

Public works preliminary report states

City street repairs to cost $3.5M

Confusion over park project

SHERBROOKE — What you want, what is acceptable to other people and what you are entitled to do are three different things, local building contractor Dorilas Grenier will tell you.

What Mr. Grenier would like to do is build a $1,750,000 housing project on a piece of land he owns in the East Ward, formerly known as Badger farm.

What home owners in that zone want is a smaller project, one calling for 75 apartments and costing only $1,125,000 that is, providing the city purchases a strip of land belonging to Mr. Grenier and turns it into a park.

However, what is acceptable to the city is a third project, costing about $1,400,000 and calling for a total 192 new apartments to be built, with no mention of the park.

Really, now what's a building contractor supposed to do?

Such is the outcome of a meeting last night at city hall between council, the building contractor and a group of property owners from zone C-14, in the East Ward.

Armed with the knowledge of Webster and Larousse, lawyer Pierre C. Fournier, acting on behalf of the bewildered building contractor, told the councilmen that the only solution to the months-old dilemma was to have the city purchase a strip of land owned by his client and turn it into a park.

And the park-loving home owners were the first to rally to the lawyer's proposition.

Acting on first hand information, the group of property owners informed council that the site on which the proposed building project was to be built on had been destined by former rulings to fulfill a much nobler role and be turned into a park.

As much as their love for wide open green spaces on Chalifoux St. was apparent, so was the need to compromise and attempt to offer some consolation to the building contractor.

So out it came, the conspiracy, meekly disguised as a plea for understanding. "Dammit, buy the land, turn it into a park, and let the contractor go about his business of building houses."

City council, on the other hand, up to its ears with parks everywhere in the city, gave a nod of approval and fell back into its defensive tactics, that is, how to avoid a park boom, and informed the group it would see if it could afford the price tag.

Back in closed chambers, the 12 wise men decided to ask for a report to determine what money could be used to buy off the land and endeavor to content the grass loving zone residents.

Next week's council meeting will tell us whether taxpayers can petition the city with grass.

Police blame rape rate rise on miniskirts

LINEUP OF MINISKIRT INDICATES EXTENT OF PROBLEM

TORONTO (CP) — A Metropolitan Toronto police spokesman said Monday he agreed with findings published in The Law Officer which indicate the rise in miniskirts has caused a corresponding rise in rape and indecent assault.

"Abbreviated costumes are no doubt a factor in offences against women," said Sergeant George Gough of the Metro morality squad.

"When a girl in a short skirt is followed by a man after she gets off a streetcar at night, there isn't much doubt as to what may have attracted her assailant."

He said it would be senseless for police to ask thousands of girls to stop wearing miniskirts.

The Law Officer, published by the International Conference of Police Associations, said miniskirts were conducive to sexual assault.

Surveys indicated 91 per cent of policemen believed the

Since the miniskirt was introduced by London designer Mary Quant in 1964, incidents of rape had increased by 68 per cent in the United States and by 90 per cent in England, the magazine said.

The article acknowledges that relaxation of public moral standards and greater permissiveness in films and television probably contributed to the increase in sex crimes.

Six persons to take stand today at inquiry into bombing wave

MONTREAL (CP) — Four men and two women were to testify Monday night at a special fire commissioner's inquiry into the recent wave of dynamite bombings in the Montreal area.

The six persons, who appeared briefly at the inquiry Monday afternoon and were ordered detained until called to give evidence, are:

Nicole Roy, 26, unemployed; Maude Martin, 26, secretary; Claude Morency, 19, unemployed; Francoise Lanctot, 21, laborer; Pierre Carrier, 30, unemployed plumber; Andre Roy, 23, part-time taxi driver.

Mr. Roy asked permission at the afternoon session to see a lawyer, saying the six had been held for 24 hours "without seeing anyone."

He was assured by Cyrille Delage, Quebec City notary conducting the inquiry, that the six witnesses would not suffer any injustices.

The inquiry was announced earlier Monday by Justice Minister Jerome Choquette who said five "important witnesses" would testify. He believed they could "explain how these explosions occurred and who are the responsible persons."

Mr. Choquette said the inquiry would cover 12 recent bombings, starting with an explosion at the Board of Trade building near the Montreal waterfront May 24 and including more recent bombings in the suburbs of Westmount and Outremont.

The justice minister called the news conference in the wake of the arrest of six persons and the seizure of at least 350 pounds of dynamite in two weekend raids.

Three men and a woman were arrested in a Sunday raid on a chalet in Prevost, 30 miles north of Montreal, where police also found $28,260 in cash-believed to have been taken in armed holdups-weapons and "material usually used in bomb fabrication" such as detonators, some dynamite, clocks, batteries and wires.

ARREST TWO OTHERS

The other two arrests came later, after police found 350 pounds of dynamite in a suburban Laval home.

Mr. Choquette said the five "important witnesses" included one woman, but declined to say what had happened to the sixth person arrested or whether the arrests resulted from a tip received by police.

He considered it was "not in the public interest" to disclose any further details immediately.

Earlier a police spokesman had credited a University of Montreal student with providing a tip that led to the raids.

Mr. Delage had been designated to hold the inquiry as "special commissioner by virtue of the Fire Investigations Act." Under terms of this recent provincial legislation, those who testify before a fire commissioner's inquiry are "witnesses" only, and there are no accused.

The last time a fire commissioner's inquiry was held to investigate Montreal-area bombings was last year, and led to the arraignment of terrorist bomber Pierre-Paul Geoffroy, 25, on 124 charges arising from 31 bombing incidents.

FAIRTIME CHUCKWAGON — It's fair time again in the Eastern Townships and leading off this year's parade of rural extravaganzas will be the Richmond Fair which begins June 25. It features everything from baking contests through to egg throwing matches to please every jaded whim. To promote the fair, organizers yesterday sent a covered wagon through various ET communities to spread the good news. The balloons, filled with Helium, each contain a pass to the fair and were later released.

Industrial incentives to stay says Marchand

OTTAWA (CP) — Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand told the Commons Monday that he does not intend to change industrial incentives legislation.

He was replying to James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) who asked whether there would be changes because of a "wide disparity" in grants made to various provinces.

Mr. Marchand said the difference is not as large as Mr. McGrath suggested. But if the program didn't operate well the government would consider changes.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) suggested that services to fishing villages should be included in the special areas legislation.

Mr. Marchand said that if fishing villages are contained in special areas they will be looked after.

Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton-East Richmond) said that Quebec has already received more than 50 per cent of the grants under the regional expansion department's incentives program.

SHERBROOKE — The city of Sherbrooke is seriously considering spending an estimated $3,500,000 to rebuild some of its streets.

According to a preliminary report submitted to city council last night by Roger Charland, head of the Public Works department, the money spent by the city each year in street patch-ups is not sufficient to patch them all.

Meanwhile, council decided last night to add $50,000 to this year's $120,000 street patching budget and hope the additional funds will enable the public works department to finish work within two weeks.

The city's top finance man, Raymond Martin, suggested that the city appropriate $20,000 immediately to the street patching budget, probing into other departments to find the rest.

"It's important for the city to show the lowest deficit possible this year," Mr. Martin said, "keeping in mind provisions contained in Bill 285 of the Cities and Towns Act, calling upon Quebec municipalities to present a balanced budget for 1971."

If the findings revealed in Mr. Charland's report were labelled "astonishing" by council, they also indicated the urgency for the latter to take a stand on a long term plan that would remedy the street situation in Sherbrooke.

Briefly, the report said that an estimated $2,500,000 would have to be spent to rebuild a number of worn out streets, $500,000 to cover up others, preventing them from joining the first group them $600,000 on sidewalks.

