Adjusting to the changing times

Despite a majority of women in most dance classes, hip hop is attracting many men to the classroom according to Sherbrooke dance instructor Joelle Blanchard. The director of L'Arabesque Ecole de Danse says she welcomes hip hop dance with open arms because it attracts a wider audience.

Hip hop dance latest fad to take centre stage

By Tricia Davidson
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Mixing old and new, adapting to the fads of the day and playing on the popularity of everything from Top 40 hits to 1920 classics, dance has gone through a lot in recent years, but as local instructors admit, dance is something that will never go out of style.

Joelle Blanchard, director of L'Arabesque Ecole de Danse in Sherbrooke, says that from ballet to jazz, folk to salsa, jazz to tap and ballroom to swing, she's seen it all.

Growing up on the road, Blanchard studied dance in Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia, New York and Europe — basically where ever her parents her transferred to because of their work.

In 1986 she accepted a position as instructor at L'Arabesque Ecole de Danse, purchasing it three years later and turning it into a non-profit institution the following year.

Currently, Blanchard enjoys teaching classes in addition to running the school. She says despite all the recent dance trends, it always comes down to the basics.

"Ballet and jazz dance are two forms of dance, but you can mix it up from there," she admits. "Dance is a beautiful form of expression. We can express ourselves and our emotions and it is something that you can always learn and improve on."

According to Blanchard, hip hop dance is now the rage among most younger age groups.

"Hip hop is using elements from jazz dance that I saw 20 years ago," she admits. "Whatever the kids want to call it, whether it is hip hop or jazz, it is good because they are out there practicing it. I don't mind what they want to call it, so long as they are doing it and enjoying themselves."

Blanchard says that the reason behind many of the changes in dance trends is traced back to popular Hollywood movies, including Save the Last Dance, starring Julia Stiles.

"What people see in the movies are associated with hip hop because that is the music that plays with it," she says.

Pearls of wisdom about oysters

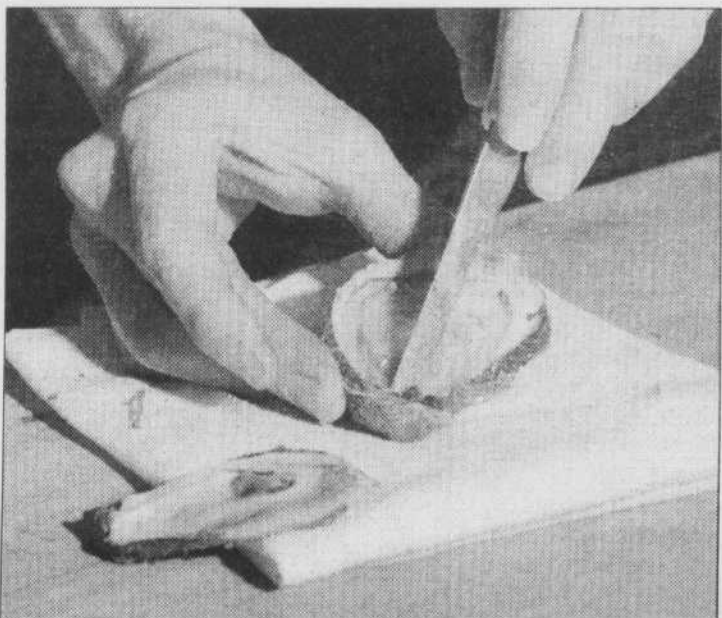

SOUTHAM PHOTOS

Step 1: Inset blade at narrow end of oyster and twist to open shell.

Step 2: Run blade along inside of top shell to separate it from the flesh. Discard top shell.

Step 3: Clean debris from the oyster.

By Julian Armstrong
SOUTHAM NEWS

If you're hesitant about buying oysters to open at home, you might be seriously intimidated by John Bil, Canada's champion oyster-shucker for the past two years. His personal best: 18 opened in one minute 29 seconds, or about five seconds each.

Bil, who was in Montreal from Prince Edward Island on his way to an oyster-shucking competition in Toronto, says we can easily learn how to open this delectable shellfish if we practice. "It's the first 20,000 that are the hardest," said the quiet-spoken oyster man, knifing into oyster after oyster in the kitchen of Le Globe Restaurant.

