Where are Colleen Peterson and Myrna Laurie now?

Country music

By DAVE MULHOLLAND

Colleen Peterson and Myrna Laurie: both singers were well-known across Canada a few years ago, but what are they up to these days?

Well, Colleen moved to Nashville in November 1979 and until recently she toured as a back-up singer with The Charlie Daniels Band.

"I really enjoyed seeing the U.S.A. by bus," Colleen says. "It was great playing to huge crowds; sometimes as many as 100,000. I learned how to really sing harmony and gained a lot of confidence."

Peterson fans will be happy to know that Colleen has no intention of abandoning a solo career. The two-time Juno award winner as Most Promising Female Vocalist has just moved from Charlie Daniels's back-up singer to handling his music publishing company.

Her new job will put her in constant touch with Nashville producers, while leaving her enough time to pursue a solo career. But Colleen, who had three albums on Capitol Records, knows it's a rough row to hoe.

"I'll take it one day at a time," she says. "You need the right people around to make it happen, and if it doesn't happen, then I'll figure out why. But I want to be a star. I used to be afraid to say that, but not anymore."

Myrna Laurie was prominent on television for more than a decade. In the late 1960s she was a regular on the Don Messer show. In the early 1970s she co-hosted the CBC's Country Time. In the late 1970s she co-hosted the syndicated Nashville Swing.

If that wasn't enough, Myrna appeared in the movie High Ballin' with Jerry Reed and Peter Fonda, as well as recording a string of hits that won her a Juno award as Country Female Singer of the Year in 1970, and a Big Country award for Outstanding Performance by a Female Vocalist in 1977.

Myrna, however, isn't resting on her laurels. She's now in the studio recording a new album for release this spring.

"I don't know the label yet, but this is a collection of my hits over the years," she says. "I'm doing it for the fans who have supported me. I've had so many requests to put out an album with all my songs on it." The album is being produced by Ken Harnden of Cedar Creek, who is also Myrna's boyfriend.

As for the future, except for guest appearances, Myrna isn't anxious to get back into television. "TV locks you in and takes all your time," she says. "I want more recognition as a songwriter; I want to do more live shows, and I wouldn't mind doing another film."

Bet Your Heart On Me; Johnny Lee; Asylum Records; X5E-541.

Sincerity is the key to Johnny Lee's soft-country style. When he sings Be There For Me Baby, one of 10 songs on this album, he sounds as if he means it and will appreciate it.

Although they're not intense, Lee manages to convey true feelings through his light-country baritone. He understands his strength as a singer and knows how to emphasize it. Lee doesn't try for what he can't handle, so that even up-tempo songs, such as Highways Run On Forever, have a laid-back feel.

Bet Your Heart On Me is the strongest cut on the album, which doesn't have any monster hits like Lookin' For Love, but makes for most enjoyable listening. Relaxed contemporary country.

Movies — good, bad, indifferent — are here to stay

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Movies — the good, the bad and the schlocky — don't have to die.

They can live on and on, be it in an Icelander's prized video cassette collection, served along with the saki on a Japanese airline flight or offered on a Texas pay TV station.

That's the lesson of the second American Film Market, where hundreds of English-language films, a fair percentage of them Canadian, were gobbled up by foreign buyers hungry for a product to plug into the expanding video cassette, pay TV and airline flight market.

Closed to the public, the international film market wrapped up several days of hot and heavy deal-making recently with predictions that total sales would far exceed the $80 million in sales transacted at last year's market when the AFM first burst on the scene as a cocky rival to the established and pricey film market at Cannes.

About 1,500 buyers from such far-flung countries as Finland and Malaysia picked among 200 films, 35 of them Canadian, offered mostly by independent marketing companies. Though 200 films were offered, most companies also had catalogues for buyers listing less recent films.

By week's end, the market site — the Westwood Plaza, a Holiday Inn and office tower on Wilshire Boulevard — smelled distinctly like a locker room where all the players smoke cigars.

"People were buying by the pound," said the Canadian Film Development Corp.'s director of marketing and distribution, Jocelyne Pelchat-Johnson.

At the market, Pelchat-Johnson headed up Film Canada, a newly formed promotion vehicle for the Canadian industry in general and, specifically, as an informal representative for nine Canadian feature films not being handled by marketing companies.

ECHOES EXPERIENCE

Echoing the general experience at the second AFM, she noted that up to 85 per cent of the Canadian sales had been in the cassette and pay TV area, as opposed to purchase for theatrical release. She estimated that about $1,250,000 in foreign sales had been made on the nine Canadian films handled by Film Canada.

Film Canada's films included the stylish, but hard-to-sell black comedy Head On, starring Canadian actor Stephen Lack and Sally Kellerman, with a cameo performance by director John Huston, and Stone Cold Dead, a shock thriller made several years ago.

New drama collective celebrates women's choice

TORONTO (CP) — A young woman sits on the stage looking squarely into the audience with just a hint of teenage awkwardness she recounts how she met her husband and the bittersweet feelings of her sexual encounters with an elusive pilot.

The heroine, from a short story by Alice Munro, is one of the many voices of women portrayed by the Toronto Women's Drama Collective.

The collective, less than a year old, was the idea of Helen Porter, a University of Toronto English professor and a professional story-teller. Porter, along with three friends — Randi Helmers, an art student, Barb Janes, a ministry student, and Mira Friedlander, a theatre critic and freelance journalist — put together a collection of stories, poems and songs which they feel portray a vision of women in society.

"We decided women's choices would be our theme," said Porter, 35, in an interview.

"Whether you stay at home and have a baby, go to work and have a career, whether you love men or women. That choice is one to be celebrated."

USE MANY MEMBERS

To help put their message across without sounding like "harsh strident feminists," the women have chosen work from a cross-section of literary talents, including Margaret Atwood, Sylvia Plath, Bertolt Brecht, Jane Rule, and American poet Marg Piercy.

The collective portrays women as mothers, daughters, wives, career women, lesbians and farmers. Porter wants the audience to feel many of the characters in the production could be their next-door neighbors.

Many of the characterizations are based on real-life situations. For example, before attempting to tell Jane Rule's story, the Killer Dyke and the Lady, Porter said she visited a women's gay bar in Toronto to see what it was like to be gay.

"We went to the gay women's club. I liked it. I walked around, noticed a lot. (Before) I had an imuge (of a lesbian) that's not true. Many of them are quite soft."

CAPTURES VISION

Porter said the production, entitled Loving Women, doesn't focus on one kind of woman, but attempts to capture a vision of an integrated woman like the philosophy espoused by American feminist Betty Friedan's latest book. Or, as she said in the words of poet Marge Piercy, "A strong woman . . . what comforts her is others loving her equally for her strength and weakness."

Some may feel the production's message is passe and there really isn't any need for more feminist propaganda. But Porter disagrees.

"I feel that women don't feel supported in their choices. There's a lot of tension and worry for career women. There's the worry and guilt that I'm aggressive. I'm ignoring my children.

"We think women need support very deeply. One of the purposes of having the collective is to offer that support to various women and also to bring attention to society that things are not fine for women now.

"I still don't believe there is equal status."

Friedlander, the collective's director, said she believes the group fills a gap.

"Now is the time for feminism. Up until now (it) was very trendy. But now people are getting angry and pissed off."

Chicago's Dinner Party packs 'em in at Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — The Dinner Party, the controversial feminist sculpture created by artist Judy Chicago that has been shunned by some American museums, is a moveable feast drawing record crowds here.

"We were surprised in a way," says Arlette Blanchet, curator at Montreal's Musee d'art contemporain where the exhibit has attracted 35,000 visitors since it opened three weeks ago.

"It's the biggest exhibition we've had since the museum opened in 1964. We only get about 60,000 visitors in one year."

