Salman Rushdie's chance of survival not improved

"Grown-ups have a strange way of putting themselves in compartments or groups. They build up barriers... of religion, of caste, of color, of party, of nation, of province, of language, of custom and of wealth and poverty. They thus live in prisons of their own making."

Jawaharharal Nehru

Salman Rushdie's Satanic Verses opens with the explosion of an Indian jet liner twenty-nine thousand and two feet above the English Channel. The jumbo jet becomes "a seed pod giving up its spores" and among these are Gibreel Farishta and Saladin Chamcha, Indian-born emigrants to Maggie Thatcher's England. Chamcha falls head-first in dignified British silence, arms at his sides, bowler firmly in place, all the buttons of his suit carefully done up. Farishta laughs, sings and shouts, does the breast stroke, the butterfly, the swan dive through space.

Bombay-born Rushdie is also an emigrant to Maggie Thatcher's England - although by less spectacular means. He made headlines again last week by donating $10,200 Canadian to the relief of Iranian earthquake victims. The mean-spirited saw this as a crass attempt to buy a pardon but Rushdie is very far from stupid and his gift was simple charity - along with another sly poke at intolerance.

Canada gave $1.1 million and the U.S. - the Great Satan - a measly $295,000. Some Iranian fundamentalists wanted to refuse all western aid but compassion prevailed for once and only aid from South Africa and Israel was rejected. And to calm the fundamentalists, the death sentence against Rushdie (pronounced with unconscious irony by the Ayatollah Khomeini on St. Valentine's Day, 1989) was reaffirmed.

That order is not, of course, aimed at Rushdie alone but at all those who champion freedom of expression and the unfettered imagination as humanity's best hope. After all, if the Ayatollah had simply wanted Rushdie dead, that could have been quietly and efficiently arranged and none but the insignificant four-eyed literatti would have ever heard of The Satanic Verses.

But by publicly issuing a fatwa, a religious edict, Khomeini hoped to strike terror into all who dared question his dogma - while incidentally assuring the novel world-wide fame. Every mother's son and daughter who objected to being lectured on morality by a bigot, bought the book as an act of protest.

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

None are quite as intolerant as religious fundamentalists because their revealed truth comes from the ultimate authority.

The Satanic Verses is about good and evil, colonialism and the Third World, Moslems, Hindus and intolerance in Maggie Thatcher's England. The contentious passages that a number of Moslems have already died over (no doubt without ever reading them) concern the sex lives of the Prophet's wives and - perhaps more important - the revelations of Salman the Persian. Rushdie has revelled in Joyce and the fact that the Prophet's scribe has the same first name as the novel's author is not coincidental.

Mohammed dictates the Words of God to his devoted follower, Salman, who writes them down conscientiously and devoutly. But one day, prompted by Satan but certain the Prophet will immediately find him out and so prove his sanctity still further, Salman deliberately makes a tiny change in the wording.

The Prophet fails to notice. Shaken to his very soul, Salman makes a much more glaring error, writing the word "Jew" in place of "Christian". Again, when the offending passage is read back, the Prophet fails to notice and Salman, his faith shattered, flees for his life.

Salman Rushdie has been in hiding now for 17 months, shuttled among 50-odd 'safe houses' by British intelligence and guarded around-the-clock. His first year of isolation was shared by his wife, Marianne Wiggins, but she has emerged to publicize her own novel, John Dollar, a sort of Lord of the Flies with girls. As the daughter of American Christian Fundamentalists, she too knows something of religious tyranny. Her book is bravely dedicated to Rushdie.

Hugh Trevor-Roper (the British historian who, a few years ago, authenticated those Hitler diaries which later turned out to be crude forgeries) recently suggested in print that Rushdie knew what to expect when he wrote the novel and so deserves his punishment. Over a hundred law students at the University of Montreal took a more liberal view in March of 1939 by petitioning Gil Rémillard to prosecute Moslems in Quebec who publicly called for Rushdie's murder.

Penguin Books, Rushdie's publisher, made some $3 million on the novel during its first year but spent almost $4.5 million on security. They received over 5,000 threatening letters and 25 bomb warnings. Five 'explosive devices' were found in Penguin stores. Rushdie's chance of survival has not improved.

Gibreel Farishta, who tumbles from the airliner on the first page of that novel, turns out to be a famous Indian film actor who rose to stardom "with the coming of the theological movies." He had played many of the gods in the Hindu pantheon, their stories spiced up for the screen with lashings of sex and violence.

Now Pakistanis are lining up to see International Guerrillas in which Salman Rushdie is depicted as an evil genius heading a worldwide Jewish conspiracy against Islam. He slaps beautiful girls around, nails heroic Moslems to crosses and tortures them with fiendish glee - in one case by brutally reading passages from his novel to them. The blood and violence are relieved every 15 minutes by performing belly dancers.

The film - in urdu - makes a reference to the recent killing by Islamabad police of seven rioters trying to burn the American Center there. The police chief is shown as an Israeli agent who was paid one million rupees to order his men to open fire on the mob.

As the climax of this three-hour polemic, Rushdie gets his come-uppance from Allah himself. The heroes who had battled courageously for Islam are nailed to crosses and begin chanting verses from the Koran. The skies darken, a celestial voice thunders "The Koran's protector is God himself!" and a shaft of heavenly fire strikes the terrified satanic novelist to engulf him in a ball of flame like the one which burst his jumbo jet above the English Channel.

The film's director, asked how he'd feel if somebody was inspired by the movie to murder Rushdie, replied with a grin of delight, "Everybody will be happy!"

So civilization marches on.

Sprung firing prompts protest

By Rod Currie

CP Entertainment Editor

TORONTO (CP) - The sudden firing of Guy Sprung, artistic director of the Canadian Stage Company, has sparked angry protests in the Canadian theatre community, with accusations of shabby treatment and undemocratic practices.

The theme of the protests is that big business-like boards of directors, spurred by the profit motive, are increasingly tampering with the rights of the artists, not only at Canadian Stage but also in other theatre companies across Canada.

The latest in a string of emotional developments since the June 5 firing of Sprung and general manager Lynn Osmond was the resignation of David Black, a prominent member of the company's executive committee, citing a need for "immediate and drastic change" in the composition of the board of directors.

Others who have complained include artistic director Christopher Newton of the Shaw Festival in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Alun Hibbert, chairman of the Playwrights Union of Canada and the Canadian Actors' Equity Association. Among the theatre people who have signed protests are actors R.H. Thomson, Stuart Hughes and David Fox and playwrights Sharon Pollock and Sky Gilbert.

In his statement, Newton alleged business-dominated theatre boards are imposing the practices "of corporate Canada" on artists.

MISTAKES MADE

Sprung, in a series of weekend interviews, acknowledges that he made some mistakes, that he is not always easy to work with and that his working relationship with Osmond - whose appointment he opposed - had deteriorated into "open warfare."

But he says he was falsely blamed for the financial difficulties at Canadian Stage, his accomplishments were overlooked and his request to meet the board "to address any of the stuff they were slinging at me" was turned down.

In the turmoil, the company's ambitious plan to present nine plays in the 1990-91 season - including five new Canadian works - has been upset.

But a company spokesman says the schedule is simply being "reworked" by interim director Bill Glasco and artistic director-designate Bob Baker, formerly of Edmonton's Phoenix Theatre.

Sprung, 42, was head of Toronto Free Theatre, a small, energetic group that emphasized new Canadian plays, when it merged in 1987 with the larger, more traditional CentreStage Company, to form Canadian Stage.

Board chairman Jim Leech cited the need to "re-energize the leadership" in announcing the surprise firing - artistic directors on the way out are usually permitted to complete the season and then resign. Sprung's contract had less than a year to run.

Canadian Stage is struggling under a $1.5 million deficit.

Robert Altman tackles story of Vincent Van Gogh

By Galina Vromen

AMSTERDAM (Reuter) — "The film is not about a famous artist but about a failed person and his relationship with his family," says director Robert Altman of his new movie about Vincent van Gogh.

A century after the Dutch artist committed suicide, Altman's film Vincent and Theo focuses on the relationship between Vincent and Theo van Gogh.

