifton.

Wounded Canadian officers and n and Canadian nurses attended large numbers; also representa- ve Canadians like Sir Montagu lan, Col. Armour, Edmund Bristol, .P., Orr Lewis, Allen Baker, Gen. anbury Williams, Col. Godson God- n, in command of the Canadian oops in the London area; Col. Wal- r Gow, and in fact practically all anada in England.

ANG CANADIAN SONGS.

No feature of the service was more mpressive than the exquisitely tender endering of Handel's Largo by the and of the Canadian Highlanders, nder R. H. Lodge, while Sir Fred- rick Bridge at the organ and the amous Abbey choir surprised every- ne and notably foreign worshippers, y their spirited rendering of two ongs familiar to secular audiences, amely "O Canada" and "The Maple eaf for Ever." Lest the last named ong, with four verses and a chorus o each, and its idealization of the anadian emblem should be thought nsuited to a solemn religious ser- ice, it was sung after the benedic- ion.

When the echoes of the last chorus had died away, the Abbey organist and the choir left an impressive pause f complete silence before the final endering of "God Save the King."

WINDERMERE.

LONDON PRESS COMMENT.

By Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 3, by Reuter's Ot- awa Agency.—The Daily Mail says: "The fiftieth anniversary of the for- mation of the Dominion of Canada and the memory of the Canadians fallen in battle were honored yester- day by a great service in Westmin- ster Abbey.

"In all the trials and sufferings of the war it has been a source of con- stant consolation and pride to the people of this country that the states of Greater Britain and their soldiers have shown unflinching determina- tion and valor in the struggle. We well know the bitter sacrifices which Canada has made. Ypres salient and Vimy Ridge have been watered with her best blood, as with ours.

"In death, as through all the years of their State's existence, her sons have been at our side, and we are grateful to them."

The Morning Post states:

"Canada, in celebrating the Jubilee of Confederation, may be sure that the whole Empire is with her. The King's message expresses not only his own, but all his people's feelings and thought. If Canadians are proud of themselves, their fellow-subjects are equally proud of them. Great achievements and traditions are what makes a nation or a community, and during the past years Canada has created both for herself.

"Whatever the future may have in store, no power nor influence can unwrite the imperishable record of the Canadian army, nor can the ma- terial prosperity to which Canada is destined ever extinguish its splendor.

"When Canada comes at the end of another fifty years to celebrate, much may be changed in the world, but we may confidently forecast that Canadians still will be proud of the Canadians now at the front."

SERVICE IN THE ABBEY.

Canadian Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.— "O Eternal Father we draw nigh to Thee in this church where our kings and queens are crowned amidst memorials of Great Britain's most illustrious dead. We humbly commemorate be- fore Thee the fiftieth anniversary of the Dominion of Canada and all Thy many mercies multiplied upon its people. We dedicate to Thy great glory the memory of our dear bro- thers departed.

"Crown, we beseech Thee, with Thy loving mercy the offering of their brave lives; grant unto them Thy eternal peace and unto all that mourn the blessing of Thy com- fort."

No words could more fitly describe the purport of yesterday's great as- sembly in Westminster Abbey than those of the above prayer recited by the dean in the course of the ser- vice.

From the windows of the building overlooking the abbey's great west door, the building where fifty years ago Confederation came into being, two hundred widows and mothers of Canadian soldiers who now lie in a bed of honor beheld the arrival of the King and Queen. The Canadian flag hung limp from the abbey's towers. In the space beneath the bayonets of the guard of honor, chosen from several Canadian bat- talions, gleamed in the morning sun- shine. "It might be a Dominion Day celebration in Canada," remarked one of a little crowd that lingered in the cool of the cloisters.

THEIR MAJESTY'S ARRIVAL.

The solemn strains of Haendel's Largho came from the organ while the vast congregation was assemb- ling. The north transept was whol- ly reserved for Canadian wounded and nurses, the nave was given over to Canadian soldiers in training and the choir was occupied by those at- tending in a representative capacity. The congregation indeed in its en- tirety was in the best sense repre- sentative. Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria and Princess Patricia arriv- ed early.

Presently sounds of fanfare and distant cheering came to the waiting congregation. His Majesty with the Queen on his right, preceded by the abbey dignitaries wearing their gor- geous copes passed amidst triumph- al strains of band and organ along the nave through the choir into the sanctuary. Sir George Perley with General Sir Richard Turner imme- diately followed Their Majesties. The King's faldstool directly faced Wolfe's monument, now absolutely swathed in colors of Canadian bat- talions which have passed through England to the theatre of war.

The services opened with "O Canada," followed by the Lord's Prayer.

DEAN'S MOVING ADDRESS.

After the singing of an anthem, Bishop Ryle, Dean of Westminster, delivered an address.

The Dean, unhappily, has been ill and it was obvious it had cost him an effort to leave his room.

"This spot, we humbly believe," said the Dean, "is hallowed by the blessings with which God has from old time endowed British freedom. From this spot I point to the monu- ment that commemorates the victory and death of General Wolfe. That was one night a century and a half ago. There we see the symbol of Canadian liberty. Behold that mon- ument; it is now draped in the folds of banners which Canadian battal- ions have left in the keeping of Westminster Abbey.

"This is a day not for sorrow, but for proud thanksgiving. Think of our brothers, whom today we rejoice to honor. Ypres, Vimy Ridge, and a hundred other fights have crowned with imperishable splendor the glory of Canadian nationhood."

The Doxology was followed by Kipling's Recessional, set to a famil- iar tune, associated with the hymn for those at sea.

After Benediction, the congrega- tion united in singing "The Maple Leaf." United, we say, though it was quite noticeable that, for the first verse, at any rate, the singing came almost entirely from those parts where Canadians were seated toge- ther. The general congregation, how- ever, grasped the melody a little later. The National Anthem closed the services, the knavish tricks verse being discarded in favor of one in- voking a blessing upon the Domin- ions.

On leaving the Abbey, the King inspected the guard of honor, the Queen receiving a bouquet from the mothers and widows witnessing the ceremony from Westminster Palace Hill.

PARIS OBSERVES THE DAY.

PARIS, July 3, via Reuter's Otta- wa Agency.—A special service to commemorate the jubilee of Canad- ian confederation was held in the Madeleine Cathedral. Cardnal Am- ette officiated and representatives of President Poincare and the Govern- ment were present, also Lord Ber- tie, the British Ambassador and a number of Canadian officers and men and civil and military notables.

Able to Choose Declares Court, of Girl, Aged 14

Mr. Justice Allard, in the Super- ior Court, holds that a child of four- teen is old enough to choose its place of residence. The matter at issue was a petition for a writ of habeas corpus taken by Sylvestre Dupuis, uncle and duly appointed guardian, of Albina Dupuis, against Leopold Carriere, step-father of the girl.

Sylvestre, asking for the custody of his niece, stated that she was the orphan of his brother, the late Geor- ges Dupuis. He had a right to the guardianship of his niece.

Carriere, contested the claim. He said he had married the girl's mother in 1908 and had taken care of the child up till the present. After her moth- er's death, she continued to live with him. He had given her, he said, the privilege of going to live with her father's relatives, if she wished, but she declined to do so.

In dismissing the petition, His Lordship stated that the girl had at- tained an age sufficiently advanced and was of sufficient intelligence, to exercise common sense in the expres- sion of her preferences before the court. Under the circumstances, the court ought to respect her sentiments and affections. The writ of habeas corpus was quashed, but without costs.

ARGENTINE'S DEMANDS.

BUENOS AIRES, July 3.—Argen- tine has instructed her Minister to Germany to demand immediate the reparation and indemnities promised for sinking of the steamship Prote- gido, according to authoritative in- formation today. So far Germany has made no further move than to promise.

Spend Your Money on Real Food

"BUY according to Food Values! Save by purchasing economically—and to do this, study food values. You will be surprised to know how extravagant some supposed- ly cheap foods are, and how some that seem high are really more economical."

NATIONAL SERVICE BOARD.

Apply this common-sense, patriotic principle to what you drink, and the choice falls without question on

COWAN'S COCOA "Perfection Brand"

"MADE IN CANADA"

We all appreciate tea and coffee, but after all, these beverages are merely pleasant, slightly stimulating drinks, with little or no food value. And you know, to your cost, how their prices are soaring!

The food value of Cocoa, on the other hand, is higher than even that of Beef Extract, Chicken Soup or Bouillon. In Great Britain this has been recognized for generations. Physicians recommend Cocoa as a great body-builder, particularly for growing children. Our soldiers swear by Cocoa and Chocolate as quick and ready sources of strength in times of extra strain or food shortage.

At the price your grocer will ask you for COWAN'S Perfection Cocoa and at the price this amounts to per cup, it is a most economical as well as a most delightful food-drink. For breakfast—luncheon—supper—or a bedtime snack, you'll enjoy it immensely, and if you use it regularly you'll notice quickly the benefit to your health.

Give the kiddies plenty of COWAN'S Cocoa at every meal—see their eyes sparkle—and watch them thrive! For confections give them COWAN'S Milk Chocolate and Maple Buds, they are really economical food!

When you serve COWAN'S, less of other foods is necessary, thus conserving the food resources of the country and at the same time, saving money.

We recommend that the money saved from household expenses be invested in War Savings Certificates, which the Government now offers at $21.50, paying $25.00 in three years time. Every dollar you save will help to win the war.

Cowan's Perfection Cocoa is sold by all Grocers in 5 lb., 1 lb., ½ lb., ¼ lb., and 10c. Tins.

Ask for Cowan's ACTIVE SERVICE Chocolate; just what our soldiers in the trenches appreciate. Specially manufactured to meet their needs.

WANTED 100 MEN, ONLY TWO REPLIED TO ANTIS' APPEAL

Whether it be that Montreal workingmen —"French-Canadians only"— did not relish the announcement of a morning paper offering jobs in an asbestos industry and immunity from conscription, or whether there are no unemployed now in the city, Mr. Aubert, who had advertised for one hundred men, to whom he promised 27 1-2 cents and 30 cents per hour, succeeded in getting only two replies on his first day.

Mr. Aubert, claiming that he was the accredited agent of the Asbestos Corporation of Canada, was promptly on time at 71a St. James street, for the purpose of hiring men. He had brought with him a number of photo cards, giving views of the King's Mine, where the men were wanted.

A reporter of The Star was also on hand; he found that there was such a chill, that he hesitated before entering into conversation with the genial Mr. Aubert, who had seated himself in front of a mahogany desk, ready for business. Mr. Aubert was not talkative, however, and when he found out who his interlocutor was, he became most reticent.

Not a soul appeared for about two hours, when one man was hired. Later in the afternoon, so it was stated, another one came in. Both are probably now in Megantic county working at the asbestos mine and to all ends and purposes, according to Mr. Aubert's contentions, free from conscription, in any shape or form.

