Knowlton in arms over clear-cutting

Puzzle within a puzzle: Val-Pri van loads chips on Singer mountain. Val-Pri is a division of Alma-Micamac, itself a subsidiary of Canadian International Paper, a Domtar competitor. Or did Domtar just rent the trailers?

By JAMES DUFF
KNOWLTON — What is Domtar doing on Singer Mountain?
More than 600 acres — nearly a square mile — of mature hardwood timber has been clear-cut, fed into chipping machines and trucked away since August 1, according to local residents irate over the operation on Domtar timberlands on the northern flanks of one of the region's highest peaks.
Those monitoring municipal water supplies for Bromont and Cowansville, as well as other towns on the Yamaska are already noticing the effects of the extra runoff caused by the clear-cutting on the slopes, and local tributaries, normally renowned for their clarity are full of silt and mud.
But according to John Gossip, Domtar's public relations chief in Montreal, the company is only building a road into the heart of the nearly 25,000 acres they own on the mountain. He said logging operations would begin sometime next spring. He was not aware of what locals already know — that logging has been underway since a Domtar subcontractor first came into the area August 1.
Residents of the area known as the Lost Nation, the stretch of picturesque Sutton Range ridge country from Mansonville to Knowlton, first feared the massive clear-cutting project marked the beginning of the rebirth of the Fullerton Pond scheme a Hydro-Quebec pump-storage central which stirred local reaction since it was first announced in the fall of 1976.
But Hydro-Quebec public relations

The Domtar sign at the entrance to the cutting area is straightforward, but more cryptic is the no-trespassing warning behind it. By order, the Club de chasse et pêche de Fullerton Pond, Inc. Land leased from Domtar. Nobody in the company was able to offer an explanation and nobody in the Fish, Game and Tourism Ministry was willing to try.

All that's left behind: Looking northwest, one can see a small part of the area denuded on timber.

Civils vow action after talks falter

QUEBEC (CP) — Negotiations between the Quebec government and its 37,000 civil servants broke down Wednesday, and union leaders say they'll step up pressure tactics until their contract dispute is resolved.
"Up till now, we've limited our slowdowns to areas that would not hurt the public," union president Jean-Louis Harguindeguy said Wednesday.
But the members of the Syndicat des Fonctionnaires Provinciaux, who are not part of the 200,000-member common front of public service employees, will now turn to stronger means of bringing pressure on the government, he said.
The civil servants, without a contract since June 30, 1978, have been staging rotating walkouts throughout the summer, but Harguindeguy said there were no immediate plans for a general walkout.
On Wednesday, 150 civil servants of the justice department at the Montreal courthouse continued a work slowdown which began with a lockout Monday. The pressure tactics will continue until a new contract is signed, probably not before the winter, Harguindeguy said.
Other walkouts and slowdowns affected the granting of licenses at departments of transport and fish and game, and closed down computers at the education and revenue departments in Quebec City.
In Montreal, striking Quebec Liquor Corp. employees invaded two Montreal riding offices of the Parti Quebecois Wednesday to pressure the government into yielding to contract demands.
"And we're not going to leave until a new contract is signed," said leaders of about 30 strikers crowded into the east-end Maisonneuve riding office, set up to prepare for a byelection there this fall.
"Flying at 25,000 feet means less pressurization and eases the stress on the aircraft," airline spokesman Ray Guerin said Wednesday.
"But it's more expensive in fuel."
On Monday, a three-metre-long cone on the rear tip of the fuselage of an Air Canada DC-9 blew off and fell into the Atlantic Ocean when air pressure inside the passenger area broke through the rear pressure bulkhead and into the hollow cone.
The cone, which was not meant to withstand the pressure, was forced off the plane.
The plane was able to return to Boston and landed without incident.
When airline engineers took another look at x-rays taken of the plane's rear bulkhead last May, they discovered a small crack which may have expanded, causing the near-disaster.
C.N. Munson, the airline's director of maintenance, said his first priority will be to find out how and why the flaw shown on the x-ray was overlooked.
"I can only say that even in the x-ray plate, the fault is difficult to detect," Munson said.
KNOW WHERE TO LOOK
"The main reason we were able to find it on this second examination is that this time we knew precisely where to look and what we were looking for."
The airline said inspections of 43 Air Canada DC-9 class 32 aircraft turned up faults in a plane in Ottawa and another in Toronto. They were found to have tiny cracks in what the airline described as a low-stress area around some metal clips at the rear of the aircraft.

Landry: Hydro makes us strong

MONTREAL (CP) — Economic Development Minister Bernard Landry says Quebec's abundant, and renewable, hydroelectric resources have made Quebecers the "permanent Arabs" of North America.
Landry made the comment Wednesday to a delegation of West German industrialists who were in town as part of a cross-Canada tour to study possible investment opportunities.
Describing Quebec as "the land of electricity," Landry said Quebecers "are Arabs of a special variety: permanent Arabs" because their hydroelectric resources will never run out.

Defence budget rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. House of Representatives, after first splitting with the Senate over increased defence spending, rejected a $548.6 billion 1980 budget Wednesday night, shocking Democratic leaders and sending the entire spending package back to committee.
The 213-192 vote came just hours after the House refused to join the Senate in boosting outlays for defence.
The Senate on Wednesday had approved its $546.3 billion version of the 1980 budget on a 62-36 vote.
The House budget rejection appeared to stem more from the issue of government spending than from the politically touchy question of defence funding.
The budget was defeated when 146 Republicans joined with 67 mostly conservative Democrats in opposing the spending package. Only four Republicans voted with 188 Democrats for the budget.
The defeated House spending package called for a $29.3-billion deficit and made no room for a tax cut that Republicans had supported.
DEFICIT RISES
The Senate-passed budget contained a $31.6-billion deficit, higher than the expected $30 billion deficit for fiscal 1979. The Senate also rejected proposed tax cuts.
Increased military spending has emerged as a key element in President Carter's effort to win ratification of the strategic arms limitation treaty.
The House, on a 221-191 vote Wednesday, defeated an amendment sponsored by Representative Samuel Stratton (Dem.-N.Y.), to boost defence outlays by $413 million in fiscal 1980, which starts Oct. 1.
And in an 43-20 unrecorded vote, the House turned down an amendment by Representative Eldon Rudd (Rep.-Ariz.), calling for a five-per-cent increase in 1980 defence spending after inflation is discounted.
The charter declares French the province's only official language. Among other provisions, it states that only the French version of laws passed by the Quebec national assembly are official. Challenges before the court say the bills must be adopted in English as well.
Quebec courts have already declared the lack of English texts unconstitutional.
Laurin said his department has begun studies of the different scenarios that could follow the Supreme Court's decision. "Our objective is to be ready for any eventuality."

We'll respect Bill 101 ruling, Laurin says

QUEBEC (CP) — Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin says the Quebec government would abide by the Supreme Court of Canada decision on whether the province's language law is constitutional.
"We are good citizens," Laurin told a news conference Wednesday.
"Obviously the Quebec government will submit to the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada."
The Supreme Court is expected to hand down a decision by December at the latest on whether clauses in the Quebec language charter are constitutional.

Parrot expects postal decision

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government plans to present legislation next year to Parliament to turn the post office into a Crown corporation.
But postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot says he doubts it will happen that soon, "unless they just want to do what the Liberals did the last time."
Parrot, head of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said in an interview Wednesday that Postmaster-General John Fraser already has cancelled, and not rescheduled, the first major meeting he was to have with representatives of postal and related unions to discuss the proposed Crown corporation.
"He's going to have to start to talk about it if he's going to do it," Parrot said.
Fraser said in an interview he hopes for the Crown corporation legislation after Christmas — an aide said January is the target date — and that talks with Parrot's CUPW are already underway.
"We won't follow through with the Liberals' policy. We'll follow through with a Crown corporation which we think is going to work," Fraser said.
"What we want is a real Crown corporation where the management has the ability and the capacity to make management decisions without government interference."

Smith softens constitution issue stand

LONDON (AP) — Former Rhodesian prime minister Ian Smith says the country's white minority "will not dig in its heels" on the controversial question of constitutional veto power in the black-dominated Zimbabwe Rhodesia government.

Apparently moderating his hard-line insistence on white guarantees, Smith told a radio interviewer Wednesday: "If anyone can prove that a change here or here would help our country, then certainly we would be interested."

Smith made the statement after Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's biracial negotiating team, of which he is a member, met for two hours with British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington to discuss white representation in the Zimbabwe Rhodesia government.

Carrington is mediating peace talks in London which have brought Muzorewa together with Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, leaders of the black nationalist Patriotic Front alliance in a bid to end the seven-year guerrilla war in the rebel British colony.

The talks, now in their second week, have been bogged down over the question of what, if any, representation whites should retain in the country's parliament, where they are at present guaranteed 28 of the 100 seats for at least five years.

Davis: Ontario may reopen Belgian office

ANTWERP, Belgium (CP) — Premier Bill Davis said Wednesday Ontario should reopen its government office in Brussels to "balance" views touted by the Quebec mission in the Belgium capital.

It would be "helpful and in the national interest" for the Ontario mission, closed this spring in an austerity move, to open its doors again to provide an Ontario perspective on Canadian issues, Davis told reporters.

Davis said he was convinced of a renewed Ontario presence in part by Lucien Lamoureux, Canadian ambassador to Belgium, but added there was nothing unusual in that.

At present, the Quebec mission is the only provincial government office in Brussels.

It has increased its staff and activities since the election of the separatist Parti Quebecois government in 1976, Lamoureux said.