The "dinner party" created by the California artist is a symbolic history of women's achievements in Western civilization depicted in a series of 39 place settings on an open triangular table.

Chicago says while women have made contributions to the development of human civilization, "these contributions had been and continued to be consistently ignored, denied or trivialized."

The plates, flatware, chalices and napkins at each setting rest on an embroidered runner done in the needlework of the women's time and commemorates either mythological or historical figures.

Each woman is represented by the china-painted plates bearing the controversial "butterfly-vagina" motifs — a symbol of liberation — but have been described as vulgar and grotesque by some art critics.

DESIRE FREEDOM

The sexual image — an oval-shaped centre that resembles the female vagina or vulva — begins to rise up on the plates of those women in the last century, serving as a metaphor for women's desire to be free.

In an audio tape available at the museum, Chicago describes the 13 plates on each table as "a reinterpretation of the Last Supper from the point of view of those who have done the cooking throughout history."

Among the 39 females represented are: Hatshepsut, an Egyptian Pharaoh; Hypatia, a Roman scholar and philospher; Emily Dickinson, poet; novelist Virginia Woolf and Susan B. Anthony, who led the fight for women's suffrage in the U.S. American artist Georgia O'Keeffe is the only woman symbolized who is still living.

Commenting on criticism for using pink lace for Dickinson's motif when she was such a strong woman, she says: "Of course, she was a strong woman but she was almost smothered by the Victorian ideal."

The Dinner Party table rests on a large triangular floor made up of 2,300 porcelain tiles, on which are inscribed the names of 999 women of achievement, including several Canadians such as B.C. artist Emily Carr.

"I use the form of an equilateral triangle because the triangle is one of the early signs for women, an ancient symbol for the goddess — and the equilateral form represents the equalized world we are all striving to make."

Chicago's monument, which took 400 people and six years to make, cost about $250,000. It drew record crowds at its first showing in 1979 at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.

But the installation sculpture was subsequently panned by some critics who described it as "kitsch" so that museums which had considered booking the exhibit began to cancel out.

The Dinner Party went into storage until women's groups demanded it be taken out and put on show in Houston, Boston, Brooklyn, Cleveland and Chicago.

The current exhibit, which continues until May 2, is unique in that it is only the second site — except for San Franciso — in which total expenses were paid for by the host institution, said Blanchet.

The Dinner Party, which is being shown along with an exposition of Quebec women artists, is attracting visitors from across Canada and the United States.

"It's the biggest attraction in the world for a living artist," said Blanchet. "People in Boston were paying $15 to $20 on the black market to see it.

"And they can't believe that it (admission) is free here."

1982: The year of Grease 2, Star Trek 2 and Rocky 3

Hollywood is suffering from a case of the nervous burps, with the movie line-up for 1982 a sputtering of sequels and remakes.

Paramount has announced Star Trek 2, Grease 2, Friday the 13th 2 and Airplane 2.

Universal, which just released a pricey Freudian remake of the '40s scare classic Cat People, will also do The Sting 2, without Robert Redford and Paul Newman, and Halloween 3 when witchcraft enters the computer age.

MGM-United Artists has announced The Return of the Black Stallion and Rocky 3.

Filmways has Death Wish 2 and Amityville Horror 2.

Steven Spielberg will do a sequel to Raiders of the Lost Ark and George Lucas is working on his third Star Wars flick.

There's also talk of a remake of that wistful 1930s classic Grand Hotel. Just pondering who will be cast to play Garbo's world-weary ballerina to Fairbank's shabby, cavalier jewel thief makes one despair the Hollywood play-safe mentality.

Frank Capra, who decades ago directed such sparkling films as It Happened One Night and Mr. Smith Goes to Washington had some sound advice recently when he received the American Film Institute's Life Achievement Award.

Don't follow trends, start trends, Capra told his audience.

Only the daring should make films and only the morally courageous are worthy of speaking to their fellow men for two hours in the dark.

Part of the current problem is that more and more of the major studios are owned by, or have become giant multinational companies, for whom the movie business represents but a small part of their earnings.

The rumor at Twentieth Century-Fox, which also owns Pepsi-Cola, is that the remaining, wonderfully nostalgic studio lot, where people thread their way to work through the exterior sets of Hello Dolly, will be razed to make way for profitable office towers and condominiums.

Over at Universal, the back lot was reorganized so the movie-making won't interfere with the profitable, dependable tourist tours of the studio which last year accounted for $60 million in revenue.

Yet despite its preoccupation with glossy drek, Hollywood has always had an omnivorous appetite for new talent.

The latest group to find themselves in the trendy throes of a Hollywood embrace are the Australians.

Canada, home of archaic wine laws

Wine bits

BY TIMOTHY BELFORD

No country on earth has liquor laws quite as strange as Canada's. Each province from east to west adds its own peculiar twist to the age old pursuit of Bacchus while the federal government through its taxation system manages to throw another spanner in the works all on its own.

Take beer for instance. In Ontario, P.E.I., Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Newfoundland it can only be purchased in a government-controlled outlet. In Quebec, practically any corner store will do. In Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, hotels act as sales agents and in B.C. beer can be purchased in any public house.

In Ontario singing was at one time forbidden and if you wished to move from table to table a waiter had to be summoned to carry your beer. In Newfoundland singing was nearly a requirement and in Quebec moving from table to table was part of the socializing inherent in drinking itself.

Another oddity is that each province maintains its own pricing structure for alcohol depending upon the particular regional axe it has to grind. For instance in Ontario, local wines receive a favorable break over foreign imports in the mark-up levels while wines from outside the province are marked up at a rate somewhere in between. In B.C. on the other hand, foreign wines are taxed at the same rate as wines from anywhere outside the province including Ontario. In Quebec where even the "domestic" wines are made from imported grapes, outsiders are taxed at the same rate, with the French and Italians in the same boat as the foreigners from Ontario.

Most of Canada's liquor laws stem from the desire of those in power to save the working man from the sins of drunkenness. The only reason provincial governments can get away with the outrageous taxation of wines and spirits is that alcohol is bad for you and at the same time sinful. This unusual idea stems from the Victorian legislators who were responsible for the present systems. They, after all, had to protect their investments and a drunken work force would never do.

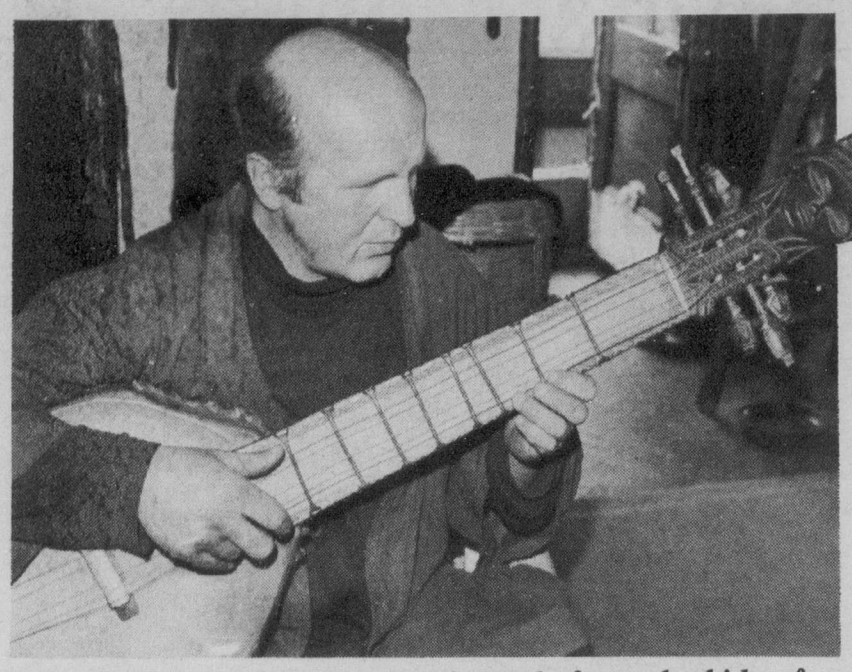
If you think I'm wrong ask yourself then why taverns were designed for men only and kept as dark and uncomfortable as possible until only recently. The answer is simple. Workers will drink but don't make enjoyable, no singing no walking and definitely no fraternizing with dubious ladies.

