Parizeau leads federal aid cut counterattack

HALIFAX (CP) — Finance Minister Allan MacEachen squared off with the provincial finance ministers Monday over plans to cut federal aid to the provinces by $5.7 billion and add conditions to the money left over.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau led the counter-attack, and it was clear he was enjoying it.

Parizeau, telling the federal government it should do its homework, slammed Ottawa for allegedly underestimating the size of the cuts and called MacEachen's proposed new equalization formula "ridiculous" and "farcical."

Ontario Treasurer Frank Miller questioned Parizeau's sincerity and said the Quebec minister, who is attending despite Quebec's boycott of most other federal-provincial meetings, seems to have a vested interest in creating a rift between Ottawa and the provinces.

However, Newfoundland Finance Minister John Collins, whose province depends heavily on federal money, said Parizeau's calculations were "very interesting" and New Brunswick Finance Minister Fernand Dube said they deserve to be looked at more closely.

Meanwhile, all provinces apparently voiced opposition to MacEachen's plans to save $5.7 billion over the next five years by slowing the rate of growth in the $19-billion worth of annual transfers Ottawa makes to the provinces.

They also rejected MacEachen's plan to negotiate the cuts now and settle over the next year what conditions the provinces must meet to get what's left of the federal money, destined primarily for medicare, hospitalization and post-secondary education.

MacEachen had been hoping to get the negotiations wrapped up in January, but Parizeau said it could take months.

Assembly porn inquiry may be over by Xmas

QUEBEC (CP) — Between 10 and 16 police investigators are looking into the clandestine use of television equipment belonging to the national assembly, Antoine Drolet, assistant to Speaker Claude Vaillancourt, said Monday.

"On some days there are 10, on others 16, depending on the circumstances, all of them under the supervision of Inspector Michel Alain of the Quebec provincial police," Drolet said.

Speaker Vaillancourt asked for the investigation Nov. 2 after allegations that equipment for broadcasting debates in the assembly was being used for making pornographic films or advertising commercials which were then sold to legitimate customers.

In addition, $50,000 to $60,000 worth of equipment has been stolen.

The investigation is being carried out within the assembly confines, as well as in Quebec City and elsewhere, Drolet said.

Since some former government and assembly employees have changed jobs and have left Quebec City, Drolet said, it's not surprising that the investigation has spread.

No deadline has been set for an end to the inquiry, but it's hoped that it can be completed before Christmas.

A report on a separate inquiry has been filed with the speaker concerning allegations by Richard Thibeault, television moderator of the assembly debates, of electronic bugging of his private conversations.

Drolet said the information is under consideration.

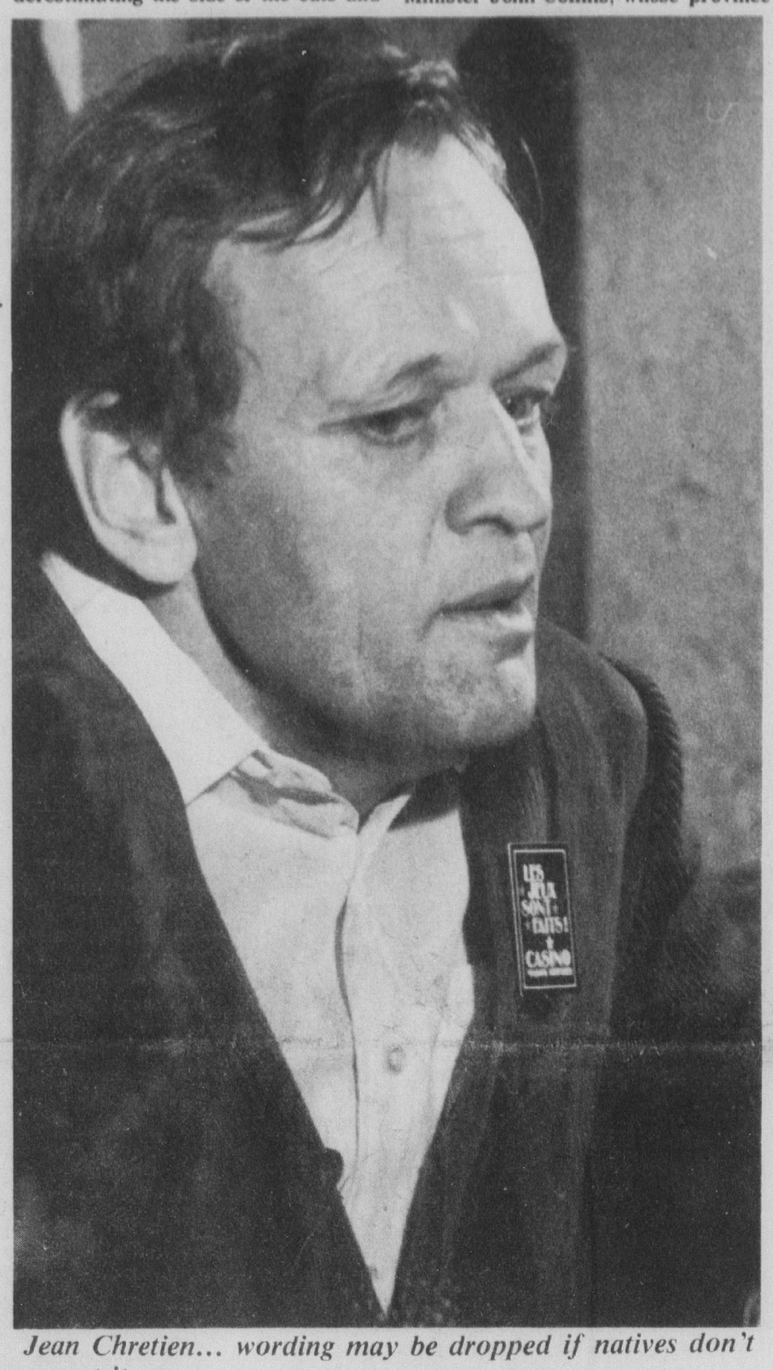

The Quebec Auditor-General's Department was ordered Monday to extend its investigation of overspending on this year's Fete Nationale celebrations to cover activities of Montreal organizers.

Recreation Minister Lucien Lessard issued the instructions after receiving an auditor's breakdown of the expenses incurred by the Montreal committee, a statement from his office said.

The Fete nationale is Quebec's annual June 24 holiday. It was previously known as St. Jean Baptiste Day, in honor of the patron saint of French Canadians.

Provincewide, the holiday celebrations ran up a deficit of $660,000. Lessard originally limited the auditor-general's inquiry to the activities of Lac St. Jean organizers, refusing opposition demands for an examination of the $278,871 deficit incurred in Montreal.

Fete activities became the subject of controvery following a series of newspaper reports earlier this year alleging mismanagement of funds, nepotism by cabinet ministers, and political pressure on private companies to help pay for various activities of the government-subsidised holiday events.

Jean Chretien... wording may be dropped if natives don't accept it.

Sexual equality native rights back in package

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and nine provinces achieved what appeared to be a major breakthrough Monday and agreed to reinstate sexual equality and native rights in the new constitution.

The late-night announcement by Justice Minister Jean Chretien, which stunned the Commons, was heralded as good news for women who had been demanding unquestioned equal rights with men.

But there were indications the agreement might be unacceptable to leaders of 1.3 million native people. And Chretien, appearing to acknowledge this, said the government might drop the idea if natives don't accept it.

A spokesman for one of the few native groups that has previously supported the federal government on the issue said Prime Minister Trudeau and the premiers have "screwed" the natives by narrowing the definition of their rights.

"All I know is that we've been screwed," said Charlie Watt, chief constitutional negotiator for the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada.

CHANGES NOTHING

Chretien, however, argued that the rewording — which now refers to "existing" rights of natives — changes nothing.

The agreement between Ottawa and all provinces except Quebec virtually reverses provisions of the Nov. 5 accord between nine premiers and Trudeau to restrict sexual equality and drop native rights.

Chretien announced that the provinces have agreed to:

—Reinstatement of a provision in the resolution now before the Commons that would make the constitution's charter of rights apply equally to men and women. This would replace a provision in the Nov. 5 accord which would have allowed Parliament or the provincial legislatures to pass legislation overriding equality rights.

—Entrenchment in the constitution of guarantees for "existing" native rights. The word existing was added to a clause approved by Parliament early this year. Native leaders have previously expressed strong reservations about the use of the word.

One dead one hurt in shooting

MONTREAL (CP) — A 30-year-old man was shot in the head by police Monday after a high-speed chase from the scene of a daring streetcorner slaying.

The suspect, listed in critical condition following brain surgery, was hit as he tried to hijack a car at the entrance to an expressway in mid-afternoon.

Police said the incident began as a gangland settling of accounts when one young black man opened fire on another from point blank range on the sidewalk of a busy street in a tough west-end district.

Killed was Jackie Radcliffe, 30, who operated a dry-cleaning business in the area.

The assailant fled in a stolen car with a police cruiser in pursuit. A few minutes later, the getaway car collided with two cars and plowed into the abutment of an expressway entrance ramp.

The suspect then tried to commandeer a car occupied by tourist Welfried Glock, 32, of Stuttgart, West Germany, and a girlfriend, Branka Wildin.

Washington money battle is on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is back in business and President Reagan's running budget battle with Congress is on hold after approval of a revised emergency spending measure.

"Of course, we now must come back and do the work all over again in the Congress on a bill that can be signed," Reagan said Monday night after he signed the stopgap spending bill, which expires Dec. 15.

Shortly afterward, Reagan left the White House for his California ranch to spend his U.S. Thanksgiving vacation that had been delayed a day because of the budget impasse.

Reagan's supporters in Congress said the episode was fresh evidence of Reagan's resolve to slash federal spending. But furious Democratic leaders said the skirmishing that left the government technically insolvent for almost 67 hours was only "a charade."

Nine accept explosive rights wording change

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Jean Chretien added a potentially explosive element to the native rights clause that was reinstated in the constitution Monday.

In a late-night announcement, Chretien said Ottawa and all provinces except Quebec agreed to add the word "existing" to describe aboriginal and treaty rights the clause had recognized and affirmed in Ottawa's original proposal.

Chretien said the addition of that word only clarifies the meaning of the clause and does not change what natives are entitled to.

However, native leaders are uneasy with that interpretation and suggest the newly-worded clause raises some touchy questions about aboriginal title.

For instance, the courts have so far limited the definition of aboriginal rights to hunting, fishing and trapping.

Since Metis, Indian and Inuit groups across the country have claimed aboriginal title or ownership to great tracts of land, would this new clause prevent them from pressing those claims?

