Petrofina VP defends shares deal

MONTREAL (CP) — A Petrofina Canada Inc. executive bought 500 shares of the company the day before trading was halted in advance of an announcement that Petro-Canada would take over the Montreal-based oil company.

But John Dodd, vice-president of manufacturing, said Wednesday he had no inside knowledge of Petro-Canada's $120-a-share takeover bid when he bought and then sold the shares 10 days later for a profit of $11,375.

Information disclosed in a notice of a special meeting of shareholders dated April 18 showed Dodd paid $87.50 a share Jan. 29 and sold the block Feb. 8 at $110.25 a share.

The notice to shareholders also described trading in Petrofina shares and the exercising of options by other company officers and directors.

"If I had known a day later I would never have bought it," Dodd said in a telephone interview from his home. "It's kind of embarrassing."

Dodd, a Petrofina employee for 25 years, said he has always played the stock market as a hobby.

"It's no big deal," he added. "I certainly hope nobody tries to read something into this that doesn't exist."

He noted that had he known about the takeover he could have bought 50,000 shares and made considerably more money.

"Would a guy in my position compromise himself for $10,000?"

He added that he also exercised some of his stock options, which Petrofina offers key employees as incentive, at $23 and $27 a share.

Dodd defended his boss, Petrofina chairman Pierre Nadeau, who made $300,000 by exercising stock options in Petrofina less than a month before the takeover announcement.

RCMP promises no more while taps in use

OTTAWA (CP) — Documents made public Wednesday showed that while two former RCMP commissioners were assuring politicians that the force didn't tap telephones in criminal investigations, officers in the field were using wiretaps extensively and had begged their seniors to bring policy in line with practice.

"It can be unequivocally stated that our members do in fact tap telephones in the face of official policy to the contrary," said a report written by senior non-commissioned officers and field officers in October, 1972.

The policy since 1959 had been that criminal investigators did not use wiretaps. The reality, the report said, was that officers got telephone company employees or police from other forces to carry out their wiretaps, or simply ignored the policy and quietly tapped telephones themselves.

The report said that officers did this because their superiors expected investigative results and wiretaps produced results. The report urged the force to bring its policy into line with practice and give field officers protection and support.

The report was produced before a special hearing of a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing which called former RCMP commissioners W. L. Higgitt and Maurice Nadon to the stand.

Warren Allmand, a Liberal MP who was solicitor general when the report was written, will testify tonight.

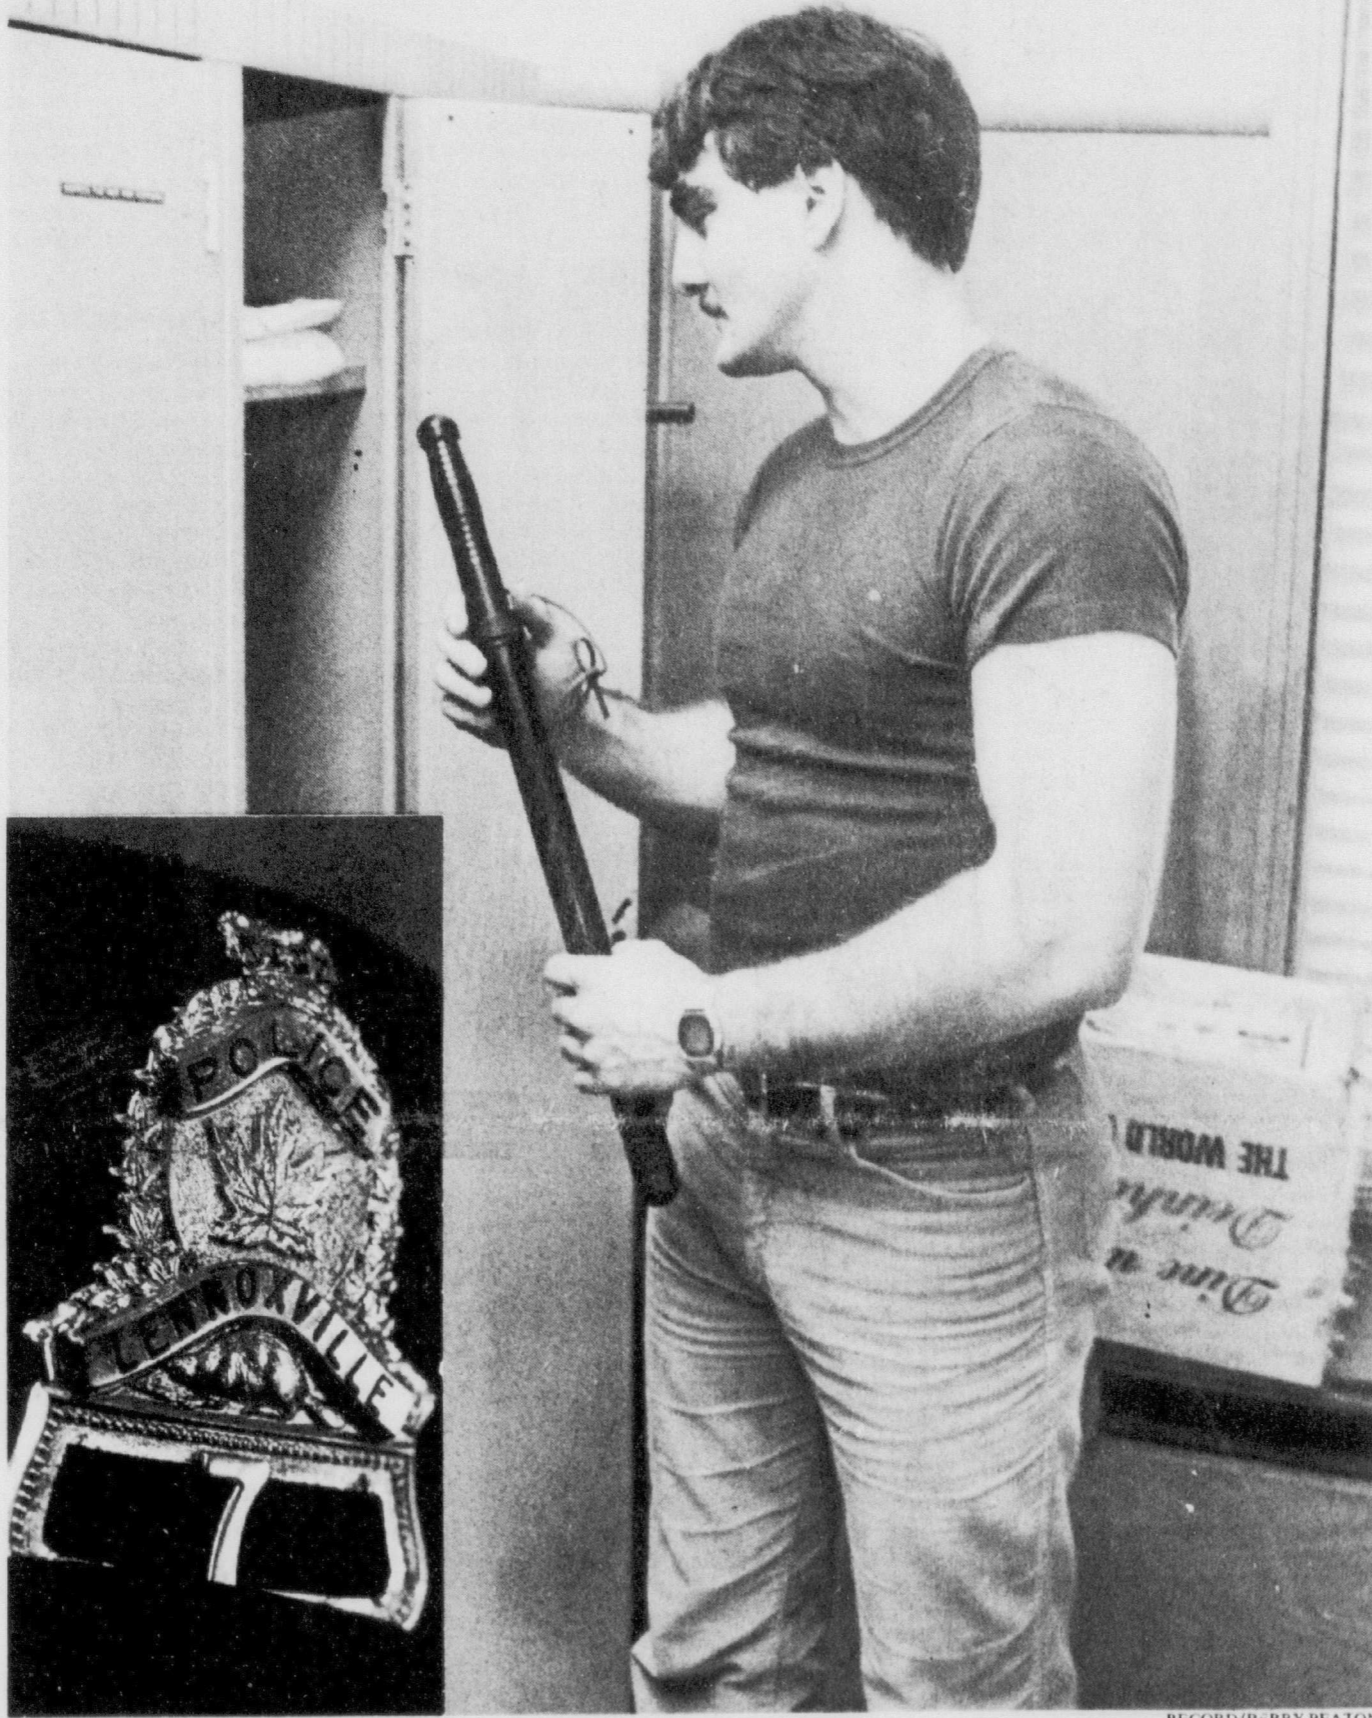

DENIED TAPS

Commission counsel Brian Crane noted that both Nadon and Higgitt told the Commons justice committee in 1973 that the force did not use wiretaps in criminal investigations.

Crane added that by this time, wiretapping in drug, fraud and other criminal cases had "become virtually institutionalized and this situation was known to senior officials at headquarters."

This, said Crane, "casts doubt" on testimony before the justice committee by Higgitt, Nadon and Allmand in 1973.

And now there are seven. Constable Christian Roy hangs up his night stick for the last time as the Lennoxville police force is reduced to seven men.

Lennoxville police protest layoff

By Charles Bury

LENNOXVILLE — Police constable Christian Roy helped arrest a burglary suspect here early yesterday morning, then at the end of his shift, he was laid off. The Lennoxville Policemen's Brotherhood called a press conference yesterday to protest Roy's dismissal and denounce town council's attitude towards current contract negotiations, a recent Quebec Police Commission report, and council's general indifference to police matters.

The burglary suspect, whose name was not released, was found inside the CIL agricultural products store, trying to find the money. He was discovered after Roy and his partner spotted a broken window at the side of the building. A second suspect escaped, but Roy may never have a chance to track him down.

Christian Roy is the victim in the many-sided dispute which has simmered for several years before it came to a boil with his lay-off.

"Our contract specifies eight policemen plus the chief," Richard Roy (not related) explains. Now they have cut us down to seven, while the new police commission report recommends eight plus an investigator and the chief."

The brotherhood also claims the force will be unable to provide adequate protection with the reduction in

Bureaucrats' pay hike unjustified — Broadbent

OTTAWA (CP) — Some top bureaucrats are getting raises as high as 26 per cent — "completely unjustifiable to anyone who has a sense of fairness" — New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent said Wednesday.