"Get good at it first. Fast is going to come," he advised, then took us through the oyster-opening system he has perfected.

First, he stuck his blade into the narrow end of the oyster, at the hinge, and gave it a quick push and twist, popping the two edges of shell apart. The oyster flesh still connects the two shells, so next Bil ran the blade along the inside of the top shell, separating it from the flesh, which allowed him to discard the top shell. Working at lightning speed, Bil then used his blade to flick away tiny bits of grit from the oyster, then poked the blade under it to loosen the delicacy from the bottom shell. Onto the plate of crushed ice and ready for dinner went the oysters on the half-shell, accompanied by Bil's tip: "Eat from the wide end and preferably au naturel."

If you add lemon juice or cocktail sauce, "you miss the nuance of flavour," he warned. Adding lemon, he said, is "a cult" practice. Lemons don't come from the cold Atlantic waters, home of what to him are the best oysters in the world, the Malpeques. Lemon adds "a tropical flavour," Bil said.

And cocktail sauce is even worse to this connoisseur of oysters, which he calls "a sort of mythical food." The flavoured tomato sauce "makes everything taste the same. There's a comfort level in that. Some people are uncomfortable with oysters and they'll find the sauce a familiar flavour."

If you must accent a fresh oyster, the best, in his opinion, is a mixture of white wine or apple cider vinegar and chopped shallots.

Bil runs an oyster-packing plant in Ten Mile House, P.E.I., and also cultivates the shellfish. Oysters are like grapes, he said. Both variety and climate are controlling factors.

"A Chardonnay grape in Chardonnay (in France) and in Ontario are different. Oysters from P.E.I. and New Brunswick are different from oysters from Long Island and the Gulf of Mexico." And not as good, he inferred.

Bil approves of the way chefs and restaurants now like to serve this shellfish year round, and not just in the months with the letter R in them, which he calls "the old story" of when oysters were at their best.

He recommends Atlantic oysters from May 1 to Feb. 14, skipping March and April. Malpeques from Canada are currently a fashion in New York restaurants; supplies often run short of U.S. demand, he said.

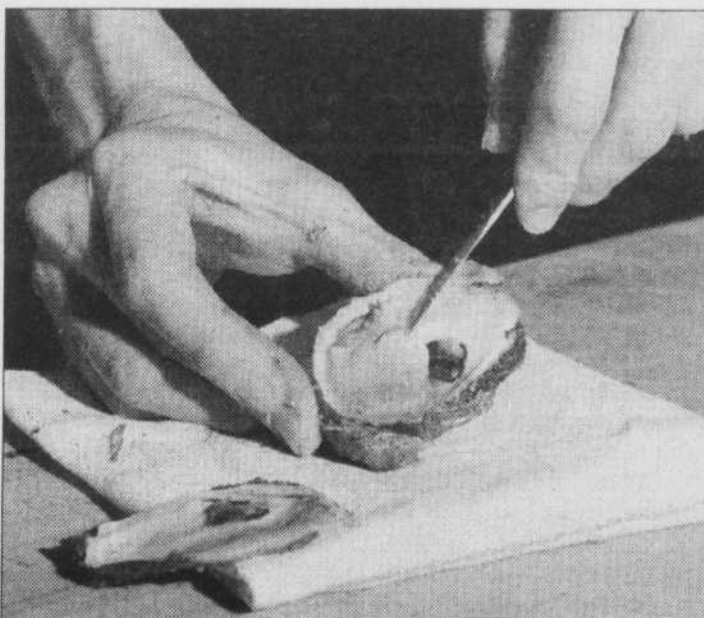

U.S. oysters from the Virginia coast tend to taste "muddy, like wine that's corked. They only take two years to grow while ours take five years."

He cut open the oysters with bare hands. Was this a show for our camera, or would he normally wear a protective glove? I asked. "Only hacks use gloves," said Bil, whose oyster expertise brought him sixth place in last September's world oyster-shucking contest in Ireland.

