Was Dean of Legal Profession in Province.

Royal Ave. W., Montreal at the age of 92 years and 5 months. Admitted to the Bar in 1862 he first practised in Montreal and later at Beauharnois for more than thirty-five years. He took an active part in the political campaigns of his time, and his fairness and frankness won him the esteem of his opponents. He is survived by two daughters, Eugenie, who is Mme. A. FIND QUANTITY OF LIQUOR IN SECRET CACHE

Three Men Arrested And Car Seized on Malone-Constable Road.

A receipt in full for the construction of a secret compartment in a Mercier touring car convinced Commissioner Bruno of Malone that three men in the machine had knowledge of the cache being filled with an assortment of choice liquors so he held the trio for the action of the June 14th term of federal court. The occupants of the car gave their names as F. G. Bashford, Montreal, Wm. H. O'Neill and Fred A. White of Albany. They failed to post bonds in the sum of $3,000 each and were committed to the Malone jail.

The three men were nabbed in the town of Constable some time after midnight Friday morning on the Malone-Constable road by Border Patrolman Floyd Fiske. The occupants of the Mercier made no attempt to get away but were startled when the patrolman located the secret compartment and counted out 33 quarts of rye whiskey, 10 quarts of Scotch, 14 pints of rye and a dozen bottles of gin. They made a general denial of knowing the booze was in their car but when they appeared before Commissioner Bruno shortly after 2 o'clock the next morning and produced the receipt for having the compartment built in their machine, the commissioner decided otherwise.

War Thrills in Air, On Land and Under Water in New Film

"The Great Deception," coming to O'Connor Hall, Tuesday, May 24th., is a service story with the World War for a background. It is from the novel by George Gibbs called "The Yellow Dove."

The conflict from which the drama results is between representatives of the British and German secret service bureaus as played by Ben Lyon and Basil Rathbone respectively.

These two men oppose each other because of their loyalty to the antagonistic causes which they represent and are thrown further apart because of their mutual admiration for the same girl, a wealthy and daring young American as represented by Aileen Pringle.

Mgr. J. A. Langlois, who made his pastoral visit to Huntingdon on Monday and Tuesday.

MGR. LANGLOIS MAKES PASTORAL VISIT TO H'DON

Accompanied by Rev. Father Binette And Belanger.
108 CONFIRMED.

Mgr. Langlois Well Pleased With Parish.

The pealing forth of the bell in the Roman Catholic Church Monday afternoon announced the arrival of Mgr. J. A. Langlois, bishop of the diocese of Valleyfield, who had come to make his first pastoral visit to the parish of St. Joseph, Huntingdon.

A short sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Binette, an Oblate Father of Cap de la Madeleine, Que., the preacher who accompanies His Lordship. The assembled faithful met the bishop at the presbytery and the Solemn Procession began to the church. After his entry the bishop gave the Blessing.

Mgr. Langlois, in a short sermon explained the meaning of "pastoral visit." "The Apostles were charged to go forth and preach the Gospel. They faithfully complied and began to evangelize and baptize. When dioceses were formed the bishop frequently visited his people and often wrote them epistles. As a successor of the Apostles, I, too must visit the parishes under my charge, learn of their spiritual and material welfare, that I, in turn, may be able to give an account of my diocese to the Sovereign Pontiff. The afternoon's proceedings terminated with the Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Tuesday morning at seven o'clock His Lordship said his Mass. The Church was taxed to its capacity. The little children who were to be confirmed, and many parishioners received Holy Communion at this Mass. At 9 o'clock the ceremony after which Confirmation was administered, began. There were 108 confirmants of which 46 were boys, 60 were girls and two ladies. A forceful sermon was delivered in French and English by Father Binette. All who heard this Oblate Father speak were greatly impressed by his inspiring sermons. The Prayers for the Dead were recited, after which Mgr. Langlois delivered a sermon, and the kissing of the ring took place. In the course of his sermon His Lordship stressed the value of a good education and asked all parents to put forth their greatest efforts to give their children a good education. He complimented the parish upon having such a fine convent within its bounds, upon the good upkeep of the church, presbytery, cemetery and church grounds, and was satisfactorily pleased with the spiritual demonstration. He complimented the pastor upon his untiring zeal for his parishioners and devotion to the cause of Christ.

Rev. Father Pigeon, of Hinchinbrooke, was also present at the service.

Mgr. Langlois left Tuesday afternoon for St. Anicet where he made his pastoral visit on Tuesday and Wednesday and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation Wednesday morning.

LOCOTIVE KILLS FARMER

Returning home from a political meeting at Delson Saturday evening, Emery Robitoux, 70 years of age, a farmer, of St. Constant, was instantly killed when his horse and buggy were struck by a train at the C.P.R. crossing, near Delson. Robitoux was caught by the fender of the engine and was dragged 80 feet before the train could be stopped, while his horse, thrown 80 feet away from the scene of the accident, was also killed.

Information obtained at Delson was that the accident occurred at 7:30 o'clock, and that the C.P.R. train was inbound.

The trainmen saw the buggy almost as soon as it was struck by the engine, and the engineer stopped as quickly as possible. The victim was terribly mutilated when picked up. Dr. Pierre Dupuis, of St. Constant, was summoned to the scene, and he communicated with Coroneau McNeil, who gave permission to have the remains taken home. Robitoux was one of the oldest farmers of the district. He was a married man with several children.

LAMB'S STORE BURGLARIZED

Henry Jones of Dewittville, Accused of Making the Thefts.

Macrow Overpowers Accused.

Stolen Goods Found in Jones' Pockets After Being Captured at About 2 a.m.