He was referring to a 26-per-cent increase in the minimum rate in the salary range for lowest-level deputy ministers. Their increase lifts the minimum rate to $66,800 from $53,100.

The maximum rises to $78,800 from $71,700.

Treasury Board President Don Johnston accused Broadbent in the Commons of performing "arithmetic acrobatics" and speaking "utter nonsense" in referring to the 26-per-cent raise.

However, treasury board spokesmen said the calculations were accurate, although the high percentage applies to only a small number of bureaucrats. There are about 100 public servants in the three levels of deputy minister.

The deputy ministers are among some 4,500 senior public servants covered by the new salary range announced by treasury board and retroactive to April 1.

Treasury board says most of them are getting increases of 9.5 per cent and Johnston emphasized that in responding to Broadbent. The NDP leader said the government appears to be helping those who do not need it and called for creation of a fair prices commission.

He insisted the pay increases, which lift the maximum for those in the upper crust of the public service to $93,600 annually, are unjustifiable because they exceed increases given average public servants.

Rights group 'witness' sheds light on slayings

ATLANTA (AP) — Police say they will be able to determine quickly whether a civil rights group that has come up with an unidentified "witness" has solved some of the 25 slayings of young blacks that have plagued Atlanta over the last 21 months.

"I don't consider the nature of the information something that will take a long time" to evaluate, said Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown.

He did not say how long it might take, but added that as of late Wednesday police did not have enough evidence to arrest anyone.

Roy Innis, staff director of the Congress of Racial Equality, announced Wednesday his investigators had found a "psychopath" they believed responsible for the slayings.

Innis said the investigators had also found a witness who could link the suspect to at least six of the killings. He did not identify the witness or disclose details of the group's evidence.

However, an editor who spent five hours Monday interviewing the witness said he felt the person's story was "plausible."

"I'm emphasizing that I'm using the word plausible — not believable or anything else — but plausible," said John Schaffner, managing editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

"I wouldn't literally call this person a witness, but it is a person that possibly might be able to shed some light" on the investigation, Schaffner said.

"We are very convinced we have broken this case, and we can prove it," Innis said, producing an envelope which he said contained a picture of the suspect.

Innis, fighting to retain control of the fading civil rights group, would not make the picture public.

However, the New York Daily News quoted Larry Mitchell, a spokesman for Innis, as saying the CORE suspect was a black man. Mitchell added the group's investigation indicated a conspiracy involving whites.

Innis said his investigators would "collar" their suspect by 1 p.m. Saturday if police had not arrested anyone or made some progress by then. Innis said CORE had the person under surveillance.

"I certainly consider it (Innis' information) important," said John Glover, special agent in charge of the Atlanta FBI office. "We will be checking it out."

Meanwhile, Brown said police are trying to figure out the latest wrinkle in the slayings. Three of the last four victims have been adults. All 21 prior victims were children.

He said the young adults' deaths were assigned to the special police unit investigating the slayings after evaluation of various characteristics of the deaths, including the method of killing and where the bodies were found.

Trudeau: Public support high for Grits

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives were ridiculed in the Commons on Wednesday for what the Liberals saw as an attempt to stop time's relentless march, while a new Gallup poll shows the ruling party's popularity is rising.

To a chorus of giggles from the Liberals, Justice Minister Jean Chretien poked fun at Conservative constitutional proposals which would mean patriation without an amending formula. He called them an attempt to turn the hands of time back by 50 years. "So, we're back in 1931," Chretien said, referring to futile federal efforts then to reach agreement with provinces on an amending formula.

"Nobody's interested in being back there."

The Conservatives proposed Tuesday that the British North America Act be brought to Canada but said Prime Minister Trudeau's suggested changes should be implemented only if accepted by seven provinces representing 50 per cent of the population.

But Chretien noted that Trudeau's proposals for reaching agreement on a new amending formula are contained in the sections that would be submitted for provincial approval under the Tory proposal.

If the package was rejected by the provinces, the 114-year-old BNA Act would come to Canada without any means to amend it, he said.

Meanwhile both parties were wondering what keeps the Liberal party bobbing so high in the opinion polls.

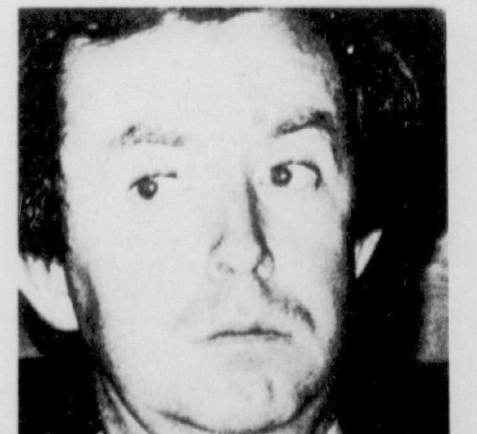

The latest Gallup, taken March 19-21, shows a Liberal rebound to 46 per cent of popular support among decided voters, up four points from a poll a month earlier and two points higher than the February, 1980, election that returned them to power with a majority.

The Conservatives, apparently feeling the effects of a divisive party convention in late February where Joe Clark's leadership got only half-hearted support, dipped to 35 per cent from 37 per cent a month earlier. The NDP dropped one point to 18 per cent.

By coincidence, the release of the latest Gallup came the same day two new Liberal MPs, Jack Burghardt of London West and Bennett Campbell from Cardigan, P.E.I., claimed the Commons seats they won in two byelections last week.

"Incumbent governments don't generally win byelections," said Industry Minister Herb Gray.

Pork producers request federal stabilization fees

OTTAWA (CP) — Hog farmers should receive about $14 in federal stabilization for every pig they sent to market in the last 12 months because prices were below the cost of production, Tom Meredith, president of the Canadian Pork Council, said Wednesday.

Meredith, who operates a 300-sow operation near Great Valley, N.S., said in an interview the council will ask Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan to make the stabilization payments to help farmers, many of whom are in dire straits because of low market prices in the last two years.

The council wants the stabilization level set at 95 per cent of the average market price during the last five years instead of the usual 90 per cent to compensate for the low prices.

The council wants the stabilization set at $8.35 a hundredweight and that payments be made up to 5,000 per family farm. Weiner pigs those sold at about eight to 10 weeks of age, should also be eligible for the payments.

That would mean a federal payout of about $180 million compared to $52 million paid to farmers for the 12 months period ending in March, 1980.

When asked about the council's request, Whelan said there was no way the farmers would get a 95-per-cent payment. Miffed at pork farmers for not reducing production when prices dropped sharply last year, Whelan has said Ottawa could be left with a $140 million pork stabilization bill.

FASTER PAYMENTS
Meredith also said the Agricultural Stabilization

Board should work with the provincial members of the pork council to speed up payments to farmers. Payments for the 1979-80 stabilization were finally completed in the last two months.

He said his council would like to see a better federal stabilization plan, geared to regional needs, made available to producers with regular payments in times of low prices.

Such a program could lead to provinces getting out of the stabilization business, he said. Such programs have encouraged farmers to maintain higher levels of production than were appropriate to low prices.

Those programs were developed by provincial governments which wanted to maintain a high production level in case the federal government established a national marketing plan. A province's share of the national production quota under such a plan would depend on past production levels.

Egg farmers killing off hens

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Egg Marketing Agency has no authority to reduce the price paid to farmers for a dozen eggs as a means of eliminating a massive over-supply of eggs, says Jean Brassard, general manager of the producer-run agency.

"That's not in our power," Brassard told a news conference called by the agency Wednesday to clarify its decision to pay farmers to kill up to 1.5 million hens to reduce temporary over-production in the industry.

Brassard was reacting to a Consumers Association of Canada demand that the agency reduce egg prices to consumers as a means of getting rid of an over-supply.

But Brassard said the agency has no control over retail egg prices. Producer returns are determined strictly by a formula designed to ensure that farmers recovers production costs plus a reasonable profit. As a result, the agency could only reduce the producer price if it could also reduce farm costs.

Quebecair strike over

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebecair ground workers returned to work Wednesday afternoon, ending an illegal walkout that began the day before.

The strike slowed check-in of passengers and baggage at ticket counters but did not cause any delays in the departure of flights, spokesmen for the regional airline said.

But one flight leaving Montreal's Dorval airport was delayed for three hours when the airline received a bomb threat. Police examined the aircraft and found no evidence of a bomb.

Record profit for Air Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada made a record $57-million profit in 1980 and returned a dividend of $13.2 million to the federal government for the third consecutive year, the airline announced Wednesday.

In the company's annual report Air Canada president Claude Taylor said the performance "was the result of efficient operation, sound planning and competitive buoyancy ... achieved while keeping domestic fares substantially below those prevailing in most parts of the world."

Doctors to strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Doctors at St. Sauveur hospital, in the northwestern Quebec town of Val d'Or, gave notice Wednesday they will withdraw their services for an indefinite period, joining a series of slowdowns and mass resignations that have crippled hospital services in the region.

Reginald Grenier, director general of the only hospital in Val d'Or, 420 kilometres northwest of Montreal, said in a telephone interview that St. Sauveur's 18 doctors are tired of working long hours for pay that is lower than in southern centres like Montreal.

CBC strikers get 33,000 names

MONTREAL (CP) — Striking CBC journalists in Quebec plan to present Communications Minister Francis Fox with a petition today bearing the signatures of 33,000 Quebecers who want the network to resume contract negotiations.

Talks between the 200 journalists, on strike since last October, and Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language service, broke down March 15 when management refused to consider a union counter-proposal to its final contract offer.

New icebreaker gets OK

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has authorized the design of a 100,000-horsepower icebreaker for the coast guard which would be capable of cutting through eight-foot-thick ice in the Arctic, Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin announced Wednesday.

It is billed as the world's most powerful icebreaker — bigger than the 75,000-horsepower, nuclear-powered Soviet vessels Arktika and Sabir. The United States has two 60,000-horsepower icebreakers.

A pill for alcoholics

MONTREAL (CP) — A city psychologist believes he has found a pill to take the joy out of drinking for alcoholics.

Dr. Zalman Amit of Concordia University says the pill will let a person drink all night long without feeling high. And when booze has no exhilarating effect, he explains, it should be easier to make alcoholics stop drinking.

While he doesn't present his findings as a miracle cure for alcoholism, he thinks the odds are good that the drug, called H-102, will some day be part of the standard treatment for alcoholics.

Radio Quebec won't pay

MONTREAL (CP) — Radio-Quebec, the provincially-funded educational television network, says it will not pay for Quebec election results supplied by Tele-Metropole Inc. because the computer had given out misleading information.

The election results were garbled early on election night April 13, apparently because of a faulty program supplied by the computer programming firm I. P. Sharp.

The Tele-Metropole version of early returns erroneously showed the Union Nationale heading for a second-place finish behind the Parti Quebecois and in one riding had the Marxist-Leninist candidate leading by a wide margin.

New pension rules announced

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced new rules Wednesday aimed, among other things, at drawing some of the billions of dollars resting in pension, insurance, annuity and other funds into oil and natural gas investments.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde told reporters he hopes to reverse the traditional hesitation of managers of such funds to invest in the petroleum industry.

Life insurance companies and pension funds and the like control billions of dollars. They are tightly regulated, but are permitted to invest a percentage of their total capital in stocks.

Can't identify assailant

MONTREAL (CP) — CTV television reporter Del Archer was unable Wednesday to identify the Montreal policeman who beat his cameraman unconscious during a demonstration on the night of Quebec's sovereignty-association referendum.

Archer, testifying at a special one-day session of the Quebec Police Commission, failed to pick the officer out of a line-up of 12 riot squad members who helped disperse demonstrators last May 20.