Reviewing the findings of the report, Ald. Raymond Martin charged that former councils had refused to allocate money to remedy the street situation.

"Things are really getting out of hand," he said, "considering we are going to spend at least $170,000 alone this year on patch-ups."

North Ward Ald. Everett Nicol, championing the cause of former councils tossed back, "This council is no smarter than the others."

East Ward Ald. Romeo Quintal, chairman of the Public Works commission, concerned about the report told council it is time for them to take a stand on a long term program that would settle the bad street issue.

Nixon wants vote bill court test

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon signed into law Monday a measure giving 18-year-olds the right to vote in federal, state, and local elections in the United States.

But Nixon said he questioned the constitutionality of the provision and directed Attorney-General John N. Mitchell to take it to the Supreme Court urgently to test its legality.

The legislation gives the right to vote to about 11,000,000 more Americans.

Nixon said in a statement that he strongly favors lowering the voting age to 18 from 21 but, along with most constitutional scholars, he felt that Congress had no power to do it by statute.

To resolve the apparent problem as fast as possible, the president said he was directing the attorney general to make swift court test of the measure.

He was also urging Congress to move toward preparing a constitutional amendment to lower the voting age.

The same bill extends for five years the 1965 Voting Rights Act under which nearly 1,000,000 Southern Negroes have been registered.

The legislation is drawn so that if the courts should invalidate section providing for the vote for 18, 19 and 20-year-olds, the remainder of the act would not be affected.

In case the voting age section is knocked out, Nixon asked Congress to go ahead with the process of submitting to the states a constitutional amendment to lower the voting age to 18.

Presidential assistant Leonard Garment told reporters he thinks it would be possible to complete court tests quickly so there would be no question in connection with the 1972 presidential and congressional elections if the act should be upheld.

The bill itself provides for expedited court handling of any challenge to its validity.

On St. Jean Baptiste Day

Politicians to take back seat for festivities

MONTREAL (CP) — It's coming around to Vive la Canadienne time again in Quebec province—St. Jean Baptiste Day.

But June 24, originally set aside to honor the patron saint of French Canada, takes new twists this year.

Politicians are being avoided in Montreal, where an independent group took over organizing the traditional merry-making from the local St. Jean Baptiste Society, affiliated to the 165,000 member provincial federation.

More than 100 years old, the federation has always espoused the cause of French-Canadians. But last November, it voted overwhelmingly in favor of separatism, bringing on a schism.

Organizers elsewhere in the province are making sure the celebrations remain apolitical.

In Montreal, the usual one day fling has been stretched over a week that began last Wednesday. The fun will include dancing Thursday night in the streets of Old Montreal.

But Wednesday, a holiday for most people in the province, is still the highlight. Thousands take in "les defiles"—the gala parades across Quebec.

Outside Montreal, the parades have usually been festive. The mood has turned to violence in Montreal the last two years.

An effort has been made to de-emphasize the role of St. Jean Baptiste. His statue is no longer a part of the parade, itself cut in duration to two hours from five.

In 1969, the statue—always at the end of the parade—was broken by demonstrating youths who toppled the float.

In a move to prevent such occurrences, the city ordered that the parade must be held in daylight instead of at night, and move through predominantly French-speaking east end areas. It previously stopped in English-speaking, west-central Montreal and had attracted up to 1,000,000 spectators.

A police spokesman said security Wednesday will be "ordinary," the usual "that we give St. Jean Baptiste." Last year about 1,000 police patrolled the parade route.

DIDN'T ASK TRUDEAU

Roger Baulau, head of the organizing committee and president of French-language radio station CKLM, said:

"We hope to avoid violence by not inviting Prime Minister Trudeau or the premier of Quebec (Robert Bourassa)."

"Therefore, I doubt that any group will use the celebration to foment trouble... and if they do, they won't have the sympathy of the population."

It was Mr. Trudeau's presence hours before a federal election that sparked a June 24, 1968, riot in which 135 persons were injured.

The 1969 celebrations also created a diplomatic furore when Mr. Trudeau was not invited, but 70 foreign dignitaries were.

Their invitations were cancelled in a flurry over protocol involving the question: Should foreign representatives be invited to an affair which excluded Canadian officials?

BLAST CHANGES MINDS

The Sherbrooke society then invited Mr. Trudeau, but withdrew the invitation after a bomb exploded in its headquarters.

The societies—in Quebec City, Sherbrooke and Valleyfield—will go their separate ways for the fourth straight year in what is supposed to be a day of French-Canadian unity.

They broke away because of the federation's political thinking, although a formal resolution on separatism was not adopted until last November.

The federation has always been Roman Catholic, nationalist and generally white-collar in membership, down by almost half now from a high a few years ago of about 300,000.

THE WELL CHILD®

Growth Rule of Thumb Is Fairly Accurate

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—My daughter, 2, is 38 inches tall. Does this mean that she will be 6 feet 4 when she quits growing? In a recent column you said that female hormones would curb a girl's growth. Is there any disadvantage to this treatment?

A—The rule of thumb used to predict adult height is fairly accurate. I know of no way to curb your daughter's growth except by giving her hormones (hydrocortisone, pituitary or estrogens) when she is 10 or 11 years old. Such treatment, the results of which cannot be guaranteed, should be given only on the advice of her physician when that age is reached. Estrogens must be given only with the full understanding that they will cause enlargement of the breasts and uterus, early onset of menstruation and premature stimulation of sexual desire.

Q—I am a girl, 13. When I go on a roller coaster at the fair I get dizzy. What can I do to get over this?

A—If you go on a roller coaster you are less likely to get dizzy if you lean forward and try to push the car to make it go faster. Persons who are fearful and try to hold back miss all the fun and wind up feeling terrible.

If this doesn't work and, if your doctor approves, you might try an antihistamine 20 or 30 minutes before you go on the ride.

Q—I have heard that sulfa drugs suppress the production of red and white blood cells. Could Gantrisin given to a child cause leukemia?

A—No. In leukemia there is an overproduction of white blood cells.

Advise insurance overhaul

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec government regulations on hospital insurance are inefficient and should be overhauled, W.J. Bennett, president of St. Mary's Hospital, said Monday.

Addressing an annual meeting of the hospital board, he called on Health Minister Claude Castonguay to review and streamline all existing regulations.

Complaining the regulations are not clear and do not improve control of hospital costs, Mr. Bennett said: "The regulations could be better determined by those who are actually responsible for the day to day operation of the hospital."

Ambiguities of the laws were forcing hospital administrators to spend too much time enforcing and interpreting them.

Noting the cost of hospital care accounted for 22 per cent of Quebec's total expenditures last year, he said if the increase rate of the last 10 years continues, other government programs would suffer.

Operating costs for general hospitals in Canada totalled $576,000,000 in 1960 and now that figure has risen to about $1,810,000,000, he said. This was an increase of 214 per cent.

Quebec's hospital costs increased by 362 per cent—a figure accentuated in the rise of costs per patient per day, which rose to $60 from $25 over the 10-year period.

Officials open terminal

MONTREAL (CP) — Government officials of three provinces took part Monday, in opening ceremonies of a new Voyageur bus terminal.

Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick, Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec and Irwin Hackett, Ontario transport minister, were greeted by Louis R. Desmarais, president of Provincial Transport Enterprises Ltd., who presided over inaugural ceremonies at the $2,500,000 centre.

It will serve all out-of-town bus connections for the Montreal area. It includes a master control room using closed-circuit television.

Consult on bridge plans

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has consulted the provinces of Quebec and Ontario and the City of Ottawa and still plans to go ahead with a new bridge from Ottawa to Hull, Que., Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand told the Commons Monday.

Replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Mr. Marchand said the project has been authorized by cabinet and he will carry it out.