What about those canned, shelled oysters? Read the label, Bil suggested. These shellfish might be packed in Canada but they're fished off Korea, he said.

West Coast oysters are smaller, "about the size of a loony," and good, he said. Globe chef David McMillan said, "They're a good frying oyster, more dense than ours."

Keep it simple when cooking oysters, the two agreed. McMillan likes to add oysters to a corn chowder that contains potatoes, mushrooms and little pieces of salt pork. "Add the oysters at the last minute and cook them just until they ruffle up," the chef said.

Step 4: Cut oyster loose from the bottom shell.

Townships artist sows the seeds of culture

Viewpoint Arts Centre opens in St-Isidore-de-Clifton

By Jake Brennan
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

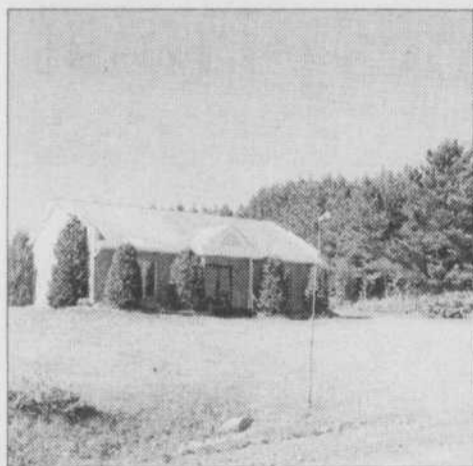

I go around sowing seeds of culture. Some sprout, some don't," says painter and sculptor Norman Gladu.

It's an apt metaphor for someone trying to see his traditionally urbane discipline — the fine arts — blossom in his rural community of St-Isidore-de-Clifton, near Sawyerville.

On Jan. 27, Gladu's latest cultural seed, the Viewpoint Art Centre, opened in front of a packed house of politicians, representatives from the Quebec Cultural Centre and the general public.

A longtime champion of the visual arts, Gladu proposed to the town of St. Isidore his idea to convert their unused town hall, beautifully situated on a hill-top, into an arts centre.

"They went for it," he beamed, adding that it gives St. Isidore more visibility, and exposes rural people to the arts.

Viewpoint has two main functions, the first of which is to offer courses in painting, drawing, art history and general art discussions. Course have already kicked off, running every Thursday night since November, and is instructed by Gladu, one of many who donate their time at the centre. The 12 students enrolled in the course cover the spectrum of artistic ability, which reminds Gladu of "one of those old one-room country schools, where you've got the whole range of students — especially since it's in the same rural setting."

Viewpoint's second function is to serve as an exhibition space for artists to hold solo or group shows.

"It's a place to show art to a community — to show them what art is all about," said Gladu. "Just because you spend all day in the fields doesn't mean you don't like the arts. Everybody needs culture in their lives. It's a pretty special mandate we have."

The artists who exhibit at Viewpoint also gain the advantage of not having to deal with traditional, more commercial galleries. Gladu contends that "the art scene is shifting over to art centres that give artists more control than regular galleries."

According to Gladu, several galleries in Sherbrooke, including Galerie Horace, also claim much less commission than the whopping 40 or 50 per cent taken by many commercial galleries. Such high rates drive prices up and, consequently, sales down.

One artist benefiting from this new trend in the commercial art scene is Monique Martin, a realist oil painter from Saskatoon whom Gladu described as "a dynamo of energy." Martin took part in a group show at the very selective Mendel Art Gallery in Saskatoon last year, and is represented by the Brigitte Desroches Gallery in Montreal. The widelyrepresent-ed painter "has got all her bases covered," quipped Gladu.

But Martin is also a branch of another of Gladu's thriving sprouts, the Artist in Residence Program in Coaticook. Created five years ago when Coaticook agreed to financially fertilize Gladu's seed idea, the program covers the living expenses of a selected artist for a period of anywhere from two months to one year. A large, formerly empty space above the library serves as apartment and studio, and the artist has only to cover his or her food costs.