The commission last year held a lengthy series of hearings into police conduct during the demonstration, but none of almost 60 witnesses was able to positively identify the officer who clubbed cameraman Gary Dobrovolsky in the back of the head.

Municipalities want income tax

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Union of Municipalities adopted a resolution Wednesday which would have taxpayers paying municipal income tax as well as property taxes to bolster the finances of cities and towns.

The resolution — similar to one it refused to pass three years ago — was presented by Beauveville Mayor Guy Bolduc during a morning workshop at the association's annual convention, but was only passed in the afternoon following a search for someone to second the motion.

The proposal was first presented to the organization in 1978 by Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau who failed to push the motion through.

Stroller report delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers Association of Canada has prepared a report for the federal government outlining the shortcomings of some of the strollers sold in Canada but the report will not be made public for some time.

An official of the consumer and corporate affairs department said Wednesday that the report won't be released until federal officials have discussed it with manufacturers and association representatives.

Jim Black, director of the department's product safety branch, said the meeting is expected to be held within three weeks after strollers not dealt with in the study have been tested.

Hundreds suffer in textile workplace

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Officials from the Quebec government's work health and safety commission and United Textile Workers of America met Wednesday to discuss a union study claiming hundreds of workers at the Wabasso Inc. mill suffer from chronic respiratory problems.

Commission officials told a news conference earlier in the day that they were surprised at reports last week which carried results of the study, since only three cases of byssinosis have been registered with the commission.

The study prepared for the union showed about half of those who work in the mill's areas where raw cotton is carded and woven are affected by the disease to varying degrees. The mill employs about 1,000.

No delay of F-18

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne says the latest bugs in the F-18A fighter program won't delay delivery of the aircraft to the Canadian Forces.

"There is no question of delay in the manufacturing of the F-18 fighter," he said in the Commons Wednesday.

He was responding to New Democratic defence critic Terry Sargeant who said news reports quote the aircraft manufacturer as saying there may be delays because of the latest problems. Delivery of F-18s to the armed forces is to begin in October, 1982.

'No Japanese dumping' promised

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is prepared to act swiftly if necessary to prevent this country from becoming the dumping ground for Japanese cars, Industry Minister Herb Gray promised Wednesday.

"We have a range of options that are available to us under Canadian law," he told the Commons.

"We have actively reviewed all these options in consultation with other departments like finance and external affairs and with the assistance of my colleagues in finance and external affairs I'm ready to make recommendations to cabinet very swiftly if the need arises for unilateral action."

PetroCan prices coming

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers face higher prices for gasoline and home heating oil later this week when the government imposes a special levy to pay for the takeover of Petrofina Canada Inc. in February by government-owned Petro-Canada.

Government sources said Wednesday the levy is expected to be announced in the Commons today, the last day Parliament meets before a belated 18-day Easter break.

The levy may increase prices by about half a cent a litre or 2½ cents a gallon.

Economic growth slow

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will likely only be able to sustain an economic growth rate of 2.5 per cent a year until 1985, down from an earlier forecast of four per cent, a Conference Board of Canada study said Wednesday.

The study brings up to date and extends a 1979 study which covered the years between 1979 and 1983. The current forecast is also well below the predictions of the late 1960s and early 1970s that Canada's potential for economic growth was between five and 5.5 per cent, the report said.

"The results confirm that the Canadian economy will not be able to regain in the foreseeable future the growth rates once considered to be normal," said Charles Barrett, board vice-president and economic research group director.

Irish riots worse

BELFAST (Reuter) — The worst rioting in a week of street battles in Northern Ireland broke out Wednesday night in Londonderry and Belfast as IRA hunger-striker Bobby Sands drew closer to death.

The Londonderry violence followed the funeral of two Roman Catholic youths run over and killed by a British army truck during a riot there last Sunday.

Young mourners set fire to hijacked trucks and cars and hurled homemade bombs and rocks at British troops. Several soldiers were hit by gasoline bombs, and the troops retaliated with plastic bullets.

M-F loans need discussion

OTTAWA (CP) — Further drafting and discussions on agreements involving Massey-Ferguson, various lenders and the federal government have to be completed before a federal guarantee of a stock issue, part of the firm's financial reorganization, is signed, Industry Minister Herb Gray told the Commons Wednesday.

However, Gray said the Toronto-based multinational firm was aware of the federal government's terms and "I understand they are satisfactory to Massey-Ferguson."

Gray sidestepped a question from Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative from the Ontario riding of York-Peel, about whether there was a Friday deadline for signing the agreement after which the "entire financing for Massey-Ferguson will break down and there may be as many as 6,000 Canadian jobs at stake."

Art buff to examine $12 Renoir

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec provincial police have been called in to investigate the authenticity of a painting alleged to be a work of the 19th century French artist Auguste Renoir.

Police spokesman Germain Gagnon said the force's economic crime squad is investigating the possibility of "irregularities" with regard to the purchase and possible resale of the oil painting, entitled Woman By the Sea Shore.

Gagnon said the painting and all relevant documents related to steps taken to verify its authenticity by owner Jean-Marie Patry have been handed over to the squad. Patry, who bought the oil painting three years ago for $12 at a Quebec City second-hand store, was told by an art gallery owner and an art restoration expert that it was a genuine Renoir.

Patry, who describes himself as an amateur collector of antiques and art, quit his job as a provincial civil servant last December to devote time to verifying the painting's authenticity. He said an art specialist at

New York's Metropolitan Museum — which claims to have the original Woman By the Sea Shore although its authenticity has been questioned — told Patry his painting, if proven to be genuine, could be worth about $3 million.

Quebec police became involved in the authenticity dispute as a result of a complaint by Jean-Francois Deschenes, a local art dealer and part-owner of La Firme Encadrement Sainte-Anne. Deschenes, who had offered to finance the cost of experts to look at the oil painting, said that after examining the painting, he became convinced it is a reproduction.

"From the beginning of this story, I had serious doubts," he said. "It seemed incredible that such a work of Renoir could be found in Quebec and that someone discovered it so accidentally."

Deschenes added that Woman By the Sea Shore is Renoir's "most important painting because it marks the end of the impressionist period and a turning point in the artist's works."

Protection will suffer — police brotherhood

Cst. Richard Roy, Lennoxville Police Brotherhood spokesman, says protection will suffer after the layoff.

manpower. "All our non-emergency calls will take longer to respond to," Richard Roy says. "We won't let anyone down, but we just won't be able to act as quickly all the time."

Another police complaint is a poor working environment. The Lennoxville station is a small room on the second floor of the town hall. There are no cells, no interrogation room, no toilet, and only three chairs.

"According to the rules of evidence," says another constable, "we aren't supposed to question anyone in the presence of others as this would influence what they say. How can you do that in here?" he asked, waving his hand around the 15 by 20 foot room.

The lack of cells mean the town is frequently without police protection. "Whenever we have to put someone behind bars, we have to drive them to the Winter Street jail in Sherbrooke, and by the time we turn the prisoner over and fill out all the forms, we will have been away at least an hour and a half," said Cst. Jean Riendeau. "And it's the same if we want to give someone a breathalyzer test," he adds, "except for those it takes over two hours at the QPF headquarters."

Council has also refused to send at least three officers to the Quebec Police College at Nicolet, according to the policemen.

Lennoxville police are currently able to pursue only about 20 per cent of the criminal complaints they receive because of the manpower situation and a blanket ban on overtime for investigation, say the constables.

Brotherhood spokesman Richard Roy says several constables were at a meeting where two councillors on the town police committee said they would "close up the department before long."

Meanwhile in the room next door to the police headquarters, Lennoxville council is spending $20,000 redecorating the former Women's Institute room, about three times the size of the station, as a new council chamber and installing air conditioning — for the council room only.

Christian Roy, who only had a few days to go before his second lay-off-terminated probationary period ended, almost became a permanent Lennoxville policeman, but not quite.

"I hope I can get my job back," the Lennoxville native said yesterday. "I really like police work. I hope they'll get the budget to hire me again. I'm really sad about it. I always did my best."

The Lennoxville Police "station" is upstairs from a five-room apartment which is home for a retired town employee. Suspects must be sent to jail in Sherbrooke.

Gleanings

By GEORGE MacLAREN

St. Francis flood dates back to 1911

I have just received the microfilms of The Record for the year 1911. Reading old newspapers can be addictive. Once again I am struck by how familiar many of the old headlines sound.

How about this one from The Record of February 11, 1911: "An Appeal to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, The one Man Who Can Save Canada."

The articles covered by this headline were reprinted from the Montreal Daily Star and dealt with the question of a reciprocity treaty with the U.S.A. One sentence in particular stands out: "By every means of communication, word is pouring into this office that men of all classes in all sections of the Dominion agree with us (1) that the country is in imminent peril, and (2) that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the one man who can avert disaster."

Those of you who are worried that all our young people are leaving for Alberta might be interested in an advertisement that appeared in the same issue. It began as follows: "Central Alberta — Farms For Canadians On Easy Terms."

Second language instruction for English-speaking children is not a new issue as the following headline from The Record of February 20, 1911 witnesses: "Teaching of French in Public Schools. Question Dealt With At Meeting Of Protestant Committee."

Transformation of our natural resources at home was also an issue in 1911 as evidenced by this headline from the March 11th issue of that year: "Premier Says Government Will Do All Possible To Foster Manufacture Of Paper In Quebec — Products Of Forests Should Not Be Exported Before Being Manufactured — Present Policy Meets With Approval Of People Of Province."

Citizens of Knowlton were concerned about their local government. A story in The Record of March 15 was headlined as follows: "Citizens Association Of Knowlton. Representative Citizens Organize To Look After Welfare Of Village."

The story led off: "A meeting of the citizens of Knowlton was held at the County House yesterday afternoon to talk over affairs relative to the welfare of the village and to form an association to carry on this work."

In a letter to the editor published March 28, 1911 a game warden flayed public indifference: "Sir — In reference to 'Old Hunter's' complaint which appeared in The Record of March 24, he says the game wardens are asleep. Not so. It is the public that has been sleeping all this time. The game wardens are more than willing to act, but they are not willing to fight the public and the magistrates and the poacher all at the same time."

Would it really be spring without a Richmond flood story? The Record of April 15, 1911, didn't think so.

"Cellars Flooded At Richmond". The Record reported as follows: "The ice in the St. Francis River started to move Friday evening jamming below the bridge and causing the water to rise very fast. The cellars and yards of a number of houses and stores are filled with water and preparations for a flood are being made by all who are not above the high water mark."

Back in 1981 Canada is still in peril and the St. Francis flows on.

Easter pets: Few people give them proper care

By Patricia Tracy

SHERBROOKE — Last Friday, Tammy Thompson's friend bought her a fluffy baby duck as an Easter present. Very carefully she took it home, fed it the prescribed pellets and gave it a little bath. Because the duck was so young, she avoided handling it excessively.

Saturday night, the duck was dead.

Tammy is not alone. Every year hundreds of well-intentioned Sherbrooke residents are attracted to local pet shops' displays of fluffy baby chicks, ducks and rabbits. Most of these animals die after they are brought home. The rest are returned to the Society for the Protection of Animals when they cease to become cute and fluffy.

Tammy, her mother Shirley and her grandmother, Mrs. Rodell say they would never buy another Easter duck. Had the animal lived, they planned to give it to a local farmer where it could be properly cared for. Most of the people they know who bought chicks have seen them die. When Mrs. Rodell's grandson chose a chick from one local pet shop, he found four animals in the cage already dead.

"It's not a good idea to sell those little animals," Shirley Thompson says. "People think raising a little chick is a big joke, but it's not."

Mrs. Rodell added she had a friend who bought an Easter turkey with the hope of raising it to be Christmas dinner. I wish them luck, she said.