This is also the reason that liquor is taxed at a rate 2.8 times that of either beer or wine. By maintaining the price at an artificially high level you ensure the masses can only afford beer or wine and not the considerably more powerful "hard liquors."

An unfortunate side effect of all these laws is that wine is lumped together with beer and spirits as a luxury instead of being considered, as it is in almost all other civilized countries, as a food as necessary to a complete life as bread and salt. Because those who made the laws were essentially protestant and rich, imbued with ideas of the "work ethic", that unbelievable Calvinistic claptrap, our laws concerning wine were, to say the least, archaic.

Unfortunately things are very unlikely to change. The governments, both federal and provincial, are on to a good thing and unlikely to throw away a multi-million dollar source of revenue.

If wine and beer are really taxed because they are luxuries then why not pepsi and potato chips? Why not a surtax on chocolate bars and don't forget the gum chewers. Yes, there must be a more equitable and rational way of treating the nation's drinkers. What do you suggest? Cheers.



Krpan's guitar-like instrument is made from the hide of a neighbor's late cow.

Jason Krpan: City potter in a country setting

By Carla Straessle

GEORGEVILLE — In a village of many interesting individuals, one of the most interesting and best-known is the resident potter, Jason Krpan. His diverse background may account in part for his variety of interests, his original approach to life, and his unique way of doing things.

Born in Yugoslavia, Krpan left for Austria with his family before the Second World War. In 1948, when Jason was 10, they moved to Winnipeg where they had relatives. Krpan said he later spent some time in the Okanagan Valley and in Calgary, but didn't really like either of them.

Sixteen years ago, Krpan met a potter in Winnipeg who offered to take him on as an apprentice. He soon found he needed his own work space. This opportunity arose on his first trip to the Townships when a friend of a friend in Fitch Bay offered Krpan the use of a workshop and kiln if he would take care of the animals.

He liked the area and arranged to buy a house in Fitch Bay, but the transaction was never completed. When someone he met from Georgeville told him about a small house for sale there, he found that it met his requirements and so, bought it instead. He is gradually adding onto it.

Soft-spoken Krpan said he was "basically a city person" until he moved to the Townships, aside from the two years he spent out west. He now lives by the philosophy that, by living in the country, he can reduce his overhead, but added "self-sufficiency is a myth — you always need some cash." "It's just that in the country you need less and therefore spend less time making it and more time on other things," he explained. "I'd rather have more time than money."

In keeping with this philosophy, potting is only seasonal work for Krpan. He works in concentrated periods according to pecuniary needs. He said he cleans up his workshop before starting, goes to work for as long as he needs to, then doesn't touch clay for months. His workshop is in a separate building and houses a 30 cubic foot gas kiln.

His works consist of basically functional pieces and he said he doesn't sell through boutiques because he has managed to develop a private clientele in Montreal, mostly through word of mouth. He takes his work into the city once a year and also sells a small quantity from his home.

In his effort to keep his overhead down, Krpan cultivates an ever-expanding garden; the produce is frozen or dried for winter use. At present, he is growing seed lettuce in a small greenhouse off his living room.

Because he lives so near Lake Memphremagog, Krpan said he has developed a strong interest in fishing and added, "I fish too much." The unique element in his approach to fishing is that he builds his own plywood boats he described as "fairly simple." They are light, intended for use with small motors, and artistically painted with original designs. "All my boats have out-riggers for stability -- I have a lot of respect for the lake." He recounted how he made a row boat two years ago, but found the lake too rough. After rowing eight or 10 miles, catching only a tiny fish, then pushing the boat back up the road to his house on the trailer he designed for this purpose, he found he was quite exhausted. He tried an electric motor which also failed him, and so sticks to his trusty little gas one. "It gives me trouble all the time -- it has to be cleaned every two miles or so but I know how to repair it and so it's fairly reliable."

On occasion, Krpan uses his fishing expeditions, to collect large pieces of driftwood from the lake and plants them in a circle around his house. If the lake is calm when he's fishing, he'll load up the boat with interesting pieces. He claimed he has a few favorite spots but would not reveal their locations.

Besides his impressive potting and boat-building, are Krpan's inspired wood-working skills. He puts them to functional use also, making mostly small useful and decorative objects such as spoons, utensils, handles for tools, or pendants. He said "Give me a Christmas tree, I can make $25 worth of stuff." These works are not for sale, however.

Krpan combines his wood-working skills with his musical ability and interest to make beautiful carved and painted flutes of varying size as well as a string instrument resembling a large mandolin with an intricately-carved mahogany neck, and pine body, and a raw-hide top from his neighbor's late cow. He said its soft tone makes it good for playing before going to bed or meditating. He has also made several carved hollow drums or congos, one of which doubles as a lamp whose light bulb serves to keep the skin dry and tight.

Krpan admitted that he had a short career teaching ballroom dancing at an Arthur Murray institute in Winnipeg. This was during the late fifties which he described as "the golden era of ballroom dancing." The instructors were taught there and he remarked that "lots of times the teachers needed more help than the students." He said he had a good rapport with his students but gave it up when it became "too much of a con job."

Krpan said he would eventually like construct a new house from scratch. It remains to be seen what sort of innovative approach he will adopt for this future project.

Nevilles are on their way to best album of the year

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

The Neville Brothers FIYO ON THE BAYOU (A&M)

When Keith Richards dropped a casual aside during a Rolling Stone interview, as to a cassette he slipped onto his deck being the "best album of the year", a lot of folks who had never heard of the group he cited got curious about them. The Neville Brothers, a four man combo that plays the funkiest New Orleans style R&B going, do indeed have a big winner with their FIYO ON THE BAYOU long-player. The brothers, Art, Aaron, Charles and Cyril assemble a cast of thousands, including keyboards man Mac Rebennack (Dr. John), for an up-beat workout of rhythm and blues on such blazing numbers as "Hey Pocky Way" and "Fire On The Bayou". The Nevilles are joined by the singing voices of the Persuasions, on a reverent tribute to the rock classic "The Ten Commandments Of Love", which never sounded better, and on the strength of this great doo-wap tune, the Nevilles could become Top 40 candidates.

Some authentic Mardi Gras sounds are worked into "Brother John-Iko Iko", and "Mona Lisa", the Nat King Cole chesnut is dedicated, oddly enough, to Bette Midler. FIYO ON THE BAYOU is such a carefully crafted, lovingly layered album of funky songs, that even non-fans of R&B will not fail to be impressed with the Neville Brothers' successful blending of old rock, bayou-funk and chunkin' good back-beat music! Keith Richards has a point!

April Wine THE BEST OF APRIL WINE ROCK BALLADS. (CAPITOL)

Time has been kind to April Wine. They hardly seem like a band that has even been around long enough to stack together such a collection of hit rock -- and this album only gathers the ballads into a convenient, ultra-playable disc. There is the signature song for all aspiring bands -- "Cum Here The Band", with its perfectly captured mood of pride and apprehension as the singer implores his love to be present for the band's debut -- "Billy's called he's got the van, and Dean's got a set of drums, and I borrowed this old guitar, We're hopin' someday we'll all go far, and maybe we'll write a tune, And drive in a limousine, See our picture in a magazine, So won't you be there, Cum hear the band on Friday night".

