Art competition and exhibition focuses on farming

The Soil Conservation Council of Canada, in partnership with the Canada Millennium partnership program, is calling for entries for the SCC Millennium Art Competition and Exhibition. Under the theme - Bringing agriculture and visual arts together in the millennium, Canadian visual artists are invited to participate in this national juried painting contest.

This competition and exhibition is designed to celebrate the achievements and innovation of the Canadian farmer, and cast an eye to emerging conservation practices and protection of our environment. The message of the artwork is to reflect the achievement of sustainable practices of the agriculture sector as farmers conserve Canada's soils and related resources.

A total of 20 provincial cash awards of $1,000 each will be awarded, plus one national "purchase" award of $5,000. These prize winning works will become part of a National Exhibition and Tour across Canada, beginning in March 2000.

The deadline for entries is Dec. 1, 1999. The provincial jurying will be done from slides, with provincial awards announced in January 2000. The National Award Ceremonies and the launch of the exhibition and tour will be held in March 2000.

Dunham girl christens Granby giraffe, Malaika

By Joy Yokoyama

The newest member of The Granby Zoo's giraffe family, born June 12, finally has a name.

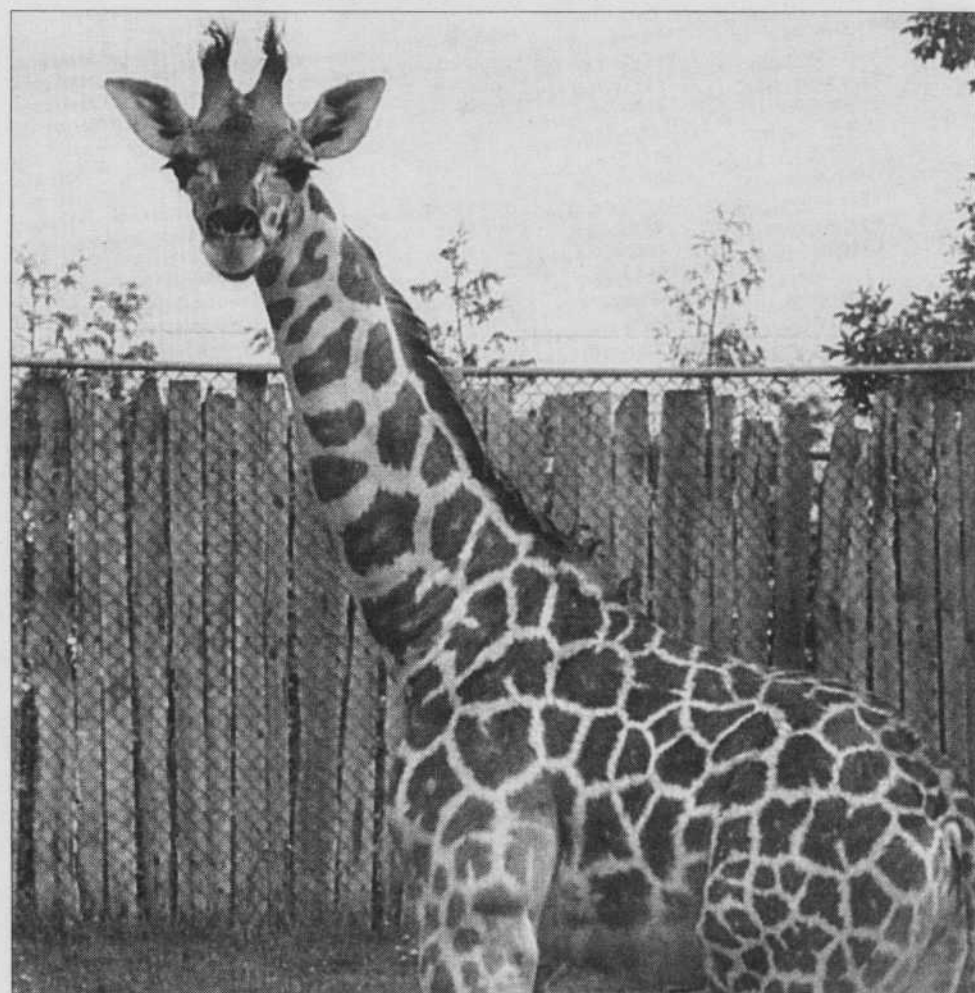

The baby giraffe is now called Malaika, which means "came from the sky" in an African language. Emilie Racine, an 11-year-old from Dunham, came up with the idea.