How often it happens that the same store is burglarized time and again. Such has been the experience of Mr. C. H. Lamb whose store was burglarized Wednesday morning about 2 a.m. It appears that the accused, Henry Jones is supposed to have entered the store apparently by breaking the glass in the front door thereby gaining access to the Yale lock. Mr. A. L. Leahy who lives in the next house heard the breaking of glass and arose from his bed and looked out towards Lamb's store. From his home he could see into the store on account of the light reflecting through the store from the show windows. He says he could distinctly see some one moving about in the store near the soft drink counter. Mr. Leahy hurriedly dressed and ran through the back door to Mr. Lamb's residence and pounded upon the door delivering his message to Mr. Lamb, who in turn immediately phoned his message to John Macrow, the town constable. John Macrow responded that he would dress and go immediately and within ten minutes Mr. Lamb heard the report of a revolver. It was John Macrow who fired the shot at the accused who was running up Hunter street. He was overtaken near Mrs. Davis' residence. The accused attempted to resist but was subdued and eventually placed in the lockup.

When Macrow reached Lamb's store he flashed a light in through the broken window and before attempting a search desired to get assistance and when crossing the street for help he heard the accused jump off the verandah and up the street to where he overtook him. The articles taken were three cameras of various values. One camera was found at the edge of the verandah, another thrown into a lilac bush and the third was placed upon the magazine counter as though ready to be thrown into a receptacle. Cigarettes, plug tobacco and soft drinks, seemed to be the goods desired. The value of the goods was placed at $47.00. When the accused was searched the goods were found in his coat pockets.

The accused was brought to court on Wednesday but the case was adjourned to Friday evening.

A Decisive Vote.

The provincial vote on Monday afforded few surprises, for it was to be expected that Mr. Taschereau would win. Perhaps the Premier is more embarrassed by the extent of his victory than he would have been had the margin been very narrow. The Government at Quebec has kept its hands clean, it has not been wasteful and it has reduced taxes; nevertheless a strong opposition is helpful to a government in the long run. That Mr. Sauvé failed in this respect is due to the fact that he was unable to attract men of substantial worth and reputation as candidates for his party, and he had no real program to offer.

Locally the election went as expected. Both Hon. Honoré Mercier and Mr. Philps increased their majorities, indeed, they go to Quebec with the largest majorities ever given provincial members from these counties. The victory of Mr. Papineau in Beauharnois shifts that county back into the Liberal column. That Mr. Papineau will long continue as the member is not to be expected, for he retired from federal politics two years ago on account of health and age, but he will ably fill the position held by the late Arthur Plante who enjoyed the respect of all who came in touch with him.

One of the features of the election was the lack of partisanship displayed. Locally it may be classed as one of the quietest on record, and it is quite possible that several score of voters in Huntingdon county never knew there was a contest. In one sense the weather was favourable for getting out the vote because the heavy rains had made work in the fields impossible, in another sense the rain by miring the lanes tended to keep the voters at home. Be it as it may, the fact that only about 60 per cent of the vote was cast is not to the credit of Huntingdon county.

"Winning of the West."

With the Quebec elections out of the way, and with the dog days of the political season at hand, more or less interest will be taken in the Conservative convention which is to be held in Winnipeg this fall. Each of the possible candidates is being watched, and the two main contenders, Hon. R. B. Bennett and Premier Ferguson of Ontario, are watching their steps carefully. Both gentlemen from long experience know that one of the most damaging things that can happen to a political candidate is to be in the field too early, so both have solemnly announced that they are not going to be candidates.

On the other hand the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, the present leader of the Conservative group in Parliament, is not backward in expressing his views and in a speech at Ottawa last week he declared that the Conservatives should woo the West and ignore Quebec. He went so far as to express the opinion that Quebec was wedded to the Liberal party for so many years to come that the Conservative party might well ignore it and give all attention to the Prairies. The statement, if it is an accurate forecast of the political situation, throws the Conservative Party into opposition for many years to come, for if Quebec is to be 95 per cent Liberal that it will not take much imagination by Liberal leaders to hold the control in Parliament election after election. A solid block of sixty seats in a House with 245 members will dominate business.

Another thought in connection with Mr. Guthrie's statement is the changing of the Conservative policy. For years the tariff has been its fetish, and the same is true of the Prairies—but with reverse English to the term. Does Mr. Guthrie mean to scrap his policy and adopt a free trade arrangement? That is hardly possible. While if he moderates the National Policy he falls closely into line with that of the Liberal party, and it is a recognized fundamental principle for political success that those in Opposition, if they hope to win, must offer something different from those in power. What prompted Mr. Guthrie to make the suggestions he did is hard to understand. The only plausible explanation is that as the speech was delivered in Ottawa, the 1926 "Board of Strategy" has come to life again.

Get Ready for the Show.

The month of May is slipping along quickly—only ten days remain. The backward season has thrown many plans out of order, but it is to be hoped that the farmers have not forgotten the Ormstown Show. We need a banner exhibit this year. Business has been good during the past year, and a demand is general for first-class live stock. We have the stock, and the Ormstown Show is the advertising point, all that is needed is the wholehearted support of the farmers who own the stock.

With the public authorities planning general celebrations this summer to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation, people are more or less inclined to want to travel around and see things. Our Show comes ahead of the Dominion Day celebrations, so by proper advertising and planning the Ormstown Show can go down on record as the best in its history. But crowds do not make a Show, they make for its financial success, but the real benefit to the farmers comes from the advertising that their stock gets. A million dollar display by fifty exhibitors is not nearly as helpful as a two million dollar display by 200 farmers. Every farmer has an animal in which he takes special pride. Now is the chance to show that animal to its best advantage and at the same time help the Ormstown Show and the District of Beauharnois.

Horsnell, retiring President, thanking her for faithful services rendered to the Society as President since 1912, and trusting that her health will soon be restored to her. Mrs. B. Gilmour and Mrs. J. R. Dickenson were appointed delegates to the County Convention in Ormstown. During the year the Society has been extended the hospitality of Mrs. Craik's home for their monthly meeting, for which appreciation was expressed. After the singing of a hymn refreshments were served and a social time spent.