Paulina Grant, spokesperson for the SPA says most of the chicks and ducks die because they are temperature-sensitive. Young chicks need a constant temperature of 25 degrees C. Few homes can provide this.

"People do not take into consideration what is involved in caring for a chick," Grant says. "They need to be fed every few hours."

Grant adds no matter how careful children are with their new pets, the internal organs are easily damaged by improper handling.

The sale of Easter animals is governed by municipal by-laws and several cities have recently put a law onto the books prohibiting the business. Sherbrooke has no such legislation.

The Society for the Protection of Animals has tried to approach individual pet shop owners asking them to stop Easter sales, but their efforts have been unsuccessful. "They are profit making organizations," says Grant. "And if you ask them to stop, they have to have other ways to make their money."

One store operator met the SPA halfway and issued a sheet of instructions on caring for chicks and ducks to his customers. Pellets and a care list came with Tammy's duck, but according to her mother, the photocopied sheet was so blurry, the instructions were impossible to read.

Last year the SPA received 10 rabbits, 40 chickens and 10 ducks after their owners decided the Easter pets took more care than they were prepared to give. They expect close to the same number this year.

The animals, especially the chicks, are usually in bad condition, Grant says. Many of them are already sick and some are traumatized to the point they have to be put to sleep. Rabbits fare better than pets of the poultry variety. "They are mammals and perhaps people have a better sense of the care they need," she adds.

Traditional Mohawks reject claim

GANIENKEH — Confrontation between traditional Mohawks and the Clinton County, New York legislature was temporarily delayed last night, when the legislature postponed an attempt to oust 60 Mohawk families from local woodlands. The Mohawks have announced they will refuse to go, and are prepared for siege or armed resistance.

A resolution calling for county repossession of 5,700 acres is still expected to pass unanimously when the legislature next convenes. Voting was held off last night due to a strong Mohawk presence in the council chamber where traditional leaders testified against the repossession. The county claims to want the land for recreational use. The Mohawks have leased it since 1977, tax exempt, from the state department of environmental conservation. The lease is for "consideration" not cash and was negotiated in settlement of a prolonged, sometimes violent land treaty dispute that began eight years ago. Over the past four years the Mohawks have developed this land and 300 additional acres they purchased outright into a self-sufficient organic farming community.

Clinton County has opposed the Mohawk settlement all along, led by district attorney Joseph Kelley, who believes it hampers local economic development.

The repossession attempt began only one day after traditional Mohawks at nearby Akwesasne were given permission to file suit against Reynolds Aluminum, the region's biggest employer, over illness and property damage caused by 20 years of fluoride pollution. Ganienkewarriors have defended and supplied Akwesasne for two years now while Clinton County maintains roadblocks in hopes of arresting several traditional leaders there, on misdemeanor charges resulting from a jurisdictional conflict.

Via announces Quebec run

MONTREAL — Via Rail Canada has announced that the Rapido train leaving Montreal for Quebec City (Sainte Foy) at 08:00 will arrive about one hour later between May 4 and 29, with the exception of May 9 and 10, because of trackwork along the line.

Train 20 will be rerouted via Victoriaville and Richmond. Passengers for Drummondville will be transported by taxi from St-Hyacinthe. Those who would normally board train 20 at Drummondville will be transported by taxi to Victoriaville.

Sticker blues

I know. It's supposedly all my fault. But when the sign on the door says business hours are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and closed from 12 until 1 p.m. for lunch, one could reasonably assume that by arriving at 11:45 a.m. or 3:45 p.m. would be reasonable and the doors would still be open.

They weren't. Twice the guard locked the door in my face as I rushed into the Licence Bureau to purchase a 1981 licence sticker, obnoxious article that it is.

"No, I can't let you in," he deigned to state. "We must lock the doors early so that all the people inside will be served, you see." That was the first time. The second time he snarled, "you're late again and I can't let you in. Can't you see there are people to pass before noon and we go to dinner at that time."

In the name of all that's holy, and it would seem there isn't much left holy these days, why on earth don't they simply state on their sign that the doors close 15 minutes before the hour? Wouldn't that save a multitude of fool's errands, as folks rush from work, their forms and money in hand, to find a leering security man righteously looking after the appetites of his faithful bureaucrats behind the counters who would just as soon stop working at 11:45 a.m. anyway?

I went back at 1 p.m. sharp. This was my third trip to that portal of torment. I was told to tear off a little blue paper and wait until my number was called. Now that was the most ridiculous thing I had ever seen. There were as many people behind the counters as there were waiting, doing whatever is necessary to get themselves psyched up for the next horde, and after about five minutes, a lady called to me and said, "You with the little blue paper, yes, you, come here." "But, you didn't call my number," I replied. "Come anyway," she commanded, and taking one of a dozen pens, laid at the ready beside her, she curtly required my phone number and then to my amazement informed me that the cost of insurance would be less since it was now April 15th.

My first notion was to compliment her on her timeliness considering that three trips to the bureau had consumed approximately $7.50 worth of gas, not to mention the incalculable cost to my temper and general sense of balance in this province. While these benign functionaries moved as if in a daze through the mysterious room of dividers and machines, the thought that this could be the future for anyone wanting any type of form or service descended on me like a black cloud that threatened to unleash my rage once again. With a great effort, I signed on the dotted line and waited while personnel and customer alike hung in limbo straining every muscle for the first click from the computer which has the final word.

A wry old gentleman accepted my money, produced my change and handed over the green sticker, together with a new registration form. All was well at last, and I stalked by the security guard with what I hoped was an air of exultation and class. But, a peekout of one lowered eyelid revealed that he had definitely won this round, judging by his smug expression of satisfaction as I tripped on a corner of a rug and just barely managed to regain my balance and hurtle out the door. My last sincere wish for these people and their democratic approach to public service was that the fleas of ten thousand camels would infest their armpits and the guard would break out in warts in unspeakable places. Next year, I'll send for my licence through the mail — beginning this August.

Historian blames Wilson for lost deal

PARIS (AP) — An American historian says that at the end of the First World War, Soviet leader Vladimir Lenin offered to surrender four-fifths of Russian territory in exchange for formal recognition of his Communist regime and economic aid from the West.

U.S. President Woodrow Wilson rejected the offer, thereby missing a chance "that would have created historic conditions in which no Russian Communist regime could ever have embarked on a campaign of world conquest," says Hungarian-born professor Eugene Gonda.

In his book, The Versailles Conference, published here this week, the 72-year-old historian says that in secret negotiations with an American emissary to the Kremlin, Lenin offered in 1919 to accept creation of Allied-sponsored non-Communist states in the Baltic region, the area of Archangel, western Byelorussia, half of the Ukraine, Crimea, the Caucasus, the Ural mountains and the whole of Siberia.

In exchange, the Allies were to recognize the Communist regime and help its postwar reconstruction.

Gonda said he based his work largely on unpublished private papers, archives and official records of the Versailles conference.

The historian blamed Wilson for the Allies' rejection of Lenin's secret offer because the American leader feared being accused of "making a deal" with the Bolsheviks at a time when American, British and French expeditionary forces were engaged in a vain attempt to restore the Czarist regime by force.

ENDS INVOLVEMENT

After the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, Russia had ended its involvement in the war against Germany under the humiliating 1918 treaty of Brest-Litovsk which took much Russian territory. Anger over the poor terms contributed to civil war in Russia, complicated by foreign intervention.

Gonda said Lenin's proposals for ending the foreign intervention were first submitted in December 1918 by Maxim Litvinov, later to become Soviet foreign minister. Wilson secretly sent William Bullitt to Moscow to learn details of the Soviet proposals, Gonda said. Bullitt, who later became the first U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, spent six days in intensive personal discussions with Lenin.

Wilson rejected the Soviet proposals — without making them public or even submitting them to the other Allies — because "the fanatics of a new (anti-Communist) crusade were convinced that Lenin was playing a double game to conceal a secret plan for worldwide red revolution," Gonda wrote.

By 1920, the Czarist troops and their allies were crushed and Lenin no longer needed to make any concessions to put an end to the foreign intervention against the Soviet regime.

Gonda's book contains a lengthy study of Lenin's personality which, the author says, indicates his peace offer was sincere.

Letters Defence costs Canadians $20 per week

Editor:

The world is spending $500 billion this year on arms and the military. "Defence" costs the average Canadian family of four $20 per week. The world stockpile of nuclear weapons is now capable of laying waste the world and annihilating us all, several times over.

At a recent conference in Victoria, on "Thinking the Unthinkable", it was estimated that an attack on either of the great powers would result in the immediate death of more than 100 million persons in the country attacked and neighbouring countries, and of many millions more from nuclear contamination of themselves, the air, water and food supplies. Most of the survivors would be maimed, their world wrecked.

The government tells us that its increasing expenditure on arms is intended for "defence". But, since there is no defence against nuclear war, such expenditure is offensive. An increasing number of people regard such "defence" as dangerous and totally immoral, but, on account of Canada's tax system, they are obliged to pay for what they regard as evil, and contrary to conscience.

In times of military conscription, exemption from service in the military can be claimed on grounds of conscience, and alternate service is approved. It should be equally possible to claim exemption from paying for war preparation, and an alternative provided.

The Peace Tax Fund campaign seeks legislation so that those who believe that war preparations are wrong, can elect that an appropriate proportion of their taxes be diverted from arms to a special government Peace Tax Fund, to be used for peace research, peace education, peacekeeping, peacemaking, development and other constructive uses. We ask that those who support this principle write to the Committee at the address below, for more information.

Massawippi RR

Editor:

As young boy and man, I grew up on and off in North Hatley and always considered it my home. I am American by birth, Canadian at heart. Some time ago I wrote to The Record who was kind enough to reprint my letter in the paper. I was looking for negatives and or pictures of trains and stations located between Sherbrooke and Newport, Vt., which was part of the Boston and Maine R.R. now Quebec Central and or C.P.R.

If the Heritage Foundation has any data or pictures re Boston and Maine R.R., which could be obtained by photostatic copies or pictures, I would gladly pay for same.

The Boston and Maine Historical Society is preparing an article on the Massawippi Valley R.R. and they too are looking for pictures of the stations mentioned, also trains.

I have a small collection of pictures and timetables which I will eventually turn over to the Heritage Foundation.

There used to be a large picture of the Glen Villa Hotel in the North Hatley post office. Suggest contacting post master Francis Stone, he might know where it is. The Glen Villa Hotel had its own post office and canceling stamps and have several post cards addressed to Professor Clarke, who stayed there during the summer. He was a professor of languages at Yale, Princeton, Harvard and several other universities. He was a summer resident also at North Hatley and built his own place there, where he had his family and a summer school for university students.

The hotel stood on the property now owned by Doug Bradley in North Hatley. The Glen Villa was probably the largest hotel in the Eastern Townships at one time.

Crooked firms continue to get US federal contracts

WASHINGTON — If your next-door neighbor gets rooked by an incompetent contractor, common sense tells you not to hire the same firm to work on your house. Unfortunately, no such prudence guides federal agencies when they shell out millions of the taxpayers' dollars in government contracts.

Poor performance or outright fraud may get a contractor blacklisted by one agency, but this doesn't stop officials of other agencies from awarding lucrative contracts to the same firm — even when they are well aware of the company's bad record.

Government auditors estimate that some $25 billion a year is lost through fraud and waste. As part of a continuing series on the squandering of public funds by inefficient or dishonest contractors — sometimes apparently in league with corrupt federal officials — I'll offer some disturbing examples of agencies turning a blind eye to a contractor's inefficiency or wrongdoing:

— A General Services Administration investigator recently told the

Jack Anderson

Senate subcommittee on oversight of government management about the strange case of Transco Security. He testified that Transco systematically overbilled the government, charged for services not rendered and falsified work records of guards, many of whom were untrained.