Native leaders say the change was made because of a letter from Roy McMurtry, Ontario's attorney-general, to Chretien this summer which summed up the feeling of several premiers.

McMurtry said the original clause recognizing and affirming aboriginal and treaty rights "would have serious and unfortunate consequences for Canadians."

Urging Chretien to drop the clause from the constitution, McMurtry said aboriginal rights were uncertain but "it appears they are property rights of a kind. . . ."

Quebec Inuit leader Charlie Watt said the letter shows why the term "existing" was added: "Using the term . . . really limits aboriginal rights to fishing, hunting and trapping."

WHAT EFFECT?

And what affect would it have on future northern land claims settlements and federal-provincial talks on aboriginal rights?

The Crees and Inuit of Northern Quebec signed a land claims agreement with Ottawa and the province in 1975 — the only land claim settlement to date.

Besides the $225 million given to the groups for settling aboriginal claims, the agreement provided language and education rights and limited regional authority. The agreement was enacted in legislation and under the existing rights clause will get constitutional protection.

But what about land claims talks already underway in the Yukon, the Mackenzie Valley and the eastern Arctic? If any new rights are worked out in a political settlement, will they be put into the constitution or merely be protected by legislation?

And what about the one million Metis and non-status Indians who have never before been legally recognized by Ottawa as aboriginal peoples with some special status? Are they also limited to what they can get because their rights are undefined at present?

An Alberta government document leaked recently suggested that the 100,000 Metis in the province may have legal grounds for a land claim.

"That may also suggest why (Alberta Premier Peter) Lougheed wanted to get 'existing' into the clause," said one Inuit spokesman.

Amend Law 101, Clark urges PQ

QUEBEC (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark has urged Quebec to amend its language law to let children of all English Canadians attend English-language schools.

If Levesque agrees to soften the language law, Clark told students Monday at Laval University, the Conservatives will propose an amendment to the constitutional resolution before the House of Commons, allowing Quebec to opt in to guarantees on minority language rights when it is prepared to do so.

Clark said he made the suggestion in a letter to Premier Rene Levesque.

The problem for Quebec, he said, is that the current resolution, which imposes the so-called "Canada clause" on the province, would force "a change in a law already existing in Quebec."

Quebec's Bill 101 restricts English schooling to children with at least one parent educated in English in the province.

If the province were to amend its own law, recognizing the Canada clause, it would give all Canadians across the country the same right to have their children educated in English or French "as numbers warrant."

By amending Quebec law to include the Canada clause, the guarantee would be under provincial jurisdiction, whereas for the other provinces it would be enshrined in the constitution.

"It is difficult for Canada to contemplate a constitution without Quebec," he said. "Now we have to find a way to permit Quebec to become part of the agreement."

Clark said he sent his letter to Levesque Monday as part of an attempt to overcome objections to the constitutional accord signed Nov. 5 by the federal government and the other nine provinces.

If Levesque is unwilling to consider some of the compromises offered, he said, "he could be accused of neglecting the Quebec people in favor of his independence option."

Levesque, questioned in Montreal about the Conservative leader's proposal, reacted cautiously, saying it showed "open-mindedness" but he wanted more specifics before commenting.

Clark, accompanied by wife Maureen McTeer and Senator Arthur Tremblay, was received warmly by the students.

Asked by a student if the Tories would be willing to join with the Parti Quebecois to "get rid of that Trudeau-Kirby-Axworthy government," Clark said he has "no intention of forming an alliance with any other party."

The PQ is mulling the possibility of presenting candidates in federal elections in a bid to shake the Liberal grip on Quebec.

"We will run candidates in every riding," he said. "I see some danger for the PQ on the federal level, but that's their decision."

Joe Clark... offers PQ deal.

Paisley's 20,000 offer to 'take on' IRA

BELFAST (Reuter) — Rev. Ian Paisley, paraded thousands of his so-called Third Force Monday night in the biggest Protestant show of strength in Northern Ireland in years.

The parade by the paramilitary organization was the climax to a day in which Paisley and his supporters brought widespread disruption to industry to protest British government policies for the province.

The hardline preacher-politician claimed 20,000 men turned up for the parade at a rally in the small, strongly Protestant town of Newtownards, 16 kilometres from Belfast. A police spokesman said there were "several thousand."

Paisley told the cheering crowds he was opening an enlistment drive for "no less than 100,000 men on the march in Ulster."

He said he has offered the services of his force to the authorities to help them "take on" the Irish Republican Army.

Paisley said his force is necessary because the police and British troops cannot provide effective protection for Northern Ireland's Protestant majority against killings by the IRA.

His day of demonstrations across Northern Ireland was a protest against the latest spate of IRA murders, as well as against what he sees as moves by the British government to push the province into unity with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish republic to the south.

Employers' organizations reported that Paisley's call for a half-day strike closed many factories and businesses.

"Fewer people stayed open than we would have thought," said a spokesman for the Northern Ireland Chamber of Commerce.

Paisley hailed what he called "the 100-per-cent success" of the strike call, which was widely seen as a test of his backing.

And at the rally he said: "I know my Ulster and Ulster men and women are united tonight. The IRA have got to be exterminated."

Offering his force to the police and army, Paisley declared: "There are men willing to do the job — recruit them."

He made it clear he sees the force as his. "These men are pledged to me and I am pledged to them," he declared.

The crowd's enthusiasm ran high, despite bitter cold and rain which eventually turned to snow. They sang hymns while they waited for the Third Force to appear and went into a roar of cheering when the men — many in army-style fatigues and with faces covered by hoods and masks but none displaying guns — began trooping into the centre of the square.

Eventually, no more could be crammed in, but Paisley said many were still waiting in the surrounding streets. As he spoke, distant cheers could be heard from behind the houses around the tightly-packed square.

Montreal doctor develops depression treatment

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal psychiatrist has discovered a drug treatment he says could eliminate the need for electro-shock therapy and provide relief for thousands of people suffering from nervous depression.

Dr. Claude de Montigny told a news conference Monday the treatment he devised and tested with a research team during the past two years can help patients who do not respond to conventional anti-depressant drug therapy.

He said that one in 25 people suffers from a major form of nervous depression, characterized by diminution of mental faculties such as concentration, as well as loss of appetite, energy and ability to sleep. In advanced cases, the sufferer's self-perception can change dramatically.

About 70 percent of those who seek medical help and receive drug treatment respond positively to a variety of anti-depressant drugs prescribed since the early 1960s. The rest do not, even when dosages are high.

But de Montigny discovered that when the drug lithium was administered with anti-depressants, patients who previously did not respond felt relief from major symptoms within 48 hours.

"It's considered to be a real breakthrough in psychotherapy," de Montigny said, describing how the treatment helped 24 out of 26 critically depressed patients at Louis-Hippolyte Lafontaine Hospital, a Montreal psychiatric institute.

Further testing of the treatment at Yale University produced the same quick results in eight of nine cases, the doctor said, adding success with the treatment has been reported elsewhere in the U.S., Canada and in Sweden. The discovery was described in the British Journal of Psychiatry earlier this year.

LED TO DISCOVERY

Observing the effect of anti-depressants on brain cells (neurons) in animals led de Montigny to his discovery. The studies, supported by the Medical Research Council of Canada, showed that anti-depressant drugs increased responsiveness of brain neurons to serotonin, a chemical substance in the blood which transmits nerve impulses.

De Montigny then hypothesized that lithium would increase the action of serotin-containing neurons, causing the anti-depressant drugs to be effective.

Though lithium — used successfully for the past 10 years to curb severe mood swings in manic depressives — proved toxic when used in high doses in the early years after its discovery in 1946 by an Australian scientist, its side effects are "extremely minimal" when used in moderate quantities with anti-depressants, de Montigny said.

On the other hand, sismotherapy, or electro-shock treatment, is controversial because of possible negative side effects, particularly on the patient's memory.

Quebec plant will recycle oil for industrial use

ST. LAZARE, Que. (CP) — Quebec's first plant to recycle used industrial oil opened in this town 65 kilometres west of Montreal Monday.

Lubrimax Inc. has invested $1 million in a European process that removes contaminants by treating used oil with various additives, said plant manager Marcel Brunet.

The plant can handle seven million litres, or about 45,000 barrels, of used oil a year, and the company intends to open more plants in other parts of the province to reclaim "all 35 million litres of industrial oil used in Quebec annually".

Currently, almost all of the used oil from Quebec industries is either burned in incinerators or sprayed on roads to control dust.

In contrast, in Ontario more than 70,000 barrels of oil were recycled in 1980. In the United States, 15 per cent of all oil sold is recycled, in France 58 per cent, and in Germany 96 per cent.

Brunet explained that with the company's system, the customer remains the owner of the oil, paying only the cost of cleaning, additives and service. He estimated customers can save up to 40 per cent of their energy costs by recycling.

Marx: blame government for QPF inefficiency

QUEBEC (CP) — The high cost and inefficiency of Quebec's provincial and municipal police forces can be blamed on the provincial government, opposition justice critic Herbert Marx charged Monday.

Presenting a report he prepared to the national assembly, the Liberal member said organizational weaknesses and lack of co-ordination make it hard for police to offer effective services to the public.

He blamed the government's failure to assert control over police for a situation where police costs are higher than in Ontario, crime is rising faster and fewer crimes are solved.

His report showed that in 1980, Quebecers paid $32.41 per capita for provincial police services, while Ontarians paid $20.82. In addition, Montrealers paid $110.77 per capita for their municipal force, while residents of Toronto paid $95.70.

In Montreal, crime increased 11.14 per cent between 1979 and 1980, but the rate of solution decreased to 23 per cent from 26. During the same period Toronto police reported an increase in crime of 9.4 per cent, but their solution rate was 51.6 per cent.

Marx identified problems such as lack of communication between police forces; disparities in working conditions, training and budgets; the inability of small municipal forces to enforce the law; the use of municipal forces for jobs that have little to do with policing; and an absence of internal and external control mechanisms.

One of the few ways in which elected representatives have some say over police matters is through the Quebec Police Commission. It was established to regulate such questions as uniforms and citations, and can investigate police conduct, but has limited powers of inquiry and its recommendations can be ignored, Marx said.

He noted that Montreal police had refused to carry out the commission's recommendation that the riot squad be reorganized after it was shown that its members had taken part in unprovoked attacks on demonstrators and journalists the night of Quebec's referendum on sovereignty-association.

Marx said the government should appoint a solicitor-general to co-ordinate all police forces in the province.