Theo, an art dealer who financially supported his brother, lived for only a few months after Vincent's death in 1890 at the age of 37. The Netherlands is marking the 100th anniversary of the artist's death with a year-long celebration, including exhibitions, operas, films and plays.

Altman's film, which will not be released in North America until September, explores how van Gogh, whose works now sell for record prices, was driven to suicide by a sense of failure.

SHOW PAIN

"I wanted to show the pain of a striving artist," Altman said on a visit to Amsterdam, where the film had its world premiere.

"What I am trying to express to the audience is the wonder of an artist that has the drive to do something and never succeeds and years later is the most famous artist in the world."

Vincent and Theo is the 65-year-old Altman's first attempt at directing a film set in European history.

"It was a very interesting time and I deal with the art world, the hypocrisy of the art world, art critics, with other painters of the time, with money and sales and popularity."

Altman, whose previous 29 movies have included such hits as MASH and Nashville, found his biggest difficulty was contending with his crew's preconceptions about van Gogh.

WHAT'S 'TRUE'?

"Everyone had an opinion, so when I did something they didn't agree with, I could smell it."

"I didn't want this film to imitate van Gogh's look or his painting. There are many scenes where I purposely went against something I knew to be a fact and presented things that were not factually true but which I felt were emotionally true."

For example, Van Gogh's friend, the artist Paul Gauguin, has a limp in the movie. In real life he did not acquire one until an accident after van Gogh's death but Altman said he felt the limp helped round out the character.

Altman said he purposely did not read the published letters of Vincent to his brother or see the dozens of other films that have already been made on the artist in order to present his own, strictly personal, image of the artist.

LIKE COIN

What emerges is a character of raw emotion — reckless, uncouth and obsessive rather than likable.

Theo, meanwhile, holds on ambivalently to respectability to support the brother he loves but does not always understand.

"The film shows how emotionally connected they were," says Altman. "They were like siamese twins, like two sides of the same coin."

Altman chose two relatively unknown British actors for the lead parts — Tim Roth as Vincent and Paul Rhys as Theo.

"I figured there was already a star in the film, and that is van Gogh, and to have a famous-name actor would have confused the issue. We had many famous actors who wanted to play Vincent, but I wasn't interested."

New Snow White rescues prince, battles evil villain

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Later this month, movie audiences will be able to see one of the few General-rated films of the violence-prone summer season, featuring a fresh, spunkier Snow White.

The animated feature is called Happily Ever After (the Disney people objected to anything similar to Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs). The fledgling 1st National Film Corp. is releasing the Filmmation feature, with the voices of Irene Cara, Phyllis Diller, Ed Asner, Dom DeLuise, Sally Kellerman, Carol Channing, Tracey Ullman, Malcolm McDowell and Zsa Zsa Gabor. Cara provides the voice for Snow White.

"I don't think I've ever done a cartoon feature before," says Cara. "But I think I did some kind of work for Hanna-Barbara when I was young."

She can be forgiven a lapse of memory. Cara, 31, has been working in all forms of show business since the age of five. She's done it all: Broadway, radio, television, movies, recording, songwriting. Along the way she has won an Academy Award (for the song What a Feeling in Flashdance), two Grammys and a Golden Globe.

Her Snow White, she emphasized, will differ from the 1937 Disney version: "I don't see any point in doing a sequel otherwise... I think they've done a terrific job of updating it and yet keeping it in the classic fairy-tale look."

"This Snow White is not the passive heroine who has to be rescued. Actually, she's quite the heroine, and she does the rescuing. She rescues the prince and battles the evil villain herself with the help of the Dwarfelles instead of the Dwarfs. (The film) does show women as mature, aggressive and strong when things happen in their lives. I think that's very apropos for the '90s."

Such roles for women, she lamented, are rarely found in mainstream films. And when they appear, the movies often have been developed by their stars — Jessica Lange, Jane Fonda, Goldie Hawn, etc.

Fame, in 1980, was a big turning point for the actress, who became a recording artist and movie name with her role as a struggling student at New York's High School for the Performing Arts. She also scored as Alex Haley's mother in Roots: The Next Generation.

The Flashdance song, which she co-wrote with Giorgio Moroder and Keith Forsey, was another step forward. Friends suggested she could have played the lead role, but she says, "I'm glad I didn't get it, because it would have been too similar to Fame. I thought Jennifer Beals did a lovely job, and I was glad to see another mulatto actress out there and working."

Cruise's latest flick Days of Thunder gets off slow start

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Tom Cruise's Days of Thunder made its debut with a flat tire, grossing just $15.5 million US in its premiere weekend, according to figures released Monday.

That was worse than the openings for Dick Tracy, Total Recall, Another 48 HRS., Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and Back to the Future Part III.

While the race car film did finish first, according to the figures from Entertainment Data Inc., its box-office numbers were clearly mediocre and could spell trouble for the $55 million film. By comparison, the lightly regarded RoboCop 2 grossed $14.1 million in its first weekend of release.

The true test for Days of Thunder comes over the next few weeks, when the film's longevity will be tested by Die Hard 2, The Adventures of Ford Fairlane, Ghost, Presumed Innocent and Arachnophobia.

Falling out of first place after two weeks in top spot was Dick Tracy. Down 35 per cent from the previous weekend, the Warren Beatty project collected $10.1 million, and has made $68.4 million.

In third place, plunging a disastrous 55 per cent, was RoboCop 2 with ticket sales of $6.4 million. It was followed in fourth by Total Recall, down 28 per cent to $6 million. Another 48 HRS., featuring Eddie Murphy and Nick Nolte, finished in fifth with receipts of $5.4 million.

Ghost Dad, a family comedy starring Bill Cosby, opened in a somewhat limited release with $4.8 million. The film, landing in sixth, is playing on 1,213 screens.

In seventh was the sequel Gremlins 2: The New Batch on a gate of $4.6 million. In eighth was Betsy's Wedding with a gross of $3.2 million.

In ninth was Pretty Woman with $3.1 million. Back to the Future Part III was 10th with $2.9 million.

TOP 10

Here are the top movie ticket sales for Friday through Monday as tallied by Entertainment Data, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theatre screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. Days of Thunder, Paramount, $15.5 million, 2,307 screens, $6,714 per screen, $21.5 million, one week.

2. Dick Tracy, Disney, $10.1 million, 2,332 screens, $4,331 per screen, $68.4 million, three weeks.

3. RoboCop 2, Orion, $6.4 million, 1,772 screens, $3,597 per screen, $25.8 million, two weeks.

4. Total Recall, Tri-Star, $6 million, 1,961 screens, $3,060 per screen, $91.5 million, five weeks.

5. Another 48 HRS., Paramount, $5.4 million, 2,063 screens, $2,621 per screen, $59.2 million, four

6. Ghost Dad, Universal, $4.8 million, 1,213 screens, $3,960 per screen, $4.8 million, one week.

7. Gremlins 2, Warner Bros., $4.6 million, 2,137 screens, $2,146 per screen, $29.4 million, three weeks.

8. Betsy's Wedding, Disney, $3.2 million, 1,058 screens, $3,069 per screen, $10.1 million, two weeks.

9. Pretty Woman, Disney, $3.1 million, 1,305 screens, $2,381 per screen, $149.1 million, 15 weeks.

10. Back to the Future Part III, Universal, $2.9 million, 1,546 screens, $1,890 per screen, $68.9

Philately honors Quebec discoverer Jacques Cartier

Tourists going through the Province of Quebec will encounter a name with great frequency which is quite significant in the province. It is that of Jacques Cartier.

Hailing from St. Malo, France, Jacques Cartier is credited with the discovery of much of the province. He first sailed into the Baie de Chaleur and so named it because of the intense heat he encountered during the month of July. His real discovery however, was the Indian settlements of Stadacona, which is now the City of Quebec, and Hochelaga, now Montreal, in 1535.

Almost every city and town along the St. Lawrence River, makes some reference to Jacques Cartier. There are statues, street names, squares, a county, a city, a bridge and of course, shopping malls. It can be said that Jacques Cartier opened the doors of this great nation to the world.

