Chief Principle Of Session Will Be Limitation

After Brilliant Discussion Led by Chilean Minister, Preparatory Commission Today Rejected Amendment by Soviet Russia to Substitute Word "Reduction" for Word "Limitation," and Also Second Russian Amendment Calling for "Limitation and Reduction."

(Associated Press Despatch) GENEVA, April 26.—Limitation and not reduction of armed forces existing, land, sea and air, will be the guiding principle of the forthcoming disarmament conference under decisions taken today by the Preparatory Commission.

After a brilliant discussion led by the Chilean minister, J. Valdes-Mendive, the Preparatory Commission rejected an amendment by Soviet Russia to substitute the word "reduction" for the word "limitation," and likewise the amendment which Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet vice commissar for foreign affairs, quickly introduced calling for "limitation and reduction."

The Chilean delegate unequivocally opposed the Soviet amendments. He emphasized that the covenant of the League of Nations subordinated reduction in armed forces to national security and the geographical and other special circumstances of the countries and approved more limitation for states already too feebly armed.

Favored Regional Agreements. He declared that the Commission was preparing a treaty which would be applicable to all nations under all contingencies. Chile and other Latin-American countries had not preferred this system, as they favored instead regional agreements, remarked M. Valdes-Mendive; nevertheless Chile was ready to co-operate under the present plan.

But it must be remembered that the Latin-American states were in a situation differing from other world regions, as the delegations of Brazil and Argentina already had pointed out. He feared that if the larger Latin-American nations failed to participate in the future conference it would prove a great blow, but if the Latin-Americans were to be induced to come, their regional needs and geographical situation must be taken into account.

Presented Germany's Views. Count Von Bernstorff, the German delegate, dwelt upon the fact that the great naval powers have announced their readiness to reduce the tonnage of their navies, adding "Germany now demands a reduction in land forces; it is quite impossible for Germany to accept a conference which will degenerate into mutual protection against disarmament."

M. Litvinoff then quoted the remarks on the naval question by Hugh S. Gibson, the American representative, made last week that the time had come to scrap the word "limitation."

Tried to Clarify Situation. Lord Cusheundun tried to clarify the situation, by stating the League covenant calls merely for reduction down to a level compatible with security. He emphasized that some of the powers may already have reached that level, and that hence it would be better not to change the word "limitation."

The British delegate explained that Great Britain has constantly reduced its army from its pre-war strength of August, 1914, by eliminating nine cavalry regiments, twenty-one infantry battalions and six hundred artillery batteries, and had reduced its army budget from 36,250,000 pounds in 1925 to 32,333,333 pounds in 1928. Therefore, he stated, it was possible that at the international conference Great Britain may have to say it is already down to the level required in the covenant.

GENERAL BOOTH HONORED BY KING

(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, April 29.—The King today ordered conferred on General Booth, deposed commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, the order of Companion of Honor. The order carries no title or precedence, but ranks after the first class of the order of the British Empire.

Only a limited number of awards have been made, going to members of both sexes.

Regret, However, Has Been Tempered With Feeling that if a General Disarmament Convention Is Result, Price Will Have Been Well Warranted—Different Views Are Expressed by British Press.

(Associated Press Despatch) LONDON, April 29.—British peace advocates have viewed with some regret Great Britain's joining with the United States in granting non-limitation of trained reserves to countries employing conscription to raise their armies. Their regret has been tempered, however, with a feeling that if a general disarmament convention is the result, the price will have been well warranted.

The Times (Independent) said today trained reserves obviously ought to have been included in the estimates of military effectiveness, but "since the United States and Great Britain maintain armies which are scarcely more than police forces it might perhaps hardly become them to dictate conditions of military disarmament to the great nations of the continent steeped in different traditions. It would be idle to challenge their outlook."

The Daily News (Liberal and Anti-Government) said: "The ill-considered American concession to European militarism in agreeing to rule out reserves is due directly to the fact that Great Britain sold the pass in the bargain with France which nullified British statements a few months ago." It added the evils which it thought would attach to the concession as regards reserve might be mitigated by limitation of weapons and war materials.

The League of Nations' Preparatory Disarmament Commission today. Discussion was on a motion by the Chinese delegate to abolish universal military service. On suggestion of the chairman, the Chinese delegate agreed to leave the proposal for consideration by the commission's steering committee.

Dr. Riddell expressed sympathy with the Chinese proposal, and said Canada associated itself with the view expressed by Great Britain, the United States, Sweden and Holland. He expressed doubt whether the committee at this stage would adopt any resolution on the subject. This was a matter for the later international conference to deal with.

Count Von Bernstorff, of Germany, favored abolition of compulsory military service, while Maxim Litvinoff, Russian vice-commissar for foreign affairs, said he was not opposed to the principle of the Chinese proposal.

Three Were Killed And Many Hurt In Collision Between Subway And Elevated Train

Fire Broke Out on One of Wooden Cars of "L" Train—There Was a Panic After Crash, and Many Women Were Hurt In Struggle to Extricate Themselves from Cars Not Directly Smashed in Collision.

(Associated Press Despatch) NEW YORK, April 29.—Three persons were killed and forty injured today in a rear end collision between a subway and an elevated train at 167th street, in the Bronx. Fire broke out on one of the wooden cars of the "L" train.

There was a panic after the crash. Many women were hurt in the struggle to extricate themselves from cars not directly smashed in the collision.

The elevated train had stopped on signal and the express train of all steel cars rammed it with terrific force.

J. Cullen, motorman of the subway train, and an unidentified youth who was standing near Cullen's booth, were killed. An unidentified man who was on the rear of the "L" train also met death.

The fire hampered the work of rescue. Four ambulances were sent to the scene, besides fire apparatus and a squad of police reserves.

ANOTHER TREATMENT FOR DIABETES IS DISCOVERED

Dr. C. A. Mills, University of Cincinnati Medical College, Announces Discovery Which May Prove More Efficacious Than Insulin.

(Associated Press Despatch) SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, April 29.—A new treatment for diabetes, which it is alleged may prove more efficacious than insulin, was announced before the Ohio Academy of Science Saturday.

Dr. C. A. Mills, of the Laboratory of Experimental Medicine, University of Cincinnati Medical College, told the medical science section of the Academy that experiments he made in China and America led him to believe "vitamin B" extract, a vegetable product, not only had the same property of controlling diabetes as insulin, but likewise had curative properties.

Vitamin "B" is obtained from alfalfa, sweet clover, onions, bran and other plants.

Federal Reserve Board Policy Was Blamed For Having Caused Actual Crisis In U. S. Finances

S. Industry Would Shrive Up Without Aid of British Empire.

(Associated Press Despatch) PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 29.—Asking that if under a "dubious policy" of the Federal Reserve Board American bankers were not getting the worst of financial relations with Europe, Representative Louis T. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, declared at the opening session of the American Academy of Political and Social Science here, that the country is confronted with a "bad money situation" that seems to be drawing the United States to the brink of an international crisis.

Mr. McFadden added that in his opinion the collapse of the Reparations Conference in Paris was a phase of a situation which, unless soon corrected, might involve the immediate as well as the future welfare of the civilized world.

William C. Redfield, of New York city, former Secretary of Commerce, who disagreed with the Pennsylvaniaian, stated that as a banker he knew of no such serious situation.

"We are confronted today with a bad money situation," said Mr. McFadden. "This situation is obviously not exclusively a domestic one. It is one that seems to be drawing us to the brink of an international crisis. I do not believe that I can be accused justly of being either a Few Ridings Will Escape Triangular Contest in General Elections—All Parties Gratified at Time Set for Election.

(Canadian Press Correspondent) LONDON, April 29.—The number of candidates for the 615 seats in parliament in the general election elections on May 30th, will number altogether about 1,680, it is indicated. The party figures are 500 Conservatives; 560 Laborites; 530 Liberals, and 30 Communists and Independents. This compared with 1,428 in the elections.

It seems therefore that few ridings will escape a triangular contest.

All parties are gratified at the time set for the election, which was held in the summer time for the first time thirty-four years ago. Naturally it enables less expenditure on halls, and the period assists in popularizing outdoor meetings, where accommodations are practically unlimited.

Slave Trade Still Carried Out On Large Scale In Arab Markets

Estimated that at Least Two Thousand Blacks from Africa Are Sold Each Year—Slave Trade Continues Despite Resolutions Passed by League of Nations—Slaves Are Brought Across Red Sea in Small Vessels and Packed Off in Troops.

(Associated Press Despatch) JERUSALEM, April 29.—The slave traffic, notwithstanding resolutions passed by the League of Nations, is still operating in the Orient. Reports just published say some 2,000 blacks each year are brought from Africa into the Arab slave markets.

The trade in human beings extended over the Sudan, Abyssinia, the Hedjaz, the Nejd, the Yemen, and the coast of Somaliland. Even in Transjordan it is not altogether unknown; sheikhs there have black attendants who serve all their lives without payment.

In Arabia proper, slave trading goes on fairly openly. The Hedjaz Government levies a toll of ten dollars per capita on slaves. In Djeddah, the port of Mecca, the slave market is but 250 feet from the consulate of one of the great European powers.

The price of this human commodity is moderate. An average slave

(Associated Press Despatch) PARIS, April 29.—The twelfth week of the reparations conference opened today with an examination of the proposed texts of the draft sub-committee of preliminary work on the proposed texts of the report to be submitted by the experts to the various governments interested.

These texts cover principally the question of establishing an international bank to replace the Reparations Commission and transfer committee as well as the agent-general in the receipt and distribution of reparations payments.

The experts are waiting for any possible development regarding figures, before taking up the question of annuities or commercialization of any part of the reparations debt. The question of deliveries in kind may be wound up along with the other uncontented points before Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the German delegation, returns on Thursday.

Sir Austen Chamberlain Declares That Great Britain Will Support Disarmament Stand Taken By U.S.