High birth disorder rate worries Manitoba doctors

WINNIPEG (CP) — A team of doctors is investigating an increase in the number of cases of a rare, fatal disorder among some Winnipeg infants.

A doctor at Winnipeg's St. Boniface Hospital said seven cases of omphaloceles, in which children are born with intestines protruding through the abdomen and with missing or malformed limbs, have been reported at the hospital in the last year.

Dr. Albert De Pape said Monday two babies with identical symptoms were born within 24 hours of each other last September.

"There could be a chance that it could be due to a pesticide or a drug," De Pape said in an interview. "We really don't know."

Of the seven deformed infants born between September, 1980 and September, 1981, five were stillborn and two died shortly after birth. Two infants had lower limbs missing and one was missing a right arm.

The federal Department of Health and Welfare in Ottawa was informed of the births this September.

De Pape said the incidence of the rare birth disorders at the hospital is two to three times the national average.

"We thought something must be going on in the population which must be studied," said De Pape.

"The thalidomide story began this way. Abnormalities were detected in the population and people soon started to study them."

He said the team of doctors is looking for anything families of the dead children may have in common, such as the use of a particular drug.

News-in-brief

Citizens deprived in Via cuts

MONTREAL (CP) — Recent Via Rail reductions deprived citizens of an essential right and full passenger service should be ordered restored, Quebec government lawyers told Federal Court Judge Allison Walsh Monday.

Provincial lawyer William Atkinson said the federal Transport Department violated its legal obligation to act in an equitable manner when it cut passenger service without holding public hearings.

Gazette-union reach agreement

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette and negotiators for the newspaper's 100 pressmen have reached a tentative contract agreement, Gazette publisher Robert McConnell said Monday night.

Details of the settlement, still to be voted upon by the pressmen, were not made public.

Earlier Monday, McConnell said the company's latest offer to the pressmen totaled 48 per cent in salary increases over three years. McConnell said the average salary for pressmen is currently about $30,000.

Interest rates may drop again

MONTREAL (CP) — Interest rates will probably continue their current decline into early next year, Royal Bank president Rowland Frazee said Monday.

Some progress has already been made in bringing down last summer's 20-per-cent-plus rates, the bank president said in an interview, and relief will be felt "in the fourth quarter of this year and the first quarter of next year."

Coroner delays inquest

QUEBEC (CP) — Coroner Maurice Lagace said Monday he is waiting for a police report before deciding whether to hold an inquest into a weekend bus accident which killed one passenger and injured 30 others.

"At first glance, there seems to be nothing suspect, but I must await a report from the police," he said.

GPs hold protest walk-out

JONQUIERE, Que. (CP) — General practitioners in the Saguenay-Lac St. Jean region and the Chibougamau area withheld their services Monday in protest over a proposed law intended to draw more young doctors to isolated regions.

Speaking at a news conference, Dr. Daniel Drolet, president of the regional association of general practitioners, accused the government of assuming a totalitarian attitude in the matter.

QPF aids Dutch police

BAIE COMEAU, Que. (CP) — It wasn't a usual sort of assignment for the Quebec provincial police detachment here, but they accepted it in the spirit of international crime-fighting co-operation.

At the request of Dutch police, they boarded the Lybian freighter Eliane on its arrival here last weekend to investigate the reported theft of $22,400 from the ship's safe, which allegedly occurred during a docking in Rotterdam ten days ago.

Newspaper $95 a copy?

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP has asked the auditor general to conduct a special audit of the Canadian Unity Information Office following reports the office is flying newspapers to Ottawa at a cost of up to $95 a copy.

The request by Perrin Beatty, MP for the Ontario riding of Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe, was contained in a letter dated Monday to Auditor General Kenneth Dye.

Cabinet examines Mirabel farm

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet will look at ways of managing 79,000 acres of farmland around Mirabel airport within two weeks, Public Works Minister Paul Cosgrove told the Commons Monday.

The government established the Mirabel Land Corp. last year to gather local opinion on what should be done with the land, expropriated when the airport was build about 60 kilometers north of Montreal, he said.

'Change' not 'retirement'

OTTAWA (CP) — People approaching 50 years of age should be looking forward to 30 years of "the good life" instead of worrying about aging, an Ottawa psychologist says.

Rebeccca Kingston said during a speech on the weekend that most people are just getting into stride when they hit 50. The word "retirement" should be replaced by the word change because that is what should happen to a person at 65, she said.

Opposition hammer interest rates

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs renewed demands Monday that the government take action to help farmers, small businessmen and workers suffering because of high interest rates, inflation and growing unemployment.

Their demands were pegged on the fact that tens of thousands of people marched on Parliament Hill on Saturday to demonstrate contempt for high interest rates and government economic policies in general.

Feds lift gag order

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has lifted — but only partially — a gag order restricting the release of information about an international uranium cartel in which Canada participated.

The move, disclosed in a cabinet order made public Monday, is aimed at permitting testimony to be heard in a domestic anti-combines case against six Canadian companies when it reopens in Toronto on Jan. 15. However, the restricted information still will not be available to the general public.

Blind lose money to Grey Cup

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is cutting aid to sports groups for blind and disabled people while wasting money on Grey Cup receptions and shows, Progressive Conservative Joe Reid charged Monday.

Sport Minister Gerald Regan should pay the cost of the reception at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Montreal out of his own pocket, Reid, MP for St. Catharines, Ont., told the Commons.

Canada ready to aid Namibia

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada, a key middleman in the discussions about the future of Namibia, is again ready to look at help for the African territory during its transition to independence, says External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan.

The minister said in an interview Monday the cabinet has not made any decision on what kind of help, such as election advisers or police, it is ready to consider. A decision is some time away, he indicated.

600,000 elderly women poor

TORONTO (CP) — Almost 600,000 elderly women are unable to afford the basic necessities of life, says an Ontario Advisory Status of Women report released today.

Nearly two-thirds of Canada's 1.1 million female senior citizens have annual incomes below $6,000, the report says. That puts them on par with poverty lines for small and rural communities, and $1,500 below the recognized poverty line for Toronto.

Pension plan must change

TORONTO (CP) — The future of Canada's pension system, due for its first overhaul since the early 1960s, must be shaped to reflect the changing pattern of women in the workforce and women with families, the president of the pension committee of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women said Monday.

At a conference discussing issues relating to older women, Jean Wood said the committee is encouraging women across Canada to become an informed lobby to respond and react to any changes in pension legislation.

Sask. government won't appeal

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatchewan government says it won't appeal the Federal Court decision not to hear arguments on the legality of reducing Via Rail passenger service.

Gordon MacMurchy, minister in charge of the Saskatchewan transportation agency, said Monday after reviewing the federal decision it would be more profitable to pursue other courses of action to ensure adequate passenger service.

Poor not being heard

VANCOUVER (CP) — The voice of the poor isn't being heard in the debate over economic policies, Canadian-born economist John Kenneth Galbraith told an audience of more than 1,000 tax specialists Monday.

The celebrated American, who has held high academic, political and diplomatic posts in the U.S., mocked President Ronald Reagan's economic policies as horse-and-sparrow economics.

Psychopathic not psychotic

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Press distributed an erroneous report Nov. 12 quoting Dr. Andrew Malcolm, a Toronto-based expert in forensic psychiatry, as saying Alberta's approach to education encourages psychotic behavior.

In fact Malcolm, in a speech to a school trustees' convention, referred to a program in Alberta schools which he said blurs the distinction between right and wrong and leads to development of psychopathic traits.

In psychology, the words psychotic and psychopathic have different meanings. The psychopath is a conscienceless person who seems to lack a moral sense. The psychotic suffers from a profound thought disorder.

Lindburgh files opened finally

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Voluminous state police files on what was then called "the crime of the century" — the kidnapping of the infant son of aviator Charles Lindbergh — were opened to the public Monday for the first time since the child disappeared 49 years ago.

Topping a list of researchers and reporters seeking access to the 90,000 pages of reports and a huge volume of physical evidence was Robert Bryan, a lawyer representing the widow of Bruno Hauptmann, who was executed in 1936 for the kidnapping-murder of the child.

Tax evasion catches up

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Mogens Glistrup, who built up the second most powerful political party in Denmark by advocating the abolition of taxes, was convicted of tax evasion Monday. He received the maxiumum sentence of four years in prison and a $1-million fine.

The seven-member Copenhagen High Court also stripped the 55-year-old Glistrup, who once had one of Denmark's largest law firms, of the right to practise law for life.

Arabs favour Saudi plan

FEZ (AP) — A majority of the Arab states favor Saudi Arabia's blueprint for peace with Israel, but the Arab summit meeting opening Wednesday in this Moroccan city probably will not endorse it because of the opposition of Libya, Syria and other hard-liners.

That was the assessment of several sources who attended the closed-door meeting Monday of Arab League foreign ministers preparing for the meeting of their heads of state and government.

Dr. guilty of cruelty to animals

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Dr. Edward Taub was convicted Monday of six counts of cruelty to animals, monkeys used in research at his Silver Spring laboratory.

Taub's assistant, John Kunz, was found not guilty of 17 counts of animal cruelty by Montgomery County District Judge Stanley Klavan.

Brits don't resent non-whites

LONDON (Reuter) — Seventy-seven per cent of Britain's white population do not resent non-whites being in the country, shows a survey carried out for the government-appointed Commission for Racial Equality.

But 53 per cent of the minorities' members and 43 per cent of the whites thought race relations would get worse over the next five years, the Opinion Research Centre poll indicated Monday.

IRA may get surplus pistols

LONDON (CP) — At a time when public vigilance is being urged to help thwart Irish Republican Army bombers, the British Defence Ministry has come under fire for selling off surplus pistols which critics contend could end up in terrorist hands.

More than 1,000 Browning 9-millimetre pistols, manufactured under contract by the Toronto firm of John Inglis, have been sold to a dealer by private treaty, a defence spokesman said Monday. The dealer was not named.

Playwright Tremblay wins award

PARIS (CP) — Quebec author and playwright Michel Tremblay was awarded the 1981 France-Quebec literary prize here Monday.

Expressing delight on receiving the award for his book "Therese and Pierrette a l'ecole des Saint-Anges," Tremblay promptly pledged he would quickly forget the honor and get back to work.

Walesa too soft — 15 quit

WARSAW (AP) — Fifteen influential Solidarity members quit the independent Polish union to protest Lech Walesa's "too-conciliatory stand" toward the Communist government, it was reported.

The official PAP news agency said Anrzej Gwiazda, a chief ideologist of the 9.5-million-member union, was among those who resigned Monday. Union sources said none of the 15 was a member of the union's presidium.