FIRST STAMP

In time, we all know that Canada was taken over by the British and more than three hundred years after the discovery of Quebec, Canada issued its first postage stamp. It's in the area of philately that one of the greatest honors was bestowed on Jacques Cartier. In 1855, Canada issued a ten pence imperforated stamp depicting Cartier. He was again depicted on a seventeen cent stamp in the 1859-1964 first cents issue. Jacques Cartier was the only person to be depicted on a Canadian stamp who was not of royalty until the 1908 Quebec Tercentenary issue. Considering the time these stamps were issued, it had to be deemed quite an honor.

These two particular issues offer a great deal to philatelists. Available on the market to-day are die proofs and specimens. These are not overly expensive yet, add to any collection of early Canada. The stamps themselves offer varieties to some degree. Prices for the pence and cents stamps can be very expensive, especially on cover. Varieties consist of major re-entries and a burr on the shoulder on the seventeen cent of the cents issue. The earlier ten pence issue offers mainly re-entries.

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

TERCENTENARY STAMP

Jacques Cartier was next depicted on the one cent stamp of the Tercentenary issue of 1908.

Although the whole series is a gem, the Cartier stamp offers a little more to collectors. In addition to the lovely green colour which emphasizes richness, the stamp was greatly used on postcards and first class letters. In that particular time period, many beautifully cacheted covers were to be found. Different firms seemed to go to a lot of trouble to see that they were nicely advertised on their envelopes. In addition, it was an era of cancellations. The duplex, squared circle and R.P.O. just to name a few.

The best known variety of this stamp is the hairlines in the margins. Although catalogues list hairlines almost double, they are just about as common as the regular non-variety stamp. The hairlines are interesting though, for some are very prominent while others are extremely faint. In itself, this is a nice stamp to collect.

400th ANNIVERSARY

Jacques Cartier was next depicted on a Canadian stamp on July 1, 1934. It was to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the Cartier's discovery of Canada. The three cent denomination offers several varieties. There is the burr on the shoulder and the scar-face varieties. The latter appears on the kneeling seaman. In addition these are hairlines

1 cent denomination commemorating Quebec Tercentenary issued in 1908.

Replica of 10d issued in 1855. This stamp was issued in 1978 on the occasion of the Canadian International Philatelic Exhibition, Toronto and imperforated pairs. While the normal stamp is rather inexpensive, the varieties are rather high, especially in the mint condition.

With the commemoration on stamps of other discoverers and explorers, Jacques Cartier was forgotten about until April 20, 1984. This being the 450th anniversary of Cartier's first voyage to Canada, summerlong celebrations were the order of the day, especially in Quebec. France issued an identical 2 franc stamp to that of Canada and the Canadian stamp was printed by France's national printer. This brought about several varieties, the most prominent being in the tagging. The fluorescent tagging applied was somewhat ragged and many stamps were found to have short tags or missing tags. It made for a tag collector's dream.

The stamp issued on May 20, 1984, immediately after the Cartier stamp depicted tall ships. Although it does not have a portrait of Cartier, it was issued as a part of the celebration to commemorate the re-enactment of the tall ships sailing from St. Malo, France to Quebec. It would definitely fit into a Cartier collection.

Anne of Green Gable's charm refuses to wear off

By Derrick Toth

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — As the last rays of sunlight cast leafy shadows on the tree-lined streets of Charlottetown, a mid-summer night's ritual is just beginning at the Confederation Centre of the Arts.

Fifty senior citizens fill the warm night air with anxious chatter as they wait outside the front doors. At the side of the building, columns of Japanese tourists armed with tiny video cameras are invading the box office.

In a few minutes, a curtain will rise to reveal the red-headed romantic they have all come to worship — Anne of Green Gables.

Irrepressible, effervescent, temperamental and downright giddy — that's Anne, the freckle-faced favorite of the Charlotte-town Festival.

"The Japanese, we love her," says a woman from Tokyo, stopping to smile at her husband as he captures the moment on videotape.

"She is very different, very special."

For the 26th year in a row, Anne's charm refuses to wear off.

ANNE APLENTY

Inside the centre, they're doing a brisk business at the gift shop.

Anne shirts, posters, books, diaries, cassette tapes, post cards and song albums are snapped up. There's even a cute straw hat with stringy red braids dangling from each side for the little ones.

And at the centre of attention, for the fourth year in a row, is Leisa Way from Sudbury, Ont., who never seems to lose her zest for playing the imaginative orphan named Anne.

The tiny 23-year-old initially had a fight on her hands when she decided to leave the University of Toronto opera program to become Anne.

"I crashed the auditions because I couldn't get an appointment because I was an amateur," says Way as she sits in her dressing room, applying numerous freckles to her half-made-up face.

"I went through four different auditions and got it and never looked back."

Now it seems her work in Anne, along with other roles in between, has caught the interest of two of Canada's most prestigious theatres.

MAJOR OFFERS

But she still has another year under contract to Charlottetown.

"I had offers from Shaw and Stratford this year, and I couldn't say yes," says Way, a self-described hyper insomniac who talks a mile a minute.

"But over the next 10 years I hope to hit Stratford and Shaw. And then hopefully I'll settle down, raise a family, and then get back into it."

After four years in the same role, Way says she wasn't sure whether she could develop any further as Anne.

Nonetheless, she says she's been re-invigorated by artistic director Walter Learning — highly respected by most actors at the festival — and an infusion of new people in the musical's leading roles.

When the time comes to leave, however, it won't be easy.

"I don't want to do Anne forever as an actress," says Way. "But in my heart I never want to leave. So it's a real pull."

Brome County Museum offers glance at the past

This week the Record begins a series on our local historical museums. These museums are the guardians of our past and offer an interesting backward glance at our ancestors. This summer why not get out and discover the past by visiting your local museum.

By Rita Legault

KNOWLTON—One of the oldest museums in the country is situated right here in the Eastern Townships and it offers a treasure trove of interesting discoveries.

In fact, the Brome County Historical Museum, which opened its doors in 1903, has many treasures that are coveted by museums in Canada and throughout the world.

One such artifact is a German, World War I warplane—the only one of its kind in the world. The Fokker DVII, which was built in 1920 by Dutchman Zelotes Martin, is the main exhibit in the Martin Annex, which houses the museum's war memorabilia.

The Fokker is one of 20 brought to Canada right after the war. The others, mostly used as bush planes, have crashed and disappeared.

The allies paid this aircraft a unique compliment when in the Versailles Peace Treaty it was the only aircraft specifically named to be destroyed.

The Fokker, which was the Red Baron's favorite model, was discovered by the RCAF in 1964. It was restored in Trenton before going to Ottawa for a three month exhibition.

OTTAWA COVETS IT

"Ottawa would give their eye teeth to have it," said former museum curator Marian Phelps, during a tour of the museum this week.

There are copies of the Fokker in Munich, at the Smithsonian Museum in Washington DC and elsewhere. Most of the replicas were reproduced after visits to the Knowlton museum to photograph the original.

But while the museum has extraordinary pieces from elsewhere, exhibits emphasize the lives of area pioneers.

"In more recent years we have tended to reflect the life in local areas," said Phelps, adding that most exhibits reflect homes in the latter part of the 1800's and the turn of the century.

Phelps, who joined the Historical Society in 1948, was the curator from 1969 until three years ago. The silver haired retired schoolteacher has been one of the forces behind the museum for more than 40 years.

PIONEER COLLECTION

"We're fortunate that we have a lot of very old tools and handcrafted household articles used by local pioneers," Phelps said. "We have many of the kind of things pioneers made and used."

Phelps said the fact that the historical society is so old helped in obtaining such a good collection, because when the museum opened in 1903, many people still had these articles in their attics.

The Brome County Historical So-

Former museum curator Marian Phelps has been a powerful force behind the museum's success for more than 40 years. RECORD PHOTOS—GRANT SIMON ciety was formed in 1897 at a picnic to celebrate the centenary of the first land grant in Brome Township. The society was incorporated a year later and took over the old Knowlton Academy in 1903 to house its museum collection.

The academy itself is an historical site. Built in 1854, it is a good example of a one-room schoolhouse. Still in its original state, the schoolhouse has a display of school articles, old dishes and other pioneer artifacts.