Racine's was one of 473 names for the young giraffe coming from about 400 people. Ten names were selected and Zoo employees voted on them.

"Malaika" received 178 votes.

The second-place choice was Zara, the Arabian word for giraffe, which received 80 votes. The rest of the top ten entries included Savanna, Kalahari (deserts), Éfelle (a unique spelling of the tower), Nyindi (Swahili for liveliness), Amazone (for the opening of Amazoo, the water park), Vénéra (for the space probe launched the day of the giraffe's birth), Iasam (using the letters in Masai, the giraffe's mother) and Giroflée, which was suggested 18 times, making it the most popular entry.

Racine will get a chance to go see the giraffe she named before Malaika is expected to leave the zoo in the fall because Racine has won four free passes to the zoo.

tion. It was a real notch in my belt. It was fantastic," said Leno.

Leno's prize-winning game is a three-dimensional version of chess.

"I designed the series for kids and I'm hoping to catch the eye of a board game developer," said Leno.

That the game was chosen by the youth voters is very important to Leno.

"It shows the kids have an eye for it. We tested it with a group of kids in town. They're really addicted to it," said Leno.

First place in the general popular vote category went to Josée

Perreault of St-Adrien, Que., for her large watercolour on canvas of two horses, which she titled "Les Amoureux."

Second place for the same category went to Gordon Ladd and third place went to Virginia Cope and Juliana Lynch-Staunton.

Second place in the youth vote went to Thérèse Savard who designed a colourful birdbath that looked like a swimming pool for birds. Third place went to Raymond Boudreault who used a chainsaw to make a sculpture of a bear eating fish.

Second place in the general voting went to Donald McKinley and third place went to Caroline George.

Sixty artists were chosen to participate in the contest. The art will continue to be on display at the gallery until Sept. 5.

Monique Trottier was jury's favorite

By Joy Yokoyama

About 110 people attended the first annual Eastern Townships Art Competition's awards ceremony at Fredrick Amsden Gallery in Stanstead, Friday.

"It's been an extremely popular event among visitors. We've been swamped with requests for next year," said Matthew Farfan, co-director. "It's an instant tradition."

Farfan, along with partner Josiane Caillet, has already begun working on next year's showcase.

Monique Trottier of Magog, won first prize in the jury category. The panel of five judges recognized the originality she put into a series of prehistoric paintings on a strip of paper, almost six feet long, that folded, like an accordion, into a box. Farfan compares it to old-fashioned post cards that would be sold together.

"Since we're located on the border and people come from the States, we wanted to open it up to people from both sides of the border," said Farfan.

Not only were there entrants from the United States, but first prize in the popular vote in the youth category went to Paul Leno, of Orleans, Vermont.

"It meant a lot to me because it meant getting outside my area and getting to gain some atten-

Paul Brandt to appear at Brome Fair Sept. 4

You could win a pair of tickets

Canadian country singer Paul Brandt who recently released a new album will be performing at the Brome County Agricultural Fair, Saturday Sept. 4 as part of the tour to support the new CD.

Since his arrival on the country music scene in 1996, Brandt has displayed a special ability to take common subjects and turn them into musical paintings of extreme emotional depth.

His vocal skills contribute to his versatility allowing him to switch musical gears without effort as illustrated so well in his third release, That's The Truth. The new album takes a slightly different direction than his 1997 Outside the Frame.

There's the uplifting debut single "That's The Truth," the title track of this 10-song collection which showcases Brandt's unique talent.

On the beautiful tale of "The Sycamore Tree," he will bring a tear to your eye with his emotion filled rendition. On "Scrap Piece of Paper," he chronicles with tongue firmly planted in cheek, a day in the life of that piece of paper.

"Don't tell me the sky's the limit. There's footprints on the moon." These two lines contained in "There's a World Out There," just might sum up Brandt's go-getter philosophy in both his private and professional life.

There's also the upbeat "Let's Live It Up," a version of the Brian Setzer swing tune which is highlight and features Brandt on top of the game. Deana Carter joins him for a duet on the beautiful "Really and Truly," and the results are great.

This is an excellent album, it should surpass the popularity of what he has done so far and get him some honors from the country music industry as well as the fans.

The "I Do" singer doesn't take any of his success for granted. He's worked hard and has gone through a lot of changes in the past four years including a major career move from pediatric nurse to full time country singer.