Martin was last year's artist in residence, and will be baring the fruits of her stay at an upcoming exhibition at Viewpoint entitled Naked Soul; Working Mother. The dozen-or-so canvases on display examine the balancing act of home and work life faced by working mothers, including the artist herself. The exhibit will be unveiled Friday, Feb. 22 at 7 p.m.

"When we have an opening, it's not all serious. It's like a big family reunion," said Gladu, who has been a professional artist for more than 20 years.

Exhibiting in galleries in Montreal, Toronto, Los Angeles, New York, and Boston, Gladu joked "my stuff gets around a lot, but I stay here — it's not fair!"

But Gladu's devotion to his familial community is obvious, and he said it was his love of people that spawned the idea for Viewpoint.

"I just like people to gather and exchange," he explained. "I wanted to provide the kind of place I would want to go."

VIEWPOINT IS LOCATED OFF ROUTE 253 BETWEEN SAWYERVILLE AND ST. MALO. FOR DIRECTIONS OR MORE INFORMATION ON PROGRAMS, CONTACT THE ST. ISIDORE TOWN HALL AT 819-658-3637 OR NORMAN GLADU AT 819-889-1265.

Sounds to soothe the savage beast

82 years and counting for Lennoxville fiddler

By David Anderson

After 82 years of playing fiddle, Lennoxville's Edward Cousteau continued to entertain old-time music lovers last Saturday at the Townships Bluegrass and Old-Tyme Music Society's monthly jam session, held at the Waterloo Legion Branch #77.

As the oldest fiddle-playing member of the society, Cousteau was given a free lifetime membership to the music society.

"They're a good bunch of people," said Cousteau, joking that he was given the free membership because they knew he would not be around for long.

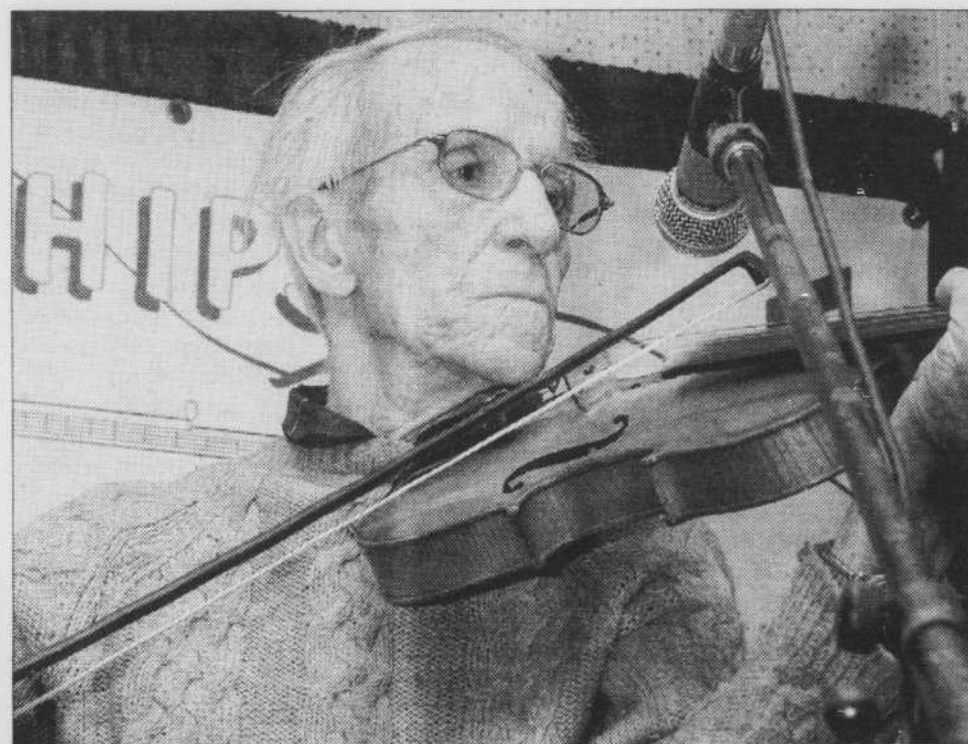

Cousteau worked for 39 years at the old Union Screen Plate Company in Lennoxville before retiring. Growing up in the "Sticks" without a radio, he said his love of music originated from listening to records with his parents.