This town in common with almost all of the other towns of the Province has not experienced a building boom for some years, but this spring there is more money being expended on buildings and repairs and several houses have changed proprietors. Mr. Macdonald of Atholstan is building a house on the Heights. Mr. Peter Reid is renovating one of his houses into four desirable apartments while Mr. Romeo Laberge has enhanced the value of his property as well as giving to the public a beautiful view of Nun's Island by the removal of a shed. The former Dissident School has been turned into two apartments by Mr. Francine Laberge and Mr. Ross Lang has all the materials ready to build a stable. Messrs. Narcisse Laberge and Julius Cecyre are each building houses in the village. Messrs. Joseph M. and Joseph Laberge have made extensive alterations on their houses. These improvements all show progress and hope in the town and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. George Henderson entertained at a Bridge of eight tables. Refreshments were served by the Misses Mirima Wyse, Nancy and Nora Wooler Lillian and Helen Henderson. Proceeds were in aid of the W.A.

Mrs. Spring Runciman of London, England is expected in town this week and will remain with her mother, Mrs. George Boulter for a short time before joining her son, Mr. Bennie Melis at Ottawa, Ont.

Mrs. D. L. Weston has arrived from Philadelphia, Pa., and is occupying her cottage for a few weeks.

Mrs. Hardiman, accompanied by her daughter Edna and son Charles, were week-end guests of Mrs. Norman Ashley.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bowen and family of Notre Dame de Grace spent the week end at their cottage here.

Miss Agnes Prittle attended Convocation at Queen's College, Kingston, Ont., last week receiving three first prizes and two seconds in the third year arts course.

Rev. W. T. Prittle, B. A., and Mr. Peter Reid attended the Presbytery of the United Church in Montreal, on Tuesday.

The supporters of the Hon. James A. Robb in this vicinity extend cordial greetings.

Anything can be sold by Long Distance

No matter what you have to sell, do not think it cannot be sold by Long Distance. It can—if the price is right. People are rapidly becoming educated to buy by telephone many things they formerly thought they had to examine before purchasing.

Those who have definitely accepted Long Distance for systematic selling tell us—and the number is rapidly growing—that where they do not succeed in making a sale on the first try, the prospect nearly always comes back later to buy.

Get the Long Distance habit. There are 40,000 more telephone prospects in Ontario and Quebec this year.

MATRIMONIAL

CASEY-WHITE

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Bridget's church at Trout River at ten o'clock Saturday morning, when Miss Lucy White became the bride of John J. Casey, U.S. Immigration Inspector, stationed at Trout River. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McMahon, pastor of the church. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Raymond White. Many friends of both the bride and groom were present at the wedding.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Gertrude White, as bridesmaid, and Walter Walsh, of Valleyfield, Que., as best man. The bride wore an attractive travelling costume of dark blue pique tulle and carried American Beauty roses. Her bridesmaid also wore a becoming costume of dark blue, with hat to match, and carried carnations.

The wedding march was played by Margaret Brady, and during the ceremony Mrs. W. V. Spink sang "O, Promise Me," and "Love Here is My Heart." Miss Rosemary Rogers also sang "Sacred Heart."

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome fox fur and to the bridesmaid a gold purse, and to the best man gold cuff links.

Immediately after the ceremony at the church the bride and groom left by motor for New York City and Atlantic City on their wedding journey. They will return to Trout River after ten days, where their home will be. The bride received many beautiful gifts from relatives and friends. The bride has a wide circle of friends in Malton and vicinity. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Casey, of New York City, who conferred on him by Queen's College, Kingston, Ont., this is a worthy tribute to their member elect.

John White, of Trout River, and was formerly employed at Hotel Flanagan in Malton. U.S. Immigration Inspector Casey is widely known along the border as an efficient Federal officer and has a host of friends. He is a World War veteran and one of the boys who saw more than his share of fighting "over there," having served with the "Fighting 69th" of New York City. He was wounded three different times and cited for bravery at Chateau Thierry when he waded through the River Oureq at the head of his squad and put a nest of German machine guns out of commission.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kirk, Miss Mary Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Robie, Roy Brooks, all of Malton, and Frank Hanson, of Quebec City. —Malton Telegram.

HUNTINGDON

The play entitled "Uncle Tom's Cabin" put on by Lincoln's Traveling Troupe was quite a disappointment. All the actors but one seemed afraid to strain their vocal chords. The play was hard to follow. To add to this the audience was noisy. Strict measures should be taken to keep order and silence in the hall when an entertainment is being given.

New Huntingdon United Church Formally Opened

NEW CHURCH PLEASES EVERYBODY -- LARGE CONGREGATIONS MARK DEDICATION AND SUNDAY OPENING SERVICES

Rev. James Smyth, D.D., Preaches at Dedication Service and Rev. W. C. Lennon, D.D., Preaches at Sunday Opening Services.

ORGAN RECITAL PLEASED MANY.

Choir of 35 Voices Rendered Many Beautiful Anthems.—New Pipe Organ Much Appreciated by all Lovers of Music.

Friday, May 13th. was ushered in as a dark and dismal looking day and was not what might be most desired for the Dedication Service of the new United Church in Huntingdon. For the first time the auditorium of the new church was thrown open to the public to inspect. The Rev. J. I. Hughes put forth much effort in arranging for all the services connected with the formal opening of the church. The order of service adopted was as follows:—

Prelude—Allegretto from Sonata, Opp. 14 No. 1, Beethoven.

Doxology—

Invocation—By Rev. Harry Walker, Shawbridge, Que.

Hymn 143 read by Rev. E. E. Mowatt, Kensington.

Spirit divine, attend our prayers,
Come as the dew! and sweetly bless
This consecrated hour;
Descend with all Thy gracious powers,
O come, great Spirit, come!

Come as the light! to us reveal
Our emptiness and woe;
And lead us in those paths of life
Where all the righteous go.

Come as the fire! and purge our hearts
Like sacrificial flame;
Let our whole soul an offering be
To our Redeemer's name.

Spirit divine, attend our prayers,
Make a lost world Thy home;
Descend with all Thy gracious powers,
O come, great Spirit, come! Amen.

Prayer—Rev. J. G. Greig, Valleyfield.