Than he moved from Calgary, Alberta to Nashville, bought a house, penned many songs, recorded three albums, went on a promotional tour and finally got married. Brandt and his wife Elizabeth celebrated their second wedding anniversary on Feb. 22. To top it

Babin displays his slate creations

An exhibition by artist Philippe Babin will open Sunday, Aug. 8 from 1:30 to 4:30 at the Restaurant chez Monsieur Paul, 320 College Street in Richmond.

A resident of Melbourne for two years, Philippe Babin is becoming well acquainted with the stone, called slate. His inspiration came as he decided to follow the natural patterns in the slate, by engraving it with designs from the present, the past and the future. At 45 years of age, it has been quite a career change, from stage director.

Babin invites the public to examine his practical and decorative murals and other works, that express a unique style of expression. For those who would like to stay for a meal at the restaurant, dinner will be served beginning at 6 p.m. Please reserve. The creations of Philippe Babin will be exhibited throughout August.

Photographer records natural history of Canadian Arctic

By Caroline Kehne
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
PHILIPSBURG

Cynthia Chalk has experienced Canada's northern wilderness in a way few Canadians have.

Chalk, 85, recently returned from her 14th expedition to the Canadian arctic that she has grown to love. Over the last four decades, she has produced a photographic chronicle of the natural history of the Far North, documenting its plant and animal life during its brief summers.

By her own assessment, she was an unlikely candidate for such an undertaking. "I was just a housewife," said Chalk with her characteristic modesty. Her adventure in photography began as a Girl Guide Commissioner in Westmount over 60 years ago.

"There were very few visual aids available for teaching so I decided to take my own slides to use in the training courses," she said.

In the 1950s, she joined the Montreal Camera Club to improve her technical command of photography.

"The club met once a month. A judging panel reviewed three to four slides per person," she explained, noting that the judges were often tough critics. "You just take the criticism and try to put it into practice," she added.

Almost 50 years later, she is an honorary lifetime member of that club and credits it with giving her discipline and the confidence to start submitting slides to international exhibitions.

Chalk first took her photography skills north in 1981 when a friend at the Natural History Museum in Ottawa informed her the government might be considering curtailing tourism in certain parts of the fragile arctic. Encouraged to get in before the door closed, she took her first trip north. Since then, she has been a frequent visitor to Bathurst Inlet. Getting there is in itself an adventure, involving a flight to Yellowknife followed by a Twin Otter charter to the remote lodge run by the Warner family. The lodge, located at a former Hudson's Bay Company post, is open only three to five weeks of the year depending on accessibility. In the off-season, its owners retreat to the relative comfort of Yellowknife, leaving the settlement in the care of the inlet's only permanent residents, several Inuit families.

Bathurst Inlet is located in the low arctic (tundra under 2000 feet in elevation). In spite of the abundance of seawater, the land is technically arctic desert, receiving less than 10 inches of precipitation per year. Underlying the shallow soils is permafrost. In this bleak environment, only the heartiest and most adaptable species survive. Yet, for 90 days each year, the land is bathed in 24 hours of sunlight and for a short time, the arctic desert blooms.

"Bathurst Inlet is called an oasis," said Chalk, who has acquired an impressive knowledge of the area's natural history.

"The vegetation is more lush there than in other parts of the tundra. Everything you find in the high arctic will grow there, plus others. There are birds of all kinds, including peregrine falcons, golden eagles and rough-legged buteos."

CYNTHIA CHALK

Ice flow in the Canadian arctic

According to Chalk, arctic flora must be particularly tough to survive in this environment. Annuals rarely survive because one or two bad seasons can mean no seeds to generate the following year's population. The perennials that survive are often legumes, a group equipped with nitrogen-fixing nodules on their roots, a major advantage in the nitrogen-poor soils of the north. Arctic plants have developed shallow but widespread roots, an adaptation enabling them to slide on the surface of frequent landslides. Arctic flower blossoms often have the ability to freeze solid and thaw without dying. Some, plants, such as poppies, act like solar collectors, tracking the summer sun throughout the day.

Others, such as the moss campion, can maintain a temperature as much as ten degrees warmer than ambient air temperatures. One characteristic that all arctic plants share is slow growth: arctic willows, which remain permanently stunted by the harsh conditions, have growth rings so minute that they are difficult to see with the unaided eye.

Chalk said mammalian wildlife is also surprisingly abundant but must be treated with respect.

"If you're part of a group and want to split off on your own, you must notify the group leader." An Inuit guide is usually assigned to those who break from the main body, no matter how tranquil the landscape might seem. Chalk observed how the native guides maintained a discrete distance, sometimes invisible to their charges, watching for animals that might pose a threat to small groups of hikers.