BUILDING 100 SHIPS

Great Britain Rapidly Replacing Her Sunken Tonnage

Special to The Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.— Great Britain, according to intelligence just received here, is replacing her sunken tonnage as rapidly as possible and is now constructing 100 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 600,000.

This number was said to include fifty ships, each of 8,000 tons capacity, twenty-five ships of 5,000 tons capacity each and twentyfive ships of 5,000 tons capacity each and twenty-five ships of 3,000 tons capacity each.

Details concerning the yards at which the vessels are being built the time of probable completion and the materials used in the construction are witheld.

WITHHOLD ACTION

Typographical Men Await Government Conscription Policy

CALGARY, July 3.—The Typographical Union of Calgary, in considerating the resolution of the Alberta Federation of Labor and the Calgary Trades and Labor Councils to oppose conscription by a general strike, decided yesterday to wait until the Government's policy had been announced regarding conscription of wealth, soldiers' pensions, etc. The Union will co-operate with the Government to make conscription a success, once a reasonable policy is announced and thinks all Union opinion in Western Canada will follow that line.

QUEBEC, July 3.—The Quebec Observatory says that during the 30 days of June, rain fell on 22 days, leaving only eight days of fine weather. During these 22 days 8.6 inches of rain fell which is exceedingly heavy, being five inches more than the average fall.

EARNEST OF U. S. DETERMINATION TO HASTEN VICTORY

LONDON, July 3.—Lord Derby, Secretary of War, in a statement to the Associated Press yesterday said: "The arrival in France of the troops of the United States to take their place by the side of the French, Belgian and British troops, is an event of the first importance. The moral effect of this reinforcement will be far-reaching, as the accession of a great army, of which this is the vanguard, enthusiastic for the restoration of peace and liberty throughout the world will be welcome to all fighting for the sacred cause on French and Belgian soil.

"The promptitude with which our kinsmen across the Atlantic have given effect to their pledges of co-operation is no surprise to us, who know their energy and resourcefulness. But it is an earnest of their determination to hasten the victory which will reward our united efforts, and therefore moves us deeply."

WILL RECRUIT IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, July 3.—Lieut.-Col. Legrand Reed, organizer of the one hundred and seventieth Canadian overseas battalion, recalled from the European front to take part in the important work of recruiting for the Crown, arrived in Boston yesterday. He at once went into consultation with Colonel Guthrie and Colonel Steele of the British recruiting mission's New York staff.

Last night Col. Guthrie, of the "Kilties,' said good bye to the Hub. He took Lieutenant Seeley and a few McLean soldiers back with him.

THE NEW FASHION —— GOOD TEETH

ALL IT COSTS IS ONE DOLLAR. ENROLL TO-DAY

Following Horace Greeley's advice, we have "Hitched our waggon to a star," the most important star in the business firmament—THE STAR OF EFFICIENCY.

Now, boiled down, efficiency means DOING THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME, and we flatter ourselves that in this respect we stand alone as far as the dental profession is concerned.

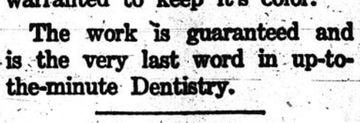

Have we not brought up-to-date dentistry within the reach of those of very moderate means, and have we not done this at a time when the actual purchasing power of a dollar has dwindled to a mere shadow of its former self, and have we not by doing this at this time benefited thousands who would otherwise have gone on suffering from the many ills traceable to improper mastication of food? But enough of what we have done! It's what we are going to do that we want to tell you about.

READ THIS CAREFULLY

While we know that our charges are the lowest possible consistent with high grade work, still we realize that one is not always in a position to make this very moderate outlay, besides this, the wonderful response to our efforts on behalf of the masses since the opening of this campaign against high-priced dentistry, forces us to ask co-operation in order that we may have some idea of the quantities of raw materials required for the coming year.

London and New York are the centres from which artificial teeth are secured, but war conditions have made shipments from the former port very, very uncertain. We are forced then to rely almost entirely upon New York for our supplies, and these conditions being much the same throughout the rest of this continent, we feel that we must place our orders almost immediately in order that we may secure same within reasonable time. Hence this extraordinary offer.

BRIDGE WORK Etc.

In the execution of our Bridge Work we use only Pure Gold, warranted to keep it's color.

The work is guaranteed and is the very last word in up-to-the-minute Dentistry.

TEETH EXTRACTED ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT PAIN.

GAS ADMINISTERED IF DESIRED.

We've administered Gas to more than a thousand of our patients, this representing a total of about 3,000 Teeth extracted by this method.

IT'S PAINLESS

It's your opportunity to protect yourself against any advance of prices for a year. It's a case of first come, first served. Don't put it off a day longer. SEND YOUR DOLLAR ALONG TODAY.

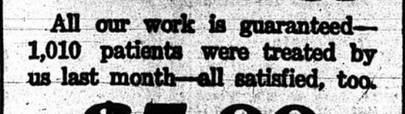

NOTICE

We are prepared to donate the sum of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) to the Royal Victoria Hospital if any person can prove that our Sets of Teeth at $5.00 made by our Dental Experts are not as good as those made by any one of the Eleven Governors of the Dental Board, and for which they charge $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00.

Come to our Office and we'll examine your teeth, show you just what can be done—tell you how much it will cost.

Such an examination costs you nothing and does not place you under the slightest obligation to have the work done by us. It's merely part of our Service for humanity.

All our work is guaranteed—1,010 patients were treated by us last month—all satisfied, too.

SOME ESCAPES FROM AIR PIRATES ARE MARVELLOUS

A well-known public man had a miraculous escape from death.

"My father and I," observed his son in reciting the incident to a representative of The Daily Telegraph, "were sitting in his office, when a bomb fell just outside at the back of our place. The concussion blew in the heavy glass window in front of my father's desk, and but for the fact that he had a few seconds before risen and crossed the room to me he would have been instantaneously killed. The force of the air blew a picture off the wall and threw it violently to the ground a few feet from where I was standing. My father at once gave orders for the staff to seek places of safety, which they did in the basement, where they would have been effectually protected from bomb-dropping by the heavy concrete floor above them. A window was blown in, the heavy glass falling where a few seconds previously two callers had been sitting in their shirt-sleeves. They took the incident in great good spirits, and regarded it as particularly humorous, that they had only a little while previously escaped from a torpedoed ship."

An employe of the same firm, describing his experiences, said he distinctly heard six bombs explode in the immediate vicinity of the company's premises:

"I heard a loud bang," he observed, "and went out into the street to see what had happened. I noticed the signs of an explosion, and I was just turning round to enter our own premises when I heard another bang. This was followed by a third explosion at the back of our premises, which blew off part of our roof. While we were taking cover in the basement there was a fourth report, and this, I noticed, was caused by the contact of a bomb with the roof of a house immediately opposite our premises. The force of the explosion was so great that the entire roof, and, so far as I could see, the top floor of that huge building, was utterly destroyed; the heavy timbers and the brickwork were blown in all directions into the street, and caused a number of deaths and injuries to the occupants and to pedestrians.

"Almost simultaneously another bomb struck the roof of the enormous building adjoining our own premises, causing a fierce fire to break out. The fire brigade were quickly on the scene, and within a short time had subdued the flames. In the meantime police, firemen, and special constables, assisted by the ambulance people, were engaged in the merciful work of rescuing the killed and injured. I saw eight bodies taken from the house and from the street, and also a number of injured persons removed to the hospitals.

"ONLY ANTI-AIRCRAFT PRACTICE."

Another gentleman said he was sitting in his office with a member of the Special Police, when they heard a loud explosion. His friend remarked, "It is allright, old man; it is only anti-aircraft practice."

"Immediately afterwards, however, there was another report, and my friend and I then realized that there was an air raid on, and went outside to render assistance to whoever might need it. The roadway presented a terrible sight, being strewn with shattered timbers and broken masonry work, while a number of women were running to get out of danger. Within a few minutes both the regular and the special police had command of the situation, and the work of rescuing was rapidly proceeded with."

A professional man in an adjoining thoroughfare said he heard the explosion from one of the bombs, and thought it was anti-aircraft gun practice. For the ensuing three or four minutes he went on dictating letters to his typist, when he heard a second bang. He then suddenly became conscious of the fact that an air raid was on.

A waitress in a tea shop gave her impression of the visit of the Hun raiders to a place in the East-end, in the following terms:

"I heard a bang," she observed, "and said to a friend, 'They've arrived,' and thought no more of the matter. We sat down to have our dinner, when suddenly a bomb exploded within a few yards of our window at the back. We jumped up feeling rather excited, and suddenly found the shop full of people. We looked out of the window, and within a very few minutes all sorts of vehicles began to pass on their way to the London Hospital with dead and wounded in them. We saw one young girl apparently dead strapped to the top seat of a motor-omnibus. In a private motor, a taxi I think it was, was a poor old man, grey-headed, and with a long beard, lying almost straight on his back. As the car passed our shop the man's hat blew off, and we saw he was dead. One of the bombs which dropped on a house a few hundred yards from here killed one of our boys, who was cleaning a window from the outside, and also injured another who was engaged in the same occupation."

A woman on the top of an omnibus had a very alarming experience. As the vehicle was passing down an East-end street a splinter from an exploding bomb struck a young girl sitting beside her, killing her instantly. The dead body rolled over on to the lady sitting on the same seat, and she had to hold it until the 'bus could be stopped. Sergeant Blackmore, of the city police, and one of the best swimmers in the force, was very seriously injured by one of the bombs, and was conveyed to hospital. P. C. Legrove was also injured, and it was stated that in the casualties of the day were some men of the Metropolitan Police and some firemen.

CHILDREN'S FIRE DRILL.

In one part of the city a number of persons were killed and some injured by a very powerful bomb, which exploded in a yard. Considerable damage was done to the surrounding buildings, and the massive brickwork was pitted in all directions. The force of the concussion was so great that a number of windows in shops and houses in the adjoining streets were smashed to splinters.

Not very far from this place a number of children were in a school. Directly the noise of the first bomb exploding was heard, the scholars were told to form up for fire drill, and they were half way down the stairs when it was decided that it would be better for them to remain in the building. This was done, and nobody was hurt. It was reported that one of the children in the yard was badly cut, and also a lady outside.

In a broad thoroughfare an exploding bomb set fire to a very large business establishment and caused considerable damage. About half a mile away two other bombs also fell in some commercial premises, killing two people and practically blowing in the face of the building.

A curious effect was created by a bomb which fell on a warehouse in a narrow City court. The missile evidently exploded by contact with some structure just outside the top-floor windows of the building, with the result that the entire front was demolished and fell into the street, but the roof remained intact, being supported by the side walls, which were quite firm. It was a remarkable sight to stand on the pavement below and see the fine roof of the building resting intact without apparently even a pane of the glass, which formed a considerable part of the covering, being broken. Only slight injuries were suffered by a few people at this spot, but all the surrounding buildings had their windows blown in, and were otherwise damaged.