Oil exports to U.S. reduced

OTTAWA (CP) — Exports of light crude oil to the United States next month will be reduced to 14,000 barrels a day from the current 55,000 barrels a day, the National Energy Board announced Wednesday.

The federal regulatory agency's announcement follows the government's decision last week to cut exports so high-volume oil swaps with the U.S. can continue. The government concluded there is not enough surplus domestic production to allow both exports and swaps.

U.S. pushes chicks

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. officials made a push Wednesday for the most generous share possible of the Canadian chicken market under a Canadian poultry plan to limit imports.

At a meeting between agriculture officials of both countries, the U.S. urged Canada to let American chicken exporters keep "their share of a growing market," a U.S. official attending the meeting said in an interview.

U.N. recognizes Pol Pot regime

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Soviet Union and Vietnam have suffered defeats in two United Nations committees which are preparing the way for Friday's General Assembly meeting.

The credentials committee voted to seat a delegation from the Cambodian government of Pol Pot in the 34th session of the General Assembly.

Begin knocks Tory inquiry

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal health critic Monique Begin says there is no need for a six-month inquiry into medicare.

She said Wednesday the Conservative government already has facts showing which provinces are mismanaging healthcare programs.

In a written statement, the former health minister said some provinces are already operating their health programs contrary to the basic principles of medicare.

Leftists lose close race

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — Sweden's non-socialist coalition won a single-seat victory in general elections held last Sunday, officials announced Wednesday.

The final count gave the coalition of Conservative, Centre and Liberal parties 175 seats in the 349-seat Riksdag (parliament).

The Social Democrat and Communist party alliance led by former prime minister Olof Palme won 174 seats.

Papal conclave called

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul will summon cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church to an extraordinary conclave next month, shortly after he returns from a nine-day visit to the United States and Ireland, Vatican sources said Wednesday.

The meeting was reported as the pontiff faced growing complaints from workers in the Vatican who are seeking increased pay and better working conditions. A spokesman for the Vatican's 1,700 lay workers announced plans to organize a union to press their demands — the first time any organized labor activity was reported in the Holy See.

Caisse pops merge

MONTREAL (CP) — A new confederation of two Quebec credit union groups will have 1,610 outlets throughout the province, just nine fewer than all the branches of all chartered banks in the province combined.

An affiliation agreement was signed Wednesday by the Federation des Caisses d'Economie du Quebec and the Federation des Caisses Populaires Desjardins.

The new credit union confederation will have combined assets of $10.3 billion and a total membership of 4,006,000.

Uranium missing from plant

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Enough weapons-grade uranium is missing from a Tennessee plant to make at least one nuclear bomb, and nuclear investigators Wednesday refused to rule out theft as a possibility.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered the nuclear processing plant at Erwin, Tennessee, shut down after an audit showed at least nine kilograms of highly-enriched uranium was missing.

Air radio workers may strike

MONTREAL (CP) — A majority of Canada's air radio operators have rejected the latest contract offers of the federal transport department, opening the way for a national-wide strike as early as next week.

Quebec union spokesman Pierre Cyr said Wednesday that although balloting has not officially ended, more than 600 of Canada's 1,200 operators have already voted down the government proposals, which were contained in a conciliator's report.

Future of town considered

PORT CARTIER, Que. (CP) — Quebec's natural resources minister, Yves Berube, arrives here today to sound out ideas on how this town of 11,000 can weather the closing of ITT-Rayonier's huge pulp mill.

Denis Perron, the local Quebec national assembly member, said Wednesday that Berube will meet town officials and union leaders to "exchange opinions and explain the government's position... and see what can be done in the meantime."

U.S. dollar falls, gold up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar declined sharply on the world's money markets today as the price of gold soared again to reach record highs in European bullion centres.

In Tokyo, the U.S. currency plunged more than a yen in heavy trading, closing at 222.35 yen, down from 223.675 Wednesday.

Indians want in on talks

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Indian Brotherhood demanded Wednesday that the federal government halt its unilateral review of the Indian Act and told its executive to begin consultations again with Ottawa on constitutional and legislative changes.

A year and a half ago the brotherhood, which represents the country's 300,000 Indians who receive federal government benefits and are protected by the Indian Act, withdrew from negotiations with the Liberal government on amendments to the act until the brotherhood received full recognition in the debate on constitutional change.

Government respects holiday

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's annual enumeration of voters, due to last Oct. 1-4, will be extended for an extra day in certain areas of the province because Oct. 1 is a Jewish holy day.

A spokesman for Quebec's Chief Electoral Officer, Pierre F. Cote, said in an interview Wednesday that enumerators have been asked to pass over Jewish homes on the first day of the enumeration, which is Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

Drug won't be banned

TORONTO (CP) — A drug that has caused about 10,000 cases of a nerve-paralysing disease in Japan is sold in Canada by prescription and the federal health and welfare department has no plans to ban its use, a spokesman says.

The drug, known as clioquinol and used to treat dysentery and diarrhoea, was called Quiniform in Japan. In Canada it is sold as Entero-Vioform and in combination with another drug as Mexaform.

Venezuela cuts oil output

CARACAS (AP) — Venezuela, which supplies oil to Canada and the U.S., has announced it will reduce oil output by six per cent next year.

The move is designed to preserve dwindling oil reserves and protect the country's "national interest," Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said Wednesday.

Tory tax proposal criticized

OTTAWA (CP) — People looking for fairness won't find it in proposed federal tax-credit programs for mortgage interest and property taxes, a Toronto tax lawyer said Wednesday.

"It would be hard to imagine a proposal that more clearly defies any standards of equity," Wilf Goodman said in a telephone interview. "If you try to help people who need help, this doesn't strike me as the way to do it."

Goodman said the revised Progressive Conservative plan for helping homeowners and the housing industry won't help renters and those with low incomes.

Tories want Grit papers

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence says he is uncomfortable with rules giving former Liberal ministers authority to withhold cabinet papers sought by the McDonald inquiry into RCMP wrongdoing.

The problem results from an order-in-council, passed by the Liberal cabinet two days before the June 4 transfer of power to the Conservatives. It gives former prime minister Pierre Trudeau power to control access to cabinet documents produced under his administration.

Tremors shake Italy

ROME (AP) — A series of earth tremors shook central Italy Wednesday night, killing at least five persons, damaging buildings in dozens of towns and sending thousands of terrified citizens fleeing into the streets.

"I saw the walls trembling from floor to ceiling," said a nun operating the switchboard at the Vatican in Rome. "The quake swung a door open and kept it going and banging. My chair slid under me."

PARROT

Parrot said CUPW fully supports that idea. It was one of the union's major complaints about the Crown-corporation legislation proposed by the former Liberal government.

"On one side you would have a board of directors responsible for administering the Crown corporation and on the other side you would still have a postmaster-general, a deputy postmaster-general and a secretary who could also administer the Crown corporation," Parrot said.

"It's like two covers driving the same car."

However, Parrot said if Fraser hopes to get approval from post office unions, he had better devote more time to the issue.

The other unions are the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada, the Public Service Alliance of Canada and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

"As unions we have agreed we're not going to discuss a Crown corporation individually, but as a group," Parrot said.

Bus mechanics sign contract

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Urban Community Transit Commission mechanics signed a new contract Wednesday, but a seven-month strike by bus drivers continues.

The 10 mechanics, members of the Confederations des Syndicats Democratiques, will receive wage increases totalling 25 per cent over three years.

Khmeini's foes 'doomed'

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iran's unofficial head of state, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khmeini, said Wednesday that all opponents of his Islamic rule will be destroyed.

Speaking to air force personnel, he said: "Our government is Islamic and you must support the government of theologists so that no harm can be done to the country."

News readers dissatisfied, Chicago publisher says

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Many readers are not happy with their daily newspapers, the editor of the Chicago Tribune told the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association on Wednesday.

Maxwell McCrohon said a survey has shown that readers complain that their newspapers are poorly edited, poorly written and are bulky and difficult to read.

He said readers are upset with newspapers that contain pictures that are blurred and out of focus and headlines that are often misleading, inaccurate and give too much play to negative news and crime news.

The study, commissioned by the American Society of Newspaper Editors, was conducted in 11 U.S. cities and Kitchener, Ont.

McCrohon said the study showed there is a serious gap between editors and readers. He said it is more than a simple difference of opinion on what editors think is new and interesting and what people want.

It said readers want newspapers to be more attentive to their personal needs — more caring, more human and less anonymous.

As much as anything, he said, readers want newspapers to be better organized and designed so they are faster and easier to read. He said readers complain they cannot cope with problems of the world and, instead, want newspapers to tell them about their own communities, their own jobs and schools.

"They complain that editors are far more interested in Peking than they are in their own town," McCrohon said.

DWELL ON BAD NEWS

A frequent complaint is that newspapers constantly dwell on bad and negative news, McCrohon said.

P.L.O. bomb rocks Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Troops, police and bomb disposal teams fanned out through crowded streets today to prevent Israelis shopping for the Jewish New Year after a Palestinian bomb ripped through a mall in Jerusalem, killing one person and injuring 42.

Israeli state radio reported that a second person died in the blast Wednesday but police said the confusion arose because one victim was so badly injured they thought at first he was dead.

A Timberjack 300 clasp an 18-inch maple in its iron hand after shearing it off at the ground with hydraulic snips.

spokesman Jean Laperriere said yesterday there is "absolutely no connection" between the Domtar cutting and the Fullerton Pond project, although the cutting is going on less than two miles from the pond.

"The Fullerton Pond project has been stopped completely," Laperriere said from his St. Hyacinthe office. "It would take a major change in policy to recommence studies on the project, let alone construction," he added.