Schmidt hopes for accord

BONN (Reuter) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has expressed cautious hope that the United States and the Soviet Union can make progress toward reducing nuclear armaments in Europe during talks in Geneva next Monday.

"Overall it is quite clear that the Soviet side, like the Americans, seriously want to negotiate in Geneva on medium-range weapons," he told a television interviewer after a day of talks with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Kidnapped politician released

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Public Health Minister Roquelino Recinos Mendez, kidnapped 85 days ago by leftist guerrillas, was released Monday night, witnesses said.

Recinos Mendez was abducted Aug. 31 as he was leaving a medical centre in downtown Guatemala City.

Rebels attack San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — About 40 heavily armed leftist guerrillas attacked a suburb of San Salvador on Monday but were repelled by government forces with no casualties on either side, an army spokesman said.

No new discoveries of bodies were reported and police said the average number of corpses found daily in El Salvador had dropped in recent weeks.

Horn honkers lose licences

MADRID (AP) — Spain's National Traffic Board suspended the licences of 1,500 motorists and fined them $210 for honking horns and disrupting traffic during a Francoist rally Sunday.

The board said the drivers had operated their vehicles dangerously.

The rally marked the sixth anniversary of the death of dictator Francisco Franco.

ECM unemployment up

BRUSSELS (AP) — Unemployment in the European Common Market reached 8.5 per cent in October, highest since the 10-country economic bloc was formed in 1958, statistics released Monday show.

Belgium had the worst record: 12.7 per cent jobless in October, compared to 12.8 per cent in September.

Clergy control Iranian judiciary

BEIRUT (AP) — Ayatollah Khomeini's Islamic regime broadened the clergy's dominance in Iranian politics by giving it control of judicial affairs, Tehran Radio reported Monday.

It said the overhaul is designed to "speed up judicial processes." More judges will be recruited and a special tribunal set up to deal with drug offences, punishable by death in Iran.

S.A. obtains uranium

PARIS (AP) — South Africa has obtained enriched uranium on the international market for a nuclear power project, the French Foreign Ministry announced Monday.

Framatome, one-third owned by the French government, is processing the uranium into fuel rods under a contract with the South Africa's Electrical Supply Commission.

Ascot protesters have their own no-change ballot

By Charles Bury

ASCOT TOWNSHIP — A committee of citizens opposed to a proposal to change the name of this municipality will be canvassing homeowners with its own ballot — including the present name, left off a similar ballot distributed by council last week.

"We'll be running a survey of our own," Charles Kingsley, chairman of the committee, said in an interview this morning, "with the existing name along with the five other choices the Township has come up with."

Members of the committee, set up Friday after a public meeting where over 60 citizens gathered to register their dissatisfaction with the name-change plans, consulted with legal counsel yesterday before making their plans.

They were told council had the right to make the change if it chose, without consulting the citizens or taxpayers. They were also advised to make their own survey, obtaining the signatures of those consulted.

As a result, a team of "about 20" volunteers will be travelling the highways, byways, boulevards and back roads of Ascot Township between Wednesday November 25 and Monday November 30, asking "landowners or their representatives" to sign the alternative ballots.

Earlier this year, acting on complaints from some local businessmen, council held a contest to choose a new name for the municipality, which critics say is too easily confused with neighboring Ascot Corner. Five names were chosen, but the original name, Ascot Township, was not included in the choice. The new names suggested are Bellevue, Belvedere, Belmont, Chatel and Chanterelle.

Kingsley says his committee will present its findings to next Monday's meeting of Ascot Township council He says he is "quite sure" 60 to 70 per cent of those polled will respond in favor of retaining the present name.

"We want to give the people opposed to any change at all a chance to have a say," he adds. "Why get involved in all these unneeded expenses?"

Kingsley says his committee has other plans to oppose the change, but for now he won't reveal them. "We'll be keeping our other plans under wraps for the time being," he says. "We don't want to give our hand away."

But he does say his committee will be inviting Townshippers' Association executive-director Royal Orr to Monday's council meeting. The association organized last week's protest meeting, and Orr made a compromise suggestion which seems to appeal to both sides in the dispute. Orr observed that most of the requests for a new name had come from a newly-developed section of the township now known only as the 'Bergamin Apartments', just south of where Sherbrooke's Belvedere Street meets Lennoxville's Belvidere. He then suggested a new name be found for this part of the township, along the lines of traditional names for other localities such as Huntingville, Milby and Earlstown also found there. Mayor Robert Pouliot also invited Orr to repeat his suggestion before council.

A little humor's needed in the Arctic

Wouldn't want to put a damper on things for the younger set, but it appears Santa hasn't filed a flight plan to date. Jean Guyon, Nordair's agent in Resolute, N.W.T., confirmed the bad news last week.

"Haven't even heard any industrious sounds so far and we're only 74 miles from the Magnetic and 800 from the true North Pole," he continued. Guyon would be well suited to life in the north, when I first met him he was a Sub-Lieutenant in the RCN and, to say the least, a character. He was retired after approximately 24 years service when he was the most senior Lieutenant in all the UN navies, least of all the Canadian. Undoubtedly due to his vociferous opposition to unification of the armed forces.

His final years were in recruiting which he loved and he coined such quaint jingles as, "When times are tough and friends are few, the RCN is the place for you," or, "Spend five care-free years on the Grey Funnel Line."

I recall Jean remembering putting into Bermuda on a minesweeper when his commanding officer asked him to accompany him to a British cruiser. Jean asked permission to visit the gun room. "I knocked and asked permission to enter when this pink faced middie, whose face had never seen a razor blade, told him how to get to the wardroom. I then pointed to my one stripe. He looked at my full beard and muttered 'Good God you must be the great-grandfather of all Sub-Lieutenants!' "

Then there was the night in the "Shrine" in Montreal when he and shipmate Bucky Hanson, from Richmond, were regaling the crowd and Guyon decided to give a demonstration of a Tracker taking off from a carrier deck via a steam catapult. The only hitch was a paper match on the floor which almost propelled him into the check-room.

Conversation had to get around to weather and he reported it was minus 20 and they have approximately 1.5 hours of twilight daily at this time of the year. "Oh it's God's country," he explained. "I was driving to the nursing station with the lights on, hit a frozen rut and the horn ring caught me in the ribs."

This is a quiet period and Nordair has only two flights weekly so he's occupied shuffling paper six days a week. The social life centers around the Arctic Circle curling club and a dart league. "We'll be watching the Grey Cup and the parade which will be a bit different as the only things that parade around here are the polar bears."

He said it was a good operation and he really enjoyed the life over the past couple of years, "I'm different than most people – you should know that," was the sign-off prior to promising to meet in February when he has a period of leave. Andrew Tagok, the native agent from Pond Inlet, confirmed our marinated mariner pal was getting along famously and promoting good human relations.

Conversation everywhere is about the Parizeau budget and the comments, for the most part, aren't printable. The amazing phenomena is the reaction of formerly devout Pequistes -- irate to say the least.

Don't be too surprised if provincial roads aren't plowed overnight this winter. The Ministry of Transportation has imposed new scheduling and men who have completed their 40 hour week can't be forced to work overtime.

Just to add to the more unpleasant thoughts, a buddy with Hydro says their budget has been cut and they haven't done ample upgrading of substation facilities in the area served through the St. Hyacinthe distribution centre. Any severe sleet storms or heavy snows with high winds will undoubtedly result in large blackouts according to the source.

The Pike River at Frelighsburg... the river may be turning green with algae every fall.

River may turn green every fall

By Merritt Clifton

FRELIGHSBURG — Colder weather is expected to restore the Pike River to a normal color this week, but if the algae that turned it bright fluorescent green four times in the past month is what biologists think it is, the Pike could continue turning green each fall for years to come.

Virginia Garrison, lakes and ponds investigator for the Vermont Department of Water Resources, is currently conducting tests to identify the exact species of algae, flourishing everywhere from the Pike's headwater at Lake Carmi to Missisquoi Bay, where the river empties into Lake Champlain. Although unaware of the Pike River algal bloom before last Friday, Garrison reports that she isn't surprised. "This whole year was a very good growing year for algae," she explains. "We've had lots of it all over the state, including places I never expected to find it."

Along the Vermont-Quebec border, similar algal blooms have recently been discovered in Lake Averill, a tributary to Lake Memphremagog, and in Missisquoi Bay. The Missisquoi Bay bloom began in June and has intermittently recurred ever since.

Like Lake Carmi, Lake Averill and Missisquoi Bay are seriously afflicted with Eurasian watermilfoil. Although genetically unrelated, the unidentified microscopic algae and the thickly clumped watermilfoil appear to enjoy a symbiotic relationship, each encouraging the other to grow. To bloom enough to markedly discolor running water, algae needs warmth, light, and lots of phosphorus.

Most previous algal blooms in the Eastern Townships have been caused by septic or agricultural waste entering waterways during late summer. But the 'nutrient-pump' action of Eurasian watermilfoil provides a phosphorus supply even if no waste dumping occurs. First the milfoil sucks centuries' worth of accumulated phosphorus up from lake bottom sediments. Then, when the watermilfoil leaves clustered just beneath the surface die back in early fall, their decomposition releases phosphorus into the upper part of the lake, where the algae thrives -- and recycles phosphorus for further use by the next year's crop of milfoi.

Garrison speculates the algae, unlike milfoil, is native to Vermont and Quebec, and it has always been present in Lake Carmi and the Pike River in small amounts. This year, however, it became especially noticeable, due to a warm fall that doubled the normal growing season. Since algae reproduces at a geometrically expanding rate as long as conditions permit, the lake and river may now contain up to 10-or-20 times more algae than ever before.

Cold weather will end the algal bloom for this year. However, the watermilfoil also grew longer and more profusely than ever before in Lake Carmi. Both plants are now thoroughly distributed about the lake, ready to appear again as soon as the water warms up next spring. In addition, their decomposition under the ice this winter will help keep the water warmer than usual.

There is a possibility that an intense early algal bloom next summer could curb the milfoil growth by reducing the amount of light filtering down below the surface. On the other hand, such a bloom would cause severe oxygen depletion, killing many fish in the lake. Another unpleasant byproduct of algae is that it smells like pig-manure when concentrated in slow-moving or stagnant water. Because of this and the white froth the algae throws up in downstream rapids, Quebec investigators originally suspected Vermont farmers might be dumping manure. Farmers have no direct access to Carmi, except off one stretch of a heavily populated highway and all streams flowing into the lake are clear and clean.