Referring to Statement of U. S. Ambassador on Question of Trained Reserves, British Foreign Secretary Described It as "an Equally Remarkable Contribution" to Solution of Disarmament Problem.

(Associated Press Cable.) NOSTEL PRIORY, Yorkshire, England, April 2.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, on Saturday, affirmed Great Britain's hearty concurrence with the declaration of the United States' attitude toward disarmament made by Hugh S. Gibson, at Geneva on Monday, in an address to an open air meeting here.

Referring to Mr. Gibson's statement on the question of trained army reserves, Sir Austen described it as "an equally remarkable contribution" to the solution of the disarmament problem.

The Foreign Secretary declared that Great Britain also concurred with this statement and had made a similar announcement a year or more ago. He thought that Mr. Gibson's declaration as to naval disarmament had "paved the way for real advance in that movement toward disarmament which all the world desires and needs. But it has special interest for us because it shows once again how close in these matters are the policies of the United States and of Great Britain and how similar are our outlook and our point of view. We, too, desire not merely limitation but reduction of armaments. We too desire not merely limitation but reductions of armaments," continued Sir Austen. "We too desire not merely reduction applied to certain classes of warships, but reduction of armaments which shall not be applied to this and that class only, but to every class of war vessel."

Not Merely Limitations, But Reductions of Armaments. "We too, desire not merely limitations but reductions of armaments," continued Sir Austen. "We too desire not merely reduction applied to certain classes of warships, but reduction of armaments which shall not be applied to this and that class only, but to every class of war vessel."

Past Difficulties. Referring to past difficulties in securing an agreement on disarmament, the Foreign Secretary explained that "it was not between us two (Britain and the United States) or if we had stood alone because of our particular circumstances, that the difficulty arose."

"It was because we had to find some rule which could be applied to our diverse circumstances and at the same time would be applicable to all the great navies of the world.... and the significance, importance and hopefulness of the statement which Mr. Gibson made the other day in that by suggesting new criteria of comparison he has made it easier to find the standard by which production may be fixed whilst taking account of the different circumstances and different needs of the powers concerned," Sir Austen concluded.

The Foreign Secretary said: "Mr. Gibson's declaration is notable in many ways. He dwelt on the importance which the signature of the Kellogg pact had for the problem of disarmament. I agree with

The accident occurred when the driver lost control of the automobile and failed to make the curve. The car struck the end of the bridge railing and plunged into a swollen brook. It was 2.30 o'clock yesterday when the accident occurred. Only one body was recovered yesterday afternoon.

The drowned men are: Lieut. Theophile Gagne, forty-nine years of age, 645 Godin street, Verdun; and Leo Fiola, thirty-two years of age, of 4005 Wellington street, Verdun, driver of the ill-fated automobile.

The two men who escaped are: Edouard Thivierge, thirty years of age, of 382 LeSalle Boulevard, Verdun, and William Aube, thirty-five years of age, of 3999 Ethel street, Verdun. Both men suffered bruises about the head and face but were able to proceed unassisted.

"Fit as a Fiddle!"

Real fitness is worth more than dollars, more than genius or blue blood, or beauty. Yet you can have this priceless possession for a paltry outlay—less than half-a-cent a day. Just as this man did. Read his letter—

"I feel I must write and let you know what I think of Kruschen Salts. I had a very severe attack of influenza which left me very weak, and I felt fit for nothing."

"I was recommended to try Kruschen Salts, and the first dose put me right, and to-day I feel a new man and as fit as a fiddle. No sufferer should be without them."

"They are a boon and a blessing to all, and are worth their weight in gold."

EDISON WORKED LUCK WHILE IT WAS COMING

When Fortune Smiled on Him in His Newsboy Struggle He Played the Opportunity to the Limit

THOMAS A. EDISON'S luck in boyhood and manhood was chiefly due to a brain that was never asleep at the switch, Irving Bacher relates in "Making Friends With Luck," in the American Magazine. Here is the first Edison story:

Thomas A. Edison and I were sitting in his smoking room upstairs, after dinner. I was looking at the animated portrait of a boy with a bundle of newspapers under his arm, hanging on the wall.

"That's me," he said. "I used to be a newsboy. By and by I rose to the dignity of news agent on a train which ran between Saginaw and Detroit. My last trip was as unexpected as a pair of twins. It's quite a story—and goes to show what queer happenings control our destiny or assist us to turn the tide of our affairs into other channels."

"Coming down from Saginaw one day I was passing through the smoking car with an armful of newspapers. A man stopped me. He was a southerner, well dressed, standing collar, string tie, sparkler in his shirt front, big black hat on his head. A long cigar tilted upward from the corner of his mouth. A negro sat beside him."

"Boy, what ye got there?" he asked. "Newspapers," I answered. "How many?" "Thirty four."

"Chuck 'em out o' the window," he commanded. I hesitated.

"Chuck 'em out o' the window," he repeated. "I'm able to pay for 'em."

"Taking him at his word, I flung them through an open window."

"He lazily turned to the negro at his side, as if the vulgar dealer of business were beneath him, saying in a lordly tone, 'Necodemus, settle with the boy.'"

"The colored man paid me. I returned to my trunk. I had never sold my papers with so little effort. I thought that I would try him again. I returned to the smoking car with a load of magazines that staggered me. It was enough to give a horse the heaves. I left none behind."

"My customer saw me coming."

"Hello, boy, what ye got there?"

"Magazines."

"How many?"

"I told him."

"Chuck 'em out o' the window."

"It was a bull market. I unloaded. For the first time my stock was moving fast. I think that half a mile of the right of way was paved with literature."

"Necodemus, settle with the boy, my whimsical southern friend commanded, as I returned empty-handed to his seat."

"I understood the situation. My customer evidently was having a few days of princely relaxation. Like many men of that time, on pleasure bent, he was playing the part of a lavish Roman emperor. His little hobby was the creation of astonishment. I decided that if I had been chosen by fate to assist him to ride his hobby, far be it from me to lag behind."

"I hurried back to my trunk. It was half-full of novels: 'The Gun Maker of Moscow,' 'The Hidden Hand,' 'Belmonte,' 'The Indian Slayer,' 'Ten Nights in a Barroom,' and a stock of Beadle's dime novels in yellow paper covers. Some of them showed signs of wear. The brakeman helped me stack them in my arms. It was almost a wagon load. I was in the midst of an adventure as thrilling as any in the books I carried. I toiled into the smoking car with my burden, wondering if my streak of luck would hold."

"Again the familiar words: 'Hello, boy, what ye got there?'"

"Novels," I answered.

"How many?"

"Having counted them I gave the number."

"Again the welcome order: 'Chuck 'em out o' the window.'"

"Gladly I chuckled 'em. For a minute the air was full of mystery and bloody murder. Every tramp on that railroad must have become a walking library, and I'm sure that the section boys required a surprising familiarity with literature."

"Once more I heard the princely command: 'Necodemus, settle with the boy.'"

"My bill was paid in full."

"I returned to an empty trunk. A closed and locked it for the last time. What should I do with it? I decided to try my luck once more. I dragged the trunk through the aisle to the smoking car. Everyone laughed as I bumped it through the door."

"Again the familiar greeting: 'Hello, boy, what ye got there?'"

"Trunk," I answered.

"He smiled as he asked: 'How many?'"

"One."

"Chuck it off the train."

"I dragged it to the platform and tumbled it to the right of way, and Necodemus settled with me. I was out of the news-agent business for good."

By way of emphasizing the moral, Mr. Bacher writes, "he knew that fortuitous fortune such as this came seldom in a lifetime. Opportunity, fate, luck—call it what you will—had played right into his hands, and he realized that it was up to him to seize it and turn it to his advantage."

COLD COMFORT

IT was time the young man declared his love and the girl led him to a dim part of the ballroom behind a clump of palms.

They sat down and she cuddled close to him. She was very beautiful in her filmy evening gown, and she knew it.

But the young man sat there in awkward silence. Four or five minutes passed. Then he coughed nervously.

"Do you mind if I smoke a cigarette?" he asked politely.

"Not a bit," replied the girl, and she gave a laugh that was colder than ice. "No, I don't mind, if you're sure you won't be ill."

Mayor Fired Twice From Earlier Jobs

ADDRESSING the Ontario Retail Lumber Dealers' Association recently, Mayor Sam McBride of Toronto told of how he happened to get into the lumber business and his early associations with it. Fifty years ago, when thirteen years old, he knew that he had to make a living and started driving a lumber wagon for the S. C. Kennedy Lumber Co. He watched the inspector on the piles and studied his methods. There were not nearly as many grades in those days as there are to-day, and he soon learned how the inspector did his work. He was often asked to help on the piles, and became so proficient that in a short while—within two years—he was working as an inspector instead of a driver.

There was less work inspecting lumber than there was in handling horses. He had the chance of putting his practical knowledge to the test. Then he took charge of a branch lumber yard for the S. C. Kennedy Co. on Tecumseh St. He taught a relative of the proprietor of the firm how to grade lumber and do other things in the yard. This resulted in Mr. McBride doing himself out of a job.

Next, the mayor joined the firm of McCroney, McCool & Wilson and was to sell on a commission. The first week or two he disposed of 150,000 feet of basswood to a coffin factory, and the commission was so large that it staggered the firm. A dispute followed, and "again I lost my job," said his worship. He then entered the services of the late J. H. Eyer, one of the finest and most honorable lumbermen that Toronto ever knew. Mr. McBride remained with Mr. Eyer until 1899, when he went with Robert Thompson as buyer, salesman and inspector. "I often worked all day until dark," he added, "and then would be given a ticket to go to Warton or some distant place inspecting. The hours were long and the work at times heavy, but I didn't mind," said Mr. McBride. Continuing, he remarked that in 1898 he went into the lumber business on his own behalf, and had made money from the outset. In 1904 the doctors decided that he was working too hard and that he must have a hobby in order to detract attention from too much devotion to his business.