"I was born and brought up in the Sticks — we didn't even have a radio, so we would listen to phonograph records while having house parties," Cousteau admitted.

"Once I showed an interest in music, my father went to the general store in Robertsonville and bought me a $5 fiddle. I have been playing ever since.

Cousteau added that he tries, whenever possible, to make regular trips to Waterloo, but also plays in Lennoxville, mostly as a soloist, but sometimes with a group.

SSO welcomes pianist

By Jake Brennan
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Classical music fans are in for a treat as the Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of its artistic director and conductor Stéphane Laforest, accompanies world famous pianist André Laplante for a special performance, entitled Piano Romantique.

A native of Rimouski, Laplante is known as a virtuoso of romantic music. He has distinguished himself in the past decade by winning prizes at the Geneva and Sydney International Piano Competitions, as well as earning a silver medal at the International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

Critics who have attended some of his concerts in Europe, North America, the Far East and Australia have compared Laplante to the likes of Vladimir Ashkenazy, Vladimir Horowitz and Rudolph Serkin, placing him in an elite circle of daring pianists who thrive on taking risks with the music.

Laplante himself has said that his freedom of expression has developed only in the last few years, adding that he now feels better equipped to say what he wants to say through his music.

His polish and bravura have earned him two recent Opus Awards for live performances: Best Concert in Montréal, and Best Concert in Québec.

Laplante is also an award-winning recording artist, with releases on the Analakta, CBC and Melodia labels of works by Liszt, Brahms and Tchaikovsky.

He now resides in Toronto, where he teaches four students at the Royal Conservatory of Music. Increasing his list of accolades was the Conservatory's teacher of the year award in 2000.

The Piano Romantique concert program with the Sherbrooke Symphony will include demanding classics like Franz Liszt's Concerto no. 1 in B-flat major and Sergei Rachmaninoff's Symphony no. 2 in E minor, opus 27.

Visitors who are looking to enrich their appreciation of the evening's entertainment with some historical context may also attend a free lecture given by Jean Boivin, professor of music history at the Université de Sherbrooke's School of Music. The talk will begin at 7:30 p.m. on the garden side of the balcony foyer of Salle Maurice O'Bready.

The concert program begins at 8 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 23 in Salle Maurice O'Bready in the Université de Sherbrooke Cultural Centre.

Tickets are available from the Cultural Centre office at 820-1000.

O Vertigo's La Luna takes centre stage

Valentine's Day festivities continue over weekend

O Vertigo dance company takes its latest performance, La Luna, from dress rehearsals to centre stage at Sherbrooke University's Cultural Centre on Tuesday, Feb. 26.

La Luna choreographer and artistic director Ginette Laurin says the production is a theatrical and sensual tribute to the human body, especially its forgotten and obscure side.

"I wanted to approach the body from new perceptions — where shapes and details become strange landscapes and figures," said Laurin.

"I was inspired mostly by German photographer Karl Blossfeldt at the turn of the 20th century. Movements of the dancers are intimately examined and enhanced by video performance in real time, among other things. I wanted the whole piece to feel like a sweet and poetic invitation to the dark side of the moon."

Townships bluegrass announces winter series

By Caroline Kehne
WATERLOO

Townships Bluegrass and Old Tyme Music Society recently announced the line-up for its 2002 winter concert series that will include three concerts featuring some of the best emerging talents on the North American Bluegrass music scene.

The series opens with a concert featuring Jimmy Bowen and Santa Fe (Feb. 26), followed by the Chapmans (March 19) and finally, the Mark Newton Band (April 23). All performances take place at the Royal Canadian Legion located at 77 Lewis St. in Waterloo. Performance times are 8 p.m.

JIMMY BOWEN AND SANTA FE: FEB. 26

Charlotte, N.C. native Bowen is considered one of the finest tenor singers in contemporary Bluegrass performance. He began performing at the age of 10, and later, left his accounting degree behind for the stage.

In 1988, Bowen became a member of the legendary Country Gentlemen, with whom he toured for six-and-a-half years, performing in North America and abroad, appearing onstage at the Grand Ole Opry, The Nashville Now Show and the White House.

