YOUTH DROWNED AT CHATEAUGU'Y

Graham Tennant, 19, Overcome When Swimming With Several Friends

Graham Tennant, 19 years of age, a resident of Montreal, lost his life by drowning early Friday afternoon, in the waters of Lake St. Louis, at Ville De Lery. The body was recovered within fifteen minutes, but artificial respiration proved futile. Dr. L. Savage, of Ste. Philomene, coroner of the Beauharnois district, disposed of the case with a verdict of accidental death.

It was learned by the coroner that the youth, together with his parents, was spending the summer months in their summer residence at Ville De Lery. Shortly after noon Graham Tennant went out sailing in a rowboat, accompanied by Frederick Morgan, James A. Summerton, Robert Tennant, his brother and his father. When they reached a raft the two Tennant brothers and Summerton climbed on it for the purpose of bathing in Lake St. Louis. The raft was situated about 100 yards from the shore and Graham Tennant said that he would swim in. He dived and swam for a short distance and then shouted for aid. When assistance reached him he had appeared for the third time above the surface and then had disappeared. His body was recovered later by a Montrealer named MacNamee.

The latter had plunged at the spot where the young man was seen to disappear and within a few seconds brought the lifeless body to the surface and conveyed it to the shore. Dr. Z. Marchand, of Chateauguay, was summoned to the scene and practised artificial respiration for over an hour, but his endeavors were unavailing and the coroner was notified.

Dr. Savage, the coroner, expressed the opinion that the youthful Montrealer was a victim of syncope.

Hinchinbrooke Schools Hold Annual Picnic

The third annual picnic of the Hinchinbrooke Schools, which is sponsored by the Hinchinbrooke School Board, was held in the grove of Norman J. Fennell on Wednesday the 29th June. The day being ideal, there was a large attendance, upwards of 400 in the gathering. A soft ball game was played in the afternoon between the Girl Stars and Boy Stars of the various schools, which was interesting, resulting in a win for the boys of 8 to 2.

After lunch had been partaken of, there was a short program, consisting of singing by the different schools, an address by Mr. M. B. Fisher, M.L.A., and music by Mr. Alex. Tomlinson and Mr. Glen on accordion and bagpipes. The races for the young people were then run off, for which five prizes were offered in each race. While the races were being run, there was a ball practice going on, after which the married men played the single men a game, the married men being victorious by a score of 12 to 10. The usual booths selling candy, fruits, gum, ice-cream, and soft drinks were kept busy as long as the supply lasted, the proceeds of which will clear expenses. Voluntary donors and helpers having erected a rack for swings for the small children, was in constant use all day, and much enjoyed by large and small. Although it entails a lot of thought and time, the Board feel justified in their attempt to make it a success and with the whole hearted support of the municipality we will succeed. The members of the School Board express their sincere thanks to Dr. J. C. Moore, M.P., and to Mr. M. B. Fisher, M.L.A., for their attendance and generous donations, and to all those who helped in any way to make the picnic a success.

14 CHILDREN STAGE SHOW

Concert For Benefit of Poor Children in K. C. Club Rooms Very Successful

Children of the eastern section of the town have been making good use of their playtime lately in preparation for a concert which they staged last night in the Columbus Club Rooms for the benefit of the Fresh Air Fund and the Christmas Tree League.

The children were entirely responsible for the programme, no adults having had anything to do with it until the afternoon before the show. All costumes in the playlets were entirely made by the children themselves. The programme went off without a hitch and is quite a compliment to the initiative and ability of the older children. Even to the tiny tots they played their parts exceptionally well. More than 125 adults and children were in attendance and all enjoyed the show as they were each made "a child again just for tonight."

The children were assisted in the programme by impromptu numbers by Mrs. Ernest J. Lefebvre, Miss Laura Leahy, Miss Norah Murphy, and, in the staging by Miss Lucille M. Lefebvre and Miss Pearl Murphy.

Ushers at the concert were Arthur Lefebvre, Harold Cahill and George Lefebvre, with Marc Lefebvre as cashier, and Edgar Lefebvre as master of ceremonies and chairman.

The following programme was given: Welcome Song; Piano duet—Rita Lefebvre and Gertrude Lefebvre; Nursery Rhymes—Eileen Murphy, Mallory Cahill, Gloria Martin, Shirley Cahill, Leslie Chambers, Rita Lefebvre, Mary Murphy, Gertrude Lefebvre, Rita Lorden, Mercedes Daoust; "Bonjour Mon Vieux"—Armande Lemieux; Plantation Melodies—Kathleen Cahill and Madeline Murphy; "School Days"—Eileen Murphy and Mallory Cahill; "Mother"—The Cast; "La Dent Perdue"—Mercedes Daoust; "A la Claire Fontaine"—Armande Lemieux; March—The Cast. VAL'F'D GREEN TOO GOOD FOR HUNTINGDON

Valleyfield Bowlers Piled up 93 to 41 Score Last Evening

To be defeated in bowling by a Valleyfield team is no disgrace, and it is an honor to have the privilege of playing on that outstanding green of the Province of Quebec. As smooth as almost any hardwood floor, it seemed almost impossible for the Huntingdon bowlers to accustom themselves to such a beautiful green. The bowls would borrow to such an extent that it was difficult to accustom onself to it.

In a most hospitable manner the Valleyfield Club entertained the four rinks from Huntingdon last evening. Although three of the games were very much one sided, interest was not lost in the game and many fine heads were built up. The aggregate score of the evening showed that Valleyfield won 93 to 41.

The teams were:

Our Community Leads—Others Follow

The Dominion Day picnics of 1932 did not come off so successfully as was anticipated; not due to lack of organization, but due to weather conditions. Had the usual speeches been heard at these picnics, the orators would have been crying out the greatness of the Dominion of Canada. Truthful statements they would all be, but some of the members of such audiences would not be willing to acknowledge such realities about Canada owing to their present depressed feelings.

People of this frame of mind usually think some legislation can be passed that will correct everything. Legislation can do a certain amount, but not all, we must help ourselves.

Canada is made up of thousands of communities such as ours, but these communities do not all apply themselves as we do; consequently they are having harder times than we are. The reason for such being the case is that those communities lack character.

"The building of a school is the building of character."—Dawson.

This district built schools generations ago and we have been reaping the benefits for more than half a century.

Having such a character background makes it that we go carefully forward and that is the very reason why our district has advanced with Canada. Of all Canada, has any rural community prospered a bit more than that along the banks of the Chateauguay? We have faith in Canada, therefore every one should have faith in the Valley of the Chateauguay. Work for the welfare of all good movements within the Chateauguay Valley and you will be doing your part for Canada, the community in which you live, and yourself.

Perhaps some of our readers will now wonder what advancements have taken place in this community in the past decade (10 years.) Huntingdon has built a church worth $40,000, $20,000 school for the boys of St. Joseph's Parish, a $200,000 hotel, a co-operative dairy factory, the finest of its kind in Canada, business places worth at least another $100,000 and a number of admirable homes. At Ormstown comparable changes have taken place, such as the building of the new Presbyterian Church, and now a new Consolidated School. At Howick a new church and Consolidated School were built. Such marked building changes have taken place in all centres in this district, therefore we should never be backward in upholding our community, one of Canada's most forward districts.

Caughnawaga Bridge Plans Approved

Pleasant news it was to read in the daily press this week that the plans for the proposed Caughnawaga-Lachine bridge were approved by the Dominion Government. The Hon. Honoré Mercier has long been waging for the erection of this bridge, but time and again it has received set backs. Now that the bridge has received the approval of the Dominion Government it is to be hoped that the Provincial Government will not be hindered in proceeding with its erection.

What this bridge will mean to our District is indeed impossible to imagine, but we can all figure ourselves as living 30 minutes nearer Montreal during the auto season, and the cost of crossing the river will be cut in half, when compared with the ferry.

Agents and Peddlers

(The Advance, Timmins, Ont.)

A business man in town was deep in his own affairs the other day when a young lady asked to see him privately. At some inconvenience to the business man and his business, the interview was given, and it developed, first, that the young lady was anxious to take a trip to Europe, and then, after more waste of precious time, it was apparent that she was only a high pressure peddler securing time from business men on false pretences.

A young man has been around town recently. "Would you kindly give me your name and address," he commences, striving to leave the impression that he is gathering information for a directory or for the government or the health department, or the communists, or something. He wants to work his way through college. He is only another of those time wasting peddlers.

A lady was called from her baking to answer the door bell. The suave gentleman wanted to make her a gift. He assured her he was not selling anything. Before she got away from him her bread was ruined, her temper the same, and her chances for heaven more or less spoiled. He was another of those pestilential peddlers—one of the curses of the modern day.

"I am giving these books away to leading citizens for advertising purposes," said the man. "There is absolutely no charge for them, though they sell regularly at seventy dollars. Just sign here to show you are willing to accept them." Anyone foolish enough to sign will find they are getting the books free but are contracting to pay the price of the set for a supplement or something else. Just high-pressure peddling.

Then there is the peddler of printing, trying to seduce the business man into buying something that he would not accept at all from a local firm. The peddler can promise anything. Securing interviews by fraud and getting business by deception, that seems to be the keynote of the work of the peddler. The peddler is making it practically impossible for the reputable salesman to do business.