Mr. Stanfield had asked whether the government would continue with the project even if Ottawa objected.

Sit-down strike in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Inside postal workers at Montreal's main office and at least two sub-stations conducted sit-down strikes Monday, a post office spokesman reported.

The spokesman said the work stoppages shifted from department to department as workers protested news that the post office will hire casual labor to help clear a backlog on mail.

Because of a 24-hour strike June 12, he said, some letters posted more than a week ago still have not been cleared.

QFL urges conference

QUEBEC (CP) — The general council of the 200,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor will recommend that Quebec's three major unions sponsor a top-level conference this fall.

Some 50 delegates attending the council's weekend meeting here voted in favor of proposing a formal get-together of officials of the QFL, the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Quebec Teachers Corporation.

The delegates also described as "injust, inefficient and above all inapplicable" the wage restraints the Trudeau government has been discussing and threatening.

Federal officials, trying to combat inflation, have set six per cent as an acceptable wage increase.

Keynote remains "Unity"

57th Synod tackles a variety of topics

MASSAWIPPI — The 57th session of the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Quebec met at Quebec Lodge on Lake Massawippi Friday and Saturday, June 19-20.

The session opened with a service in the recreation hall where Clare Scratch was ordained to the Holy Order of Deacons. Archdeacon Guy Marston, of Quebec, gave the opening address and referred back to the pages of history when the first seven men were deacons and of the first seven centuries when their influence was great within the church.

They cared for the finances and the physical needs of the people. They established among themselves many outstanding church duties, but today, he said, the Order of Deacons is somewhat confused.

The Bishop has apostolic powers, he delegates the priests and deacons.

Archdeacon T. Matthews of Lennoxville presented Mr. Scratch to the Bishop for the ordination ceremony. Mr. Scratch is sponsored jointly by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Sherbrooke, the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Diocese of Quebec.

He will become chaplain of Bishop's University, starting his duties in September and will answer the needs of the student body at the university.

After taking his vows as Deacon Russel Brown, Lord Bishop of Quebec, presented him with a copy of the Holy Bible.

The Bishop gave the sermon and said the theme of the 1970 Synod, "Unity", it is as wide as the world itself, but never perhaps in the long history of mankind has there been a greater longing for unity and yet in a world devastated by war and civil commotion we still seem pathetically far from achieving the goal.

This tragic situation should stir in us a deep desire and determined resolve to show ourselves by God's grace, examples of unity for if Christian people cannot manifest unity among themselves, what hope is there for world brotherhood.

There are those who remind us that unity and union are not necessarily the same thing. Unions of separated churches are only valid if they contribute to the ultimate unity of the whole church of God.

Speaking of "Notre Belle Province", he said, it was heartening at our recent elections of the province to know that the dominant mood of Quebecers was strongly in the direction of unity with the rest of Canada.

He said that bilingualism among the clergy is encouraged. He mentioned that the diocese has no postulant, other than Mr. Scratch, for the Holy Orders.

He spoke about stewardship as a concern; about structures, quoting these statistics, saying, of diminishing church population, for in 1900 it was 20,429, to climb to its peak in 1955 with 23,079 and drop to 17,600 in the year 1969.

He added, "There is still for each of us a field of evangelism right at our front doors."

In reference to regional schooling, he made mention of Bill 63 and the reaction to the proposed Bill 62. He noted there are three members of the diocese on the Superior Council of Education which was inception in 1965.

The Bishop said that the cry that comes to us is help, to Share Canada.

He concluded his address with the announcement of his decision to retire after ten years as Lord

Bishop of Quebec, effective August 31, 1971.

The celebration of the Holy Eucharist took place. After a short recess, the 1970 Synod was opened by the Lord Bishop with prayer and a welcome to the large assembly of over 125 priests, laymen and people of the Anglican faith and guests.

Msgr. Moisan of Sherbrooke brought greetings from the Roman Catholics. He spoke his own personal greetings and spoke briefly on unity.

Rev. Geerloff Lokhorst, of Sherbrooke Ministerial Association, brought greetings of his people and asked for God's guidance "in your deliberation on unity".

Later, Rev. A. B. Lovelace, of Lennoxville, spoke for the Sherbrooke — Quebec United Church Presbytery, and noted the good will which exists with the Anglican and United churches in Lennoxville and with the Anglican communion as a whole.

Rev. Neville Tucker was appointed as clerical secretary and Edward Hyatt as lay secretary. John McGreevy was named financial consultant; with Paul Lawson, who is chairman of the pensions committee, to the office of honorary treasurer; Macdonald — Currie Company, the auditors; Archdeacon Guy Marston, registrar; Rev. Tom Robinson, Dr. K. Harper and Mrs. Ivy Hatch, press committee; Sherbrooke Deanery, Bishop's Charge Committee.

Appointed to the Business committee are Archdeacon T. Matthews, Rev. Allan Fairbairn, Canon Leslie Gourley, H.A. Simons, W. Bishop, and Mr. Stevens.

At noon everyone enjoyed the treat of fresh caught Gaspé

Summer courses for AGRHS students start at Richmond

RICHMOND — Students at Alexander Galt Regional High School interested in taking summer courses at Richmond Regional this summer must register on June 30.

Speaking to The Record yesterday, Michael Butler, the director of Richmond's first-ever summer session, said that Galt students would not be able to wait for their marks to come in before registering.

Galt's report cards, run on a computer, will not be released until July 10, he said, while the month-long summer session will begin July 2.

Courses are being offered in English, French, math, history, science and geography for remedial or credit work.

Also offered are enrichment courses in painting, ceramics, and typing.

Courses will only be held if sufficient number enroll, he said, as the program has to pay for itself.

Each course will be held for one hour a day, five days a week and cost $17.

Exceptions to this rule are the ceramics and painting offerings, both of which are to be taught by Mr. Nortcliffe, the art teacher of Richmond Regional. They will run for two weeks, with ceramics being offered first.

Classes in these two courses will be two hours long, rather than one, and will cost $25 for two weeks.

Also, the ceramics course will have a maximum enrollment of 15 persons. For the other courses, Mr. Butler hopes for a class size of 20-25.

"With the exception of the enrichment courses," he said, "these will be real crash courses. They will be mostly review."

The courses are open to students in levels one through four.

Mr. Butler hopes to arrange free bus service for Richmond students and, if enough register, for Galt students as well.

The Galt service would run from Sherbrooke, and costs will be raised by a slight surcharge added onto the cost of the course.

Galt students are strongly recommended to take two courses. This requirement can be waived in individual cases if the student wishes to pay extra for bus-fare.

Anyone wanting further information should either write The Director of Summer School, Richmond Regional High School, Richmond, Que., or call Mr. Butler at 563-4881.

Policeman acquitted on injury charges

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — Gilles Lapointe, a former member of the St. Agathe des Monts police department, has been acquitted of inflicting wounds on the body of local truckdriver Lucien Grenier.

Sessions Court Judge Omer Cote said he would give Lapointe "the benefit of the doubt" because the condition of Mr. Grenier at the time of his arrest April 19, 1966, "justified" the officer's actions.

Witnesses said Mr. Lapointe and another officer chased Mr. Grenier along a Laurentian highway because the trucker, driving under the influence of alcohol, refused to pull over.

After several shots were fired, the officers were able to arrest Mr. Grenier and drive him to the St. Agathe police station. He was struck by Mr. Lapointe when he refused to get out of the patrol car once he arrived at headquarters.

Mr. Grenier was charged with driving in an inebriated state, refusing to obey a police officer, driving without a licence and driving a vehicle without regulation licence plates.

On April 25, 1966, he formally charged officer Lapointe with assault and battery.