In another area a bomb struck a small building at the side of a larger one, in which a number of girls were at work. It demolished the structure, and killed about six or eight girls. By a remarkable piece of good fortune the destructive agent missed by little more than a yard the main building, in which over 200 people were employed. These had a very miraculous escape from a terrible death or injury.

FIRE STATION ATTACKED.

An East London fire brigade station had a wonderful escape from destruction. A missile from the clouds struck the roof and passed through several floors on to the first floor immediately over the large hall in which the fire appliances are stationed. Apparently the bomb did not explode, but testimony to its presence was easily observable from the street, where the holes on the floors, which were quite near the windows could be seen. A church was missed by only a few score yards, the bomb in this case falling on a house only two short streets away. Another church escaped damage by only forty or fifty yards, two bombs falling on a warehouse about three or four doors away.

A city professional man had an amazing escape from death or injury. He was sitting in his office when the entire building collapsed about his ears, but he did not suffer the slightest personal injury. He was, however, smothered in dust from the crumbling plaster of the ceiling, and when he visited his club a few minutes afterwards for a "wash and a brush-up" and his lunch, he presented an extraordinary spectacle, his fellow-members being greatly amused at his dusty appearance.

In the first place we guarantee you that a year hence we will still be making regardless of the scarcity or higher prices of dental materials; moreover, you have no right, if you flatter yourself to be a business man, to give a dollar in advance to any individual or to any company of which you have no definite knowledge, and which does not offer you any guarantee that the money will be returned.

When you place yourself in the dentist's chair to have your teeth fixed, a most important affair, it is up to you to use discernment and discrimination. Do not go to obscure individuals, or to companies with doubtful names, and of no reputation, because of great reductions in charges, but go to dentists who are proud of their standing. In our case, our reputation is based upon years of satisfaction given to millions of clients, and this reputation for honesty is unassailable!

Certain critics would basely slander the noble profession of dentistry in making odious comparisons of its members, especially of the dentists just starting into business life, necessarily with a limited clientele, and who are legitimately and in all honesty obliged to charge higher prices than we do, because they have not got the superior advantages of our elaborate organization and our business 'modus operandi'!

One word more to the public; the dentists of Montreal are honest and conscientious, and you can go to them in absolute confidence, regardless of the malicious insinuations of certain obscure would-be representatives of the local press.

SPECULATING IN WAR BONDS--COTTON MARKET WENT LOWER

WAR BONDS MOST ACTIVE LIST QUIET

Today's local trading in the stock market being sandwiched in between the local holidays and tomorrow's in New York could hardly be expected to arouse much enthusiasm and it was a foregone conclusion that prices would mark time and trading shrink to small proportions. The total business of the forenoon was 851 shares.

This, however, did not represent fully all that the market did, as one of the most active features was in the unlisted market, where the 1937 war bonds figured prominently. It is not often that the local market indulges actively in speculation in a bond issue, but the recent drop in these bonds of unquestioned merit to 93⅜ as the result of exceptional technical market conditions resulted in the attraction of considerable speculative buying on the assumption that the depression must be only temporary and that as soon as the situation is readjusted the demand for the bonds for investment must inevitably rally the price to something approximating the issue price.

Around the close last week an active market for the bonds developed and there was a rally from 93⅜ to 94¼. The dealings during the forenoon ranged around that level, the high being 94⅜, the low 94⅛ and the close at noon 94¼.

One of the peculiar features of the trading was the neglect of the 1931 issue, which continued to go begging at 93½ until the close this morning, when there was a partial rally to 93⅞. This was said to be due to the fact that the 1937 issue had been taken up by traders to the exclusion of the other.

The general list was small and only in three issues did the dealings exceed a hundred shares. The trading in Laurentide, which represented the larger total of 200 shares, was unimportant, representing absorption by strong interests of current liquidation. What little was offering in Smelters was absorbed at 25, unchanged from last week.

What apparently represented the only really notable buying of the day was a resumption of demand for Macdonald, of which 130 shares were taken at 15, representing the recent high. This is a fairly active market for Macdonald, which has been dull for a long time. However, the recent improvement in the position of the company and the prospective resumption of dividends on the preferred has attracted buyers who look on the common with favor for a long pull around these prices.

Other features were Cement 60½, Steamships 43¼, Civic Power 76, Quebec Ry. 19, Riordon 122 to 124, Tram Power 28½, the latter comparing with 30 at the week end.

C.P.R., which broke to 157½ in New York yesterday and closed one better at 158½, reopened at the same price today and further rallied to 159.

Opinions from Wall Street

Jenks, Gwynne & Co. — The stock market is very professional, and little else is expected of it today, but the ante-holiday evening-up by that element. These operations should tend to improve the price level by the close.

Laidlaw & Co.—The surface outlook for money indicates the probability of some further relaxation in rates, but any return to a condition of extreme ease is unlikely.

Post and Flagg—There is one fundamental fact in regard to the successful prosecution of the war that will have to be grasped by Washington, and that is that the country must be kept in a hopeful and optimistic frame of mind and that business must go promptly and profitably forward.

Bryan & Dunn & Co.—The market at the time being is professional with professionals especially bearish on the rails.

Redpath & Co.—The talk of heavy taxation on war profits and also regarding price fixing is not encouraging to security holderrs and we think great caution should be used in making commitments at present.

E. and C. Randolph.—The Russian success has a tendency to increase this liquidation, as it will almost inevitably cause renewed talk of the prospects of peace this year. The tendency of the market as a whole seems to be toward a lower level.

J. L. Bache & Co.—In the noon hour a drive was made at Studebaker which quickly tumbled to 62, a new low which weakened other motor shares.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.—Talk of large taxes on excess war profits is having its effect and while it is argued that fundamentally it is correct, at the same time it is not a factor that can be used at present as a bullish proposition marketwise.

Burnett & Co.—War news this morning helped sentiment. Market was professional and nearly all traders sold stock during the early forenoon. Prices yielded irregularity with a rally on short covering before noon. The public is waiting for definite war price arrangements at Washington.

General conditions of business in New York federal reserve district excellent, and volume of trade undiminishing, according to Chairman Jay, of Board of Reserve Bank.

DECLINE IN ROUBLES, CAUSE OF DEPRESSION

Special to The Star.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Exchange on Petrograd developed renewed weakness yesterday when the rate dropped to 21.60 for checks and 21.70 for cables, a new low record. The fresh decline took place despite the news from Petrograd, which indicated that the first day of the Russian offensive on the Galician front resulted in the capture of many Austro-German prisoners.

Several institutions were offering roubles on the market during a good part of the day. Absence of news from Washington in regard to the granting of new credits to the new Russian Government is assigned for the continued depression in the market for exchange on Petrograd.

Roubles were a fraction better in New York today at 21.90, against 21.80 yesterday. Exchange was as follows:

	Demand.	Cables.
Lires	....	724
Sterling	4 75 3-8	476 7-16

Who's Who in the Street

Major Anthony Haig Sims, manufacturer and capitalist, is well known in financial, industrial and military circles in Montreal. A native of this city, he was born on December 22, 1853, and received his education at the Montreal High School. For some years he has been a director of the Belding Paul Corticelli Silk Company, and of a number of other concerns.

SCOTIA'S PRESIDENT, SKETCH OF THE MAN

The Star has obtained from a correspondent in Birmingham, Alabama, the following biographical sketch of Frank H. Crockard, the new president and general manager of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co., Limited.

Big achievements and constant work mark Mr. Crockard's record, the correspondent writes.

Mr. Crockard, practically all of his life, has been in the steel and iron business. He was educated at Lehigh University and at the Michigan School of Mines. After leaving the latter institution he went to the Canal Tube Works at Wheeling, West Virginia.

He remained with the latter company until 1906, when the Gates interests took charge of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, and he was elected vice-president. Since that time the record of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company has been one of advancement.

Since coming to Birmingham the Tennessee Company has been added to the subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation. Under this latter concern and before Mr. Crockard has had direct charge of more than $32,000,000 worth of improvement and development work. Mines and mills have been overhauled and rebuilt; new mills have been added, and new by-product branches erected. In all of this work Mr. Crockard has been foremost.

Mr. Crockard is one of the first men down to the office and one of the last to leave. When the writer went to the offices of the Tennessee Company in the Brown Marx Building Mr. Crockard was absent at one of the outlying properties of the concern. "He will be in shortly after six," said his secretary. And Mr. Crockard was in about 6:30 and worked until late at night. This is the mark of the man.

His thoughtful consideration always has been for his employees. In the welfare work of the Steel Corporation he has been foremost. He has organized clubs of various kinds, arranged for the intellectual betterment of the employees, encouraged games, and boosted hard for the success of the T. C. I. Baseball League.

An example of the driving energy of the man is shown by the building of the great Tulytol and Benzol works of the company at Fairfield, Ala., two years ago. The directorate of the concern decided to enter this branch of business. Mr. Crockard was the only man in the concern who understood it. He took the task, and after four months of working day and night, in which he almost broke his health, the great plant was in operation.

Mr. Crockard is about 46 years old.

SILVER MINERS' BONUS

COBALT, Ont., July 3.—The management of the O'Brien Mine has posted a notice to its employees stating the present bonus of fifty cents a day, which is based on the high price of silver, will be continued so long as the cost of living remains abnormally high, and the price of silver remains at a point where an operating profit can be realized. Developments of importance at a number of other Cobalt mines are pending, and there would appear to be room for much optimism at the present comparatively favorable trend of affairs.

Cotton Crop Forecast Promises Increase

WASHINGTON, July 3. — A cotton crop of 11,633,000 bales, equivalent 500 pound bales, this year was forecast today by the Department of Agriculture. In estimating that production, the Bureau of Crop Estimates based its calculations on the condition of the growing crop on June 25 and the preliminary estimate of this year's acreage, which was announced to-day for the first time.

Last year's crop was 11,449,930 bales. In its preliminary estimate of the area of cotton in cultivation on June 25, this year, the bureau places the figure at 34,600,000 acres. That compared with 36,052,000 acres, the revised estimate of acreage in cultivation a year ago. Teh condition of the growing crop on June 25 was 70.3 per cent of a normal, as compared with 81.1 on June 25 last year, and 80.0 the average condition for the last ten years on June 25.

Press Opinions on N.Y. Situation

Times.—The stock market was generally heavy yesterday, prices giving ground easily on selling due to disappointment over the rate decision, with a few specialties moving contrary to the rest of the list. The railroads were hit harder than they were Saturday, when the effect of the decision was less clearly understood.