After a lengthy investigation, the General Services Administration suspended Transco for fraud. But that didn't stop the Environmental Protection Agency and the Defense Department from giving Transco 20 more contracts totaling $1.3 million.

— According to congressional testimony and documents in confidential government files, Mayfair Construction Co. of Milwaukee was suspended by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in 1978. The firm had been awarded $16 million in contracts from 1975 through 1977 to convert Apollo facilities at the Kennedy Space Center into the launch for the space shuttle.

Besides delays in the construction schedules, NASA turned up falsified certificates of skill for Mayfair welding inspectors and other instances of "questionable paperwork," a space center official told my reporter Judy Grande. The FBI is looking into the possibility of kickbacks to government employees. Unabashed, Mayfair is seeking an additional $6 million on its NASA contract.

The year following Mayfair's suspension by NASA, Vandenberg Air Force Base and the Army Corps of Engineers awarded the company a $3.1 million contract. Officials said they hadn't heard about the suspension.

The top brass at McConnell Air Force Base went even further. Though aware of the NASA suspension, they gave Mayfair a $4.2 million contract — over the objection of the base's contract officer. The contract has already brought disagreements over quality control, work schedule, completion dates, personal safety and overall contract requirements.

— The Robinson Electrical Co. of New Orleans was low bidder to modernize the wiring of that city's Desire Housing Project, the largest low-rent complex in the nation. The work cost the Department of Housing and Urban Development $1.65 million.

Three years after the job was done, the housing complex was plagued by blackouts. Three engineering firms hired to investigate reported that poor workmanship and the use of aluminum instead of copper cables were possible causes of the blackouts. It's estimated that it will cost HUD $1.5 million to put things right.

Despite this — and the company president's perjury conviction involving other government contracts — HUD has been unable to blacklist Robinson. An administrative law judge ruled that the perjury conviction was a technicality and did not warrant such drastic action. The questions of poor performance were also dismissed because too much time had elapsed and the housing authority had accepted Robinson's work at the time.

Footnote: Mayfair Construction officials and the president of Robinson Electrical Co. did not return repeated phone calls to get their side of the story. A Transco Security official said she would ask the firm's attorney to respond to questions. The call never came.

OIL ROIL: Mobil Oil, the most vocal of the "Seven Sisters" of Big Oil, is hopping mad over a 2 percent New York State tax that the corporation isn't allowed to pass along to its customers. Mobil, which has a multimillion-dollar public relations budget, refuses to pay the state's gross receipts tax, claiming that the pass-through prohibition is unconstitutional. The tax has already brought in $106 million from less stubborn oil companies. James Tully, New York's commissioner of taxation and finance, says Mobil will be treated "like any other tax delinquent." Meanwhile, Mobil is suing in federal court to avoid the 2 percent tax on its enormous earnings.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Energy Secretary James Edwards will hold a public meeting with 22 corporate big shots on April 30 to discuss national energy policies. They are the secretary's "special advisory commission," and the public meeting will be held in the afternoon. The real meeting, though, will be an invitation-only luncheon the same day. Press and public are not invited to that one.

— Members of the Kennedy and Ford families weren't the only ones who had a terrible feeling of deja vu as they watched the films of the assassination attempt on President Reagan. Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. remembered the attempt on his father in February 1933, when the president-elect was shot at in Miami. The gunman missed, but fatally wounded Mavor Anton Cermak of Chicago. FDR Jr. was in boarding school at the time. He said the films of the Reagan shooting "brought back horrible memories."

R-D expected in fall budget

OTTAWA (CP) — Most of the government's incentive measures to increase research and development spending by industry will be in this fall's budget, says Science Minister John Roberts.

The government wanted to talk to industry before deciding on specific measures. "We don't want to just dream up projects," he said in a recent interview.

Last January, Roberts announced a five-year plan to raise research spending to $7.5 billion, or 1.5 per cent of gross national product, from the current 0.9 per cent.

But the plan says Ottawa's share would drop to 33.3 per cent, or $2.5 billion, by the year ending March 31, 1986, from 39.8 per cent in 1979. Industry's share would rise to 50 per cent, or $3.7 billion, from 35.8 per cent.

The rest of the money would come from provincial governments and other sources.

However, the federal government has still to announce how it will encourage industry to meet its goal.

Roberts said statistics show existing tax incentives for research spending in the year ending March 31, 1979, shaved $100 million from industry's tax bill.

"If we stay on this track without further changes, we would expect it to be at around $500 million by 1985," he said.

PROVIDE MORE FUNDS

Roberts said the government can deal with the first problem universities are facing in getting research funds by providing more funds to grant-giving councils. The second concern — renegotiating financing for established federal-provincial programs — is tougher to crack.

The government will approve more money for the National Research Council of Canada and the Natural Sciences and Engineering Council by mid-May when Parliament resumes after a two-week delayed Easter break.

The research council's main thrust is helping industry use the technology it develops while the sciences and engineering council makes grants to fund research by post-graduate students. The research council's estimates for this year are $266 million and the sciences and engineering council, $177 million.

Cabinet approval for the extra funds should come by May 19 or 21, he said.

But negotiation with the provinces for funding of established programs, expected to begin after a parliamentary committee report is released in July, will be difficult, he said.

Under the 1977 arrangement, Ottawa transfers to the provinces 50 per cent of post-secondary education funds, $1.8 billion this year.

Generally, Ottawa is subsidizing 57 per cent of the cost while the provinces have slipped to 43 per cent, he said.

The arrangement also covers transfer payments to the provinces to cover medicare and hospitalization insurance for a total this year of $4.6 billion and university lobbyists say they're convinced the bulk of any cut would come out of post-secondary education.

Roberts denied that assumption and said the government "is serious about negotiating university funding."

R-9 can't borrow at any rate

TORONTO (CP) — Those planning to borrow money had best hope they're not an R-9 at the credit bureau because banks won't provide money even at 17-per-cent interest and a mortgage is out of the question.

For example, there's the $40,000-a-year Toronto executive who bid on a small home and went to the bank to borrow money.

The loan officer made a routine telephone call to the credit bureau while he waited in her office. The smile disappeared from her face as she spoke and when she hung up she told the man: "I can't possibly give you a loan, you're an R-9."

There is nothing lower in the world of credit risk than an R-9. It's just one short step above debtor's court or calling the bailiff.

The same man heard a similar tune from a mortgage broker who said: "R-9? It'll be almost impossible to get you a mortgage."

That's when the executive learned that a $500 department store bill he hadn't bothered to pay could prevent him from buying a home.

Spokesmen for institutions where people seek money or credit — banks, credit card companies and department stores — say there's a disturbing trend among credit consumers.

DON'T PAY BILLS

Consumers have become cavalier about paying bills, credit officials say, and at a time when the economy is strained by inflation and soaring interest rates, lenders are taking a hard look at how bills should be paid.

"Credit is a privilege, not a right," says Ann Rowan, Ontario's consumer liaison officer.

The current climate of credit cards for almost everything has lenders more concerned about their rights, she says, because the "buy-now, pay-sometime habit" now can stand in the way of future purchases.

Somewhere in Metropolitan Toronto a computer clacks away, printing a record of everyone's credit history from the date accounts were opened to the type of payment to whether the bill was paid as agreed.

Credit ratings are the same across North America so credit histories can follow people. Levels range from R-1, the best, to R-9, which one bill collector says is "a dead loss."

CHECKS FILES

Ontario's 23 credit bureaus plug into a central computer and at the Credit Bureau of Metropolitan Toronto, a potential lender can check more than four million files of Ontario credit consumers — who may check their own files at any time.

People involved with credit say the case of the would-be home owner whose $40,000 salary couldn't buy him a good rating is not uncommon.

The man says he knew full well that what he was doing was wrong but reasoned that, with high interest charges, the store involved would make back more than it lost when he finally paid.

That is the attitude that is disturbing Canadian credit granters.

"We're dealing with a different kind of clientele today," says Al Karasiuk, of the Toronto Dominion bank's corporate consumer lending division.

But Karasiuk says banks and other lending institutions have not tightened their policies on who gets credit because with interest rates of more than 17 per cent for banks and 20 per cent for credit card companies, credit granters are in the business to make money.

Killing chickens will help alleviate the down pressure on the price of eggs during the low demand summer season.

West turning to dust

WINNIPEG (CP) — A lot of Prairie farmers are looking skyward these days, praying for rain to come and the wind to stop.

They've been answered with an occasional shower here and there, but it hasn't been enough over the last few weeks to stop the wind from blowing tons of valuable topsoil into ditches and sometimes into another province.

Farm spokesmen said in interviews Tuesday they don't want to be alarmists over the situation, but serious erosion problems are in the making unless heavy, general rains arrive soon and the almost daily winds abate.

"Some fields in the province already are quite severely affected," said Henry Zilm of the Saskatchewan department of agriculture. "I expect their productivity will be cut very substantially."

Once the damage is done to a field it is almost irreparable, said Donald Rennie of Saskatoon, head of the University of Saskatchewan's soil sciences department.

In a two-year study involving 1,000 or more farm fields, it was found that where there are 10 centimetres or less of topsoil compared with fields with 15 centimetres or more, the difference in average yield was 13 or 14 bushels.

In Alberta, most of the drifting has taken place in the Drumheller district, said Larry Welsh of Calgary, regional supervisor with the provincial department of agriculture.

Welsh said farmers can cultivate their fields to expose wet lumps of soil that won't blow away in the wind, or could seed earlier than they normally would and risk frost.

Some Manitoba farmers south of Winnipeg already have seeded cereal crops, partly in hopes of getting plant growth established to stop erosion, but also to take advantage of what moisture is available now for germination.

Brian Andrews, a provincial agriculture department agronomist in Carman, said ditches have been filled with fertile topsoil from nearby farms.

"Some farmers are losing the best part of the soil," said Andrews. "In individual cases it's critical."

He calculates more than 25 millimetres of topsoil have been stripped from the most seriously affected fields.

Grain fight brewing

WINNIPEG (CP) — Alberta's grain fields may be the next battleground in the constitutional war between Ottawa and the provinces.

While there has been no direct provincial challenge to Ottawa's jurisdiction over interprovincial and export grain marketing, there are growing indications Alberta is steering a collision course with federal regulating agencies.

The province makes no secret of its dissatisfaction with some of the rules applied by the Canadian wheat board, the Canadian Grain Commission and the Grain Transportation Authority.

Those three bodies control the grain delivered by farmers, the elevators where it is stored and the railway cars hauling grain to market.

Hugh Planche, economic development minister in Alberta, voiced the most recent criticism of the regulatory agencies, saying they don't always assist farmers in selling grain.

"If a regulatory body outlives its usefulness and is not moving grain to market and getting producers the price they deserve, then maybe it is time to rethink the role of those agencies."

RAISED EYEBROWS
Actions by Alberta over the last few years have raised eyebrows in the grain industry and made the wheat board wonder whether the province may be building its own collection and marketing system.

The first move was the creation of the Alberta Grain Commission, a farm service agency some believe also counsels the government on policy issues.

The Alberta government has also purchased three large inland grain terminals in Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge and formed Alberta Terminals Ltd. to run them.

It has acquired an export facility in Vancouver that could handle bulk commodities, and recently was embroiled in a controversy over the use of railway hopper cars to ship rapeseed without prior authorization from the Grain Transportation Authority.

And a government member of the Alberta legislature recently introduced a motion to withdraw the province from the wheat board, a move many argue would contravene constitutional law.