"In that year," proceeded Mr. McBride, "I entered public life and have been at it ever since. I entered upon it as a hobby and I know that I have made a success of the lumber business, which is now run by my son, but it is a question if I have made a success of public life. At least, some of my opponents say that I have not."—Canada Lumberman.

Hoover Guaranteed Lady Wouldn't Be Torpedoed

WHEN Herbert Hoover left Stanford he was penniless. Twenty years later he remarked: "I suppose it is good for some boys to make their way through colleges. Teaches them to buckle down. But in my case, I'm sure I'd have made myself a better all-round man if I hadn't lost so much time just making a living."

As a practical miner he took a laborer's job in California, working with a shift of Cornishmen; and then, a gold rush in Western Australia and a lucrative post altered his destiny for ten years. "You'll need clothes," said a friend, and prevailed on him to acquire a "morning coat" affair of aggressive Scotch tweed. Two years later an express parcel from Australia came, with the tweed suit and a note: "Since you like this damn thing, take it. I haven't worn it yet!"

At Coolgardie, the young engineer was busy determining metallurgical methods, designing equipment, and planning the development of ten large mines, until the Chinese department of mines offered a larger inducement to him. He married and took his young bride to Pekin, travelled in the Chinese provinces, by horse, canal boat, Manchurian ponies, camping often at native inns, and narrowly escaping the Boxer rising at Tientsin during days of siege. His reputation had spread through the clannish mining business and prosperity awaited him on his return to San Francisco.

The war caught in its meshes two hundred thousand American tourists and brought Herbert Hoover into public life. As organizer, with headquarters in the Savoy hotel, London, he had to see that thousands of American school-girls, attending continental boarding-schools, arrived home safely. Some of the refugees were panic-stricken. Hoover must reassure them. One elderly woman for whom he had arranged passage told him flatly that she would not embark unless he gave her his personal guarantee in writing that she would not be torpedoed on the Atlantic. "I knew," he chuckled afterwards, "that there wasn't one chance in ten thousand that her ship would be harmed. If she came through all right, she'd say I kept my word. If she was sunk, she'd never have time to blame me!"

"I returned to an empty trunk. A closed and locked it for the last time. What should I do with it? I decided to try my luck once more. I dragged the trunk through the aisle to the smoking car. Everyone laughed as I bumped it through the door."

"Again the familiar greeting: 'Hello, boy, what ye got there?'"

"Trunk," I answered.

"He smiled as he asked: 'How many?'"

"One."

"Chuck it off the train."

"I dragged it to the platform and tumbled it to the right of way, and Necodemus settled with me. I was out of the news-agent business for good."

By way of emphasizing the moral, Mr. Bacher writes, "he knew that fortuitous fortune such as this came seldom in a lifetime. Opportunity, fate, luck—call it what you will—had played right into his hands, and he realized that it was up to him to seize it and turn it to his advantage."

How Woodbridge Was Given Its Title

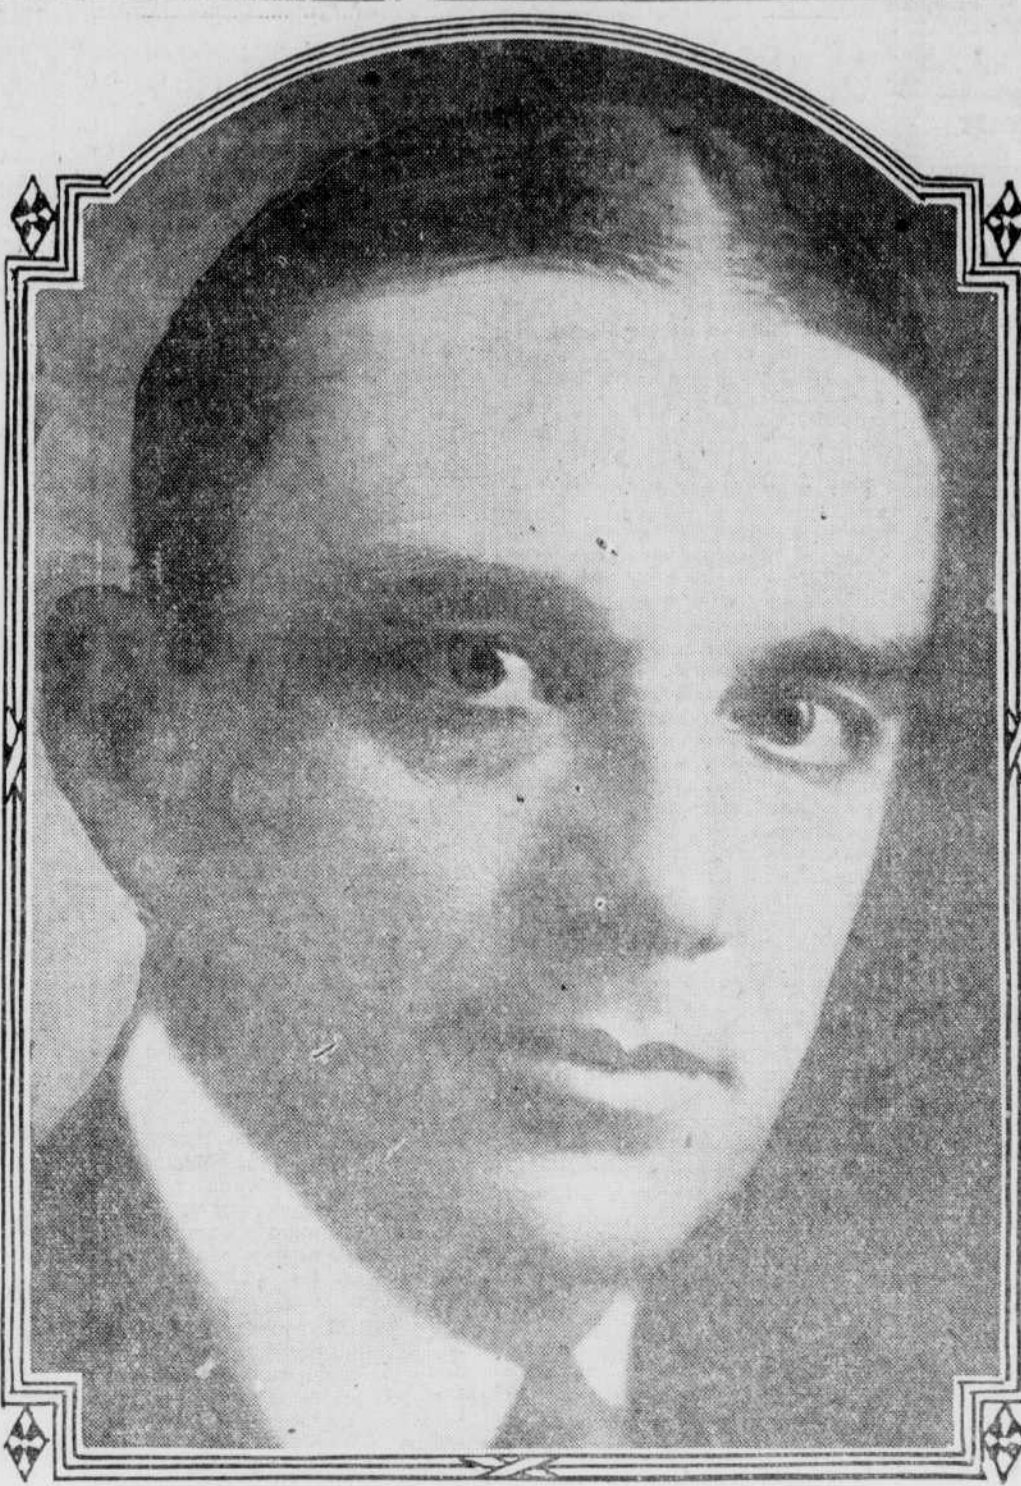

IT is interesting how some places get their names. The town of Woodbridge, not far from Toronto, originally was called Burwick. There was another town in the province called Berwick. The similarity caused no little trouble.

Among those most annoyed by this state of affairs was Squire Gamble of Burwick. His mail was forever going astray; therefore, he determined something must be done. Calling the town council together he laid the matter before them.

It was decided to change the name of the town. Various suggestions were put forth, only to be rejected on one ground or another. Finally Squire Gamble was asked to propose a suitable name.

"Woodbridge," he promptly answered, "because you have to cross a wooden bridge to get in or out of the town in any direction."

The idea appealed to the council, and forthwith the town was rechristened Woodbridge.

Owen Young, chairman of the second committee of experts on Reparations. In aiming to establish a world bank, he tackles a monumental task.

America's Super-Business Man Faces Biggest Financial Task

A QUIET, powerful figure of international renown is Owen D. Young, sometimes called the "super-business man" of America. The job he is about to tackle now is perhaps the biggest he has ever come up against and he has come up against many big ones. His present interest is a world bank and J. P. Morgan, noted financier, is helping him work out the plans. The endeavor will be made to build on the need for reparations machinery an institution which promises to cast an influence over the business and material welfare of hundreds of millions of people.

Author-in-chief of the communiqué of the committee of experts, Mr. Young foresees an institution which may serve the banks of all countries by co-ordinating their international needs and supplying their demands for exchanges in a fashion to protect the moneys of all nations against the troubles which might develop from mishandling of national banking needs.

The magnitude of the undertaking can be seen by the fact that the bank would handle, first, the German reparations of some $8,000,000,000; then the inter-allied debt payments to America of another $10,000,000,000, and so on. After that monumental task this bank would play a part in international finance never believed possible in a human institution. Indeed, Mr. Young and his committee have launched an idea of which a great deal will be heard.

Mr. Young's selection for this great task was a personal tribute as well as being in the way of a tribute to the neutrality of the United States in the debate on how much and for how long the Reich would pay the allies. Statesmen of Europe did not forget the large part played by the American economist in drafting the Dawes plan, which solved a troubled period and made order out of chaos in 1924.