Fine old April Wine from the pen of one of the most under-rated rock writers in Canada, Myles Goodwyn -- "You Won't Dance With Me", with its soft acoustic guitar backings and the always tuneful A. Wine choristers hitting the bridges, is mellow wine to be sure. Here too is "Rock 'N Roll Is A Vicious Game", and the only song of the 12 on the album not written by Goodwyn, "I'm On Fire For You Baby". Mixed in with the great guitar songs are piano numbers such as "Comin' Right Down On Top Of Me", and "Just Between You And Me", which reveals why April Wine has been such a consistent band -- they went to school for their Beach Boy harmonies and passed with straight As -- April Wine sings as well as any band in North America, and these 12 rock ballads are proof positive.

Johnny Cash ENCORE (COLUMBIA)

The Man in Black has a compilation album of material that has been lifted from several of his most recent albums. There's an autobiographical, tongue-in-cheek ditty recalling the Sun years called "I Will Rock and Roll With You", which mentions most of the Sun stable and producers -- Elvis, Sam Phillips and Jack Clement. "Without Love" has been lifted from the challenging record that John made with Britain's Nick Lowe of Rockpile at the pot controls. The sparks flew when the country legend met the modern rockabilly rock artist, and Lowe was able to push Johnny in some directions that he hadn't travelled since the early scuffling days when he rode the pill-popping one-nighter circuit.

Two duets reminiscent of the Dylan hook-up that Johnny Cash did with the folk hero years ago, are performed with George Jones ("I'll Say It's True") and Marty Robbins, ("Song of the Patriot"). The Cash-Jones duet has a Jerry Lee Lewis pumping piano on it as an example of how far Johnny has matured since the Tennessee Two days. A Bobby Darin hit is covered by John, with his fine version of "Lady Came From Baltimore", which is a standout on ENCORE, while "Cold Lonesome Morning" has full instrumentation, and the tic-tock beat of the early Cash tunes driven by sad-faced Luther Perkins' Fender bass strings. The Frankie Laine hit of the fifties, "Ghost Riders In The Sky" is perfect for Cash's low, rumbling baritone voice, and the Nashville horns in the arrangement might be a shock to the Opry crowd, but they fit the Brian Ahern production perfectly. Hopefully Cash will not pursue the easy route of interpreting other singers' material too long -- his forte was in discovering fresh new material such as Shel Silverstein's "A Boy Named Sue" and singing them with his inimitable grumbly vocals that are instantly identified with country music.

Steve Hackett CURED (COLUMBIA)

The last of the 1973 version of Genesis (SELLING ENGLAND BY THE POUND) to release a solo album, Steve Hackett is the fifth member of the band to hit the solo trail. Successes by Mike Rutherford, Peter Gabriel, Tony Banks, and recently the block-buster album by Phil Collins would point to a good chance of Hackett having a substantial hit. Public hunger for Genesis material may send CURED soaring, and it is a typical Genesis spin-off -- Corsby, Stills, Nash and Young vocals lead off "Hope I Don't Wake", and the remainder of the record includes moody instrumentals, a classical guitar piece, and songs that are as unlike one another as Hackett's style is different from Collins's. Genesis fanatics will relish anything that is even remotely connected with that band; good news for Steve Hackett.

Struggle grasps basic understanding of Afghanistan

By Timothy Belford

THE STRUGGLE FOR AFGHANISTAN, by Nancy Peabody Newell and Richard S. Newell, Cornell University Press.

The mountain tribes that inhabit Afghanistan are, to say the least, tenacious. They cling to an existence that even for the relatively well-off inhabitants of the few fertile valleys is severe in aspect and limited in outlook. It is perhaps because of this distinct lack of material wealth and well being that the Afghanis also defend their freedom and personal dignity with a steadfastness bordering on ferocity.

Throughout the last two millenia nations as diverse as Greece, Britain and Czarist Russia have tried with little or no success to subjugate this mountainous country wedged between Iran the U.S.S.R. and Pakistan. All have met with failure, defeated as much by the inhospitable terrain and the extremes of climate as by the armed defence of the skilled but poorly organized tribesmen.

The latest chapter in the history of Afghanistan is now being written as the military might and expertise of the Russian nation is once again being thrown against the tribesmen in an all-out effort to conquer the country. According to the authors, Nancy and Richard Newell, the western world would be well advised to harbor no illusions, "The invasion was mounted not to reinforce Soviet control but to establish it."

The Newells are at great pains in their book to make this point particularly clear. The Soviets, they say, never managed to control the series of "Marxist" puppets that have ruled Afghanistan since the return of Muhammad Daoud with the backing of the Parcham party in 1973.

In every case, whether under Daoud, Nur Muhammad Turaki or Hafizullah Amin — himself killed by the Soviets when he refused to follow instructions — the Russians have failed in their efforts to make the Afghan state subservient to Moscow's orders. Even under the present leader, Babrak Karmal, placed in the job by force of Soviet arms, the Russians have failed to rally the support of even a sizeable minority of Afghanis. According to the Newells, the resistance to Russian intervention is in actuality growing with each passing day.

The problems facing Afghani resistance are however, enormous. The traditional tribal mistrust between Pushtun and Tajik, between Uzbek and Hazara and between Nuristani and Baluch is hard to overcome and makes coordinated military planning extremely difficult. The age-old problem of survival has also been exacerbated with the onslaught of open war fare. Last, but hardly least the tribesmen face perhaps the most powerful military force in the world.

The Struggle for Afghanistan is an extremely useful tool for anyone wishing to grasp a basic understanding of the situation. The Newells have combined history and a sense of journalism to paint an over view of the Afghanistan crisis that gives the reader a concise account of events leading up to the Russian invasion of 1979. The book is also interesting in its speculations and conclusions since the Newells give a new meaning to the invasion by putting it into the context of being the first instance of a third world country having been invaded by the Soviet Union against assured international condemnation and despite the fact it offered no threat to the U.S.S.R. itself.

The Newells suggest the Russians cannot control anything apart from the few major urban centres they now possess without a substantial increase in the level of their military involvement. Pointing to an increasing unification of the resistance movements and an accelerated level of desertions within the Afghani army, the authors maintain the Soviets will need to double their present military commitment with the number of troops needed possibly rising to 300,000.

Meanwhile, Afghani resistance continues to grow despite the lack of overt support from any major western nation and the spectres of a Soviet Viet Nam haunts the Kremlin.

Outdoor ceremony to include more non-politicians

Weather permitting, Queen Elizabeth will proclaim Canada's constitution outside the Parliament Buildings, rather than in the Senate chamber, so more Canadians can watch in person.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced the change Tuesday in a news release, giving in to criticism that too few non-politicians would get a chance to see the historic ceremony if it were held in the Senate.

"That's the reason pretty well," said one royal visit planner. "It's to make it more available to the public."

The ceremony, to be held April 17, will be televised whether it is held outdoors or is forced back inside by cold or stormy weather.

Canadians are happier than Americans says a University of Guelph philosophy professor after 12 years of research.

Alex Michalos, an American who came to Canada 16 years ago, looked at 1,700 individual lifestyle questions. Canada scored 884 points, America received 775.

Canada gained a clear lead for factors such as a lower crime rate, better health care, greater access to education and abundant energy supplies.

Michalos uncovered several other interesting items. More Americans believe in the devil which is "mush-headed" thinking, he says. Canadians are less racist and sexist and more politically involved than Americans.

He also found Canadians live a year longer than Americans and the rate of venereal disease in this country is 50 per cent less than in the U.S.

But he found Canadians drink more.

Michalos would be received with open arms by David Owen, a professor of business administration at the University of Manitoba.