Responsive Psalm, No. 118: 1-7, 8-9, 14-29 led by Rev. I. Norman, Montreal.

Minister. Oh give thanks unto Jehovah; for he is good; for his loving-kindness endureth for ever.

Congregation. Let Israel now say, that his lovingkindness endureth for ever.

M. Let the house of Aaron now say, that his lovingkindness endureth for ever.

C. Let them now that fear Jehovah say, that his lovingkindness endureth for ever.

M. Out of my distress I called upon Jehovah: Jehovah answered me and set me in a large place.

C. Jehovah is on my side: I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

M. Jehovah is on my side among them that help me.

C. It is better to take refuge in Jehovah than to put confidence in man.

M. It is better to take refuge in Jehovah than to put confidence in princes.

C. Jehovah is my strength and song; and he is become my salvation.

M. The voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tents of the righteous: the right hand of Jehovah doeth valiantly.

C. The right hand of Jehovah is exalted: the right hand of Jehovah doeth valiantly.

M. I shall not die, but live, and declare the works of Jehovah.

Lord's Prayer—Sung by Choir.

Hymn 195 read by Dr. Wilson of Ormstown.

The Church's one foundation
Is Jesus Christ her Lord;
She is His new creation
By water and the Word;
From heaven He came and sought her
To be His holy bride;
With His own blood He bought her,
And for her life He died.

Elect from every nation,
Yet one o'er all the earth,
Her charter of salvation
One Lord, one faith, one birth;
One Holy Name she blesses,
Partakes one Holy Food,
And to one hope she presses,
With every grace endued.

Yet she on earth hath union
With God, the Three in One,
And mystic sweet communion
With those whose rest is won:
O happy ones and holy!
Lord, give us grace that we
Like them, the meek and lowly,
On high may dwell with Thee. Amen.

DUNDEE TO HAVE CONSOLIDATION

Decision Reached at Meeting Tuesday Evening.

At a largely attended meeting held in the Community Hall, Dundee, Tuesday evening, Mr. Sutherland of Quebec gave an interesting and instructive address on School Consolidation. Much enthusiasm in favor of consolidation prevailed among those present and a resolution was passed that the School Commissioners proceed as soon as possible in the erection of a new school. A committee was also appointed to assist the Commissioners in their task. It is a little late now to have such a school in operation this year, as several teachers are already engaged and certain routine has to be observed but the move is in the right direction, and we trust the school will be in existence for another year.

Possibly there are some who may not be in favor of this, as it will mean increased taxation, but Mr. Sutherland pointed out clearly that this would not be burdensome, and the advantages would more than compensate the outlay in many respects. Parents will be worth money with such an institution in the community. When it is up, the people will be proud of it, so will the pupils. It will be an incentive to remain in the community, and the children of the future will have opportunities of education denied to those of former days.

We sincerely hope and trust that all the ratepayers concerned will view the matter generously and assist in making their lives count, in helping to fit the boys and girls of our homes for future citizenship and service. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Sutherland for his wholehearted service.

HUNTINGDON

A well attended meeting of the Huntingdon Tennis Club was held on Wednesday evening at the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

It was decided to have the official opening of the Club on June 3rd, and a committee was appointed to look after this matter. Refreshments will be served during the afternoon both to the members and to any friends they may wish to bring with them. A nominal charge will be made to cover the cost of the refreshments.

The question of lighting both courts was taken up and it was moved that steps be taken to have both courts lighted up for three months i.e. June, July and August. This is expected to popularize playing in the evening for it is only at that time that certain people are able to play. This innovation has been made feasible by the Beauharnois Electric Co. who have offered to equip the courts for lighting and supply current at a very reasonable rate.

VALLEYFIELD

An interesting and instructive meeting of the Catholic teachers of Chateauguay, Beauharnois and Huntingdon was held Saturday in the Knights of Columbus Hall. There were about 125 representatives from the various sections, who wish to be associated with the rural school organization of the province. Canon Mousseau, Principal of the Normal School of Valleyfield presided. Several commissioners from Ormstown, Huntingdon, Dundee, St. Louis de Gonzague and Valleyfield, were present and addressed the assembly. A musical programme was rendered and enjoyed by the delegates.

One of the best acted and entertaining amateur plays ever given in Valleyfield was presented on Friday night by the Wesley Players, of Wesley United Church. Notre Dame de Grace. The hall of the United Church was filled to capacity to see the charming three-act comedy, "The Laughing Cure," which made the audience enjoy the acting and humour to more than the extent of a smile. There were many difficult roles, some of which were given better than others, but none of which were unworthy.

Early in the play there was an impression of restraint and slight hesitancy, which wore off and became one of confidence and entering into the spirit of the situation so thoroughly that the audience became infected and took the laughing cure too. The stage was convincingly and tastefully set, no detail being overlooked, and the lighting was effective, which added much to the success of the evening. The Board of Managers are to be congratulated for being able to procure the services of these talented players, who are expected to return in the fall with another good play.

THE MURDER OF ROGER ACKROYD

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

Author of
"The Secret Adversary," "The Murder on the Links," etc.

"To you?"
"Oh, no. I have nothing to do with the servants. Miss Russell attends to the household matters."

The inspector remained lost in thought for a minute or two. Then he nodded his head and remarked, "I think I'd better have a word with Miss Russell, and I'll see the girl Dale as well."

Poirot and I accompanied him to the housekeeper's room. Miss Russell received us with her usual sang-froid.

Elsie Dale had been at Fernly five months. A nice girl, quick at her duties, and most respectable. Good references. The last girl in the world to take anything not belonging to her.

What about the parlormaid?
"She, too, was a most superior girl. Very quiet and ladylike. An excellent worker."

"Then why is she leaving?" asked the inspector.
"Miss Russell pursed up her lips. It was none of my doing. I understand Mr. Ackroyd's afternoon. It was her duty to do the study, and she was very annoyed about it, and she gave notice. At least, that is what I understood from her, but perhaps you would like to see her yourselves?"