The back part of the old academy building was moved to the side of Lakeside by the town in 1904 to house its fire station. Still standing today, the fire station has one of the few remaining fire towers which was used to drain hoses. The unique construction has a pulley at the top used to pull up the hoses and sway braces to stop it from toppling over in the wind.

The old fire station, which was used until 1971, now houses the old F.A. Knowlton general store, a nature room and a collection of pioneer gowns and quilts. In the back is an exhibit of old farm tools and implements and a blacksmith shop—one of the museums most important collections.

Phelps said necessity was the mother of invention in pioneer days, and blacksmith shops did much more than just shoe horses. They also made door latches, keys, tools, grid irons and kitchen implements.

BLACKSMITH SHOP

"A blacksmith shop was one of the first things pioneer communities needed," Phelps said. "It was one of the three essentials, including a saw mill and a grist mill."

A new building built in 1985 houses the Village Street Museum. It includes most of the society's pioneer collection with displays ranging from an old photographer's studio, to a ladies hat shop with lovely Victorian hats. A recent addition is a printer's shop with a printing press which was donated by retired printer Ernest Pagé.

There is also a display of antique children's toys, which includes a Shirley Temple doll and Phelps's old teddy-bear, which her father won for her by knocking down pins at the Waterloo fair more than 70 years ago.

A unique display is the Quaker meeting house. The only Quaker settlement in Quebec was in the Township of East Farnham where Quakers from Vermont came fleeing war in the 1820's. The museum has obtained the Quakers' library, some benches and things used in their church as well as spinning wheels, a loom and old photos.

ABENAKI EXHIBIT

This summer the Brome County museum features an exhibit on the Abenaki Indians, much of it borrowed from the Odanak museum in nearby Sorel. The Townships were the hunting and fishing grounds of this Indian tribe.

Just beyond the museum compound, the Historical Society rents the top floor of the old county courthouse which was built in 1857. The courthouse, which closed in 1954, has been restored to its 1900 glory. It now houses a collection of portraits of former councillors, judges and founders of the county.

About one mile out of town, the Historical Society acquired one of the oldest schoolhouses in the province. It was built in 1844. The Tibbits Hill Pioneer School was restored and set up as a museum with the help of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers in 1964. It was part of the teacher's Centennial celebration projects.

The Tibbits Hill Pioneer School, which houses a display of early country school items, is open during the summer on Sunday's between 2 and 5.

VISITORS FROM EVERYWHERE

The museum greets about 4,000 visitors each year. Many include tour buses from Magog and Granby, including visitors from across Canada and the U.S.

But the museum also serves another purpose. The archives building receives dozens of people investigating their genealogy, and those trying to find a relative who may have been buried in the area.

There are also academics and university students doing research for historical papers and books such histories of the area, biographies of important locals or studying such things as the history of buildings or education in the area.

The archives building houses a large collection of original pioneer papers, old county and school records and the records from some local businesses.

"The original society was formed by doctors, lawyers and judges and they knew what to keep," Phelps said, adding that the museum has acquired new collections since with grants from the Quebec Cultural Affairs Ministry. ARCHIVES

Phelps, a retired schoolteacher, had a hand in setting up the archives with retired historian Harry B. Shufelt—for whom the archives building is dedicated.

The historical society is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of local and national heritage. It is supported by grants from Quebec and local municipalities and from admission fees to the museum. It also receives private donations from individuals and corporations.

Family memberships to the museum cost $10. Single membership $5 and junior membership $3. A lifetime membership costs $80.

The Brome County Historical Society Museum, which is located on Lakeside Road (Route 243) in Knowlton, is opened daily till Sept. 30. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Idol Fred Penner charms the milk-and-cookies set

By Stephen Nicholls
CP Television Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — A couple of pint-sized groupies have invaded the magic forest.

They've come to pay homage to a star. They've marvelled at him on TV, they've bumped and boogied to his records, and now they're here to meet their idol face to face — or face to thigh, if he doesn't bend down.

Yeah, Fred Penner really knocks the socks off the milk-and-cookies set.

The pair of pixies with Shirley Temple curls are spellbound as the fuzzy-faced man of their dreams poses for snapshots during a break in the taping of Fred Penner's Place.

Sure, he might be just a nice bearded guy to you, but he's Elvis, the Beatles and New Kids on the Block to the preschool crowd.

As the tots toddle off to inspect the fake trees and foam rocks of the show's forest hideaway set, guitar-strumming Penner gets down with a keyboardist, bass player and drummer.

They're polishing a rendition of a Sound of Music classic ("Doh, a deer a female deer, ray, a drop of golden sun ...").

WARM, SINCERE

"He really knows how to connect with kids," whispers producer Randy Roberts, standing on the sidelines. "He looks great on TV. He looks warm and affectionate and genuine and sincere, and he is. He's a good performer."

"He's probably the guy that we'd like to leave our kids with."

The band takes five, and Penner straddles a chair with his lanky form as he ponders his success with children.

"I think it's the directness," says Penner, a likable character who's particularly disarming in a clownish print shirt with huge shoulder swatches of scarlet.

"I'm not a cartoon. I could be their neighbor. I'm a real guy and I talk directly to them.

"There's nothing really contrived about what I do. It's 'Hi, how are ya? Well, c'mon in. Let's spend some time together. I've got a song I want you to help me with.'"

For more than five years now, Penner has crawled out of his hollow log on weekday mornings to greet young visitors to his forest nook.

Three times a week on CBC, the show runs 15 minutes, sharing a half-hour time slot with Ottawa-produced Under the Umbrella Tree. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, Penner's show gets the full half hour.

South of the border, the half-hour version is seen on the Nickelodeon cable channel.

Penner wandered into children's music after starting out as a folksinger.

"A main turning point ... was when I worked with disturbed children in the late '60s, early '70s," he says. "I volunteered at a number of residential treatment centres and worked at them for a couple years with some pretty tough kids, handicapped and disturbed, behavior problems. ...

"Music was just something that I'd do with them.

"It seemed, as I look back on it, that even a small simple song or a chorus of a song would connect with them."

Now, when Penner's not taping 96 shows a year, he's recording or performing concerts.

RECORDS, TOURS

He's working on his seventh album, a Christmas record, and recently returned from touring in Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"The whole point of what I feel I'm doing is building a dialogue with the audience — we're talking about things, we're sharing music, we're trying to give each other something we can take away. That's an emotional exchange."

"The gratification is unbelievable."

He cites the case of a Michigan woman who wrote to him saying that his music had helped her toddler when he was being treated for a brain tumor.

"He kept asking for my songs while he was going through the process. She basically attributed his health to me."

A raucous squawk shatters the mood of the moment.

Chuckling apologetically, Penner explains "That's the Word Bird" — a puppet-like character from the show, whose electronic voice is obviously being tested.

As the musicians return, and the tape starts rolling, Roberts, the producer, puts Penner's stardom into perspective. Fame, like youth, is a fleeting thing, it seems.

"The bulk of our audience is only around for two years," says Roberts. "Preschool, then they're gone."

Golden Girl Bea Arthur mulls over Canadian links

By Gwen Dambrosky

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Bea Arthur has a peculiar affinity for Canadians. She's terribly amused by their scoldings for her mockery of Santa's elves. And a couple of them helped launch her television career.

Arthur became known first as the acerbic liberal feminist in Norman Lear's '70s TV sitcom Maude and later as one-quarter of NBC's The Golden Girls.

But back in the 1950s she was a bit player with the Toronto comedy duo Wayne and Shuster whenever they appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show.

"They would do sketches," recalls Arthur, a native of New York state who now lives in Los Angeles. "There were things we used to call under-fives; if you had under five lines they paid you very little. I did a lot of that with them and with Sid Caesar."

Her other Canadian connection is as commercial spokeswoman for Shoppers Drug Mart, a job she took while unemployed and only because her agent promised the spots would not be seen in the United States.

"The first couple of times it was such fun," she says. "I really changed things around. They sent me this script where I was Mrs. Claus, with the bun in the back and the little collar with the brooch. I thought, 'This is ridiculous,' so I brought some evening gowns and a boa. Sales went up, we won a couple of awards, and people seemed to love it."