Bowen left the band in 1995 to perform with Continental Divide, and in 1995 became International Bluegrass Music Association's Emerging Artist of the Year.

At his performance on Feb. 26, Bowen will be accompanied by Gary Reece, banjo; Daniel Edmonds, guitar; and John Pennell, bass. Reese, like Bowen, hit the performance stage early at age 13. He has performed in the Tennessee Bluegrass Band and Bill Monroe and the Bluegrass Boys.

Edmonds, a native of Bethalto, Illinois, started playing guitar at age eight and was touring in regional bands by his late teens. Pennell, a native of Champaign, Illinois, has a long career as teacher, performer and songwriter. He has performed with such Bluegrass luminaries as Alison Krauss, Harley Alle and Chris Jones. He has also written songs for Alison Krauss, including 'Too Late to Cry' and 'Foolish Heart'.

THE CHAPMANS: MARCH 19

In Bluegrass music, genetics rules; there is nothing tighter than close brother harmony. The Chapmans, a five man band comprised of father Bill, mother Patti and sons John, Jeremy and Jason, have created a unique style and have built a steadily growing fan base across the country.

The star is 24-year old John Chapman, the band's lead singer and guitarist, who started his career as a child fiddler and won a Colorado-wide fiddling competition while still in his teens. He switched to guitar and joined brothers Jeremy (mandolin), mother Patti (bass), Jason (upright bass).

DFASPSD

The Mark Newton Band will be one of three Bluegrass bands performing as part of Townships Bluegrass and Old Tyme Music Society's 2002 Winter Concert Series.

By 1998, the band had entered the national scene and the family shifted its home base to Missouri. That year, the Chapmans took home awards in the 1998 International Bluegrass Band Championship.

In 1999, the band received a double nomination, first, for its CD, Notes From Home (Pinycastle Records) which was nominated for SPBBMA's Album of the Year and second, a nomination for SPBBMA Band of the Year.

In 2001, the band released its second CD, Follow Me to rave reviews and received a nomination as IBMA's Emerging Band of the Year.

THE MARK NEWTON BAND: APRIL 23

Mark Newton has been performing Bluegrass music for more than two decades. In 1998, he released his first solo

CD, Living a Dream, followed by Follow Me Back to the Fold. The latter project is a rarity for this world: a tribute to female singers of acoustic and Bluegrass music. In it, Newton is performs alongside some of the industry's top female performers and the CD received the 2001 IBMA Award for "Recorded Event of the Year" for innovation.

Newton grew up in a musical family, with a mother who was an accomplished piano and a father who played guitar, mandolin and fiddle. In the 1980s, Newton joined the Virginia Squires, a group on the edge of what has come to be known as "contemporary bluegrass". Newton currently performs with band members Mike Munford (banjo), Troy Engle (mandolin/fiddle) and Bob Gulf Jr. (bass).

IN ADDITION TO THE HEADLINER BANDS, EACH PERFORMANCE WILL FEATURE AN OUTSTANDING LOCAL BLUEGRASS BAND TO OPEN THE EVENING. THE OPENING BANDS WILL BE: FOLKGRASS, FEB. 26; HOOKED ON BLUEGRASS, MARCH 19; AND ROAD SCHOLARS, APRIL 23.

TICKETS ARE AVAILABLE FROM ANY TSBOTMS DIRECTOR: GORD CAMERON, 450-539-0333; JOHN PETRONKO, 514-488-8160; BOB TETRAULT, 819-346-2435, TERRY HOWELL, 819-875-5133 OR CARLYLE MCBURNEY, 819-889-2629.

Young Rollerball actor poised for major career

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

There's a story about Chris Klein that tells you a great deal about his outlook on life. It happened back in his home town of Omaha, Neb., and involved his 1982 Camaro. He loved that car, yet it was entirely typical of him that he turned the vehicle over to his local Goodwill store as a charitable donation. It's also part of his makeup that he once sang in a church choir.