The most costly and unsatisfactory way to buy anything is from the high pressure peddler. The peddlers always were an expensive nuisance, but today they seem more of a curse than ever because they take so much time in their crazy and involved "approaches," learned in American correspondence schools. Instead of posing as philanthropists or welfare workers or, what-not, if they would state their business honestly at the start it would not be so bad. The very fact that they are allowed to live and are assaulted so seldom, is proof of the good nature and tolerence of humanity.

Years ago the peddlers became so great a nuisance that all over the country one would see signs reading:—"Peddlers! Beware the Dog!" Cross dogs are likely to become popular again. Just as the law tries to keep a jump ahead of the criminal, so the people will have to attempt to control the high pressure peddler nuisance by counter ingenuity and defence.

The Average Man's Dollar

Of each dollar the average man spends, about 60 cents goes for goods such as food, clothing, shelter and other tangible things, while 40 cents goes for intangible services, according to the results of a consumer study made public by the Investors Syndicate of Minneapolis.

"Ten years ago," the summary states, "people spent a larger proportion of each dollar for goods, the total being in the neighborhood of 66 cents. More and more, however, they have come to use such valuable, if intangible, services as health, financial, educational and recreational facilities. After all, it is possible for an individual to eat just as much food, and to wear out a certain limited amount of shoe leather. The human wants for amusement, savings and other intangible but nevertheless real values are relatively unlimited."

A recent estimate of the cost per week of a family budget of staple foods, fuel and lighting and rent, in terms of the average prices of 69 cities of Canada, is $17.25. That total includes nothing for clothing or house furnishings. Suppose that a family of five can get by on $143. a year for these items, and the weekly budget is brought to $20. According to the survey, that would constitute only 06 per cent of expenditure, and $13.33 would be required for intangible services. The "average" wage for the breadwinner of a family would have to be $33.33 per week.

Strange Theft in London

The London police officer's sang froid and savoir faire are traditional. Constable Puddicombe rates fairly high in these qualities as in others valuable to a peace officer. Recently, however, he found himself in a situation that left him floundering. He was suddenly accosted early one morning by a very breathless individual, who gasped out something about the theft of "gallstones." "Wot?" he said in amazement. Gallstones to him were one of the less valuable byproducts of surgery. "Nine pounds of them," panted the man. "Gor blime," Constable Puddicombe's eyes widened in amazement, and over his face crept a look of awe at the address of this super-thief able to take nine pounds of gallstones from a man without being detected, mingled with a grudging respet for a man capable of harboring such a Gargantuam affliction as nine pounds of gallstones. "They were in a cigar box." Mystification wiped out Constable Puddicombe's previous reactions, and the police habit reasserting itself, he set about getting a connected account of what had happened. The gallstones collected at an abattoir, were valued at $400 and used in the manufacture of a peculiar greenish-blue pigment. They were lying on an office desk in Botolph Lane, Eastcheap. A burglar had taken them, most likely by mistake, along with a box of cigars and a small sum in cash.

Angry Sow Injures Child

Serious injury was sustained by the two-year-old son of Anton Schneider, farmer of the Red Star district, Manitoba, when the lad was attacked by an infuriated sow recently. Wandering too near the savage animal, the youngster was badly mauled when the sow attacked him. Rescued by his parents, who heard his terrified screams, the lad was rushed away for medical attention and examination, which revealed that no fatal injury had been suffered.

A Shark-Minded Woman

Extraordinary wish was expressed by a young South African woman travelling from Capetown to England on a liner. She said she wished to be eaten by sharks. The woman was seen leaning over the rails of the ship. Suddenly she discarded her cloak, walked back and took a running jump over the side of the ship. Two boats were lowered, but the woman, who was formerly a well-known swimmer began to swim away from her rescuers. The boats overtook her, however, and hauled her from the water.

One Egg For One Pea

They sometimes barter eggs for peas in the district of Wynward, Sask.—one egg for one pea. A farmer's wife brought four dozen eggs to a rural store a few days ago and in exchange was given peas. When she got home and counted what had been weighed out to her in exchange there were only 35 peas. It was a "gyp" the wife told an official of the United Farmers of Canada, Saskatchewan section, but after all the storekeeper could only get about a nickel for the 13 extra eggs "and who is going to kick up a fuss about a nickel?"

Cow Hauled From Well

Eugene Flaherty's cow was still giving milk, even though it spent most of the day before at the bottom of a well. Mr. Flaherty of Alton, Ont., missed the cow, and was surprised when he looked down the well to see it looking up at him. Six men and a derick hauled the animal out.

Death in the Law Courts

Fifteen were killed in the Law Courts of Bastia, the chief business town of Corsica, when, without the slightest warning, the roof fell in, in practically a single piece. Magistrates, lawyers, witnesses and members of the general public were crushd down under the fragments as it broke. Some members of the public who tried to control the rush of those not gravely injured, were knocked down and trampled on, while the screams of terrified women rang shrilly above the general tumult, amid cries of the injured held down by masses of wood and plaster.

Mercy Store Nets Fortune

A. W. Purvis, of Waller, Texas, gave his store to God and has made a fortunte. "All goods in this store are sold at cost, nothing is added for profit The store is kept by freewill offerings. Anything you may add to your purchase will be received with many thanks." That legend in his "God's Mercy Store" tells the story of how he conducts his general merchandise business—and yet has made a profit of $100,000 in the last 16 years. The many that flock to this unusual store were soon convinced that Purvis was selling his goods at cost and there were few who did not leave a free-will offering.

Explains Extra Wives

He was only trying to make his second wife angry enough to divorce him when he applied at the county building in Moosonee, Tenn., for a license to wed another girl, Edward Wyzorek, alias Mowalski, alias Martin, testified before a jury and judge in court, charged with bigamy. He testified he married Evelyn Young, May 12, 1925. They have a son, Burton Frederick, 6. Edward used the name Wyzorek at that time. On March 2, 1932, he said, he married Anastasia Bieganowski, 22, under the name of Kowalski. He said he had been drunk for two weeks and did not realize he was married until after the ceremony. Wyzorek then explained he was merely trying to make Anastasia angry when he applied for the license to wed Mildred Cinders, 24, under the name of Martin.

Flogged Man Causes Death

Did Peter Thompson, full-blooded Aborigine, and 60 years old, murder James Thompson, a white bushman, or cause him to commit suicide? That was the question before the court in Cairns, Australia, recently, when the black was placed on trial for murder. The crime was stated to have been an act of vengeance. Evidence showed that the white man had tied his black namesake to a post and flogged him with hobble chains. The following night Peter threw a spear and his tomahawk at the white man while he was in bed. Driven mad with pain, James Thompson took strychnine and died. The jury recommended Peter Thompson to mercy, and he was sentenced to 18 months' hard labor.

A Secret Slips Out

Another cat is out of the bag—the sons of Adam are profitable customers in the hair-dyeing department of beauty parlors. Yes, not all those who dip into henna pots and peroxide bottles for locks of red and white gold, and to hide tell-tale silver reminders of passing birthdays, are Eve's daughters—not by an estimated 10 per cent. This information slipped out when several persons, including the owner of one of Chicago's swankiest beauty shops and an official in the Illinois Hairdressers' Association, sat around a table discussing shop. "One would be surprised at the number of judges and well-known men in town who have dyed hair," said the beauty shop owner. These were the reasons given for the hair tinting and restoring: Jobs and younger wives to be held, a desire to remain in the swim of things—and "vanity, thy nickname is Adam."

The Art Museum's Ban

Art museum's ban on a painting entitled "An Apparition Over Los Angeles," has caused a stir in that city. The picture done by Barz Miller, recently won a $50 prize in a local exhibition. It shows Angelus Temple, the headquarters of Aimee MacPherson-Hutton, and hovering over the Temple and the roofs of Los Angeles, seated on clouds, in the form of money bags, are Aimee, her husband, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie ("Ma") Kennedy.

Bull Invades Church Aisle

Worshippers in the Cathedral at San Severino Marche, Italy, fled in panic, when an infuriated bull invaded the church. The animal broke away while being led to the slaughterhouse, dashed across the main plaza, climbed the 24 steps to the church and entered. The bull's headlong rush down the main aisle of the church was halted when he lost his footing on the stone pavement and fell to his knees before the high altar. He then lay there quietly until he was led away by the farmer who owned him.

Girl, 14, Fakes Robbery Plot

Afraid to admit that she had spent $10.00 derived from sale of tickets for a church dance, 14-year-old Nettie Johnston, of Toronto, faked a robbery story, banging her own head to lend realism to the tale. While police were seeking the ruffians whom little Nettie declared had beaten and robbed her outside her home, the girl broke down and confessed to her father. Nettie had undertaken to sell 10 tickets and had disposed of all of them to her Dad. But instead of turning in the cash to the church, she spent it on a new frock. Then came the time for explanations and she realized that trouble lay ahead. Having read many stories of street robberies, she invented one of her own, cleverly setting the stage. Late at night a pedestrian found her, apparently unconscious, on the sidewalk with a large bruise on her head. Revived, she said that her assailants had taken the money. In a tearful confession Nettie told of inflicting the bruise herself by banging her head against a post.