Respect for majority

At least one United States college has declined to lend its support to the latest wrinkle in the student movement — the suspension of classes prior to the November elections to allow students to work in political campaigns.

In a position paper adopted by the faculty of Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., a number of reasons are given for the decision not to join those educational institutions planning to grant "released time."

If released time for political activity is considered desirable, all segments of our society should have this freedom, the Lafayette faculty argues. "Giving students released time can easily provoke resentment on behalf of the other members of the community who do not have the luxury of such free time."

This is a dubious objection. Young people have always enjoyed luxuries and pleasures denied to their elders. The sight of kids directing some of their free time into constructive activity should hardly provoke resentment. Besides, how many working stiff's are exactly panting for the change to ring doorbells or lick envelopes?

However, the paper reaches sounder ground as it goes on:

There is a need for greater political participation by all people, states the faculty, but this should be a continuing concern rather than one left to a short period of "intense activity."

Students should be encouraged to participate in political activities on the same basis as other citizens, who are generally expected to carry on this work in addition to their normal responsibilities.

Another faculty argument is that a majority of the students would not participate in political activities, even if classes were suspended. There would be no benefit to the college or the community to have these students and college plant idle during the period of suspension.

At some U.S. colleges this fall, the interests of the majority will again be put aside to accommodate the desires of an activist minority. Lafayette College is one of those which has taken a stand against the trend and said, "Not on this campus."

These days, that is worth reporting.

Cutting wedding cost

Wedding celebrations in China have come under the stern scrutiny of official eyes, and a number of sweeping changes have been suggested for future couples contemplating marriage.

News despatches say that some Communist officials believe the wedding feast should be scrapped as an all-round waste of money and food. Furthermore, they say, the custom of showering gifts on the bride and groom should be done away with.

A suitable present, according to the official Peking view, might be a spade, "perhaps brightly decorated with a red tassel," for the bride.

That along with a copy of Chairman Mao's thoughts for the groom, should be sufficient to mark the happiness of the occasion.

The Canadian equivalent might be a maple-leaf-embossed can of phosphate-free detergent for the happy girl, and a copy of Benson's White Paper for hubby.

It is something to think about for those with growing families.

TIMELY QUOTES

We ought all of us to calm down. Those of us in the government and the students.

—Herbert Klein, President Nixon's director of communications.

The economic deterioration is so substantial that it is obvious we have almost crossed the threshold of recession.

—George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO.

Kent State may be a blessing. The deaths of these young people may do more to end the war than any other single thing.

—Dr. Benjamin Spock.

Our aim is to get all Americans to work as a team, to support the American way of life and principles on which this country was founded.

—Arthur Stivaletta, Dedham (Mass.) contractor who organized a "Wake Up America" rally in Boston to protest violence as a means of political dissent.

If they want to go this route, why don't they go all the way and legalize numbers? We'll make it another Las Vegas. Then it will really be "Fun City."

—New York Senate majority leader Earl B. Browder, commenting on New York City's successful effort to legalize off-track betting.

THE PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

The Lord... called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth. (1 Samuel 3:10)

PRAYER: O Lord, teach us how to speak and how to listen. Guide us by Thy spirit and govern our thinking and our words. Amen.

Economic lesson: bill for errors

By DON OAKLEY

The American economy is fundamentally sound, announced President Nixon. But so was the Titanic, except for a bad leak.

The comparison is not inappropriate since the President himself, in his address to the nation on the state of the economy, likened his administration's inflation-curbing maneuvers to bringing a boat into dock. It is a delicate, gingerly operation.

Noted economist Milton Friedman used another simile recently in describing the same process.

"Those who complain that prices are still rising are like the man who believes he should be able to stop a speeding car on a dime—without going through the windshield."

Yet it is sometimes necessary to leave a little rubber on the road if a catastrophe is to be averted.

One slips into the use of metaphors when discussing economics because it is such a slippery subject. For every expert who holds one opinion, there are always two others, equally qualified, who hold a contrary opinion.

Both inflation and recession will turn around by year's end, thinks Friedman. Already tapering off, inflation will fall to something like a 3 per cent rate by December and to less than a 2 per cent rate by mid-1971, he predicts.

Analysts with the Research Institute of America are not so optimistic. Inflation should average about 6 per cent for this year, they think, the same as last year. "But the outlook for 1971 is not so bad. We anticipate an increase in prices in the range of about 4.5 per cent." This is more than double Friedman's estimate.

Another source is definitely pessimistic. "As yet there is no tangible evidence that the inflationary cycle has been broken," writes economist John P. Lins of Goodbody & Co.

Whatever the pace of inflation in the next few months, it is certain that Americans are going to be paying for a long time to come the price of the government's fiscal mismanagement in previous years. A statement issued by the office of the Secretary of the Treasury put it bluntly the other day:

"The 'Great Society' of the mid-sixties is now presenting its bill."

It is not the Great Society that is to blame, however, but Vietnam. President Johnson thought he could finance a bully little war out of the Pentagon's petty cash and build a Great Society, too. That miscalculation translated into a staggering $19.1 billion deficit in fiscal 1968, added to total deficits of $31.7 billion over six of the previous seven years.

Even the vast U.S. economy had to be profoundly affected by this, the fundamental cause of our troubles.

The first attempted remedy, the 10 per cent income tax surcharge, was dismally too little and too late. Other cures have been as bad as the disease, resulting in rising unemployment, a housing industry that is in a real depression, cutbacks in spending on medical and scientific research and a stock market nosedive that has wiped out all the gains of the '60s—all with continually rising prices and, of course, continuing pressure for pay raises to try to keep up with the prices.

Nonexperts may well wonder in what way inflation in accompaniment with a recession is more desirable than inflation during a boom, or why the brake of high taxes, which should have been applied several years ago to cool the economy, was less desirable than the brake of high interest rates, which is only another form of tax.

America will pass between the Scylla of inflation on the one hand and the Charybdis of recession on the other, for the ship is fundamentally seaworthy and seems pointing in the right direction. The question is, will we have learned anything from the experience?

Will we have learned that government spending for the proliferating multitude of services we all demand from it must be kept in reasonable balance with government income, at least in boom times? That if we are not willing to pay sooner for the running of the country in one way, we must inevitably pay for it later in other, much more unpleasant ways—as we are paying now?

DOUGLAS
FISHER

Ultimatum in inflation battle?

One scenario on the wage-price battle touted (quietly) by a Liberal MP after a conversation with Mr. Trudeau is based on this man's belief that the PM is more determined than ever to crush the inflation problem.

The projection goes like this: Shortly after Parliament recesses, the Government will issue a public ultimatum to the major labor organizations: Show a willingness to co-operate with voluntary guidelines or we shall act within a fortnight. Then the action will be to institute controls on wages, prices and profits in selected areas of Canada (all metropolitan) and in selected industries (steel, auto, transport, packinghouses).

American politicians who drop into Ottawa are invariably impressive in two ways. Firstly, they are quick off the mark in any interview situations. No "well... and uh... we..." stuff, crisp and fast. Secondly, their briefing is impressive. At least there never seems to be a darned subject or a microcosm of one which they haven't heard about, know where the current arguments are, and what will be the resolution (always positive).

John Volpe, young, clean-cut, pleasant, the Secretary of Transportation in the Nixon Cabinet, shared a press conference with Don Jamieson, transport minister, and the most smooth-talking chunk of affability in the Trudeau Cabinet. Mr. Jamieson would go well in Washington but he's no faster than Volpe.

The purpose of the conference was to announce a memorandum of agreement on co-operative research in a number of transportation areas. The two ministers cast such a rosy glow over the prospect that a listener conjured up a dream of Canadians and Yanks flying, driving, pipe-lining, boat-lining, ice-breaking, railroading together into the sunset, jointly endowed with safer equipment and cheaper services.