Even now, as he stands on the threshold of major stardom with two big movies — Rollerball and We Were Soldiers — out this winter, he still sounds and behaves like an affable kid from Nebraska struggling to come to terms with his good fortune.

For Klein, it's important to emphasize that he's only 22 and that he's been in this acting business for less than five years. He embraces success but tries to be realistic about it.

"I believe that life moves quickly, but for me, patience and doing things deliberately and step by step are always important," said Klein.

"I'm not out there to hit home runs and I'm not out there to pretend I can do it every time. Right now, I'm here to learn. I'm here to communicate but also to find truth to the very, very best of my ability, so that hopefully in the years to come, I will become more educated and bring more to the table."

People who have worked with Klein talk about his essential niceness — the qualities of innocence and freshness that he brings to the screen and that he also projects in real person. Allyson Hannigan, who appeared with him in the two American Pie movies, mischievously says that people like Klein leave her in shock.

"I didn't know people like Chris existed," Hannigan says affectionately. "He's like someone you watch on The Brady Bunch."

So there is this earnestness and lack of guile to him. Klein is talking to Southam News less than 48 hours after Rollerball opened to several murderous reviews, but ask him about the film and his loyalty towards it doesn't waver for an instant.

"I'm very excited about Rollerball," he says earnestly. "I'm very, very proud of it. I learned a whole lot doing it, working with a director like John McTiernan and with people like Jean Reno. It was an absolutely awesome experience."

Then he adds, a trifle apologetically. "As an actor you don't make movies for the critics. You can't because that's no way to live your life and do your work."

For him, Rollerball was not just an opportunity to indulge himself with a megabudget action thriller about death-defying skaters and motorcyclists. It was also a learning experience.

"That movie was a very educational experience for me, an opportunity first of all to work in an action movie, which I had never done before with one of the best action directors in American cinema history," Klein admitted.

The film was shot in Montreal and southern Alberta, but for Klein some of his best times came prior to shooting during the month he spent at the University of Calgary working with the Canadian national speed skating team.

"It was so much fun there, so cool," said Klein, who was a quarterback and linebacker in high school football and who continues to be an avid mountain cyclist and swimmer.

"It was the the hardest training I've ever done. It combined running, swimming, biking, elevation training and circuit training. And I love Calgary. It's a great town."

On the other hand, We Were Soldiers, which opens March 1, may end up doing a lot more for his career. His involvement began when he received a Fed Ex package in Lethbridge, Alta., where he was involved in two weeks of gruelling night shoots for Rollerball. It contained the screenplay for We Were Soldiers, a war drama far removed in tone from a crunching action fantasy like Rollerball.

As he began to read, Klein discovered there was no escapism here. Mel Gibson had already signed for the role of the lieutenant colonel who leads a U.S. battalion into a disastrous encounter with the enemy in the hills of Vietnam. There was a potential role here for Klein — if he was interested.

He was definitely interested. Unlike the top star billing he would be receiving for Rollerball, this would be no more than a supporting role, but Klein saw something special about this real-life hero — a young officer of true humility and pronounced religious beliefs who leaves his young wife and new-born child for the hell of Vietnam.

"I read it and I fell in love with the character of Second Lieutenant Jack Geoghegan. And I fell in love with the story — with the conflict of going off to war, leaving behind a new wife and a brand new baby. I called up my agent and said: 'I would kill to do this part.'" His agent arranged a meeting with writer-director Randall Wallace. "I fought for the role, and now here I am talking about it!"

It's only three years since Klein made his professional acting debut in the brilliant high school satire, Election, portraying an amiable but cement-brained football jock.

Since then, his career has been very much in the ascendant: there have been comic appearances in the two American Pie films and major roles in Here On Earth and Say It Isn't So. Rollerball, which opened Feb. 8, is seen by MGM as his ticket to stardom — Klein receives billing over co-stars LL Cool J and Reno — but the rangy young actor had no problems with reverting to a smaller role for We Were Soldiers.

"Both are tremendous learning experiences — and different," said Klein.

He cites the experience of sharing the Aviation special

TVDATA

The F-16 CJ jet is one of the 10 best aircraft built in the first 100 years of aviation, according to the two-hour Flightpath special, airing Sunday on Discovery Canada. Fifty experts chose the top aircrafts from 50 that represented 10 different categories.