He said a report on the 1978 discussions and hearings into the Fullerton Pond project, "only one of several of this type being discussed" would be made public sometime later this fall or next spring.

A group of local residents has formed around the original Fullerton Pond Conservation Society and hopes to challenge Domtar's right to clear-cut Singer Mountain.

According to one resident on the East Hill Road several miles below the cutting operations, logging has been going on 24 hours a day six days a week, and local life has been disrupted by the passage of chip-laden tractor-trailer rigs as frequently as every 15 minutes. The trucks roar through Knowlton all night long, keeping townspeople awake and posing a new threat on the formerly quiet streets.

Few if any local residents are employed in the cutting operations, although the fleet of Timberjacks and logskidding equipment runs on fuel oil purchased from a local dealer.

A Domtar source who asked to remain unidentified says the cutting crew are employees of a firm who subcontracts logging operations for Domtar, ranging from Forestville on Quebec's North Shore to the western end of the province. He also confirmed the chips being taken off Singer Mountain are being trucked to the Domtar fine paper mill in Cornwall and to the company's Eastern Townships plant in Windsor. However Jacques Tremblay, manager of the Windsor plant, was not available for comment.

The Domtar source also said the company's Singer Mountain reserves — more than 40 square miles — would be able to supply chips five months a year for five years, and that reseeded operations would begin within that time.

But residents challenge this. They claim too much topsoil is being washed off the mountain to allow reseeded and they also protest the replacement of mature stands of hardwood with conifers.

So far they have not been too successful with their protest. A call to CBC's Fred Langdon brought a CBC crew out to film the eco-damage, but Domtar refused to allow them access to the area. Calls by other media to Domtar executives brought vague promises to suspend cutting "until after the autumn leaves turn," but as of this morning, cutting and chipping operations continued.

Other local residents, such as logger Andre Heavey, say Singer Mountain will grow back within a few years, just as it did after being logged over at the turn of the century to supply hardwood for Singer sewing machine cabinets — hence its name.

But he admits he's somewhat ticked off by the fact he's having problems finding good firewood for his regular customers when there's so much still lying on the ground up on Singer Mountain.

And he wonders about what will happen to the trout stream which flows through his back yard.

"It comes from higher up, above where they're cutting now," says Heavey. "But I guess it'll be the same as the others when they get up there — muddy."

More on Domtar, Singer Mountain and the Fullerton Pond connection in next Friday's Record and in the October Townships Sun.

Sludge covers the road running halfway to the crest of Singer Mountain. Below, silt-laden streams bear witness to the scale of the damage done by clear-cutting operations of this sort.

On and off campus

by Pat Tracy and Nelson Wyatt

The annual rite of fall will be taking place this weekend as alumni from far and wide descend upon the B.U. campus for Homecoming. Student Representative (SRC) Council vice-president of Internal Affairs Pam MacDonald tells us that among the festivities slated for the two-day bash are a showdown between the Bishop's Gaiters and the McGill Redmen football team on Saturday at 2 p.m., a soccer game between the local boys and the Concordia squad and the spring convocation. About 50 grads will receive their parchment, along with George Whalley, head of the English department at Queen's University. The convocation ceremony will take place at 11 a.m. on Saturday.

Most of the Homecoming weekend will be centred on the usual zaniness that is associated with the campus. Pre-game warmups will precede the Saturday action and a trail of campus autos will take to the streets in a car parade just before the football game.

V-P MacDonald reminded us that though it is not unexpected that there will be some imbibing at the game, beer will be limited to one six pack of cans. No bottles will be allowed.

The Quiet Bar will be open, as will the student Pub, starting at 4 p.m. and running until 2 a.m. There will be special rates on drinks.

Word has filtered down from the Alumni Association that Gordon Glass has been appointed head of the Eastern Townships branch of the Bishop's Alumni Association. He'll be following in the footsteps of his father, Ogden Glass, who is a former principal of both Bishop's and Bishop's College School.

For Future Reference Dept.: We'd like to send a word of welcome to the new academic Dean at B.U., Dr. Karl Kuepper, who arrives on campus fresh from a stint at the University of New Brunswick. His appointment was the result of a lengthy two year search to fill the shoes of the previous Dean, Cecil Haver.

Also, the B.U. residences seem to have been hit by inflation in everything but the number of occupants. A report in the B.U. weekly tabloid "Campus" says that the residence fees have climbed from $800 for a double room and $875 for a single room to a respective $875 and $950. This represents a jump of eight-and-a-half per cent and Director of Residences Blair Capes is quoted as saying that the hike was inevitable because the University could not take the chance that enrollment would rise to cover the cost. With winter approaching fast, we are only reminded of the grouching we heard last year concerning the cooler climate in some of the student dorms. Hopefully, things will heat up this year.

Two local skydivers dropped by the Bishop's-Champlain campus to say hello as part of a publicity stunt for a course to be offered at the CEGEP. The parachuters jumped for a crowd of about 200 interested students.

The ground school for the jumping will be held on the local campus and members from the community are invited to participate. The cautious may register for the ground school and one jump only at a cost of $75., while the more courageous may opt for nine jumps, as well as the ground school at $125. Champlain animator, Roger Cote, who is responsible for bringing the course to the college, recommended that any individuals who are not sure just how brave they will be should register for the single jump program and if they surprise themselves, pay the extra $50 later to take the eight extra jumps.

This is the second year that the Champlain has offered the parachuting course and registration is already up from last year.

The first ground school starts on September 26 in the evening and members of this class will take their first dive September 29. The second school will commence a week later on October 2 with the first jump scheduled for October 6. You can sign up for the course with Roger Cote at his office in the Union Building at B.U. You'll need the cash, a medical certificate and for minors, a release from parents.

Cote hopes that the skydiving class will become a yearly activity if the interest continues. Posters decorating the campus claim that parachuting is not a dangerous sport — that tumbling out of an airplane at 6,000 feet is actually safe and fun! Cote informed us that the chute will open automatically should the novice be stricken with fear on his first jump. Good thing...

Roger Cote has not been lying idle for the past few weeks. In addition to arranging for people to fall from the sky, he has put together an impressive selection of "mini-courses" for Champlain students and members of the local community. Bartending at home, crocheting for beginners, sign language, and wine appreciation are just a few of the courses being offered.

While all the courses tend to be popular, the ones centred around crafts attract fewer participants than the ones teaching bartending and winemaking. (Perhaps because you have to drink your mistakes?) New programs this year include bridge, sewing, weaving, and an introduction to Tai Chi Chaun Yang Style, a mental physical program similar to yoga. The old favorites will also be offered as well.

Enrollment is open to the public now that Champlain students have pre-registered. Cost for the courses vary, and members of the community will have to pay slightly more than students because the program is partly subsidized by student activity fees. Deadline for registration in the mini-courses is October 2 as most classes begin that day. Registration forms are available at the Centennial Theatre Box Office.

Now that the "what-am-I-doing-back-here-after-such-a-short-summer?" blues have more or less subsided, most clubs and activities on campus are getting into full swing. The student newspaper, Campus, has put out two issues, and most clubs have held at least introductory meetings. Several activities are scheduled for the upcoming week.

A noon hour concert series, sponsored by Champlain Animation will begin next Thursday in the Outside Inn. The object of this series is to bring in low key folk-type music during the co-curricular period. There is no charge for the shows and Brent Gilday, co-ordinator of the program, will be the first performer.

On Tuesday, September 25, a fashion show of "Retro" clothing will take place in the Outside Inn at 12:30. The Sherbrooke boutique responsible for the show will not make any sales on campus, but they will present discount coupons to students attending. There is no charge for the show.

The Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra will be visiting Bishop's on Tuesday, September 25 at 8:30 as part of Les Grands Concerts series. Tickets for individual performances and the series will be on sale at the theatre box office.

In Lennoxville, a young singing group, The Internationals, will present a "Coffee-House Concert" at St. George's Church on Saturday, September 22 at 7:30. There is no admission charge.

For movie buffs, the Bishop's Film Society will be showing "Last Waltz" on Sunday, September 23 in the Centennial Theatre. Show times are 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. and the cost is $2.00. The movie tells the story of the Band's last concert and features such artists as Bob Dylan and Neil Young.

"Lost Horizon" (the 1937 classic about a visit to paradise) and "All Quiet on the Western Front", will be presented on Wednesday, September 26 in the theatre. "All Quiet on the Western Front", made in 1930, is thought by many to be the best war film ever made. It deals with a group of German soldiers and how they cope with World War I. Show times, again are 7:00 and 9:00.

Crop board paid out $100,000 in 1979

SHERBROOKE (CB) — A recent press-release from the Quebec Crop Insurance Board states that losses in leguminous fields on Quebec farms resulted in indemnities close to $100,000 being paid by the Board during 1979.

The winter kill program is a popular part of the Quebec Crop Insurance Plan and is the section credited with the marked increase of producers who have joined the plan during the past four years.

Basic requirements to join the plan are:

- a minimum of four hectares (10 acres)

Plowing clinic planned at Richmond farm

RICHMOND (CB) — A plowing clinic, in preparation for the annual plowing match, will be held on Friday, September 21, starting at 10 a.m., on the farm owned by Ted Laporte, local agronomist, located on the Spooner Pond Road, approximately five miles from Richmond.

The clinic will be headed up by Ian Kirby, of Ives Hill and is an opportunity for anyone interested in plowing in the annual match slated for September 29 at Jacques St. Jean's farm which is in the same area.

The local Quebec Farmer's Association will be selling home-made doughnuts and coffee at the clinic.