Herald.—A temperature above 95 in the shade and the fourth of July holiday only a few hours off—these were reasons enough for a dull and limp stock market. But there were others. A fall of two to five points in railway shares followed the over Sunday perusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission's decrease on the matter of freight rates, and the digestion of its meaning.

World.—Heavy selling of railroad stocks to forme liquidation by investors whose confidence has been shaken in the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant the trunk line the full 15 per cent rate advance asked by them had an unsettling effect on the stock market yesterday.

Tribune.—Trading in a desultory market was governed almost entirely by the caprices of professional operators. Sentiment was overwhelmingly bearish, for which the recent freight rate decision was held chiefly accountable.

Sun.—Long time Wall Street bears are proceeding on the theory that although war will bring out finer qualities, with the end of the war finding us nobler as a nation, we are going to grow poorer as individuals, from the material point of view, and that the cost of war, with its vast rate, eventually will be found to be an economic loss. The short time bears advance war's uncertainties as reason enough for their attitude on the stock market.

PRICES FELL BUT RALLIED AT MIDDAY

Special to The Star.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The stock market opened irregular and quiet today with little trading on account of tomorrow being a holiday.

U. S. Steel was off ⅛ and ⅜ at 127⅞ and 128. Other steels were also off fractionally. Rails and equipment issues were irregular, although Baldwin was up ¼ at 71½ and Union Pacific showed an overnight gain of ⅛ at 133¼.

Early losses of practically all issues were recovered by midday. Republic Steel gained 1½, industrial Alcohol 4 and Anaconda 1¼. Trading, however, was dull.

Leaders were under further pressure at the opening, the movements also embracing many special and minor issues. U. S. Steel was the only stock to change hands in more than ordinary amounts, 4,000 shares being offered at an extreme loss of half a point. Atlantic Gulf and West Indies, Studebaker and Central Leather yielded large fractions to over a point.

Rails were rather mixed, fractional recessions in coalers and Louisville and Nashville being balanced by equal advances in Pacifics and Baltimore and Ohio.

The market became more irregular before the end of the first half hour.

The activity of the morning was accompanied by a succession of rallies and fresh declines. Many important stocks fell to lowest quotations of the current movement. Chief among these were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible and Lackawanna Steels, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading, B. and O., the prominent metals and American Sugar.

From surface indications the set back was mainly caused by short selling and lack of public interest. Baldwin Locomotive, Republic Iron and Mexican Petroleum were almost the only strong features. Pronounced improvement was shown under lead of equipments and coppers. Bonds were irregular.

ANOTHER LARGE CREDIT

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Twenty-five million dollars was placed to the credit of Great Britain yesterday by Secretary McAdoo, bringing the loans to that nation up to $585,000,000, and the total loaned all the allies to $1,043,000,000.

STEEL TONNAGE LIKELY TO SHOW FALLING OFF

Special to The Star.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Wall Street is prepared for an announcement by the United States Steel Corporation of a heavy decrease in unfilled orders during June. It would not be surprising if the falling off proved to be as much as 550,000 tons. This belief is based upon the understanding that output was slightly less, shipments not more than in May, and that new orders booked were scarcely 50 per cent of capacity of the various subsidiary companies.

It is estimated that with the June output slightly less than in May, the production of steel ingots by the corporation during the second quarter of the year was 5,615,000 tons, indicating an output of 4,200,000 tons of rolled steel products; while shipments were approximately 3,800,000 tons.

From there being any deviation from the upward course of the pig iron market, the prices each day are quotably higher for practically every grade. There is no certainty over night what the next quotation will be for any brand of iron.

The consumers are at their wits end to determine a proper course to pursue. Many feel that the price of iron, largely brought about by the war conditions, is already top-heavy; that it cannot be maintained for any length of time. Holding these views they naturally hesitate to load up with high priced material to be delivered from nine to twelve months hence when the war may be over.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Reports from U.S. steel trade indicate that domestic buying has declined considerably in volume in the last two weeks, as compared with the first half of June. The discussion of prices at Washington, it is said, has influenced numerous private consumers to hold back. Manufacturers attribute haggling over prices as largely responsible for the falling off in the domestic demand for steel.

COBABLT SHIPMENTS

COBALT, Ont., July 3.—Ore and bullion shipments from the Cobalt camp during the week ended June 30 were as follows, in pounds: Nipissing, 479,693; McKinley-Darragh, 84,459; O'Brien, 56,555; Trethewey, 45,475; total, 666,182.

Bullion shipments:

	Ounces.	Value.
Nipissing	49,358.00	$38,746.00
Nipissing	49,912.63	39,181.45
Mining Corp.	32,576.15	27,782.42
Totals	131,846.83	$105,709.87

WEST DOME RESERVES

PORCUPINE, Ont., July 3.—According to the official figures of the West Dome Consolidated Mining Company, satisfactory results are attending the development of this property. The company have now an estimated ore reserve of $630,000 or an average value of $9 to the ton. One cross cut on the main vein encountered an ore body six feet wide of an average grade of $22 to the ton. The company have also determined the existence of a large body of ore at the 1,050 foot level.

United States Senate committee raises excess profits tax maximum from 40 to 50 per cent, adding $18,000,000 to appropriation.

Directors of Midwest Refining meet this week to take action on dividend. There has been talk that present quarterly rate of $1 may be increased, and also that there may be a stock distribution.

Miami Copper June production totaled 5,349,000 pounds copper against 4,985,363 in May, 5,128,195 in April and 5,217,903 in March. June 1916 production was 4,516,395 pounds.

Topics of the Street

Good afternoon. So far as general business throughout the country goes it doesn't seem as though the local stock market had any just reason for going on a fear strike, does it?

Here we have bank clearings soaring to a new high record and crossing the billion dollar mark for May.

As a matter of fact a good many people view the present market, or rather lack of one, as due to temperamental conditions.

FEAR of something happening which is not likely to happen has created many unhappy lives. THIS seems now to be contributing largely to the market's present determination to lie down.

MOST of the time the big men with ready money are credited with knowing when the bargains are going and the right moment to pick them up, but they too seem to be laboring under this indefinable fear which leads to inaction.

At such times the man with a bank roll of $500,000 is just as intent on "sitting tight" on it as the man with a beggarly $5,000 or $500.

When the market drifts into this temperamental frame of mind in frequently changes with marked rapidity and what one day looked blue and forbidding assumes a more rosy tinge the next.

The public hardly needs to be reminded that Wall Street will be dark tomorrow. It is the Glorious Fourth.

By unanimous consent it was agreed that today would be a dead one in the local market. No one was expected to start anything on a day sandwiched in between two patriotic holidays in different markets.

The railway rate decision, plus disinclination of the public to trade, has been more than enough to offset improved condition of the money market in Wall Street which, while not yet normal is easier and cheaper.

An interesting development among the low priced stocks on the local is the crossing of Spanish River by Macdonald. This is regarded in the Street as reflecting the improved outlook for Macdonald which, if it comes to a dividend prospect, is considered the better of the two.

Last year Spanish shares enjoyed a very active market up to 25, while Macdonald languished under 15.

There is hesitation in the steel trade and buyers are said to be in a state of grave doubt as to what steps to pursue, according to advices from the American markets.

The wonder is that the steady advance of prices has not brought hesitation among buyers long before this. Were it not for extraordinary conditions the advances would have checked demand to the point where further advances would have been impossible.

THE exchange value of rubles continues to fall at a time when the military situation on the eastern front assumes a more promising aspect for the ALLIES.

IT will evidently require more than a resumption of initiative, inspired by a Minister's presence, to counteract the distrust created while the new born revolution had the army disorganized and ripe for almost anything.

People who bought Russian notes were no doubt prepared for much uncertainty and a long wait for a restoration of roubles to something like normal, but it is doubtful if they foresaw half of what has been happening.

LITTLE NIPISSING SILVER

TORONTO, July 3. — A discovery made by the Mining Corporation of Canada is on the Little Nipissing property, which was purchased some time ago by the Mining Corporation of Canada, when it was found necessary to raise the level of the water in the lake, on which two shafts were allowed to fill with water. However, the Mining Corporation undertook a plan of exploration from a shaft on the old Silver Queen property, adjoining the Little Nipissing, with the result that the early part of last week a vein about four inches in width, carrying calcite and heavily shot through with native silver, was encountered in a winze at a depth of 250 feet. Drifting is being carried on, on the new vein, and the ore is said to run upwards of a thousand ounces to the ton.

COTTON HAD ANOTHER DIP UNDER 25C.

Special to The Star.

NEW YORK, July 3.—Another violent break in the cotton market following that of yesterday was attributed to further favorable weather reports from the cotton belt where rains were reported to be general.

The inclusion of cotton products in the food control bill also served to unsettle the bullish position in the market, and there was a general disposition to look for a further decline.

It is believed that the bulls had forced prices to the limit, and that a reaction was inevitable. The rallies from the low of the forenoon were attributed to short covering. It was believed the shorts looked for a large following on the part of the public, which failed to come in and force prices down, but as they failed to appear traders bought back their stocks.

W. W. Price, of E. and C. Randolph, wires as follows:

It is very evident that yesterday's break reflected the effect of an unsettling development in a market which had discounted a bullish crop report and which was amply entitled to reactions rather than any clear cut idea as to just what the inclusion of cotton and cotton products in the food control bill might eventually be found to mean. Should it pass the provision, as we understand it, would give the Government power to control the marketing and the price of the staple. Whether such power would be exercised or not is another question and the effect of such exercise upon the market still another.

On the whole it is likely that the tendency will be to let the cotton trade adjust prices to conditions in its own way, providing no indications of undue speculative activity develops.

Notes on 'change

Grain is showing well above ground in various parts of the west, according to late reports just received. In parts of Alberta and Manitoba grain is from 10 to 20 inches in height. Around Prince Albert, in Saskatchewan, it is about 15 inches.

The hay crop, which is the principal crop of Quebec, is promising well. The present weather conditions are ideal, and the country has a fine appearance.

From all reports, it is evident that the potato production of Ontario this season will be record-breaking. The acreage is very extensive, and all conditions have been most favorable to an increased yield. Farmers are optimistic over this line of truck.

It is understood that Great Britain will take over the surplus maize in South Africa. The price to be paid will be in the neighborhood of 15s per bag.

It is interesting to know that even the moonlight has a marked effect upon the packing of California sardines. The packers say that ever since they began packing sardines they have had a week or ten days in every month when they packed almost nothing. It seems that the sardines are all taken by seine at night; and when the nights are dark the fishermen locate the sardines by phosphorus in the water; but on moonlight nights the fishermen are unable to locate the sardines. It will be seen by this that the dark nights, and not the moonlight nights, are the most favorable for sardine fishing.