Yes, Mr. Volpe knew about Joe Greene's Denver speech, definitely "pro-Canadian." Yes, there'd be giant tankers and Arctic pipelines, even oil transport by rail out of Alaska and the new territories. All in harmony, in the best interests of all of us. Harmony and peace and the future — that's John Volpe and Don Jamieson.

Jack Davis has such a serious mien and seems to have no hankering for the normal kudos which attract politicians. Therefore, many conclude — even his colleagues — that he is both humorless and without a sense of issues or a feel for political ideology.

Even the ascent in his reputation which leads some to expect he'll become minister of finance in the coming months hasn't changed this stereotype of the neutral deadpan.

A week ago he gave a speech titled Ecology and Economic Growth to Canadian consulting engineers in Montreal.

Mr. Davis is both an engineer and an economist. Essentially the speech is a long spoof of the "cry havoc" folk who are on the pollution-environment kick.

He constructed a statistical sequence to illustrate how young, growing forests make oxygen. "Obviously, we all need oxygen. The world needs oxygen. We'd all die without oxygen. It's essential then that forests not drift into old age and a stage of not producing oxygen in quantity."

Thus cutting the forests is sound beyond the jobs and income that pulp and paper and plywood and scantlings bring. Our forested areas are capable of producing under management over 2,400 million tons of new oxygen a year. Converted into terms of supplying people, this means our forests can supply oxygen for 12 billion people.

These figures seemed so staggering that Mr. Davis reduced them to compensate for safety and growth factors. He still found enough oxygen for 3 billion people. Then Mr. Davis took his spoof in the other direction. "If we stop cutting, leave the forest in a pristine wilderness state, disaster follows."

Much of the dissatisfaction of Toronto Liberal MPs — they hold all but three Metro seats — has begun to focus on their impotence as influences on Cabinet discussions.

Mitchell Sharp is worrying about the world; Robert Stanbury is going cautiously as befits a new minister and a nice young man.

The other Toronto minister who was thought to be the coming giant, Donald Macdonald of Rosedale and the House leader, has sunk out of sight of the Torontonians. The judgment is that he's useless as a regional spokesman, that he's not interested in being a broker or liaison man for the Toronto party chiefs in the Cabinet, that he cultivates his riding and otherwise ignores Toronto's needs.

One MP told me that he can only explain Macdonald's failure to come on as a major figure in the economic and social issues where most power needs to be exerted is that he has deliberately chosen a low profile.

He continued: "Macdonald is — we all know — very ambitious, capable, hard-working and supremely confident in his own talent."

"I believe that he's decided there's a long wait until he can have a run at the No. 1 job and a corollary of that decision is that he's not going to get involved, become a marked man, by taking up leadership on such issues as urban housing and transportation which the rest of us realize are important to Torontonians who vote Liberal in Federal elections."

MATTER OF FACT
JOSEPH ALSOP

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Who reads the Bible nowadays? Who still recalls the story of Belshazzar's feast, which used to be a byword for the festivals of the endangered? At any rate, the story is now worth recalling for the reason to be explained later. So here it is, in part:

"Belshazzar the king (of Babylon) made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand... they drank wine, and praised their gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron and of stone."

"In the same hour came forth the fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall of the king's house. And the king saw the part of the hand that wrote. Then the king's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him," so he sent for wise men who might interpret what had been written.

None could do so, however, until the king called for the prophet Daniel, of the children of Israel in their Babylonian captivity.

What was written on the wall was read by Daniel as four mysterious words: "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin."

These words Daniel interpreted as meaning "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it... Thou art weighed in the balance and... found wanting... Thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and the Persians." And that very night "Darius the Median took the kingdom" and Babylon was no more.

Historically, the kingdom was indeed taken. This was the climax of the ancient world's second major round of big power wars, when both Assyria and Babylon finally came to dust; and the Persian Empire reached the peak of grandeur that led on to the contests with the Greeks. It all seems very far away nowadays. But somehow, at the Harvard commencement, one kept thinking of Belshazzar; and nothing I have learned here since has banished the thought.

It was a very pretty commencement, really better than anyone had hoped. There was the usual irruption of dissent, of course. As usual, too, except for a fine-looking black or two, the dissenters all appeared to have been borrowed by Central Casting from one of the more macabre canvases of Hieronymus Bosch. But president Nathan Pusey handled the irruption with cool good sense, and it did not last long.

Harvard's commencement, please remember, is also just about the only perfectly unfaked, anciently rooted American ceremony. They have been making it even handsomer in recent years, too, adding more color in the dignitaries' robes and hanging more pennons and banners. Yet on the fine crimson border of the dignitaries' tented pavilion one seemed to see a hand remorselessly writing:

"Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin."

This was not the hand of the Almighty, to be sure. Instead, it was the great ham-fist of a Soviet marshal. And what made one think of Belshazzar's feast at the Harvard commencement was the wonderful forgetfulness of those Soviet marshals, so like Belshazzar's luxurious insouciance about Darius the Median.

All the concerns that are so passionately voiced at Harvard are quite real, quite genuine, quite un-pu-on. All are also quite understandable concerns, even by one who does not share the viewpoint of the revolutionary young. But the Vietnamese war and the grave domestic problems that now plague us, cruel and divisive though these are, are in fact minor concerns compared to the new dangers that now hang over us.

All too many signs—in the Middle East, on the Sino-Soviet border; in the mounting pressure on Romania; in the deeply worrying trend of the nuclear-strategic arms balance-point in the same chilling direction. Not a single sign points the other way except perhaps the SALT talks—and these talks as yet represent a mere hope as contrasted with the hard realities previously listed.

The signs suggest, in truth, that we are now entering a period that can be best compared (for those with memories, which are short at Harvard) to the period that Western Europe entered after Adolf Hitler's reoccupation of the Rhineland. As an event transforming every future prospect, the Soviet injection of Russian troops and pilots into the Middle Eastern war is quite on a par with the Rhineland's reoccupation.

Israel, alas, is cast in the tragic role of Czechoslovakia. Everything indicates, too, that the Soviets will keep "probing with bayonets," following Lenin's rule, until they "meet with steel."

We are in a new situation, in sum, far more threatening than the worst pessimists had foreseen. Yet at Harvard there was and is no murmured whisper of concern about any of this.

On prime loans Interest rates reduced

Canada's major banks lined up Monday with reduced interest rates for prime-rate loans and non-chequing savings accounts.

Four of the five large chartered banks announced reductions in mortgage rates.

The reduction in the prime rate by four banks followed by about two weeks an announcement by the Bank of Montreal to adopt the eight-per-cent rate on June 15.

The Bank of Montreal had announced its interest rate on non-chequing savings accounts would go to six per cent from 6 1/2 effective July 1.

The other four major banks—Toronto Dominion, Royal Bank of Canada, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the Bank of Nova Scotia—announced they would adopt the same interest levels effective July 1 for both prime-rate loans and non-chequing savings accounts.

About the time banks opened, Toronto Dominion issued a statement from its head office in Toronto and the Royal Bank issued a statement from its Montreal headquarters. The Commerce and the Bank of Nova Scotia, both based in Toronto, followed within three hours.

Later in the day, the Banque Canadienne Nationale, based in Montreal, announced it would follow the major banks on the loan and savings account rates.

CONDITIONS EASING

Statements from the presidents of the Royal Bank and the Toronto Dominion bank said the reductions were made because of indications of an easing in monetary conditions.

J. Leonard Walker, president of the Bank of Montreal, had issued a statement Friday asking for deposits as an indication of support for the bank's lower loan rate. Release of the statement was followed by the appearance of paid advertisements in newspapers asking for public support in an attempt to lower the interest-rate structure.