Waterville denies charges of burning rubber

WATERVILLE (CAT) — A spokesman for the city of Waterville denied allegations that the city burns foam rubber when they dispose of the city's garbage.

"The smell of burning garbage isn't pleasant, but the odour people have complained about is not due to the burning of foam rubber."

The spokesman said that foam rubber is sorted out from the debris and placed in a sealed container that is removed from the dump on a weekly basis.

Bryce Mackasey was high on Tory political hit-list

OTTAWA (CP) — Bryce Mackasey became the Progressive Conservatives' No. 1 political enemy the day he accepted the job as chairman of the Air Canada board of directors.

Tories were indignant last December when then-prime minister Pierre Trudeau appointed his former cabinet minister to the $90,000-a-year job with the government-owned airline.

The name of Mackasey was immediately placed at the top of a hit list Conservatives were preparing for the day when they formed the government and blatant examples of Liberal patronage could be excoriated.

Tuesday's revelation that Transport Minister, Don Mazankowski had turfed the 58-year-old Mackasey out of Air Canada's executive suite was the latest blow to the fortunes of the Irish-Quebecer.

In a brief statement to reporters, the minister stated that Mackasey's predecessor, Pierre Taschereau, would return as chairman on an interim basis.

FOUGHT HARD

Like the successful boxer he once was, Mackasey fought for several hours at an Air Canada board of directors meeting Tuesday, defending what he considered his right to remain as chairman. He lost.

An electrical worker turned businessman, Mackasey was first elected to the Commons for the Montreal working-class riding of Verdun in 1962 and six years later entered cabinet.

A former cabinet colleague, Judy LaMarsh, wrote in her memoirs that the man with the gravelly voice and fighter's face "so fanatically wanted to be appointed a minister that he would do virtually anything to get into the cabinet."

During his years in Ottawa he held four portfolios, labor, manpower and immigration, postmaster-general and consumer and corporate affairs.

The grudging respect he earned from the labor movement and his legislation to increase unemployment insurance benefits prompted Trudeau to once describe Mackasey as "a spokesman for the working people of Canada."

RESIGNS TWICE

When Mackasey abandoned federal politics in 1976, it was the second time the temperamental voice for English-Quebecers had resigned from cabinet.

After the 1972 federal election in which the Conservatives made much of his unemployment insurance plans, Mackasey resigned as minister of manpower and immigration. Trudeau and his minister were never known as great buddies, partly because Mackasey could not always secure the appointments he wanted.

He then joined the Quebec provincial Liberals, with the promise of a major cabinet portfolio should the party be returned to office in the Nov. 15, 1976, election.

The Parti Quebecois was swept to power and Mackasey was relegated to the opposition back-benches and after-dinner speaking engagements on national unity.

Two years later, Mackasey prepared another resignation, this time so he could fight a federal byelection in Ottawa Centre Oct. 16, 1978.

Conservative candidate Robert de Cotret won the byelection and the Liberals consoled Mackasey with the Air Canada job and a new round of national unity speaking engagements.

Ironically, de Cotret failed to be elected in the general election last May 22 but was consoled by the Tories with a Senate appointment — a job no future Liberal government can terminate the way Mackasey's was.

Violence: Quebec launches clean-up

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government launched a high-profile campaign Tuesday to shift the spotlight of public opinion onto the gruesome but "hidden" problems of domestic violence, sexual assault in all its forms and hard-core pornography.

The campaign's key slogan is "violence."

The focus is correspondingly broad: discussion subjects range from child and wife beating, rape and sexual abuse of children to the predicament of teenage go-go dancers and "snuff" pornography — the new wave of films involving real-life killing, torture and mutilation.

The forum will be a series of 11 regional conferences, held during the next six months, which organizers hope will attract women's groups, judges, lawyers, police, doctors, psychiatrists and the public at large.

Heavy government backing was evident at the official launching, presided by Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard. His department is co-ordinating the campaign, which will draw on extensive contributions from the social affairs department, the Quebec council on the status of women and a provincial youth protection agency.

WANTS AWARENESS

Bedard stressed the campaign is designed primarily to increase public awareness — a vital step in combatting a rising tide of violence — and increase co-operation between various government departments, agencies, professional groups and social service organizations.

He was flanked by Consumer Affairs Minister Lise Payette, who also takes cabinet responsibility for women's affairs, and her key advisor in the area, council president Claire Bonenfant.

Also present was the deputy social affairs minister, Louis Larouche. The department is ready to use its extensive network of social service centres to help persons who are helpless when confronted with violence — the elderly and handicapped as well as women and children, Larouche said.

Full support also was promised by Jacques Tellier, director of the provincial youth protection committee, which obtained increased power to investigate and prevent cases of child abuse under a law passed earlier this year. About 3,000 cases of child abuse are reported to Quebec authorities each year, he said, and this is probably just the tip of the iceberg.

BACKGROUND

Anglos will go to court over ticket

MONTREAL (CP) — Two members of a group campaigning for English-language rights in Quebec, the Freedom of Choice movement, say they will go to court rather than pay a $22 traffic ticket written in French only.

William Shaw, an independent member of the Quebec national assembly, and Merrick Walsh, his political secretary, said in a recent interview the unilingual ticket contravenes section 133 of the British North America Act.

The section says, in part, that both French and English can be used in federal and Quebec courts or "in any pleading or process in or issuing from" federal and Quebec courts.

The ticket, which Walsh received for running a stop sign, was written in French only, conforming to regulations of Quebec's French language charter.

Walsh said he doesn't intend to pay the fine until he receives a bilingual ticket.

But he said he hopes the city takes him to court for not paying the fine, opening the way for a constitutional fight which Walsh and Shaw said they are willing to take all the way to the Supreme Court.

DC-9s have excellent air safety records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the highly-publicized incident in which part of the tail fell off an Air Canada DC-9 jetliner over the Atlantic, that aircraft type has one of the best safety records in the skies, U.S. government statistics show.

First flown in 1965, the twinjet McDonnell-Douglas airliners have proved widely popular with the airline industry and are among the most common aircraft in use.

A study by the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board between 1968 and 1977 disclosed 42 accidents involving DC-9s, including 11 accidents in which someone was killed.

With nearly 8.5 million hours of flying logged in this period by DC-9s, the board translated its statistics to an accident rate of 0.50 per 100,000 hours. And 0.11 fatal accidents per 100,000 hours.

No one was killed in Monday's incident involving the Air Canada plane which was enroute to Halifax from Boston. The plane lost its three-metre long tail cone but was able to land safely after returning to Boston.

A stress crack in a bulkhead is being blamed for the incident and Air Canada said a second DC-9 was withdrawn from service when similar cracks were found.

CHECK FOR CRACKS

Constant pressure changes and vibration can lead to metal fatigue and cracks, a problem which regular aircraft maintenance programs are designed to find and prevent.

Metal fatigue was first diagnosed as a major problem following accidents involving the British-built de Havilland Comet in the 1950s.

Of the dozen aircraft types in general use in the U.S., only the Boeing 737 and 727 had better accident rates than the DC-9 in the board study, and those were only slightly better.

The short-haul 737 had an accident rate of 0.44 per 100,000 hours, with 0.04 fatal accidents.

Might isn't right

The latest goodie the types at the agriculture department in the National Assembly have come up with is a proposed marketing board for the maple sugar industry. Here we go again, more bureaucrats nosing in spheres where they have little if any knowledge of how the stuff is produced — by hard labor — a lot of sweat and with an assist from the Lord for having created the trees. They feel they are better equipped to distribute the end product.

Quebec farmers are, by and large, completely teed off with the nit-pickers who hide behind mounds of red tape and now they are being threatened with yet another encroachment on their livelihoods.

There was an incident several years ago thanks to excellent forecasting done by the egg marketing board when some 13 million dozen had to be buried near Frelighsburg. The board said there had been a slight 'miscalculation' in the projected demand.

Fortunately, no civil servant can go out and tell a maple tree how many pounds of sap it should produce, although the Lord only knows that some 'sap' might just try to do something along those lines if the board ever comes into being.

We are over-governed, over-board, and overly bored with the machinations in Quebec. Unfortunately, the last category might lull us into a sense of being securely ensconced back in the womb with nothing to fear.

The provincial governments of the past 15 years have slowly but surely eroded our liberty. We are almost as socialist as Sweden, all this of course with a helping hand from Ottawa.

Our politicians have been more concerned about protecting their acquired rights than those of the populace who elected them. It is high time our elected representatives showed some concern for their peers.

Big government begets big bureaucracy. Prime Minister Joe Clark has promised to cut back 60,000 federal appointments through attrition; we will have to wait and see the proof.

Quebec has never said it will cut back in the public sector and the thought of a maple products board is patent proof they want complete control over the agricultural sphere. Once you have control of the people by the gullet, they are completely at your mercy as everyone has to eat to survive.

They haven't gotten around to taxing the air we breathe, but don't hold your breath too long — they may be considering such a move.

We hope they will come to their senses and realize they can't control Mother Nature and let the maples and the people who work them continue without governmental assistance. We are sure Premier Levesque has heard of Joyce Kilmer and will abide by her advice.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Has there been another White House coverup?

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Has there been another cover-up to protect White House aides so soon after Watergate? Few Americans want to believe it. Newsmen tend to be skeptical. President Carter insists it is "inconceivable." Yet the accusation cannot be dismissed cavalierly.

It was made by a grand jury foreman, Ralph E. Ulmer, who for 10 months has been investigating charges that fugitive financier Robert Vesco tried to pull strings inside the White House to fix his legal problems.