WINNIPEG, July 3.—Weather today is cloudy and cool but higher temperatures are predicted in Manitoba; in Saskatchewan and Alberta the weather is fair and warm.

Cash wheat continues to decline and receipts keep fairly heavy for this season of the year. Winnipeg October is about 2c lower. There is no market in the States.

Oats are very strong and have advanced today about 1c a bushel.

Grocery Trade Quiet, Molasses Advanced

The local market for molasses is very strong and prices are now 73c per gallon for Barbadoes, an advance of 5c over previous quotations.

BUTTER AT AUCTION

At auction in the Board of Trade today 917 pkgs. of No. 1 butter sold at 34¾c, 242 pkgs. of No. 2 were unsold, and 418 pkgs. of pasteurized sold at 35¼c.

LATE SUGAR ADVANCES BUT PRELUDE TO OTHERS

NEW YORK, July 3.—That the recent advance in granulated sugar quotations is only the beginning of an even more radical upward movement is the opinion of many of the sugar market's leading interests. While several influences combine to make such a result almost inevitable the law of supply and demand is a predominant factor.

In addition to heavy home demand there are the needs of our Allies to be considered and the British Commission is continuously in the market for large amounts. The United States troops also require sugar and will need it in increasing quantities.

The spot market for raws has advanced during the past week to 6.33 cents.

NEW YORK, July 3. — Sugar market news is lacking. At noon prices were May, 6.40; July, 6.40a; Aug., 6.49; Sept., 6.45-50; Oct., 6.50a; Dec., 6.40a.

GROCERY TRADE QUIET

Business in local grocery circles continues light, and a general quietude prevails. Butter and eggs are decidedly weaker, especially cheaper grades of eggs, which have had sharp declines. They are arriving in considerable numbers now, and country production is heavy. Live hogs have advanced again at the market here. Packers were evidently in need of supplies and put up the price in order to tempt the farmer to dispose of his "pork." There is not a very heavy demand for sugar, but with the commencement of the canning season it is expected that demand will be better. Local market is very firm, with an advance anticipated. As for canning fruits the prospect is not good. They seem to be a doubtful quantity, and reports are very conflicting. Strawberries seem backward, and crops somewhat short, as they have not reached the market in any large supply. Tea is very firmly held, and much attention is being turned to Chinese and Java teas.

FOODSTUFFS FROM U.S. GET TO GERMANY?

NEW YORK, July 3.—The suggestion that food supplied from the United States has ben leaving through to the Central Powers is given added weight by a circular issued by the foreign department of the National City bank, which shows that the export trade to Norway for the ten months ending with April, 1917, there was an increase of 800 per cent over that of 1913.

Exports of wheat to neutral Europe in the ten months were 39,000,000 bushels. For the ten months ended with April, 1914, all of which preceded the beginning of the war, wheat exports to the same countries wer 20,000,000 bushels. Flour exports to neutral Europe in the same period were 3,650,000 barrels, against 1,428,000 in the same months of 1914.

INCREASING OUTPUT

The Western Canada Flour Mills, which has an output of 700 barrels of flour per day, is planning to double its output; $20,000 worth of machinery will be installed to further this plan.

COUNTRY CHEESE BOARDS

Special to The Star.

LONDON, Ont., July 3.—Cheese sales continue slow all through this district at twenty-one cents and manufacturers are anything but pleased with the general situation. Just what action will be taken has not been decided, but a general meeting may be called soon to discuss the matter. Perfect conditions for a maximum production of butter continue and large quantities are finding a steady sale at from thirty to forty cents a pound.

COBURG, Ont., July 3 (Special).—Butter market shows signs of weakness. At Pictou, only 25 cents was bid, which was refused and no sales made. 2300 boxes of cheese were offered on the board, part selling at 21 7-16c, and the rest at 21⅝c. At Napanee, 1050 boxes sold at 21⅜c. At Campleford entire output of cheese sold at 21c.

LATE FINANCIAL NEWS

LATE RALLY IN WALL ST. THEN QUIET

Wall Street, 1:30 p.m.—Stocks became unsettled again in the early afternoon when the motor group reacted 2 to 5 points. Studebaker being the weakest issue. Representative shares including rails forfeited the greater part of their midday rally. The market rallied in the first half of the last hour to around the opening level and became quiet.

Steel rallied to 128 5-8 compared with 128 7-8, the early high. C. P. R. was 159 1-2, the high of the day. Other features at 2:30 were: Alcohol, 155 1-2; Union Pac., 135; Studebaker, 81 7-8; Republic Iron, 92 7-8; Reading, 94 1-4; So. Shortly before the close the market had a further rally conspicuous features in that connection being Alcohol to 157, U. S. Steel to 129, Crucible to 90¼ and Beth. Steel B to 140¾. It is presumed that shorts were inclined to cover up contracts rather than carry them over the holiday. The Russian drive in Galicia had a good effect.

Notes on Exchange

Fourth of July in the grain trade will be as follows: Chicago, Minneapolis, Baltimore, Kansas City, St. Louis, Duluth and Toledo will close July 3 and 4.

The onion growers of the South evidently feel the irony of fate. Their onion crops, much increased owing to the high price of onions last fall, are now matured. The price offered them, however, is not up to expectations, and they are refusing to sell. Two months ago they could have commanded any figure. Now nobody even wants the onions as a gift.

NOW FIGHT OVER WHO IS DELAYING U. S. FOOD BILL

Special to The Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the "wet" and "dry" fight growing in bitterness, and the shadow of the new closure rule over the chamber, the Senate resumed debate on the Food Bill at 11 o'clock today.

The usually mild tactics of Senator Chamberlain, in charge of the Bill, have given way to a sharper generalship. His aides, friends of the Food Bill on both sides of the Senate, are buckling on their armament prepared to use vigorous efforts to shatter any attempt ed filibuster.

Senator Chamberlain said early today that he is going to have a record vote on a limited debate rule "for the benefit of the country." The vote probably will come Thursday. Meantime, conferences went on while the Senate talked on amendments to the Food Bill.

If it is seen that no closure can possibly be adopted until after the "dry" amendment to the measure is disposed of, it is likely an effort will be made to vote on that amendment very soon.

Both "wets" and "drys" today were charging each other with being responsible for delaying passage of the Food Bill.

QUIET TONE, MOST PRICES ARE STEADY

The local market continued dull in the afternoon, and no changes of consequence developed, despite the rally near the close in Wall street.

The War Bonds continued active, and the early discrepancy in the price of the 1931 issue and that of the 1937 issue was rectified when the former rallied to 94 1-4, after having sold at 93 13 to 93 3-4 in the forenoon, while the 1937 issue was active at 94 1-8 to 94 3-8.

In the afternoon the 1937 issue was 94¼ to 94 and the 1925 at 94¼.

Steamships was active and fractionally easier at 43, compared with 43¼ in the forenoon. Civic Power eased off under some liquidation from 75⅞ to 75½.

Other features were Smelters 25, Steel of Canada 58, Quebec Ry. 19⅛, Brompton Paper 47.

C. P. R. GROSS EARNINGS

C.P.R. gross earnings for the last nine days of June show an increase of $566,000 compared with the same week a year ago. For the first three weeks of June there were gains of $253,000, $536,000 and $308,000 respectively.

WINDERMERE.

COL. GUTHRIE IS BACK FROM U. S., FILLED BATTALION

Special to The Star.

FREDERICTON, N.B., July 3.—Lieut.-Co.: P. A. Gutrie, the officer commanding the 236th Kilties Battalion, returned to New Brunswick today from the United States, where he has been carrying on such a successful campaign for his battalion. He is in St. John this afternoon conferring with Gen. McLean. Accompanying the Colonel were a party of recruits who ave been enlisted in Boston.

Lieut.-Col. Guthrie said today upon his arrival that there had been no lull in recruiting for the British or Canadian forces in New England to the time he left Boston, although work had been carried on for the past two weeks or more without a band or anyting else in way of an attraction. Recruits were still coming forward at the rate of more than fifty per day. He declared that it was but natural that there should be a generous response to the call for recruits, inasmuch as this was the first opportunity that had been given British subjects residing in the United States to enlist. He also pointed out tat the big results were no doubt due largely to the fact that it was generally known throughout the United States that details of a plan whereby all British subjects in America would be conscriped, was being put in effect and that naturally men preferred to enlist voluntarily rather than to be conscriped.

RECRUIT IN NEW YORK AND CHICAGO.

Yesterday Capt. J. D. Black, who had charge of the publicity work for the Kilties' campaign in the United States, returned from Boston. He was accompanied by a party of 65 recruits. Capt. Black was asked as to plans of the proposed recruiting trip to New York and Chicago and stated that while application was made to Ottawa by the British Mission to have the Kilties recruiters and pipe band who had done so well in New England, spend most of the month of July on the proposed tour, it was understood that, in asmuch as the Kilties' ranks would then be filled, military headquarters at Ottawa had decided to send the brass and pipe band of the 48th Highlanders at Toronto on this duty instead of the Kilties.

Brig.-Gen. McLean, General Officer Commanding troops in New Brunswick, was in Fdericton yesterday inspecting the Kilties' depot here, and left for St. John last night. The General inspected the baracks as well as recruits who had arrived during the past few days, and last evening he looked over draft of 100 men who left here fully equipped for Valcartier Camp where the main body of the battalion is now training. The General was much pleased with everything that he saw and said that the success of the Kilties' recruiting work in the United States had aroused much interest all over Canada and that everywhere he found military men were highly pleased that Col. Guthrie, after such a game fight had been able to fill up his battalion.

Heretofore, recruits have been coming to Fredericton from New England for other units as well as the 236th, but after this date only recruits for the Kilties will come to Fredericton, as instructions have been issued that all others will go from Boston direct to Aldershot, N.S. via Yarmouth. It is expected that between now and the 10th instant about 400 more recruits, already enlisted for the Kilties, will arrive here and as rapidly as they are fitted out, will be sent forward to Valcartier, expectations being that the depot in Fredericton can be closed by about 15th or 20th of this month. At the present time provisions are being made for shipping another draft of fifty or hundred men to Valcartier on Wednesday night and a further draft will go forward on Friday night.

Mayor Suggests More Speed from Tram Commission

In a statement issued in the form of a "ready made interview," Mayor Martin takes the Tramways commission to task for being a long time at work without showing results. He states in the first place that the delay in the city's handling of the matter which resulted in the commission was due to the obstructive tactics of "a certain element" and remarks that at the time it was considered that a body whose sole task it was to deal with the question would be able to draw up a franchise in a reasonably short time.

The commission, says the mayor, has now been at work between five and six months, a time which he considers would allow them to make very considerable progress. While the mayor realises that the task involves much research, he reminds the commission that the Board of Control had gone far into the question, and placed the results of their labors at the disposal of the commission.