"Grizzlies are the biggest threat: they are fast and even if you could outrun them, there are no trees to climb. Musk ox can also be dangerous: you are told that if a bull rubs his nose on his front legs, he's getting ready to charge."

Chalk believes that few people really comprehend how fragile this wilderness really is. Not only is growth slow, but damage to the physical environment may scar the landscape for decades. She observed this firsthand during the 1980s when she visited Sachs Harbor on Banks Island. Tracks left by vehicles from a weather station abandoned after the war could still be seen almost four decades later.

When not traveling, the photographer enjoys giving public slide shows on the natural history of the low arctic. She has talked to students in Magog, Sawyerville, Cookshire and Bury. Her photos have been extensively published and she is the author of several articles, including "Arctic Impressions" published in Camera Canada. At 85 years of age, her trips to the tundra have become part of the rhythm of life and her northern hosts, extended family. "I'll go back as long as I can get on and off a plane."

CYNTHIA CHALK

Chalk snapped this photo of inukshuk, stone monuments built by the Inuit to provide a reference point in the vast, monotonous arctic lowlands. This one was located overlooking a valley where herds of caribou grazed, probably marking a hunting ground.

August is hot month for country fans

Joe Diffie's new attitude is delivering results

Many new albums are scheduled for an August release such as Alison Krauss & Union Station titled Forget About It, Keith Perry's first album and Lee Roy Parnell's Hits & Highways Ahead.

But the new album by the Dixie Chicks is undoubtedly the most anticipated new release on the month's schedule as they hope to keep the momentum they started with Wide Open Spaces continuing on their follow-up effort, Fly, due Aug. 31.

The video clip for their new single "Ready To Run," which is also part of the movie soundtrack for Runaway Bride premiered this week on CMT Canada.

Other high-profile artists are putting the final touches to their first releases in two years: Bryan White, Michael Peterson and Alison Krauss all have new projects to launch.

Bryan White is back with his first album since 1997's The Right Place, with How Lucky I Am. The first single "You're Still Beautiful To Me," was co-penned by rocker Bryan Adams and Mutt Lange (Shania Twain's husband).

Michael Peterson's second album, Being Human, features a duet with Beka Bramlett, while Alison Krauss & Union Station have enlisted many guests for their Forget About It effort, including Dolly Parton, Lyle Lovett and The Cox Family.

August also finds a couple of special projects that will be released around the middle of the month. Asleep at the Wheel enjoyed so much doing their 1993 star-studded tribute to the King of Western Swing, Bob Wills, that they've decided to do another one.

Ride With Bob features many popular country artists such as the Dixie Chicks, Vince Gill, Dwight Yoakam, Willie Nelson, Clint Black, Lee Ann Womack, Tim McGraw and Steve Wariner.

The other specialty project features Emmylou Harris and Linda Ronstadt on an eclectic album of their own called Western Wall: The Tucson Sessions.

Lee Roy Parnell looks to the future as he delivers two new songs and a Greatest hits package, Hits & Highways Ahead.

The real highlight for die-hard country fans comes out on Aug. 24, as Merle Haggard joins a variety of artists - including Brooks & Dunn and pop singer Jewel - on For The Record, a collection of 43 of Haggard's best.

Many other albums are coming out throughout the fall such as Jim Lauderdale, Martina McBride and others. This should keep us busy listening to new material.

Here's my pick for this week:

JOE DIFFIE: A Night To Remember (Epic)

Joe Diffie is taking a different attitude with life and love but also with himself. Now that he's turned 40, Diffie wants a fresh start; first he's altered his physical appearance by shedding over 40 pounds and he's taking a more positive approach with life.

FILE PHOTO

Now that he's turned 40, Diffie wants a fresh start; first he's altered his physical appearance by shedding over 40 pounds and he's taking a more positive approach with life.

This new collection offers 10 love songs but even those of love gone bad somehow have a positive approach. The first single released "A Night To Remember," quickly climbed the country music charts.

Diffie's voice sounds better than ever. It's rich, strong and filled with emotion and at one time made him the most wanted demo singer in Nashville.

There's a good balance between the up tempo tunes and the ballads and for those who count "Ships That Don't Come In" among their favourite Diffie songs, there's a couple of passionate covers that should be pleasing.

Included on the album are "I'm The Only Thing I'll Hold Against You," a song he co-wrote which became Conway Twitty's last charted single, and "Don't Our Love Look Natural," originally recorded by the late Keith Whitley, for whom Diffie sang demos once upon a time.