Sources close to the investigation describe Ulmer as a conscientious foreman who is deeply concerned about the integrity of the grand jury. As each witness testified, Ulmer kept meticulous notes, which he constantly consulted. Our sources understand that he often stayed up as late as 3 a.m. reviewing his notes.

Ulmer tried to resign, charging the administration with "duplicitous" and "manipulation." He wrote that the "cover-up activities are being orchestrated within the Department of Justice under the concept that the administration must be protected at all costs."

Ulmer is prohibited by law from revealing anything that happened behind the closed doors of the grand jury. His letter of resignation, therefore, was worded carefully.

He charged vaguely, for example, that "a witness was encouraged to be less than candid with the FBI." Our sources believe Ulmer was referring to an attempt by Charles Kirbo, the president's personal attorney, to tamper with a key witness. White House aide Richard Harden arranged through his sister-in-law for Kirbo to meet the witness, Cynthia Herring.

The meeting took place in an atmosphere of high intrigue and deep secrecy. FBI sources say that the sister-in-law offered her apartment in Albany, Ga., for the rendezvous and that Kirbo kept a private plane standing by to whisk him from Atlanta to Albany.

But Mrs. Herring, on the advice of her attorney, showed up for the meeting wired with a recording device. She immediately turned the tape over to the FBI, which submitted it to the grand jury.

Kirbo is heard on the tape reassuring Mrs. Herring that she could trust him. "I'm just an ordinary South Georgia cracker you're talking to," he drawled. Later he advised her: "I think it's a mistake to be too open with the FBI."

According to FBI sources, Kirbo did not ask the witness to cover up any specific facts but merely counseled against being "too open." The president's lawyer assured the grand jury, our sources say, that he had no intention of obstructing justice.

Ulmer also complained that "information was withheld from the grand jury." Our sources confirm that the Justice Department appeared to be holding back evidence from the grand jury. To prevent a possible whitewash, I asked for the opportunity to testify.

I spent three hours presenting to the grand jury the results of my own three-month investigation of the Vesco scandal. I laid out evidence that obviously surprised the jurors, though they had been taking testimony for several months. My sources say the grand jury, thereafter, demanded the full facts.

Inside the Justice Department, these jurors gained a reputation as an "aggressive" if not a runaway grand jury. Our sources say the top brass tried to bring the grand jury under tighter rein. They kept shifting prosecutors and introducing other procedural disruptions. This may have led to Ulmer's added complaint that "delays in the grand jury process were arranged."

There is no reason to believe that explicit cover-up orders have been issued to protect White House aides. But government officials are, in one respect, like rare tropical birds. They have learned to communicate with one another through near-inaudible sounds, poses and gestures.

If there was to be a cover-up, they would not blatantly set it up. The arrangement would be carried off through a process of almost imperceptible movements, coincidences, raised eyebrows and knowing smiles. There is no going to be an incriminating document or tape recording left around — certainly not after Watergate.

This subtle process may have occurred, indeed, right under my nose. After my own investigation of the Vesco affair, then-Attorney General Griffin Bell asked me to share my findings with him. I spent more than two hours reviewing the evidence I had uncovered with the attorney general.

Four other Justice Department officials were present, including Benjamin Civiletti, who succeeded Bell as attorney general. Throughout the review, Bell asked most of the questions. Occasionally he made defensive remarks about White House aides. He made it perfectly clear that he didn't believe they were guilty of wrongdoing. This must have made an impression on his subordinates who, thereafter, didn't really have to be told what results the boss wanted.

Pulp worker: ITT in Port Cartier is finished

By ROBERT MacPHERSON
PORT CARTIER, Que. (CP) — For the workers of ITT-Rayonnier, which last week closed down its pulp mill here indefinitely, there's no way the plant can reopen as before.

"There's no hope," some of them say. "ITT in Port Cartier is finished."

Rayonnier, part of the United States-based International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., has stopped just short of completely ditching its operation in this town of 11,000 on the north shore of the lower St. Lawrence River.

Rayonnier says it would take a massive infusion of capital to recover losses of over $300 million, and adds it's trying to find an alternative.

The company also blames "adverse local conditions" — an apparent reference to the strike launched last June by about 500 mill workers, members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union negotiating a new contract.

Since the closure was announced, however, the workers no longer consider themselves strikers. They're unemployed, like the 450 office staff and lumberjacks covered in separate CPU contracts but now laid off.

Although morale is surprisingly good, there is still an air of disbelief at the mill, which was welcomed warmly when it was announced in 1971 as an alternative to the iron-ore operations which dominate the region's economy.

"They just can't close a plant like that," said one of a dozen workers crammed into a tiny log cabin which had served as the strikers' picket station on the road to the mill.

"DREAM IN COLOR"

"But you can't dream in color," answered another. "A ghost town, that's what Port Cartier is going to be." "As workers, we've done all we can," added a third.

There is agreement with their union leaders — including Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor — that the closure is a "black-mail" tactic aimed at getting Quebec to add to the $119 million in subsidies it has given Rayonnier.

They are quick to blame Rayonnier's senior management for the 14 separate legal and illegal strikes, lockouts or other work stoppages since the mill opened in 1974, and for the losses which ITT is writing off from its third quarter earnings this year.

They also recalled how machinery consistently broke down in the mill, which manufactured a highly-purified form of pulp used in manufacturing rayon fabrics and other products.

Local real estate brokers expect between 800-900 houses to go on the market in the next three months, at prices far below what they would have fetched a year ago.

Six named to Rexfor board

QUEBEC (CP) — Lands and Forests Minister Yves Berube has named six new members to the board of Rexfor, the province's forestry company, including a federal civil servant and a former aide and research associate.

The civil servant is Marie-Paule Allaire, an official with the Canadian International Development Agency who was owner-manager of a sawmill at Notre-Dame-Du-Laus, Que., from 1957 to 1971.

The former aide is Jean-Louis Verrette of Quebec City, an engineering professor at Laval University who served as Berube's executive assistant from 1976 to 1978. Verrette also wrote a scientific study with Berube in 1969 on mine-tail disposal at Quebec Cartier Mining Ltd.

Named as president of Rexfor is Michel Duchesneau, Quebec's deputy minister of tourism since 1976. From 1972 to 1976, Duchesneau was deputy minister of lands and forests.

A graduate in forestry, the 46-year-old Duchesneau succeeds Albert Cote, who will continue to serve on Rexfor's board.

Also named to the board are Jean-Louis Carufel of Gatineau, Que., a retired vice-president of the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, and James G. MacLeod, vice-president of woodlands operations for Consolidated Bathurst Ltd. of Montreal.

Aluminum treatment for miners

Silicosis deterrent rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — For more than 40 years, Canadian miners have been required to combat silicosis by a method that has been discredited in England, laughed out of Sweden and banned in South Africa because of its possible toxic effects, says author Lloyd Tataryn.

Silicosis is a debilitating lung disease caused by inhaling dust.

Companies have required miners to inhale aluminum, a second dust, as a so-called preventative measure although in 1943 aluminum lung was recognized as a compensatable disease in Germany, Tataryn says in his book, Dying for a Living, published today.

"Occupational and environmental health specialists around the world have expressed amazement that the controversial treatment is still in use in North America," Tataryn says.

He says the Ontario government has washed its hands of the entire matter. An inter-office memo in April at Rio Algom mines in Elliot Lake, Ont., said that the mining health and safety branch of the Ontario labor ministry "did not intend to take a position on the use of aluminum dust, leaving this to be a management decision at each mine."

Rio Algom has discontinued use of aluminum dust this year but Dome Mines in South Porcupine, Ont., has not, he says.

SEES FIGHTS AHEAD
Mike Farrell, the Timmins, Ont., United Steel Workers staff representative, says: "This aluminum thing is going to cause many bitter fights in mining areas in the near future."

Tataryn says many scientists say that reducing the silica dust in the working environment remains the most effective way to prevent silicosis.

"Eliminate the harmful dust and you eliminate the disease," Silicosis scars lung tissue, prevents dust from being expelled and eventually hardens the lung. The process, aluminum prophylaxis, is designed to prevent that.

Theoretically, miners exposed to silica dust can neutralize its harmful effects by breathing in the aluminum dust for 10 minutes each day before entering the mine.

One theory is that aluminum dust in the lungs coats or covers the silica dust, prevents scarring and allows the dust cell to carry the foreign particles out of the lungs.

Tataryn says the process was developed in 1936 by the McIntyre Porcupine Mine, a gold mining company in the Northern Ontario town of Schumacher. It was adopted by Ontario uranium mines and various other mines with silica problems in Canada and the United States.

The McIntyre Research Foundation, a non-profit organization, was founded by the McIntyre mine in 1939 to obtain patents on the use of aluminum powder. More than 190 million individual aluminum powder treatments had been given workers since then.

McIntyre said reasons for using aluminum dust to prevent silicosis are that large quantities of aluminum dust over long periods do not lead to fibrosis of the lung in animals; the inhalation of aluminum is harmless to man and if the inhalation of aluminum can be shown to be a valid therapeutic measure, it can be used as a valid prophylactic.

In 1975, McIntyre told a royal commission on the health and safety of workers in Ontario mines that "the conclusion that metallic aluminum powder, when properly administered, will prevent silicosis in experimental animals now is universally accepted."

But Tataryn said his research turned up a different story.

"Animal experiments have been conducted which contradict McIntyre's claim," Tataryn says. "Almost 30 years ago, other scientists announced that aluminum dust caused fibrosis to develop in exposed animals."

"And by 1959, further published reports in scientific journals noted that the experimental results with different animals are so variable as to make it unjustifiable to apply them to man."