Inspiring teacher

TVDATA

Steven Curtis Chapman guest stars on Doc, airing Sunday, Feb. 17, on Pax TV. In "Fearless," we meet Daniel (Chapman), a devoted teacher who inspires his students to be fearless as they strive for excellence. But Daniel must practice what he preaches when Clint (Billy Ray Cyrus) diagnoses him with Lou Gehrig's disease. With help from the good doctor, Nate (Richard Leacock) and his students, Daniel comes to terms with his illness.

All for you

TVDATA

Music superstar Janet Jackson brings her All for You tour to HBO on Sunday in a telecast from Aloha Stadium in Honolulu, Hawaii. While she'll do many numbers from her current album, which will be up for several Grammy Awards next week, she also plans to reprise such past hits as "What Have You Done for Me Lately," "Let's Wait Awhile" and "When I Think of You."

Sounds to soothe the savage beast

Williams Jr. returns to roots with latest album

Hank Williams Jr.'s career has come full circle with his latest album Almeria Club. The artist, who was nicknamed Bocephus by his legendary father, has a history of being an extremist at times.

Williams Jr. has really rediscovered his roots with the new disk, named after a former nightclub. The former hot night spot was host to a legendary performance by Williams Sr. and his mother, Audrey, in 1947.

In the liner notes, it tells the story of a guy, who's upset about finding his girlfriend at the nightclub with someone else, showed-up with a shotgun to settle the problem. People at the club opened a window behind the stage, urging Williams Sr. and his wife to get out to avoid any danger. Eventually everything was kept under control, allowing both musicians to come back in and resume the show.

The decision to turn this old, three-room building, which is situated only four miles down the road where Williams lives, into a recording studio, was made after Williams Jr. heard local tales about the event. Being the extremist that he is, Williams Jr. moved racks of high-tech digital recording equipment and musical instruments into the building. He also rounded up a stellar group of musicians including former members of The Beach Boys, Fleetwood Mac and Stevie Ray Vaughan's Double Trouble.

To help co-produce the album, Williams Jr. turned to talented Chuck Howard. The results are outstanding.

Williams Jr. penned 11 of the songs included on Almeria Club, including two covers of a Thunderhead Hawkins' classic, 'Last Pork Chop'. The first version features Williams Jr. on lead vocals, while the second one is an infectious, nitty, gritty soulful blues instrumental.

The following number, 'Go Girl Go', sounds like good old time rock 'n roll number - a real reminder of the popular single 'Johnny B Good'. Also featured is the single 'The 'F' Word', which compares the country music lyrics to other musical genres.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

Other singles on the Almeria Club includes 'X-Treme Country', which is true to its pure Texas style country, and the comical number about full figure girls in 'Big Top Women', which is set to an infectious boogie beat.

Like the second version of 'Last Pok Chop', the single 'The Cheatin' Hotel' is true blue country about getting caught being unfaithful, and not being able to stop.

'Outdoor Lovin' Man' tells a story like an autobiography as Williams Jr. describes the type of life he likes. The song has a bluegrass-fell to it, as the melody marries perfectly to the story.

Again tracing his families musical roots, 'Tee Tot Song' is the story of how Williams Sr. learned how to play the blues from Rufus Payne. As the song talks about, the incorporation of blues to country would change the world of country music for ever.

While Almeria Club offers several great songs, the gem here is 'Cross On The Highway', which was actually recorded at a Kansas City church. The gospel number was written by Williams Jr. as a tribute to two of his best friends, Michael Tellis and football star Derrick Thomas, who died in a car accident.

To round out this wonderful collection, Williams Jr. added 'America Will Survive', the new version of 'A Country Boy Will Survive' which he debuted at Nashville's Country Freedom Concert benefit in October following the events of Sept. 11.

If Williams Jr.'s last several albums didn't get much of my attention, I must admit that this extreme return to the roots is more than appealing. It not only mixes old blues with some old country, but adds a tiny touch of modern treatment for five-star results.
