

W. H. G.

no 14

59

THE YOUNG CAVALIER, Sung with distinguished Applause by MISS HUGHES,

Composed by

CHARLES E. HORN.

A New and Revised Edition.

NEW YORK, Published by HEWITT, 137 Broadway.

ALLEGRO
SPIRITOSO.

for.

Pia. for. Pia. for.

O I never will marry a heartless lad, So dull and so formal, so solemn and sad; He

p

talks about love while he thinks of your self, And he cares for no one but him - self, for no be - ing in life but himself. His

f

ad lib.

heart is like ice, and his passion so cold, One would think little Cupid a hundred years old; But ad lib. tempo.

I have long cherish'd the pretty boy here, I have long cherish'd the pretty boy here And I must be the Bride of a young Cava-lier; And I must be the Bride of a young Cavalier; of a young Ca-va-lier.

p

loco

O a young Cavalier is so gallant and gay, He looks like the sun in a bright summer's day, With a smile on his lip, and a bonny blue eye, That goes home to the heart be one ever so shy, to the heart be one e-ver so shy

ad lib.
They may say lit-tle Cupid is blind if they please, But I know very well that the pretty boy sees; for he shot but one arrow and hit me just here, he shot but one arrow and hit me just here, So I must be the Bride of a young Ca-va-lier; and I must be the Bride of a young Cavalier; of a young Ca-va-lier.

62