To make you want to hit the dance floor there are tunes such as "The Quittin' Kind" and "It's Always Somethin." There's the sad - get your box of tissues out, "Better Off Gone" which features Diffie at it's best.

The album offers good clean country music with a message as Diffie gets back to the basics and sing from the heart. He sounds convincing on "Are We Even Yet," "My Heart's In Over My Head" and "Not In This Lifetime."

This is the type of album he should be recording all the time since this is what really suits him best. Definitely an album to add to your collection.

Have a nice week and keep your country state of mind!

The Iron Giant is 'a wholly refreshing cartoon'

By Tyler McLeod
SUN MEDIA

Brad Bird was a fairly desirable animator after working on the early development of The Simpsons, The Critic and King of the Hill. But it wasn't another television series he had in mind when he visited Warner Bros. Animation three years ago.

"At an open house, I saw a drawing," Bird tells. "Just the image of the little boy and a giant robot intrigued me - as it has kids for years." The drawing was from an animated musical called The Iron Man. It was to be an adaptation of a Pete Townshend concept album inspired by a children's story by Ted Hughes. Hughes, a British Poet Laureate, wrote the tale of the unlikely friendship to comfort his children after the death of their mother Sylvia Plath. Townshend mounted the album as a play in the style of Tommy.

The screen version backed by Toronto theatre producer Des McAnuff, however, was stalled in development. "So I got the Ted Hughes book, and I liked it very much, but I had some of my own ideas," says the director of The Iron Giant. "I asked them the question, 'What if a gun had a soul and didn't want to be a gun?'" The screenwriter of Batteries Not Included began his own version of the film which would become The Iron Giant, opening Friday.

Set in the 1950s - when the American way of life was under threat from Communism, atomic war and rock 'n' roll - nine-year-old Hogarth Hughes makes an incredible discovery in the woods.

Hogarth finds himself hiding his friend from the dangers of Earth, especially human paranoia as personified by government agent Kent Mansley.

The Iron Giant proves to be the most refreshing and wholly unique cartoon to hit theatres in recent memory... and not once do any of the characters break out into song.

"Certainly everything that was different about The Iron Giant, I had to fight for at one point or another," Bird says.

"They felt uncomfortable originally about it being in the '50s, about it not being a musical, that we don't have a ton of characters or obvious comic relief and all the ways we deviated from the traditional formula." Bird points out Warner Bros., the studio responsible for distinct TV animation like Batman and Animaniacs, didn't oppose breaking new ground. "To their credit, if I gave them a good argument as to why we should deviate, they supported doing it."

"I think there's been a tendency to chase Disney's tail," Bird says. "To me, a much greater goal and sign of success would be to get Disney to chase your tail. I think if you're going to attempt that you better take some risks."

Not that Bird doesn't owe a great debt to those classic Disney films. The Montana-born artist sent his first completed cartoon short off to the studio at age 14 and wound up studying informally with some of their legendary animators.

"At a very early age I had a chance to work with some of the 'Nine Old Men.'

In fact, I even tip my hat to a couple of the Nine Old Men in this movie," Bird says. Two witnesses early in the film attempt to describe to officials the enormous metal man who caused a train accident. They are none other than Frank Thomas and Ollie Johnston - two Disney pioneers immortalized in the documentary Frank & Ollie.

"All my first teachers in animation were the old Disney guys. All of my initial training was in this very elaborate animation. I think people mostly know me from my TV work and, to some extent, the original Family Dog I did for Amazing Stories. It seems a story of a little boy and his giant robot is timeless.

Camelot Revisited

Thomas Ian Nicholas plays a young hero in A Kid in King Arthur's Court, airing Sunday, Aug. 8, on ABC. Loosely based on Mark Twain's book A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, the film follows the travails of a boy who is brought back in time by master sorcerer Merlin (Ron Moody) to help save Camelot from the evil Lord Belasco (Art Malik). A pre-Titanic Kate Winslet stars as Princess Sarah, with Joss Ackland as King Arthur.

TVDATA

Manic comic Robin Williams gives an all-out performance in Flubber, the 1997 remake of The Absent Minded Professor, airing Saturday, Aug. 14, on the Disney Channel. Williams plays Philip Brainard, an inventor and professor whose job is on the line if he doesn't come up with a new invention fast. Luckily, he has recently developed a new source of energy that looks a lot like rubber - and can fly! Marcia Gay Harden stars as Brainard's long-suffering fiancée, Sara.
