How to Keep Young and Attractive.

GATHER BEAUTY MAKING HERBS THIS SUMMER.

By Abigail Moore.

In a carping critic's affirm, women are mad on the subject of beauty and health-making, there is certain method in their madness, for there is a distinct revelation from all the questionable practices, and a return to homely, sensible helps.

Among these are the lotions, creams, balm, and tonics that one may make very easily from herbs, old-fashioned remedies that our great grandmothers believed in, and that, at least, are harmless.

You, who are spending your vacation in the country, have abundant opportunity to gather for yourself the various herbs and flowers for your beauty-making, and if you are wise you will take fullest advantage of it. But perhaps you do not know that clover tea is a wonderful rejuvenator, but it is so garbier clover tops, as many of them as you can and dry them. Then every two or three months during the year steep some of them, strain and drink a third of a cup of the tea three times a day for three days. You can tie the blossoms up tightly in a bag and hang them away, but not until they are thoroughly dried.

When these are dried and dandelions that make the most refreshing wine. A wineglass of either the daisy wine or the dandelion, taken with meals, will tone up a run-down system as a malt would, and is much more delightful to take.

Of course, you all know of Queen Anne's famous prophylactic vinegar, made of sage (the flowers), lavender, rue, cloves, camphor, rosemary tops, a hint of garlic, and distilled wine vinegar. The rue, lavender, sage flowers, rosemary tops, and garlic you may gather from any old-fashioned garden, and the other ingredients are easily procurable at the nearest drug store. A little of it in a bowl of water will keep the skin from unhealthily eruptions.

A celebrated bath lotion is made from one pound of pulverized rice, two of pulverized barley, three of pulverized lupin seeds, six pounds of bran, one-half pound of lavender, two pounds of oatmeal and one-half pound each of wild gillyflower and borage. Boil all these together in rain water, and then take two quarters of the solution for each "tub," adding a handful of borax.

An excellent rouge is made of beet juice, much to be preferred to most of the powdered colorings found in the shops. Six fluid ounces of ammonia water, four of rose water, one fluid dram of spirit rose, and beet juice enough to give it the desired color are required to make it.

Some pretty things a sewing circle made for a bride. Pauline is to be married in the early part of October and is going to Toronto to live, so the girls of our sewing circle gave her a linen shower one afternoon, and I must tell of the lovely things one or two of them made for her.

Susanne, the practical, had bought half a dozen lovely bath towels and by the time she got through with them you would never have recognized them as ever having been just the plain everyday towels one sees in the shops. First she drew long, broad scallops across the ends, and these she embroidered in white, using lots of padding so that each scallop stood up well. Then, in the narrow, plain strip which forms part of the border on these towels she worked the daintiest cross-stitch garden. The sprays were in blue, and the little basket design which hung from the tip of every other spray was done in delicate pinks and reds. They were beautiful, and I am afraid we were all just a wee bit envious.

Then Caroline presented her remembrance—another pretty bit of cross-stitch. She had bought a square sunchance cloth, and a dozen small junchance napkins. For about two cents she bought enough cross-stitch canvas to use for the whole set and about a dozen and a half skeins of D. M. C. color.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

FASHION HINTS

By Lillian Young.

BY LILLIAN YOUNG.

The straight silhouette and the slightly bouffant panner are deftly combined in this model, which is worked out in embroidered goods has proven a popular success, and such frocks are certainly "full of usefulness," just the thing for summer teas and garden affairs, and can be pressed into service for evening wear, being sufficiently filmy and light. In this instance the deft blue chiffon is used for the tunic skirt, rounded blouse bib in front and back, and the neck and sleeve ruffles, the dress itself being of a fine border embroidered white batiste, with wreaths and flowers done in the same shade of blue.

The skirt is straight and plain, with the embroidery at the bottom. The peasant blouse is simplicity itself, with its rounded neck and long sleeves set into wide lowered armholes. The embroidery runs across the lower part in front and back, and can be seen veiled by the chiffon bib above the girle. Blue satin is used for the bodice, the front surplice being gemmed buckle and tied in back in a flat, square bow. The tunic skirt reaches a point in length just between the knee and the ankle, and is gathered at the waist, leaving a five-inch space at centre front. The edges are then crossed over the other, leaving a small triangular space between the waist and the skirt, which is filled in with a section of embroidery. The lower edge of the tunic is pouched over the skirt, and where the fronts surplice the material is draped a bit to give the required volume to the panner.