Mr. Walker said in the statement it was not possible for one bank to sustain the lower rate for a prolonged period.

After announcements Monday by other banks, Mr. Walker said: "We are gratified that some other banks are following our lead in reducing the prime rate."

Toronto Dominion and Royal Bank, in announcing the key rate changes, also announced they would reduce mortgage rates by one-half per cent, effective July 1. Rates on conventional mortgages will go to 10 per cent from 10 1/2 and National Housing Act mortgages to 9 1/2 per cent from 10 1/4.

The Bank of Montreal, which made no announcement on mortgages earlier this month, said later in the day it would reduce its National Housing Act mortgages to 9 1/2 per cent, effective immediately. The Bank of Montreal rate had been 10 per cent.

"This new rate will be extended to all applications in process where the mortgage document has not yet been signed," Mr. Walker said.

"In addition, we are immediately increasing our allotment of funds for mortgage lending by $10,000,000 and will continue a policy of directing all of our available mortgage funds into new residential construction."

Kinross Mortgage Corp., the mortgage-loan subsidiary of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, announced late Monday afternoon a one-half-per cent reduction in mortgage rates. Rates for new construction under the National Housing Act went to 9 1/2 per cent and the low rate for conventional loans went to 10 per cent, both effective immediately.

"The reductions in these rates will apply to all commitments for mortgage loans previously approved provided there has not been an advance made under the mortgage," a company statement said.

Synod

Rev. Lynn Ross, of the Anglican Mission of Schefferville, spoke of his work among the Indian people and said that construction will soon begin on a housing development to make homes for people living in 35 shacks.

He outlined the work he is doing with the people and noted an A. A. group has been started and is doing well.

The budget, as prepared by the committee of which Father Salt is chairman, was accepted for a total of $76,000, for work inside and outside the diocese.

Rev. Richard Blythe spoke on economic conditions in the Magdalen Islands where their only source of income is four months of fishing.

He said that the economy of the Magdalen Islands is becoming worse with many on welfare. He said the people should be engaged in agriculture for many who have a car have never had a glass of milk.

A lengthy session was given to drugs and narcotics by Rev. David Thomas noting candy given to 12 and 13 years old impregnated with drug.

He made reference to the "generation gap, the problem of communication. He said that not only in cities, but in rural areas drugs can easily be obtained, many youth in all innocence have lost their lives or sanity through drug misuse.

He mentioned that this summer many youths will be on the highways. He invited the people to offer them the repose of their Christian homes, communication with Christ and noted, "then they'll not need drugs."

Canon H. Church, gave a talk on crime and punishment, on those to whom the doors of prison have closed and the effect it can have on a growing boy or girl.

Later, they will be denied the right to vote, to travel for they cannot obtain a passport, the right to a professional job. He concluded by saying in these extraordinary days, this can happen to any one of us, and challenged "it's up to us as Christians to help guide."

Suggestions were given to legality of marijuana; to have the Food and Drug control act look into the drug situation by analysis of the drugs the youth are using.

Rev. Bruce Stewart, of the University of Toronto, working with students spoke on this subject. He made mention of the government's preliminary report on drugs released that morning. There were others who spoke and offered opinions on this vitally important topic, all showing great concern.

Local Sport Notes

The turnstiles at the Amdece Roy Stadium certainly aren't being used to their full capacities these days.

The Sunday afternoon ball game against the Drummondville Royals could only coax 764 spectators.

Jean-Marc Donahue, Sherbrooke Alouettes' treasurer, has indicated that the gate receipts prior to Sunday's encounter have fallen $4,200 below last year's sum at this time.

Jay Arden, with Fernand Turene aboard, captured the ninth race, a pace, and the $250 purse Sunday at the Sherbrooke race track. Arden was clocked in 2.09 for the mile run. Sylvia Bunter, the favorite finished up fifth.

In the only trot of the evening, Potomac F won in his initial start of the year with a time of 2:13.4. He was driven by Henri Lepage.

One thousand and seven people were present for the evening card with a total of $38,838 being dealt through the pari-mutuel windows.

24 water-skiers, not only from Quebec but from Winnipeg, Edmonton, Toronto, Kingston, and Scarborough, Ontario, are in Sherbrooke this week to attend the Jean Perreault water-ski school. The school, the only one of its kind in the country, is being held at the Armand Nadeau Pavilion in Jacques Cartier Park. Sessions run from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. until Friday and the public is invited to take in the proceedings.

Much of the instruction received is directed to this weekend's activities when the "Lac des Nations" will be the site of the early competitions for the Quebec Cup.

The school's founder will again this year have reliable and qualified assistants Anne Donahue, Helene Gregoire and Pierre Plouffe who have returned from a month of polishing up in California.

The Jean Perreault water-ski school will officially open this Sunday at 3:00 p.m.

ON TO BATTLE — Whether it be a cozy nine-hole layout with nothing but fairway in sight or a demanding par-73 site as the Lennoxville (Milby) Golf Club, above; those dauntless crusaders will don the colorful armour of St. Andrew, hurl their bodies and scramble their brains in an effort to solve the mystery of a treacherous bunker or a murderous green. Right, Richard Hicks of Colebrook, N.H., was a weekend visitor and informed Club pro Garth Smith that if anymore dragons menace the sloping hillsides, he'd be back.

Expos silenced twice in Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — right centre, scoring Stone and Joseph. Byron Browne's two-run double in the sixth inning lifted Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-2 decision over Montreal in the second game of a National League doubleheader Monday night after Woodie Fryman blanked the Expos 6-0 in the opener.

Trailing 2-1, Ron Stone singled with two out off loser Steve Renko. Shortstop Bobby Wine booted Rick Joseph's grounder and on a 3-0 pitch Browne doubled to out in the first but retired John Bateman on a grounder and then went on to blank the Expos on four singles.

The Phils took advantage of two Montreal errors and two hits to score three runs in the first. Deron Johnson' double drove in the first two runs. Taylor's single, a wild pitch and Oscar Gamble's hit accounted for the third run. Browne's two-run homer over the right field wall in the seventh wrapped it up.

MONTREAL (CP) — Winnipeg Whips of baseball's International League announced Monday that they have traded outfielder Don Bosch to Houston Astros of the National League in exchange for right-handed pitcher Mike Marshall.

Bosch, 28, was on option to the Whips from their parent club, Montreal Expos of the National League. He appeared in 49 games with Montreal last year and batted .179.

Marshall, 21, started the 1970 season with Oklahoma City of the American Association. He was called up to the Astros recently and pitched on 5 1-3 innings, giving up five earned runs. He lost his only decision to the

Sherbrooke's Lac des Nations site of canoe classic

SHERBROOKE (BH) — Amid the St. Jean Baptiste celebrations around the province Wednesday, the city of Sherbrooke will have an added attraction—a canoe race.

Promoted by the newly-founded ET Canoeing Association, the canoe race will be staged on the Lac des Nations with a prize of $1,000 up for grabs to go along with a handsome trophy to the winning entry.

The canoeers will circle the lake 10 times, equalling an approximate distance of 20 miles. The event is scheduled to kick off at 2:00 p.m.

The President of the ET Association, Michael McFarland, anticipates an entry of 30 canoes or more in what is hoped to be an annual affair.

Wednesday's race is sanctioned by the Quebec Canoeing Association which has set as its goals the orientation and organization of canoeing in the region with the Quebec Games coming up, while attracting tourists and newcomers.

The race is open with anyone capable of entering, and it is expected that many enthusiasts — both young and old will be on hand Wednesday afternoon at Lac des Nations.

Those interested in entering the race should contact Michael McFarland, 1033 McManamy in Sherbrooke, or phone 569-3101.