Once someone asked General Dawes after the latter had highly praised the great role played by Owen Young what he himself had done. This was his reply: "Well, Owen told 'em what to do and then I told 'em they ought to do it, because there's no use asking for what you are not going to get."

Mr. Young as chairman of the second experts' committee is a different type of man than General Dawes, the genial and fiery. Quiet, patient and suave, Mr. Young presides with gloved hands. There is no abruptness, no pounding of the fist on the table, but always quiet suggestion and firm emphasis on points on which the debaters agree. In fact the chairman keeps them all in good humor.

While he is scientific Mr. Young is also human. He joins expert business knowledge with keen judgment of human nature. Thus he has studied every man on the reparations committee and he will make use of his findings when there comes a time.

Owen D. Young looks closer to 40 than he does to 55, his actual age. He possesses great dignity and is tall, slim and staid-looking. He hasn't forgotten how to smile either and he delivers his most weighty sentences with a twinkle in his eye which one notices only at the end of his paragraphs.

But now the foundations for a great new house have been built and Mr. Young is the architect. It is now a question of finishing it and that is the largest part of the task. Quiet and insistent, this "super-business man" is not in the habit of failure and his one desire before him is to succeed.

A project for liquidating the debts among 300,000,000 human beings left by the world war is a pretty big dream and it is a worthwhile undertaking any way one looks at it. It means billions of dollars to be paid by millions of men.

The near future will mean everything in the plans of Mr. Young and his colleagues. He looks forward to that near future with hope.

Not an Angel But a College President Entertained Unawares in Crowded Hotel

AT the banquet which closed the last provincial convention of the Canadian Legion Dr. R. Bruce Taylor, president of Queen's University and one of the guests of honor at the banquet, turned to Sir Richard Turner, bowed low and thanked Sir Richard for having once saved him five dollars.

Sir Richard, looking somewhat surprised, acknowledged the thanks, whereupon Dr. Taylor proceeded to explain.

"I had to visit Ottawa on short notice some time ago and arrived in the hotel without having made a reservation. When I approached the desk the clerk informed me that they were filled up."

"I continued to question him as to whether there wasn't a possibility of finding a room for me, but he repeated his regrets that he could do nothing."

"Dejected, I was turning Principal Taylor away when a gentleman who had been standing nearby and who had overheard the conversation broke in, 'Oh, I say, that's too bad. You must let me fix you up. I have a suite to myself and would be only too glad to let you have a room with me.'"

"I demurred, though weakly, and when he pressed me, allowed the boy to precede me to the number that had been given him by the gentleman whose acquaintance I had not yet had the honor to make."

"I proceeded to make myself at home, awaiting the arrival of my host. He came in shortly, looked at me in a sort of surprised fashion and exclaimed, 'Why, you're not Sir Richard Turner, are you?'"

PRINCESS IS PUPPET OF CHURCH AND STATE

The Marriage of Giovanna of Italy Influenced by Possible Gains of Her Country and Wishes of the Vatican

CUPID could not possibly have drawn a more interesting set of cards than the little Love God holds on Princess Giovanna, the pretty 22-year-old daughter of the King and Queen of Italy, who is figuratively on the block of the royal marriage mart.

Bachelor kings, crown princes and pretenders are almost a glut upon the market in Europe these days but there are few desirable future queens. Princess Jose of Belgium and Giovanna of Italy hold the stage almost undisputed.

There are three, and maybe four, contenders for the hand of Giovanna—King Boris of Bulgaria, King Zogu of Albania, the pretender to the Hungarian throne; Archduke Albrecht of the House of Hapsburg, and the Prince of Wales. Three of them are openly in the running—the fourth, Wales, who could win if he wanted to, is watching from the sidelines, perhaps hoping that the beautiful little princess will do as her sister Yolanda did and give royalty the gate by marrying for love.

Politics is the dominating factor in Giovanna's life at the moment, politics and religion. And over either she has no control. For years King Boris, urged by his people to take a queen and thereby establish a succession, has half-heartedly pressed his suit. At one time it was even reported to be a love match and that Boris was really anxious to wed the dark-eyed, fanciful Italian offspring of the House of Savoy. The alliance with the House of Cobourg in many respects would be an admirable one for the perpetuation of dying dynasties.

The Vatican, however, has been the greatest stumbling block to the match. Giovanna is Catholic, and now that the Vatican has made peace with Italy it is hardly to be expected that she would be allowed to give up her religion to espouse that of King Boris who, perhaps not through deep desire but political necessity, is Greek Orthodox. Under Vatican rules Giovanna could marry Boris, but she would have to pledge herself to bring up her children as Catholics. The Bulgarian constitution makes Greek Orthodox the state religion and that ends that. It is rumored that Mussolini, who is extremely anxious to strengthen the bond between Italy and the Balkans, would use his influence in persuading the church not to excommunicate Giovanna should a match be arranged with Boris—but that is rumor.

Religion again stands in the way of the "political match" between the little royal puppet and King Zogu of Albania. Zogu is a Moslem and his hold upon the wild tribes of his mountainous kingdom depends upon his remaining one. The chasm between Catholicism and Mohammedanism is unbridgeable no matter how earnestly Fascism might desire to strengthen its hold across the Adriatic.

The likeliest entry in the lists is Archduke Albrecht of the Hapsburg line who, with Archduke Otto, is the candidate for the crown of St. Stephen. But Albrecht has not yet gained the throne and the Carlists or Legitimists in Hungary swear solemn oaths to place the eldest son of Empress Zita on the throne there when the time is politically ripe. Undeniably in love with Giovanna, Albrecht already has been in Rome twice. He also is not unaware of the important ally he would gain in his campaign for the Hungarian throne through an alliance with the House of Savoy. The Vatican, because of his Catholicism, likewise is known to look with favor upon the match—providing Albrecht can mount the throne of the Magyars. Even Mussolini is not averse.

So long as the Prince of Wales keeps out of the to-do—and the British heir apparent could have any princess in Europe to-day for the asking—the contest lies between Boris and Albrecht it appears, with the odds slightly in favor of the latter, religiously, and the former, politically. What Giovanna's views are no one but the little princess knows, and she is not telling anybody.

Both Sofia and Budapest have given instructions to their ambassadors to plead the cases of their respective claimants. The Bulgarian government is reliably stated to have sent the new envoy, Volkoff, to Rome especially to arrange an understanding. On the other hand the Hungarian government has for a long time expected its ambassador, Andreas Hory, to successfully handle Albrecht's case. Hory, however, is seriously ill at the moment, and Albrecht, according to the Budapest newspaper, Esti Kurir, is shortly proceeding to Rome personally—to visit the Pope and King Victor Emmanuel—and maybe Mussolini.

In the meantime Giovanna bides her time—and perhaps like her elder headstrong sister, she has a taste of her own. Yolanda is reported exceedingly happy with the obscure Count Calvi di Gergola, and the example may prove a precedent for the unhappy Giovanna.

Or—say it softly—the rumors still persist of another Caesar ruling in the grandeur that was once, and again may become, Rome's.

Sauce for the Farmer Sauce for Priest, too

HON. ALBERT C. SAUNDERS, premier of Prince Edward Island, never wears in talking about the history, resources and possibilities of "The Cradle of Confederation."

Mr. Saunders knows his province well. It has been said that he knows every line fence from Tignish to Elmira, and he could tell you off-hand the location of every fox farm on the island.

The premier remembers the time when many islanders looked upon fox raising as a foolish notion—the far away days when Charles Dalton was experimenting with a few foxes of mixed colors. To-day there are more than six hundred farms in the province stocked with fur-bearing animals.

He can also tell amusing stories when he is in a humorous mood. He relates one about Sir Charles Dalton and the long-to-be-remembered Father Doyle, the witty Irish priest of whom island people tell so many good stories.

Father Doyle was interested in bee-keeping, but in its early days, at any rate, he was doubtful about fox raising as an occupation of profit.

One day Charles Dalton, later Sir Charles, and Father Doyle met in a Summerside store. The priest was making some purchases for use about his apary and Mr. Dalton was laying in a supply of wire fencing.

"Well, Charles," said the priest, "and how many foxes have you now?"

"Five, Good Father," replied the man who was one day to be knighted by his sovereign.

"Five," said Father Doyle. "Why, Charles, five are not many, considering the years you have spent chasing foxes. Do you know, Charles," the priest went on, "that a man, Samson by name, caught three hundred foxes and tied them all tail to tail, in the course of a forenoon?"

"True enough, true enough," said the pioneer fox-farmer, "but that same lad, Samson by name, killed lions with his bare hands and made bee-hives of the carcasses."

Of course, Premier Saunders thinks that one must know the Bible in order to appreciate an island story.

Indulge Your Imagination.

There is a great deal more latent energy and ambition in us than we realize. What most of us need is imagination to picture goals that are worth striving for in this life. Many a man and many a woman have been made happier in more senses than one because imagination kindled a fire and set the unsuspected talent to work.

Do you never ease the monotony of your days by reading through the fascinating columns of travel "ads" in your newspaper? More of us than realize it can go away for a certain time each year. When the Orient or the South Seas or the wilder and less frequented spots call loudly enough, others can speed up their brains and eventually slip out on the steamship or train towards the land of their desire.

Give your suppressed ambitions a chance to sprout and develop. It may not be travel you seek, but whatever it is that is destined to stir you to activity, advertising in your newspaper is the great prime intelligence that informs, advises and inspires the people of today and prepares them for the adventures and achievements of tomorrow.

No jumpy feeling NOW when I drive through traffic

You are invited to listen in Wrigley Review, Monday Evening 8 to 8:30, CKNC, Toronto; CFCE, Montreal.

A feeling of strain takes the pleasure out of driving. Any motorist is apt to feel the effects of nervous tension during a long spell at the wheel.

Nothing relieves this tension so effectively as Wrigley's. The act of chewing, as motorists have discovered, has a gentle soothing effect. The healthful cleansing action of Wrigley's refreshes the mouth—steadies the nerves. Ask your doctor and he will tell you so.