Misjudged Wife For Robber

A suspicious noise at night led Jose Costales, who lives on a farm near Granada, Spain, to search for the trespasser, while his wife remained on watch indoors. As Jose seemed to linger, his wife put on her husband's white coat and walked across the farmyard to discover what he was doing. Not recognizing her figure in the dark, Jose, convinced it was the robber, raised his rifle and shot his wife dead.

300-Year-Old Bean Sprouts

A large white bean, picked up in the ruins of Grand Quivira and believed to be 300 years old, has sprouted into a living stalk in White Memorial musenm at San Antonio, Texas. The bean was found in an excavation 70 feet from the surface at ruins located 100 miles south of Santa Fe, N. M. Franciscan missionaries founded a mission there in 1629, and prior to that time the Piro Indians maintained a settlement there called Tabira. The bean was soaked in water for five hours. Less than two weeks later a stalk six inches tall had grown from the seed.

Cripple Starved to Death

Police at Baltimore, Md., pieced together a story of the starving to death of Grant Aubel, a 26-year-old cripple, by his mother and brother "to drive out devils that possessed him." The body was kept on a couch in their home. A diary kept by his Brother Paul recorded when death occurred and predicted that "he will arise from the dead." The mother Mrs. Annie Aubel, 55, a few days before had turned a health officer away from the house saying "God won't let you in," and Paul, 30, were arrested. "God knows all about this," said Paul Aubel. He said Grant was given food only once since March 20, "because the Lord told us to starve him to drive out the devils." Paul said that "the Lord told me to bind him hand and foot and cast him into outer darkness. I tied his hands and feet but he chewed the strings and I tied him again. He died the next morning."

Mad Rush For Shelter

Mad rush for shelter was made by people in the business district of Salisbury, Rhodesia, and a strange calm fell suddenly when a swarm of bees arrived. All traffic and all business were suspended for more than two hours. The bees, which had been disturbed when swarming, cleared the streets as effectively as shrapnel. Motorists accelerated out of the "danger zone," but several cyclists fell off their machines in their efforts to dodge the raiders, and a number of bicycles were left lying in the road.

Chapels in Oak Tree

An unusual oak tree, containing two chapels within its huge trunk, celebrated its 1,200th year of existence at the village of Allouville-Bellefosse, near Rouen in France. Nine men with their arms extended are barely able to encircle the base of the tree. Of course, its exact age is lost in the mists of history, but experts declare it must be approximately 1,200 years old. In the first chapel is a statue of the Virgin presented by the Empress Eugenie during the Second French Empire. An elegant wooden stairway surrounds the oak and leads to the second chapel which is known as La Chapelle du Calvaire. It is related that the tree was visited by Charles II of England, and also by Louis XV.

Balancing Life's Budget

With the problem of balancing budgets occupying the minds of all people entrusted with the duties and responsibilities of government whether in the Federal, Provincial or municipal fields; with the same problem uppermost in the minds of the executives of all our large transportation systems, industrial enterprises and financial institutions; with every business man, big and little, every head of a family on salary or earning wages, even men and women out of employment, all engaged with the same problem, the thought intrudes itself: "Are people, individually and collectively, more concerned with the dollar-and-cents balancing of their material budgets than they are with the much more important balancing of their lives?"

It is important, of course, vitally necessary in fact, that people should balance their material budgets. If they do not, bankruptcy in business and financial disaster lies ahead. No individual, no corporation, no government, no nation, can go on indefinitely spending more money than they receive or have. Monetary budgets must be balanced; trade budgets must be balanced, that is, inasmuch as every import is likewise an export, and every export an import, these must balance, and if every nation insists on developing exports while refusing to receive imports, the world's economic structure is thrown out of balance and bankruptcy leading to disaster and ruin is inevitable.

But it is equally true, and a law of nature that cannot be ignored and dare not be defied without loss and suffering, that the budget of our very lives must be balanced. But inasmuch as disaster may not follow quite so quickly, and the payment of the penalty may be longer deferred than is true in the financial world, most people neglect to properly balance their lives until it is too late.

In the struggle for material wealth, for success in business, for supremacy in political life, for victory in the field of sport, even to reach the top of the social ladder, what a vast number of people overlook and neglect the all-important asset of maintaining their physical health. Failing to do so, their lives are sadly out of balance, for of what avail is the accomplishment of their desires if the price to be paid is impairment in health, bodily vigor and strength undermined? Achievement at such a price is too costly, and is, in fact, not achievement at all, but failure, because one cannot enjoy or long retain that which has seemingly been achieved.

How frequently has it happened that a brilliant student aiming at high marks and scholastic honors through too close application to his or her studies, and the burning of the midnight oil, has so sapped both mental and physical strength that in the crowning hour of learning achieved, and apparently with a life of great promise just beginning, collapse has come.

Others in the race for material things utterly fail to balance the budget of their lives by any intellectual studies or pursuits. They fail to balance their lives with the beauties of nature, or music, or good literature. They even neglect the taking of proper exercise and recreation. As a result of their unbalanced lives they become gross, self-centred, utterly selfish, and largely lost to all the finer things of life.

Man is a dual personality,—a combination of body and spirit. If his life's budget is to balance, he must devote attention both to his body and its needs and to the development of mind and spirit. He cannot afford to neglect either the one or the other; neiglect of one means not only that it will suffer but the other will also suffer.

The balancing of life's budget calls for an all-round development of body and of spirit, and of the mind which is partly of the body and partly of the spirit. A man may scoff at religion, he may profess to have no religion, but in so doing he merely advertises the unbalanced character of his life. He is less than a complete man. A man may be perfect physically, but if he neglects his mind and his spirit, he is merely a high type of animal. On the other hand, one who neglects his body and develops his mental powers to the exclusion of all else, is a freak, and even his mental powers become distorted and unreliable because he lacks the necessary contact with and appreciation of natural human forces.

It is only through a true balancing of life's budget that man can possibly reach his highest destiny of happiness, achievement and usefulness in this world.

ANCIENT "TRAP SHOOTING"

The origin of trap shooting may be traced to the ancient pastime of popinjay shooting, a game practiced by the ancient Greeks and the expert bowmen of medieval times, wrote W. W. Greener, in "The Gun and Its Development." The popinjay was a stuffed parrot or fowl placed at the top of a pole, and used as a target; in some instances a living bird was used, a certain amount of liberty being given to it by the length of the cord used to secure it to the pole. Homer, in the "Iliad," mentions popinjay shooting, a dove being the target.

"Burnside," the home of Mr. R. R. Ness, presented a gala appearance on the night of June 29th, when the United Church lawn social took place. The program was excellent but the weather proved disappointing. A few scattered showers occurred which, however, did not prevent the program from being carried out, although it no doubt kept many at home. Two pipers and a drummer of the Glengarry Pipers were present and their playing was much enjoyed. Another very interesting feature was the dancing of little Miss Catherine Thomas, a pupil of the Betty Speir's School of Dancing, Montreal. She appeared three times, dancing a fan dance, also some toe and tap dancing. Her costumes were very charming. Miss Mary Cullen recited, while Mr. Welch and Mrs. Wood of Athelstan sang solos, all of these receiving hearty encores. Another enjoyable feature was the fashion show given by eight young men. Dean Barton of Macdonald College was present and addressed the gathering. Proceeds amounted to $80.

The Huntingdon Gleaner Inc.

Conducted by
HAROLD S. EDGAR

A series of weekly articles on advertising and merchandising prepared for the merchants of the Chateauguay Valley with the co-operation of the Huntingdon Gleaner.

Sow the seed or let the land lie idle.

Just the other day, a merchant told me that he was saving money by not advertising or spending anything in painting up and fixing over his store. This merchant is like the farmer who says he is saving money by not planting a crop. If he does not plant it and cultivate and reap that crop and try to sell it, someone else will come into his territory and sell his old customers.

This attitude on the part of many merchants is having a drastic effect, on their business. It may be asolutely true that in not spending money you are saving it, but in not doing those things which will bring more business into your store you are losing a vastly greater amount.

Merchants who are wide awake in their efforts of advertising and merchandising are getting the greater portion of the business today, and only those merchants who are willing to keep up with the trend of buying can hope to hold the customers they have or to increase their scope.

Everything you do or don't do advertises your store either in a favorable light or in a detrimental way. If you neglect to look for opportunities to increase your business you actually turn business away from your doors. No business stands still.

An office is not efficient that uses only the methods of even 15 years ago—a plant is inefficient if their machinery is all over 20 years old—a farm using only the old methods is not producing the best results—nor is a store in which all the equipment is exactly the same as it was 25 or even 5 years ago, going to produce profitable business for its owner.

The merchant who is willing and does keep his store and its equipment in tune with the times, is the one who will reap the most profits.

I have been in stores in which goods are located in the same spot in the store today in which they were to be found 20 years ago, yet the buying habits of the public have completely changed. Goods for which there is practically no call are occupying the most prominent and valuable locations in the store, yet goods which should have a quick turnover are shoved into back corners.

The Departmental and Retail advertising in the Metropolitan newspapers show increased advertising lineage by from 50 to 100% over two years ago, and their sales units, and in a lesser degree, the money volume, show a profitable increase.