Grenada, spice isle of the Caribbean

By JOHN NIVEN

ST. GEORGE'S — There's many a Caribbean traveller who will swear that Grenada, the Isle of Spice, is the most beautiful island in the West Indies.

I'd find it hard to argue the point although I don't think it is any lovelier than, say, St. Lucia, another island that has its staunch devotees, nor is it as grandly, awesomely scenic as Dominica. What it does have, though, is a romantic atmosphere that no other island I've seen in this part of the world can quite match.

Its secret, at least in part, lies in the spices it grows, their scents permeating the island air; in the spice women who coyly go about selling their wares to the tourists who congregate to bask in the sun on Grande Anse beach; and in the indisputable beauty of this capital town of St. George's which, viewed from certain points, looks like a Mediterranean masterpiece that has been transplanted to the balmy climate of the Caribbean.

It is the combination of all three, probably, plus the island's numerous other attributes, that makes Grenada unique.

The visitor who arrives by air lands at the opposite point of the island from St. George's and is given a sight-seeing tour of the mountainous central section of the island in the hour-long taxi ride to his hotel.

If it happens to be his first visit, and his driver is the friendly, easy-going kind — which most of them here are — the visitor will get a running commentary on island life, with stops every now and then to show him how bananas, nutmeg and mace, cinnamon, coffee, cocoa, limes and other products grow.

Grenada produces a number of spices, but nutmeg and its covering web of mace are the only two that economically are really important. Nutmeg and mace, along with bananas and cocoa, are the island's major products grown for export. Other important crops are sugar cane, coconuts, limes and cotton. Most of the cotton and about half the limes are grown on Carriacou, a Grenadian dependency and the largest of the Grenadine string of some 125 islands and islets that stretch north to St. Vincent.

Grenada itself covers an area of 120 square miles 133 with Carriacou and Petit Martinique, another dependency, and is the most southerly of the old British Windwards, a group that consisted of Dominica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, the Grenadines, Grenada, and up until 1889 even Tobago.

The English made the first attempt to settle the island — in 1609 — but were repulsed by the Carib Indians. Forty years later, the French established a settlement at what is now St. George's, annihilating the fiercely proud Caribs in the process, and in 1674 the island was annexed to France.

The English returned in conquest a century later, only to be conquered themselves by the French in another 16 years. Finally, in 1783, with the Treaty of Versailles, the island became British.

Although mountainous and heavily wooded, Grenada's loftiest point, Mt. St. Catherine, is only 2,756 feet high. Grand Etang, a crater lake covering some 35 acres in the central mountain mass, is a popular sightseeing stop and a favorite picnic spot with many Grenadians. There are two other crater lakes, Lake Antoine and Levera Pond, in the northeast part of the island.

Grande Anse within sight of St. George's is the island's best beach, but there is an inviting strand on the north coast near Sauters not far from Leaper's Hill, the spot where the Caribs made their last stand against the French and where, rather than surrender, they jumped in mass suicide onto rocks below.

Today there are only a half-dozen Caribs living on the island. About half the population now is of African extraction and the rest largely of mixed descent. About five per cent are of East Indian origin.

The language is English and the English influence still predominates. Evidence of the French past remains, however, particularly in the patois spoken by elderly people in the villages, and in the many family and place names.

For the holidayer, there are the usual Caribbean activities to indulge in — swimming, scuba diving and snorkeling, fishing, and just plain lazing about in the sun.

Yachting is very big here. Grenada being a major center for yachtsmen in the Caribbean. Golf and tennis and watching cricket matches are other daytime activities.

Music on Records

By Elisabeth Gustafson

VERDI: Leontyne Price, soprano, singing arias and scenes from Verdi operas, accompanied by the Rome Opera House and RCA Italiana Opera Orchestras under various conductors. RCA two-record set VCS-7063.

Many are the findings and revivals of nineteenth century composers; variations in popular esteem have even affected such eminent figures as Liszt and Wagner. Recently the vogue was all for baroque music. It has required a minor romantic revival to turn attention to 19th century names once foremost in listeners' ears, subsequently abandoned and despised. As this column recently pointed out, instead of Vivaldi and Telemann we are now getting records of Henselt and Scharwenka.

Verdi, of course, the master of the romantic heart, has never lost his foremost place in the repertoire; we have needed no revolution to keep him on the stage. The reason is that we are dealing with an area of music that is nothing if not romantic and dramatic: opera. Wagner got lost sight of because of politics. But not Verdi.

It is sometimes forgotten that Verdi placed drama before music, insisting on psychology. It was the human heart he expressed. Don't bellow, he told his tenors, "sing!" It was the expression of individuality he wanted. As Shakespeare wanted it. Type and conformity were out. Shakespeare let the private human heart have its say. That is why Verdi worshipped Shakespeare; why you can no more find Shakespeare in his plays than you can Verdi in his operas. Put those two individualists together and you have two unsurpassed musical masterpieces of the stage: Otello and Falstaff.

A new 2-record set is out which presents arias and scenes from Verdi operas — arias devoted to Verdi heroines. The singer is Leontyne Price. That glorious voice needs no introduction at this late date. Leontyne Price has established herself as prima donna assoluta. One hazards the conviction that she is the ideal Verdi heroine of all time.

SPANISH GUITAR MUSIC OF FIVE CENTURIES: Narciso Yepes. Deutsche Grammophon 2-volumes 139365-6.

I have never got around to reviewing these two records. They have been out for some time. Certainly they are as fresh as ever. The guitar is at present more popular perhaps than any other instrument. The fan won't find any electric attachment to go with this guitar of Narciso Yepes. All to the good. Maybe, one hopes, we shall eventually be spared those brow-beating ear-abusing yelps that come forth from the electric guitar. Perhaps someone will fall in love with the instrument as it is meant to be — minus the technological gadget of this sorry age.

No use listing all the composers herein displayed — they run from Luys Milan of 1500 up through Soler, Albeniz, De Falla, to composers of this century. Many are the styles and subtleties demanded: all met in loving fashion by Yepes, the player.

Bird watcher's notes

By J. GRAHAM PATRIQUIN

Let's begin with a premise. Nesting birds rarely, but rarely construct nests close to other nesters. Purple Martins are famous exceptions, though the apartment houses they occupy are man-made. Some interesting experiments in clustered location of bird houses are under study this summer in the area, but this item concerns a Robin-built nest hard beside an older, manufactured, occupied house. In the experience of local authorities, it is unique.

Frank Libbey's home is never without birds. It was at his doorway, one snowy December morning that we first had Chickadees light on bare hands an experience both rare and memorable.

For several years, a family (or successive families) of Chickadees occupied, in season, an ingeniously made house, fashioned from a cedar fence post and placed about eight feet up a limby balsam fir tree close beside the woodworking shop, out of which, for many years, came those distinctive Libbey creations: plates, bowls and trays, in walnut, maple and black cherry woods. Spring 1970, saw the Chicks back again, angling through the circular entrances the feathers, grass and mosses that make their nest. Then followed the quiet pause of laying and incubation.

Oh! Oh! Quite out of character and contrary to habit, a pair of Robins, completely ignoring the squatter's rights of the Chickadees, began to build their open nest on a limb-crotch less than two inches from the bottom of the Chick-house, creating not only an unheard-of slum congestion but a racial problem to boot!

Our afternoon visit was rewarding. The Robins were temporarily absent and we got a fairly close look at the crowded quarters. The parent Chickadees were posting back to their house from a nearby Lilac tree where the insects seemed to be the best buy in the neighborhood. Feeding routine went on like a page from Dr. Spock until the male Robin swept to the top of the workshop and shouted obscenities at the feeding Chicks. There was no fracas this time, though they have clashed wings and feathers on other occasions, and the end was anticlimactic — the female Robin appeared, wriggled carefully into place, spread her wings out over the hatching eggs, and with one eye cocked at the Chickadee entrance, settled down quietly on the family business. Her mate, his outburst exhausted, bundled off on other affairs.