The inspector assented. I had already noticed the girl when she was waiting on us at lunch. A tall girl, with a lot of brown hair rolled tightly about the back of her neck, and very steady gray eyes. She came in answer to the housekeeper's summons, and stood very straight with those same gray eyes fixed on us.

"You are Ursula Bourne?" asked the inspector.
"Yes, sir."

"I understand you are leaving?"
"Yes, sir."

"Why is that?"
"I disarranged some papers on Mr. Ackroyd's desk. He was very angry about it, and I said I had better leave. He told me to go as soon as possible."

"Were you in Mr. Ackroyd's bedroom at all last night? Tidying up or anything?"
"No, sir. That is Elsie's work. I never went near that part of the house."

"I must tell you, my girl, that a large sum of money is missing from Mr. Ackroyd's room."

"At last I saw her face. A wave of color swept over her face. 'I know nothing about any money. If you think I took it, and that is why Mr. Ackroyd dismissed me, you are wrong.'"

"I'm not accusing you of taking it, my girl," said the inspector. "Don't flare up so."

The girl looked at him coldly. "You can search my things if you like," she said disdainfully. "But you won't find anything."

Poirot suddenly interposed. "It was yesterday afternoon that Mr. Ackroyd dismissed you—or you dismissed yourself was it not?"

he asked.
The girl nodded.
"How long did the interview last?"

"The interview?"
"Yes, the interview between you and Mr. Ackroyd in the study?"

"I don't know."
"Twenty minutes? Half an hour?"
"Something like that."

"Not longer?"
"Not longer than half an hour, certainly."

"Thank you, mademoiselle." I looked curiously at him. He was rearranging a few objects on the table, setting them straight with precise fingers. His eyes were shining.

"That'll do," said the inspector. Ursula Bourne disappeared. The inspector turned to Miss Russell.

"How long has she been here? Have you got a copy of the reference you had with her?"

Without answering the first question, Miss Russell moved to an adjacent bureau, opened one of the drawers, and took out a handful of letters clipped together with a patent fastener. She selected one and handed it to the inspector.

"H'm," said he. "Reads all right."

Mrs. Richard Follitt, of Marby Grange, Marby. Who's this woman?"

"Quite good county people," said Miss Russell.

"Well," said the inspector, hanging it back, "let's have a look at the other one, Elsie Dale."

Elsie Dale was a big fair girl, with a pleasant but slightly stupid face. She answered our questions readily enough, and showed much distress and concern at the loss of the money.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with her," observed the inspector, after he had dismissed her.

"What about Parker?"
Miss Russell pursed her lips together and made no reply.

"I've a feeling there's something wrong about that man," the inspector continued thoughtfully. "The trouble is that I don't quite see when he got his opportunity. He'd be busy with his duties immediately after dinner, and he's got a pretty good alibi all through the evening. I know, for I've been devoting particular attention to it."

Well, thank you very much, Miss Russell. We'll leave things as they are for the present. It's highly probable Mr. Ackroyd paid that money away himself."

The housekeeper bade us a dry good-afternoon, and we took our leave. I left the house with Poirot. "I wonder," I said, breaking the silence, "what the papers the girl disarranged could have been. For Ackroyd to have got into such a state about them? I wonder if there is any clue there to the mystery."

"The secretary said there were no papers of particular importance on the desk," said Poirot quietly. "Yes, but—" I paused.

"It strikes you as odd that Ackroyd should have flown into a rage about so trivial a matter?"

"Yes, it does rather."
"But was it a trivial matter?"

"Of course," admitted, "we don't know what those papers may have been. But Raymond certainly said—"

"Leave M. Raymond out of it for a minute. What did you think of that girl?"

"Which girl? The parlormaid?"
"Yes, the parlormaid, Ursula Bourne."

"She seemed a nice girl," I said hesitatingly.

Poirot repeated my words, but whereas I had laid a slight stress on the fourth word, he put it on the second.

"She seemed a nice girl—yes." Then, after a minute's silence, he took something from his pocket and handed it to me.

"See, my friend, will show you something. Look there."

The paper he had handed me was that compiled by the inspector and given by him to Poirot that morning. Following the pointing finger, I saw a small cross marked in pencil opposite the name Ursula Bourne.

"You may not have noticed it at the time, my good friend, but there was one person on this list whose alibi had no kind of confirmation. Ursula Bourne."

"You don't think—"

"Dr. Sheppard, dare to think anything. Ursula Bourne may have killed Mr. Ackroyd, but I confess I can see no motive for her doing so. Can you?"

He looked at me very hard—so hard that I felt uncomfortable.

"Can you?" he repeated. "No motive whatsoever," I said firmly.

His gaze relaxed. He frowned and murmured to himself: "Since the blackmailer was a man, it follows that she cannot be the blackmailer, then—"

I coughed.

"As far as that goes—" I began doubtfully.

He spun round on me. "What? What are you going to say?"

"Nothing. Nothing. Only that, strictly speaking, Mrs. Ferrars in her letter mentioned a person—she didn't actually specify a man. But we took it for granted, Ackroyd and I, that it was a man."

Poirot did not seem to be listening to me. He was muttering to himself again.

"But then it is possible after all—yes, certainly it is possible—but then—ah! I must rearrange my ideas. Method, order; never have I needed them more. Everything must fit in—in its appointed place—otherwise I am on the wrong track."

He broke off, and whirled round upon me again.

"Where is Marby?"
"It's on the other side of Cran—"

"How far away?"
"Oh!—fourteen miles, perhaps."

"Would it be possible for you to go there? To-morrow, say?"

"To-morrow? Let me see, that's Sunday. Yes, I could arrange it. What do you want me to do there?"

"See this Mrs. Follitt. Find out all you can about Ursula Bourne."

"Very well. But—I don't much care for the job."

"It is not the time to make difficulties. A man's life may hang on this."

"Poor Ralph!" I said with a sigh. "You believe him to be innocent, though?"

Poirot looked at me gravely. "Do you want to know the truth?"