The information coming from the big cities as to unemployment does not indicate that the buying power of the people of the cities has increased in any way. Without actually checking this up, it is not a wild guess to say that a good deal of this city business comes from the places outside, probably some from your own field. The town merchant does not realize that his stronger competitor is not in his own town or his own county, but in the bigger centres. You cannot put a ring around your own district to compel people to come to you, but you can invite them to come and make it interesting for them to come.

I do not mean to say that at times a man should not consider every dollar of expenditure,—he should,—but not so much to see where he could save today at the expense of tomorrow, but to see where he can get better value out of his expenditure, whether it be better value for the dollar, or more intelligent use of his own abilities and brains, and those of his assistants. A better use of his windows and his store display, capitalizing more on his personal connection and realizing that smiles and satisfied customers are one of his best assets.

Now about your advertising—there never was a time when advertising could be thrown together and produce a full measure of sales. In good times one might be a little careless but not now. Study to find out just what you want to say and then make it as short and direct as you can. Say all you need to tell your story but add few frills. Use all the white space necessary to make your message stand out.

Consider the value of continuity of effort by frequent and regular insertions rather than big splashes occasionally. The most effective advertiser, is the one who keeps telling his story regularly, building up prestige and reputation.

Extra effort to overcome adverse conditions may cost you more money, may even cut your profits, though that is not at all likely.

Next Week—MORE ABOUT UP GRADE MERCHANDISING.

"Don't you sometimes get lost in the woods when you go out possum hunting and get separated from your brothers?" asked a motorist in the Rumpus Ridge region.

"Nope!" replied young Banty, son of Gap Johnson. "When I don't know whur I'm at and there hain't nobody around to ask I just pick out the way I know leads toward home and turn right around and go the other way; that always fotches me home by the shortest trail."

Those Inky Fingers

Are you one of those unfortunate people who can never write with pen and ink without getting the ink on your fingers? inquires a writer in the Cape Argus.

The industrious writers of past ages, carefully recording for posterity man's accumulating knowledge, stained their fingers with all manner of curious inks. The blue-black stain on our fingers nowadays is due to an aniline dye, made from coaltar, but in the past man has called upon the fish in the sea, on plants and trees, and on insects for the pigments to use in his inks.

The Egyptian scribe of 2000 B.C., writing with laborious care on his papyrus with a reed pen, used an ink prepared from vegetable or animal charcoal mixed with gum and water. These early inks have proved to be remarkably permanent in character, for there are manuscripts in the British Museum which were written about the year 2500 B.C., and are still clearly decipherable today. The Chinese whose writings date from a very early period, used an ink composed of lamp-black and glue, with the curious addition of dried ox-tongue, which they declared gave the ink a violet tint.

The Roman scholar, inscribing his parchment of goatskin, wrote with an ink in which the main coloring constituent was a pigment from the cuttlefish in a sac or gland, and is discharged whenever the fish is attacked, discoloring the surrounding water and providing a perfect cover for its retreat.

India's Military Colors

The history and design of cavalry standards and infantry colors of Indian regiments is an interesting study. The study is not only obscure but also vast and unexplored. Indian colors have met with some extraordinary adventures. They have been forfeited, burnt, buried and sold at public auction. The story of the Old Bengal Army includes four instances of regiments being formally deprived of their colors by way of collective punishment. Many colors have been subjected to the ignominy of sale by public auction, and they have not been confined to Indian regiments. A portion of the regimental colors of the 14th Bengal Native Infantry, which rose at Jhelum and Rawalpindi in 1857, was once sold in London for £17.

D. J. CRAIG, OF CHESTERVILLE, DROPS DEAD

Was Village Constable and Had Just Locked up Prisoner

Wednesday, night, June 30, 1932, about nine o'clock Constable D. J. Craig, after having placed in the cell in the Town Hall at Chesterville, Ont., a local man charged with disturbing the peace, was leaving the building when he collapsed in the entry and passed away within a few minutes before the arrival of Drs. Casselman and Clayton, who had been quickly summoned. The former, who first reached the stricken man pronounced heart failure to be the cause of death.

Considerable excitement had been caused by the arrest of a young man evidently under the influence of liquor, who was being taken to the cells for disturbing the peace on north Main street, when it is alleged he was using insulting language to a woman on her own verandah. The husband arriving home opportunely, promptly collared the youth and took him across the river to hand him to the constable. On nearing the Town Hall the young man broke from custody and footed it up Mill street and across lots to Church street where he was again captured and held until the arrival of Constable Craig, who took him in charge and placed him in the cooler. Craig was emerging from the hall as G. W. Brooks entered and who saw the constable falter, make some remark and then collapse.

A very large crowd gathered as those attending the social on the R.C. school grounds were just on their way home and for some time excitement was high and rumours flying in all directions, until Provincial Officer Rose of Morrisburg, appeared on the scene and took charge. After the collapse of Constable Craig the body was carried into the hall and the sad news broken to Mrs. Craig, to whom the shock was overcoming and who for some time caused considerable anxiety as to her recovery. The remains were taken to Dixon's Undertaking Parlour and the Coroner advised of the circumstances by the Provincial Officer when it was decided that death had been from natural causes.

Mr. Craig was in his sixtieth year and with Mrs. Craig had been residents of Chesterville during the past nine years and for the past four years had been Village Constable, while during the past two years he has been rural mail carrier on Route No. 2 out of this place. The couple formerly lived at Howick, Que., Mr. Craig being survived by one brother in Montreal. It is understood the remains will be sent to Howick for interment.—"Chesterville Record."

Church News.—

The pastor and congregation of Zion United Church feel they have much cause to be very grateful to their many friends who in various ways have helped them in their efforts to rebuild their house of worship. On Friday morning a gathering of nearly 500 people were present to take part in the solemn service of laying the corner stone of the church building. Local and city clergymen were present in goodly numbers, also our representative members of Parliament and others from the higher walks in life. At the tables, the lumber for which was contributed by Mr. Albon McArthur of Huntingdon, luncheon was served on dishes loaned for the occasion by Pringle, Stark & Co. of Huntingdon. The many beautiful flowers used in decorating were also contributions, many of them from those outside the congregation, including those from Mrs. Bosley of Fort Covington. Music on the piano was generously furnished during lunch by Mrs. Herbert Farquhar of Fort Covington to whom we owe many thanks. "Piper" Munroe of Apple Hill, Ont., cheered the hearts of many with his Highland music on the pipes.

When the contents of the baskets, (which looked so prettily on the tables) were counted, it was found that $159.74 had been contributed. The sale of ice cream, fruit, etc., and the price of lumber in tables included brought the whole contribution up to $175.00.

The presence of so many friends, their generous contributions of money, material, flowers, etc., has done much to add cheer and encourage those who are striving to rebuild their house of worship.

It was much regretted that unfavourable weather without, and lack of seating room where addresses might be heard within, made it impossible to have the addresses which had been prepared and expected.

It was also regretted that all could not be served with lunch more quickly, but we hope that when the new church is completed with its intended conveniences that the congregation will be in a position to cater to a hungry people more efficiently and that every one present on this occasion may be with us again.

To every one who in any way has helped the Zion United Church congregation they most gratefully say "Thank You."

School Commissioners Elected.—

An unusual amount of interest was evinced on Monday over the election of School Commissioners to replace those whose terms of office had expired. One of the retiring officers, Mr. Robt. G. Steven has held his office for 15 years during which time he has done a very great deal in the interests of the school. When Mr. Steven succeded the late Donald Fraser as school commissioner for Isle of Skye district we had the little district schools to care for only. When it was decided in the spring of 1928 to erect a large consolidated school, Mr. Steven heartily supported the plan and was appointed one of the building committee for same; in this capacity he gave freely of his time and energy.

Words of thanks and appreciation seem little to give to one who has given so freely and cheerfully of his time and labor in the interests of one of our best institutions—the school.

To his successor, Mr. Wm. D. Fraser, we extend our congratulations, also to Mr. Peter Ferguson, who was re-elected and enters upon his second term of office.

Over the week-end, also Friday and Monday the traffic was heavy, many cars passing through Dundee Port of Customs.

Mrs. Homer Fournier Passes Away.—

After many months of weakness and oftimes pain, which medical skill and the care of friends tried to relieve, death at length claimed her, and Mrs. Homer Fournier passed away on Sunday, July 3rd, about the noon hour, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O'Neil of Huntingdon. She leaves to sadly mourn her loss her husband and three little children, Muriel, aged 6 yrs., Marjorie, aged 3 yrs. and Albert about 18 months of age, her father and mother, also a number of sisters and brothers, to whom we extend our sympathy.

Mrs. Fournier has spent a considerable portion of her lifetime in Dundee; her passing from life while still a young woman is very much regretted by her many friends here.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday morning at St. Agnes R. C. Church and attended by many relatives and friends.

Baseball Played Tuesday.—

On Tuesday afternoon, June 28th, one of the largest crowds ever seen on the Gore diamond, gathered to witness a game of baseball played between the Gore Juniors and the married men. The game proved to be very interesting, the young boys showing a keen tact for baseball, the Gore will have a good team for years to come. At the end of the ninth inning the score was tied, an extra inning was played, which allowed the married men to gain one run. The game ended with a score of 22-23, in favor of the married men. On Saturday afternoon, July 2nd a very keen and interesting game of baseball was played on the Gore diamond between the Internationals and the Gore. Riverfield-Aubrey

About forty friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Maxwell on Monday evening to welcome them to their new home on Norton Creek. The evening was pleasantly passed with music, cards, and dancing after which dainty refreshments were served by the visitors, then all dispersed for their homes after singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "For they are jolly good fellows," and wishing Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell a pleasant residence in our community.