What may develop when the tiny Chicks leave the shelter of the hollowed post is problematic. One can't help wishing them all the luck possible in this extremely unusual proximity.

This column is indebted to the St. Francis-Massawippi Bird Club's co-chairmen, Caroline Bernard and Dorothy Wallace for a comprehensive wrap-up of the club's outdoor activities since January 1st. Since Wednesday evenings were the only available opportunities, most of the Notes have been edited reports rather than personal observations this year. The club operated, on the other hand, 14 outings, with an overall average for day and evening trips an impressive 62 species.

The P.Q.S.P.B. issues a checklist of birds seen in Quebec with 289 species named. The local club members reported no less than 159 species for the half year period, with 131 species checked on May 23, Spring Count Day.

These figures, for regularly organized trips, do not include 11 more species reported from observations outside the club programme. Mrs. Bernard's 155 species count gets the approval of her co-chairman, who did not include her own total. The term, chair, does not seem appropriate to the office of such active leaders!

Birds of unusual interest not mentioned in this column during the season include a Bald Eagle at Lake Memphremagog — Fred and Phyllis Wilson; Ruddy Duck at Dionne's, Cookshire — the co-chairmen and Fred Smith; Sanderlings, near Waterloo — Mrs. George and Mrs. Roma Boyd; Pine Warblers, Woodland Bay — Dr. Langford and the Fontaines — Jim and Lorraine; Great Horned Owl, Milby and Hatley — N. Bowers and C. W. Curtis; White-rumped Sandpiper, near Johnville Bog — the Co-chairmen and Wanda Pleeszynska; Red-backed Sandpiper, Dionne's Pond — Mrs. Aubin.

Much of the successful identification is ascribed by Dorothy Wallace to the improved ability on the part of more people to recognize bird songs, flights and silhouettes, with a better knowledge of where to go to find some birds — habitat, habits and habitation — applied with greater skill. More people were willing to devote greater parts of a day to the thorough and utter pursuit of birds. Good season? Check!

Bridal showers

STANSTEAD — Miss Laureen McIntyre, Montreal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman McIntyre, Tomifobia, was pleasantly surprised at a shower honoring her July wedding, held in the hall of St. Therese church, Beebe.

As Laureen arrived home by bus it had been planned she and her future husband join the family for an outdoor lunch, at the home of her brother, Mr. Edward McIntyre and Mrs. McIntyre in Graniteville, stopping en route at the church for her sister-in-law who invited her in to see the redecorated hall. On entering Laureen was greeted by some 50 relatives and friends awaiting her.

A corsage of pink carnations with pink and silver tulle was pinned on by her sister-in-law, Mrs. McIntyre. As the bride elect regained her composure, was escorted to a chair between her mother, Mrs. Lyman McIntyre and Mrs. Leona MacLure, mother of the prospective groom. A table was laden with attractively wrapped and ribboned gifts with others on the floor.

Mrs. McIntyre and Mrs. MacLure were each presented with corsages of carnations like the bride's. They assisted in opening the gifts to reveal a wide selection of crystal, china, pyrex, flatware, linens, hand made crocheted pieces and a handmade electric table lamp and many other equally lovely things for the new home.

The hall decor was in a color scheme of pink and green with white. The gifts were passed around for all to view, then placed on a table having a shower cloth and a white wedding bell over this, suspended from the ceiling and an umbrella decorated in white and green by Mrs. Edward McIntyre. The buffet table was arranged with pink tulips and lily of the valley, lighted white candles flanked the shower cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Valmore Lepitre in double tiers with pink roses and green leaves on white, the tiers were edged with lattice trim and centered with a miniature white umbrella.

From the ribbons and bows of the parcels, Mrs. Denis MacLure and Mrs. Richard MacLure, made a chapeau which was presented the bride elect who wore it as she expressed her remarks of appreciation for the gifts and shower in French and English.

As the refreshments were served, some of the guests discovered lucky coins taped under their plate. Laureen cut her shower cake and it was served by Mrs. Edward McIntyre who was hostess, assisted by others for this memorable event.

Guests attended from Montreal, Lennoxville, Coaticook, Ayer's Cliff, Beebe, Tomifobia, Orleans, Vt., and the Boundary Villages.

BULWER — Miss Doreen Little was taken by surprise when her friend Miss Marjorie Robinson escorted her to the Robinson home on the pretext of a "lift" to Lennoxville. When they reached the Robinson home, Marjorie pinned a corsage on Doreen and escorted her to the house where the rooms were prettily decorated in pink and white. Miss Betty Robinson pinned a corsage on Mrs. Harry Little, mother of the bride and escorted her to a seat beside her daughter, Mrs. Susan Butler also assisted in opening the gifts.

The buffet table was centered with a shower cake, in the shape of a Southern Belle and decorated by Mrs. Charles Robinson, which the bride elect cut and passed to the guests.

Miss Little thanked her friends for their gifts, inviting them to visit her in her new home, and a special thank you to the Robinson sisters and their mother for the lovely shower.

Peach Meringue

Peach Meringue: a cool summer treat

For a cool summer dessert try this recipe for peach meringue.

Especially suited for entertaining at home, this eye-catching dish provides a spectacular finish to the meal. Surprise your family with it one evening and see.

Meringue:
4 egg whites
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
About 1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup fine white sugar
1 cup shredded or flaked coconut
Food colouring, if desired
Filling:
1 (10-oz.) package miniature marshmallows
1 (28-oz.) can peaches
Syrup drained from peaches (about 1 1/4 cups)
1 (1/2-pint) carton 35 per cent cream, whipped
About 1/2 teaspoon salt
Sprinkle egg whites with cream of tartar and salt, beat until frothy. Gradually add the sugar, one tablespoon at a time at first, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until very stiff and shiny. This should take about 10 minutes. If desired, a few drops colouring to tint a pale pastel colour may be folded in. Fold in coconut.

Turn onto a baking sheet covered with greased brown paper or foil, form into a nest shape, building up sides well. Bake in a very slow oven, 250 degrees F., about 1 1/4 hours or until quite dry. When cold fill with scoops of frozen peach filling.

To prepare filling, put marshmallows into a pan with 1/4 cup of the peach syrup. Stir over very low heat or over hot water until marshmallows have melted; put aside until cold.

Add salt and rest of peach syrup, beat well. Chill in freezing compartment of refrigerator until beginning to thicken. Beat again, fold in cut-up peaches and the whipped cream. Turn into ice cream trays and freeze. Makes 8 servings.

Senior citizens enjoy tour of museums

BOUNDARY — Some 25 persons who attend the Senior Citizens gathered at the hall of Stanstead South church in Rock Island on Thursday afternoon, June 11, for the closing of the season's activity.

The group visited the museums of the Stanstead Historical Society, first The Barn, in Rock Island, on the Banting farm, where they were greeted and guided by Lorne Ogilvie, afterwards at Stanstead where Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Brown welcomed and guided the group.

From here, with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Tobin in charge a cavalcade motored through the beautiful countryside to Wav's Mills where a stop was made at Rosynska's Pottery. All were greeted and given a tour of the pottery by Mrs. Wanda Rosynska which was most interesting. Before leaving, on invitation of Mrs. Rosynska, a visit was made to the beautiful gardens for not only do Mr. and Mrs. Rosynska have talents in sculpture and pottery but also have a "green thumb."

The travellers returned via Libbytown and route 5 to the church hall and had a buffet supper which was provided by members of the Helping Circle of the church. The next gathering will be in September.

Sutton