Dentists and medical men recommend the regular use of Wrigley's after every meal—because it aids digestion and cleanses the mouth after eating, drinking or smoking.

Efficiency and refinement call for Wrigley's.

PLAY TO BE REPEATED The young people of St. Andrew's Church, who so successfully presented the play, "Take My Advice," are going to repeat it on Friday evening of this week in the Assembly Hall of the Cambridge School as a gift from the Fellowship Association to the endowment fund of the Memorial Building.

The play was one of the best comedies ever presented by the young people of St. Andrew's, and their offer, the first one to be made, is greatly appreciated by the committee in charge of the endowment fund.

The first presentation showed that much time and effort had been put into the production of the attractive comedy and it is hoped the players will be greeted by a large audience; also that interest will be shown in the "benefit" night.

SERVICES AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH YESTERDAY Holy Communion was celebrated in St. Andrew's Church yesterday. New members were received into the fellowship of the church at morning service and the music by the choir was suitable to the occasion. The Sunday School had its usual session in the afternoon, and there was a good attendance at the minister's Bible class.

For this morning sermon Rev. J. Corder spoke on "Bearing Christ's Cross" (Luke 23:26). In dealing with the subject the preacher had in mind the last days. "We all have in mind a picture of them," he said, "and it requires little skill to make the picture as vivid as an incident of yesterday." He continued his address by telling how fascinating Luke had made the whole story in his Gospel, and touched upon incidents in lives of the Apostles that proved the truth of unexpected crosses; these being relative to the oft-repeated phrase, "We know not what a day may bring forth."

There was also the question: "Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free?" in reply to which the minister said that faithful followers of Him could always find something to do to lighten the pain of Him who bore the Cross. There were also the compulsory crosses, and here the preacher reminded his hearers of Simon, who could not escape from his burden, and who was referred to by some of the ancient fathers as the porter of the cross. Yet no hint was given that Simon was ever reluctant in regard to that post of duty. He could not shake off the rough grip of the Roman soldiers, and the minister said in reference to these conditions, that it was often so with people today.

Honorable crosses were also mentioned here, the minister saying: "Nothing exalts life like voluntary fellowship with Christ's sufferings. Have we not felt how little we were beside some life poorer than ours in circumstances and, perhaps, ability, yet greater than ours in its sense of nearness to the Divine?"

In the evening Mr. Corder discussed with his congregation before the observance of the Sacrament, Dr. George Matheson's famous hymn, "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," the sentiment of which was most suitable to the observances of the day, for the faithful must come to the Lord's table with love in their hearts. The music of this hymn was composed by Dr. George Matheson, Cathedral, the minister explained, and both words and music brought out clearly His magnetic influence upon men.

PRIZES PRESENTED TO SUCCESSFUL CONTESTANTS IN TEMPERANCE EDUCATIONAL CONTEST

Both services in Trinity United Church yesterday were conducted by the minister, Dr. W. S. Lennon. In the morning a sermon on "The Question that Revealed the Higher Values" began a series of five Sunday morning sermons under the general title, "Illuminating Questions of Jesus." The social music of the service included an anthem by the choir entitled, "I Will Extol Thee," by Humphreys.

In connection with the evening hour of worship the pastor gave a brief address on "The Story of a Great Conversion," in which he answered a question propounded by a member of the congregation concerning the influence of his Jewish teacher, Gamaliel, upon the mind of Saul of Tarsus as a psychological factor in his final conversion to Christianity. The junior choir assisted in the musical part of the service, which was extensive, singing with the regular choir the chorus, "Come to the Saviour." The choir also rendered the chorus, "O, Home of Many Mansions."

The regular session of the Sunday School at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon was made especially interesting by the presentation of prizes to the successful contestants in the Temperance Educational Contest held recently under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. and "The Northern Messenger." Three scholars of Trinity Church Sunday School were among the prize-winners of the district. Mr. Wesley Bradley won both a county and a local prize, while Miss Lorna Scholes and Mr. Norman Phelps won recognitions. The presentation of his prizes was made yesterday by Mr. Bradley by Mrs. Ernest Jones, county president of the W. C. T. U., but the presentation to the other prize-winners had to be deferred because of their absence. In addition to the W. C. T. U. prizes, Mr. Bradley also received a prize from Trinity Sunday School, as will also the other two when their prizes are given next Sunday.

Miss Trotter, girls' work secretary of the Religious Education Council of Quebec, was present and gave an address to the school on the summer camp for the C. G. I. T. girls to be held this summer on the newly-secured camp grounds, near Lake Memphremagog.

At the Trinity Brotherhood meeting yesterday afternoon, the pastor gave an address on "The Characteristics of the Four Gospels, and the special features of Mark's Gospel." The address was the second introductory address in a series on "The Life of Christ according to Mark."

ADVANCED TIME IS IN FORCE IN THIS DISTRICT

Change Was Made Without Any Noticeable Inconvenience—Protestant Churches Held Services on Advanced Time, Although Catholic Churches Did Not Make Change Until Last Night.

On the stroke of midnight Saturday night Sherbrooke quietly and without outward inconvenience adopted daylight saving time, which will remain the city's official time until the end of September.

Citizens were given fair warning of the change in time and were requested to advance the hands of the clocks one hour upon retiring Saturday night.

The request was apparently observed, for yesterday morning everything went smoothly and there appeared to be no serious inconvenience of any kind.

Services in the Protestant Churches were held on daylight saving time yesterday, although the Catholic churches did not make the change until last night, and consequently services were held an hour later according to advanced time.

This morning, with a day to get into the new running of things, everyone was out bright and early, many apparently not even remembering that any change had been made in the time.

SIR AUSTEN SAYS GREAT BRITAIN

ships but reduction applied throughout the whole field of naval construction. As between them and us, I don't hesitate to declare my profound conviction that at no time would an arrangement have been difficult, as between them and us war is a contingency that no sane, responsible man will contemplate as a possibility of the policy which he pursues.

"If we had to consider only their needs and ours, long ago we could have made a broad and large gentleman's agreement, expressive of the confidence we have in one another. It was not between us two that difficulty arose. It was because we had to find some rule which could be applied to our diverse circumstances and at the same time would be applicable to all great navies. The world problem isn't whether the United States navy should equal ours. We accepted fully and with equivoction parity with the United States. It was not that they wanted reduction and we did not. We desire reduction as earnestly as they. The problem is to find some equation whereby we can measure naval strength so that the parity which both nations desire may be reached at a level which indicates, not an increase in the armaments of the world, but a reduction. The significance, importance and hopefulness of the statement which Mr. Gibson made the other day is that by suggesting new criteria of comparison he made it easier to find a standard whereby reduction may be fixed while taking account of the different needs of the powers concerned.

Land Disarmament.

"Mr. Gibson made a second and, in its way, an equally remarkable contribution towards the problem when he turned from naval disarmament to land," continued the British Foreign Minister. "Again observe how similar is the standpoint and outlook of the United States to that of our own country. Only last summer His Majesty's Government were objects of unmeasured denunciation even vituperation by both of the other parties, because we had said and done exactly what Mr. Gibson said and did yesterday at Geneva. We were told we made disarmament impossible and definitely separated ourselves from the United States and created real divergence between their policy and our. Now we see that we were moved by the same desire to make progress. Mr. Gibson makes a declaration at Geneva for which we were denounced when we made it a year ago. I don't wish to pretend that all our difficulties are over. We have still a long way to go, and many obstacles to overcome, but I hail the American action at Geneva of these last days as a hopeful sign of ultimate success and as having made the most valuable contribution to the cause of disarmament and peace."

MANY PERSONS WERE KILLED IN ACCIDENTS

Nine Members of a Family of Ten Were Killed When Their Auto Was Struck by Train—Five Other Persons Killed in Collision Between Automobile and Bus.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Eighteen persons were killed in three automobile accidents in as many localities in the United States yesterday.

Nine members of a family of ten lost their lives when an express train struck their automobile at a grade crossing near Middletown, N.Y. The driver of the car was Antonio Blachi, of Middletown, N.Y., the father who, with his wife and seven children, were killed, and a twelve year old son was sent to a hospital in a critical condition.

Five persons were killed in a collision between an automobile and a bus near Elkhart, Indiana. The dead, all occupants of the automobile, were Mrs. Hazel Mabie, her three children, and Daniel Papa, twenty. Ten passengers on the bus were injured, none seriously.

Edgar Snodgrass, forty-nine and his three sons were killed instantly when their automobile was demolished by an express train at Marysville, Ind. They were returning from church.

Federal Reserve Board Policy

whole civilized world. The conflict between the Federal Reserve Board and the Wall Street bankers and the American people alone, especially when we bear in mind the exchange of American gold for European paper which is still absorbing our call loans, and to furnish interest and dividends upon the European paper we received in return for our gold. And we are still engaged in the hazardous pursuit of acquiring more of that paper.

"Only recently an international authority pointed out in the course of an illuminating article on 'The Dollar Abroad' prepared for him by the Foreign Policy Association, that we are lending abroad at the rate of $2,000,000,000 a year and our foreign investments are increasing at the annual rate of $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000. What does this portend?"

"We are finding at the same time that European investors are purchasing our best stocks, our gilt-edged securities, whenever there is a slump in them of from ten to twenty points. There was shipped to Europe during the last recession of the market a total of $500,000,000 of securities. Their value was attested by the fact that they were not yet aboard ship when they jumped ten to thirty points.

"Under the dubious policy of the Federal Reserve Board, are we not getting the worse of our financial trafficking with Europe's shrewd and subtle financiers? Why is it, then our trade and industry are in need of cheaper money, we remain so interested in the restoration of Europe's disordered finances?"

"The action of the Federal Reserve Board is lowering the discount rate in 1927 at the behest of European bankers, an action which resulted in the sending of $500,000,000 of our gold to Europe, is though in well-informed financial circles to supply the answer."