The design which would work out extremely well in green or in chamoise for a fall dress. In tulle or any of the lighter gray shades one would make a happy section with the embroidery done in self-color and a cut steel buckle at the waist. In this case the girle could be of bright contrasting color, with one long sash end in back.

Hints to Hired Housekeepers.

These few remarks are addressed to that section of the community who, for a fair salary, "do" for bachelor households.

Now a great cause of complaint among the poor men is the bullying attitude adopted by many of the housekeepers that they, performed have to employ. She knows that although their paid servant she is literally "mistress of the situation," and she takes advantage of the helpless males at every hands turn.

It is rather to be deplored and bad for our sex when such things happen, for it justifies the old idea that women lack the instinct of the true sportsman, who forbears to take advantage of the weaker foe. The eternal antagonism between master and servant is very bad, as a rule, and when it comes to the masters being dependent on the help it is all the more to be deplored. Now the correct attitude of a woman who is in charge of, let us say "bachelors" of about five lonely bachelors for whom she has to cook, wash and scrub generally, is less that of dictator than a mother. Without appearing to be an exceedingly great interest in their welfare quite apart from the monetary side of the affair, she should on occasions see that they are well cared for and when one or the other attempts to do the ordering or arrange the housekeeping, give little hints that only a woman knows and not let him make silly mistakes for want of a friendly tip.

One of the things that men cannot stand (and they are a lot of them) is "tidying up" and throwing away what to them are valuable possessions, but in the eyes of the would-be improvers of rooms and floors, utter rubbish. A cigarette box is still to be regarded as a treasure, and should be left and is not to be consigned to the dust-bin indiscriminately. Silk scarves and ties and other things that some hurried youths fling in far corners of their bedrooms are much better put in the right place and not stuffed into any drawer that is handy to facilitate one's sweeping in the morning.

The good bachelor help must realize that she is practically dealing with a lot of men who are unable to do for themselves, and who are willing to adopt the attitude of nurse as well as mother! There are to be found plenty of women who will really love to see her household happy and comfortable in a great boon and those who have all ready taken on the job of housework do well to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" these hints that we have endeavored to put before them.

THE CANNING OF GREEN PEAS AND STRING BEANS FOR WINTER USE.

(By Request.)

A home equipment for canning vegetables and fruits can be purchased for five dollars or more, but the principles of these outfits can be used with the ordinary utensils of the kitchen and quite as good results obtained, with a little additional trouble.

For the purpose of killing bacteria, low wash boiler, a galvanized iron pail or any pot with a flat bottom will do. If glass jars are used, a false bottom of slate wood or wire netting should be put in the cooking vessel to prevent contact of the glass with the direct heat.

SOME PRETTY THINGS A SEWING CIRCLE MADE FOR A BRIDE.

Pauline is to be married in the early part of October and is going to Toronto to live, so the girls of our sewing circle gave her a linen shower one afternoon, and I must tell of the lovely things one or two of them made for her.

Peas should be young, tender, and well grown, for you can only get out of a can what you put into it. Shell peas should be picked in a wire basket and placed in boiling water for five minutes. The boiling water will shrink the peas and turn the old, tough ones yellow so that you can easily pick them out. Pack the good peas firmly in the jars, leaving half an inch or so at the top, add the salt, and in the case of peas slightly warm the fresh water, filling the jars to the brim. Put the tops in position, and preserve after the same method as for beans, except that the second and third day boiling should be one hour in duration instead of one half-hour.

LISTEN GIRLS

GETTING INSURED IS A GOOD THING.

(By Jessie Roberts.)

Very few girls who are making their living carry insurance, and surely you girls look forward to a future of marriage and children, even as does the young man who works in the same shop or office or business house, and who is so much more apt than not to be insured for a few hundred.

Suppose you are insured for $500 in a reputable company. There is a nest egg that will be comfortable to think of in case you have some one depending on your earnings. Many girls who work are helping to support a mother or an invalid father, or assisting in the expenses of a family. There are many advantages included in insurance other than the payments after death, you can make a good bargain. You can borrow money on your policy in some cases, and in others you get returns after the lapse of a stated number of years.

Find out just what you have to pay for a five hundred dollar policy. Don't be content with the first company you visit; see several, talk things over, find out just what the offers. Never get insured in a small new company. Leave that for others who can afford to take a risk for the sake of bigger premiums. As for you, stick to the old and reliable houses.