The mayor wonders as the months go by whether the commissioners are giving sufficient time to their work, and whether they are sitting continuously. The Legislature fixed no limit for their session, he points out, because such a precaution was not necessary in view of the calibre of the commissioners elected.

Another consideration is that if the franchise is to be granted this summer, and certain extensions of line ordered, the summer months are precious from the point of view of the construction and engineering department. He concludes by saying that he expects big extensions and improvements of the transportation system when the franchise is put through, which will mean the expenditure of millions and the opening of many new districts hitherto almost inaccessible owing to lack of transportation.

"We have been waiting a long time," concludes the interview, "for this improved transportation, and we are looking to the Tramways Commission for action. The need for action was the sole reason for their appointment."

By Associated Press.

LONDON, July 3.—The reawakening of Russian activity on the battle-front is conspicuously featured by morning newspapers, but few comment on the event. The Times says: "We shall not indulge in premature congratulations," The Times, however and two other papers, assure Russia that their comrades who have borne the brunt of this year's fighting are greatly cheered and inspired to fresh hope by a renewal of the Muscovite offensive. It points out that much severe fighting awaits the Russians before they can hope to capture Przemzany with its strong defences.

Simultaneous resumption of all Allied offensives, now that Russia has at last started in to "do her bit" is expected here today. Petrograd despatches detail no abatement in the Galician attack, with Gen. Brusiloff's troops, fired with their initial successes, continuing to gain ground.

Back in the winter the Allied plans had called for a synchronous offensive campaign in the spring, to be waged on the Western, Northern, Italian and Macedonian fronts. The Hindenburg "strategic retreat" on the Western front hastened the British and French attack. Then came the Russian revolution and total inaction of the Russian troops.

Italy started her offensive on time and in Macedonia Gen. Serrail began a diversion in powerful force. Germany was busy defending her lines on every front, except Russia. And because she waged a clever campaign of fraternization and of separate peace on the Russian front, Germany was able to weather the offensives. If Russia had done her part then, Germany might have been compelled to relinquish great tracts, for sheer lack of men and of munitions to fight simultaneously all her attackers.

From now on, military experts point out today, Germany cannot weaken her Russian lines to stiffen up yielding sections on other fronts, as she has done. She must guard against penetration on every side.

But what is of vastly greater satisfaction here than the mere fact that Russia has started an offensive, is the realization that this time it is an army imbued with full knowledge of the principles of democracy for which the Allies are fighting that is participating for Russia.

It is no longer an army to be disposed of according to the whims of an Imperial autocrat. Every man in the ranks now knows exactly what he is fighting for, realizes Russia must win to hold her freedom, and can be counted on, for this reason, as trebly effective in fighting.

FRENCH PRAISE RUSSIANS

By Associated Press.

PARIS, June 3.—The Russian offence shares with the American army in France the honors of the day in the French newspapers. The splendid news from General Brussiloff's headquarters, coming on the heels of the arrival of the American vanguard, fills France's cup of joy to overflowing. The temporary wave of despondency and impatience which found an outward manifestation in two dozen interpellations of the Government in the Chamber of Deputies, has vanished.

The reappearance of the Russian army on the scene of the great war drama had been discussed in France some time past, but the general public had hardly shared the optimism of public men who returned from visits to Russia.

The Ally's loyalty never had been doubted, but her ability to carry out big military operations at an early date had been questioned. The news, therefore, came as an agreeable surprise, and morning newspapers hastened to make an honorable amend.

"The Russians have just shown the pessimists and sceptics who doubted that they were capable of resuming the offensive that they have lost nothing of their dash and pristine valor," the Matin says. "The revolution has revived Russia patriotism. She is today like immortal France of 1793. Her army regenerated and organized is so to speak an army of volunteers who also have for a motto that of our fathers, 'Victory or Death.' Their effort is only a beginning. It will develop. It is sustained by the greatest force in the world, a force which is essential to the strength of armies—moral confidence."

All newspapers pay the highest tribute to the efforts of Minister of War, M. Kerensky, which made the event possible.

GERMANS ARE DESPERATE

LONDON, July 3.—By Reuter's Ottawa Agency.—Reuter's correspondent at the front gives extracts from a German letter found at Messines Ridge, dated from "A Shell-hole in Hell." It vividly depicts the feelings of the German troops.

"We have been fourteen days under a hellish fire day and night," states the writer. "We crouch together in holes, awaiting our doom with the dead piled up here. All night we lie with gas masks on, as the British fire gas-shells. Hundredweights of aerial torpedoes thrown at us make trench work impossible. So far our division, composed of three regiments, has lost 3,400 men in barely three months.

"We are quite helpless against the British. We cannot sit or lie down. These big British shells would break the heart of a nation. Our artillery dare not fire in the daytime owing to the great activity of the British aeroplanes. We all hope to be taken prisoners; otherwise we shall go mad."

Today's German Official Statement reads as follows:

"Army group of Prince Leopold:

Although between the Baltic and the Pripet the activity of the fighing increased only at Riga and Smorgon, there was heavy artillery fighting on the middle course of the Stokhod, where Russian local attacks, on the Kovel Lutsk railway line failed with heavy losses, and also on the Zlota Lipa.

"The battle in East Galicia continued. Breaking forward across the heights on the western bank of the Stripa, Russian massed attacks succeeded in extending northward the gap which the enemy made in our lines on the previous day.

Assistance given by our reserves enabled us to cause the enemy to halt. At Koniuchy strong Russian attacks in the morning and afternoon broke down with heavy losses in front of our new positions. Further south the enemy up to the present time has not found strength to repeat his attacks against the height positions at Brzezany.

"In the Carpathians the situation is unchanged.

"Rumanian and Macedonian front: There is nothing to report."

RUSSIANS RECORD SUCCESS

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, July 3.—The Russians captured positions to the westward of the Narayuvka river. Many guns were taken and turned against the enemy.

The text of the official statement is as follows:

"In the direction of Ziochoff our offensive continues successfully. Yesterday afternoon, after a severe stubborn battle, the Zoraisky Regiment occupied the village of Presovce, while the gallont troops of the Fourth Finnish division and the Cneshkoslovatsky brigade occupied the strongly fortified enemy positions on the heights to the west and southwest of the village of Zboroff and the fortified village of Korshiduv.

"Three lines of enemy trenches were penetrated. The enemy then retired across the Little Stripa.

"The Finns have taken 1,560 officers and soldiers prisoners, while their captures include four trench mortars, nine machine guns, and one bomb thrower. The Chesshotatsky brigade captured 62 officers and 3,150 soldiers, 15 guns, and many machine guns. Many of the captured guns were turned against the enemy.

"Enemy positions to the west of the Narayuvkaalso were taken. Altogether in Monday's battle in the neighborhood of Ziochoff we took 6,300 prisoners, officers and soldiers, twenty-one guns, sixteen machine guns, and several bomb throwers. Prisoners are continuing to arrive.

"Southeast of Brzezany the battle continues with less intensity. In Sunday's battle in this region we took prisoner 53 officers and 2,200 men.

SCHEIDEMANN AND HIS PEACE TALK OPENLY ABUSED

Special Star Cable by Canadian Press.

Amsterdam, July 3.—Peculiar developments are now in progress in Germany, though the details are excluded from the press. It is evident a full tide of reaction is following the failure of Herr Scheidemann's attempt at a pro-German Socialist peace conference at Stockholm. Those who used him as a tool are now applying to the Socialist leader every epithet of abuse.

While the Frankfurter Zeitung is still muzzled, other newspapers are hurling a veritable avalanche of denunciation at Scheidemann and all his works. The Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten summons the Chancellor to intervene and prevent Scheidemann and hairbrained men like him from going about the country propagating absurd ideas. The newspaper says if the Government fails to take action Germany will enter a period of heated internal party conflicts. The Bremen Burgerzeitung says the conservatives as a political party are frantically maintaining their opposition to any serious reform of the German Government. Germania, the Catholic organ, declares the longer the war continues the more domestic peace is threatened. It is now clearer than ever that the Reichstag reform committee, formed supposedly under the Kaiser's auspices after President Wilson drew his distinction between the autocratic German Government and the German people, is only a device for shelving reform projects.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST POLAND.

Another indication of reaction is afforded by the press campaign against Poland, which was started in the Kolnische Zeitung and has been widely followed.

The Duesseldorff General Anzeiger says there were riots in Dusseldorff Thursday in which alien workmen participated. Shops were damaged and plundered, alcoholic liquors, especially, being stolen. Citizens allowed these enemy aliens to share in the booty without hindrance. The police, who were reinforced by troops, made many arrests. The military commandant issued orders forbidding street gatherings.

It was decreed that all saloons and amusement places should be closed at 9 o'clock at night, except the municipal theatre and Opera House. The public was warned not to loiter in the streets as an order was given to act ruthlessly to anybody offering resistance to the police.

Commenting on Premier Lloyd George's Glasgow address on Friday, in which he said the end of the war with out the Allied aims won and guaranteed would be the greatest disaster, the Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung says that although it contains nothing new it is another indication that England needs peace.

"I told him he couldn't kiss me."
"Well?"
"Nothing. It's rather pleasant to have people differ with you now and then, don't you think?—New York Tribune.

COMMENCE PROBE INTO NIAGARA CAR WRECK TODAY

By Canadian Press.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., July 3.—An inquiry into Sunday afternoon's trolley wreck in the Niagara Gorge, was begun here today by J. William O'Brian, Assistant District Attorney of Niagara county.

W. J. Creighton, an inspector for the Great Gorge Route, told the district attorney today that a telephone call giving the warning was received by William Piper, assitant superintendent of the line. A car was called immediately and rushed to the Gorge, but it arrived too late to prevent the disaster. About the same time a car crew reported at the barns that the track weakened under their car as it passed the point where the washout occurred.

Supt. Piper acted promptly and in the quickest possible way to meet the emergency, other officials of the road claim. The emergency car reached the scene of the washout quicker than it would have been possible to get the power house and cut off the electric current.

British Bomb Turk Forces a Mile from Walls of Jerusalem

Special to The Star.

TORONTO, July 3.—A special London cable to the Mail and Empire says:

A Times despatch from headquarters in Egypt says:

"General Allenby, in assuming command of the Egyptian expeditionary force, finds the operations on the Palestine front conducted by forces deeply entrenched within a short distance of each other.

"An air squadron attacked the headquarters of the 4th Turkish army, a mile from the walls of Jerusalem, and dropped fifty bombs on the buildings.

"The Turks say that the British bombed the holy city of Jerusalem, sacred alike to Mohammedans and Christians, but that, thanks to God, there was no damage. The city was not bombed, but four bombs hit the Turkish headquarters."

SOCIALIST MAJORITY

Scheidemann Obtains Majority in Metal Workers

By Canadian Press.