WELL, MOST PEOPLE

Some viewers complained after one spot in which Arthur referred to Santa's workers as "bozos."

"Can you believe it?" she says with a laugh. "I got mail saying I was making fun of the Christmas elves."

The occasion for Arthur's most recent visit to Canada was an appearance at the 11th annual Banff Television Festival to pick up a lifetime achievement award. It's not likely to end upon the mantel next to her two Emmys, however — the award is really just a promotional tool to lend the festival a little glitz.

Arthur did her bit by agreeing to a news conference with about a dozen reporters.

Tall and slim, she entered the room slowly, almost regally. At first impression she seems a little haughty, but eventually it becomes clear her quiet dignity is simply an old-fashioned kind of professionalism.

JOB A JOB

With her smooth complexion — she has admitted in the past to plastic surgery — and deep voice, it's easy to forget that Arthur is in her mid-60s. Until one notices she's a little hard of hearing and appreciates a strong arm to help her climb stairs.

Perhaps her age is best revealed in her attitude toward her work. She comes from that pragmatic a-job-is-a-job school that seems to distinguish many people who grew up during the Depression.

Her education and training prepared her for the stage, but when television beckoned in 1948 she never hesitated.

"It was anything you could do to get a job," she says with a shrug. "I was very tall and had a deep voice and enormous bosoms. In school I was cast in all the classical roles, but when I got out and tried to find a job nobody on Broadway wanted to hire me."

DID MUSICALS

Her first television appearance was on the Dumont network in 1948 in the musical Once Upon a Tune.

"You know those women in the old musicals where the tenor would sing to her and she would just sit there and look at him lovingly? I was so embarrassed I didn't know where to look. I was very shy and unwilling to take stage, to be a star. That has since changed."

Later, Arthur got her chance on Broadway, winning a Tony Award in 1966 for her role as Vera Charles in Mame. But she insists she has never held the disdain for television common to so many theatre people.

"Quite seriously, those are usually the stage performers who have flopped in sitcoms," she says. "Mind you, we all have our little envies. Colleen Dewhurst says it's a shame she's not playing Dorothy on the Golden Girls, and I think to myself that she's done so many parts I should have played."

Quantum leap take ratings jump

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nightly repeats of Quantum Leap proved a smart gamble for NBC entertainment president Brandon Tartikoff, the latest ratings released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

The time-travel series achieved its highest marks ever with Thursday's episode, which was the No. 12 program on television. NBC reported an estimated 60 million viewers tuned in to the five reruns broadcast Monday through Friday at 10 p.m. EDT.

The latest Nielsen figures showed minimal changes in a field dominated by summer reruns. Cheers on NBC was the No. 1 show. A Different World, also on NBC, was No. 2. CBS's Designing Women and ABC's Roseanne tied for third.

Here are the top 10 programs and ratings: Cheers, NBC, 16.8; A Different World, NBC, 13.8; Designing Women, CBS, and Roseanne, ABC, (tie) 13.7; FM, NBC, 13.5; Empty Nest, NBC, 13.3; The Cosby Show, NBC, The Golden Girls, NBC, 60 Minutes, CBS (tie), 13.2; Unsolved Mysteries, NBC, 13.1.

Each ratings point represents 921,000 households.

McEwan's characters make Innocent a success

The Innocent by Ian McEwan (LESTER & ORPEN DENNYS): $24.95, 274 pp.

In his book that becomes a remarkable re-creation of post-war Berlin, Ian McEwan adds considerable skill as a researcher and interviewer to his well documented gifts as a novelist (The Child In Time, (1987) The Cement Garden (1978)).

McEwan made a study of "The Berlin Tunnel, of Operation Gold", a joint CIA-M16 operation that resulted in a long tunnel that burrowed deep into the Soviet sector of Berlin to tap into communication wires between the occupied city and Moscow. Into this intelligence/espionage scenario McEwan inserts his particular kind of minutely detailed characterization, a British man named Leonard Marnham, who is recruited by the Americans as an electronics expert.

Marnham, in many respects an "innocent", is amazed and dismayed with the weird antics of the young Americans he observes caught up in their showy brand of "football" foolery, and their obsession with this new, brassy music of Bill Haley's, "Rock Around The Clock".

As McEwan carefully documents Marnham's spare, monk-like existence, we begin to know this fictional character very well, and are, in fact, quite surprised by his whirlwind courtship with the beautiful Berliner he meets called Maria. Maria, in many ways far more experienced in the ways of the world than her British paramour, has an unfortunate past which intersects with the life she begins to fashion with Leonard Marnham, creating tragic consequences.

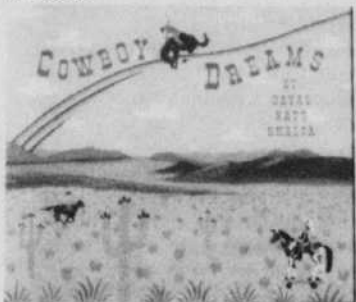

The Innocent meanders along, byoued by McEwan's superior talents in writing narrative, until a chance encounter with Maria's former husband, the brutal and vile Otto, sends the recently engaged couple into a nightmarish spiral of unavoidable events. About half-way through The Innocent, McEwan turns up the tensions a couple of hundred degrees and does a superb job of revealing human character traits, and how they stand up to unexpected stresses and uncontrollable daily forces. Marnham's love for the childlike yet worldly Maria is put through a veritable maelstrom of painful and frightening acts that the naive Englishman is totally unprepared for.

McEwan builds the novel's intensity until the final fifty pages become the clinched roller-coaster of suspenseful situations, which grow not out of extraordinary circumstances, but through perfectly understandable freaks of time and place. The ending to The Innocent is so unexpected, the joy-ride of accompanying McEwan on his remarkable narrative achievement such a reader's delight, that only these bare bones of the story should even be hinted at.

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

What begins as a slow-moving story character study changes into a torrid tale of passion and romance, only to conclude in a startling manner. The Innocent, is another considerable piece of writing from one of Britain's most formidable young writers.

KIDS' BOOKS

Cowboy Dreams by Dayal Kaur Khalsa (TUNDRA BOOKS): $17.95, 32 pages, 20 full-colour paintings.

Children's book illustrator and writer Dayal Kaur Khalsa died of cancer last summer, but one of the last tasks she completed was the creation of this book. A worthy successor to her Tales Of A Gambling Grandmother, Cowboy Dreams is a richly coloured, handsomely illustrated book suitable for kids 6 years of age and up. It tells of the dreams of a little girl who falls under the spell of hearing the radio tales of "The Lone Ranger", and her ambition to own a horse and conduct herself as a real cowboy. Although Khalsa's books usually compete for Governor General's Awards, the characters in this one journey to F.A.O. Schwarz to check out toy horses, look at paintings of four-legged critters at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and expand their horizons a bit beyond the strict confines of Canada.

The book concludes with a reprint of the poem/song "Poor Lonesome Cowboy", which is alternately known as "The Streets of Laredo", about the death of a "poor cowboy wrapped up in white linen". This song, along with "Home Home On The Range" and "Red River Valley", are the vehicles that the little girl who wants to be a cowboy uses to carry her into her land of dreams. Most young cowpokes won't even wonder what all of these strange songs and poems are supposed to mean, and they should be caught up in the colourful illustrations and the narrative of this last book from Khalsa.

RECORD REVIEWS

Baillie & The Boys The Lights Of Home (RCA—BMG)

The name may conjure up visions of yet another country male vocals category of act, but Kathy Baillie works as a duet with but one boy — Michael Bonagura, who joins her in harmonies and provides some guitar support. This is very much a Nashville album, however, with appearances by luminaries such as David Hungate on fretless and electric basses; Larrie London, who works with the Everlys on drums; acoustic piano by Hargus "Pig" Robbins; synthesizers played by David Briggs and the formidable Larry Knechtel of the late lamented group Bread; with backing vocals supplied by Vince Gill. Smooth these studio technicians over with Bergen White's string arrangements and the formula for a consummate Nashville album is set.