A daring petty robbery was committed on Wednesday at the home of Mr. John Gruer, when Mrs. R. L. Ballantyne lost the contents of her purse. The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Ballantyne, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Orr and Mr. Fulford were dinner guests at the Gruer home. After dinner the gentlemen went across to Riverfield bridge which was being recovered, whilst the ladies retired to the upper part of the house. On returning to the kitchen Mrs. Ballantyns went to get her handkerchief which she had left in her purse on the kitchen couch. To her surprise she found her purse open and the contents gone. It is supposed that a tramp who had been around the Post Office most of the day, had made his way to this home and finding no one in the kitchen and the purse lying on the couch near the door, had taken it and helped himself to the contents as he disappeared from the neighbourhood ere the theft was discovered. In these days of unemployment people should be careful not to leave temptation in the way of chance stragglers.

A game of soft ball was played at Riverfield on Monday evening between Riverfield and Allans Corner, resulting in a win for the visiting team. Howick is playing at Riverfield on Tuesday.

S.S. Picnic.—

Howick United Sunday School held their annual picnic on Monday in Mr. Robt. Templeton's grove. A large number of parents and children gathered and partook of the good things prepared by the ladies. About 4.30 p.m. the crowd dispersed after having spent an enjoyable day.

Mrs. W. Gruer of Montreal is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gruer and other friends.

Howick

Baseball Team Still Winning.—

The local ball team is making a record for itself as a successful aggregation. They have played three games this summer and won each game. The first game was with the Gore and won by a 7-2 score. The second game was at Hemmingford, defeating the team of that place 12 to 9. On July 2 they played Ormstown at Howick diamond and won 35 to 7. A great deal of the success to date is due to the good playing of all members of the team, much credit lies in the effective pitching of Mitchell Ness. The Howick team has been selected, for each game, amongst the following: Bruce, Earle, Mitchell and Doug. Ness, L. Ross, R. Templeton, R. Reddick, F. Beaudin, A. Holmes, Dr. Wilfred Watson, Gordon Stewart and Ewart Orr.

The Farmer's Picnic in Greig's grove, Cairnside, took place as usual on Dominion Day, and quite a large number gathered despite the threatening weather.

Music was provided by the St. Chrysostome orchestra and games had just got well under way, when the rain began in earnest, and the people dispersed. The smaller children had their races over and an interesting game of quoits was well under way. This game is to be finished in Ormstown and results published in next week's Gleaner.

Earl of Egmont Home

Montreal, June 29.—The Earl of Egmont, formerly Frederick Perceval, of Priddis, Alta., arrived here from England and Avon Castle, ancestral seat of the Percevals. Three years ago he went with his father to England when the latter succeded to the title of Earl of Egmont. The Earl was accidentally killed a few months ago when the title fell to his youthful son. The young Earl accompanied by an uncle is returning to his ranch at Priddis, "glad to be home." The inheritance (though in the millions) which the Earl received on the death of his father is not sufficient to keep up the large estate.

German Airmen Found Alive

Wyndham, West Australia, July 4.—Missing since May 17, two German fliers, Captain Hans Bertram and his companion, J. Klausmann, were found here. They had started a flight from Kupan Island to Darwin, in Australia's Northern Territory. The airmen's joy was pitiful to behold when they were found by rescuers aboard a motor launch. A steamer had passed within a mile of them on May 25, but had failed to see their distress signal. On June 22 a native encountered them and provided them with a large fish. Later, word was carried to the mission station. Snails formed their chief portion of diet while awaiting rescue.

Baseball as closing feature to O.H.S.

On Wednesday afternoon a snappy and interesting exhibition of baseball was played between Grades 7 and 8 of the local High School, under the leadership of captains Johnny and Bobby Campbell. The junior grade scrambled through successfully in tieing the score of seven runs to seven against the speedy Grade 8 crew. The game was witnessed by a large crowd of school baseball fans. Johnny Campbell's men earned a lead in the early stages of the afternoon's play but seemed to weaken in the fifth which allowed the Cubs of Bobby Campbell's side to even the count. Johnny Campbell twirled his usual fast ball and had eight strike outs to his credit and allowed four men on bases from bad balls, while Bobby Campbell on the mound of the Cubs of Grade 7 allowed the same amount of men on bases and was credited with an equal number of strike outs. The Grade 8 nine scored two in the first frame, four in the second and one more in the fifth but failed to register in the second and fourth. The Cub crew accounted for one in the first inning, two in the second and fourth and two more in the fifth and none in the second. Principal Miller umpired behind the bat, while John Smith officiated along the base line. Score keepers were Mrs. Lindsay and Miss Getty. After the game Grade 8 were guests of Grade 7 and refreshments were served on the lawn, a happy hour being spent.

The line-up was:

STAR OF THE NORTH

A Romance

OF THE BIG WOODS

CHAPTER 38

Fred Duryea took his check book from his inside pocket. "At what price do you value your horse and carriage, Mr. Farnsworth?" he asked the hotel propreitor.

"Oh, that's all right. I'll trust ye. Your face shows you're honest. Never mind the check 'till ye come back."

"Thanks. Well, I'll be going. By the way, do you know a farmer by name of Smithwicks, down north of here?"

"Why, yes. There is a man comes to town about once a week. Let's see—his first name I think is Jim. Right smart farmer, too. Sells eggs and vegetables here quite often."

"Yes, his first name is Jim," said Fred.

He's got a smart, and good-looking daughter comes to town with him every Saturday, to get the news from the war."

"Oh, yes. Perhaps she has a relative in the service."

"I don't know about that, but she's mighty close-mouthed, and looks kind of sad at times. The young men here are crazy to get acquainted with her but she won't even look at them. And she's got a smart little sister in school here."

Fred was glad to resume his trip. He surmised by Mr. Farnsworth's gossip that Rand had found his Cristie, and then enlisted in the war.

"I wonder who that is drivin' that nice-lookin' rig in here now—Cristie! come here. Some one's drivin' in."

"Well, mother, it's no one to see me. Probably some machine agent wants to sell daddy something."

A young man drove up to the hitching post, jumped out and hitched his horse, then walked up to the front door and rapped. Mrs. Smithwicks opened the door.

"Well, I declare, ef it ain't Fred Duryea. Come right in, Fred, an'—Cristie, come here. Some one to see ye. Take the rocker, Fred," shaking his hand, "Cristie'll be here in a minit."

Cristie paused in the doorway, then as she recognized her visitor she extended her shapely little hand. Fred grasped it in both his hands, and held her fast, feasting his eyes on the clear-cut, though rather pale features, as she looked questioningly into his.

Cristie broke the silence. "Fred—oh, Fred, have you any news of—of Rand?"

"Then you haven't seen him—or have you?"

"No, no Fred. Answer me—have you any news of him?"

"Oh, no, Cristie. I thought by Mr. Farnsworth's gossip that perhaps Rand had found you and then enlisted in the army."

"Mr. Farnsworth? Oh, he's the Union House proprietor. Well, he got you listed nearly right. Rand has not found us, but we found him, and lost him at the same time. Wait—excuse me a moment."

Cristie had saved the "Palladium" that had Rand's name among the enlistments. She ran to her room and brought the paper. Fred read the names. "And he enlisted without knowing where you were?"

"Yes. But I wrote him at Harpers Ferry, telling him how to find us."

"And did he answer, so that you know he got your letter?"

"No! no!" Cristie could control herself no longer. Sobbing as if her heart was breaking, she handed Fred the last report they had: "Sergeant Goodwyn among the missing—killed or taken prisoner.

Fred wanted to take her in his arms and comfort her, but dared not. Softly, he tiptoed out and found Mrs. Smithwicks.

"Cristie is mourning deeply, poor child. Wish I could comfort her somehow," he said.

"I'm afraid my boy is never comin' home, but we try to keep Cristie' mind on her farm work," Mrs. Smithwicks replied sadly. "She's pretty busy in the chicken yard, an' she loves the horses an' calves, but every day she loses some of her ambition, an' then she'll tell the horses how Rand would love them. Sometimes I think we'd orter take Katie out o' school, so's to have more company for her, an' p'raps she'd liven up some. Dinner's 'bout ready. Jim's out on the back lot layin' up stone fence. He'll be in now soon. Put your horse in the stable an' come in to dinner. Jim's terrible disapp'inted—he'd been so set on havin' Rand for partner on the farm, an' now to think we'll prob'ly never know what becomes of him. It's jes been one disapp'intment after another since Rand went up into Canada trappin'."

"He certainly has been decidedly unfortunate; but keep up your courage, Mrs. Smithwicks. If Rand is in a Confederate prison, he is quite likely to be exchanged, for the North has many prisoners also."

Jim was much pleased to see Fred. "Can't ye stay with us awhile, Fred?"

"Nothing would please me more, Jim, if I can be of any help to you. Father doesn't need me at the mill just now—that is how I happened to get away. And of course, I am greatly interested in you people."

"Well, well! Glad to know ye can put up with us awhile. How about your hoss?"