Owen and several colleagues have established an informal club which meets once a month for lunch and pep talks to combat business pessimism.

The Entrepreneurs Club in Winnipeg invites speakers who focus on the more practical side of business.

"We haven't aggressively marketed the idea," says Owen. "When you get a bunch of people like this, nobody's got the time or inclination to spend a lot of time organizing."

Sen. Eugene Forsey, the country's leading constitutional expert, kept quiet and hit the deck when he was recently involved in a robbery at a Bank of Nova Scotia branch.

"I was counting my money as I always do when I happened to look up and see this weedy, spindly looking youth with a brownish stocking over his face come through the door," Forsey said.

Sen. Eugene Forsey... more than a withdrawal at the bank.

Keeping up

He said the youth was accompanied by another man and both were armed.

Forsey thought at first it was one of the teller's friends come to take her home but changed his mind when ordered to lie down.

The robbers escaped with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Sir Ranulph Fiennes and Charles Burton sipped champagne in —32 C Saturday night after planting the British flag at the North Pole.

The two are the first men ever to cross both poles in a single voyage, but they still face a perilous journey home to England.

"Satellite pictures and aircraft have reported enormous areas of open pack ice and sea water normally frozen for the next two months," Fiennes said in a tape-recorded message.

The two men set out from Greenwich, England, on Sept. 2, 1979, headed south across Europe and Africa and reached the South Pole on Dec. 15, 1980.

Turning northward, they sailed from Australia to Los Angeles, then steamed through the Bering Strait to the Yukon River. The two finally set off for the North Pole from Ellesmere Island on Feb. 12 this year.

Prince Charles, who provided some financial backing for the adventurers, called the trek a "mad but marvellous" undertaking.

Actress and political activist Jane Fonda and her husband, Tom Hayden, found themselves on the other side of a picket line when they decided to renovate their home in Santa Monica, Calif.

The two veterans of numerous demonstrations were picketed by several construction workers claiming non-union workers were being used.

Hayden, who is seeking the Democratic nomination as state assemblyman from West Los Angeles, said the demonstration was "clearly a political manoeuvre."

However, he conceded some non-union bricklayers had been used on the renovation.

Leif Petterson will be handling a microphone rather than a football this season.

The 31-year-old former wide receiver with the Canadian Football League's Saskatchewan Roughriders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats announced his retirement from the gridiron this week to take a job with the CTV network as a football analyst.

Peterson's recent play in the league was the determining factor for his selection over other team broadcasters Peter Martin of Toronto Argonauts and George Dixon of Montreal Alouettes who played for those teams more than a decade ago.

Peterson views the job as a combination of information for the viewer and promotion for Canadian football.

He replaces a former Toronto Argonaut, lawyer Mike Wadsworth, who left for a business position in the United Staes.

Progressive Conservatives tied up the House of Commons for a rowdy 30 minutes Tuesday as they tabled petitions, including one bearing 135,000 signatures, opposing imposition of metric measurement.

Tories cheered and gave anti-metric crusader Bill Domm a standing ovation as he presented the giant roll of newsprint "36 inches (91 centimetres) wide, 3.5 miles (5.6 kilometres) long and weighing 247 pounds (112 kilograms)."

The petition, described as one of the largest ever presented to Parliament, called on the government to allow the "pace, degree and nature" of metric conversion to be determined by individual citizens and companies.

Domm, member for Peterborough, Ont., read his plea as the roll, balanced on a long stick, was carried into the chamber on the shoulders of several Conservatives before being deposited on the floor of the House.

The giant petition has little chance of influencing the government, however, since they almost always gather dust on a shelf after presentation.

It generally takes a little work to market athletes, but in the case of Wayne Gretzky it involves screening requests — scores of them.

Everyone wants a piece of Edmonton Oilers' star centre but Mike Barnett, president of Sierra Sports Marketing Inc., is holding out for the plums.

"We're trying to attach him to items we consider to be of proven quality; to companies as significant in their world as Wayne Gretzky is in his world," Barnett said.

Sylvestre Stallone... Rocky 3 coming soon.

"This year, Wayne will make probably one-fifth the appearances he did last year, do one-third the company endorsements but for about six times the financial reward."

The manager of a cabaret in Prince George, B.C., has been found not guilty of allowing an obscene performance after a provincial court judge ruled a simulated sex act was not obscene.

Last summer, RCMP charged the manager of the Playgirl Cabaret, Maxine Lewandowski, and a man and woman after police viewed performances in which a naked couple simulated several sexual acts.

In his judgment, Provincial Court Judge C. B. MacArthur noted the performance was restricted to adults who paid a $4 cover charge and that no one appeared offended by the act.

He also noted there was no sexual contact and though the act may have been exploitive, there were no elements of violence, horror or cruelty during the performance.

It's a sweet gesture and probably good for the constitution.

Toronto pastry chef Leo Schuster helped break 1,500 eggs, sift 50 kilograms of flour and measure 70 kilograms of sugar this week in preparation for what he calls "the biggest constitutional cake in Canada."

Schuster felt the downtown hotel he works for had to do something special for the Saturday proclamation of Canada's constitution.

Under the guidance of his boss, chef Jean Paul Fagot, they finally settled on an relief map of Canada: chocolate on the inside and all gooey and colorful on the outside.

And edible, from sea to sea.

Alligator insignias are all the rage with the preppy collegiate crowd, but a Buffalo, N.Y., man has an alligator — a real one — as a bodyguard.

And Police Commissioner James B. Cunningham doesn't like Carl Mann's idea one bit.

"If there isn't a law against it, maybe we can write one," Cunningham said last week after investigating the possibility of filing criminal charges against Mann.

Mann was stopped after police saw him throw a wriggling sack into his car.

Mann told Officer Mark Stambach the bagged metre-long alligator was used for protection and as a weapon.

"He showed us how the thing opens its jaws and points it at them," Stambach said. "He said it works pretty good."

After consulting with a lawyer for the city, Cunnigham said he was left with the impression that carrying an alligator as a bodyguard is not illegal, but: "I'd hate to run up against that thing on the street."

In Washington, D.C., the chairman of the U.S. Federal Communications Commission, alarmed by news leaks, is vowing his agency will deal harshly with those found to have divulged information prematurely.

Mark Fowler, the Republican chairman, said in a memorandum distributed to commissioners he has ordered a special investigation into several recent news leaks.

WHAT'S ON

Theatre

This Sunday, April 18, the Bishop's-Champlain Speakers' Forum will be presenting the amazing GREAT PECARVE at 8 p.m. in the Student Pub.

Hypnotist and hypnotherapist, Pecarve has turned hypnosis into a first-class stage show which confuses, confounds and delights audiences everywhere. Not only can he hypnotize and memorize intricate combinations of figures and facts but Pecarve has been involved in medical work and the startling new theory hypnoanaesthesia.

Tickets for the evening, which are $3 for the general public and $2 for students, can be obtained in room 116 of the Student Centre or by telephoning 563-6881, extension 221.

Good news from the THEATRE DE L'ATELIER. The first instalment of funds promised to the theatre in December has arrived and work on the renovation of the Atelier playhouse situated in the Parc Jacques Cartier is moving along nicely. The money is the first payment of a promised $300,000.

Speaking of money, as most of you are probably aware, the Canada Council reconsidered Festival Lennoxville's request for funds for its 1982 season after turning them down flat in March. The council, under heavy pressure from arts groups and private citizens across the country, decided Festival would receive $85,000 this year after Festival in turn chopped some more off its '82 budget. The press release announcing the about face included a rather thinly veiled threat however, suggesting the support on paper had best translate into increased ticket sales. I guess it's up to us in that case.