Mr. Redfield, denying the existence of a financial situation approaching in seriousness that described by Mr. McFadden, said that in war debt and reparations talk "force bigger than any Congress or any Parliament or Cabinet or any American policy" were being lost sight of. Taking British-American business relations as an example, he went on:

"Great Britain is the biggest customer any nation ever had and one without which American industry would shrivel up. Every weekday in the whole year the British Empire buys from us $4,600,000,000 she sells us $7,200,000,000. Under those circumstances, is it considerate, safe or kind to make the sort of remarks that are habitually made by the more ignorant members of both Houses of Congress?"

"By comparison with these trade figures the question of whether England pays us what she owes us is a joke—it is mere carfare, just a question of five or seven cent fare."

Gerrard B. Winston, of New York City, former Under-Secretary of the Treasury, contended that the nation's capacity to pay "did not depend so much on its economic ability, as upon its incentive to pay. He said it was evident that politics enter into even the most select body of experts and that the question often-times resolved itself down to the amount to be paid "by some horse trade."

Five years of operation of the Dawes plan, which he called a "plan of genius," despite certain shortcomings, had shown that the "transfer problem" had not proved important.

Charles P. Howland, of the Council of Foreign Relations in New York, contended that England was no longer united on the views of the Admiralty and "war lords" on the rights of belligerents, and it was at last feasible to "unite the interests of the two nations under the Paris pact of 1928—to propose to the British that when their navy

MARRIAGES

Mr. F. A. Baldwin, Dominion Avenue, has returned from Pittsburgh, Penn., where he attended the funeral of his brother-in-law, Mr. Julian Burdick, whose death occurred suddenly a few days ago.

The Cambridge School Hall was transformed into a very picturesque cabaret scene on Saturday evening on the occasion of one of the most outstanding social events of the present season, when the Omega-Alpha Club were hosts to their many friends and supporters. The main hall was prettily decorated with red and white streamers under which tables, decorated with silver vases and red roses, had been placed. Bridge lamps of many colors and designs, placed amongst the tables, gave a gorgeous lighting effect. A ten piece orchestra, under the direction of Mr. S. Pearson, was on the stage in front of a background of black and silver, with effective lighting arrangement, while the crest and motto of the club were electrically displaced over the stage. The hostesses of the evening were Mrs. C. G. Bishop, Mrs. J. P. Watson and Mrs. P. A. Hammond. The features of the entertainment consisted of the Hungarian Rhapsody, danced by the Misses Moira and Margaret Bradley; a violin solo, "Weary River," played by Miss Frederica Bradley; vocal solo, "My Mother's Eyes," by Mr. W. Seaward; and the Hesitation Waltz, gracefully danced by Miss Moira Bradley and Mr. C. Hammond. These artists proved themselves real entertainers and graciously responded to insistent requests for encores. The members of the Hi-Y Club in the roll of waiters carried out their duties to perfection in looking after the wants of the guests. Mr. John Webster Cook as master of ceremonies could not be surpassed in his ability of announcing the entertainers and arranging the guests at their tables. The committee in charge of arrangements consisted of Messrs. D. Bishop, G. S. Sampson, G. Duff, C. Hammond, R. Gough, W. Cook and C. McCullough, to whom much credit goes for the success of the evening's entertainment. The club is arranging, at the request of their friends, to hold a similar cabaret on May 18th. The refreshments were arranged for by the Misses A. Gough and L. Hicks.

Each home must, of course, have its own individuality, conforming to the personal taste of the home-makers, improving year by year. Nothing can equal the pleasure of striving towards an ideal of beauty in home surroundings and community surroundings, and nothing can produce more satisfactory results.

There are certain basic things to learn concerning lawns, shrubs, trees and borders, which have been extensively studied and experimented on for many years. Mr. Roy lucidly explained how a house and grounds can be improved by vines, a free lawn, proper placing of shrubbery and trees and attractive boundaries. He discussed varieties of perennials and other flowers best suited to borders and the arrangement to produce a continuity of bloom.

Stereoscopic views were shown illustrative of Mr. Roy's statements and suggestions, and they proved very interesting indeed. Various trees were shown, then a succession of beautiful shrubs, borders, pergolas and a diversity of homes. Mr. Roy pointed out the pleasing appearance of homes correctly framed with trees, with shrubs properly arranged, as well as the beauty of free lawns and pleasing borders.

In closing, Mr. Roy reminded the audience of the good work being done by the Government of Canada in helping the people to beautify their highways, homes and towns, and urged them to consult with their agronomists, who are always glad to help with plans or suggestions.

Rev. A. W. Buckland voiced the thanks of the Social Club and their guests for this splendid and practical lecture.

The next lecture of the series will be given next Tuesday night, April 30th, by Mr. E. S. Heatherton, local manager of the Southwestern Canada Power Co. His subject will be "Ways and Means of Improving Our Town."

LECTURE GIVEN AT COOKSHIRE; GENERAL NOTES

Agronomist Delivers Interesting Talk on Home Embellishment—News Notes and Personalities from Cookshire and Vicinity.

COOKSHIRE, Que., April 29.—A lecture of more than ordinary interest was delivered by Mr. Louis C. Roy, B.Sc., in the parish hall of St. Peter's Church on Tuesday evening last, on the subject of "Home Embellishments."

Mr. Roy is a keen psychologist, which adds much to his profession of agronomist. In introducing his subject, he emphasized the fact that, before anything is done to surroundings in the way of adornment, the state of mind must be right. One must first of all embellish the mind, as it were, by clearing it of all thoughts that are undesirable.

When only good and beautiful thoughts grow in the mind, there is no room for the noxious weeds like untidiness, criticism of others, repetition of injurious scandal, etc. Mr. Roy then went on to say that, after setting the mind in order, one must have the "will to do," in order to make one's home and surroundings attractive and also to improve the public places of one's own town. In this connection, the lecturer praised the work done by the beautifying the local park, enlarging the public-serviced men of the County of Compton, who so willingly assist the people of Cookshire; and he said that the residents of Cookshire might justly be proud of this Memorial Park, as well as of the general appearance of their town.

Each home must, of course, have its own individuality, conforming to the personal taste of the home-makers, improving year by year. Nothing can equal the pleasure of striving towards an ideal of beauty in home surroundings and community surroundings, and nothing can produce more satisfactory results.

There are certain basic things to learn concerning lawns, shrubs, trees and borders, which have been extensively studied and experimented on for many years. Mr. Roy lucidly explained how a house and grounds can be improved by vines, a free lawn, proper placing of shrubbery and trees and attractive

Mr. Roy pointed out the pleasing appearance of homes correctly framed with trees, with shrubs properly arranged, as well as the beauty of free lawns and pleasing borders.

In closing, Mr. Roy reminded the audience of the good work being done by the Government of Canada in helping the people to beautify their highways, homes and towns, and urged them to consult with their agronomists, who are always glad to help with plans or suggestions.

Rev. A. W. Buckland voiced the thanks of the Social Club and their guests for this splendid and practical lecture.

The next lecture of the series will be given next Tuesday night, April 30th, by Mr. E. S. Heatherton, local manager of the Southwestern Canada Power Co. His subject will be "Ways and Means of Improving Our Town."

CHIEF PRINCIPLE IS LIMITATION

newspapers have smiled with approval at American recognition of their claim of non-interference of trained reserves as army effectiveness. Some of the press, however, has been hard put to conceal its surprise.

Matin, independent, said today, "the atmosphere is clearing up at Geneva, with the United States collaborating more and more actively in the technical construction of peace."

Temp, independent and semi-official, said: "Ambassador Gibson's two declarations of new United States policy makes it possible for a naval conference to be called in 1930."

Excelsior, independent moderate, declared: "Thanks to the new attitude of the United States declaration in the League's disarmament committee at Geneva, its present meeting is proving of capital importance. One may now expect that before long, a disarmament conference may be convoked with improved chances of success."

CHINA MAKES MOVE TO ABOLISH CONSCRIPTION

(Associated Press Despatch)
GENEVA, April 29.—Divergent national interests—so often the basis for international antagonisms—should work themselves to the forefront of deliberations of the Preparatory Disarmament Conference in the next few days and mark still further lines of cleavage drawn in last week's fight on trained reserves.

The Chinese proposal for abolition of conscription and the Russo-German projects for reductions in war materials and stocks must both be discussed and acted upon before the subject of naval disarmament is reached.

Claims Conscription Leads to Militarism

China contends that conscription leads to militarism. It is a view shared by most of the national delegations here, but one so certainly to be opposed by most of continental Europe, France and Italy particularly, and Japan, that the proposal seemed today to be fore-ordained to rejection.

Reduction of War Materials
An alignment of Republican Germany and Soviet Russia for reduction of war material and war stocks which they claim make it possible for armies to strike quick decisive blows—has already appeared, with formidable opposition certain from France and Italy.

A spokesman for France told newspaper men that German industries were already turning out great quantities of steel tubes which could be used for cannon in the event of war. The statement was made in advancement of the French contention that private enterprise can always lay up immense stocks of war material under the guise it is intended for the promotion of peaceful industry.

LOW TOURIST FARES

That long felt urge to get away, to view new scenes, to breathe new air, is at its peak now that winter has blown itself out of the picture. With the freedom of lighter clothes, comes the desire to ramble and the low summer tourist fares in effect from May 15th afford an attractive opening.

"REVISION" FLAG CREATED BY PEOPLE OF HUNGARY

Is Symbol of Unalterable Determination of Country to Secure Modification of Treaty of Trianon—Rothmere Honored.

(Associated Press Despatch)
BUDAPEST, April 29.—Hungary has created a "national revision flag" as a symbol of the unalterable determination of the country to secure modification of the treaty of Trianon which cut off sixty-eight per cent of its territory and fifty-nine per cent of its population. The new flag retains the green, white and red of the National flag, but is emblazoned with three letters "R." The first of these refers to Lord Rothmere, British publisher, who has championed the Hungarian cause. The second is dedicated to the eminent Hungarian journalist, Rakoski. The third stands for revision.