"I can keep him as long as I like, but promised Mr. Farnsworth, at the Union House, that I would return tonight or tomorrow."

"Well, make it termorrer, and then come back, an' I'll show ye the farm."

"Just as you say, Mr. Smithwicks."

The couple then entered the house. Cristie had recovered her usual composure, but was still showing the effects of her great relief. Fred, who was a good conversationalist, soon had the little family much interested in the recital of his trip to France, where he visited his father's childhood home. He then told of the recent changes at the little mill settlement, of the capture of Joe Perry by Rand and Dan Emmet, and of Perry's quick conviction. Cristie's nerves were tense, as she listened. In her excitement, she gripped her chair.

"Oh! oh! And Rand received the reward, you say?" she breathed.

"Yes, Cristie, and he deserved it. Ben Seagraves with with them. Petol told me, very modestly, of their trip in search of Perry."

"Oh, Fred, tell me all about it. We have been so worried at hearing nothing concerning Rand and Bill Preston. Did Bill come back with Rand?"

Fred then related all he had been told by Petol and Seagraves, of their adventures in the far North.

"Oh, daddy, if we had only remained another year in the little settlement, Rand would have found us."

"Yes, yes, Cristie, but duty would have called him to enlist in the army just the same."

"Oh, my brave Rand, will I ever see you again?"

As Fred finished his narrative, Mrs. Smithwicks called them to dinner.

The afternoon was spent by Cristie and Fred talking over their old school days in the little settlement, and viewing Katie's lovely flowers.

Katie came home every Friday night. Sometimes Jim's work prevented him from going after her, so he would hitch up "Pearl," Cristie's favorite horse, and Cristie would drive to the village for Katie. Next day being Friday Fred persuaded Cristie to ride with him to the village, whereupon he saw Mr. Farnsworth and engaged the rig for a week. Needless to say, they brought Katie home that night. Katie, full of life, was fast developing into a fine-looking young lady, and hany many admirers of both sexes among her schoolmates. Roguishly, she rolled her blue eyes up at Fred, "Oh, let me drive that pretty horse."

She gasped as the spirited animal started to run, but held the reins tight, and soon had him under control. Fred was watching, ready to take the reins if necessary.

CHAPTER XXXIX

Fred's appearance in town with the two popular young ladies was the cause of much speculation and gossip among the young folks, the boys in particular. The idea of a perfect stranger capturing the two most-coveted and shyest girls in town was not very flattering to their vanity. There were Calvin Douglass, Alonson Roberts and Bill Scriver and others who could boast of their popularity among the village belles, but each had been turned down by these comely little country girls. Cristie, especially, had been sought by the majority of the "Beau Brummel" class, but with no success. Because of Cristie's sweet disposition, her refusals to accept engagements asked by the young men, were made so graciously they never gave offense.

Fred surprised Jim Smithwicks by his willingness to work, and also by his practical knowledge of agriculture. He insisted on donning overalls and blue cotton frock, and with a broad smile helped digging stone and laying up walls for fence on Jim's boundary lines. Jim was sorely in need of farm help, but doubted the propriety of asking a millionaire's son to work for him. However, Fred suspecting the truth of Jim's feelings, made it easy for him.

"Mr. Smithwicks, I need physical exercise. My father's physician told him I must get out of the city and exercise my muscles, or I would never make a strong man. I though of you at once, but thought that Rand was with you. However, I wanted to see you all, and decided to come, and if you did not need me, I would look up another farmer. Now that Rand is not here, can I work for you?"

Jim pondered this proposition for some minutes. If Rand was lost to them forever, this seemed like a godsend, and in case Rand returned, Fred would have to leave.

"Well, Fred, if ye're willin' to stay—course we're hopin' to see Rand comin' sometime."

"That's all right, Mr. Smithwicks. I hope Rand returns. In case he does, I will consider my job with you ended."

Glad indeed was Jim to get this help so much needed on the farm, and he surmised the possibility, in case of Rand's death, that Fred might fill his place in his family.

This arrangement was also of great benefit to Cristie, who appeared to take a new interest in life. Jim had bought four new Ayrshire cows, and Cristie delighted in running to the pasture at night milking time, to drive them to the barn. Then she insisted on teaching Fred to milk, which was quite a job. The calves and chickens and vegetable garden kept her mind busy. Then after supper she helped her mother clear the table and wash the dishes. Time increased its speed, now that she had good company, and got more and more interested in the progress of the farm, and every Friday night she and Fred would go after Katie.

Katie was the life of the whole family. They all looked forward to her homecoming with fond anticipations. But Katie had a secret, which she could keep all right. I shall have to let you in on it. There was a young prosperous farmer, from up near Chateaugay Lake, calling at her boarding house about once a week, and long rides they enjoyed after school closed at 4 p.m. I am not at liberty to divulge his name—but they were fast becoming good pals.

The months rolled by, with no word or news from Rand, and they were getting resigned to his fate, whatever that might be. The Union Army was gaining, and the older citizens were predicting a final victory for the North in the near future.

Fred was beginning to have high hopes that, in case Rand never returned, he could win the love of the "very best little girl in the world," and thus it happened that being in each other's company daily, it was quite natural that Cristie gradually came to a more intimate friendship, akin to love, with the genial, intelligent, handsome Fred, but any attempt on Fred's part to demonstrate his affections was frustrated by a tactful shifting of the subject and a slight aloofness on the part of Cristie.

Cristie realized, as time went on, that Fred would soon come out with a declaration of his love, but she wishes to defer that crucial moment as long as possible, for as yet she knew not how to answer him. Torn between conflicting emotions over the apparent loss of Rand, and not wishing to hurt Fred's feelings, because he was a good, dear friend, faithful and true, Cristie needed more time to erase the bitter past, and decide upon her future.

Under the careful management of Jim, and the apparent interest and helpful labor of Fred, the farm was fast developing into a paying institution. Jim did not hesitate to show his pleasure of the attachment and evident interest that Fred took in all the little details of the farm work, and not the least of his pleasure was the noticeable fact of Fred's devotion to Cristie. Now that they had practically given up Rand for dead, Jim favored the growing intimacy between his daughter and the amiable Fred.

A few weeks later, Fred determined to ask Cristie for her hand. It would be his second appeal, and she had given him some encouragement, he thought by her actions. At any rate, he must find out whether he had any chance of winning her. As they started on their Friday afternoon trip for Katie, he suddenly faced her.

"Cristie—you know how I love you. Can you not marry me? I can not live without you. Tell me you will," he pleaded, "tell me that I have a chance."

"Oh, Fred, I do love you a little as a friend or brother, but not enough to be your wife. You have been a great pal to me in my bereavement, but give me more time to think—but I hold out no hopes for you. As you already know, there is only one I can ever love enough to marry, and God has seen fit to deprive me of that sacred union with my beloved Rand. You would not be happy with one who loves another better than you. Perhaps I am unkind to tell you this so bluntly, but is it not better to know the truth than to suffer future deception on the part of an unloving wife?"

"Oh, Cristie, do you mean, then that you would marry me, under those conditions?"

"No, no, Fred I could not. It would be sacrilege. We would be condemned to unhappiness for life. I am trying hard to love you, because I think you deserve it, but while the memory of Rand survives in my brain, I could not love you enough to marry you, my dear friend."

Fred groaned aloud. "I acknowledge the truth of your words, and accept your refusal to be my wife, but I love you all the more for it."

It was an unhappy ride for Fred, but he manfully accepted his fate and tried unsuccessfully, to be cheerful.

From that day Fred was a changed man. He performed his usual labors in a dull, morbid fashion, going thru the regular routine from morning until night soberly. Cristie could not help but notice his changed attitude. At first, she pitied him, but later she resented his actions, as she compared her own loss to his. Rand had been her accepted and betrothed lover, to be married when he returned. Thru an unknown quirk of fate and misfortune, he had been snatched ruthlessly from her, perhaps forever, while she had never cared for Fred, except as a friend, and so she had informed him many times.

But Cristie's nature would not allow her to be unfriendly or resentful for any length of time. She really did not wish to hurt Fred's pride. They had been friends too long for that. He kept away from the house as much as work could keep him, for several days, but at last Cristie decided to bring him out of his lethargy. She purposely confronted him out in her vegetable garden.

"Oh, Fred, see what nice large tomatoes I have. They'll soon be ripe. Don't you like them?"

"Why, er—yes, I guess I do. Never had them only in tin cans, you know."

"Just come and look at them. They are beginning to turn red already."

Fred walked slowly toward her, with shifty eyes.

"Oh, come, wake up, Fred. Don't be so blue."

"Fred, I'm ashamed of you. Brace up, don't be a baby. Think what I have lost." Cristie's little mouth quivered. It took all of her self-command to keep the tears back, while she reprimanded Fred. She would not for the world give Fred a chance to think she was a baby, after calling him down. Quickly she turned and went to the house, and there again in her room gave vent to her choked up feelings in a flood of tears.

Fred accepted his chastisement in good grace, and owned up to himself that he deserved it more and more. The next day being Friday, he became more like his old self, and as usual when 3 p.m. arrived, he had Cristie's favorite horse hitched up to go after Katie. Cristie noticed that her scolding had had the desired effect, for Fred was smiling and sociable.