"Of course."

"Then you shall have it. My friend, everything points to the assumption that he is guilty."

"What!" I exclaimed. Poirot nodded.

"Yes, that stupid inspector—for he is stupid—has everything pointing his way. I seek for the truth—and the truth leads me every time to Ralph Paton. Motive, opportunity, means. But I leave no stone unturned. I promised Mademoiselle Flora. And she was very sure, that little one. But very sure indeed."

CHAPTER XI
Poirot Pays a Call

I was slightly nervous when I rang the bell at Marby Grange the following afternoon. I wondered very much what Poirot expected to find out. He had entrusted the job to me. Why? Was it because, as in the case of questioning Major Blunt, he wished to remain in the background? The wish, intelligible in the first case, seemed to me quite meaningless here.

My meditations were interrupted by the advent of a smart parlormaid.

Yes, Mrs. Follitt was at home. I was ushered into a big drawing-room, and looked round me curiously as I waited for the mistress of the house. A large bare room, some good bits of old china, and some beautiful etchings, shabby covers and curtains. A lady's room in every sense of the term.

I turned on the inspection of a Bartolozzi on the wall as Mrs. Follitt came into the room. She was a tall woman, with untidy brown hair, and a very winning smile. "Dr. Sheppard," she said hesitatingly.

"That is my name," I replied. "I must apologize for calling upon you like this, but I wanted some information about a parlormaid previously employed by you, Ursula Bourne."

With the utterance of the name the smile vanished from her face, and all the cordiality froze out of her manner. She looked uncomfortable and ill at ease.

"Ursula Bourne?" she said hesitatingly.

"Yes," I said. "Perhaps you do not remember the name?"

"Oh, yes, of course, I—I remember perfectly."

"She left you just over a year ago, I understand?"

"Yes. Yes, she did. That is quite right."

"And you were satisfied with her whilst she was with you? How long was she with you, by the way?"

"Oh; a year or two—I can't remember exactly how long. She—she is very capable. I'm sure you will find her quite satisfactory. I didn't know she was leaving Fernly. I hadn't the least idea of it."

"Can you tell me anything about her?" I asked.

"Anything about her?"

"Yes, where she comes from, who her people are—that sort of thing?"

Mrs. Follitt's face wore more than ever its frozen look.

"I don't know at all."

"Whom was she with before she came to you?"

"I afraid I don't remember."

There was a spark of anger now underlying her nervousness. She flung up her head in a gesture that was vaguely familiar.

"Is it really necessary to ask all these questions?"

"Not at all," I said, with an air of surprise and a tinge of apology in my manner. "I had no idea you would mind answering them. I am very sorry."

Her anger left her and she became confused again.

"Oh! I don't mind answering them. I assure you I don't. Why should I? It—it just seemed a little odd, you know. That's all. A little odd."

One advantage of being a medical practitioner is that you can usually tell when people are lying to you. I should have known from Mrs. Follitt's manner, if from nothing else, that she did mind answering my questions—minded intensely. She was thoroughly un-

WHEN BANK OF MONTREAL TOKENS WERE USED FOR SMALL CHANGE

FOUNDED before Canada had any currency of its own, the Bank of Montreal in the early part of the Nineteenth Century obtained authorization from the British Government to issue copper tokens for small change.

Reproduced herewith are the two sides of the one-penny token of 1838 and of a "habitant" token of 1837. The obverse of the former shows a picture of the building used by the Bank of Montreal at that time, the obverse of the latter a typical farmer of Lower Canada, now Quebec. The reverse of both coins is the same, showing the arms of the city of Montreal.

Throughout its long history, the Bank of Montreal has always been active in serving the financial needs of the people of Canada, steadily extending its service as the need and opportunity for it arose.

Messrs. Fortune, Reese, Welch, Gay, McCoy and Wood, Messrs. Wilson, Winter, McLaughlin, Templeton, Reid, McMillan, Stark, McClatchie, Reese, Welch, Gay, Collins, Stephen, Allan and Dr. Shanks. A number of the choir for these services came from the neighbouring congregations and to whom the Rev. J. I. Hughes expressed the thanks of the congregation in particular when expressing thanks and words of praise to the choir.

The Opening Tea Meeting.

Friday evening the Ladies' Aid Society members catered for the Church Opening Tea Meeting. The attendance was large and the ladies served bountiful and delicious suppers from six until after eight o'clock. At this hour the people assembled in the auditorium where brief remarks were made by the visiting brethren. Dr. H. R. Clouston, who was secretary of the building committee made a short report on their activities. His report showed that the committee were most diligent and exacting in the carrying out of the set plans. The contractors Messrs. Faulkner and Carruthers were called upon to speak but declined with thanks. Here it might be truthfully said that the contractors, the building committee and the architect Mr. Forbes and Mr. Geo. Simpson the supervisor are to be congratulated upon erecting such a magnificent church. Mr. R. S. Pringle and Mr. Alex. McDowd were the vancassers for the building fund, so Mr. Pringle was called upon to make a report on same. The financial report was published some months ago and Mr. Pringle stated that they were more than pleased with the results of their labours which at first appeared as almost an undue task for two men. He said they were greatly pleased with the voluntary contributions made and particularly when so many young men gave so freely of their savings. The choir rendered a number of anthems, solos and quartettes all of which were greatly appreciated. The new organ was filled to its capacity whilst at the evening service a number of chairs occupied the aisles.

Rev. W. S. Lennon, B.A., D.D., of Sherbrooke, was the special preacher on Sunday. His sermons both morning and evening were most instructive and inspiring and were heard with deep interest by large congregations.

In the morning taking as his text John 4:38 "Others have labored, and ye have entered into their labor," he announced as his subject, "Our Humbling Inheritance." In many fields of life we must recognize the inheritance handed down to us by those who went before. We must be humble that the great credit for the present benefits belongs not to us but to them. This is so in the history of civilization, in the development of the life of our nation and in fields of industry as for instance agricultural life. We may wisely carry this thought with us into our estimate of the United Church. This congregation today in its new edifice may well accord to pastors and congregation of past days a great part of the praise for the new church. It rests with us to see that we are humble in the fact that great heritage and diligent, that by entering into the labors of our forebears we have a real heritage to hand down to those coming after us.