The Centre Culturel will be presenting a Michel Garneau play entitled L'USAGE DU COEUR DANS LE DOMAINE DU REEL again this week on April 22, 23 and 24 in the Petite Salle at 8:30.

The Centaur Theatre in Montreal will be presenting SWEET LIKE SUGAR by South African Paul Herzberg starting April 15 and running until May 30. Although the military theme of the play is universal in its appeal, the added spectre of racial prejudice twists the situation until, as Herzberg says, a fellow soldier can hold more terror than the enemy himself.

Tickets are on sale now and can be obtained by contacting the Centaur box office at (514) 288-3161.

For the youngsters in the family the GINGERBREAD PLAYERS AND JACK return to Montreal on Saturday April 24 with a dazzling new production of SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS. Snow White has the distinction of being the longest playing children's show ever to hit off-Broadway theatres. The performance will take place at the Salle Wilfrid Pelletier of the Place des Arts at 1:30 p.m.

For those of you like myself who have an invitation to have cocktails with the Queen this weekend, the National Arts Centre will be presenting the hilarious THE TORCH BEARERS by George Kelly. Torch Bearers will play April 16 and 17. Later in the week you can catch RICHARD THE III on the 19 and 20 with Torch Bearers returning on the 22nd for an extended 6 day run.

Music

The Northeast Kingdom Society for the Arts will be presenting the BAY WIND QUINTET Sunday, April 18 at St. James Church, Island Pond at 3 p.m. The quintet played during last year's program series and was received with favorable reviews for their refreshing presentation of chamber music. Tickets are available by phoning 723-4468.

The QUEBEC FEDERATION DES HARMONIES will hold its 52nd annual Festival at the University of Sherbrooke, May 20, 21, 22 and 23. Over 7,000 musicians will take part in this year's events designed to encourage young musicians throughout the province.

The CANADIAN AMATEUR MUSICIANS will host an afternoon of group playing for chamber musicians and recorders as well as madrigal singing on April 25, at the Plymouth Trinity United Church from 3 until 5 p.m.

On Saturday April 24 at 8:30 the SHERBROOKE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA and the SYMPHONY CHOIR will give a joint performance under the direction of Brian J. Ellard at the Salle Maurice O'Bready of the Centre Culturel. The one-work concert will consist of the GERMAN REQUIEM of Johannes Brahms. Tickets are presently available at the box office of the Centre Culturel.

Also at the Centre Culturel this week, will be another in the series of Sons et Brioches of the JEUNESSES MUSICALES DU CANADA when the TAPESTRY SINGERS appear in concert Sunday April 18 from 11 to 12 a.m. The eight-singer group has a varied repertoire which includes everything from Renaissance to American musical comedies. Works from Schuman, Bizet, Offenbach and Brubeck will be presented side by side with Gershwin and American folk songs.

On April 20 the Dunham Women's Institute will sponsor a concert by the MASSEY-VANIER SCHOOL BAND at the Dunham United Church. The band under the direction of Douglas Barr will play at 2 p.m.

For Montreal goers, the SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF MONTREAL will be in concert at the Place des Arts Tuesday and Wednesday April 20 and 21 at 8 p.m. The concert will feature Antiphonie by Morel, Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major, Opus 58 by Beethoven and Pelleas et Melisande by Schonburg.

The 4 TEMPS choir will be presenting two concerts at the College de Sherbrooke on April 24 and 25. This enthusiastic group of fine singers and musicians, featured in last week's Townships Week, are well worth seeing and hearing.

The National Art Gallery in Ottawa opens an exhibition on Modernism in Quebec Art 1916-1946 on Thursday.

Exhibitions

The Centre d'Exposition Leon Marcotte on Frontenac Street will finish its exhibitions of BYZANTINE IKONS this week on Wednesday, April 21. The work of Romanian-born Rosette Mociorntiza, the Ikons are religious figures representing Christ, the Virgin Mary or any of the many Saints commonly venerated in the Orthodox Church.

The National Art Gallery in Ottawa will open an exhibition on April 22 featuring MODERNISM IN QUEBEC ART, 1916-1946. The display, which will run until the middle of June, is one of the first of its kind.

The Musee Laurier of Arthabaska is presenting a four-artist exhibition, which will run until May 2.

Features are the works of painter HELENE GOULET, photographer ELYSE GENDRON and porcelain workers VERONIQUE GODARD and MICHEL GAGNON.

Viewing hours are Tuesday to Friday from 9-12 and 1:30 to 5; Saturday and Sunday 1:30 to 5.

Students at the University of Sherbrooke who are enrolled in the artistic expression course of the continuing education program, will be holding an exposition of their work starting April 8 and running April 22.

The exhibition, organized by the students, includes photography, painting, sculpture, drawing, ceramic and weaving. Check the Centre Culturel for viewing times.

There is a display of the works of a young Vietnamese artist, LA TOAN-VINH, at the Salle Albert Gravel, of the Sherbrooke library, 165 Bank Street running until April 30. The exhibition, centring on the theme Terre des Hommes, reflects the suffering and agony of the people of his native country both at home and in the refugee camps of Malaysia.

The Tapestry Singers, with a varied repertoire, are at the Centre Culturel Sunday.

All three galleries of the Sir George Williams campus of Concordia University are hosting a display entitled MONTREAL PAINTING NOW, running until May 8.

The Galerie d'Art Sherbrooke is presenting a two-man show featuring the works of JEAN-CLAUDE ROY and GILBERT BRETON which started Sunday, March 28 and running until April 17, at its Frontenac Street facility.

French-born Jean-Claude Roy has been a resident of Newfoundland since 1971 and his many works display the rugged coast and maritime life style of the island province.

Gilbert Breton, on the other hand, is a native of Warwick, Quebec and received his training at the Institute of Applied Arts in Montreal. Breton's works reflects the Eastern Townships, the St. Lawrence river and the many other beauties of rural Quebec.

There will be a display of SWEDISH GRAPHICS by eight contemporary artists throughout the month of April at the Galerie d'art of the Centre Culturel of the University of Sherbrooke. Also at the Centre Culturel will be a display of AFRICAN MASKS indicative of the role of dance and ritual in African society. The 40-plus masks are part of an important European collection.

In the foyer of the Centre Culturel there will be a display of the works of Sherbrooke artist CLAUDE LAFRANCE throughout April. The pen and ink sketches deal with the tension between formal structure and free expression.

The Beaulne Museum of Coaticook will be featuring an exhibition of the works of Quebec artist RICHARD SYLVESTRE until the end of May. Sylvestre, born in Montreal in 1940, was trained at the School of Beaux-Arts in his native city and has gained an international reputation through displays of his work at a dozen different expositions.

The exhibition, entitled UNE VIDE DE PROVINCE, is remarkable for its simplicity and sensibility.

The Foyer St-Joseph at 611 Queen Street in Sherbrooke will be hosting a joint exhibition of photographs, sponsored in part by the Ministry of Cultural Affairs on April 28, 29 and 30. The photographs depict OCCUPATIONS OF YESTERDAY and cover the period 1900 to 1950.

Movies

The Capitol Theatre will be holding over ON GOLDEN POND and SILENCE OF THE NORTH this week. On Golden Pond, which star the Fondas, Henry and Jane, as well as Katharine Hepburn, is a sentimental, predictable movie straight out of Hollywood's past. It loses nothing, however, for all its predictability and leaves 90 per cent of the audience with the kind of feeling you'd like to carry around more often.

It is easy to see why Henry Fonda picked up an Oscar for his delightful portrayal of the curmudgeonly retired school teacher who faces the end of his life with as much bewilderment as bitterness but it is a little more difficult to accept the fact that Hepburn for all her talent deserved an Oscar as well. On Golden Pond's best feature is the dialogue which has as many wonderful one liners and "snarky" asides as any movie made in the last 20 years. Golden Pond is a movie with a message, albeit an obvious one, but it doesn't let the message stand in the way of the entertainment.