This flag will be unfurled on all festive and patriotic occasions alongside the national flag.

CREW OF SWEDISH SHIP ARE ILL WITH MALARIA

Boston Port Doctors Order Six of Men Removed to Marine Hospital at Chelsea on Arrival of Steamer Baltic from West African Ports.

(Associated Press Despatch)
BOSTON, April 29.—The Swedish steamer Baltic arrived here Saturday night from West African ports with ten members of her crew sick with a disease which was diagnosed by port doctors as malignant malaria. Six of the ten, including the third officer and the cook, were removed to the marine hospital at Chelsea. The cook was in a serious condition.

Another member of the crew who contracted the disease while the ship was at Lagon, Africa, was left in a hospital there. Doctors did not regard the condition as serious and permitted the vessel to seek after quarantine inspection.

FIVE KILLED IN MOTOR CAR ACCIDENTS DURING WEEK-END IN ONTARIO

TORONTO, Ont., April 29.—Five persons, including three visitors from United States, were killed, and seven were seriously injured in motor car accidents on western Ontario highways during the week-end. A driver of one of the cars, who they claim make it possible for armies to strike quick decisive blows—has already appeared, with formidable opposition certain from France and Italy.

A spokesman for France told newspaper men that German industries were already turning out great quantities of steel tubes which could be used for cannon in the event of war. The statement was made in advancement of the French contention that private enterprise can always lay up immense stocks of war material under the guise it is intended for the promotion of peaceful industry.

ENTERTAINMENT GREAT SUCCESS; DUNHAM NOTES

Successful Social Evening Given by Masonic Lodge—Interesting Lecture Given on Missionary Work in Northern Canada—Newsy Items of General Interest from Dunham and Vicinity.

DUNHAM, QUE., April 29.—A very pleasant social event took place on Friday, April 19th, in the Masonic Hall when Prevost Lodge, A.F. & A.M. were "at home" to their friends. Progressive "500" was played at seventeen tables for a couple of hours. Mrs. Ten Eyck carried off the ladies' prize, Mr. A. E. Brown, gentleman's first, while Miss Maud Selby and Rev. H. Coffin came second.

Refreshments were served, cafeteria style, while Mr. C. Ellis, Mrs. Liscar Ingalls, Mrs. J. F. Caron and Mrs. Carl Brock poured coffee.

Following refreshments and a most enjoyable social hour, dancing was indulged in for a time, with music from a Victrola. There were about one hundred guests present.

Missionary Lecture Given.
On Monday evening, Archdeacon Flemming, of Toronto, gave a most interesting lecture on "Missionary Work Among the Esquimaux."

Rural Dean Coffin presided and introduced the speaker. Archdeacon Flemming, who spent twenty years in Baffin Land and through ill health was forced to return to his home in Toronto, to spend the winter, meanwhile delivering lectures in England and the United States and throughout Canada, bringing the needs of his north people where ever he goes. The lecture was to have been illustrated with views, but through a misunderstanding lantern was not sent, and as none was available, there were no pictures.

On his trip last summer, the chief of one tribe was anxious to have his two sons taught the white man's way and asked the Archdeacon to take his two sons home with him and teach them all the things they should know. This has been done and the lads are at school at Lakeview, Ont., and are proving to be very apt pupils.

Archdeacon Flemming told of the splendid hospital with modern equipment and most capable lady superintendent. The hospital is proving a great asset to the people as well as to the missionaries and a strong appeal is being made for more funds. It is necessary to raise $20,000, part of which is already subscribed. The meeting closed with the benediction.

General Notes.
Unity Rebekah Lodge held their regular meeting in Odd Fellows Hall on Tuesday evening with Sister Madys Buchanan, N.G., presiding.

At the conclusion of the business session a social hour was enjoyed. Sisters E. Buchanan and R. Ingalls served refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Selby motored to Montreal on Tuesday for the day. Miss Margaret Lawson, of Montreal, was a week-end guest of her sister, Miss Alfreda Lawson, at St. Helen's School.

Mrs. Ten Eyck has returned from New Britain, Conn., where she has been staying for several weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Bishop and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Doherty were visitors at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. M. Kuller, Cowansville, a few days last week.

Mr. George Taylor, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, spent last week-end with his family and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, of Waterloo.

COUNTRY AND DAIRY PRODUCE PRICES

BUTTER & CHEESE—Butter and cheese dropped 2c per lb. last week, and are expected to go lower again this week. The week ended with Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized, fresh made, selling as low as 37c per lb., and New Zealand finest as low as 38 1/2c and 38 3/4c per lb., wholesale. To the retail trade prices were 41c in solids and 42c in prints. The market for western No. 1 colored cheese, which represents the bulk of current receipts, was quoted Saturday morning as 17 1/2c per lb.

EGGS—Egg prices continued to rule steady last week. Prices to the retail trade were 23-34c for fresh extras, 31-32c for fresh firsts, and 29-30c for fresh seconds. In a wholesale car lot way brokers were asking for Ontario fresh eggs 34c extras, 32c firsts, and 30c while for western fresh eggs they were asking 29 1/2c for extras, 27 1/2c for firsts, and 24 1/2c for seconds, f.o.b. Man. points.

POTATOES—Potatoes advanced 10c last week following interruption to shipments by bad road conditions and a stiffening in the American market. New Brunswick Green Mountains rose to 60c per 90 lbs. in bulk, and Prince Edward Island potatoes became 70c for whites and 80c for Green Mountains per 90 lbs. in bags, in car lots, track, Montreal.

POULTRY—Live poultry was a feature earlier in the week, being bought by the Jewish trade for the Passover holiday. Prices dropped 2c per lb. becoming 28c to 33c per lb. Prices likely will remain on that basis at the beginning of this week, when live poultry again will be a feature. There will probably be more reductions later in the week.

Export shipments of dressed poultry will start this week. Many orders have been booked, the export inquiry being reported very good.

Frozen, dressed poultry was being sold locally last week at steady prices, jobbers selling to the retail trade as follows:

Squab broilers, 50c to 52c per lb.; selected broilers, 44c to 48c per lb.; selected chickens, 39c to 44c per lb.; selected fowl, 30c to 37c per lb.; selected turkeys, 39c to 40c per lb.; selected geese, 23c per lb.; selected ducks, 30c per lb.; domestic ducklings, 33c per lb.; green ducklings, 36c per lb. These prices are for standard poultry. For A's prices on all lines are 3c to 4c per lb. less.

BEANS—Beans and peas were unchanged. Canadian hand-picked beans were $5.65 per bushel, choice prime beans $5.50 per bushel and yellow eye beans $4.20 per bushel; while choice boiling peas are $3.50 per bushel, and imported peas $3.90 per bushel.

NEW YORK PRESS MARKET COMMENT

Furnished by McManamy & Walsh.

Journal of Commerce—On the surface financial conditions have changed very little during the past week. The major alteration which has taken place has been seen in the gradual recovery of confidence and the increasing certainty that is felt in many quarters concerning the improbability of a change in credit conditions for the immediate present.

Clark, Childs and Co.—The irregularity of the upward movement is a factor of strength. We believe that long commitment in carefully selected issues will show further profits.

F. B. Keech and Co.—With tightened money rates at home and abroad, and the necessary preparations for May 1st disbursements, we look for lower prices and disturbed conditions in the financial markets during the coming week.

Wall Street Journal will say today: Offer of one Studebaker for two and a half shares of Pierce Arrow is being discussed.

Progress made in conserving oil. W. H. Farish, president Humble Oil, says real control certain to be effected.

General Motors pays $20,000,000 of bank loans.

Blames Senate for wheat drop. Allis Chalmers peak year seen. United Gas Investment sells its General Gas stock.

MAKING USE OF THE PHONE
George (from next door)—Mrs. Jones, may I use your telephone?
Mrs. Jones—Certainly, George. Is yours out of order?
George—Well, not exactly, but Sis is using it to hold up the window, ma's cutting biscuits with the mousethief and baby's teething on the cord.

DUNCAN'S LEAD FEATURED OLD COUNTRY PLAY

British Captain Defeated Walter
Hagen Ten Up and Eight to Play—Smith and Diegel Only
American Winners in Singles.

MOORTOWN, England, April 29.—Great Britain's best professional golfers Saturday decisively defeated the American Ryder Cup team, sweeping through the singles with a rush that could hardly be checked and never was halted. Five victories in the singles ran up a British total for two days' play of six matches won, against four triumphs for the visitors with two matches halved—one in the foursome and one in the singles.

The near rout of the men from overseas came as a pleasant surprise to the home folk for few of the golf fans of the islands thought the Golden Trophy, symbol of international professional golfing supremacy, could be regained, although that four Scot, George Duncan, captain of the British team, had worked his men up to a fever heat of enthusiasm and prevailed them to practice long and faithfully for the tests.

The winners came from behind to register their great triumph. After the foursmes Friday, the count stood two matches for the visitors, one for the home team and one halved. To win the cup, which was held by the Americans as a result of a clean-up in the United States in June, 1927, Duncan's men had to win five of the singles Saturday. They did just that while the Americans were winning two and getting an even break in the other.

The results of the games played Saturday and the summary of the series were:

Henry Cotton, England, defeated Al Watrous, United States, 4 and 3.

Al Espinosa, United States, halved with Ernest Whitcombe, England.

George Duncan, England, defeated Walter Hagen, United States, 10 and 8.

Leo Diegel, United States, defeated Abe Mitchell, England, 9 and 8.

Charles Whitcombe, England, defeated Johnny Farrell, United States, 8 and 6.

Horton Smith, United States, defeated Fred Robson, England, 4 and 2.

Audrey Boomer, England, defeated Joe Turness, United States, 4 and 3.