A cool fall next year could diminish the algae problem, though not the milfoil. However, the trend over the past several years has been toward warmer falls, discouraging news to Pike River neighbors in Frelighsburg, Stanbridge East, and Bedford, who had banded together in hopes their green-water rapids could be made white again.

Coroner: Drowning accidental

SHERBROOKE (TB) — Coroner Michel Durand has reached a verdict of accidental drowning in the death of 40-year-old Yvon Giguere. Giguere, a resident of Sherbrooke, died when he was forced to swim for shore after his boat started to sink.

The victim was attempting to cross Lake Memphremagog with three companions when the boat, described as very old, sprung a bad leak. The motor of the craft subsequently stopped approximately 200 feet from shore and Giguere and his companions entered the water.

Sherbrooke in running for high tech industry site

SHERBROOKE (TB) — The city of Sherbrooke is on the list of possible sites for the construction of a new high technology industry which will employ more than 200 workers when in full production. This was the substance of a statement made yesterday by St. Francis MNA Real Rancourt.

Rancourt made the surprise announcement at a press conference designed to discuss the results of the first year of a government program, Batir l'Estrie. The program, which is a long range development project primarily designed to create 3,000 jobs in the Eastern Townships over the next five years, has recently completed its first year of operation with few visible results.

The final decision concerning the establishment of the plant, which will provide a market of over $500 million, will come within the next 15 days after the provincial cabinet completes negotiations guaranteeing the participation of the public sector.

Although he preferred to be deliberately vague, Rancourt did say the industry in question relies upon expertise that could be provided only by researchers at the University of Sherbrooke. Rancourt also added that at the very least Sherbrooke would be guaranteed some piece of the project.

When questioned about the lack of new jobs and the apparent failure of Batir l'Estrie in its first year of operation, Rancourt pointed out, "It is necessary to take into account the actual economic situation which is very difficult. It is also necessary to remember the project covers the years 1981-86 and we are still in 1981."

Rancourt also pointed out, although the government had not been able to create large numbers of new jobs, on the positive side, many of the 37 promises made for the Batir l'Estrie had been fulfilled. The recent acquisition of Asbestos Corporation, the developing aid to the pulp and paper industry, Quebec's new role on the board of Domtar and the continued abolition of taxes on the sale of textiles, clothing, furniture and shoes are all examples of the program's success.

Rancourt says the project is a qualified success and added, "For myself, I have read the document 'Batir l'Estrie' very thoroughly. I think I can say that I am satisfied with all we have obtained so far, while realizing there remains a lot to do."

Townships talk

SHERBROOKE (TB) — The city of Sherbrooke has announced its willingness to construct a new arena on the city's fair grounds if the Eastern Townships Agriculture Association agrees to give up their charter and to form a corporation with the city.

The proposed corporation would then sign an agreement with the city much like that between the city and the municipal airport.

The corporation would consist of three representatives of the ETAA, two members of city council, one city bureaucrat, representatives of the provincial and federal agriculture departments, and one member from each of the Chamber of Commerce, the office of tourism and the various social organizations of the city.

WOTTON (SM) — Police have released the names of the victims of a double murder which occurred here late Wednesday night as Manon Turcotte, 22, and Gaston Tardif, 45, though he was earlier thought to be in his twenties also.

The police have also named Real Pinard, 38, as a suspect in the slayings. Police believe a squabble over the sale of a picture frame which Pinard had told Tardif was a valuable antique when in actuality, it was made of plastic, led to the shooting.

According to witnesses, Tardif, accompanied by Turcotte, searched out Pinard at the Hotel Central in Wotton where he was a regular customer.

A heated argument over the antique frame started in the bar and continued on out into the parking lot where the victims were shot.

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Pierre Lachance, of Granby, pleaded guilty to 25 counts of having been illegally at large from the Sweetsburg Jail after he had been oredered to serve a discontinued term of 90 days. Claude Hamann told the court he felt the interests of justice would be well served with six months firm imprisonment and his suggestion was endorsed by Crown attorney Claude Noiseux. Judge Legare sentenced Lachance to six months, concurrent on each count.

Most refreshing

It was most refreshing to see something positive come down the pike from Ottawa Sunday, namely the Rough Riders. Underdogs all the way, they fought their way to the lead and almost won to the delight of some of the fans in the "Big Owe" and undoubtedly many others parked in front of television sets across the country.

The team on Parliament Hill, with a hefty majority, seem to be driving wedges from coast to coast destroying the infrastructure of our country. Yet, when a team composed of Canadians and Americans gives us a sense of national unity, if only for one day, there has to be a message somewhere.

The politicians in Ottawa and the provincial capitals survive, despite anti-pollution laws, on tainted hot air fed to the electorate in the form of promises with very little subsequent positive action.

Football and politics still have something in common as the annual Grey Cup does more to foster Canadian unity than any other event on an annual basis. The players pull together in the trenches of the game while the politicians still maintain the only positive way to rule is the opposite — divide and conquer.

Many of the heroes of the annual bash have been those from south of the border who chose to remain here and contributed greatly to the development of Canada following their retirement. The fact they came, were accepted and adopted should surely be an indication we are a bigger and more magnificent country than many of our pols would like us to believe.

One thing remains certain — if the politicians showed as much grit, pardon the pun, trying to solve the multitude of problems assailing the population as the Rough Riders did under tremendous odds winning at least a moral victory, we would be a much better country.

Nobody likes gossip, but we all like to read it

TORONTO (CP) — The Jimmy Carters don't like it. Pierre Trudeau can't stand it. Even the folks who make their living from it won't always admit it.

Though few will publicly confess to a predilection for it, somehow, the rise of rumor-as-news is gaining a popular following.

Most North American newspapers (some more hesitantly than others) have succumbed to the circulation-bumping appeal of the gossip column, treating their readers to a variety of "people" pages, celebrity profiles, "ear" columns or, as syndicated journalist Allan Fotheringham calls them, three dot columns.

Fotheringham, whose own chatty Ottawa-scene column appears in papers across the country as well as Maclean's magazine, defines gossip as anything the rest of the paper doesn't report, "the interesting stuff."

"Call it gossip if you like," he says. "In my own case, I prefer the word 'background'."

Gary Dunford, the Toronto Sun's Page 6 columnist, who says he blanched when he first saw himself described as a gossip, now accepts the label. But he would rather be called a reporter "who trades in unauthorized news."

In Washington, Diana McClellan, the popular "Ear" writer, has no problem coming up with enough juicy material for four columns a week. But Ottawa, though constantly awash with rumor, has nothing approaching the wickedness of the Ear.

The columns of The Globe and Mail's Pauline King are generally considered to fall into the category of society coverage. The Ottawa Citizen's Kelly Howard contributes a weekly round-up in Kelly's Society that skates the line between dinner party guest lists and coverage of sundry other social events.

The only rumor-monger in the country who will admit he gossips for a living is the Montreal Gazette's Tommy Schnurmacher, whose name-dropping is so popular with English-language readers that he now has a syndicated radio show.

Richard Ingrams, editor of the scandal-soaked London magazine Private Eye, says journalism has an "absolute right" to nose in on the private lives of public figures.

Private Eye sells throughout the world, even though non-British readers often don't have a clue about who's being pinpricked because the magazine uses code names and phrases to keep writ-servers at bay.

Ingrams's biggest fear is being hoodwinked by a source who has an axe to grind though the magazine often runs stories he knows are incomplete.

"The readers always supply us with the rest of the details. We are very dependent on our readers."

He's not alone. The Sun's Dunford receives 80 to 100 calls a day, some from his network of 25 "official" helpers, the majority from virtual strangers.

"But after four years I've developed a nose to sniff out the malicious ones. I'm not out to hurt anyone with gossip. I play it for laughs."

He double-checks the source of an item as well as the item itself and employs his own lawyer and his newspaper's legal services whenever anything seems potentially libelous.

PCs can't forget their few government glory days

By Alison Hare

OTTAWA (CP) — Try as they might, the Progressive Conservatives haven't been able to completely put behind them the memories of their brief nine months in government.

In response to a call from Opposition Leader Joe Clark, they have had some success recently in moving away from the "when-we-were-in-power" image that has bedeviled them since their defeat in the February, 1980, election.

But it seems the Liberals, like elephants, never forget.

In fact, they delight in reminding the Conservatives about their embarrassingly-swift fall from power.

Clark called for the fresh look two months ago when he shuffled his shadow cabinet, giving new jobs to several people who — like former finance minister John Crosbie — had been party spokesman in one area for more than two years.

At the same time, however, some members of the new shadow cabinet have been slow to warm up.

Crosbie, now external affairs critic, has refused to come out of the finance closet while the Liberals continue to rub his nose in his December, 1979, budget, which led to the Conservative's defeat.

"Maybe if he had learned earlier to deal with facts, he might not be where he is today," Finance Minister Allan MacEachen taunted last week.

A week earlier, the Conservatives fell into an old trap again, calling on Industry Minister Herb Gray to fulfil a 1979 promise to resign if interest rates went above 14 per cent.

Over howls from the Tories, Gray refused, saying he has a responsibility to ensure the Conservatives "do not get in office again and have another chance to damage the economy as they already started to do before they were thrown out by the Canadian people."

MOVING SLOWLY

The Conservatives have moved away slowly, however, from the "our budget was better than your budget" approach that used to leave them open constantly to such jibes.

After their return to the opposition benches, they spent 1½ years urging the Liberals to implement pet Conservative proposals, including their mortgage-interest deductability and property tax credit scheme.

But since the fall sitting of Parliament began in October, they have rarely mentioned the ill-fated budget.

The longest-running argument — over energy prices — has also cooled recently.

When the Liberals toppled the Clark administration, they promised voters they would keep the cost of energy below the prices set by the Crosbie budget. The Conservatives accuse the government of having broken that promise. But the Liberals say they have not and it is hard to tell who is right.

One of the few bright lights for the Conservatives has been Crosbie's successor in the finance slot, former energy critic Michael Wilson, who has concentrated sharply on new alternatives to the government's economic policies.

But the new critics have often been forced to take a back seat to their predecessors, particularly transport critic Pat Nowlan.

Former transport minister Don Mazankowski, who was chairman of summer-long Conservative hearings on proposed railway passenger service cuts, has led the charge on this high-profile issue.

Former health minister David Crombie has maintained a low profile in his new job as labor critic, as has Jim Hawkes, the MP for Calgary West who took his place.

Jane's book shows Soviets deal better

LONDON (AP) — Soviet and U.S. military spending is about the same but the Soviets get more value for their money, says the authoritative Jane's Weapon Systems 1981-82, published Monday.