SILENCE OF THE NORTH isn't in the same class but with Ellen Burstyn and a Genie award for Best Photography it too worth seeing. Show times weekly are Silence at 7 and Pond at 9 while on Sunday it's Silence at 1:30 and 7:30 with Pond at 3:25 and 9.

Champlain's English department will present the last movie of their excellent film series on Tuesday, April 20 in room 20 of the Johnson Science building. This week's film is WAR AND PEACE, Tolstoy's epic story of Czarist Russia in the Napoleonic era.

The Kineart series of the Centre Culturel will present LE CONFORT ET L'INDIFFERENCE a film dealing with Quebec just prior to the referendum. Show times at 7:30 and 9:30 April 17, 18, 19, and 20. Also at the Centre Cultural on April 22 and 23 is TOUTE UNE VIE the story of several generations of the Lelouch family.

The local office of the National Film Board will be showing A WAR STORY, April 19 and 20, the prize winning NFB film about a young Canadian doctor, Ben Wheeler, imprisoned by the Japanese on the island of Formosa during the last war. A War Story is directed by Wheeler's daughter Anne and narrated by Donald Sutherland.

Ben Wheeler was allowed to keep a medical diary by the Japanese because of his work caring for other prisoners but unknown to them he also kept a separate diary for his wife recounting the day to day struggle for survival. It was not until after Wheeler's death in 1963 that his daughter discovered the journal and decided to make it into a movie.

Screening will be at 2 and 8 p.m.

Television

The National Film Board dominates CBC this week with two excellent productions. The first program, which airs Sunday April 18 at 2 p.m., is entitled 12,000 MEN. This half hour documentary examines how the once thriving and profitable Cape Breton coal mining industry which employed 12,000 men at its peak, declined to its present state. Of particular interest is some of the newsreel footage shot between 1909 and 1925 dealing with various aspects of labor strife including the strike of 1925. The film also contains interviews with former miners and their wives.

The second NFB film this week will hit the TV waves Thursday, April 22 at 8 p.m. when the national network presents A CHOICE OF TWO. Starring Mavor Moore, Leslie Nielson and Gary Reinke, A Choice of Two chronicles the story of the office infighting of a major corporation as two top executives battle to replace the retiring chairman of the board. Having witnessed the manoeuvring following Argus President Bud McDougall's death, A Choice of Two should be a fascinating look into corporate power struggling.

Also on CBC this week is the LABATT PROSKATE, Sunday, April 18 at 2:30 and Friday, April 23 at 7:30. Proskate features a host of international figure skating stars including Toller Cranston, Ron Shaver, Janet Lynn and Colleen O'Connor all competeing for $56,000 in prize money.

Vermont ETV will be starting a 13 part documentary at 8 p.m., Saturday, April 17 called IRELAND: A TELEVISION HISTORY. The series, produced by the BBC, in conjunction with Telefis Eiran, uses every foot of newsreel shot in Ireland in this century.

Starting over 8,00 years ago, the series will attempt to explain today's troubles through an exploration of the past.

Also on ETV this week will be GREAT PERFORMANCES which features Karl Bohm conducting the Men's choir and the Hofmusickapelle Orchestra, the Vienna Choir Boys and soloist Peter Schreier, Werner Krenn and Walter Berry in a performance of Schubert's Mass No. 6 in E-Flat Major. Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Friday April 23, Mike Farrell of M-A-S-H hosts a program entitled THINKING TWICE ABOUT NUCLEAR WAR which investigates the possibility of such a disastrous conflict and what the U.S. has been doing to avoid it. Airs at 10 p.m.

Monday, April 19 at 9 p.m. you have a chance to catch one of Jack Nicholson's lesser known movies GOING SOUTH. Also starring the delectable Mary Steenburgen, one of the cinemas most underrated comediennes, and John Belushi. Going South is the story of Henry Moon (Nicholson), a slippery third-rate outlaw who is rescued from the hangman's noose bySteenburgen.Having convinced the judge that she will reform Moon by marrying him, she then proceeds to put him to work in a gold mine on her property. The critics hated it and the audiences loved it.

Anyone willing to stay up till midnight Thursday can catch THE CHILDREN'S HOUR a movie version of Lillian Hellman's excellent novel. Children's Hour stars Shirley MacLaine and Audrey Hepburn as two teachers in a very respectable girls school who are accused of having an 'unnatural relationship' by a bullying spiteful student.

Radio

On Saturday, April 17 CBC's THE ENTERTAINERS will do a special on French entertainer YVES MONTAND who disappeared from the entertainment scene for 13 years, only surfacing in 1981 after the socialist victory in the French elections. Montand, whose career was launched by the late Edith Piaf, and his wife Simone Signoret have long supported left wing causes from Chile to Czechoslovakia.

Some of the world's best professional skaters will be featured in the Labatt ProSkate competition from Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto on CBC-6 Sunday 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

FAME

By Steve K. Walz

BEHIND THE SCENES — If you've been following the exploits of Professor Quentin E. Deverill on CBS' "Q.E.D.," which stars Sam Waterston in the title role, you've probably noticed his witty and ingenious secretary. She's played by Caroline Langrishe, a talented actress whose credits include the film, "Someone is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe," and the TV remake of "Les Miserables."

Caroline Langrishe

John Glenn

MISSION CONTROL — Tom Wolfe's best-selling astronaut saga, "The Right Stuff," just went before the cameras in San Francisco. The Ladd Co./Warner Bros. release stars Charles Franke as astronaut Scott Carpenter, Scott Glenn as Alan Shepard, Ed Harris as John Glenn and Dennis Quaid as Gordon Cooper.

BOOKMARKS — In July, Fawcett Crest is going to publish "Domestic Arrangements," an adult novel by Norma Klein, that probes the dilemma of a modern family torn apart by their 14-year-old daughter's casual sex life. The book's cover seems to have been inspired by those designer jean ads featuring Brooke Shields. It shows a teen-age girl clad in tight jeans and a revealing blouse reclining suggestively next to a young man.

MACHO MAN — Although Burt Reynolds has said he's going to retire from acting to go behind the cameras to direct, he continues to make one film after the other. He's wrapping up "Best Friends," a comedy for Warner Bros. that co-stars Goldie Hawn. Following that, he'll star in an MGM-Warner Bros. co-production of "Bogart Slept Here," a tongue-in-cheek detective thriller. Reynolds then plans to appear in a screen adaptation of Robert Ludlum's spy thriller "The Bourne Identity."

Shakespeare's great comedy

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," perhaps the most popular comedy in the English language, will air Monday, April 19 on PBS. (Check listings for exact time.)

The series is a co-production of BBC-TV and Time-Life Television and is the third presentation in Season Four of "The Shakespeare Plays," a six-year series which will eventually present all 37 of Shakespeare's dramatic works.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is a complex, comic love story. There are quarrels between the fairy royalty, misplaced spells and things generally go awry in an enchanted forest.

Helen Mirren stars as the luminous Titania, the Queen of the Fairies and consort to Oberon, played by Peter McEnery.

In the 400 years or so since it was written, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" has become one of the most studied works of literature. The underwriters of the telecast, Exxon Corp., Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., have supplied free classroom materials, such as study guides, posters, recordings and teacher's handbooks, to junior and senior high schools all over America for the telecast.

ONE DAY AT A TIME

Barbara (Valerie Bertinelli, pictured) and Mark's decision to have a quick and easy wedding ceremony sends Ann into a tailspin of uncertainty about whether or not to give in to her daughter's whim in the conclusion of the two-part "marriage" segment on CBS's "One Day at a Time," airing SUNDAY, APRIL 18.