Tataryn says that Dr. David Muir, director of occupational medicine at McMaster University, says that it has been recognized that in some forms of chronic brain degeneration "there does seem to be an abnormal accumulation of aluminum in the brain."

"The important question is whether this can exhibit itself because of occupational exposure to aluminum," says Muir.

Tataryn says results of tests in Germany during the Second World War showed that more than one-quarter of the workers in six poorly-ventilated factories diagnosed by Dr. Godehard Goralewski were suffering from silicosis.

British scientists and a Canadian, Dr. Cecil Shaver, had scrutinized the results after the war and confirmed the analysis.

"It seems to me a damn fool business to be putting a dust in people's lungs in an attempt to counteract the effects of a different dust," Shaver recently told Tataryn.

"believes in dust control," he said.

In Cardiff, Wales, Dr. Peter Elmes said recently that most of the work there was done in the 1940s and 1950s and aluminum dust was abandoned as a useful therapeutic and prophylactic agent as a result.

Elmes said studies on animals and German workers have shown it's not a safe method to prevent silicosis.

OPEC to try uniform price

VIENNA (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is trying to reach a uniform price for natural gas exports from member countries.

Hamid Zaheri, OPEC's chief of information, said after a two-days meeting of experts from eight member countries that the oil cartel was seeking a common formula for pricing natural gas.

Zaheri said the OPEC countries were trying to unify natural gas prices and seeking to compare them with those charged for petroleum products.

Air supply investigated

HULL, Que. (CP) — Complaints of nausea, nose bleeds and fainting spells among 6,500 federal employees at an office development here have prompted health department officials to investigate possible contamination of the building's air supply.

Officials said Tuesday contaminants may be entering the Terrasses de la Chaudiere development beside the Ottawa River through fibreglass ventilation shafts.

Fibreglass shafts are widely used in the United States and meet federal building standards in this country. Campeau Corp., the developers, say they will cooperate with investigators.

Shoyama resigns

OTTAWA (CP) — Tom Shoyama, a top public servant under the previous Liberal government, is resigning.

Prime Minister Clark's office reported that Shoyama said in a letter that he would like to step down as head of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) and as special adviser to the government on constitutional economics either at the end of this month or at the end of October, whichever is most convenient.

A spokesman said the government has accepted that the 63-year-old veteran public servant is leaving but the date has not been decided.

Fortier quits CRTCC

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean Fortier, a vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, is leaving the regulatory body to become general manager of the Quebec Film Institute.

Fortier, 47, was appointed to the commission in April, 1976. He is a former mathematics professor at Laval University and also served a term as president of the Quebec branch of the federal Liberal party.

His resignation follows on the heels of that of commission chairman Pierre Camu and leaves three vacancies in the nine-member executive committee.

Embargo called for

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington's congressional members have called for a secondary embargo on Canadian imports if an immediate resolution is not reached in a fisheries dispute which has resulted in the seizure of 19 American tuna boats.

Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem. Wash.) called the seizures and confiscation of some of the vessels "catches" "imprudent and objectionable," especially since the U.S. "was negotiating in good faith to end the conflict" at the time.

Miami residents defeat vote

MIAMI (AP) — Residents of Dade County, Fla., have voted down a chance to wipe out virtually all their county property taxes.

The final count in the special referendum election Tuesday showed 165,140 votes against the tax cut and 89,200 in favor of it. About 37 per cent of the county's 715,000 registered voters turned out.

The referendum would have cut an average homeowner's bill for services from $300 to 16 cents.

Livestock conditions checked

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Humane Societies plans to investigate the living conditions of livestock raised by mass production methods.

Executive-director Neal Jothan says the group is particularly concerned about the restricted quarters given to calves, pigs and chickens.

Veal calves are confined in total darkness in pens and fed low-iron diets to keep their meat as white as possible, he said. Chickens are crowded to the point where they sometimes turn to cannibalism. And pigs may develop ulcers if their living quarters are too close.

Jobs for Handicapped sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will spend $450,000 to find out what kinds of industrial and commercial jobs handicapped persons can handle, it was announced Tuesday.

Supply Minister Roch LaSalle said in a statement the three-part study will be conducted in co-operation with the Canadian Council of Rehabilitation Workshops.

"The next step will be the establishment of programs to develop skills to the point where management of rehabilitation workshops will be in a position to take on contracts to supply the government and private sector markets."

Pink and blue shower

STANSTEAD (DB) — Mrs. Denis Distefano was pleasantly surprised on Tuesday evening, September 11, when she was invited to the Legion home in Stanstead to be met at the door by her youngest daughter Sabrina, who pinned a corsage of baby articles on her mother's dress and escorted her to a prettily decorated chair between her eldest daughter Brenda and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Marielle Distefano, who helped her open the many beautifully wrapped parcels, containing knitted sets, sleepers, blankets and many more items for the new baby. Another daughter Wanda took care of the gifts after they had been passed around.

The mother-to-be thanked everyone for the lovely gifts and the hostesses, Mrs. Joyce Simoneau, Mrs. Gail Bishop and Mrs. Sue Poulin, for giving the shower.

Prizes were won by Tammy Bishop, guessing the number of macaroni pieces in a jar, Mrs. Sally Perrault guessing the chosen number and Mrs. Denis Parent for having a dot on her cup.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, including a shower cake iced in pink and blue with a tiny baby in the centre of the cake and blocks on each corner. It was made and decorated by Mrs. Joyce Simoneau of Rock Island. About forty guests attended from the Border area.

Ann Landers says

Nibblers add to food costs

Dear Ann: I am a 24-year-old wife and mother of two. Recently I read something surprising in our local paper and I'd like to know if it could possibly be true.

The article was headlined "Supermarket Grazers Out to Munch." It went on to say that people in supermarkets often help themselves to fruit, packages of cookies, candy, cheese, potato chips and so on and enjoy a free snack while they do their marketing. They then leave the empty or half-eaten merchandise on a shelf somewhere and go merrily on their way.

The article goes on to say large food stores work on a profit margin of six tenths of one percent, which means a person who buys an $80.00 order and opens a box of cookies kills the profit on the entire order.

I can't believe this. I thought merchants charge consumers at least twice what the items cost them. Will you please check this out? — Sometimes Nibbler In Bridgeport, Conn.

Dear S. Nib: According to Wesley Christopherson, president of Jewel Company, headquartered in Chicago, the figures cited in the newspaper article are close to the industry's average.

Mr. Christopherson said, however, that the bulk of the loss is not due to cookie and potato chip nibbling, but shoplifting and other unexplained disappearances of merchandise.

Dear Ann Landers: You must have been absent the day your answer to "Pooped In California" appeared in the paper. It did not sound like your usual wisdom. "Pooped" complained that her husband gets furious if she slips out of bed before the morning "ritual" of sex. (He then punished her by refusing to let her use the car that day.)

You replied, in part, "If it's only a few minutes you should agree to accommodate him in exchange for his promise to leave you alone before the alarm clock goes off."

Could THAT answer come from the Ann Landers who teaches teenagers how to say no to sex and encourages people to avoid being a party to anything they don't want to participate in?

"Pooped In California" wants to keep peace with a man who has a weird notion that sex is an exercise for his health. The poor fool never learned what a joy it can be as an expression of love between BOTH parties. Please, Ann, give her an answer that will give her freedom of choice without guilt. — Married To My Lover

Dear Married: Every word that appears in the column is written by me and I accept full responsibility for it. I was not absent the day that column was written — but my brains must have been on vacation. Hundreds of readers (all women) nailed me to the mast for that insensitive reply. The poison darts are still coming from all directions and there is no place to hide! The answer was a bummer and I admit it.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a mother who was distraught because her child was biting her fingernails down to the quick and eating the skin. You told her this was a symptom of deeper problems and to seek professional help.

My son does the same thing, only it's his toenails he bites. The child is nearly four, stutters so bad he can hardly talk. What do you recommend? — Also Distraught

Dear Also: Your pediatrician can advise you. Call him ... or her.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the reader who didn't know how to address a business letter (Dear Sir?

Dear Sir or Madam? To Whom It May Concern? Dear Person?) inspired this one. I hope it helps all those people out there who are stumped.

Why say "Dear" anybody? Is Mr. Jones really dear to you? Do you even know him? What does it mean anyway? What purpose does it serve? Why use it? That salutation is in the same class as the standard closing, "Very Truly Yours." What does THAT mean? Are you "truly" his? If not, why use it?

The best salutation of all is NO salutation. Unless you are friendly with the person, I say get on with what you want to say and skip the meaningless frills. — St. Louis Woman -- No Diamond Rings

Dear St. Louis Woman: Of all the letters I received on the subject, yours was the most practical. You win the brass ring. Sorry it's not a diamond!

Remove mildew from dresses

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — I have some long formals with mildew on them and have tried sponging with peroxide and soaking in a safe bleach but neither helped. I do not want to discard them. What can I do? — V.V.T.

DEAR POLLY — My daughter spilled soda on an expensive dress her grandmother gave her and I made the mistake of throwing it in the clothes hamper. When I was ready to wash it a couple of days later there was mildew over a good part of it. I think part of the dress is cotton and the rest is rayon and polyester. No one can tell me what to do and I wonder if I should give up? — PAULA

DEAR V.V.T. and Paula — Neither of you mentioned the color of your garments but I presume from your letters that all are made of washable fabrics. If the fabrics and colors will take it, rub spots with lemon juice and salt, bleach in the sun and then wash in the usual suds and rinse. When information is sketchy, answers must naturally be "ify." — POLLY

Kay's Kitchen Korner by Kay Taylor

A loaf of fruit bread in the freezer is always a fine idea. Bananas are often procurable at a good price if a little over-ripe which is just fine for

BANANA BREAD
One-third cup shortening
Two-thirds cup (scant) white sugar
2 eggs

1 3/4 cups flour
2 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 bananas (1 cup mashed)

Mix dry ingredients. Add bananas and egg. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes. I would check at 45 minutes. This is a very nice recipe that was given over Channel 3 by Helen Workman many years ago.