Ronald Pretty, editor of the 1,006-page volume on weapons systems around the world, writes in a foreword that on the U.S. side, where the 1981 defence budget totalled $171.4 billion:

— The B-52 bomber has been in service for 20 years and the last new aircraft of this type was delivered in 1962.

— The present Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile force was first deployed in December, 1962 and was joined by the Titan system in 1963.

— The U.S. Navy still hasn't put its first Trident submarine to sea in fighting trim with Trident missiles on board, although the Trident missile itself is operational in some Poseidon-carrying submarines.

DRAWS COMPARISON

Pretty writes compared with this record, the Soviet Union in the same period:

— Put into service a whole new family of land-based ICBMs and has since replaced them with newer models.

— Equipped its air forces with the "impressive" Backfire supersonic bomber.

— Deployed the multiple-warhead SS-20 medium range ballistic missile;

— Put to sea new submarines, surface ships and missiles.

— Issued its army the T-72 main battle tank and improved anti-aircraft missile systems and anti-tank weapons.

"We have no way of knowing what projects have been dropped by the U.S.S.R.," Pretty said. "But within the period covering the above developments, the U.S.A. cancelled two supersonic strategic bombers (B-70 in 1961, and the B-1 shelved by President Carter) and the mobile Minuteman project, dismantled the Safeguard ABM (anti-ballistic missile) system, and withdrew 1,000 nuclear warheads from Europe between June and December of 1980."

Unlike their western counterparts, Soviet leaders run no risk of being voted out of office if heavy military spending proves unpopular among Soviet citizens, said Pretty. He said the Soviets use the arms race as an "economic weapon" against the West. He said the Soviets' military programs "exert pressure on the western economic system by forcing it to undertake increasingly expensive military programs."

Pretty said present worldwide annual expenditure on arms is about $500 billion.

Letters

Don't let us become a bunch of jackals

Editor:

This is an open letter to all Canadians. I was just thinking how we in Quebec all sit around and bemoan the fact that we are being trampled by the Parti Quebecois through their paranoiac ideas, which they are putting into law and when someone like Allan Singer stands up and tries to do something constructive about it, we just expect him to fall flat on his face. This is one long sentence, but it gushes out in one long impatient breath!

The whole business of two founding nations and French versus English is utter nonsense. I am sure our founding fathers did not foresee a future of selfish people grabbing for wealth and power and looking at our great country only as a place to get it.

By the way the French and English went back and forth across the English Channel you can't tell me our actual blood is very different. As far as language goes, French and English are mixed too.

All through the last few centuries French and English have battled one another. They seemed to enjoy it. I don't consider this was very good, but it didn't cause the end of the world.

Today is different! We have other enemies who seem to take a very devilish form. All over the world today people are fighting one another for different reasons — not necessarily country against country, but faction against faction within a country.

It almost appears as though some force is trying to get the people of the earth to destroy themselves — some call it communism, some call it mafia and some call it plain greed — I call it satan!

A few years ago I would have laughed if someone said that, but I'm not laughing now!

We are not French or English, Indian or any other ethnic group — we are Canadian! We don't still refer to ourselves as the tribe of Israel or Romans or Greek, etc., so we should modernize one more step and be Canadian — and be proud of it!

We have a wonderful country and wonderful people of all ethnic groups in it and I, personally, squirm very much when I hear about two founding nations. Hogwash! We are still building our nation — I hope! And it is taking people from all over the world to do it. Each adding his or her bit to build, not destroy.

So, I beg of every Canadian to do as President Kennedy advised his people to do. To think of what we can do for our country, not what we hope to get from it. You can't take your possessions or body with you when you die (which we all do sooner or later) but you can take your soul, so, for your own and humanity's sake, look after it! Don't let us become a bunch of jackals fighting for last crumb.

Please let us try to get our values straight, and remember, "United we stand, divided we fall".

Strong exception to tone and innuendo

Editor:

I would like to take strong exception to the tone and innuendo of C. Bury's article re- tickets for Church Supper and the print shop at Alexander Galt.

Your article failed to mention the many organizations which have availed themselves of the facilities at Galt; both teachers involved have been more than cooperative on numerous occasions in printing, meeting deadlines, arranging delivery, etc. of tickets for all local associations and-or groups.

I find it unusual that some young person is quoted verbatum in a front page article, and yet the people being criticized are not given the courtesy of any input whatsoever! Perhaps C. Bury could arrange a visit to the print shop, see how efficiently it does work, how much work the students taking the course do produce before condemning all the people involved with the printing of the said tickets.

It might be also interesting to find out how many local groups have benefited directly from the A.G.R.H.S. photo-lithography department by way of invitations, calendars, cards, posters, as well as tickets.

A piece of malicious intent

Editor:

Will you kindly convey my sympathies and condolences to that young man of tender years, 14 to be exact, who was recently bereft of his closest friend. I refer to the completely assinine killing of the young man's collie dog, right in, and on his own homestead, a classic example of complete and unnecessary idiocy, prescribed in the extreme by supposedly intelligent human beings elected by the very people they have elected to control their lives, present, past and future!

I can sympathize with this young man, as I was subjected to the same type of manifestation by having my best dog deliberately run down at my gate on Sugarloaf Road as a piece of malicious intent because I had exposed a massive poachers' area on the property I was renting. Thus, I had to leave or be destroyed myself. I would point out that these poachers resided not too far down the road from where I lived! Someday there will be a reckoning.

Again, young man, I weep with you.

Quebec entries stiff competition at Royal Winter

By Claudia Bowers

TORONTO — Quebec entries, although not so numerous in other sections were nonetheless stiff competition at the Royal. Jersey, sheep, swine, and beef animals took home top honors in many sections, with the success story of the year going home to South Durham and the Carson farm and their Junior Champion Holstein Heifer.

Jocelyn Cote, winner of many championship ribbons with his Hampshire sheep during the show season in the Eastern Townships took top honors at the Royal this year with a ram whose quality has won at local exhibitions all summer. Cote, also a South Durham native and first cousin to Norman Carson of Holstein fame, is barely 20 years old, and has been showing seriously for about three years. Son of Real Cote, well-known cattle dealer, who also exhibits hackney horses, Jocelyn is only one member of a family that has branched into dairy cattle as well as exhibited in the Holstein section at the Royal.

Jersey exhibitors from the Eastern Townships also did well, with Rainbow Hill, A.G. and A.D. McKinven and Bonnyburn farms placing in the top of the list in most classes. Rainbow Hill farm, property of Sam Pollock and family, North Hatley, won the Progeny of Dam award. Two Jersey heifers and a cow broke the $4,000 mark at the Royal Canadian Jersey Sale the day before show-day, with Barry Little, Markham, Ontario getting $4,500. the highest price ever paid in Canada for an open embryo transplant heifer.

Breeders from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Alberta, British Columbia and the US purchased the 26 lots, making an average price of $2,511.

Hereford exhibitors from Quebec found competition was very keen, as they faced competitors from the western provinces. Nevertheless, Ranch Lougami, Asbestos; Ferme Saguenay, Quebec City; and even a herd from l'Ile d'Orleans placed well into the top half of classes with Ranch Lougami winning first in the class for Hereford heifers born between April 1, 1980, and December 31, 1980.

At the Royal sales where the top beef, on the hoof, by the carcass, and for the first time, beef-in-a-box is sold by auction, prices paid were the highest ever. George Earley, Kerwood, Ontario won the beef-in-a-box competition topping a class of 40 other steers. This particular class starts at Ontario Public Stock Yards where entries are slaughtered, cut, trimmed and boxed. The idea behind the box emphasizes the relationship of live value to the yield of saleable meat in a carcass. The new class attempts to identify the carcass that yields the greatest quantity of meat of acceptable quality. Dominion Stores paid $14.50 per pound for the Grand Champion Market Steer and $13.50 per pound for the Royal's Grand Champion Steer Carcass.

At the biggest Simmental sale ever held at the Royal, a bred full-blood female consigned by M & J Farms, Russell, Manitoba brought $7,000. Average price for the 43 lots was $2,820. Shorthorn buyers were more fortunate, as the highest price paid was $2,650 for a bull owned by S.G. Bennett, Georgetown, Ontario. Top selling female brought $2,100 to a Woodville, Ontario breeder, with the 19 lots bringing an average of $1,227.63.

Tisdale's in control

By Claudia Bowers

TORONTO — The pin-ups, wearing nothing but a few straps and perhaps a rosette ribbon are everywhere by the time the final day rolls around. The pictures line the walls of the beehive and are only one of the projects in the capable hands of Linda Tisdale, the energetic woman in charge of the press room at the Royal Winter Fair.

The pin-ups are the newly-named champions in the hundreds of categories of poultry, swine, horses and agricultural products competing for the coveted championships at this fair of fairs. Tisdale, the guiding light behind all the programming which must go into preparing competitors' and winners' prize lists during the exhibition, remains surprisingly calm in the bedlam.

I arrived, wondering if anyone would remember the tiny Eastern Townships paper that is sometimes buried under media coverage that spans the nation, and the world. My doubts were totally unfounded. Clive Tisdale came with a welcome handshake, extending his greetings to the E.T. and Linda, his daughter brought out coffee and warm hospitality as we talked of our coverage last year.

Linda has been working in the press room for six years, and during the past three, has been her father's 'girl Friday'. In a section of the buildings, where passageways, curtained walls, and mysteriously closed doors present a maze to the uninitiated, Linda answers queries from media people from all over the world. Breed associations, horse show organizers and international participants in competitions must all come to her attention at some point. Prize lists are typed and xeroxed as quickly as possible, a copy of each new sheet placed in each media file, photos recorded, numbered and pinned to the boards, media meetings and social events organized, and the occasional lost fairgoer all find their way by Linda's desk.

"I love my work," she smiled.

Linda Tisdale... manager of the Press Room at the Royal.

Tisdale is thinking seriously of moving on after this year's Royal. "It seems impossible to imagine not being swept up in the four-month whirl of getting the publicity end of the Royal in motion, and working with my Dad, and the Tisdale Agency, but, perhaps the folly of youth has attacked me, and now I would like to see what else the world has to offer."

But, then, after answering four phone calls, running for information from various files innumerable times, and directing more than one confused media person to the right location, Tisdale chuckled hopefully, "Perhaps I'll find something to do that will allow me four months a year to come back to the magic of the Royal."

Royal records fall by the wayside

By Claudia Bowers

TORONTO — It's not a place for the faint-hearted. Temperatures soared the first weekend of the Royal Winter Fair, turning every hotel room and elevator into a sauna bath, causing discomfort to participants, both animal and otherwise.