MARQUEE

By J.T. YURKO — FILM CRITIC

Blake Edwards, whose work includes the witty series of "Pink Panther" films starring Peter Sellers, the hilarious yet pertinent "10" with Bo Derek and Dudley Moore, and the vindictive "S.O.B.," gradually is being recognized by critics as a comic genius.

In fact, a new book by William Lehman and Peter Luhr examines Edwards' work with the same exhaustive analysis usually reserved for more esoteric directors. Edwards' latest effort, "Victor/Victoria," will help make him an even greater popular and critical success.

The box-office receipts from this film will certainly enable Edwards to continue making the kind of movies he wants to make. "Victor/Victoria" is a delightful film.

Julie Andrews plays an out-of-work opera singer in Paris during the early 1930s. She meets up with Robert Preston, an out-of-work homosexual cabaret singer. Together they concoct a plan to pass off Miss Andrews as the world's greatest female impersonator. Thus we have the spectacle of Julie Andrews playing a woman impersonating a man impersonating a woman. Miss Andrews has come a long way from her days of innocence in "The Sound of Music."

The film mixes social comment and slapstick. The funniest line comes from Alex Karras, who plays a gangster's (James Garner) bodyguard.

"Victor/Victoria" is a bit too long and there are some glaring anachronisms — some of Miss Andrews' feminist speeches use the rhetoric of the late '60s, and the term "gay," which is heard throughout the film, was not widely used in the 1930s. But these are minor quibbles about an otherwise wonderful film.

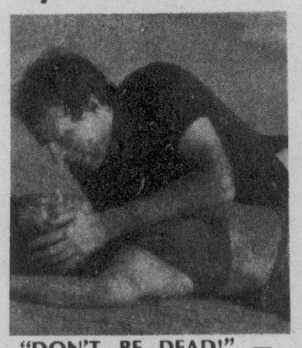
Speaking of Soap

By MARY ANN COOPER



"DON'T BE DEAD!" — Travis Sentell (Rod Arrants) is frantic when he finds his wife, Liza (Sherry Mathis), unconscious after a near-fatal explosion leaves them shipwrecked on a remote Caribbean island in a scene from NBC's "Search For Tomorrow".

This week I thought you'd be interested in some notes I received from the people at Search For Tomorrow concerning their recent location shoot in St. Kitts. The notes contain a behind the scenes glimpse at the trials and tribulations of location shooting that a viewer never hears about.

Part of being a performer is keeping occupied while waiting for your scene, usually in a dressing room. But cast members of "Search For Tomorrow" had a whole beach to relax on before their cues during the show's on-location shooting on the sun-drenched Caribbean island of St. Kitts.

"I've got a whole island, the beach and the sun," remarked actress Susan Monts, who plays Professor Aja Doyan. "With that, who's gonna kvetch (complain)?"

One minor difficulty during "Search For Tomorrow's" on-location shooting on the beach was a sand castle, which kept washing away between scenes. Liza and Travis Sentell's (Sherry Mathis and Rod Arrants) sand art had to be rebuilt each day exactly as it was the day before — so the crew photographed it.

Having built "hundreds" of castles on Southern California beaches as a boy, Arrants was a pro. For Memphis native Mathis, however, making castles on exotic St. Kitts was an added treat.

"When we were kids the only sand we had was Mississippi mud," said Sherry. "This is like a second childhood."

A stage manager's job can be hectic in a studio, but it's even more of a challenge during location shooting, when every moment of sunlight is precious.

To create a realistic deserted island for the "Search For Tomorrow" location filming, stage manager Peter Brinckeroff was hauling buckets of water to wash footprints off the beach, and chasing wind-blown props.

"It's hard enough keeping a studio set together," joked Pete. "But if you're not careful here, the set will wash away."

Though he has rarely watched American daytime television before, St. Kitts premier Dr. Kennedy Simmonds has become a "Search For Tomorrow" fan. Not only did he enjoy watching the show's on-location shooting there, but he's hooked on the story.

"I'll be sure to watch the show from now on," said Simmonds during a scene in the capital city's — Basseterre — main square. "Maybe we can get some of "Search" for our television station."

'I'm not Alexis,' says 'Dynasty's' Collins

When ABC's "Dynasty" added veteran British actress Joan Collins to play a conniving, manipulating woman, the serial was transformed from a marginal success to a hit.

Miss Collins portrays Alexis Carrington, the jet-setting ex-wife of Denver Carrington (John Forsythe), head of a conglomerate with interests in oil and a professional football team. Alexis will stop at nothing in order to achieve her goals, whether it means bedding down with a powerful Arab sheik or pitting one family member against the other.

"We English use our words as swords," says the 48-year-old actress. "I didn't have to do much research for this role. I've been around this type of jet-set woman all my life. You don't have to be a hooker in order to play a hooker. It's a matter of technique."

"Dynasty" is Miss Collins' first TV series. She seems to enjoy the role.

"Originally I was supposed to do the role for only a year. But things went so well that I signed on for three years.

Joan Collins

"Episodic TV has the same dialogue every week. I try to add my own touches of Machiavellian humor to make Alexis interesting."

Her efforts have been so successful that many people assume Miss Collins is much like Alexis.

"I'm not Alexis. I find it a bit sad that people can't separate fantasy from reality."

She says she considers the Collins-Carrington comparisons a tribute to her acting ability.

Spinning off success

by Steve K. Walz

Can you name the only TV series to have spun off five of its characters into successful series of their own?

If you guessed ABC's "Happy Days," you guessed correctly. The sitcom, which began as a 1972 "Love American Style" vignette, has been the cornerstone of ABC's prime-time attack since January 1974 when it joined the network on a weekly basis.

"Happy Days" was originally a piece of 1950s nostalgia, which focused on the Cunninghams, a typical American family of that decade. But viewers soon were attracted to two characters: the clean-cut Richie Cunningham (Ron Howard) and the leather-jacketed Fonzie (Henry Winkler). Despite their different lifestyles, their relationship flourished.

Once they had established Fonzie and Richie's relationship, the show's writers began concentrating on other characters such as Fonzie's two lower-middle class friends, Laverne and Shirley (Penny Marshall and Cindy Williams). They were given their own series in 1976, which has become successful.

To the producers' (Paramount) credit, they insisted that the characters grow older as the series moved chronologically from the late '50s into the early '60s. Unfortunately, there were times when the show became too predictable. It seemed as if Fonzie would always be there at the last minute to smooth over conflicts in an episode's plot.

To restore interest and to offset the supercool Fonzie, a manic alien named Mork was introduced in a special episode. The reaction to the character, played by comedian Robin Williams, was overwhelming. As a result, Williams was also given a prime-time series, "Mork and Mindy," which debuted in 1978 and has been airing ever since.

Ron Howard left the show last year. But his character hasn't been written out of the show's story line. Meanwhile, Fonzie's role has been de-emphasized in favor of Erin Moran who plays Joanie, a precocious teen-ager, and Scott Baio, who plays Chachi, her boyfriend. They were recently given their own show, "Joanie Loves Chachi," which looks promising.

As long as the producers and writers can inject talented young performers into the series, "Happy Days" will continue to be a successful pipeline for new projects.

TV Nostalgia

By Marie Iandiorio

In 1973, NBC premiered "The Midnight Special," a late-night popular music show specializing in taped in-concert performances. The series featured guest hosts that varied from week to week; among the popular stars who hosted the show were Paul Anka, Ray Charles, Jerry Lee Lewis and David Bowie.

Since the emphasis was placed on the music, there was no need for a personality to act as series host. The closest "regular" was the show's announcer, an inventive California-based disc jockey who opened each show with a howl.

Question: Can you name the announcer for "The Midnight Special"?

Answer: Wolfman Jack