Some industry observers also find suspect the number of court challenges to wheat board regulations on grain deliveries through the quota system.

In the 1978-79 crop year, Alberta farmers were involved in 47 of the 51 court convictions for grain delivery infractions. In the last crop year of 1979-80, there were 166 convictions and 165 of them were against Alberta farmers.

SPECULATION RAISED
There is even speculation the Alberta government has a hand in financing court challenges and contributes to a variety of vocal commodity groups that frequently criticize the wheat board.

Roy Atkinson of Saskatoon, chairman of the wheat board's advisory committee, believes the Alberta government is in "league with one or more international grain companies, whether directly or indirectly."

Atkinson, a former president of the National Farmers Union and an outspoken defender of the board's marketing system that provides farmers with equal delivery opportunities, says Alberta's actions are contradictory.

"I think it's a rather curious thing that they oppose federal agencies like the wheat board yet they provincialize and establish their own grain commission, provincialize and takeover Pacific Western Airlines.

Killing chickens costs consumers

OTTAWA (CP) — Egg producers are being paid up to $3 million to kill off 1.5 million hens, but industry spokesmen say the cost of the program is not being borne by consumers.

"Producers themselves will pay 100 per cent of the cost," Jean Brassard, general manager of the producer-run Canadian Egg Marketing Agency, said in an interview Tuesday. "It won't affect consumers in any way."

The program was launched earlier this month by the agency in an attempt to reduce massive overproduction of eggs, particularly as the industry enters the summer months when demand is at its lowest. "It will help to alleviate the low-demand period in summertime," Brassard said.

A spokesman for the National Farm Products Marketing Council, which oversees national marketing plans for poultry and eggs, agrees that producers are paying the full cost of the fowl reduction program.

"It is not included in the cost of production formula (used to determine producer returns for eggs) and there's no pass through to the consumer," said Glenn White in an interview. "It is a levy that is paid right out of the retained earnings of the producers in Canada."

The fowl reduction program, the fifth of its kind in 10 years, comes as the agency continues to grapple with production levels far in excess of demand. SALE SUBSIDIZED not sold on the domestic market are sold to breaker or foreign markets at prices subsidized by producers.
At present, surplus eggs

The voluntary program, financed by all egg producers, pays only those farmers prepared to kill hens in the final months of the laying cycle. Earlier, agency chairman Harold Crossman blamed overproduction of eggs squarely on the agency.

"The giant surplus of eggs is the agency's fault," he said in an interview. "We over-estimated the consumer demand for the past two years."

A spokesman for the Consumers Association of Canada has suggested that a reduction in egg prices would be the best way to rid the industry of surplus eggs.

But Brassard disagreed, saying it is very difficult to make the consumer eat more eggs or the hens lay less eggs.

"I think the proof is made every time chain stores put eggs on special," he said. "The consumer buys more eggs that week, but after is not buying more eggs," he said.

Living

the Record

Tamara, 11, is new darling of models

NEW YORK (AP) — The sensuous face that beckons from the fashion magazine is that of a sophisticated, mature woman with windswept honey-blond hair and full, moist red lips.

The model is Tamara Jones. The rest is illusion.

Tamara is 5-foot-1 and her measurements are 26½-24-29. She aims to weigh 75 pounds, but usually weighs in light.

Tamara is 11 years old.

She is the newest — and youngest — entrant in the "pretty baby" model wars. A score or more of these pre-pubescent lovelies have signed with New York modelling agents and are competing successfully with older models — women of, say, 18 to 23.

Tamara and her mother moved to New York last November. In January, Tamara signed with the Ford agency.

BEGAN AT 4

Tamara began modelling in Miami at age 4. At 6, she and her mother were flying to New York for periodic assignments. Tamara appeared in a TV commercial for White Cloud toilet paper, in a print ad for Gloria Vanderbilt jeans and in McCall's, Women's Day and Good Housekeeping magazines.

"As a child," she notes, "not as a high-fashion model."

The high-fashion work began last summer, after mother and daughter met Steve Tannenbaum, press agent who says he saw something "Brooke-ish" in Tamara.

"Brooke" is Brooke Shields, the first nymphette to make a fortune looking like a grownup. Tannenbaum thinks Tamara Jones will be the next.

Tamara's parents agreed to let her try. Her father, a Baptist chaplain, is in charge of pastoral care at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami; her mother was a school teacher until Tamara decided last fall she wanted to come to New York full-time.

Tamara's true ambition is to be an actress. The problem, she says, is that she grew too tall for most children's roles — and for much of the kiddie fashion work.

But she hasn't given up her theatrical ambitions. Between modelling jobs, she sings at a nightclub that caters to kiddie talent. "I belt and I sing legit," she says.

She has auditioned for a TV series and continues her tutored schooling. She is taking lessons in singing, in dance and in ice skating.

Tamara says she's not troubled by the sensuous, even erotic nature of some high fashion photography.

But her mother says Tamara never will be allowed to do work like the suggestive Brooke Shields TV ads for Calvin Klein jeans.

"Either she does it and takes the high road or she doesn't do it at all," Jones says.

Ann Landers

Reader sends praise for nurses aides

Dear Ann Landers: Please write a few words in praise of nurse's aides everywhere, but especially those who work in homes for the elderly.

These people perform tasks that would be abhorrent to most of us, and they are almost always at the bottom the pay scale.

My sister is in a nursing home. Senility has taken over her mind, and age has crippled her body. She is totally helpless and cannot speak. Anyone who has visited one of these places, no matter how expensive, has seen the human wreckage of what were once capable, productive people. Many are forgotten by their families. It is the aides who do the "caring."

I wish a special day could be set aside to honor all the nurses and their aides who devote themselves to the care of the elderly and helpless. Someone should let them know their efforts are appreciated. And thank you, Ann Landers, whether or not you publish my letter. I feel better for having written it. — Aunt Jennie In Cincinnati.

Dear Aunt Jennie: As a board member of the Rehabilitation Institute in Chicago, I know something about the dedication and caring of doctors, nurses and aides who cater to the needs of the handicapped. These people are about as close to saints as anyone on earth. I agree that a special day of appreciation should be set aside to honor them.

Dear Ann Landers: For the past years I have been going with a man I love a great deal. Recently the topic of children's names came up. He informed me that he feels the first son should be named after the husband's father.

I am a conservative person who believes strongly in family tradition, but this one is going to pose a problem. My fiance's father is a hypocrite and a snob. I dislike him intensely. The feeling is mutual. I sensed it the first time we met. I would not want any of our children to carry this scoundrel's name.

Shouldn't the naming of children be a mutual decision? The thought of the hassle ahead is enough to make me dread pregnancy. Please answer my letter, Ann. I need your help — What's In A Name In Westchester?

Dear Chester: Naming a child should be a joint decision. Since you dislike your future father-in-law intensely, your husband should agree to a compromise. If it's a boy, his father's name can be the child's middle name. His first name could be your husband's, his brother's or a favorite uncle's.

Dear Ann Landers: I was amused by Charlie Osgood's poem about the "POSSLQ", which is the Census Bureau's name for "Person of the Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters." I have one and I call him "husband."

Perhaps the word should be "UPOSSLQ" for "Unmarried Person of the Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters." Or, how about "SPOSSLQ" for single persons? — Poughkeepsie POSSLQ

Dear Keepsie: You missed the point. The Census Bureau does use "husband" and "wife" for those legally wed. The "POSSLQ" is a euphemistic bit of gobbledegook to cover other situations.

Hospital receives grant

SHERBROOKE — The conference room of the Sherbrooke Hospital was the scene of a large delegation of Masons representing the lodges of the St. Francis District, as well as a delegation from the Montreal area of the Masonic Foundation of Quebec, April 11. At this time, the hospital was presented with a cheque for $5,000 to cover the cost of a Stat Scope 11 — Portable Patient Monitor.

A large portion of these funds was raised through the efforts of the Masonic Lodges of the St. Francis District and it was through their efforts that the Sherbrooke Hospital is once again the recipient of a very generous cheque.

The Masonic Foundation of Quebec is a charitable, non-profit organization of members of the Order of Freemasonry which is dedicated to help those in Quebec who are in distressed circumstances or in need of special equipment in hospitals and other institutions.

Dr. Jacques Bedard, of the hospital's Intensive Care Unit, gave an informative talk on the machine which is already in use in the hospital. The portable patient monitor is a computerized monitoring device where continuous monitoring and recording can be done of a patient's heart tracing as well as determining the pulmonary vein pressure. This is an important element of control in the proper treatment of congestive heart failure where the patient's responses to potent therapeutic drugs can be measured on an on-going basis to evaluate immediately the response of the patient to certain drugs in the treatment of their congestive heart failure. As the monitor is battery operated and portable, it may be used in any area of the hospital and is considered to be an important advance in the treatment of congestive heart failure, particularly in patients whose management of that failure is a difficult one.

The resources of the Sherbrooke Hospital are enriched by the support of the Masonic Foundation of Quebec and very grateful for their generosity and continued interest.

Dixville announces new services

DIXVILLE — The Centre Dixville Home, Inc. is proud to announce the implementation of new services aimed at English-speaking mentally handicapped people from Region 5. These services consist of a sheltered workshop in Sherbrooke, a day care center, and a home support service.

The sheltered workshop is designed for mentally handicapped adults and provides meaningful occupation and job opportunity. The day care center is intended for mentally handicapped children of preschool age. It provides stimulation programs in the areas of motor and social development, language, knowledge and autonomy.

The home support service is offered to mentally handicapped children from birth to three years of age. An educator will go to the family for one hour per week. She will provide suggestions concerning programs aimed at stimulating the child and at helping him progress. She will also provide emotional support to the parents as well as being a resource person.

Those who are interested in benefiting from these services must communicate with the social service center. Telephone 564-7100.

Sherbrooke Catholic women host convention

SHERBROOKE (JE) — At a recent meeting of the Sherbrooke Diocesan Catholic Women's League, the president, Alice Beaubien was in the chair and brought the meeting to order with the recitation of several prayers. The roll call was taken with 10 members present and spiritual director, Father Moisan arrived later during the meeting. Treasurer Geraldine Fortier gave a favourable bank balance.

Reports of committees: Ounie McKeon, who is an inspiration to all in the league, spoke of the raffle for the benefit of Mother Teresa of Calcutta. It is a hand-made bedspread, donated by the Sisters of the Holy Family, and sponsored by the CWL of Canada and St. Patrick Mission Circle. The raffle date is April 25.

This meeting was called to discuss the 34th Annual Provincial Convention to be held in Sherbrooke this year, at Le Baron Motel on May 22 to 23. The CWL is being honoured with the presence of the national president, Dorothy Brocklehurst, of Sydney, N.S., who will be the guest speaker at the luncheon on Saturday. The hotel facilities are of the very best and all activities of the convention will be under the one roof — Mass, meetings, luncheon — with dining facilities for supper and breakfast. The room rates, luncheon and registration are at a moderate rate.

The tentative program for Friday, May 22 is as follows: 1 p.m. and on — Registration, 6:30 p.m. — Executive meeting — 7:30 p.m. Mass at Hotel Le Baron; 8:30 p.m. Training Session — film, followed by social hour. Saturday, May 23: 8:45 a.m. — Liturgy of the hours; 9:00 a.m. Raising of the flag — 9:15 a.m. Opening of business sessions; 11:30 a.m. — Adjoin for lunch; 12:15 p.m. luncheon with guest speaker; 2 p.m. — Business meeting re-convenes; 4:30 p.m. Mass at the hotel and installation of new executive. The post-convention meeting of the new executive will follow.