In the evening the subject was "The Table Talk of Jesus." He took as his text Luke 7:33-34. He noted that Jesus rather than being a formal preacher largely gave utterance to his teaching in casual conversation. His teaching was largely occasional and spontaneous. A good portion of it was while at the table. The preacher cited examples of this kind. At the house of the Pharisee on the Sabbath he silenced his critics when he asked them about healing; he then proceeded to speak of the ambition for chief seats to the guests, and of the absence of the hungry man to the host and ended by pointedly facing all with the question as to whether they had accepted the invitation to enter the Kingdom. At another Pharisee's table where he had received scant hospitality and where the sinful woman had shown her devotion he taught that your spiritual experience is measured by the return you seek to make. In the home in Bethany he answered Judas with the fact that love ceases to count the cost. At the last supper he had pointed to the highest degree in his school—"That you should do as I have done to you." He had also there made known that those closest to him have the power to injure him most.

The Organ Recital.

Tuesday evening the auditorium of the United Church was well filled by an appreciative audience who listened to the Organ Recital. The special organist for the occasion was Mr. D. M. Herbert, organist of the American United Church of Montreal. The organ selections were beautiful. The organ programme was varied by solos by Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Reese, a duet by Mrs. Reese and Mr. J. B. McMillan and a reading entitled "The Organ Builder" by Mrs. F. G. Braithwaite.

THE PRESENT BUILDING.

Though built on the same foundations and largely with the same walls the new edifice has changed greatly in appearance from that erected by the Methodists 47 years ago.

Following the modern tendency the spire has been replaced by the ancient type of battlemented tower. This is covered with copper. On the roof proper, Canadian Johns Manville shingles have replaced Welsh slate.

The former internal arrangement was so satisfactory for congregational purposes that only slight changes have been made which seemed to promise a little better use of the building. The stairs to the auditorium are easier than the old ones. At the tops are four unusually beautiful stained glass memorial windows. On one side is "The Good Shepherd" and with it "Ruth" the gleaner. On the other side is the sermon "Consider the Lilies" and next to it the warrior who has been "Faithful Unto Death" receiving the crown. All the window sashes were built in the factory of the Municipal Service Corporation.

A time switch is being installed so that they may preach their message nightly to all who pass along the highway.

The auditorium itself has changed beyond recognition. The former straight walls have given way to ones with large pillars from which the upper walls and ceiling slope to join in a manner suggestive of Gothic vaulting. The ceiling itself has been lowered and the beams of the gable trusses have disappeared. The pews are modern in type and are of ash with quartered oak ends and are set on a varnished hardwood floor which slopes one-half inch to the foot.

All of the woodwork and all of the furniture is of ash or oak interior. The woodwork is the product of the Athelstan Sash and Door Factory. The walls are sand finished and decorated in two shades of buff. One of the very earliest donations to the church was 200 lbs. of Alabastine and this is the material used for the tinting.

The pulpit end of the auditorium, however, is where the most amazing changes have been made. A good vestry has been made on each side in space formerly occupied by seats which were used by very few. These will also serve as Sunday School classrooms and are equipped with call bells under control of the S. S. Superintendent. Each vestry has three doors. One gives access to the auditorium, one to the minister's platform and the third at the rear leading into the choir or down to the primary classroom. The former communion rail is gone and the minister's platform, which runs the full width between the vestries, has been moved closer to the seats. The pulpit suite is of quartered oak. It consists of a large pulpit, three pulpit chairs, a communion table with two chairs and two flower stands. Two families combined to give the suite in memory of loved ones.

The choir is in three tiers and has been lowered so that the highest tier seats are on the level of the former choir floor. There are permanent seats for 22 and for special occasions this number can be doubled. The outer third of each choir row is set at an angle forward, thus permitting the whole choir to be under the control of the organist at all times and this whole choir also gives a better blending of the voices. The organist faces the choir which is placed between the console and the organ. There is a bank of six 3-way switches in a convenient place by which the organist can control nearly all the lights of the auditorium.

The choir can be entered from the minister's platform but normally will be entered by stairs on each side which come up from the rear doors of the vestries.

The arch over the choir loft has been carried out in Keene cement marked out to represent stone. The Tudor Gothic shape of this arch is repeated in the design of the pulpit furniture, the hymn boards and the vestry doors. The Keene Cement work was done by Mr. Ernest Cunningham, and reflects well upon his tradesmanship.

By going down to the rear primary class room is reached. It is particularly well lighted as two former outside doors have been made into windows.

From the primary classroom is a stairway to the basement. On the west side is the kitchen and on the east side the ladies parlor. The latter is considerably larger yet much more cozy and is floored with hardwood. There is a cupboard and cloakroom.

The kitchen is larger than formerly and is now all in one room. There are two sinks with an extra tap between and two large cupboards, tables, etc. The rear outside entrance was little used in the old church but by lowering the door and adding a brick porch this is now a good service entrance.

The lecture room remains one of the most satisfactory ones we know of. By daylight or artificial light it is quite bright. The woodwork is B. C. fir in natural finish. The ceiling is fire-proof plaster board (Gyproc) and by conforming to the slope of the auditorium floor increases ventilation and reduces the fire hazard which cost us the old church. The library has been enlarged and made much more convenient. The basement entrance is larger and can be used as a cloak room or as a small class room. Leading from it is a door to the space underneath the tower. This has been floored with cement and makes a large storeroom for equipment.

The painting, tinting and varnishing has been under the care of J. D. Bicknell and has been done with the most meticulous care and with the benefit of his long experience.