I am asked constantly for the recipe. Very simple to do and we like it without spices.

Cook beets till tender. I prefer the smaller ones but large ones may be quartered or sliced. Peel and pack in sterilized jars and pour over the following syrup

1 cup water

3 cups vinegar.

Bring to boil. Pour over the beets. Run silver knife down sides to remove air bubbles. Seal.

The late Mrs. Arthur Woodley gave this to my mother following a church supper. She called it her "One-Two-Three" recipe and I have used it ever since.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Trouble with gas

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Perhaps you can help me with what I consider a serious problem. It may not be serious compared with some others but it is to me. I produce more natural gas than the local gas company and I'm getting better at it all the time.

I just turned 50 and am in perfect shape physically. I'm active and live a busy life. I really don't know what to do about this problem. It's not the kind of subject that's discussed at cocktail parties but after three hours at the theater, I'm ready to pop.

Is this a physiological problem, a diet problem or a sign of an ulcer growing or what? Can you give me some suggestions?

DEAR READER — It's a symptom and it's a fairly common one. About 10 per cent of the general population has difficulties because of trapped gas in the digestive system.

There are two major sources of gas. In many people, it's swallowed air. Some patients object when they're told that they swallow air but a careful analysis has been done by withdrawing the gas and chemically analyzing it. When the gas is mostly nitrogen and oxygen, it is air. The other major source of gas is from fermentation from undigested foods.

To give you a more complete understanding of the gas problem, I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-8, Controlling Gaseousness. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter that I'm sending you explains, all of us swallow air. You can't drink water or any other liquid without swallowing some air. You can't eat food without that happening. This is more apt to occur if you have problems with dentures or some other reason for difficulty in chewing food. The kind of fullness you feel immediately after eating is most often associated with air that's been swallowed and is in the stomach. A generalized distension is often associated with gas in the colon.

The average normal individual will swallow air and it will pass unnoticed by him or anyone else. It's the individual with underlying poor bowel function who's more apt to have gas symptoms. This can be from inadequate bulk in the diet or a spastic or irritable colon. There are certain foods that will contribute to gas.

I often forget to mention it when people ask about gas but physical activity is important. You say you're active. A good walk in the evening helps improve normal colon function and exercises such as sit ups that involve bending and use of the trunk muscle also seem to help.

In the rest of your letter you mentioned a popular product advertised on television for gas and indigestion. Don't pay too much attention to such products. Most of them don't work. It really doesn't matter whether gas comes in little bubbles or big bubbles. It still creates the same amount of bubble trouble.

Equestrian an exciting pastime for Jean-Baptiste

HERVE JEAN-BAPTISTE... competed at Bromont

By NANCY MARTIN
Chicagoan Herve Jean-Baptiste mounts Redruff at Ruth-Ny School of Equitation, and that old grade chestnut twitches his ears and looks good.

Redruff knows who's up. He also knows that Jean-Baptiste might only be 16, but at six feet and 180 pounds, the kid from the Windy City is strong enough to handle him. After all, 13-year-old geldings have a fair amount of zip in them—especially when they're built the way Redruff is with a powerful neck, deep chest and strong legs.

Jean-Baptiste, son of Dr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Jean-Baptiste, has been riding Redruff since 1975, when he first attended Ruth-Ny as a camper, taking equitation lessons with his younger sister France.

Both his parents rode for pleasure, and his maternal grandfather, Dr. Romeo Veilleux, used to raise standardbreds which he raced in Sherbrooke.

Jean-Baptiste has competed locally and done well in both three-day event and dressage at St. Lazare, Sherbrooke, Bromont and Dunham. Ruth-Ny's Danielle Bergeron, who competed as an individual with the Canadian Combined Event Team at the World Championship in Kentucky last September, is the rider Jean-Baptiste admires most.

Bergeron believes that he could be ready for serious competition, possibly international, in two years.

Right now, though, Jean-Baptiste says, "I'd never make preliminary because I don't have my own horse."

He likes horses and competition, especially the three day event. "I like the dressage because I enjoy getting dressed up, and I like the cross-country because it's exciting," he says. "I like show jumping for the same reason."

"I'd like to pursue it, but I won't have time." And why not? He is planning to become a doctor, like his Haitian-born father, a general practitioner in Chicago.

"It's what I always thought of being," says Jean-Baptiste who already has responses for pre-med programs from such schools as Sarah Lawrence, Williams and Brown, all in the U.S.

Those early replies have a lot to do with the school that he has been attending - to say nothing of the work he's done. This fall, Jean-Baptiste enters his last year at the University of Chicago Laboratory High School, which upholds high standards of academic excellence.

During the winter, he rides once a week at Forest View Farms in Oakbrook, Illinois, quite a change from the daily doses he can get at Ruth-Ny.

And he relishes his time in the Townships, where his family spends their summer holidays, not only because of the riding but also because "it's a friendlier atmosphere than in Chicago. I like the people here. I relate to them a lot better."

Of course, he's right. The Townships is friendlier than Chicago. It's easier to relate to people because they're more relaxed.

While he's here, Herve has the respect and the confidence of his instructors at Ruth-Ny, friends among his fellow riders, the network of family and a collected horse beneath him whenever he wants to ride.

Beauties vj for local title

By NELSON WYATT
SHERBROOKE — The excitement is mounting week by week as the semifinals in the Miss Sherbrooke contest approach the crowning of the winner on October 3 at the Cinema Festival Last Monday, eight local lovelies were picked from 19 contestants to try their luck on the big night. Monday's winners were Lynn Desruisseaux, 20, of Sherbrooke; Diana Beekers, 19, of St. Francois Xavier de Brompton; Leona Hamel, 18, of Sawyerville; Lise Lambert, 20 of Rock Forest; Brigitte Lamoureux, 18 of Sherbrooke; Maryse Mathieu, 23, of Bury; Joanne Poulin, 22 of Sherbrooke and Joanne Pye, 18, of Sherbrooke.

The Miss Sherbrooke competition is organized in cooperation with Ronald St. Laurent Productions CKTS, and Disco 2001.

To enter the contest, the contestants had to be between 18 and 25 years of age; a Canadian citizen; unmarried with no plans for engagement in 1979-80; have no children and have a high school leaving certificate or its equivalent.

Judges will focus on five main features during the competition and these will include talent, appearance in a bathing suit and evening gown, improvisation and, most important, an interview with the judges. While physical beauty is important, organizers stress that personality is also a main concern.

Among the prizes that will be won by the lucky girl who is chosen Miss Sherbrooke will be a trip for two, an education bursary, a week in Toronto during the Miss Canada Pageant, a wardrobe and $1,200 in other prizes.

The winner of the Miss Sherbrooke pageant will be crowned by Heidi Quiring, the present Miss Canada.

Noted author to hold show course

By NICOLE LACHARITE
SHERBROOKE — Martha Covington Thorne, well known authoress of "Handling Your Own Dog", a book on show handling, and professional handler, will be attending a two-day obedience and field trials show dog handling course on September 29 and 30.

The main purpose of this type of total immersion clinic is to teach people to handle their own dogs in show. However, after many years of experience with these clinics all over United States and Canada, they are noted for achieving much more. "Handle With Care Clinics" provide an atmosphere where the instructor talks with the students, not to or at them. Martha Covington Thorne was brought in for the Clinic by Mr. and Mrs. Bell of the Club Canin de l'Estrie Inc., who organized the clinic. So, if you are ready to learn the tricks of the trade with this reputable handler in a two-day intensive session full of information and fun, you can register for the complete course, or just for attending without a dog. For all information, contact Mrs. Bell at 819-567-0414.

Though it is hard to sum up Martha Covington Thorne in a few lines, I will leave you with a parody written by her. It's something we can all identify with.

"When you're ready to spit because Fido won't sit and you're dreaming of puppy-dog stew.

When you huff and puff, "Enough is enough", is it the dog? or you? You tell him to stay but he comes anyway 'til you're ready to coat him with glue! You are fit to be tied 'cause his heeling is wide — is it the dog? or you?

Have you made things quite clear to the dear little dear? Have you given him every chance?

While he was a-walking, weren't you talking to Jane about Saturday's dance? You told him to stay with thoughts miles away when he didn't, you thought it a joke.

With a thundercloud from you ordered "Down", then walked off to catch a quick smoke.

Birthday Parties

STANSTEAD (DB) — Mr. Edward Simpson Sr. was pleasantly surprised on Sunday afternoon, September 16, when about 25 of his family and friends dropped in at his summer home in Baldwin's Mills, to help him celebrate his birthday.

The afternoon was spent playing bingo and visiting. Ted received many nice gifts, for which he thanked everyone. At the supper hour, a delicious meal of salads, baked beans and cold meat was served by Mrs. Simpson and daughter Heather. The dessert was ice cream and a beautiful birthday cake iced in cream color with brown and green trim. It was made and decorated by Mrs. Rudy Miller of Rock Island. Later in the evening, as everyone left for home, Ted was wished good health and many more happy birthdays.