The hotel has graciously provided the meeting room with the adjoining dining room and a separate room for the executive meetings. The Sherbrooke Diocesan have tried to plan an enjoyable convention for members and hope that all will make reservations as early as possible. Please do not hesitate to phone any of the undersigned for any additional information needed — Mrs. Alice Beaubien, Richmond; Mrs. Maurice Cloutier - 1-(819)-569-1128 Sherbrooke; Mrs. Conrad Fortier - 1-(819)-563-4365 Sherbrooke.

Astro

Friday, April 24

Bernice Bede Osol

April 24, 1981

Take advantage of any opportunities you get this coming year to enhance your knowledge, either academically or in practical areas. What you learn will help you rise to the top faster in your chosen field.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you may be tempted to do just enough to get by. Unfortunately, that which you fail to do may demand attention at an inconvenient time later. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Changes to which you have given sufficient study will work out to your advantage today. Alterations made impulsively could cause complications.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let friends or outsiders become involved in family matters. They may be forced to take sides and offend either you or your mate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Coworkers may have better ideas than yours for doing things today. Don't let your ego get in the way of proper execution of a job.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be very careful today if involved in anything which requires a financial risk. Study the situation from every angle to be sure it's not a foolish gamble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're likely to be luckier today in involvements that others originate rather than in those you launch yourself. Act in areas where you get the best odds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't base important decisions on hunches or hearsay today. Judgments should be made solely on the facts if you hope to avoid problems later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Financial conditions may be a mixed bag today. You could be both prudent and extravagant. Emphasize the former and eliminate the latter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Business and pleasure may not blend too smoothly today. Your prospects could feel you're trying to butter them up, even though this might not be your intention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Think your moves through carefully today, but don't dwell on them so intensely that you fail to act. Good ideas are only that unless they are implemented.

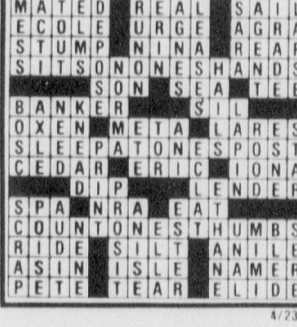

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Though your intention is to be helpful, you'd be wise today not to try to manage for others things that may be beyond your scope.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your goals are attainable today, but it may require some shrewd maneuvering to get what you want. Even then you could fall short of your target.

Penalty killers propel Canadians to tie with Soviets

GOTEBORG, Sweden (CP) — It was a victory, regardless of what the scoreboard said.

Team Canada had neutralized the vaunted Soviet power play and had fought back from a two-goal deficit against a club which would normally be invincible after having gained such an advantage.

But most of all, Team Canada showed spirit and determination and put out for 60 minutes to earn a 4-4 draw with the Soviet Union at the world hockey championships Wednesday night.

The Canadians killed off six of seven minor penalties, including a stretch of four straight minutes midway through the final period.

"I think my penalty killers are going to end up weighing 110 pounds before this tournament is over," said Canadian coach Don Cherry, who reverted to a more North American-style of play for the second encounter with the Soviets. Canada lost the first meeting 8-2.

"We gave up on all that circling stuff and went back to our own game — shoot it in and chase after it and get on top of them," he said. "You just can't take a group of players who have just finished a gruelling 80-game schedule in the NHL and try and have them play a new style when you've had only four days to train together."

HAD THE LEAD

Dennis Maruk, John Ogronick, Larry Robinson and Mike Gartner scored for Canada, which led 2-1 after the first period but fell behind 4-2 nine minutes into the second.

Viktor Fetisov, who opened the scoring after only 50 seconds of play, Vladimir Krutov, Alexandr Golikov and Vladimir Petrov were the Soviet scorers.

The Soviets lead the championship round standings with seven points, followed by Sweden with five, Czechoslovakia with three and Canada with one. Canada's gold medal aspirations vanished with the tie, but the silver and bronze are still possible.

Once again, Phil Myre was a standout in goal for Canada. So was Vladislav Tretiak at the other end of the rink. Canada outshot the Soviets 43-40, including an 18-10 margin in the second period.

AN OFF NIGHT

The Soviet defence had a rare off night that was typified by Viktor Shalimov's giveaway on Maruk's goal.

With Mike Rogers off for holding in the first period, Maruk went deep into the Soviet zone to forecheck and was handed the puck by Shalimov. He fanned on his first shot, but then whipped a wrist shot past Tretiak from 10 feet just as Rogers returned. It was Maruk's for his fourth goal of the tournament.

The pro-Canada crowd of 5,336 came to life and with it the Canadian offence. Less than two minutes later, on a power play, Ogronick blasted a slapshot from the point that found the lower right corner past Tretiak's outstretched leg.

The Soviets struck for three goals in a five-minute span early in the second for their 4-2 lead. Robinson got one back before the period ended, backhanding home a rebound, and Gartner tied it at 9:49 of the third, finishing off a perfectly executed two-on-one with Maruk.

Cherry said following the game that, having been together now for three weeks, the team is starting to play as a unit.

"The main thing that I see is that the defence is playing better. That's the hardest position in hockey to play and we're just now getting adjusted to the wider ice."

Splinters Montanez secures Expo sweep

MONTREAL (CP) — In the major leagues, they also serve who only sit and wait.

Just ask Montreal Expos first baseman Willie Montanez, who has been doing a lot of sitting and waiting in the first 10 games of the National League baseball season.

Given the chance to stretch his seldom-used muscles Wednesday, Montanez responded with an 11th-inning single that scored Gary Carter from third base with the winning run in a 4-3 victory over Philadelphia, completing a three-game sweep of the defending champion Phillies.

"The toughest job in baseball is to come off the bench and produce," said Montanez, who left his customary spot in the sixth inning after Warren Cromartie suffered a groin injury. "I'm just learning a new job, that's all."

The Expos didn't mind

Montanez's on-the-job training, especially when it came at the expense of old nemesis Tug McGraw, the Philadelphia reliever who handcuffed them in a three-game series last October that cost Montreal the East Division title.

TOUGH TO HIT

"McGraw isn't a piece of cake for a left-handed batter like myself, or any batter for that matter," said Montanez. "But I've got my hits against him in the past."

"I remember beating him one day when I was playing in New York with the Mets." McGraw had retired the first two batters in the 11th, but Carter kept the Expos' hopes alive with a bloop single to right-centre field. He advanced to second on a wild pitch and continued on to third base when catcher Bob Boone fired the ball into centre field attempting to nab him at second base.

McGraw issued an intentional walk to Larry

Parrish to face Montanez, but ended up losing the battle.

"It pumped me up a little," said Montanez of the intentional pass. "But when you come through in that type of situation, it's very satisfying."

The Expos held a 3-0 lead entering the ninth inning only to have it erased by Mike Schmidt's two-run homer off starter Bill Gullickson and Larry Bowa's run-scoring single against reliever Woodie Fryman.

"It was demoralizing to have that happen," said Carter, who combined with Ellis Valentine on back-to-back homers as the Expos took a 2-0 lead in the seventh. "But no one let down, and we battled back."

After an off-day today, Montreal opens a three-game series Friday against New York Mets. Ray Burris, 1-1, will go for Montreal against Pat Zachry, 3-0.

Gretzky's playmaking lead Oilers

Oilers, Blues alive Stars sink Sabres

CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton Oilers proved to be good students and Philadelphia Flyers reverted to an old school to win their National Hockey League playoff games Wednesday night and keep alive their Stanley Cup hopes.

On the blackboard in the Oilers' dressing room at the Nassau Coliseum was scribbled the day's lesson: "There is no such word as CANT. Every individual is a master of his own destiny."

The Oilers heeded that advice to perfection in edging New York Islanders 4-3 in the fifth game of their best-of-seven quarter-final. Edmonton heads home for the sixth game of the series Friday trailing three games to two.

The Flyers, trailing their series 3-1, came out showing the bell-bent-for-leather pugnacity that won them two successive championships and mauled Calgary Flames 9-4 at the Spectrum. The Flames, however, can wrap up that series at home Friday.

In Buffalo, Minnesota North Stars won their fifth road game of the playoffs, beating the Sabres 4-3 to take that quarter-final round 4-1 while St. Louis Blues stayed alive with a 4-3 win over New York Rangers, who will be host for the sixth game Friday, leading the series 3-2.

LOOKS AHEAD

"This is a big boost for us, and we're really looking forward to Friday night," said Wayne Gretzky, whose superb playmaking set up Edmonton's first two goals. "We were relaxed, even though it was such a big game."

And the Islanders also were relaxed — too relaxed for their own good. So the defending NHL champions must return to Western Canada to attempt to clinch the series against the 14th-place team in the regular-season standings. The Islanders finished atop the over-all standings.

"In the first period, we started off lax," said Islanders centre Bryan Trottier, who scored once in the first period — Mike Bossy had the other two New York tallies. "We were not aggressive enough and not skating or forechecking enough."

"I guess it's human nature. You sort of expect them to come out flat after beating them in overtime in the last game."

The one period where the Islanders did excel was was the third. But they were stopped cold by rookie goaltender Andy Moog.

Edmonton got goals from Doug Hicks, Glenn Anderson, Brett Callighen and Matti Hagman, whose score at 15:19 of the third period gave the Oilers a 4-2 lead.

GOAL TOO LATE

Bossy's power-play goal with 1:35 left wasn't enough for New York, which never got a good shot at tying it.

Moog, who has improved each game in the Oilers' goal during this series, stopped 29 shots.

"Moog was more than spectacular," said Oilers' coach Glen Sather, who went with the 21-year-old rookie in the preliminary round against Montreal Canadiens and against the Islanders, even though Moog had appeared in just seven games this season. "For a kid that age, he was incredible."

Blues 4 Rangers 3

Jorgen Pettersson says St. Louis may be regaining the pre-Stanley Cup form that gave them second place in the NHL over-all standings. "Maybe we've made it a little more difficult than it is," Pettersson said after his decisive power-play goal at 6:09 of the third period.

"In the regular season, we'd played with puck control. We've gotten away from that. . . . We're finding out that you have to go after it."

Pettersson scored twice to save St. Louis from elimination. Larry Patey and Brian Sutter also scored for the Blues.

Ron Greschner, Ulf Nilsson and Carol Vadnais had staked New York to a 3-1 lead by 2:54 of the second period. Blues goalie Mike Liut kicked out 34 shots while St. Louis tested Rangers netminder Steve Baker 30 times.

North Stars 4 Sabres 3

NBA: Celtics rebound to even series

Associated Press

In a 24-hour span, Philadelphia '76ers went from one-point winners to 19-point losers. The explanation, coach Billy Cunningham and forward Julius Erving agreed, is simple.

"They established how they wanted to play," Erving said after Wednesday night's 118-99 National Basketball Association playoff romp by Boston Celtics. "It would be foolish for me to really dissect what happened."

"We just didn't have it." They outplayed us in all phases," added Cunningham. "We didn't play well and they had a lot to do with it."

The Celtics' victory, one day after a 105-104 loss, evened the best-of-seven Eastern Conference championship series at one game apiece. The scene shifts to Philadelphia for games Friday night and Sunday.

Reggie King scored a game-high 31 points to lead Kansas City Kings to an 88-79 victory over Houston Rockets to even that Western Conference championship series at a game apiece.

The Celtics led all the way after scoring the first eight points. They broke the game open with a 14-0 burst late in the second quarter that increased their lead to 59-41. They led 66-47 at halftime and never let Philadelphia closer than 14 points afterward.

Larry Bird, who had 34 points and 10 rebounds Tuesday night, was deadly from the outside Wednesday night, hitting 14 of 21 shots. He scored 23 of his Celtics-high 34 points in the first half and added 16 rebounds and five assists.

"What he did out there tonight was a season for some people," Cunningham said.