After you have found what suits you, and have arranged the payments in the most convenient way for yourself, make up your mind to lay aside the necessary sum each week in advance. Don't burden yourself with more than you can do, but meet the requirement you have assumed in plenty of time. You don't want your insurance to be a subject of worry to you, you want it to be a comfort and a security. If you are always getting behind in your payments, your insurance cannot be of any use.

"... life's sorry jest."—Office Window.

Were life at best A sorry jest,

To read it were vain: Each night it falls,

But morning calls To scan it once again.

A jest, I say, That every day

Appears in stranger guise, Is none so poor

But it may lure The most prosaic eyes.

The jest of Pan And Flora, seen

By light of summer moons, That illustrate

His wit innate With ever-fresh cartoons.

Yet tear-mists cloak The glorious joke,

Till death our eyes anon; From clown to king

We feel the sting, But who has seen the point

FAMOUS SINGER HELPS FRESH AIR FUND AT SERVICE

Eugene Cowles Canadian Basso Gives "The Children's Home" at Derby.

Special "Fresh Air Fund" service was held on Sunday at Lake Park, North Derby, Vermont, at which the collection amounted to $150, to be divided between the Montreal Fresh Air Fund and the Boston Floating Hospital, both of which are doing some good work among tenement children.

The congregation was composed of summer residents from both Canada and the United States, and it was accordingly felt that division between a Canadian and American institution would be the fairest method of disposing of the money. The service, which was an open air one, took place in the grounds at "Kitterbury," the summer residence of General F. G. Butterfield of Derby Line, Vt., beautifully situated on the shores of Lake Memphremagog. A large crowd from all points attended arriving in automobiles, motor boats, buggies and on foot.

A particularly appropriate and attractive feature was the singing of Cervens beautiful song, "The Children's Home," by Eugene Cowles, the famous Canadian basso. He rendered the song with all the appeal and pathos that belongs to it, and it was felt that his performance was an effective as many sermons would have been. Mr. Grant Schaeffer, of Chicago, a well known composer and teacher of singing, was at the piano. The preacher of the day was the Rev. G. Ellery Read, who, inaugurated the first service of this kind on Lake Memphremagog six years ago. Mr. Read is minister of the Congregational Church in Sherbrooke. He made a strong appeal for the children, and urged his hearers to lay aside all questions of creed, race and color in the noble work of saving the lives and future of city children.

HON. G. E. FOSTER RETURNS FROM HIS AUSTRALIAN TRIP

No Controversy There About Proper Way to Take Part in Imperial Naval Defence.

Special to the Montreal Star. Vancouver, B.C., August 21.—"There is no such controversy in Australia and New Zealand about the proper way to take part in Imperial Naval Defence, as has taken place in Canada," declared the Hon. G. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, back after a six months absence from Canada in Australia, New Zealand, and the principal cities of China and Japan.

"They want a Pacific fleet, and so do we. Our future development depends on this side of the Continent, and protection here is essential. In Australia the Imperial spirit is very strong and rapidly growing. There is no indication in its naval organization or in the administration of it that the country thinks of placing itself in a position of defence by itself or to stand alone. This policy adopted by the Australian Government is no step to independence," was Mr. Foster's declaration.

Asked whether he saw traces of the Young Australian sentiment in favor of independence, Mr. Foster stated that there certainly was no party, and he had not encountered any sentiment whatever in favor of separation. There was, of course, an optimistic feeling as to the future of Australia, and a laudable ambition to make as great a success as possible.

Respecting his mission to arrange a reciprocity agreement between Australia and Canada, Mr. Foster stated that the unsettled political situation in Australia prevented any actual negotiations, but the new Government was by no means adverse to such an arrangement, and when they became more firmly established negotiations would be resumed.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO BURN ROCKFELLER'S TEA HOUSE. Special to the Montreal Star. Tarrytown, N.Y., August 21.—According to reports abroad in Pocantico Hills, an attempt was made a few nights ago, to burn John D. Rockefeller's beautiful Japanese tea house, which cost $50,000.

The story is that one of the Rockefeller workmen found a bunch of inflammable material hidden in the shrubbery near the house, and reported his find to the superintendent. Guards on the estate were placed on double duty. Rockefeller's stable was destroyed six weeks ago, and two weeks later the studio of his sculptor was burned.