Archie Compston, England, defeated Gene Sarazen, United States, 6 and 4.

Score in foursomes, played Friday: United States, 2½ England, 1½.

Score in singles, played Saturday: England, 5½; United States, 2½.

Final score: England, 7; United States, 5.

GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

DETERMINING THE SELECTION OF CLUBS

In case of doubt whether to use a midiron or mashie, what factors should determine the choice?

Answered By
AL ESPINOSA
Florida West Coast Champion.
Tied for LaJolla Open; Mid-American Open; P. G. A. Qualifying Medal, 1928.

The selection of the midiron or the mashie depends on four conditions.

First is the distance to the green. The midiron gives more distance than the mashie. Second, the condition of the lie is important, while the third and fourth factors are the elements and the construction of the hole.

The golfer must take these things into consideration when choosing between these two clubs, remembering that the mashie has more loft than the midiron, but usually does not give as much distance.

ENGLISHMEN CONFIDENT IN REGARD TO BRITISH OPEN TOURNAMENT

LONDON, April 29.—English golfers expect every man to do his duty in the British open at Muirfield, starting next Monday.

The British victory over Walter Hagen's Americans in the Ryder Cup series, concluded on Saturday, has filled Englishmen with confidence that some native-born golfer will win the open this year. Not even the presence of an American contingent of twenty-two can do more than slightly diminish that confidence.

The Ryder Cup victory has

SOCCER LEAGUE OPENED SEASON ON SATURDAY

Windsor Mills and Quebec Central Scored Victories—Games at Sherbrooke and Magog Cancelled.

The official opening of the Eastern Townships Football League was considerably interfered with owing to the poor state of the roads prevailing in parts of the district over the week-end. The only games played were at Drummondville, between Windsor Mills and Celanese, and at Asbestos, between Quebec Central and Asbestos. The game between Beebe and Sherbrooke Regiment, at Sherbrooke, and Y. M. C. A., and Magog at Magog were both cancelled owing to road conditions.

In the two games played, the visiting teams scored easy victories over the home clubs, shut-outs being registered in both cases. The paper team proved for once that paper is better than silk, by their two to nothing win from the Celanese at Drummondville, while the Quebec Central team railroaded themselves through the Asbestos outfit by the even larger score of four to nothing.

Reports state that the games on Saturday were well attended, and all signs point to a very successful season this summer, while enlarging the League to eight clubs by the admission of Asbestos is expected to provide a better balanced schedule from the point of view of the clubs, fewer byes being necessary.

1932 OLYMPIC SWIMMING TRIALS TO BE HELD AT VANCOUVER

(Canadian Press Despatch)
MONTREAL, Que., April 29.—Issuing of the schedule of championship for the coming year, reinstatement of Ottawa amateurs who had lost their cards for reasons other than professionalism and a decision that the 1932 Olympic trials would be held in Vancouver, were the principal results of the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, held here Saturday.

The report of the secretary-treasurer showed a balance of $500.

brought forth a volume of editorial comment.

Paying tribute to Hagen for his candid admission of a bad defeat, the Telegraph said: "Let us admit with equal candor that it was a victory which British golf needed."

Recalling the new auto speed record set by Major Seagrave and Britain's cricket victories over Australia, the Telegraph sees in them evidence that "enterprise, vigor and resolution yet abound in English sport."

A total of 242 have entered the open, some fifty of them amateurs. The field is to be divided into two sections for the qualifying rounds.

TURNER AGAIN CARRIED OFF TATE SHIELD

Annual Event Held on Saturday
N. Welsh Was Second, Three Points Behind Winner—Two Records Broken and One Equalled.

On Saturday afternoon the annual Tate Shield Competition was run off at the Y. M. C. A., when Malcolm Turner, who won fairly easily last year with nineteen points and his nearest competitor, two of them tied for second place, Welsh and Croft, with nine points each, this year had to be satisfied with a lead of only three points, getting sixteen points, Welsh coming second with thirteen. While Welsh was the best all around of the group taking part, gaining points in each event.

The list of winners follows:
Running high jump—1 M. Turner, 5 ft. 4½ inches; 2 D. Cross, 5 ft. 3 L. Tomkins, 4 N. Welsh.

Potato race—1 Jack Robertson, 33 seconds; 2 N. Welsh; 3 Lyman Tomkins.

Shot put—1 M. Turner, 39 ft., 7 inches; 2 N. Welsh; 3 D. Cross; 4 S. McHarg.

Running broad jump—1 M. Turner, 15 ft., 5 inches; 2 J. Robertson; 3 N. Welsh; 4 D. Cross.

440 yards run—1 M. Turner, 1 min. 5 sec.; 2 L. Tomkins; 3 J. Robertson, 4 N. Welsh.

Swimming—1 D. Cross, 28 2-5 seconds; 2 N. Welsh; 3 J. Robertson and S. McHarg, tied.

The following is the standing of the competitors:
1 Malcolm Turner with 4 firsts, 16 points.

2 Norman Welsh, 3 seconds, 1 third, and 2 fourths, 13 points.

3 Jack Robertson, 1 first, 1 second, 1 third, and tied in swimming, 10½ points.

4 Douglas Cross, 1 first, 1 second, 1 third, and fourth, 10 points.

5 Lyman Tomkins, one second and 2 thirds, 7 points.

6 Sydney McHarg, 1 fourth and tied for 1 fourth, 2½ points.

On Saturday Turner broke the record for the high jump set by B. Montgomery in 1926. The potato race record made by Turner in 1927 stands at 33 seconds for broad jump stands with 16 feet and 9 inches; and Guild's shot put for 1928 stands at forty-three feet; but Cross took 2 2-5 seconds off his record for 1928 in swimming.

GRANBY AERO CLUB OBTAINS LIGHT PLANE

Captain Chris Evans Covered
Distance of 375 Miles Between
Granby and Toronto in 3
Hours and 15 Minutes—Air
Meet Organized for July 1—
Race to Montreal and Return Arranged.

GRANBY, April 29.—A flight from Toronto to Granby, a distance of 375 miles, in the record time of three hours and fifteen minutes, was accomplished on Friday last in a Cessna 300 and monoplane piloted by Captain Chris Evans, chief instructor of the Granby Aero Club. The machine, which is one of those granted to the club under agreement with the Government, will be used for the instruction of members, and the keen interest taken in aviation in the Eastern Townships is evidenced by the large number on hand to greet Captain Evans on his arrival here after his record breaking flight. A banquet was held after the arrival of Captain Evans.

Air Meet Organized.
Captain P. H. Bovin, secretary of the Granby Aero Club, announced yesterday that this institution has organized an air meet for the week-end of June 29th, which will be spread over three days, an air race between Granby and Montreal having been arranged for the closing day, July 1st, which is a Dominion holiday. The race will be held over the Granby-Montreal route, with return to the point of departure, for a cup to be presented by the Southern Canada Power Company. Money prizes will also be donated by prominent citizens of Granby who are interested in the development of aviation. It is expected that every light aeroplane in Canada will be represented at the meet, each having signified its intention of sending a plane to Granby for the occasion if this is possible.

A number of aircraft companies in the United States have expressed willingness to exhibit new types at this air meet, while several aero clubs will likewise be represented by one or more of their members. As the meet opens on June 29th, it is expected that the first day will be largely devoted to the reception of visitors, and preliminary plans for the successive days so the occasion should be one of considerable interest in aviation circles, and Granby the Mecca of fliers from a large section of the country.

Large Membership.
The Granby Aero Club commenced operations on June 9th last, and built up a membership of 120 in its first six months' existence. Since then another fifty-five members have been added to the list, and enthusiasm is running high in the city and surrounding township, of which it is the aviation centre. An order has been placed for a Curtiss-Reid Rambler, and it is hoped that delivery of this will be made in the near future in order that additional instruction may be imparted to the large number of pupils anxious to take their pilot's licenses.

LORD BALFOUR WILL SELL HIS FAMOUS HOME

Decision to Sell Regarded as Token that Famous Statesman Will Retire from Public Life—Is at Present Living With His Brother.

(Canadian Press Despatch)
LONDON, April 29.—Lord Balfour's decision to sell his town house, No. 4 Carlton Gardens, is regarded as a token that he will retire from the Government at the general election. He now holds the office of Lord President of the Council. The famous statesman, who will be 81 in July, has been seen very little in the House of Parliament, or indeed in London, since last summer. He spends most of his time just now with his brother, Gerald Balfour, at the latter's home in Surrey. Many years ago Gerald Balfour was a minister of some prominence in the cabinet of his uncle, the late Marquis of Salisbury. It is long now, though, since he took any part in politics or public life of any kind.

The Earl of Balfour's town house in Carlton Gardens has been in his occupancy for nearly sixty years. Situated near the Mall, it occupies part of the site of Carlton House, which was built in 1709 and which fronted St. Alban street and St. James Park. When, in 1783, the then Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV) was allowed a separate establishment, Carlton House was assigned as his residence, and he lived there as Prince of Wales, Regent, and King. He was proclaimed King from the steps. Carlton House was pulled down in 1826.

The present place has had political associations extending well over eighty years. It has a Crown lease, and consequently there is no danger of "business invasion" spreading to the property or to that immediately surrounding it. The house contains fourteen bedrooms, five reception rooms, a ballroom, and a library.

There are only six residents in Carlton Gardens, the others being the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Frederic, Lord Beaufort, Sir Richard Cooper, and A. C. Bosson. It is expected that Lord Balfour will live in future mainly at Wittingham, his seat in East Lothian.

... It takes the messages of our King and his Prime Ministers throughout our British Commonwealth. It carries the voice and minds of the leaders of the people to the peoples of all the world; and in its columns the world's reactions come back from the people to their representatives.

... In success, in strife, in struggle, in grief, we are all of us linked in the democracy of News and comment upon the News.

... The Daily Newspaper is alone in its continuous power to place advertising, impartially and forcibly, before all our people regardless of race, language or condition.