Flowers in one of the most beautiful displays ever seen at the Royal barely held their blooms up after three days of overheated showrooms, cattle sheep, goats and swine panted for air and spectators struggled with winter clothing, removing as much as they dared.

In spite of the unseasonable temperatures, both indoors and out, more people than ever visited the 1981 Royal, entries were up and records fell by the wayside daily.

Exhibitors came from across Canada with a record number of entries from Quebec, especially in the Ayrshire cattle section. Some 153 head broke records made in 1969, and about 50 per cent of these were Quebec cattle. Alex McCaig, Ormstown; Yvan Lussier and Marcel Rondeau, Victoriaville; S.A. Mount and A. Barr, Brome; Oscar Vaillancourt & Sons, St. Chrysostome; Remi Hebert, Valere; Guy Fournier, St. Valere; Robert E. and Larry Ness, Howick; Roger Beaudry, Granby; Jean-Marie Roy, St. Pierre de Broughton; Kenneth MacGillivray, Brome; Marcellin Therrien and Yvon Pepin, Arthabaska; Charles-Emile Bilodeau, St. Agapit; Ken Roy, Howick; Francois Pheonix, Marieville; Brodie MacFarlane, Howick; Karen Ness, Franklin Center; Damien Lemire, Notre Dame du Bon Conseil; Ferme Legace et Fils, St. Hyacinthe and W.R. MacKennie & Sons, Wyman, Quyon, were all exhibitors from this province. Marcel Rondeau, Jean Marie Roy and S.A. Mount took home first prize ribbons, and the S.A. Mount & A. Barr exhibit won the reserve champion female award as well as the Westgate Farm Trophy for first prize dry cow.

At the Ayrshire sale earlier, an international yearling heifer brought the highest price of $6,000. The animal was consigned by Syndicat Ayrshire de Richelieu, Vercheres and purchased jointly by Senator Harry Hays of Calgary and Donald S. Rose, Mountain, Ontario.

Second highest price was paid for a four-year-old cow consigned by R. Brodie Macfarlane of Howick, 15 animals brought a total of $40,590, giving an average of $2,706. Because of the heavy concentration of Ayrshire cattle in Quebec, the Royal's annual Ayrshire sale is bilingual and was conducted by Jules Cote, well-known auctioneer from Cowansville.

Diehard Eskimo fans give Grey Cup winners a hero's welcome

EDMONTON (CP) — Jason Homyshin sat in his wheelchair waiting for placekicker Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos.

Harriett Adams, who only admits to being over 21 but has been involved with the team since 1949, wanted a kiss from her "Tommy lad," quarterback Tom Wilkinson.

The two were only part of the more than 150 exuberant fans waiting for the Grey Cup champion Eskimos to arrive at Edmonton International Airport on Monday.

Homyshin, a 14-year-old cerebral palsy victim with a 160 intelligence quotient, is incapable of movement or speech, but lets his affection for the Eskimos be known. He had brought with him a letter he painstakingly typed for Cutler.

"I had five heart attacks through the game and I almost went hoarse," the carefully-typed letter read.

"Thanks for saying 'Hi' to me on the tube. I almost had heart attack six."

Jason's mother, Josie, said Cutler and Wilkinson are friends of the Homyshin family.

"Jason looks up to Dave like a very special friend," she said.

GREETS FRIEND

When the flight from Montreal arrived, the man who kicked the winning field goal with only three seconds remaining did not ignore his friend. Cutler stopped to give Jason a large kiss.

"He's typed me two-and three-page letters before," Cutler said after reading the note.

"It's flawless typing and when you are doing it with the knuckle on your thumb, then it's something pretty special."

Jason is not the only member of the Homyshin family who is an Eskimo fan. His parents have season tickets and his nine-year-old sister, Janet, accompanies him to the wheelchair section of Commonwealth Stadium.

Upon arriving, the Eskimos filed through the crowd. Most stopped to shake Jason Homyshin's hand or kiss his check. It was difficult for Josie Homyshin to retain her emotion.

"Football is just part of our lives," she said.

"We can't do other things like a lot of families can. I just love our team."

IS ESKIE SUPPORTER

Adams has been an Eskimo supporter since 1949, when she tried to sell season tickets for the team.

"Can you imagine that in this day and age?" she asked.

She had arrived to Edmonton at 3 a.m. Monday from the Grey Cup game in Montreal on Sunday. She was covered from head to toe in Eskimo green and gold with almost every conceivable team button. She pointed proudly to a badge from the 1949 club among the other mementoes of past glories.

There were a few tense moments as the Eskimos fell behind Ottawa Rough Riders, Adams said. But when she saw her hero take the field, the worries disappeared.

"When Wilkie went in for a little while, I knew it would be all right then."

Wilkinson is well aware of the support he receives from the smiling lady who uses two canes to walk.

He said his physical appearance led to the name "Tommy lad."

"There must be something about my fat little body."

Jolinda LaPuch, a 15-year-old Edmonton resident, stood holding a rose, a present for Larry Highbaugh. The tradition started last year when she presented her favorite Eskimo with the flower after the team's third consecutive Grey Cup victory. This year, she made sure Highbaugh had a rose when he boarded the flight to Montreal.

Falcon comeback sinks Vikings

ATLANTA (AP) — Steve Bartkowski fired two third-quarter touchdown passes and Buddy Curry capped a comeback with a 35-yard interceptioh return for another TD in the final quarter as Atlanta Falcons downed Minnesota Vikings 31-30 in a National Football League game Monday night.

Curry's return gave the Falcons a 31-21 lead and immediately after Atlanta gave up an intentional safety, Tommy Kramer hurled his fourth touchdown pass of the game for the Vikings, a 16-yarder to Joe Senser with 1:07 left, to chop Atlanta's margin to one point.

Atlanta recovered the ensuing onside kick and ran out the clock.

The Falcons, trailing 21-7 after a lacklustre first-half performance in which the Vikings picked their defence apart, got back in the game with a swarming defence that shut down Minnesota in the third quarter, holding the Vikings to only 15 yards.

Bartkowski cut the 14-point halftime margin to 21-14 when he connected with Junior Miller on a three-yard scoring pass on Atlanta's first possession of the second half.

Bartkowski came right back three minutes later and nailed Wallace Francis with a 29-yard scoring toss that tied the game with 7:24 left in the third quarter.

A 32-yard field goal by Mick Luckhurst put Atlanta ahead to stay early in the final quarter and Curry came through with his first interception of the season for the clinching touchdown with 4:06 left in the game.

The victory evened Atlanta's record at 6-6 and kept the Falcons alive in the race for a National Conference wild-card playoff berth. Minnesota fell to 7-5 and saw its Central Division lead drop to only one game over Tampa Bay and Detroit.

Kramer connected on three passes for 37 yards in an 89-yard drive that gave Minnesota an early 7-0 lead when he hit Ahmad Rashad on a six-yard scoring pass.

After Bartkowski and Alfred Jackson combined on an eight-yarder to tie the game late in the opening quarter, Kramer came back to build the Vikings' two-touchdown halftime advantage, first hitting Rashad on a 42-yard scoring play and then connecting with Bob Bruer on a three-yarder only 48 seconds before intermission.

HAD CHANCE

The Vikings could have had a much greater halftime lead, but failed to take advantage of two fumble recoveries in Atlanta teritory, the first at the 47 when the offence failed to get anything going and the second at the Falcons' 28, only to see Kramer yield an interception in the end zone to Tom Pridemore.

Minesota also wasted an impressive 86-yard drive that bogged down at the Atlanta nine with less than six minutes remaining in the first half.

Rick Danmeier came off the bench to attempt a 27-yard field goal, but never had a chance when holder Keith Nord lost his grip on the ball and Danmeier managed only to dribble the ball about 10 yards.

Atlanta, which led the NFL in rushing defence before the game, gave up its first individual 100-yard performance of the year to Ted Brown, who had 108 on 16 carries, including consecutive runs of 24 and 29 yards in the Vikings' first scoring drive.

With his three scoring passes, Bartkowski moved into a tie for the NFL lead at 27 with San Diego's Dan Fouts.

Bartkowski finished with 21 completions in 32 attempts for 219 yards and Kramer was 24 of 47 for 332 yards, but had four intercepted.

NHL: 210 games

Jets most improved team

The National Hockey League schedule reached the one-quarter mark with the 210th game Saturday night. When six teams were playing 70-game schedules, 210 games accounted for an entire season.

Winnipeg Jets have a 9-8-3 won-lost-tied record for 21 points and third place in the Norris Division. The Jets have tripled their points total of the same stage of the 1980-81 season, when they were 1-14-5.

The Jets, plus 14 in points compared with their total after the same number of games last year, already have equalled their victory total for all of last season.

Edmonton Oilers entered their game Monday night against Detroit Red Wings at plus 12, the same figure as Quebec Nordiques. Boston Bruins are plus 11 and Detroit plus nine.

Pittsburgh Penguins are plus seven, Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers both plus six and Montreal Canadiens plus five.

ALSO HAVE IMPROVED

The other teams who have improved their points totals are New York Islanders, by two, and Minnesota North Stars and Buffalo Sabres, by one each.

Nine teams are down from a year ago. Hartford Whalers have dipped three points, Vancouver Canucks four, Toronto Maple Leafs seven and Calgary Flames eight.

The Flames, who lost five games at home all last season, have a 4-4-3 record at the Stampede Corral.

Philadelphia Flyers and Washington Capitals are both minus nine, and Colorado Rockies, who can ill afford it, are minus 10.

St. Louis Blues, second in the overall standings in 1980-81, are minus 12, and Los Angeles Kings, coming off a season in which they finished fourth overall, are last in the comparisons at minus 13.

Meanwhile, Edmonton super-centre Wayne Gretzky is scoring goals at a pace of better than one a game, with 23 in his team's first 22 outings. With 25 assists as well, Gretzky's totals projected to an 80-game season of 83 goals and 90 assists for 173 points.

The toughest division in the NHL under its new, unbalanced schedule? The Adams Division of Boston, Quebec, Montreal, Buffalo and Hartford. Combined, they've posted a 36-19-12 record against clubs from other sections.

Cougars trounce Abbott

MONTREAL (AR) — Champlain hockey Cougars finally showed they could score goals Friday when they thrashed John Abbott 13-3.

"The first 10 minutes of the game was the best hockey I have seen us play to date," said Cougar coach Rod McKell. "When we skate, pass and hit we are an excellent team, but when we don't we're just ordinary."

Champlain scored five goals in the first 10 minutes. They outshot Abbott 40-30 during the game. Cougar goal scorers were: Martin Leblanc (2), Phil Huckins (2), Noel Bolduc (2), Kevin Moore (2), Pierre Dodier (2), Chris Lynn, Bruce Forbes and Pierre Dion.