Arriving at the village, Cristie's first act was to get the mail. She would not—she could not—give up hope of hearing, or seeing, something through the columns of the Palladium concerning the disappearance of Rand. A big surprise was in store for her, at last. With the paper, the postmaster handed her a letter. Nervously, she looked first at the postmark. It was "Federal Hospital, Washington, D.C."

"Oh! Oh!" was all that she could gasp.

* * *

While Cristie reads her letter from the Federal Hospital at Washington, let us return to the fugitives from Andersonville Prison and trace their wanderings in the South.

The blood-curling baying of the hounds lent wings to the fleeing men, already nearly exhausted from lack of food and steady marching. They passed through swampy forests of low underbrush and tangled vines, stumbling blindly. Rand and Ed were in the lead. George Arnold, Alex. Lancto and Samuel Joy followed close, while John Martin and John Trumble lagged far behind. Rand stopped for an instant.

They listened. "Yes," said, "but I guess they've caught up to Martin and Trumble. The dogs must be in leash."

"Yes, all but one" said Rand.

Just then the hounds broke out afresh, but were coming more slowly now. "On! on! We must beat them. I'll never go back to that dungeon alive," said Ed Felton.

"Nor I," answered Rand.

In fact, the prison hounds, with the guards, had caught up to Martin and Trumble, and, leaving one of the guards to watch them, the others followed the old leader hound on the trail of the "Yanks."

Arnold, Lancto, and Samuel Jow were fast becoming exhausted, but pushed doggedly on, hoping against fate, they knew not what, to save them. For miles, they dragged themselves through marshes and pine forests, alternately. The hounds under leash were hard to control in the thick brush, which fact gave the boys a little advantage over the pursuers, yet Rand could see that they were gradually being overtaken. He wondered if he could hold out until night, and if the darkness would be of any advantage to them in making their escape.

Evidently, Felton was thinking the same, as he panted, "Rand, d'ye think they'll keep up the chase after dark?"

"Well, then if we don't starve we'll have a slim chance to beat them," said Ed.

It was quite late in the afternoon when Rand saw a glimmer of water ahead. "It must be the James River," he thought. Still it seemed to keep far in advance of them, as they eagerly forged ahead. It seemed as though they traveled another mile, when suddenly they emerged from the pine forest and found themselves on the bank of a wide river.

George Arnold dropped exhausted. "Boys, I can go no further. Leave me here, but if any of you get home, tell my folks I died in the service of the Union."

Just then the hounds broke out afresh and much closer. They had caught up with Lancto and Joy, and had them bound. Hounds and guards now came in sight, about 200 feet back, and a volley of musketry poured deadly buckshot at the men. Arnold had got onto his feet as the guards came in view, and the poor fellow sank back to earth with a buckshot through his heart.

Rand and Ed jumped down the river bank, but as he jumped Rand felt a stinging red hot pellet pass through the biceps of his right arm, from which the warm blood flowed freely. He looked at Ed, wondering if he, too, had been hit. Dusk was falling fast, and the river bank hid them from view of the pursuers. The river was about a mile wide, but they struck boldly for the opposite shore. The water was quite warm, and both Rand and Ed had been expert swimmers in the cold waters of the North. Although only a flesh wound, Rand's injurp pained him severely, and their clothes, torn almost to shreds, impeded their progress.

As the pursuers came upon the body of Arnold, the fresh blood confused the hounds, and in spite of all persuasive efforts they could not be forced into the river. A volley of buckshot was directed toward the swimmers, which spattered water all around them. The stream was sluggish; scarcely any current was visible.

"I'm afraid I can't make it, Rand, but don't you wait a minute fer me." Ed was puffing and struggling to keep his head above water.

Rand was a regular duck in the water and, throwing up his hands, he thought he would measure the depth. What was his surprise to feel his feet strike solid bottom, with water only about four feet deep. They had got about midway across.

"Don't give up, Ed." Rand came close to his friend, and grasped his shoulder. "Ed, there's only four feet of water here. Get on your feet, steady now, and rest awhile."

"God bless ye, Rand, I was about to go under. You have saved my life."

"Man, you're shot!" exclaimed Felton.

"Only a slight flesh wound," said Rand, but he winced when Ed fumbled at his ragged sleeve. A small artery had been cut by the leaden pellet and Rand, already weakened by hunger and exposure and three days of forced tramping through underbrush and swamps, was about ready to collapse. For a moment each supported the other, and then both came to a sudden realization that a misstep meant drowning in mid-river, and the thought that they had just escaped from recapture, only to face death by drowning, was disconcerting, to say the least.

As usual, Rand took the initiative. "Follow me and be careful. We'll try to walk. This southern country is flat. If water gets deeper, we'll have to swim."

With his left hand Rand grasped Felton's right and steadying each other, they slowly approached the now almost invisible, opposite shore. On the bank they had just left, a fire had been kindled, which threw rays of light far out toward the struggling men. Gradually, the water became more shallow, and progress was less difficult. Rand could feel his strength giving way, while Ed's courage revived, as they neared the shore.

Just as they reached the bank, a heavy, dark body lunged from a half sunken tree, and spashed into the water about twenty feet below them.

"Alligators!" ejaculated Ed. "Quick, Rand, get up the bank."

They were not a second too soon. A long-jawed saw-toothed mouth snapped together on the trailing rags dangling from Rand's feet, but he jerked himself free, leaving the remnants in the alligator's jaws.

Ed was now the stronger of the two men. He seized Rand's left arm, and half dragged him up the bank, where both dropped exhausted, as the alligator disappeared in the turbid waters. Crawling a short distance under scrub pine and oak they found dry ground, covered with leaves and pine needles. They could go nor further. Darkness had come, and the two men huddled together and, regardless of impending danger nature soon asserted itself, and they slept the sleep of near death.

Although the days were hot, the nights were quite cold. Felton awakened first, when the sun was high, filtering its life-giving rays through the little openings between the branches of pine and oak. Birds were singing overhead and flowering dogwood adorned the thickets. Half-starved, he looked for something, he knew not what, anything that he could chew. Small shrubbery was in bloom, so he judged the time must be March. He knew spring was many weeks earlier in the south than in the north.

He looked at Rand and found him breathing heavily, a hectic flush on his cheeks, and his eyes swollen. Ed rolled up Rand's right sleeve and felt his pulse. The sleeve was tight about his wounded arm, which was badly swollen. His hands were tightly clasped together.

"Fever! Malaria! God! I must save him some way."

From an old dead tree trunk, he kicked a large flat fungus, "toad stool," and with a sharp stick he scratched. "Don't leave here, I will be back soon. Gone for help, Ed."

Horse-Racing Shown to be Very Ancient Sport

Horse-racing was the sport of kinds at least 5,000 years ago. Recently there have been discovered in Mesopotamia some Hittite inscriptions dating from more than 1,000 years B.C., which contain complete instructions for the training of candidates for big races. Professor Hronzy of the University of Prague has interpreted the inscriptions, and it is astonishing to find how methodical were the trainers of those far-off days. The animals were first got into condition by a diet which aimed at removing all surplus flesh, and baths are also recommended in the inscription. Speed and stamina were developed first by trotting and then by gallops over longer distances. Training as a rule occupied about six months. Other discoveries show that horse-racing as a sport can be taken back to at least 3,000 B.C.

A Limited Interest

"When you found you hadn't your fare, did the conductor make you get off and walk?" asked the inquisitive man.

"Only get off," was the sad reply. "He didn't seem to care whether I walked or sat down."

This is what Mrs. Albert Bolton, of Toronto, writes: "Our little girl, Margaret Jean, was nursed for the first few months, but this did not satisfy her. I had heard about Eagle Brand and decided to try it. She took to it right away and there has been no trouble since. Her flesh is firm; lovely, straight limbs, good bone development, and she is so contented. Last September she won third prize at the Canadian National Exhibition, against 102 entrants.

Associate Helpers' Meeting.—

Tuesday afternoon the Associate Helpers of the United Church W.M.S. held their annual meeting at the home of Mrs. E. C. Boyce. The devotional exercises were in charge of the president, who gave a very helpful talk on "The tasks of every day life." Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Reese contributed vocal solos. The principal speaker for the day was Mrs. Rice of Montreal, who is the Supply Secretary of the Montreal Presbyterial. Her address was most helpful, bringing new phases of the work before the women present. The day was ideal and the attendance was large. Afternoon tea was served at the close of the meeting and a social hour enjoyed by all.

Thursday afternoon the Woman's Association was entertained by Mrs. Henry Wilson at her home. Arrangements were made for the social to be held Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. Wm. Dawson. Mrs. McIntosh gave a splendid recitation and Mrs. George Boyce a helpful reading, both being much enjoyed. A delicious supper was served on the lawn to fifty members and visitors.

TRIPPERS TO SORRENTO

Older than Rome, Sorrento, in Italy, goes back to the day of Greek mythology. It was a Phoenician colony older than Tyre. Its name came from the famous sirens, and its power to lure men, and women, too, is as great today. Here Tasso was born, and here lived Goethe, Gorki, Marion Crawford and many others. Isben stayed at a little inn on the Corso Umberto and finished his "Peer Gynt," and wrote "Ghosts" here. Wagner, Byron, Scott, Cooper, Dumas, Verdi, Renan, Longfellow, Bulwer-Lytton, Heyse, Wilde, and Nietzsche all have made this trip, so lovely is the little town of the sirens by the sea.