Already, "Perfect" has emerged as the first hit from The Lights of Home, with its crisp vocals by Kathy Baillie over the finger-snapping and Jordanaires-like crooning of the supporting chorus. "Treat Me Like A Stranger" reveals Baillie's voice can get achingly emotional in the manner of Lacy J. Dalton. Elvis's "Fool Such As I" is given a reprise here, as a stripped-down, unembellished country track with pedal steel and fretted dobro replacing Scotty Moore's great solo on the original. Indeed, most of the tracks from Baillie and the Boys make for easy listening, but in this day of extended playing CD's there doesn't really appear to be a reason for a cassette to be released with a meagre nine short tracks on the tape. Baillie & The Boys are good, but they ain't that good!

Bangles Greatest Hits (COLUMBIA)

Like the Beach Boys a generation before them, the Bangles epitomized the Los Angeles scene in rock, when a decade ago folk-rocker Susanna Hoffs teamed up with the sisters Vicki and Debbi Peterson. By the time Michelle Steele joined the Bangles in 1982, Vicki Peterson was sure that they had become a fascimile of what she considered her dream band: "The Yardbirds with Fairport Convention vocals". Not until the lp "Different Light" with its harvest of the tracks "Manic Monday", the novelty "Walk Like An Egyptian", and Jules Shear's catchy song "If She Knew What She Wants", had the Bangles reached that dream band status in reality.

Their fortuitous choice of an old Paul Simon chesnut to re-record for the less than successful movie Less Than Zero, pushed "Hazy Shade Of Winter" into the limelight, rejuvenating the Bangles' career. Their later material is also included here, with four tracks having been culled from the album Everything: "Eternal Flame", "Be With You", "I'll Set You Free" and "In Your Room". As is often the case on these hit collections there is a previously unreleased selection slipped in, with "Everything I Wanted" tacked on to the legit hits. Even at that, there are fourteen Bangles selections on this compilation, making it almost double the length of more chintzy collections of music.

Lee Roy Parnell Lee Roy Parnell (ARISTA—BMG)

Prime example of the new country sound, Lee Roy Parnell works with producer Barry Beckett, himself a fine keyboard player, to pump out some of the highest energy sounds to ever emanate from OmniSound Studio in Nashville. Beckett favors a rhythm backing that features Jim Horn & The Horn Section, to add a very R&B flavor to these songs that were mostly co-written by Lee Roy Parnell. Tunes like "Fifty-Fifty Love" or "Outa Be A Law" have a touch of fifties sax about them, often sounding more like something by The Coasters than the usual country mix. "Where Is My Baby Tonight" gets into the groove that Ronnie Milsap hit for his "Lost In The Fifties" medley, on this pretty tune from Graham Lyle & Troy Seals.

On "Let's Pretend" Lee Roy mixes a little Motown with his Nashville orientation to come up with a ballady, Otis Redding type of song; with "You're Taking Too Long" Lee Roy moves into Gatlin Brothers territory. The sax fills that proliferate here may take the Nashville establishment a bit by surprise, but with the likes of Dwight Yoakum gaining heavy airplay, Lee Roy Parnell appears to have the door opened wide for his style of uptown country songs.

Luxury camping in a virgin Caribbean island paradise

By Christopher Michaud

MAHO BAY, St. John (Reuter) — Much of the tiny U.S. Virgin island of St. John is truly virgin — a largely unpopulated Caribbean paradise.

That's because more than half of the 52-square-kilometre island is a U.S. national park, the gift in 1956 of the American philanthropist Laurance Rockefeller.

There is one campground in the park, the 5.6-hectare Maho Bay Camps — but this is no mere campground.

Each tent site is actually a canvas-covered house built with a wooden frame and floor. There are even beams in the "ceiling."

This is luxury camping.

WELL EQUIPPED

The tents are furnished with a couch, bookcase, table and chairs, stove, cooler, cooking utensils and dishes, several lighting fixtures and electrical outlets, and a platform bed that is more comfortable than those in the average hotel room. Linens and towels are also included.

An outdoor deck gives many of the sites a spectacular view of the turquoise waters of the Caribbean and of St. Thomas and the many other islands and cays that make up the Virgin Islands.

Many of those views are courtesy of Hurricane Hugo, which defoliated a fair amount of St. John last year and created new vistas throughout the previously dense foliage.

However, other than that — and a warning to boil water for two minutes — few signs of Hugo's wrath are to be found on the island.

COOK OR DINE

Visitors to Maho Bay have the option of cooking in their tents, dining at an outdoor pavilion where Maho's cooks provide solid meals at reasonable prices, or having dinner in the little town of Cruz Bay, the island's main settlement.

Daytime activities mostly involve the main attraction in the Caribbean — the water.

Snorkelling is terrific virtually anywhere on the island, including the three beaches within a few minutes' walk from the camp. Snorkelling trips to offshore reefs can also be arranged.

Scuba diving, sailboat charters, windsurfing and sunfish rentals are all popular and can be arranged through the camp.

Ferryboats leave Cruz Bay several times a day for the neighboring islands of St. Thomas and the British Virgin Islands of Tortola and Virgin Gorda.

For the landlubber, St. John and its national park boast over a dozen hiking trails offering walks ranging from 15 minutes to more than two hours.

Along any of them can be seen an abundance of tropical flora and fauna, as well as ruins of the old sugar plantations that once thrived on the island.

FLORA AND FAUNA

Maho also has evening programs several nights a week at which park rangers present slide shows featuring island plant, animal and underwater life.

Lizards, tiny bananaquits, cousin to the hummingbird, and tropical flora such as hibiscus and bougainvillea seem to be everywhere.

One is likely to find a peacock strolling along the boardwalk in the middle of the night. And the lack of ambient light from the island permits first-rate stargazing.

The camp was built 15 years ago by Stanley Selengut, who recently was recognized in Washington for his work as an environmentally sensitive developer.

His concept was to create a place where guests could commune with nature in comfort. Nothing at Maho Bay was disturbed in building the camps — no roads cut or vegetation cleared. Selengut built everything — platforms for the tents, boardwalks and staircases zigzagging up and down the hillside — above ground level.

Travel to St. John is not the easiest. Flights land at St. Thomas, where taxis provide service to ferries in either Charlotte Amalie or Red Hook for the short trip to St. John, smallest of the U.S. Virgin Islands. Then it's another cab or rental jeep to Maho, which is located at the end of a steep and bumpy dirt road.

When you get there, you realize why the intrepid return again and again.

There's an all-inclusive resort out there for you

By Felicity Munn

The Canadian Press

Parent or power-monger, hedonist or honeymooner, there may be an all-inclusive resort for you.

Time was when an all-inclusive vacation meant a week or two at Club Med, which for years thrived on its sun-sea-sex formula. But now there's a wider choice aimed at a larger cross-section of vacationers.

"There's been a tremendous upsurge in the popularity of all-inclusives, so now you have some that cater to families, some for couples only, some that are straight down the middle," says Martha Chapman, marketing manager at tour operator Adventure Tours, which will be offering 21 all-inclusive properties next winter.

"There are incredibly informal ones, where the biggest decision of the day is which pair of shorts to wear to dinner," says Chapman, "and then you have the ultra-exclusive, white-glove-service ones."

SHORT STAYS

Reflecting a growing trend toward more frequent but shorter vacations, all-inclusives now offer short-stay holidays of three or four days, versus the old-style minimum of a week.

Despite the variety, all-inclusives aren't for everyone. But in an increasingly stressful world, the concept of a hassle-free holiday appeals to many.

Everything — accommodation, food, tips, even unlimited drinks at some resorts — is paid for ahead of time. Once at the resort, guests need never carry cash.

Here's a rundown of the major all-inclusive chains with resorts in Mexico and the Caribbean:

CLUB MED

— Club Med, the granddaddy of all-inclusives, has 17 resorts in the Caribbean-Mexico area. In recent years it's been playing down its old, rather naughty image in favor of attracting families.

Five Club Meds now have Mini Clubs, where staffers look after children aged two to 11, and the Club Med Sandpiper in Florida also has a Baby Club for infants four months and up.

The Club Meds in Cancun, Turks and Caicos, and Martinique still attract singles, while Paradise Island and Caravelle on Guadeloupe have a reputation for being quieter and attract couples.