Champlain plays their next home game Friday against Victoriaville.

Boxing returns to Sherbrooke

By Timothy Belford

SHERBROOKE — Amateur boxing comes back to Sherbrooke Wednesday night as the Club de Boxe du CAP puts on a 12-fight card at the Palais des Sports starting at 8 p.m.

Featuring a variety of local boxers, the evening will be highlighted by a final pitting CAP club boxer Pierre Gagne, two time golden gloves winner, against Frank Baltazar from the Olympic Boxing Club of Montreal. Prior to the welterweight final, there will be a two semi-finals. The first will have Jean Allaire from Sherbrooke meeting Daniel Meigs of Coaticook and the second will have 12-year-old gloves winner Steve Lafond putting his undefeated record on the line.

Bruce Morrison, president of the Club de boxe du CAP, says "it may seem funny featuring 12-year-olds in a semi-final but the technique is just the kind of thing you want to see in boxing."

The club also plans two more fight nights after Christmas. One of these cards will hopefully see a rematch of last year's highly successful Quebec-Ontario match-up. Morrison also assured The Record last week that the fighting Hilton family of Montreal will be returning to the Palais des Sports after the holiday season.

WI meeting

LENNOXVILLE — The members of Lennoxville Women's Institute held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. Harold Worster, with Mrs. Sterling Parker presiding. The meeting was opened with the Collect and the Salute to the Flag repeated in unison. A moment's silence was observed in tribute to the dead of the World Wars, followed by a reading on the history of the poppy as a symbol for Remembrance Day.

Motto for the month: "What a man does for himself dies with him - what he does for his community lives on." Roll call - wear a poppy and give a donation to the Cancer Gift Fund was responded to by eleven members.

Routine businesses included the minutes of the previous meeting, the treasurer's report and several items of correspondence.

Convenors' Reports - Agriculture - Mrs. George Povey read an interesting article on Insects vs. Insecticides, and "The Farmer's Prayer."

Citizenship - Miss Kathleen Atto discussed several items currently in the news, including the Constitution talks, the recent death of Mde. Therese Casgrain, the fact that in a recent survey of countries' standards of living Canada ranked seventh, and the news that Princess Diana was expecting a child next summer.

Education - Mrs. Dorothy Geddes had for display a calendar on which each page had a copy of a painting done by a handicapped person.

Home Economics - Mrs. Hugh Wallace thanked the members for their generous donations to the Sales Table at the Christmas Bazaar.

Publicity - Mrs. Harold Worster had reported the last meeting to the press and the Country Convenor. The recent Bazaar and Supper had been publicized by posters, notices in the newspaper and radio announcements.

Welfare and Health - Mrs. Wilson Beattie reported a very busy day at the last Cancer Dressing Day, when six members made 600 dressings. She reminded members that the next work day would be November 30, at which time the money collected for the gifts for cancer patients would be presented to Mrs. Cloutier. She also took this opportunity to congratulate the four young ladies who so efficiently waited on table at our Christmas supper.

Ways and Means - Mrs. Harold Worster expressed her appreciation to all the members who were so generous in their contributions of food and worked so diligently at the Bazaar and Supper. Special thanks was extended to the several non-members assisting so ably in various ways.

Sunshine - Miss Kathleen Atto had no report of members who were ill; Telephone - Mrs. Wilson Beattie and her committee had contacted all members.

A full report on the quarterly County Meeting held at Brompton Road was given by the delegate, Mrs. Harold Worster. Interesting items regarding the A.C.W.W. were read by Mrs. Gerald Cascadden.

Plans were made for the December meeting when guests will be entertained and Christmas baskets for shut-ins arranged for.

There being no further business the meeting was adjourned. Members gathered round a tempting display of food items which were to be sold to the highest bidders in a silent auction. The funds realized from this sale are to be this branch's contribution to the A.C.W.W. Flag Tour, for Pennies for Friendship.,

To bring to a close a busy and productive afternoon, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Herman Edgecombe and Mrs. Harold Worster.

The guest speaker, Dr. Ronald Reeve, was introduced by Mr. Frank Jenne Dr. Reeve was born in Bromley, Kent, England, became a choirboy at the age of eight and started playing the organ at 14. In 1941, he was accepted for the Royal Air Force and came to Canada to train as a navigator. While in Quebec City he met his wife, Val. After the war, Dr. Reeve went to Oxford University to study theology, where he obtained four degrees, ending eventually with a PhD. In 1951, he was ordained a priest in the Church of England and after four years of parish work, came back to Canada and to Bishop's University. Dr. Reeve is professor of religion at Bishop's University.

Dr. Reeve referred to life as a school, with the learning process never ending. His sound advice was to go through life reading and listening, for that is how we learn. After we have listened, then we must make up our own minds and speak them. Dr. Reeve captivated his audience with his subtle humour.

Dr. Reeve was thanked for his encouragement and advice by Michael Cassidy, president of the student council.

Compton County Museum annual report

By Myrtle Murray

The Compton County Museum which is under the control and supervision of the Compton County Historical and Museum Society, was organized in 1959, and is housed in two buildings, a former church building now owned by the Society; secondly, the Old Eaton Academy, presently owned by the Municipality of Eaton, and through whose kindness, two floors are presently loaned to the Museum. These two buildings date respectively from 1841 and 1824, and have been declared as Historical Sites by the Provincial Government.

Acquisitions — Many gifts and articles were received during the year, including school equipment, with desks dating prior to 1855, from friends in Marbleton These and many other articles were given to the Museum by the kindness of our many friends, to whom we express our sincere thanks.

Displays — Two special displays were featured this year. The first during May, June and July was "In Defence of Freedom, while the second in August, September and October, was based on the theme, "The Sports and Amusements of Yester-years." Also there was a larger Indian display.

Education — Many school classes visited the expositions, and guided tours were always available to classes and to the public. CEGEP and University students were welcomed and aided in their projects.

Genealogy — Many visitors were interested in our family records and in other genealogical information. It is extimated that at least 80 visitors were aided in this field alone.

The Museum was open to the public each and every day from May 1st to November 1st. The attendance was at a slightly higher level than in the previous year, in spite of the highway construction, detours, etc.

Our thanks go to the visiting public who came from all parts of the Province of Quebec, from most of the other Provinces of Canada, fourteen States of the U.S.A., five countries of Europe, and several countries of the far east; to the Department of Cultural Affairs of the Province of Quebec for their helpful assistance, financial technically, and publicity. This is greatly appreciated by the directorate of the Museum, as it permits the operation of the Museum on a set budget, and allows the Museum to fulfill its functions of preservation, research, exposition, education and publication; to the Tourist Bureau of the Eastern Townships for their interest, publicity and tour visits; to the newspapers of the Eastern Townships for excellent publicity; to the guides at the Museum for the capable way in which they met the public and carried out their many other duties, and our thanks to the Directors and to the many people who helped when needed.

As in any other growing public enterprise that is not financially oriented, growth itself created new challenges and needs, including additional building space to properly house the articles now being received, and to purchase and exhibit the largest private collection of antiques in the County, which collection, if it is not obtained, will be lost to this area of the Province where it belongs.

The continued interest and devoted services of our Curator, W.S. Laberee, is much appreciated by the Directors and the public-at-large.

WATERLOO
Alice Ashton

Mrs. Elaine St. Pierre of Elgin, Ont., and Mrs. Ruth McKergow of Montreal were recently calling on their grandmother, Mrs. Annie Daine at the Courville Nursing Home.

After being a patient, since January at the Waterloo Hospital, Mr. A.T. Barnes passed away on Nov. 15, in his 94th year.

Mrs. Gladys Lord, who has been a surgical patient in Sherbrooke Hospital, has returned to the Courville Nursing Home.

The Christmas Sale and tea, sponsored by St. Luke's Church Women, on Nov. 12 proved very successful, both socially and financially. All tables were well patronized and everyone seemed to enjoy the salads and sweets. Miss Jocelyn Lawrence was the lucky winner of the door prize, which was a hat and scarf set. Tickets were sold on a set of jewellery, this being won by Mrs. Reg. Peasley of Bolton Centre, a box of groceries by Maud McGovern and other items of home cooking and groceries was won by Myrtle McLellan of South Stukely. The ladies wish to thank all who helped in any way with this event.

On Nov. 4, Mrs. Annie Daine of the Courville Nursing Home observed her 90th birthday. Her daughter, Iris Peasley of Sherbrooke, along with other friends, visited her and brought their good wishes. During the afternoon tea was served including the usual birthday cake made specially by their capable chef. Included in the messages of congratulations was one from Canada's Gov.-General. Mrs. Daine wishes to thank all who remembered her with cards and good wishes.

After being a surgical patient, for several days, in Sherbrooke Hospital, Mr. Oval McGovern has returned home.

Mr. George Young, Sr., who was in Sherbrooke Hospital for a couple of days came home on Nov. 14.

ANAF card party

LENNOXVILLE (MD) — On Nov. 18, there were seventeen tables in play at the regular Wednesday afternoon card party.

Before starting to play, Ruby Berry welcomed all, and mentioned some more newcomers, so gave out the rules. A get-well card was signed for one of our card players who has been unable to come this year and who has been missed and recently in hospital.

First prize, score of 6520 went to Roy Johnston; second prize, score of 6420, Ken Muir; Consolation, score 2240, Lillian Squire.

Nine Spade bids, Joan Smith had her name down four times, so won a prize; Four of heart tricks with her name down four times went to Lillian Learned.

Noel Humphries had been selling tickets on a box of groceries and two small table lamps. The grocery box was won by Lillian Learned, and the lamps by Alta Fowler.

Ruby Berry is always needing food for the next card party, so please do not forget to see her or phone her.

Thanks to all who help in any way at these parties.

Next one on Nov. 25 at 2 p.m. sharp.

Bulwer QFA meet

The regular meeting of Bulwer Branch Q.F.A. was held on Nov. 12 in the Community Center. The President M. Fraser welcomed a good attendance.

Our guests of the evening were Rene Chapdelaine - Shur Gain Feed dealer of Cookshire and Jules St. Pierre, Agronomist with Shur Gain. Mr. St. Pierre spoke on the topic of minerals, both minor and major and their importance in the diet of cattle.

Door prizes of four bags of minerals donated by Mr. Chapdelaine were won by Walter Hodgman, Tony Tarlo, Gordon Garfat and Shirley Grapes.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday December 10, when Gary McBurney will show slides on New Zealand.