Rookie guard Andrew Toney, with 35 points, led Philadelphia in scoring for the second straight game. Julius Erving contributed 30 points.

Kings 88 Rockets 79

Trailing by one point at halftime despite 21 points from King, Kansas City grabbed a 61-54 lead by outsourcing the Rockets 14-6 in the first six minutes after the interval.

Tom Henderson's free throw at 4:47 of the third quarter trimmed Houston's deficit to two points at 61-59, but the Rockets didn't score again in the quarter until Moses Malone's two free throws with no time left made it 68-61 Kansas City.

Malone, who scored 29 points Tuesday night, had only 18 points Wednesday.

Hab's headaches never end

MONTREAL (CP) — The 1980-81 National Hockey League season is a fast-fading memory for Montreal Canadiens, but the headaches haven't stopped for managing director Irving Grundman.

One of his first priorities is to review the substantial loss of revenue from playing host to two post-season games instead of a maximum 15.

The loss has been estimated at $1 million, although no official figure will be released.

Next comes the team's preparations for the June 10 NHL entry draft, followed by an evaluation of the players who dropped three consecutive preliminary-round playoff games to Edmonton Oilers, and the search for a successor to head coach Claude Ruel.

Also, at varying stages through the summer months, Grundman will likely meet a horde of players and agents seeking either new contracts or revisions of existing agreements.

"We do a certain amount of renegotiating every year," said Grundman. "Those who want to renegotiate are going to have to tell me why."

"The good ones . . . you are very receptive and try to sit down and strike a deal. Contractually, we've never had trouble with our players."

Those players whose contracts have expired include goaltender Richard Sevigny, centre Keith Acton and right wingers Mark Napier and Chris Nilan.

Grundman might also expect to see defencemen Rod Langway and Brian Engblom ask for more money, as each enjoyed a good year.

Napier, who tied left winger Steve Shutt for most goals on the team with 35, scored 18 of his goals on the road to lead the club in that department.

"We know who we want to see," said Grundman.

A's bullpen gets a chance

Associated Press

In the Oakland A's bullpen, they play a waiting game.

"We sit out there cheering and yelling, trying to keep sharp so we're ready when they need us," Jeff Jones says of the little-used A's relief corps.

For a change, though, an Oakland starter didn't complete a game Wednesday — and Jones was thrown into the breach to save a 2-1 American League baseball victory over Minnesota Twins, the 14th in 15 games for the red-hot A's.

Both Jones and Craig Minetto came on in the ninth inning and saved the game for starter Brian Kingman. Jones retired the last two Twins batters to earn the A's first save of the season.

Last year, the A's put together a major-league-high 94 complete games. Before Wednesday, they had recorded 12 route-going jobs in 14 starts.

In other American League action, it was Milwaukee Brewers 8, Toronto Blue Jays 1; Texas Rangers 16, Boston Red Sox 8; New York Yankees 7, Detroit Tigers 2; Cleveland Indians 4, Kansas City Royals 0 and California Angels 7, Seattle Mariners 3. Rain postponed the Baltimore Orioles-Chicago White Sox game.

Kingman scattered six hits through eight innings before Minetto and Jones nailed down Oakland's victory. The A's scored both their runs in the first on Dave Revering's windblown run-scoring triple and Tony Armas's run-scoring double. It was the 19th RBI this season for Armas, the major league leader.

The Twins scored their only run in the fourth when Hosken Powell singled for the first hit off Kingman and scored on John Castino's double. Al Williams took the loss despite allowing only five hits.

Brewers 8 Blue Jays 1

Paul Molitor hit the first grand slam homer of his major league career, the lone hit in the Brewers' five-run fifth inning, and he also

throws with no time left made it 68-61 Kansas City.

Malone, who scored 29 points Tuesday night, had only 18 points Wednesday.

Edmonton Oilers proved to be good students and Philadelphia Flyers reverted to an old school to win their National Hockey League playoff games Wednesday night and keep alive their Stanley Cup hopes.

On the blackboard in the Oilers' dressing room at the Nassau Coliseum was scribbled the day's lesson: "There is no such word as CANT. Every individual is a master of his own destiny."

The Oilers heeded that advice to perfection in edging New York Islanders 4-3 in the fifth game of their best-of-seven quarter-final. Edmonton heads home for the sixth game of the series Friday trailing three games to two.

The Flyers, trailing their series 3-1, came out showing the bell-bent-for-leather pugnacity that won them two successive championships and mauled Calgary Flames 9-4 at the Spectrum. The Flames, however, can wrap up that series at home Friday.

In Buffalo, Minnesota North Stars won their fifth road game of the playoffs,

Canada planning America's Cup challenge in '83

VANCOUVER (CP) — It's appropriate that the newly-formed Secret Cove Yacht Club is plotting Canada's first challenge in 100 years for the America's Cup at the Jolly Roger Inn at a remote B.C. inlet.

Having set its course for sailing's greatest prize, club commodore Don Macdonald admits that the three other founding members — Marvin McDill, Robert Muir and William Neill — live in landlocked Calgary where the closest thing to bluewater sailing is knocking about in a dinghy on Glenmore reservoir.

In fact, McDill, a lawyer and chairman of the 1983 Cup challenge that Macdonald says will cost $5 million, prefers power boats and Neill, an accountant, is a landlubber.

The Secret Cove Yacht Club, 75 kilometres northwest of here, has only about 20 members supporting its challenge to the prestigious New York Yacht Club.

"Some sail, some are interested in power (boats) and some don't even like to leave the land," says Macdonald, who retired to fishing and sailing after 30 years in the construction business.

But the Canadian challenge for the trophy, which has never been wrested from the New York club, is not a quixotic gesture, says Macdonald.

To prove it, the Secret Cove club anted up the required $10,000 (in U.S. funds) that accompanied the Canadian challenge that was hand-delivered to the New York club secretary March 31.

The keel was laid for the challenge last fall when Macdonald and McDill were dining aboard the commodore's boat in Secret Cove.

The talk turned to politics, patriation of Canada's constitution and to sailing. An America's Cup challenge was discussed as a vehicle for national unity.

"The next morning, we still thought it was a good idea," says Macdonald.

So, while McDill researched the rules, the Secret Cove Yacht Club was formed as a flag of convenience. The rules say the challenge must come from a yacht club of the competing country.

after it has been accepted. The best-of-seven match race series is sailed in 12-metre sloops every three years off Newport, R.I.

"You'll see Calgary oil, Ontario uranium and B.C. fish money," says Bruce Davidsen, another Calgarian associated with the project. "We want to emphasize this is an all-Canadian project."

The syndicate is looking for two boats that have participated in previous America's Cup races to serve as trial horses. One will be assigned to each coast for crew training and selection which starts this summer.

"We probably have the expertise in Canada but it has never been put together," Macdonald says.

"It took the Second World War to really pull my generation together. We think a boat financed, designed and built in Canada, crewed by the best Canadian sailors, can do the same thing for this generation without having to fire a shot."

They've named the Canadian challenger Let's Do It. And they've even got a name for a Canadian defender — Come And Get It.

Canadians are serious about challenging for the America's Cup in 1983. Secret Cove

Yacht Club has already anted up the $10,000 entry fee.

The silverware everyone wants.

Death threats help Bossy decide against New York

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says right winger Mike Bossy of New York Islanders received death threats in January and would like to leave New York and continue his National Hockey League career with Montreal Canadiens or Quebec Nordiques.

The newspaper says Bossy received death threats from the boyfriend of a young woman he counselled to kick her drug habit. They came at the time Bossy was trying to surpass Maurice Richard's standard of 50 goals in the first 50 games of the season, a feat he accomplished with 51.

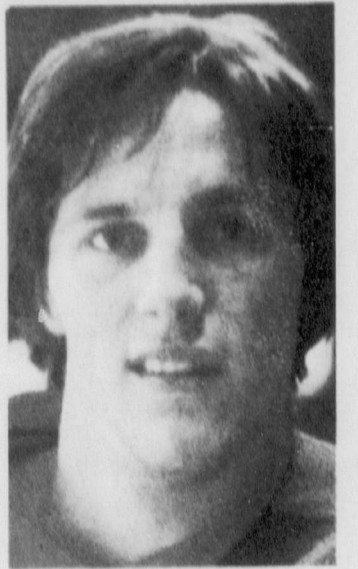

Police patrols were increased in the area of Bossy's North Port home on Long Island, and private security guards accompanied him everywhere, says the newspaper.

Bossy's business counsellor, Pierre Lacroix, is quoted as saying: "I was staying with him at the time, and the suspense lasted through the last three games."

Bossy, a 24-year-old Montreal native who scored 68 goals for the season to top NHL scorers, has finished the second year of a two-year contract and is expected to play out his option next season.

Bossy is said to prefer the Canadiens to the Nordiques. But he would play for either to leave New York, says La Presse.

Thunder Bay leads Allan Cup

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Thunder Bay Twins completed the round-robin portion of the Allan Cup hockey tournament undefeated with a 5-4 overtime victory over St. Boniface Mohawks on Wednesday night.

Danny Gruen's goal at 8:02 of overtime gave the Twins the victory and a 3-0 record in the preliminary round. The Mohawks finished at 0-3. The same teams meet Friday in one semifinal.

Bob DePiero with a pair, and Vic Venasky and Dan D'Alvise scored the other Thunder Bay goals. Len Krystik with two, Gord Nychyk and Neil Thomson replied for St. Boniface. Grand Falls Cataracts and Petrolia Squires, both 1-1, clash tonight to decide second and third place. They meet again Saturday in the other semifinal.

Mohawks drew five of eight minor penalties and each team had a major.

Was Stan the Man worth $1.3 million?

Don Stanhouse released by L.A.

The U.S. has always been a great country for mottoes.

Next November, when that lodge of benevolent despots who own major league baseball teams gathers for the annual auction of free agent baseball players, some sympathetic soul ought to wave a new flag in front of their noses.

"Remember Don Stanhouse!"

Stanhouse, known to friend and foe as Stan the Man Unusual. Occupation: Relief pitcher. Current status: Unemployed. Income due: $1.3 million, give or take a few thousand, no wonder President Reagan wants to revamp unemployment benefits.

Stanhouse was released the other day by Los Angeles Dodgers, a development that cast an immediate pall over the clubhouse which was his sandbox.

He and team-mates Jerry Reuss and Jay Johnstone were the Dodgers' Three Musketeers - or perhaps Three Stooges - romping through life with a light-hearted comedy routine that kept their team-mates in stitches, team-mates in stitches.

There was, however, one serious drawback. Reuss was an 18-game winner and a no-hit pitcher last season. Johnstone has been a productive major league hitter for 15 years and batted .307 in 1980. They can play in the sandbox.

Stanhouse spent most of last season on the disabled list, appearing in just 21 games and managing only 25 innings. Out of the sandbox for him.

An unconditional release can be a traumatic experience for a baseball player. It means you're unwanted, considered to have no further value as a player. But Stan the Man was able to handle the shock quite well, insulated by that $1.3 million payoff.

He may be a flake, but Stanhouse was smart enough to convince Dodger decision makers that he was a worthwhile free agent investment a year ago.

The point is, of course, pitchers are fragile.

The human arm was not designed for throwing baseballs. It can break down without warning and when you guarantee fat contracts for people who make their living this way, you're flirting with disaster.

The owners, however, remain undaunted. They refuse to be discouraged and when they have to pay off a fat contract like Stanhouse's, they merely shrug and pass it off as a business mistake.

So you can be sure when the next re-entry draft arrives, it's guaranteed the owners will be thinking mottoes. It will be "Damn the Torpedoes, Full Speed Ahead."