COPENHAGEN, July 3.—Following of Philipp Scheidemann, majority Socialist leader, among the German Conservative Socialists, triumphed in the National Convention of the German Metal Workers Union at Cologne, though by the narrow margin of 63 to 54 votes.

The Radicals had attempted to swing the union into line in favor of a policy of strike demonstrations and to secure resolutions rebuking the Union leaders for co-operating with the Government in stopping the food strike in April. The move, however, failed by the margin of nine votes.

WANTS WHITE MOB PUNISHED.

Special to The Star by United Press.

NEW YORK, July 3.—"Swift and severe punishment" for the mob which wiped out the negro section of East St. Louis and burned their property was demanded by the Socialist leader, William English Walling, in a telegram to President Wilson today. "Such punishment is necessary," Walling said, "because of the dangerous effect of race riots in America on revolutionary Russia, South America and Japan."

Walling characterized the uprising as partly the result of German agents' efforts to stir up a race war to keep American troops at home, and partly the result of an attempt by the Southern States to keep the negro under their thumb.

CANADIAN ARMY SPORTS.

LONDON, July 3—Six sports meetings have been arranged by the Canadian Y. M. C. A., in the Canadian training areas in England. Yesterday, Capt. WHAT GERMANS READ

The Cologne Gazette is publishing a series of articles on the cost of the war and its financial consequences. The articles are full of good resolutions and advice for the future, explaining how Germany is going to work miracles by "doubling and trebling German work" and by all sorts of economy. It is calculated that in order to heal her economic wounds and set her peace machine going again Germany will require in the first year after the war special expenditure of from £300,000,000 to £350,000,000.

The main object of the articles, however, seems to be to restore public belief in the prospects of a large indemnity for Germany. The general argument is, of course, that Germany must extract money from her enemies because she cannot do without it, but the Cologne Gazette is now good enough to sketch for the first time the probable German demand. It says:

"The extent of our claims cannot be discussed here, but, in any case, we might well consider the idea that our enemies should pay us annually for a series of years from £250,000,000 to £300,000,000, and that they should pay it in the first years, while they also will be short of money, in raw materials, which would render us good service in the restoration of our economic system. In the later years they would pay in gold for the redemption of our debt.

In any case, the war indemnity is the most pressing demand which we shall have to make at the conclusion of peace. It will carry us over the period of stagnation which otherwise awaits us, and it will to a great extent put upon the right shoulders the leaden weight of milliards of which the former Secretary of State for the Treasury spoke at a time when the weight was not nearly so oppressive.

TIME TO PLEDGE LOYALTY, AVERS LIEUT.-GOVERNOR

"This Confederation has proven in fact to be for our advantage and prosperity, and has ensured us British laws, British connection and British freedom, increasing and developing our social and material welfare. This anniversary, coming in the present circumstances, supplies its own reflections. But I am sure to express your own sentiments of loyalty in saying that no better opportunity can be offered us to pledge our devoted allegiance to the constitution organized by our fathers' wisdom under the British Crown." So spoke Sir Evariste LeBlanc, Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, yesterday, following his inspection of the troops of the Montreal Garrison on Fletcher's Field.

Sir Evariste congratulated Major-General E. W. Wilson, and the officers under his command, for the splendid parade which he had witnessed. "Our army, product of our national courage," he said, "is supported by the enthusiasm and pride of the whole Canadian nation. It is composed of valor, skill and energy, and our history will contain no brighter pages than those which will record the military achievements of the gallant youths, who have freely offered their services when they felt that they were needed by their country. Patriotism has been strengthened by their example, so that the call of duty has been heard by all those who are not blind to the present position of Canada.

"The war in which we are now engaged makes more significant the celebration which we commemprate today. Fifty years ago distinguished statesmen, representing the British Colonies of Canada, met in a spirit of conciliation and with an anxious desire to promote their union. They were impressed with the idea contained in the words of the resolution —"That the best interests and present and future prosperity of British North America would be promoted by a federal union under the Crown of Great Britain.'"

Sir Evariste LeBlanc returned to Quebec this morning.

OUTPOSTS ADVANCE THOUSAND YARDS ON 1 1-2 MILE FRONT

Special Canadian Press Cable by Stewart Lyon.

Canadian Headquarters in France, Monday, July 2, via London, July 3.—On the sector of the front to the west and south of Mericourt, during the past two nights, our outposts have been advanced almost a thousand yards along a front of over a mile and a half, practically without opposition from the enemy.

There had been on this part of the plain a wide stretch of "No Man's Land" between the trench systems of the opposing armies. Encounters between patrols occasionally have taken place out there, but the territory was not effectively occupied either by the enemy or ourselves.

To the west of Lens, in the sector north of the River Souchez, where there had been an almost continuous artillery duel since Thursday, varied by infantry thrusts and counter-thrusts, affairs have settled down a bit this afternoon. The cannonading has become less violent.

In a former despatch, I spoke of the splendid valor of the British troops engaged in these operations. Later information indicates that in the fierce house-to-house fighting which has been the chief feature of the advance, they enhanced their already high reputation.

The Dominion Day sports were most successful. The weather was that of a cloudless July day. There were baseball and football championship games, tugs-of-war, and foot races between teams representing the various divisions. A Pierrot show in the open drew a great audience. It was a flawless day, but for the absence of girls and ice cream.

KAMP KANAWANA SEASON IS BEGUN WITH FINE ECLAT

Kamp Kanawana, the Montreal Y. M. C. A. boys' summer home, is now in operation for the season. Some forty were in attendance at the opening, a larger number than attended the opening last year; and indications point to successful camp activities.

Several improvements have been made this year to add to the comfort and efficiency of the camp. An abundant supply of water is assured for the kitchen by a pump run by a gasolene engine. The campus in front of the dining pavilion has already proven its worth. Many a game of playground ball and volley ball will be contested there. The boats and canoes have been overhauled and a water system introduced that will make the chute more popular.

Baseball teams are being picked and the Kanawana National League with a full seasons' games is getting busy.

Tents were arranged at the opening as follows:

Tent B—Dr. Philly, Allen, L. Baird, Black; Tent C—N. Spinney, McEwen, Gough, Ward, Nelson, Hyman; Tent D—McGruer, Ellis, S. Ross, Clarke, Laidlaw, Hobson; Tent E—Wallace, Birks, Wright, Williams, Jeffrey Hough; Tent F—Brown, Loudon, W. Baird, Teall, J. Ross, Lauer; Tent G—Crawford, Passingham, Massey, Wrigley, Money.

The camp director is John G. MacKinnon. Others present have been Dr. Bushby, F. H. Spinney, educational director, J. Earl Birks and R. B. Ross, Jr.

BLACKS SHOT DOWN IN HUNDREDS AND COLONY BURNED

East St. Louis Today is a Shambles Running with Blood

Special to The Star by United Press.

EAST ST. LOUIS, July 3. — The sun rose today on a city fire-swept and running with blood. One hundred negroes are believed dead and more than five hundred injured as the result of one of the worst race riots in the history of the country.

The city was under martial law today and the soldiers are believed to have the situation in hand.

Property loss from fires, which were started simultaneously in a dozen sections of the city last night, was estimated at $1,500,000.

"I believe the worst is over," Colonel S. O. Tripp, personal representative of Governor Lowden in command of the eight companies of the Illinois National Guard patrolling the city, told the United Press at an early hour today. The mob seems to have spent itself. Fighting has dwindled to desultory firing in different parts of the city and most of the fires have burned out."

Only two white men, Detective Sergeant Coppedge, who was killed by a negro mob at one o'clock Monday morning, and William Keyser, a hardware merchant, are known dead, though a score are badly wounded in hospitals.

The rioting was at its height between six o'clock and midnight. A United Press Correspondent counted the bodies of seven negroes lying in the streets within a block of the intersection of the town's main business thoroughfares. Another negro, beaten into insensibility, was hanged to a post half a block from the corner while a squad of twenty-five militiamen looked on helplessly.

The mob at eight o'clock last night numbered about ten thousand persons, authorities estimated. The city was virtually under martial law, after the frantic pleas from Mayor Moliman, whose life was several times threatened, a few minutes after eight o'clock two new companies of militia from Shelbyville and Effingham arrived. The men were met at the station by motor vans and hurried to the riot district.

250 ARRESTED BY SOLDIERS.

Leaping from the vans they deployed and started up the street in wide formation. There was a crisp order, rifle bolts clicked, and the men advanced. A crowd was dragging an aged negro who had been beaten nearly insensible, at the end of a rope. It was surrounded by the soldiers and the entire mob of about 250 arrested and hurried to jail. In the number was a newspaper reporter and many bystanders. After being detained several hours, all but seventy-five, believed leaders in the mob, were released.

The "Black Valley," a negro tenement belt running through the heart of the city, was a mass of flames by seven o'clock. Hundreds of negroes crowded in their homes until driven out by the flames. As they ran out they were shot down. Many of the bodies were dragged to Cahokia Creek and thrown into the water.

Hundreds of half-grown boys and young girls were in the mob. When three negroes were shot down at the intersection of Collingsville and State streets, a crowd of white women swooped down on their bodies, kicking them and beating them with stones and clubs.

Well-dressed girls and women, hair flying and clothing covered with blood, led units of the mob. Two girls, not more than nineteen years old, boarded a street car and dragged off an old negro woman. They beat her into insensibility with their shoes.

Frank S. Dickson, Adjutant-General of Illinois, reached the city at 12:30 this morning and was taken over the riot district by the State Attorney, Mr. Schaumleffer. "It is the most terrible sight I have ever witnessed," said Dickson.

A surging mob hunting a negro physician, L. M. Bundy, rushed past the adjutant-general's car. They did not find Bundy, believed to be one of the men who incited the blacks to Monday morning's outbreak, and it is supposed he has left the city.

The city was placed in darkness when white and black mobs cut all light wires. Negroes did it so they would have a chance to escape; the rioters, whites, so they could evade militiamen.

The fires which were set by the mobs during the night in five different parts of the city where negroes lived, besides burning nearly two hundred negro cottages destroyed more than one hundred loaded freight cars.

TROOPS TOLD NOT TO SHOOT.

The troops who were on duty during the most serious disturbances, being under civil authority, were ordered not to shoot. This resulted in a number of rifles being taken forcibly from the soldiers.

In explanation of the failure of the troops to fire on the mobs, General Dickson, the commander, said the purposes for which the troops had been sent had been gained without firing, and that wholesale bloodshed would have been the result of any firing on the part of the troops.

One of the results of the fires was to plunge parts of the city in darkness and surgeons at St. Mary's Hospital and the emergency operating room, opened in the city hall, were forced to do their work while policemen held flashlights or candles over the tables.

Firemen, aided by many units from the Missouri side, carried on an unavailing battle against the spreading flames. More than twelve blocks were burned. The Broadway Opera House was destroyed with a loss of $100,000. The Southern freight house was still burning early today, and the loss is estimated at $250,000.