If there is one outstanding feature of the whole structure it is its strength. Where formerly 3 dry cross walls supported the lower floor there are now six concrete ones. Large concrete bases support the steel columns on which the fifteen inch I beams rest to carry the auditorium floor. Reinforced concrete pilasters bonded to the foundation and capped with large inch steel plates receive these transverse beams and also support the heavy 12 inch steel H. columns which run up inside the brick walls and carry the whole load of the roof. The timber used has been the best quality B. C. fir in large sizes and very closely spaced. This material was supplied by the Tully Lumber Co.

Much of the new brick work is set in cement mortar with iron rods reinforcing at the points of greatest stress. Beauty and strength are in the sanctuary.

THE ORGAN.

The organ has been built by Messrs. Casavant Brothers Limited of St. Hyacinthe, Que., who are world famous organ builders.

The Console is detached, English type, and consists of two manuals or keyboards and a pedal board. The exterior wood-work is of oak. The interior fittings around the keyboard are of highly polished mahogany. The pedal board is concave and radiating, the naturals being first quality maple and the sharps of ebony.

The metal pipes are made from alloys of tin and lead, coated with a special varnish to protect them against oxidation. The wooden pipes are of first quality pine, coated with shellac to protect them against moisture.

The Great Organ has six stops with a total of 390 speaking pipes, while the Swell Organ is equipped with 9 stops and 581 pipes. The Pedal Organ has two stops, a Gedeckt and Bourdon with 30 pipes.

The two manuals and pedal board are assembled through eleven couplers arranged on tablets over the Swell Organ. Besides these, there are six adjustable combinations over the Pedal board and a reversible "Great to Pedal" coupler. One balanced Swell Pedal and a Crescendo Pedal operating all the stops and couplers, complete the splendid organ installed.

The opening recital of the new organ will take place on Tuesday evening, May 17th., 1927, when Mr. Herbert, of the American United Church of Montreal, will give a recital.

THE BELL.

The bell in the tower came to be donated in rather a peculiar manner. Shortly after the church was burned, Willie Munro, age 3 years, said he was going to save his money and buy a new bell, and his little sister, age 5 years, said she would buy the rope. This was the theme of their conversation for several weeks. It so impressed their mother, Mrs. W. J. Munro and their aunt, Miss Elder, that after due consideration they decided to donate the bell in memory of loved ones gone. The bell was duly ordered from the Meneely Bell Co., Troy, N. Y. It was swung into its position in the tower on Friday, August 13th., 1926.

The bell is 1000 lbs. in weight, and of beautiful tone, much like the one which called the worshippers to service for 45 years. On one side of the bell the following words are cast, "In loving memory of Robt. Elder, 1853-1911, Mrs. Robert Elder 1849-1923, Wm. J. Munro, 1877-1923;" on the reverse side, "Presented by Elsie E. Elder, Mrs. Ruby Munro, Elsie E. Munro, age 5 years, William J. Munro, age 3 years, to the United Church, Huntingdon, Que., J. I. Hughes, M.A., B.D., Pastor, 1926."

The way of a peppy day!

GLORIOUS days are an every-day story when they begin with the right kind of breakfast. You need crisp, peppy food in the morning! Food like Kellogg's Pep!

Pep adds delightful zest to breakfast. Those golden crunchy flakes of whole wheat. How they taste! Good—and good for you!

Pep is health in a package! The peppiest food you know. Rich in nature's vitamins and strength-building elements. Contains bran—just enough to be mildly laxative. Helps prevent constipation. A great food for kiddies!

Eat Pep and have pep! Serve it often. For breakfast—for lunch or dinner. With milk or cream. And, for variety, add fresh or canned fruits or honey. Your grocer has Pep!

THE LATE MISS CATHERINE MCGINNIS.

On Wednesday, May 11th, occurred the death in Hinchinbrooke, P. Q., of Miss Catherine McGinnis, a very well known and respected member of that community. Miss McGinnis was born on May 18th, 1836, the daughter of the late Patrick McGinnis and Anne McGinnis, who were two of the earliest pioneers in the county of Huntingdon, having settled there in 1831.

Miss McGinnis received a very complete education in the district schools of her home community and also in the private school which was at that time maintained in Huntingdon village. Being naturally keen minded, she did not let her acquisition of learning stop upon leaving school but until very recently, when deterred by age, was interested in and acquainted herself with the current affairs of the world, which she took great delight in discussing.

After her formal education was completed she herself taught, first in the Quaker Settlement school, and later at Ormstown. This, her chosen work, she typically and willingly gave up to stay home and care for her now aged parents, which she did faithfully until their death. This was only one of the multitude of sacrifices, typical of her generation, which Miss McGinnis made for others.

Due to this trait, and her public spiritedness, she was, at once, one of the best known, and best beloved women of her community. Displaying an independence of thought and action, unique for her generation, she was a strong force in the establishing of the first Catholic Parish in Hinchinbrooke, and later, when fire destroyed the humble church which had work had built, again showed the dauntless spirit of the pioneer, and worked equally hard for the building of the second and present church. In short, her spirit and soul can best be portrayed by the powerful lines of Wordsworth: "A perfect woman, nobly planned, To warn, to comfort and command."

Due to her extreme age she has been for some years under the constant and painstaking care of her nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. John McGinnis, who, with Edward McGinnis of Montreal, Mrs. Katie Nolan of Chateaugay, Mrs. Minnie Costello of Yonkers, N. Y., Mrs. John Leary of Holyoke, Mass., Daniel Duffrin of Saranac, and John Duffrin of Malone, all sorrowfully survive her. To the all nephews and nieces, the sympathy of the community is extended.

NOTICE All persons having claims, or owing money, to the Estate of the late Oliver Rabidoux, kindly call before 15th and arrange settlement.

THE MURDER OF ROGER ACKROYD.

(Continued from Page 6) comfortable and upset, and there was plainly some mystery in the background. I judged her to be a woman quite unused to deception of any kind, and consequently rendered acutely uneasy when forced to practice it. A child could have seen through her. But it was also clear that she had no intention of telling me anything further. What ever the mystery centering around Ursula Bourne might be, I was not going to learn it through Mrs. Folliott.