There are no room categories at Club Med; prices vary depending on the season and resort. Excluding air fare and drinks at the bar, they currently range from about $755 to $1,080 Cdn per week per person. Including air fare from Toronto, it's $1,229 to $1,495. In mid-December they'll rise.

COUPLES ONLY

— The four Sandals resorts in Jamaica — a fifth is scheduled to open in the fall — cater to couples only and are marketed as the way to rediscover romance in the tropics.

Each has numerous little hideaways, such as garden glades with double hammocks hanging in them. And each has at least five categories of room and features a formal, reservation-only restaurant in addition to the regular dining rooms.

City of resistance is crumbling

By Philip Shehadi

CONSTANTINE, Algeria (Reuter) — Perched on a rock in the Algerian heartland, straddling a treacherous gorge, Constantine takes pride in a long history of fierce resistance to invading armies.

But more insidious enemies — weather, age and neglect — are eating away at the foundations of the city built by Berber kings, Roman emperors, Turkish beys and French colonial governors.

"If we do not get rapid help, either from Algeria or from UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization), the old city could entirely disappear," warns Ahmed Benyahia, president of the Association for the Defence of the Old Rock of Constantine.

Constantine is a city of bridges, staircases and elevators cut into rock. Tree-lined esplanades packed with outdoor cafes overlook rich plains.

Pedestrians cross suspension bridges swaying in the breeze at dizzying heights across the 180-metre-deep Rhumel gorge.

WOMEN SCORNE

Legend says Turkish governors used to put adulterous women into sacks and toss them off the cliff, with a cat in each bag to maul them as they fell.

More glorious aspects of Constantine's history include a state founded by the Berber king Masinissa in the second century before Christ.

Emperor Constantine changed the name from Cirta when he rebuilt the city in AD 313 after Roman civil wars.

Residents still delight in telling visitors of the fierce battle in 1836 to drive back French invaders.

The city fell a year later but only after the governor of French colonies in North Africa had been killed.

Ahmed Bey, the last Turkish ruler, retreated into the mountains to the south and led resistance to the French for 11 more years.

The city had only a small European population under the French, and most of the non-Muslims were Oriental Jews — nearly one-fifth of the population in the 1940s.

JEWS DEPARTED

The synagogue is now an Islamic cultural centre and little remains of the Jews but names on a French-built war monument.

"Constantine is different from other Algerian cities like Oran and Algiers because it is an ancient city with an old established population — this city kept its Algerian personality throughout the colonial period," says Abdelkrim Badjadja, director of the local archives.

But much of Constantine's heritage is endangered, some of it literally tumbling into the ravine.

Traditional stone and mud houses are collapsing through water infiltration and lack of care. Benyahia says some tenants deliberately destroy their homes to qualify for new apartments.

He fears that a way of life will disappear with the simple square two-storey houses, built in pastel blue around courtyards centred on trees or grapevines.

LOST WAY

"If we lose this architecture we lose a whole way of life, a conception of society," he said, citing traditional values of neighborliness and family intimacy.

Footpaths from Roman times that wind along the bottom of the gorge need restoration.

So does a French-built elevator, now disused, which once descended from the city centre to a natural swimming pool in the rocks below.

The five bridges across the gorge, architectural masterpieces in their own right, include one of the world's longest stone spans — a 27-arch structure built in 1912 with one arch measuring 70 metres.

The bridges have survived earthquakes and the bomb attacks of the French during Algeria's 1954-62 war of independence.

"The bridges are constantly watched and maintained; the exteriors are in excellent shape," said engineer Ghariani Boubekeur.

"But we do not know what the insides are like. Like a man who appears healthy, there could be a cancer inside."

Newcomer Kennedy's 'Gaelic Gospel Soul' music a hit

By Bill Anderson
The Canadian Press

The dirtiest word in pop music is nice, but that's the only word for Irish newcomer Brian Kennedy.

Kennedy's debut record, The Great War of Words, is so nice it would sound good floating out of the speakers at a new age health centre.

You could drink herbal tea to it. Get a massage. Channel some energy.

To be fair, Kennedy is not really offering up human potential nostrums — his music falls more in the ambient roots-music camp led by such Canadian stars as Cowboy Junkies and Daniel Lanois.

Kennedy, 23, calls his music "Gaelic gospel soul," and one English journal has dubbed his album "a portrait of the artist as a young Van."

The reference to Irish soul veteran Van Morrison is inevitable, but Kennedy is almost working with an anti-rock mentality.

His band has no drums and no electric guitars. Acoustic bass and piano provide most of the support, while acoustic guitar, percussion, vocal harmonies, fiddle and wood instruments are added for color, but sparingly.

QUIET, DREAMY

The overall effect is quiet, melodic and dreamy, with Kennedy's voice at the centre — a fitting place for someone whose first musical experience came in a church choir.

During his early years in Belfast, Kennedy also performed in a traditional Irish folk group, but by age 16 he was in London with aspirations of being a pop singer.

Over time, however, he was drawn back to his beginnings, joining a black gospel choir, a Caribbean choir, and finally deciding to break away from commercial pop and try for his own more spiritual sound.

Kennedy's record, at times, veers toward the "aural wallpaper" effect of new age music, and his tendency to sing in the upper register can make him sound sentimental, even feminine. On one song in particular, called Hollow, he's a dead ringer for Joni Mitchell.

These flaws are easy to overlook, however, because Kennedy's debut has sincerity, integrity and simple esthetic beauty. That's more than most pop records, and that's enough for a start.

Kennedy, who records for the BMG label, is currently on a Canadian tour as the opening act for Suzanne Vega. Dates remaining include July 3 in Calgary, July 4 in Edmonton, July 5 in Saskatoon, July 8 in Toronto, July 9 in Hamilton, July 10 in Montreal and July 11 in Quebec City.

Some other noteworthy releases:

Bill Frisell: Is That You? (Elektra-WEA) — The most innovative guitarist working in popular music today, Frisell deserves to be heard outside his pigeonhole of alternative jazz. He splatters everything against the canvas — heavy metal, gypsy, spaghetti western, you name it — yet the final picture is a coherent, accessible and brehtaking whole. Frisell is a truly original talent, and this record is a work of genius.

Peter Murphy: Deep (Beggar's Banquet-Polygram) — Not grungy enough to be alternative rock, not sweet enough to be commercial pop, Murphy's third solo record has the feel of Iggy Pop and Roxy Music, buffed up with a contemporary shine. Cuts You Up, a surprise hit on radio, is one of the best songs of the year, and Deep Ocean Vast Sea isn't far behind. There aren't enough great songs to call this record a classic, but it will last just the same.

Robert Plant: Manic Nirvana (Es Paranza-WEA) — The fountainhead of heavy metal singing, 42-year-old Plant is supposed to be "reclaiming" his Led Zeppelin heritage from the band's countless imitators. Instead, he just sounds like a has-been playing out the string in a most eerie and depressing way.

Groove Yard (Island-MCA) — A smooth sampler of rap-free reggae from the label that took Jamaican music to the world. Some British and African tracks broaden the context, but this is mostly a trip through the last 20 years of Jamaican classics including Jimmy Cliff's The Harder They Come, Junior Murvin's Police and Tci3ves, and Gregory Isaac's Night Nurse. With 19 tracks and 70 minutes of music at a single-album price, it's a bargain.

Soundtrack: Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles (SBK-Capitol) — Mostly humdrum hip-hop, but make a note of it: here's a mainstream soundtrack, aimed at today's kids, that's almost all rap and no rock.

Is rock heading for the museum? Will teenagers in 100 years think it's quaint? Will they laugh at it?

PIKES TOUR — Saskatchewan's Northern Pikes have been confirmed as the opening act for the Canadian tour by American pop star Bruce Hornsby.

The tour begins July 19 in Montreal, then moves to Quebec City on July 20, Ottawa on July 21, Toronto on July 22, Thunder Bay, Ont., on July 24, Winnipeg on July 26, Saskatoon on July 27, Edmonton on July 28, Calgary on July 30, Vancouver on Aug. 1 and Maple Creek, Sask., on Aug. 3.