200 HOMES BURNED.

More than 200 negro homes, shacks, tenements and apartments were burned.

Traffic across all bridges leading to the Illinois side was stopped. Militiamen held the crowd back with bayonets, and there was a great deal of scattered fighting. A man on the bridge fired a fusillade of shots at a log floating in the river. He thought it was a negro swimming to the Missouri side.

At midnight word reached the rioters that a thousand blacks from Carondolet, Granite City, Belleville and other points had armed and were approaching the city. For a time there was panic. Several hundred whites who had barricaded themselves in a schoolhouse with their families were attacked by negroes, but militiamen rescued them.

The conduct of the guardsmen brought nothing but praise. Many of them were under fire for the first time. Boys, dressed in overalls and street coats, evidently fresh from work, had only their rifles and cartridge belts.

100 DEAD, 750 INJURED.

"I believe there are more than 100 negroes dead," the Chief of Police, Con. Hickey, said today. "We have 108 names on an incomplete list, but have not found all the bodies. I estimate the injured, whites and blacks at 750, but any statement at this time can be no more than an estimate."

The fire loss probably will reach $3,000,000," Hickey said.

Fifteen square blocks are burned over. Troops have been ordered to shoot to kill in case rioting is resumed.

USE DRASTIC MEASURES.

Special to The Star by United Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., July 3.—"Use drastic measures if necessary to stop the outrages at East St. Louis."

This was the blanket order transmitted by Governor Lowden to Adjutant-Gen. Dickson at East St. Louis shortly before noon today.

U. S.-CANADIAN TREATY TO HARNESS WHIRLPOOL RAPIDS

Special to The Star.

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 3. — Harnessing of the Whirlpool rapids below Niagara Falls, with the development of not less than half a million horse power on the Canadian side, and an equal amount on the American side, will be proposed, it was stated by prominent Senators to The Star correspondent today, within the next few months.

This proposal will take the form of a suggested treaty between the U. S. and Canada, enlarging the treaty already in effect by which the U. S. takes 20,000 cubic feet a second from the Niagara river above the falls, and Canada takes 36,000 cubic feet a second.

This treaty is contemplated, though not mentioned, in the resolution just passed by Congress extending the temporary permits to power plants at the falls.

SUPPLIES SHORT

U. S. Cannot Supply Unfederalized National Guard

Special to The Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Inability to obtain necessary supplies for the National Guard organizations not in the Federal service is admitted by the Militia Bureau of the War Department. It is said that the bureau had gone thoroughly into the subject of National Guard equipment and has made every effort to obtain the supplies needed, but without success.

All National Guard organizations not yet in Federal service are affected. Militia not Federalized was announced by the WWar Department on June 10 as composed of 5,321 officers and 146,744 men.

RUSH SUPPLIES

Capt. Bartlett Sails with Food for Macmillan Party in Greenland

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., July 3. — The steamer Neptune on which Captain Robert A. Bartlett is proceeding for Etah, Greenland, with supplies for the relief of the Crocker Land expedition headed by Donald B. Macmillan sailed, yesterday for Sydney, N. S., to take on bunker coal. Captain Bartlett expects to leave Sydney for the north land this week.

The Macmillan party, which is at Etah, is said to have sufficient supplies to last only until about August 1, and will be in dire need if the Neptune does not reach there by that time. Eight tons of provisions and other supplies shipped from New York are at Sydney to be put abroad the Neptune.

SISTERS RETURN AFTER 20 YEARS' SERVICE IN NORTH

After twenty years of service as missionaries to the Indians in Alaska, Sisters Magdalen and Mary, of the Sacred Heart, arrived at the mother house of the St. Ann's Sisters, at Lachine yesterday, for a six weeks' holiday, following which they will return to their labors at the Holy Cross Mission and Nulato, on the Yukon river. During the twenty years that they have been absent the sisters, who are French-Canadians, have seen but little of each other, for their posts are 250 miles apart. In the winter, letters took more than three months to reach them and, after the censor had ordered a wireless station in the district closed, there was little news of the war. Sister Mary was in the Yukon district when there was the first rush for gold—the days Robert Service wrote about in his "Trail of the '98."

Few summer tourists reach as far as Nulato or the Holy Cross. Black fly, mosquito and gnats are very plentiful and some of the country is almost impassable on account of them. As a contrast to the summer weather, the temperature in winter is often sixty degrees below zero.

The sisters' work among the Indians consists chiefly in educating the children. The Alaska Indian takes kindly to Christianity, but the race is sadly diminishing through disease, chiefly tuberculosis and typhoid. The children are very intelligent and learn drawing, painting or modelling quickly. But after they have been in the bush with their parents, it often takes two months to restore the veneer of civilization. Some of the girls are half-breeds, and consider themselves a great deal better than the ordinary "Indians." One of them was even heard to reproach her mother with being an Indian. Sisters Magdalen and Mary will see their relatives during their stay at Mount St. Ann, Lachine.

"Beware!" is Warning of Patriotic Fund to Soldiers' Families

It has been brought to the notice of the executive of the local branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund that there are several men calling upon soldiers' families in the city, stating that they are representatives of the Patriotic Fund, endeavoring to sell various articles and taking orders for coal, usually asking for cash deposits. As the Fund has no such representatives working for them here, the officials wish to warn soldiers' families to have nothing whatever to do with any parties so representing themselves and to abstain from signing any contract whatever. The only persons visiting from the Fund are lady visitors, who are well known to the families. If any families wish for assistance, they are requested to consult with the regular visitor as usual, or to apply direct to the relief offices, in the Drummond Building, at the corner of St. Catherine and Peel streets, where any help or advice will be gladly given.

The Patriotic Fund, especially the Montreal branch, has endeavored from the commencement of the war to take the place of the soldier, as far as possible, not only in the granting of financial relief to the dependents, but also in taking a friendly interest in their troubles. Its officers are always prepared to give assistance.

DETAILS OF MEN MENTIONED IN CASUALTY LIST

Pte. Roland Decelles, reported killed in action, was the son of Arthur Decelles, 1069 Dorchester street east. He enlisted two years ago with a battalion recruited in Belleville, Ont., and was twenty-two years of age. His father, who is past middle age, also enlisted for overseas service being sent to Bermuda with a local unit for garrison duty. His age, however, was against him and when his battalion was sent to England he was returned to Canada.

PTE. G. SLY.

Pte. George Sly, listed as wounded, went across with a local construction battalion about a year ago, previous to which he was in the employ of the C. P. R. at Farnham, Que., as a foreman. He is 33 years of age. He was born in England, but had resided in Canada since a boy. His wife and child are at present living at 1256 Mary Ann street east.

PTE. P. OLSEN.

Pte. Peter Olsen, who is reported as unofficially a prisoner of war, is the son of Peter Olsen, 261 Papineau avenue. His three brothers are also in khaki and on active service. Pte. Olsen enlisted with a Western Highland battalion, having at the time been living in Regina where he worked as a steamfitter. Before he left Montreal four years ago he was a member of the Army Medical Corps.

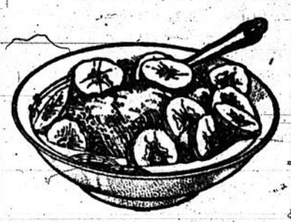

PTE. E. CHEEPER.

Pte. Ernest Cheeper, reported wounded, went across with the 148th Battalion, under Lieut.-Col. Magee. He is 22 years of age, being born in Montreal and the only boy in a family of eight. The message received by his mother who resides at 35 Payette street, states that her son is suffering from gun shot wounds in the neck.

MAN INJURED ON RETURN FROM RACES

A street car accident, which may prove fatal, occurred last evening at the bridge which crosses the C.P.R. tracks near Blue Bonnets race course. Walter Cochrane, aged 38 years, of 22 First avenue, Lachine, was standing on the step of a crowded car, which was returning from the races. When the car reached the bridge, a side hand rail caught Cochrane's feet and dragged him from the steps. He was rolled a few yards and then fell fifteen feet over an embankment. A special car hurried him to the General Hospital, where he regained consciousness though his condition is serious. It is feared he suffered internal injuries in addition to severe contusions.

Strength in Summer comes to the man or woman whose daily diet consists of cereals and fruits. Meat and potatoes are a heavy load on the digestive organs. The ideal Summer diet is Shredded Wheat Biscuit, a food that is 100 per cent. whole wheat and prepared in a digestible form. For breakfast with sliced bananas or berries, with milk or cream.

IRISH REFERENDUM.

LONDON, July 3. — Sir Horace Plunkett, in a letter urging William O'Brien to reconsider his decision not to participate in the approaching Irish convention, says that while he has no official authority for the statement, he has the best of reasons for believing that the findings of the Convention will be submitted to a referendum if the Convention scheme fails to meet with popular favor.

SELF-PRAISE BY U. S. CONDEMNED AS TREACHEROUS

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Wall Street Journal published the following editorial yesterday.

"It has more than once been remarked abroad that Americans have an insatiable appetite for praise. We cannot deny the soft impeachment. On the contrary, it has become our settled habit to forestall a possible shortage of imported appreciation by turning out a huge quantity of the same stuff at home. In ordinary times the industry may have been comparatively harmless, but it holds no end of possible mischief for a nation straining under the colossal burdens of this war of wars.

"Hardly an American newspaper has failed to speak of the movement of the first contingent of our troops to France, as something 'wholly unprecedented in magnitude, promptness and all-around efficiency.' In the absence of exact data as to the number of troops, quantity of supplies and equipment, and ships involved, there was, of course, every opportunity for exuberant glorification. Perhaps it was justified, but we do not know.

"It would be just as well to remember that the first contingent of Canadian troops, transported only a little shorter distance by water, was 33,000 men. Is it either safe or becoming to us to assume that more than that number of our own soldiers are already at Pershing's disposal? What of the half million which Britain moved three times the distance in the Boer War.

"Those first glowing descriptions of the vast new mercantile marine, with which, on paper, we averted Great Britain's peril have even now been laid aside for sober blueprints of shipyards yet to be. We have felt the first thrill over our armada of the purple twilight painfully transformed into a realization of the months of slow industrial processes that must intervene before we essay our first big drive overhead. Yet we struggled for words to express our exultation over the unquestionably fine success of the Liberty Loan, which will finance our belligerency for less than a year.

"Americans have never had much use for pessimism, and they do well to despise it more heartily today than ever. The point is that their appetite for praise, particularly for self-praise, is sure to get in their way, to prevent their speeding up to the necessary war pace, unless they get it under restraint. We need to think less about the magnitude of what we have done, which is after all only a good beginning, and more about what we have yet to do. Confidence in ourselves and our leaders let us have by all means, but there is such a thing as the blindness of complacency."