BEEBE, Vt. (IH) — Mrs. Katherine Bishop of Beebe, Vt., observed her 98th birthday on Wednesday, September 12.

Although partly confined to her bed at the home of her son-in-law and daughter,

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Greenwood, she was delighted with the flowers, cards and other remembrances she received, along with good wishes for a happy day from her family and friends.

Even at her age, her mind is very keen and she remains her gracious self of earlier days. No celebration was held, but a few dropped in to extend their good wishes in person.

FROM DIFFERENT ANGLES

Note to Mom & Dad

You can use the FROM DIFFERENT ANGLES series as an enjoyable learning experience for the whole family.

However younger children may need some guidance.

Here are a few hints for success:

1. HAVE FUN
2. Work only as long as your child is interested (this may be as short as 10 minutes for small children)
3. Avoid such times as after school or favorite TV shows or when your child is tired or distracted.
4. Check the activity first to make sure that all the materials are on hand.
5. Allow plenty of time to do one activity!
6. Praise success: offer encouragement to the child to continue trying if he or she makes an error.

Everybody lends hand as Expos sweep twinbill

NEW YORK (CP) — Montreal Expos are finding new heroes every day and it's keeping them in the pennant race for the National League East Division. First Wednesday night there was Tony Perez and Ross Grimsley. Then there was Chris Speier and Warren Cromartie. Perez drove in two runs and Grimsley picked up his first win since June 26 as the Expos defeated New York Mets 3-1 in the first game of a doubleheader. Then Speier belted a two-run homer and Cromartie threw out a runner at home plate to sweep the Mets with a 4-1 victory in the second game. The wins, coupled with Pittsburgh's doubleheader split with Philadelphia Phillies, left Montreal one game behind the division-leading Pirates. "Pittsburgh has a good ball club, but I know they're looking over their shoulders and saying: 'When are those Expos going to die?'" said left-hander Rudy May, 10-3, who scattered six hits with a complete-game victory in the nightcap. "Whether we're two games back or 10 games up, there's still a lot of pressure," he said. "But there's pressure on Pittsburgh, too. You didn't see us lay down tonight after two tough losses. I still think we're going to win it. I know that if we don't, I'll be awfully disappointed." EVEN RECORD In the opener, Grimsley, a 20-game winner last season, evened his record at 9-9. He lasted 5 1-3 innings. "He forced them to hit 13 ground balls and that's excellent," manager Dick Williams said. "I think he did exceptionally well even though he had not pitched very much during the last two weeks. I think he'll be even better his next time out." Perez double and single gave the Expos a 2-0 lead in the first game. When New York cut the lead to 2-1 in the sixth, Perez singled in the seventh and scored the insurance run. Woody Fryman provided clutch relief pitching when he came on with the bases loaded and one out in the eighth, striking out Richie Hebner and Ed Kranepool to end the Mets' threat. He then struck out two of the three batters he faced in the ninth. In the second game, May got all the offensive help he needed from Speier, who hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning, and Dave Cash, who added a solo shot in the first. But Cromartie provided the key play of the game in the fifth inning when he threw out Gil Flores at home plate. PLAY WAS CLOSE Flores had singled home the tying run, stolen second and was trying to score on a single by Kelvin Chapman. The play was close but home plate umpire Dave Pallone, a rookie, called the runner out. Mets' third base coach Chuck Cottier, manager Joe Torre and third baseman John Stearns were ejected protesting the call. "Sure he was safe, but what's important is Pallone's decision," said Montreal catcher Gary Carter. A sour note for the Expos were injuries to relief pitcher Stan Bahnsen, infielder Dave Cash and outfielder Ellis Valentine.

EVEN THE HABS HAVE EXPOS FEVER

MONTREAL (CP) — Even the Montreal Canadiens were talking baseball as they arrived for the start of training camp this week. Overcome like most people here by something referred to as "pennant fever," the perennial Stanley Cup champions were swapping opinions in the dressing room about the Montreal Expos and Pittsburgh Pirates, rather than about their own rivals in the National Hockey League. No one is talking hockey except to make the wild prediction that Montreal might win not only the NHL's Stanley Cup this year, but also the Canadian Football League's Grey Cup and baseball's World Series. For the first time in the Expos' lackluster, 10-year history, the team is fiercely challenging the Pirates for a first-place finish in the National Baseball League's Eastern Division. Finishing first would take the Expos to the league's East-West playoff for the pennant and — dare one say it? — on to the World Series against the American League champions. The fever is spreading fast. Four radio stations in the Maritimes and one in Brandon, Man., joined the Expo broadcast network this week. And CBC television decided to cancel its coverage of the Toronto Blue Jays tonight in favor of showing the Expos game against New York Mets. The number of accredited journalists to the games at Montreal's Olympic Stadium has swelled to 135 from the usual average of 60. PRESS BOX FULL "It's standing room only in the press box these days," says the Expos harried publicist, Richard Griffin.

Attendance this year is close to the two-million mark for the season — about 600,000 more than at the same time last year. And home games don't start now until after a deafening three-minute ovation. Aislin, The Gazette's political cartoonist, summed up the excitement Tuesday in his sketch of a pudgy, beer-drinking fan waving an Expos flag and saying the disputes over Petro-Canada, Canada's embassy in Israel and Quebec's place in Canada can wait until the season is over. Montreal's major hotels report that their rooms are fully booked for the Oct. 12-14 weekend, the days the World Series would come to Montreal if the Expos make it. Many of the rooms have been booked by speculating travel agents, one hotel manager said.

Bench leads Reds over Padres 3-2

It doesn't take much to get Johnny Bench excited. Just throw him into a pennant race and watch him go to work. Bench's two-run homer gave Cincinnati Reds a 3-2 victory over San Diego Padres and boosted their lead in the National League West to 2½ games over Houston Astros, which lost to Atlanta Braves 6-5. "I don't know how he could play any better, unless he got a hit every time up," said Reds manager John McNamara of his star catcher, who is hitting .282 with 22 home runs and 75 RBI and has been the team's hottest hitter down the stretch. "He's had a very good year, especially since the All-Star break, when he's hit over .300. And he's done some job catching."

In other NL games, St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs split their twinbill, with the Cards victorious 6-3, then falling 3-2 in 10 innings. Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco Giants 7-2. Braves 6 Astros 5 Glenn Hubbard slammed a three-run homer and Bob Horner had a two-run shot to pace the Braves, who had another hero in Gary Matthews. With the tying run on second and two out in the ninth, Art Howe belted a long drive to right field which Matthews caught over his shoulder while tumbling to the ground. Dodgers 7 Giants 2 Rookie Rick Sutcliffe won his 16th game — he's lost nine — and Ron Cey had a three-run homer for the Dodgers.

In the American League, Kansas City Royals edged division-leading California Angels 6-4 to move to two games behind it. It was the Royals' second win in three games during the current series. Elsewhere, Chicago White Sox shut out Minnesota Twins 6-0, Detroit Tigers upended Baltimore Orioles 5-0, Boston Red Sox blasted Toronto Blue Jays 8-0, New York Yankees trimmed Cleveland Indians 2-0, Texas Rangers beat Oakland A's 9-4 and Milwaukee Brewers bombed Seattle Mariners, 12-1.

Pirates split doubleheader

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for five ninth-inning runs, capped by pinch-hitter Manny Sanguillen's game-winning triple, to beat the Phillies 9-6 in the first game of a two-night doubleheader Wednesday, then saw Philadelphia rally for a 6-5 triumph in the second game. The split meant the Pirates lost a full game to Montreal Expos and lead the National League East by one game. The Expos swept a two-night doubleheader over New York Mets. The Pirates took a 3-0 lead in the first inning of the nightcap on an RBI double by Dave Parker, a run-scoring single by John Milner and a fielder's choice. Pittsburgh increased its lead to 4-0 in the fourth on two singles sandwiched around a sacrifice. Pete Rose opened the Phillies' fourth with a single to extend his hitting streak to 17 games. Bake McBride singled Rose to second, he took third on an infield hit by Mike Schmidt and scored on a sacrifice fly. The Pirates made it 5-1 in the fifth on an RBI single by Bill Madlock. The Phillies made it 5-3 in the fifth on a two-run homer by Del Unser, his fourth pinch-hit home run of the season. They went ahead in the sixth with three runs.

Beavers edge Remparts 5-4

SHERBROOKE (MG) — Sherbrooke Beavers won their third pre-season game 5-4 over Quebec Remparts before 1,420 spectators who preferred hockey over baseball. (The Expos were televised last night.) Sherbrooke native Guy Perreault scored two goals. Other goals were by Dennis Martin, Tim Cranston and Norman Beck. Former Shawinigan Cataracte Marc Genest tallied twice while Daniel Rioux and Rene Labbe added other goals for the Remparts. Corrado Micalef and Yvan Charbonneau stopped 29 out of 33 shots, while Denis Groulx allowed five goals on 39 shots in the Quebec nets. The game was delayed by two fights. Martin Gorman jumped Jocelyn Faucher and the latter clobbered the big Beaver. In another battle, Richard Bourque was beaten cleanly by Mathieu Cloutier. BEAVERS' NOTES: Dennis Martin had seven shots on goal... Remparts were playing without Dave Lichette... Constant Priondolo has been traded from Trois-Rivieres to Montreal for Marcel Tourigny and Rene Marchand... Defenceman Denis Morin was Beavers' captain for the game... Francois James is happy at Montreal Canadiens' training camp. Pierre Larouche has nicknamed him "Jesse James"... At the end of the game, coach Ghislain Delage sent Tim Cranston, Jean-Marc Gault and Mike Laforest on the ice — will it be a new line?