The Pikes' latest album, Snow in June, is currently sitting at No. 20 on The Record's list of top retail albums in Canada. Hornsby's new record, A Night on the Town, was listed as Canada's hottest debut album last week and entered the chart at No. 45.

Canadian country legend Ian Tyson and American singer Crystal Gayle will host the 1990 Canadian Country Music Awards.

The awards, to be held in Edmonton, will be seen live on CTV on Sept. 8.

The Canadian Country Music Association said in a release that the lineup of performers will be announced next month but it was thrilled to have landed two of the biggest names in country music.

"Ian Tyson is one of Canada's true country music stars," said Sheila Hamilton, executive director of the association, "and with his extensive television background — he hosted a weekly show for many years on the CTV network — it was obvious he should be considered as one of the hosts."

Tyson, who operates a ranch near Longview, Alta., has been on the Canadian scene since the '60s and lately has enjoyed a resurgence in popularity.

Gale has had success melding pop and country styles; her hits include Talkin' in Your Sleep and Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue. The association says she's had more No. 1 country hits in the last 15 years than any other female artist.

Canadian superstar Neil Young is reportedly working on a new career anthology that will include previously unreleased material and could include as many as 10 compact discs.

WHAT'S ON

Notes

For the seventh consecutive year Sherbrooke tourism and convention bureau will be giving bus tours of the city in order to help tourists and natives get to know it better. A CMTS charter bus will offer the guided tour leaving from the bus terminal (48 Depot St.) every afternoon at 1:30. You must reserve a spot on the bus by calling 538-8331. The tour costs $6, and its free for kids under the age of 12. Balloons and coloring books will be offered to the kiddies.

TV

If you weren't one of the hundreds of thousands of people who attended the Benson and Hedges International Fireworks Competition on Ile Ste-Hélène in Montreal here's your chance to see some of the excitement and drama. CBC-6 will air highlights of the competition on Monday night at 7. The show will also feature backstage drama showing the mechanics and logistics of the pyrotechnical displays.

ETV

On Sunday Vermont ETV presents the National Audubon Society special If Dolphins Could Talk at 8. Throughout history dolphins have held special meaning for humankind — the ancient Greeks revered them as gods — and today their marine park antics thrill audiences. But few people realize that a variety of forces are ravaging dolphin populations throughout the world.

Events

Drummondville's Folklore Festival begins this weekend and runs till July 16. This colorful event offers a variety of entertainment with music and dance from 16 countries, including Canada. The 10-day festival will include 300 shows from folk groups from Bulgaria, Norway, Spain, France, Ireland, Israel, Mexico, Russia, the U.S., Austria, Jamaica, the Virgin Islands, Morocco, Japan and Cameroon. The festival will include indoor and outdoor dance shows, concerts, a parade, tales, legends, traditional art, street entertainment and much, much more. Woodyatt Park on the St-Francis River plays host to most of the activities with seven different sites, including a children's garden and an art display. To participate in outdoor activities all you have to do is buy a $5 souvenir button. Indoor concert tickets range from $6 to $15. For more information call 1-800-567-1444.

The Centre Récréatif Communautaire du Quartier Centre invites everyone to join the fun for another excursion. It's the fourth in the series of seven. This time the itinerary takes you to Trois Rivières to participate in a cruise aboard M/S Jacques-Cartier downriver to Cap Santé, near Quebec City. The seven-hour cruise will be filled with stories by Captain Harvey, lively music and lots to eat. Departure is Tuesday, July 10 at 6:40 a.m. from the centre at 400 Galt West in Sherbrooke. Tickets are now on sale at $55 which includes bus transportation to the dock and all other costs. For more info or to register call 564-7485.

'Dream On' looks at single life a little differently

By Connie Passalacqua

Just when we thought single women had cornered the market on moaning and groaning about the state of single-ness — with Molly on Lifetime's "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" and Melissa and Ellyn on ABC's "thirtysomething" — now comes HBO's "Dream On" (airing Tuesday, July 10, Thursday, July 12, and Friday, July 13). HBO has set much store by this show — it's the cable network's first continuing series since Robert Altman's excellent "Tanner '88." "Dream On" also comes from a famed movie director, John Landis ("Coming to America," "Twilight Zone — the Movie").

Brian Benben

"Dream On" chronicles the life of 35-ish, about-to-be-divorced Martin Tupper (Brian Benben), who's still a little too close with his ex, Judith (Wendie Mallick). In the first episode, Tupper, a book agent, debates signing the final divorce papers. He is counseled by his 12-year-old son (Chris Demetral), who appears more mature than his father. That's not the only twist here. "Dream On" 's schtick is that every scene is intercut with real scenes from '50s TV shows that Martin ostensibly remembers from his childhood.

The concept is interesting and for the most part well-done. Dialogue from "Dream On" is expertly cut into and around the clips, illustrating that 40 years later, TV, and those of us who watch it, have not really changed much. Most of the clips, however, are used for comic effect. Although some faces are recognizable — the first episode has Ozzie Nelson, Groucho Marx and Joan Crawford — most of the clips are of actors long gone, and the programs are not identified. Real TV fans may be frustrated.

As a newly single guy living in New York City, Tupper finds women who want committed relationships and a date who insists on bondage and whipped cream. "Dream On" makes clever use of the fact that cable affords the luxury of more adult situations and language. The humor is also clever. The show's best asset though is Benben ("A Year in the Life") who has a very nice off-center charm. With an off-center nose (he played Tom Hayden in HBO's "Conspiracy: The Trial of the Chicago 8") he's neither a hunk or a schlep.

GET INTO TRAINING FOR THE FUTURE

Record Carriers develop the qualities of successful businessmen and businesswomen: integrity, self-reliance, responsibility, perseverance, friendliness and courtesy. These are the traits that will lead to success in the future, no matter what career you choose.
 Call 569-9528 or 243-0088 for complete information on how to begin training with the Record Carrier Team.

Clockwise from top: Josh Brolin, Gregg Rainwater, Ty Miller, Travis Fine, Steve Baldwin and Yvonne Suhor are a tight-knit family of youths who risk their lives riding for the Pony Express, on "The Young Riders." The Thursday night ABC series will move to Saturdays in the fall.

ASK TONI

Harmon first hit the small screen on 'Sam'

By Toni Reinhold

Did Mark Harmon star in any TV series besides "St. Elsewhere"? - M.K., Eden, Ind.

Mark Harmon

Harmon had his first regular series role in 1978 on "Sam," a police drama. This was followed by the series "240-Robert" (1979-80) and "Flamingo Road" (1981-82). He also appeared in "Centennial" (1978-79). The son of football star Tom Harmon and a former star quarterback himself, Harmon is starring in the upcoming TV movie "Dillinger."

The new movie, "Dick Tracy," has sparked quite a feud in our home. My husband says that this is not the first time Tracy has been featured in a film, but I disagree. Who is right? - F.B., Lancaster, Pa.

Tracy was created as a comic strip by Chester Gould. "Dick Tracy" was a radio show from 1935-48, and then the subject of movies including "Dick Tracy, Detective" (1945), "Dick Tracy Versus Cueball" (1946), "Dick Tracy Meets Gruesome" (1947) and "Dick Tracy's Dilemma" (1947). Tracy was also the subject of a TV series from 1950-51, which starred Ralph Byrd. Byrd portrayed the detective in several of the films and on radio. He has been described as the definitive screen Tracy.

What is the name of the group of comedians that included Frank Gorshin? They starred on TV in the '70s. - P.W., Salt Lake City, Utah Gorshin was a regular on the "ABC Comedy Hour" (1972). The show featured a group of impressionists called "The Kopycats," of which Gorshin was a member. Gorshin is perhaps best known for his portrayal of the Riddler in the "Batman" series.

My husband told me that Neville Brand is one of America's most decorated war heroes. Is this true? - C.L., Avon Park, Fla.

Brand, who portrayed Texas Ranger Reese Bennett in the TV series, "Laredo," was the fourth most decorated American soldier of World War II.

How old is Michael Jackson? I saw recent pictures of him and he still looks like a youngster. - B.R., Stockton, Calif.

Jackson is 31 years old.