Chateauguay Basin

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, of Notre Dame de Grace, Montreal, have taken up residence in our town for the months of July and August.

Mr. Ernest Mutton, of St. Anne de Bellevue, Que., was a week-end guest with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reid, at the Riverview Orchards.

Incidentally, we are very sorry indeed to report at this time of a very unfortunate accident that occurred to Mr. Peter Reid, during his recent visit in to the city of Montreal. We sincerely hope for him, a most complete and speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Noonan, of Montreal, have taken up residence in Chateauguay Basin, for the summer months.

The official appointment of Mrs. Mary Walcot, to the situation of Postmistress for our town has met with entire approval of the whole community, and we wish for Mrs. Walcot, every success in her new field of endeavour.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Ghent, of 788 Bloomfield Ave., Outremont, are with us again this summer and have now opened their summer residence.

Miss E. Agnes Prittie, B.A., physical instructor at the Midland Ontario High School, has returned to us again and is spending her annual summer vacation at the home of her parents, the Rev. Wm. T. Prittie, B.A., and Mrs. Prittie, at the Manse.

Thursday afternoon was the occasion of a successful strawberry social given on the grounds of Mrs. Jarvis Arnold the Heights, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of St. George's Anglican Church.

Dominion Day was celebrated by all in Chateauguay in true patriotic fashion ,and as far as we are able to learn the day was not marred by a single accident. In the evening there was a White Ball staged at the Chateauguay Boating Club by the members and their friends which was really a very smart affair. Hal Boyes and his wonderful orchestra from the city were in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Jones of the city of Outremont, are spending the buoyant days of summer in Chateauguay. As their neighbours they have Mrs. Cheston and her daughters.

July has certainly brought forth the fragrance and bloom of the time lauded roses as one may notice as they stroll down the avenues and lanes of this lovely Chateauguay spot. We cannot help but feel, that summer passes all too soon and these things, like all others, should be thoroughly enjoyed as they are not going to last for ever.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Boyd, of Montreal, were recent guests with Mrs. Boyd's mother, Mrs. William Wright.

The tragic story of the disaster at Vickers Plant was re-echoed here last week, with the funeral of the late James Dunlop, formerly a young man among Chateauguay folk. Before the arrival of the body for burial at St. Andrews' United Church cemetery, there was a largely attended service held in the Trinty United Church, of Maissoneuve, Montreal, and was conducted by the Rev. A. C. Lloyd, B.A. The cortege then proceeded to Chateauguay where Rev. W. T. Prittie, B.A., of St. Andrews' United Church assisted at the short service held at the grave.

Miss Vera Hardisty has returned to town after a short visit spent in St. Lambert, Que.

The Brotherhood of the St. Franciscan Order have recently opened their new Monasterial Residence, on the Caughnawaga Road. The beautiful new St. Mary's Catholic Church was opened some time ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy of Mount Royal, are back again to be the summer residents.

Since the re-opening of the Chateauguay Boating Club some time ago Mr. A. C. Brazier, the newly appointed Commodore of the Club, has been busy getting the various classes of paddlers, and exponents of the war canoe in shape for the forthcoming C. C. A. regattas.

The Chateauguay Heights Bowling Club Association have been working very carefully and diligently for their meeting of the Ormstown Club, but their work was not rewarded with a very great measure of success as the local rinks met defeat at the hands of the visitors. We hope that better luck will attend the efforts in this direction next time.

Old and New Commingle on Streets of Madeira

Madeira has been aptly termed "The Enchanted Isle," and still deserves its poetic title in spite of a recent land slide which occasioned considerable loss of life and property. Madeira is a land of sun and flowers and blue skies which has become highly popular as a holiday resort with those of means and leisure. What struck me most about it (writes a correspondent), was the extraordinary survival of customs at least five or six centuries old alongside modern methods and improvements. Up and down the narrow, twisting streets of cobble, patient pairs of bullocks still groan as they strain at sleds laden with passengers or merchandise, and driven by men or boys in picturesque native costume, while the most modern motor car, and motor busses, carrying natives between Funchal and the villages of the hinterland, whiz past them at a quite incredible pace.

Annual Presbyterian Picnic.—

The annual picnic of the Presbyterian congregation was as usual, held in the beautiful grove of Mr. Thomas Ross on Dominion Day. Scattered showers during the forenoon caused many anxious glances skyward, but clearing around 11 o'clock, tables were set for dinner and upwards of three hundred were served before heavy showers finally put an end to the picnic. Mr. Andrew Glen gave several stirring selections on the bagpipes which constituted the only music, as the sports and other entertainment provided for the afternoon had to be cancelled. The financial part was very gratifying, considering the inclement weather, total receipts amounting to $128.75. The Ladies' Aid Society had their usual booth of useful and fancy articles, but sales were few, as the ladies in charge were obliged to repack their goods before the picnickers had a chance to patronize the booth.

Junior Mission Band.—

The July meeting of the Junior Willing Workers was held in the church parlour at 1.30 on Sunday, with a very large attendance, forty in all. The Secretary, Christina Ross, in her minutes, gave a splendid report of the last regular meeting. The lesson told was on Japan.

Senior Mission Band.—

The Senior Willing Workers held meeting on Saturday night at the home of Mrs. Wells, their leader. The lesson also happened to be about Japan, and an intimate touch was given the work by the reading of a letter written by Mrs. W. G. Brown, of Saskatoon, to her family on the occasion of her recent visit to Japan and telling in detail of places and persons only vaguely understood by reading the study book.

Owing to the absence of Rev. P. McK. Sampson on Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. S. Reid conducted service in the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Selby Dunlop of Montreal has been a recent guest of Miss Stott and Miss L. Grant.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Muir and son, Kenneth of Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. Delo and son Peter of Baltimore, Md., have been recent guests at Welleslea Farm.

Mrs. Harold McCaffrey and son Royce, spent the week-end with friends in Hemmingford.

Mr. Arthur Hampson, who has been attending Shawville High School for the term just ended, is spending the summer at his home.

Dominion Day guests at the Rowat home included Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Rowat and family, Jack, Lloyd, Donald and Baby June, of Winchester, Ont., Misses Margaret and Ina Rowat of St. Lambert, and Mr. J. Poser Rowat and Miss Nancy Lytle of Montreal.

Misses Thelma McWilliams and Georgina Munro of Montreal arrived on Saturday to spend their vacation with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Baird and other friends.

Irritations as Pearls

Life on earth would not be worth much if every source of irritation were removed. Yet most of us rebel against the things that irritate us and count as heavy loss what ought to be rich gain. We are told that the oyster is wiser; that when an irritating object, like a bit of sand, gets under the "mantle" of his shell, he simply covers it with the most precious part of his being and makes of it a pearl. The irritation that it was causing is stopped by encrusting it with the pearly formation. A true pearl is therefore simply a victory over irritation. Every irritation that gets into our lives today is an opportunity for pearl culture. The more irritations the Devil flings at us, the more pearls we may have. We need only to welcome them and cover them completely with love, that most precious part of us, and the irritation will be smothered out as the pearl comes into being. What a store of pearls we may have, if we will!

Matrimonial

Yelland-Jack

The marriage of Janet Ruth, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. L. Jack, of Woodlands, to James Yelland, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Yelland, of Montreal, took place on Saturday, June 25th, at Trinity Memorial Church, Notre Dame de Grace, Ven. Archdeacon Almond officiating. The church was decorated with palms, roses and pink and white peonies. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a French model gown of white satin with train, a lace cap and veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and orange blossoms. Mrs. A. Parker Baile, sister of the bride and matron of honour wore yellow embroidered organdie with mauve trimmings and carried a bouquet of mauve sweet peas. Her small hat was of organdie in a matching tone. Miss Barbara Jack and Miss Marjorie Pennell, bridesmaids, wore mauve embroidered dresses with large hats to match and carried nosegays of yellow roses. Mrs. Jack, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black lace and georgette, with a black hat and carried American Beauty roses. Little Miss Shirley Jackson and Miss Eleanor Evans were flower girls. The best man was Mr. E. A. V. Hale, while the ushers were Mr. Geo. Wright, Mr. Parker Baile, Mr. C. Jackson and Mr. Geo. Ramsey. The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Woodlands, the decorations being peonies, yellow roses and mauve sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Yelland left that night for a trip to Quebec, St. John N.B., and Portland, Maine. For travelling the bride wore a gray suit trimmed with squirrel, with hat, shoes, gloves, and purse to match. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Yelland will reside in Woodlands.

Legault-Picard

The wedding was solemnized at St. Joseph's Church, Huntingdon, on Monday, July 4th, of Mariange Colombe, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Picard, of Huntingdon, to Mr. J. Ferdinand Emile Legault, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Legault, of New Erin. Rev. J. A. Derome officiated.

The bride who was given away by her father wore a gown of marocain blue crepe georgette with hat and shoes of the same shade. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and fern. Her going away costume was of navy blue poiret twill with hat, shoes and purse to match.

Following a wedding breakfast served at the Huntingdon Chateau, Mr. and Mrs. Legault left for a honeymoon trip to Quebec and Gaspé.
